

Crim.
280¹

Woolrych

THE CRIMINAL LAW,

AS AMENDED BY

THE STATUTES OF 1861,

WITH

PLEADING, EVIDENCE, FORMS OF INDICTMENT, CASES, AND INDEX.

BY

HUMPHRY WILLIAM WOOLRYCH, SERJEANT-AT-LAW.

LONDON:
SHAW AND SONS, FETTER LANE,
Law Printers and Publishers.

1862.

CRIMINAL LAW.

THE STATUTE OF 1861.

LONDON: PRINTED BY SHAW AND SONS, FETTER LANE.

PREFACE.

It has long been the aim of the Author to produce a comprehensive and systematic work on the Criminal Law, embracing not only the steps of the procedure, but also the principles governing the subject, whether these are defined by the Common Law, or by Statute, or, as is usual, partly by both. The materials for such a treatise are necessarily copious, and the labour of reducing them within a reasonable compass proportionally great. The Author has accordingly spared no pains to make the present work complete; and now submits it to the judgment of the profession and the public.

The passing of the Criminal Consolidation Acts of 1861 formed an epoch in criminal legislation, and furnished a convenient opportunity for such a publication. The Author, having for several years previously accumulated his materials, has thus been able at a comparatively early period to incorporate all the details of this important instalment of our penal code, and to distribute them in their proper places, but without materially disturbing the arrangement observed by the legislature. However carefully the law may be consolidated in the form of statutes, it is well known to every lawyer, that many decisions as to the meaning of enactments which formerly existed in another shape, are still necessary to illustrate them in their new and improved arrangement. A treatise would be very defective which omitted to collect those decisions, and even though several old enactments may have been wholly repealed, the settled construction given to them by courts of law may often be of the greatest value in illustrating kindred enactments, or throwing light on similar phraseology employed in the statutes which still exist. Certain expressions are found frequently to recur in statutes or families of statutes treating of the same subject, and it is no small part of an Author's task to collect and utilize the decisions relating to extinct enactments by applying them to the existing law, so far as can safely be done.

The Author has made it a conspicuous feature of this work to give in considerable detail the various steps of the procedure in a criminal trial, and these constitute the first part of the work. In this department the natural order of the proceedings has been followed as nearly as possible, and as it is common to all criminal prosecutions, it is hoped that it will be found useful. Thus the Author commences with the issuing of process, or the apprehension, and follows the prosecution through all its subsequent stages, whether before the grand jury or justices of the peace, with the pleadings and evidence, until it arrives at its natural termination of verdict, judgment, and execution.

The incidental or occasional proceedings are also treated of, such as Bail, Certiorari, Criminal Information, Challenge of the Jury, Rewards of Officers, and Error, at those stages of the prosecution where they naturally diverge. The importance of this part of the subject fully warranted its being treated at considerable length; and, it is believed, the reader will require no apology for being furnished with a compendium of the present practice.

The second part of the subject consists of the various defined crimes recognized by the Law of England, from Treason down to miscellaneous Misdemeanors, not omitting a reference also to those Summary Convictions included in the recent Acts. It was considered better to give a complete list of Criminal Offences, for though Treason is a crime which now happily is of rare occurrence, its incidents are more or less blended with those of the minor crimes, and the criminal lawyer can never hope that this branch of the law will become entirely obsolete.

The Offences have, for the sake of convenience, been collected into various groups, after the manner adopted by the Criminal Consolidation Acts. First in order are the Offences against the Queen and her Government, then the Offence of Larceny and its cognate Offences. Next follow Malicious Injuries to Property, Forgery, Coinage, Offences against the Person, against the Game Laws, against Public Justice, Perjury and Conspiracy, Offences against the Public Peace, against Religion and Morals, against Public Trade, against the Public Revenue, Nuisances, other Indictable Offences, and lastly, Offences punishable by Court Martial. Each of those subdivisions treats of the offence so far as it exists at Common Law, then the statutory description and its ingredients, next, the decisions of the courts bearing on each phrase and expression so used, and lastly, any peculiarities of procedure which exist. With regard to those Offences embraced in the recent Consolidation Acts, the order of the Statutes has been followed as nearly as practicable. Occasional subjects have been introduced under their proper heads: thus the practice of Coroners' Inquisitions, and Surety of the Peace, have been included among the chapters relating to Offences against the Person.

The cases have been collected at the foot of the page, so as not to interrupt the progress of the reader as he peruses the text. The Table of Cases cited will show the extent and variety of the references. A Table of Contents, and also of the Statutes, together with a copious Index of subjects, compiled with great care, will bear testimony to the solicitude with which the whole has been completed.

In a work of such magnitude the Author can only confidently hope that any errors which have occurred will be viewed with indulgence, as he has spared neither time nor labour to render the work complete.

H. W. W.

Hare Court, Temple,
1862.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

PART I.

Procedure in Criminal Trials.

CHAP. 1. Process, 1.

2. Depositions, 17.
3. Bail and habeas corpus, 20.
4. The grand jury, 42.
5. Proceedings before trial, 50.
6. The indictment and its incidents, 53.
7. Certiorari, 99.
8. Of an arraignment and its incidents, 117.
9. Pleas, 125.
10. Of criminal and other informations, 134.
11. Juries and challenges, 152.
12. Of counsel, 166.
13. Election, 173.
14. Of evidence, 177.
15. Of the examination, cross-examination, &c., of witnesses, 222.
16. Of the nature of the evidence for the crown and for the prisoner or defendant, 233.
17. Of the attendance of witnesses and other incidents before verdict, 254.
18. The verdict, 259.
19. Of rewards and other matters, 264.
20. Of proceedings to stay judgment, 267.
21. Of acquittal, 276.
22. Of judgment, 281.
23. Of error, 290.
24. Of attainder and its consequences, 299.
25. Of execution, 302.

PART II.

Indictable Offences against the Queen and her Government.

- CHAP. 1. Of high treason, and its incidents, 307.
 2. Of treasonable libels and slander, 339.
 3. Of treasons relating to the succession and regency, 340.
 4. Of misprision of treason, 341.
 5. Of offences in the nature of treason with reference to persons of the Roman Catholic religion, 343.
 6. Of felonies and misdemeanors against Her Majesty the Queen, 344.
 7. Of sedition and offences of that nature, 347.
 8. Of tumultuous petitioning, 352.
 9. Of unlawful training, 353.
 10. Of aiding foreign powers without licence from the crown, 356.
 11. Of aiding prisoners of war to escape, 359.

PART III.

Larceny and other similar Offences. "The Larceny Act, 1861."

- CHAP. 1. Of simple larceny and of bailees, 361.
 2. Of taking and advertising rewards for the recovery of stolen property, 405.
 3. Larceny of cattle and other animals, 407.
 4. Of deer and fish; creatures feræ naturæ; and of dog stealing, 411.
 5. Larceny of valuable securities, 419.
 6. Larceny of deeds relating to real estate; wills and records, &c., 422.
 7. Of larceny of things attached to or growing on land, 425.
 8. Of larceny from mines, 430.
 9. Of simple robbery; stealing from the person; assault with intent to rob, 431.
 10. Of aggravated robberies, 439.
 11. Of demands with menaces, 442.
 12. Of burglary, 450.

13. Breaking and entry into buildings within the curtilage, but not being part of the dwelling house, with intent to commit felony, 468.
14. Of breaking into dwelling houses, shops, &c. 470.
15. Stealing in a dwelling house to the amount of 5*l.* 474.
16. Of stealing goods in the process of manufacture, 479.
17. Of stealing from ships, docks, &c., and from wrecks, 480.
18. Of larceny by clerks and servants, 482.
19. Embezzlement, 485.
20. Of larceny and embezzlement by persons in the Queen's service, or by the police, 502.
21. Embezzlement by officers of the Bank of England and Ireland, 504.
22. Embezzlement, Mutiny Acts, and public revenue, 506.
23. Of larceny by tenants and lodgers, 508.
24. Of frauds and embezzlements by bankers, &c., factors, and agents, 509.
25. Of frauds by trustees and directors, 514.
26. Obtaining money, &c., by false pretences, 516.
27. Of felonies relating to the receipt of stolen goods, 537.
28. Of piracy, 548.

PART IV.

Malicious Injuries to Property. "The Malicious Injuries Act, 1861."

- CHAP. 1. Of arson and malicious burning, 555.
2. Of injuries by explosive substances to buildings or goods therein, 569.
 3. Of riot and destruction of property, 570.
 4. Of injuries to buildings by tenants, 574.
 5. Of injuries to manufactures and machinery, 574.
 6. Of injuries to corn, hopbinds, trees, vegetable productions, &c., 577.
 7. Of injuries to mines, 582.
 8. Of injuries to sea and river banks, and to works on rivers, canals, and fisheries, 585.
 9. Injuries to bridges, viaducts, and toll bars, 586.
 10. Injuries to railways, carriages, and telegraphs, 587.

- 11. Injuries to works of art, 589.
- 12. Malicious injuries to cattle and other animals, 590.
- 13. Malicious injuries to ships, 593.
- 14. Sending letters threatening to burn or destroy, 599.
- 15. Of injuries not otherwise provided for, 600.
- 16. Gunpowder, 601.
- 17. Of procedure, 602.

PART V.

Cheats, Frauds, and Forgery. "The Forgery Act, 1861."

- CHAP. 1. Of cheats and frauds, 607.
 - 2. Forgery at common law, 632.
 - 3. Forging or counterfeiting the seals, 637.
 - 4. Forgery and personation, transfer of stock, &c., 639.
 - 5. Forgery of East India bonds, 642.
 - 6. Forgery of exchequer bills, bonds, &c., 643.
 - 7. Forgery of bank or other notes, and other incidents relating to them, 645.
 - 8. Forgery of deeds, bonds, &c., 654.
 - 9. Forgery of wills, 656.
 - 10. Forgery of bills and notes, 659.
 - 11. Forgery of receipts, &c., 670.
 - 12. Forgery connected with records and process, 691.
 - 13. Forgery of court rolls, 693.
 - 14. Forgery—Registry Acts, 693.
 - 15. Forging orders of justices, recognizances, &c., 694.
 - 16. Forgery—accountant-general, judge of Irish Landed Estates Court, &c., 695.
 - 17. Forgery—Births, baptisms, marriages, burials, 696.
 - 18. Demanding money upon forged instruments, 698.
 - 19. Forgery (5 El. c. 14 [repealed]), 698.
 - 20. Forgery—Bankruptcy Court, 699.
 - 21. Forgery of other legal documents, 699.
 - 22. Procedure in forgery, 700.
 - 23. Forgery relating to the government and revenue, 703.
 - 24. Other forgeries affecting commercial persons or companies, 717.

PART VI.

Offences relating to the Coin. "The Coinage Offences Act, 1861."

- CHAP. 1. Counterfeiting coin, 719.
2. Illegal utterings and the illegal possession of coin, 725.
3. Illegal dealings with false coin, 732.
4. Offences respecting implements for making false coin, 734.
5. Procedure in coinage offences, 739.
-

PART VII.

Offences against the Person, and of Surety of the Peace. "The Offences against the Person Act, 1861."

- CHAP. 1. Homicide—Murder, 743.
2. Manslaughter, 761.
3. Homicide not felonious, 773.
4. Indictments and trial, murder, &c., 778.
5. Attempts to murder, 787.
6. Letters threatening to murder, 802.
7. Acts causing or tending to cause danger to life, or bodily harm, 803.
8. Assaults, 811.
9. Rape, abduction and defilement of women, 830.
10. Child stealing, 847.
11. Bigamy, 848.
12. Attempts to procure abortion, 867.
13. Concealment of birth, 868.
14. Unnatural crimes, 872.
15. Making gunpowder with intent to commit felony, 874.
16. Procedure under the Act relating to offences against the person, 875.
17. The coroner's inquisition, 877.
18. Surety of the peace, 893.

PART VIII.Offences against the Game Laws, 903.

PART IX.Indictable Offences against Public Justice.

- CHAP. 1. Compounding offences ; misprision of felony, 915.
2. Champerty, &c., 918.
3. Non-repair of gaols, &c., 927.
4. Libels, &c., 928.
5. Misconduct by legal officers, 931.
6. Justices administering unstatutory oaths, 933.
7. Disobedience to orders of justices, 934.
8. Misconduct by justices, &c., 943.
9. Illegal distress, 948.
10. Misdemeanors committed against legal officers, 949.
11. Returning from transportation, 951.
12. Rescues, 955.
-

PART X.Perjury, Conspiracy, and Extortion.

- CHAP. 1. Perjury and subornation, 965.
2. Conspiracy, 1047.
3. Extortion, 1073.
-

PART XI.Indictable Offences against the Public Peace.

- CHAP. 1. Unlawful assemblies, 1083.
2. Seditious libels and slander, 1088.
3. Riot, 1092.
4. Affrays, 1100.
5. Challenges, 1102.
6. Forcible entry and detainer, 1105.
7. Libel and slander, 1130.

PART XII.

Indictable Offences—Religion and Morals.

- CHAP. 1. Disturbing ministers and congregations, 1165.
2. Congé d'elire, 1168.
3. Clergy making canons without the consent of the crown, 1168.
4. False recitals in ecclesiastical leases, 1169.
5. Registers of births, &c., 1169.
6. Jesuits, 1170.
7. Blasphemy, &c., 1171.
8. Sabbath breaking, 1176.
9. Indictable offences concerning marriage not hitherto mentioned, 1179.
10. Offences against decency, 1182.
11. Gaming and gambling houses, 1187.
12. Slave dealing, 1191.
13. Attempts to commit felony, 1194.
14. Stealing dead bodies, 1195.
15. Purchase and sale of offices, 1197.
16. Other offences, 1200.
17. Bribes and receiving bribes, 1201.
-

PART XIII.

Indictable Offences against Public Trade.

- CHAP. 1. Forestalling, &c., abolished, 1205.
2. Monopolies, 1207.
3. Unlawful oaths, 1209.
4. Payment of wages otherwise than in coin, 1211.
5. Refusing freedom, 1212.
6. Search of China passenger ships, 1212.
-

PART XIV.

Indictable Offences against the Public Revenue.

- CHAP. 1. Smuggling, 1213.
2. Receivers of stolen goods on the Thames, 1225.
3. Post office, 1226.

PART XV.Nuisance.

- CHAP. 1. Offensive trades and occupations, 1237.
2. General annoyances, 1240.
3. Procedure in nuisance, 1243.
4. Nuisances—highways, 1246.
5. Nuisances—bridges, 1273.
6. Nuisances—navigation, 1293.
-

PART XVI.Of other Indictable Offences, 1305.*PART XVII.*Offences punishable by Courts Martial, 1321.

TABLE OF CASES.

A.		PAGE		PAGE
Abbott, Den. 273		521	Akenhead, 3 Meriv. 682	1172
A'Becket v. —, 7 Taunt. 776 ..		1003	Akers, 6 Esp. 125	949, 1217
Abdy, Cro. Car. 585		1311	Albert, 5 Q. B. 37	64
Abgood, 2 C. & P. 436		449	Alcock v. Alcock, 21 L. J. Ch. 856:	179
Abingdon (Lord), Peake, 171, 236;			Alcocke, 1 Keb. 231	324
1 Esp. 226		1139	Aldenharn, 2 Lev. 152	889
Abingdon, Borough, 12 Mod. 308..		135	Alderton, 5 B. & Ald. 596	930
Abraham, Holt's Ca. 361	135,	1015	Alderton, Say. 286	1133
Abraham, 1 Moo. & Rob. 7	151,	249	Aldridge, 4 Cox, 143	409
Abraham, 1 Cox, 208		795	Alexander, 3 Ch. Burr. 458	143
Abraham, Comb. 141		1092	Alexander, 3 Ch. Burr. 338	616
Abrahams, Leach, 96		660	Alexander, Leach, 63	977
Abrahams, q. t. v. Bunn, 4 Burr.			Alford, Leach, 150	976
2251		1028	Allan, 7 C. & P. 664	398
Abrahat, Leach, 824		483	Allan v. Ormond, 8 East, 4	1263
Absolan, 1 Fost. & F. 498		1053	Allanson, Car. & M. 295	959
Ackroyd, 1 Lev. 49		190	Allday, 1 C. & P. 136	705
Acton, Str. 851		33	Allen, 1 Moo. 159	235
Adams, Car. & M. 299	94, 123,	572	Allen, Russ. & Ry. 513	412
Adams, 6 C. & P. 324		24	Allen, Trem. 109	610
Adams, 3 C. & P. 600	368,	369	Allen, 7 C. & P. 156	770
Adams, Den. 38		373	Allen, 9 C. & P. 31	832
Adams, Russ. & Ry. 225		374	Allen, 2 Moo. 179	838
Adams, 2 Russ. C. M. 28		377	Allen, Den. 364	873
Adams, 1 Fost. & F. 86		541	Allen, 1 Car. & K. 495	874
Adams, 1 Russ. C. M. 728		793	Allen, Exp. 3 Nev. & M. 35	35
Adams, 6 M. & S. 52		1078	Alleyne, Dears. 32	133
Adams v. Flemming, Hob. 283 ..		978	Alleyne v. Reg. 24 L. J. Q. B. 282;
Adams v. Moore, Selw. N. P. 910:		13	Dears. 505	297
Adamson, 2 Moo. C. C. 286		536	Allington, Str. 678	944
Addis, 6 C. & P. 388	15,	911	Allison, 1 Cox, 24	217, 558,
Adey, Leach, 169		5	Allison, 8 C. & P. 418	758
Adey, Leach, 206	72,	756	Allison, Russ. & Ry. 109	851,
Adey, 1 Moo. & Rob. 947		228	All Saints, Ca. T. Hardw. 105	1264
Adey, Den. 571		488	All Saints, Worcester, 6 M. & S. 194:	184
Adey, 3 Stark. 71		498	Allibone, Trem. 97	1053
Adlard, 4 B. & C. 772		1311	Alme, 3 Salk. 224	1133
Ady, 7 C. & P. 140		529	Alme, 3 Jur. 750	950
Agar, Mo. 627		978, 998	Almon, 5 Burr. 2686	1145
Aickles, Leach, 294	216,	379	Alsop, 1 Show. 339	908
Aickles, Leach, 390	218,	952	Altass, 1 Cox, 17	984
Aickles, Leach, 430		662	Amarro, Russ. & Ry. 286	799
Aillesbury, Earl of, 12 Mod. 117 ..	33,	34	Ambury, 6 Cox, 79	265
Airey, East, P. C. 231; 2 East, 30:			Ambury, 6 Cox, 263	954
	519,	530	Amey v. Long, 1 Campb. 14	1002
Akehurst, Leach, 150		678	Amery, 1 T. R. 363	65
Akenhead, Holt, N. P. C. 469		793	Amier, 6 C. & P. 344	475
			Amos, Den. & P. 65	561

	PAGE		PAGE
Amos, 3 B. & Ald. 533.....	940	Anon., 1 Lew. 58	772
Amphlitt, 4 B. & C. 35	1157	Anon., 1 Russ. C. M. 724	794
Anderdon v. Burrows, 2 C. & P. 410	824	Anon., 2 Moo. 40	800, 802
Anderson, Leach, 239	375	Anon., East, P. C. 305	814
Anderson, 3 Ch. Burn, 104....387,	1313	Anon., 2 Camp. 652....	818
Anderson, East, P. C. 772.....	397	Anon., 1 Lew. 17	821
Anderson, Leach, 673, n.	478	Anon., 2 Barnard. 27, 87, 138	826
Anderson, 2 Moo. & Rob. 469	671	Anon., Leach, 430.....	839
Anderson, 1 Russ. C. M. 531.....	744	Anon., 1 Russ. C. M. 695	839
Anderson, In the matter of, 30 L. J. Q. B. 139	31	Anon., 12 Mod. 112	889
Anderson v. Radcliffe, 28 L. J. Q. B. 32	920	Anon., 1 Ventr. 352.....	891
Andrews, 2 Dowl. & L. 10.....	35	Anon., Str. 533.....	892
Andrews, Car. & M. 121	471, 472	Anon., 2 Barnard. 60.....	928
Andrews, 2 Moo. & Rob. 37 ..906,	910	Anon., Lofft. 462	928
Andrews, Ex. p. 4 C. B. 226	32	Anon., Str. 384	933
Andrews v. Lord Cromwell, Cro. Jac. 32	1123, 1174	Anon., 2 Barnard. 198	944
Anglesea, Coroner, East, P. C. 382:	881	Anon., Lofft. 253	946
Annet, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 395	1173	Anon., Lofft. 199	948
Anon., 1 Lew. C. C. 20.....	28	Anon., 7 Mod. 10	949
Anon., 7 Mod. 27	28	Anon., 1 Ventr. 296	970
Anon., 1 Lew. C. C. 70.....	43	Anon., 1 Ventr. 369.....	982
Anon., East, P. C. 559.....	73	Anon., Str. 384.....	1003
Anon., Leach, 6, 7	81	Anon., 1 Ventr. 13	1005
Anon., Mo. 8	83	Anon., 1 Lew. 271.....	1010
Anon., 12 Mod. 502	94	Anon., Cro. El. 201	1017
Anon., 2 Jur. 14	94	Anon., 2 Russ. C. M. 652	1026
Anon., 7 Mod. 40	134	Anon., 3 Mod. 116.....	1033
Anon., 12 Mod. 248	134	Anon., 2 Lew. 12.....	1038, 1039
Anon., 12 Mod. 495	134	Anon., Lat. 132.....	1039
Anon., 12 Mod. 434	134	Anon., 1 Lew. 9.....	1040
Anon., Latch. 198.....	135	Anon., 1 Salk. 330	1075
Anon., Skin. 114	135	Anon., 6 Mod. 43	1094
Anon., In re, 16 Jur. 995	137	Anon., 12 Mod. 648	1094
Anon., Skin. 110	138	Anon., 3 Salk. 317	1095
Anon., 2 Salk. 514	144	Anon., 13 Vin. Ab. 64.....	1114
Anon., 1 Ventr. 28.....	145	Anon., 11 Mod. 252	1116
Anon., Sty. 417.....	146	Anon., 1 Ventr. 18	1142
Anon., 1 Salk. 153	153	Anon., 11 Mod. 99.....	1153
Anon., 1 And. 299.....	154	Anon., 11 Mod. 40	1187
Anon., 1 Ventr. 309.....	154	Anon., 2 Russ. 556	1200
Anon., 1 Lew. 276.....	173	Anon., East, P. C. 765	1223
Anon., 1 Lew. 324.....	181	Anon., Dearsl. 304	1256
Anon., 1 Lew. 323.....	186	Anon., 2 Barnard. 54	1260
Anon., 1 Lew. 322.....	221	Anon., 1 Russ. C. M. 379	1295
Anon., 1 Lew. 138	237	Ansell, 8 Cox, 409.....	685
Anon., 1 Lew. 128	256	Anstruther, Leach, 43	229
Anon., Salisbury, M. S.....	257	Antrobus, 2 Ad. & El. 788	303
Anon., 1 Lew. 36	262	Apley, 1 Cox, 71.....	865
Anon., 1 Lew. 20	276	Apothecaries' Company v. Bentley, Ry. & M. 159.....	235
Anon., East, P. C. 664	364	Appleby, 3 Stark. 33.....	202
Anon., 2 C. & P. 459	368	Apprentices, Leach, 203	33
Anon., 8 Mod. 248	394	Apprentices, 1 Hale, 43	314
Anon., Leach, 1061	419	Archer, 1 Moo. 143	73
Anon., East, P. C. 662	432	Archer, 3 Cox, 218.....	181
Anon., 1 Lew. 300.....	433	Archer, 2 T. R. 203	286
Anon., 1 Lew. 37	453	Archer, Dearsl. 449	522
Anon., Matth. Cr. Dig. 48.....	453	Archer, Plowd. 475	751
Anon., Stark. Cr. Pl. 467, n.....	474	Archer, 1 Fost. & F. 351.....	769
Anon., 2 Lew. 256.....	487	Archer, 1 Car. & K. 174.....	802
Anon., Lofft. 271	529	Argent, 1 Moo. 159	235
Anon., 1 Lew. 8	560	Aris, 6 C. & P. 348	580
Anon., 2 Salk. 522	615	Arlett, 1 Car. & K. 596	116, 279
Anon., Lofft. 146	616	Arman, 1 Jur. 1115	490
Anon., 8 Mod. 164	750	Armes, Case of, Poph. 121....1085,	1100
Anon., East, P. C. 296	755	Armstrong, 1 Lew. 195.....	374
Anon., East, P. C. 261.....	761	Armstrong, 1 Ventr. 305.....	1052
		Arnall, 8 Cox, 439.....	835
		Arnold, 8 C. & P. 621	17, 198, 213

Table of Cases.

xvii

	PAGE		PAGE
Arnold, 1 Russ. C. M. 9.....	250	Attorney-General v. Austin, 1 Ventr.
Arnold, 2 Keb. 526	951	183	1246
Arrigoni, East, P. C. 399	81	Attorney-General v. Bond, 9 C. & P.
Arrowsmith, 2 Dowl. N. S. 704.....	136	189	253
Arrowsmith v. Le Mesurier, 2 New		Attorney-General v. Bovet, 15 Mees.
Rep. 211	7	& W. 60	210
Arscott, 6 C. & P. 408, 410...660, 675, 682		Attorney-General v. Bowman, 2
Arundel, 4 Cox , 260.....	129	Bos. & P. 532.....	248
Arundel, 1 Lew. 115.....	408	Attorney-General v. Briant, 15 Mees.
Arundel, 13 Vin. Ab. 387	1125	& W. 169	223
Ash, 2 Moo. & Rob. 294	871	Attorney-General v. Brittain, 6 B.
Ashburn, 8 C. & P. 50.....	976	& C. 579	1295
Ashburton, Lord, 4 Q. B. 585	61	Attorney-General v. Brooksbank, 1
Ashburton, Lord, 8 Jur. 143.....	67	Y. & Jer. 439.....	143
Ashby v. White, 14 How. St. Tr.		Attorney-General v. Bulpit, 9 Price,
806	39	4	231
Ashford v. Thornton, 1 B. & Ald.		Attorney-General v. Cleave, 2 D. P.
423	125	C. 668	148
Ashley, 1 Car. & K. 198	475, 476	Attorney-General v. Eastern Coun-
Ashley, 12 Rep. 90	1052	ties Railway Company.....	883
Ashley, 1 Ro. Rep. 109	1094	Attorney-General v. Green, 1 Price,
Ashpernon, 2 Leon. 184	1122	180	258
Ashton, 1 Lew. 147	205	Attorney-General v. Hawkes, 1 Tyr.
Ashton, 1 Lew. 276	572	3	89
Ashton, 2 B. & Adol. 750	576	Attorney-General v. Johnson, 2
Ashton, 7 Q. B. 169	896	Wils. Ch. Ca. 87	1299
Askew, 3 M. & S. 9	270	Attorney-General v. Lambert, 5
Ashman, 1 Fost. & F. 88.....	793	Price , 386.....	501
Aspinall, 3 Stark. Ev. 952.....	835	Attorney-General v. Laragoity, 3
Aslett, Leach , 954	419, 504	Price , 221	5
Ast, Car. Cr. L. 66	186	Attorney-General v. Le Merchant,
Asterley, 7 C. & P. 191	519	2 T. R. 201.....	216
Assisarum, 43 Pl. 37	1285	Attorney-General v. Moss, 13 Price,
Assisarum, 37 Pl. 10	1296	258	50
Astley, East, P. C. 729	435	Attorney-General v. Parsons, 2 Mees.
Aston, 2 Cox , 234; 2 Car. & K. 413:	491	& W. 23	145, 150, 195
Aston, 2 Russ. 407, 651		Attorney-General v. Pearson, 3
Aston, 12 Mees. & W. 456.....	894, 899	Meriv. 682	1172
Athea, 1 Moo. C. C. 329	476	Attorney-General v. Phillips, 13
Athea, 2 Lew. 191.....	906	Price , 592	50
Athos, Str. 553; 5 Burr. 2797 ..	303	Attorney-General v. Philpot, 2
Athos, 1 Russ. C. M. 550	782	Anstr. 608	1299
Atkins and Atkinson, 4 East , 176..	103	Attorney-General v. Portsmouth
Atkins and Atkinson, 1 Lew. 115..	241	Harbour, 6 B. & C. 573	1295
Atkins and Atkinson, 3 Bro. P. C.		Attorney-General v. Poppleton,
517	289, 303	Bunb. 311	145
Atkins and Atkinson, 5 C. & P. 310:	320	Attorney-General v. Radloff, 10 Ex.
Atkins and Atkinson, East, P. C.		84; 23 L. J. Ex. 240	180
673	373, 519	Attorney-General v. Ray, 9 Mees.
Atkins and Atkinson, Leach , 302 ..	385	& W. 760; 11 Mees. & W. 464: 144, 145
Atkins and Atkinson, 2 Moo. 278 ..	498	Attorney-General v. Read, 2 Mod.
Atkins and Atkinson, 11 Mod. 79:		299	1311
612, 1076		Attorney-General v. Richards, 2
Atkins and Atkinson, 2 Mod. 215..	686	Anstr. 603	1299
Atkins and Atkinson, 7 C. & P. 669:	667	Attorney-General v. Snow, Bunb.
Atkins and Atkinson, 1 Russ. & Ry.		96	149
104	792	Attorney-General v. Thacker, 2
Atkins and Atkinson, 1 Russ. C. M.		Price , 116	51
24	862	Attorney-General v. Woodward, 2
Atkins and Atkinson, 2 Russ. C. M.		Price , 13.....	1003
542	969	Atwell, East, P. C. 768	539
Atkins and Atkinson, 7 T. R. 315..	980	Atwood, Leach , 464.....	180
Atkins and Atkinson, 1 Salk. 382: 1080		Atwood, 5 Cox , 197	197
Atkins and Atkinson, 3 Burr. 706: 1105		Atwood v. Jolliffe, 3 New. S. C. 116: 1109
Atkins and Atkinson, Id. 1703	1121	Audley, Lord, 1 St. Tr. 393	185
Atkins and Atkinson, 3 Salk. 188: 1205		Austen and Austin, 4 Cox , 385 ..	45
Atkyns, Sir R., 2 Show. 236	1093	Austen and Austin, 7 C. & P. 796:
Attorney-General v. —, Hardr.		120, 543
201	146	Austen and Austin, 2 Cox , 59	128

	PAGE		PAGE
Austen and Austin, 25 L. J. M. C. 48:	209	Ball, Russ. & Ry. 132	272, 651
Austen and Austin, 1 D. P. C. 24 :	265	Ball, Car. & M. 249	521, 527
Austen and Austin, East, P. C. 664:	368	Ball, 1 Moo. 33.....	564, 565
Austen and Austin, East, P. C. 602:	420	Ball, 1 Moo. 470	679
Austen and Austin, Russ. & Ry. 492:	591	Ball, 6 Cox , 360	979
Austen and Austin, 1 Car. & K. 621:	904	Ball, 6 C. & P. 563	1210
Autey, 26 L. J. M. C. 190; Dearsl.		Ballard, 1 Russ. C. M. 814	462
& B. 294	672, 686	Balme, Comp. 648	936
Avery, 28 L. J. M. C. 188; Bell,		Balmerino, Ld. Fost. 9	319
150	389	Baltimore, Ld. 4 Burr. 2179.....	837
Avery, 8 C. & P. 596..233, 234, 657,	658	Bamber v. Reginam, 5 Q. B. 279..	1255
Ayes, Russ. & Ry. 166	764	Bambridge, Str. 1231	895
Aylett, 8 C. & P. 669	17, 167	Bamfield, 1 Moo. 416	671
Aylett, 4 East , 177	103	Bangor, Bp. of , 1 Russ. C. M. 274:
Aylett, 1 T. R. 63 ..984, 990, 1007,	1020		1092, 1095
Aylett v. Reg. (in error), 3 Bro. P.		Bank of England v. Reid, 7 D. P.
C. 529		C. 725
Ayliffe, 1 Show. 15	292	Bank Prosecutions, Russ. & Ry. 578:
Azire, Str. 633	185		652, 653
Azzopardi, 2 Moo. 288	785	Banks, 1 Cox , 238	73
		Banks, 6 Mod. 205	115, 163
B.		Banks, Russ. & Ry. 441.....	374
Backhouse, Lofft. 61	950	Banks, 8 C. & P. 574	841
Bacon, 1 Lew. 146	802	Banks, 1 Sess. Ca. 357	1121
Bacon, 2 Ro. Ab. 697	1027	Banks, 1 Esp. 144.....	1223
Badcock, Leach , 996	638	Bannen, 2 Moo. 309.....	737
Badger, 4 Q. B. 468.....	36	Barbat v. Allen, 21 L. J. Ex. 155:	179
Badger, 25 L. J. M. C. 81	108	Barber, 1 C. & P. 434	169, 655
Badger, 6 Jur. 994	137	Barber, 1 Car. & K. 442.....	658
Bagg, 1 Ro. Rep. 79	928, 930	Barclay, 2 Sid. 101	885, 892
Bailey, Comb. 10..	23	Bardell, 5 Ad. & El. 619	1268
Bailey, 2 Stark. Ev. 23	192	Barfoot, 13 East , 506	1217
Bailey, 7 C. & P. 264	237, 1009	Barford, Ex p. , 8 Cox ,	846
Bailey, Russ. & Ry. 1	247, 796	Barham, 1 Moo. 151	908, 910
Bailey, Russ. & Ry. 341.....	456	Barker v. Dixie, 2 Russ. C. M. 982:	184
Bailey, 1 Moo. 23.....	462	Barker, 2 Moo. & Rob. 53.....	206
Bailey, 4 Cox , 390.....	1190	Barker, 1 Fost. & F. 236	216
Bailey, Dearsl. 244; 470.....	1194	Barker, 1 Car. & K. 434	219, 230
Baillie, 2 Cox , 238	845	Barker, 3 C. & P. 589.....	226, 835
Baillie, Holt, Libel. 173	1034	Barker, 1 Cox , 434.....	240
Bain, Leigh & Cave , 129; 471		Barker, 1 Dowl. & Ry. N. P. C.
Baines, 2 Ld. R. 1265	1076	19	489
Bainham, 1 Salk. 370	615	Barley, 2 Cox , 191	230
Bainton, Str. 1088.....	99	Barling v. Waters, 6 Bing. 423....	1003
Baker, 28 L. J. M. C. 377	1038	Barlow, Ca. Sett. 214	947
Baker, 7 Ad. & El. 502	305	Barlow, 2 Salk. 609.....	1313
Baker, Leach , 287	433	Barnard, 7 C. & P. 784	529
Baker, 3 Cox , 581.....	451	Barnard Castle, 5 Jur. 799....	109, 1272
Baker, 1 Moo. 231	671	Barnes, 4 Cox , 269	201
Baker, Leach , 112	752	Barnes, 7 C. & P. 166.....	264
Baker, 1 Car. & K. 254.....	799, 802	Barnes, 1 Stark. 243	217, 629
Baker, 1 Mod. 35	928, 1154	Barnes, 5 Cox , 112	373
Baker, 11 Mod. 235	1121	Barnes, 8 Cox , 129	487
Baker v. Greenhill, 3 Q. B. 148 ..	1280	Barnes, Den. & P. 59	520
Baker v. Townsend, 7 Taunt. 442:	915	Barnett, 3 C. & P. 600.....	26
Bakewell, Russ. & Ry. 35	504	Barnett, 2 Russ. C. M. 175.....	173
Bakewell, Leach , 943		Barnett, 2 Russ. C. M. 118	397
Baldry, Den. & P. 430	188	Barnett, 2 Car. & K. 594	441
Baldwin, 3 Camp. 265	95, 548	Barney, 5 Mod. 323	33, 34
Baldwin, Russ. & Ry. 241	252	Barnoldswick, 4 Q. B. 499.....	1254
Baldwin, 8 Ad. & El. 168	139	Barnsley Rioters, 1 Lew. 5.....	182
Baldwin, 1 Russ. C. M. 683	832	Baron and Boys, 13 Rep. 18	1206
Baldwin, 3 Nev. & P. 342	1150	Barr, 4 Camp. 16.....	1250
Ball, 1 Moo. 330	14	Barratt, 9 C. & P. 387: 214, 801,
Ball, 8 C. & P. 745.....	221, 222, 251		843, 844
		Barratt, 3 Camp. 444	217
		Barre, Mo. 55	160
		Barrett, 6 Cox , 78	265
		Barrett, 2 Car. & K. 343	767, 782

Table of Cases.

xix

	PAGE		PAGE
Barrett, Dougl. 465	947	Beardsall, 1 Fost. & F. 629	679
Barrington v. Regem, 3 T. R. 499 :	292	Beauclerk, 7 Jur. 373	135
Barronnet, Dearsl. 51	35	Beaumont, Dearsl. 270 ; 23 L. J.
Barstow, 1 Lew. 107	203	M. C. 54	492
Barthelemy, Dearsl. 60	33, 35	Beaumont, Say. 278	998
Bartholomew, 1 Car. & K. 366	1013	Beavan, Ry. & M. 242	187, 1125
Bartlett, 2 Car. & K. 321	169	Beavers, East, P. C. 383	888
Bartlett, 7 C. & P. 671	184	Beavis, 7 T. R. 80	141
Bartlett, 7 C. & P. 832	200	Beck, Str. 1160	975
Bartlett, Deac. Cr. L. 168	576	Beckett, 1 Moo. & Rob. 526	787
Bartlett, 2 Moo. & Rob. 362	665	Beckwith v. Philby, 6 B. & C. 35 ..	8
Bartlett v. Pickersgill, 4 East , 577 :		Bedford, Str. 789	1088
968, 1004, 1028		Bedford, Lofft. 29	1187
Barton, 4 Cox , 353	137	Beech, Leach , 133	237
Barton, 4 Jur. 431	267	Beecham, 5 Cox , 181	371
Barton, Cr. C. C. 103	457	Beechcroft, 12 Mod. 255	121
Barton, 1 Moo. 141	684, 687	Beechey, Russ. & Ry. 319	489
Bartrum, 8 East , 269	52	Beechey v. Sides, 9 B. & C. 806 ..	13
Barvisse, 5 Cox , 55	534	Beechey v. Sides, 4 B. & C. 136 ..	38
Barwell and others v. Hundred of		Beeching, Exp. p. , 4 B. & C. 136 ..	916
Winterstoke, 19 L. J. Q. B. 206 :	584	Beeley v. Wingfield, 11 East , 46 ..	164
Barwick, 7 T. R. 33	1313	Beere, 2 Moo. & Rob. 472	213
Baskerville v. Gulliam, Mo. 657 ..	1001	Beeston, 24 L. J. M. C. 5	174
Baspoole, 2 Show. 486	1033	Beeton, Den. 414	229
Bass, 2 Car. & K. 822	26	Beezley, 4 C. & P. 220	1149
Bass, East, P. C. 566 ; Leach , 251 :	385	Beharrel, Str. 498	33, 34
Bass, Leach , 870	482	Bell and ux., Andr. 69	171
Bassett, 1 Cox , 51	531	Bell, Moo. & Malk. 440	198
Batcheldor, 1 Per. & D. 516 ..32, 33, 38		Bell, 5 C. & P. 162	738
Bate, 8 C. & P. 875	678	Bell, Fost. Cr. L. 430	871
Bateman, 1 Cox , 186	667	Bell, 1 Moo. & Rob. 294	1012, 1020
Bateman v. Burge, 6 C. & P. 391 ..	1248	Bell, 3 Bulstr. 322	218, 1030
Bates, 2 Fost. & F. 217	211	Bellamy, Ry. & M. 175	250
Bates, 3 Cox , 201	522	Bellingham, 1 Russ. C. M. 9	967
Bath, Leach , 441	284	Bellingham, Sty. 126
Bathews v. Galindo, 3 C. & P. 238 :	186	Belson, In re , 14 Jur. 631 ; 7 E. F.
Bathurst, Say. Rep. 225	1106, 1119, 1121	Moore , 114	31, 33
Bathwick, 2 B. & Adol. 639	184, 863	Belstead, Russ. & Ry. 411	392, 508
Batt, 6 C. & P. 329	573	Belton, 1 Salk. 372	121
Batty, 2 Moo. C. C. 257	491	Belton, 5 Jur. 276	169
Baude, Cro. Jac. 41	1115, 1120, 1123	Belton, 11 Mod. 79	947
Baxter, 3 Cox , 502	492	Belwood, 11 Mod. 79	611
Baxter, 1 Leach , 578	545	Bembridge, 6 East , 136	1313
Baxter, 3 Mod. 69	1153	Bembridge, 1 Salk. 380	968
Bawn, 1 Cox , 33	851	Benesech, Peake, Add. Ca. 93
Bayley, 1 Jur. 192	107	Benfield, 2 Burr. 980 ..98, 135, 139,	1136, 1148
Bayley, Dearsl. & B. 121	492	Bengough, 3 Salk. 170	1124
Bayley, Car. Cr. L. 143	884	Bennett and ux. v. Watson, 3 M.
Bayley, 5 B. & Ald. 647	1034	& S. 1	22
Baylis, 4 Cox , 23	839	Bennett, Leach , 553	198, 1024
Baylis, 3 Burr. 1318	944, 945	Bennett, Russ. & Ry. 289	458
Baynes, Leach , 7	77	Bennett, 28 L. J. M. C. 27	771
Bazeley, Leach , 835	493	Bennett, 6 C. & P. 179	888
Beacall, 1 Moo. 15	93, 488, 497	Benson, 2 Camp. 509	1021, 1033
Beach, Leach , 133	1018	Benson, 1 Sid. 420	1076
Beade v. Orme, Noy. 136	1109	Benson, 1 Keb. 901	1121
Beal, 3 Mod. 124	303	Benson v. Offley, 2 Show. 510	754
Beale, 1 East , 183	1203	Bensted, Cro. Car. 583	314, 957
Beaman, Car. & M. 595	385	Bent, 2 Car. & K. 179	1321
Beany, Russ. & Ry. 416	261	Bent, Den. 157	1322
Bear, East, P. C. 413	80	Bentley, 2 C. & P. 148	198
Bear, Carth. 407	1141	Berchet, 2 Salk. 594	1097
Bear, 2 Salk. 417	1152	Bernard, 1 Fost. & F. 240 ..41, 83,
Beard, 8 C. & P. 143 ..93, 169, 650,		117, 172, 272, 751, 781
667, 668		Bernard, 1 Ld. R. 94	1310
Beardmore, 7 C. & P. 497	50	Berriman, 5 C. & P. 601	89
Beardmore, 8 C. & P. 260	211	Berry, 1 Moo. & Rob. 463 ..217, 260, 780
Beardmore, 2 Burr. 792	304, 935	Berry, Bell , 95 ; 28 L. J. M. C.
		70	389
		Berry, Bell , 467	981

Table of Cases.

	PAGE		PAGE
Berry, 4 T. R. 217	1152	Bitton, 6 C. & P. 92.....	118
Berry v. Adamson, 6 B. & C. 528..	7	Blackburn, 6 Cox , 333	158
Berwick, Fost. 10	322	Blackburn, 9 Car. & K. 330	170
Besant, 7 D. P. C. 680	105	Blacket and another, 7 Mod. 39....	1181
Best, 2 Moo. 124	915	Blackham, East , 711	433
Best, 1 Salk. 174	1052, 1057, 1061	Blackham, Trem. P. C. 101	934
Best, 2 Ld. R. 1167.....	1056, 1062	Blackman, 1 Esp. 95.....	1222, 1223
Bethel, 6 Mod. 33	112	Blackson, 8 C. & P. 43	97
Bethel, 5 Mod. 19.....	285	Blackwell, 7 Cox , 353	119
Betterton, 5 Mod. 142	1241	Blades v. Higgs, 30 L. J. C. P. 47 :	822
Betts, Bell , 99	484	Blake, 7 C. & P. 166.....	264, 467
Betts, 4 Cox , 211	1295	Blake, 6 Q. B. 126	1060, 1069
Bettsworth, 2 Show. 757.....	1309	Blake, 3 Burr. 1731....	1106, 1119, 1121
Beverley, Latch , 224	1113	Blake v. Barnard, 9 C. & P. 626: 795, 819
Bevis, 1 Cox , 29	85	Blake v. Leigh, 1 Hawk. c. 37, s. 4 :	548
Bew, Russ. & Ry. 480.....	508	Blakeman, 3 Car. & K. 97	155
Bewdley Corporation, Holt's Ca.		Blakeman, 14 Q. B. 544	1299
453	135	Bland, 1 Lew. 236	89, 237
Bibithe, 4 Rep. 43, 161	76	Bland, Leach , 598.....	1220
Bickerstaff, 2 Car. & K. 261	1231	Blatch v. Archer, Comp. 64.....	7
Bickerton, Str. 498.....	1148, 1149	Blea, 8 C. & P. 735	94
Bidwell, Den. 222.....	943	Blenkinsop, Den. 276	663
Biers, 1 Ad. & El. 327	85, 1052	Bliek, 4 C. & P. 377	203, 425
Biers, 3 Nev. & M. 475.....	1059	Bliss, Cro. Car. 184	1248
Bigg, East , 882.....	647	Blisset, 1 Mod. 13	1097
Bignold, 4 Dowl. & Ry. 70.....	171	Bloomfield, Car. & M. 537	521
Bignold, 2 Russ. C. M. 639	1013	Bloomfield, East, P. C. 416	631
Bill, 2 Burr. 805.....	935	Bloomfield v. Blake, 6 C. & P. 75 :	1057
Billingham, 2 C. & P. 234	1100	Blower, Say. Rep. 119	1263
Billingshurst, 3 M. & S. 250	851	Bloxham, Inhabitants , 1 New. S. C.
Bingham, 1 Ch. Burn , 100	944	370 ; 2 Dowl. & L. 168 ; 6 Q. B.
Bingley, Russ. & Ry. 446	76	528	106
Bingley, 5 C. & P. 602	432	Blurton, 2 Jur. 33	137
Bingley, 1 Sess. Ca. 84	1242	Blyton, Den. 191	384
Binglose, East , 488	455	Boardman, 2 Moo. & Rob. 147	684
Bint v. Lavender, 1 C. & P. 659 ..	7	Bodell, 6 C. & P. 186	230
Birch, Den. 185	441	Boden, 1 Car. & K. 395 .. 437, 441,	801
Birch, Leach , 79	657	Bodle, 6 C. & P. 186	252
Birch, 2 Car. & K. 193	801	Bolam, 2 Moo. & Rob. 192	50
Birchenough, 1 Moo. C. C. 477....	130	Bolland, Leach , 83	660
Bird, Den. & P. 90	130	Bolton, 1 Q. B. 66	108
Bird, 9 C. & P. 44	454, 461, 473	Boltz, 6 Dowl. & Ry. 65.....	270
Bird, 2 Car. & K. 81	870	Boltz, 5 B. & C. 334.....	1164
Birdseye, 4 C. & P. 386	241	Bomaster, 2 Burr. 1039	896
Birkett, 8 C. & P. 732.....	181	Bond, 19 L. J. M. C. 138 ; Den.
Birkett, Russ. & Ry. 251	237, 650	517	18, 391, 500
Birkett, 4 C. & P. 216	408	Bones v. Booth, Str. 22	878, 891
Birkett, Russ. & Ry. 86	665	Bones v. Booth, Sir Wm. Bl. 1226 :	1189
Birmingham, 9 C. & P. 469	934	Bonner, 2 Russ. C. M. 759.....	205
Birmingham, 8 B. & C. 29.....	859	Bonner, 7 Cox , 13	392
Birmingham and Gloucester Rail-		Bonny, Carth. 272	893
way Company, 1 Gale & D. 457..	121	Bontien, Russ. & Ry. 260.....	660, 662
Birmingham and Gloucester Rail-		Boober et ux., 4 Cox , 272	73
way Company, 6 Jur. 804 .. 123, 1283		Booker, 2 D. P. C. 446	28
Birnie, 1 Moo. & R. 160 24, 825,	944	Booth v. Hanley, 1 C. & P. 288....	12
Birt, 5 C. & P. 154	571	Booth, 1 Ld. Ken. 170.....	36
Bishop, 6 Dowl. & L. 499	110	Booth, Russ. & Ry. 29.....	727
Bishop, Andr. 220	121	Booth, Russ. & Ry. 47.....	1195
Bishop, Car. & M. 302	984	Bootie, Burr. 865	947
Bishop v. Curtis, 18 Q. B. 878 ; 21		Booty, 2 Ld. Ken. 575.....	958
L. J. Q. B. 391.....	300	Bootyman, 5 C. & P. 300	133, 499
Bishop Auckland, 1 Ad. & El. 744 :		Boulter, Den. & P. 396	1026
1254, 1266, 1290		Boulter v. Clark, Bull. N. P. 16 ..	823
Bispham, 4 C. & P. 392	251	Boreham, 2 Cox , 189	665
Biss, 2 Moo. C. C. 93	87	Boroski, 3 St. Tr. 474.....	202
Bisset, In re , 14 L. J. M. C. 17 ;		Borrett, 6 C. & P. 124	497, 1232
1 New. S. C. 357	33	Borthwick, 1 Dougl. 207.... 81, 750,	757
Bissett, 1 Cox , 148	718	Boss v. Litton, 5 C. & P. 407	768
Biswell, 2 Cox , 279	846	Boston, 4 East , 572	1029

Table of Cases.

xxi

	PAGE		PAGE
Boswell, Car. & M. 534	192	Brampton, 10 East , 282	859
Botfield, Car. & M. 151	1261	Brandreth, 32 How. St. Tr. 857 ..	325
Bothe, Mo. 666	82, 636	Brangan, Leach , 27	277
Botright, Say. 147	614	Brannan, 6 C. & P. 326	680
Bott v. Ackroyd, 23 L. J. M. C. 207	2	Branton, East , 485	454
Boucher, 8 C. & P. 141	169	Brawn, 1 Car. & K. 144	851
Boucher, 1 Fost. & F. 486	217	Bray, Sty. 147	1120
Boucher, 4 C. & P. 562	448	Braynell, 4 Cox , 402	213, 444, 445
Boucher, 5 Jur. 709	581	Brazier, Leach , 199	177
Boult, 2 Car. & K. 604	634	Brazier, East , P. C. 444	233
Boultbee, 6 Nev. & M. 26	360	Brazier, Russ. & Ry. 337	381
Boulton, Den. 508; 5 C. & P. 537 ..	390, 394	Brecon, 18 L. J. M. C. 127	1286
Bourdon, 2 Car. & K. 366	281	Bredon, q. t. v. Harman, Str. 701 ..	149
Bourne, 7 Ad. & El. 58	290	Breeme, Leach , 320; East , P. C. 1026	564
Bourne, 5 C. & P. 120	750	Breerton, Noy. 103	1053
Bourne v. The King, 5 C. & P. 120 :	750	Brenan, 10 Q. B. 492; 16 L. J. Q. C. 289	32, 33
Bowden, 2 Moo. 285	475	Brereton, 8 Mod. 330	1150
Bowden, 1 Lew. 9	1041	Brett, 2 Russ. C. M. 220	1226
Bowdich, 2 Ch. Rep. 278	269	Brewer, 6 C. & P. 363	234, 676
Bowditch v. Balchin, 19 L. J. Ex. 327; 5 Ex. 378	11	Brice, 2 B. & Ald. 606	169
Bowditch v. Fosberry, 19 L. J. Ex. 339	12	Brice, Russ. & Ry. 450	454
Bowen, 9 C. & P. 509	30	Bridge, Cro. Jac. 639	1123
Bowen, 19 L. J. Q. B. 63; 7 Dowl. & L. 312	111, 531	Bridgeman, Car. & M. 271	21, 1289
Bowen, 1 Car. & K. 501	123, 698	Bridger, 1 Meca. & W. 144
Bowen, Car. & M. 149	796, 800	Bridges, Godb. 346	1289
Bowen, 2 Car. & K. 227	864	Bridges, 8 East , 53	1219, 1220
Bowen, 3 C. & P. 602	887	Bridgewater and Taunton Canal Company, 7 B. & C. 514	46, 1287
Bower, Comp. 343	614	Bridekirk, 11 East , 304	1266
Bower, 5 Exp. 127	1068	Brier, 18 L. J. M. C. 121	1183
Bowes, 1 T. R. 696	898	Briggs, 1 Fost. & F. 106	170
Bowes, 4 East , 171	1070	Briggs, 2 Moo. & Rob. 199	251
Bowler, 1 Russ. C. M. 10	250	Briggs, 1 Moo. 318	792, 798
Bowler, 6 Jur. 287	1319	Briggs, Dearsl. & B. 98	860
Bowles, Cro. El. 428	1013	Bright, 4 C. & P. 387	10
Bowman, 6 C. & P. 101	132	Bright, 2 Ld. Keny. 274	946
Bowray, 10 Jur. 211; In re, 5 B. & Adol. 1113	810	Brigstock, 6 C. & P. 184	1158
Bowser, 8 D. P. C. 128	1118	Brimilow, 2 Moo. 122	831, 839
Bowyer, 4 C. & P. 559	596	Bringloe, 13 East , 174	897
Box, 9 C. & P. 126	373	Brinklett, 3 C. & P. 416	90
Box, Russ. & Ry. 300	686	Brisac, 4 East , 164	1048, 1070
Boxall, 4 Ad. & El. 513	104	Brisby, Den. 406	936
Boyce, 1 Moo. 29	796	Briscoe, 1 Dowl. N. P. C. 520	209
Boycott, 1 Ld. K. 318	1309, 1310	Bristow, Say. Rep. 138	121
Boyes, 2 Fost. & F. 157	223	Bristow, 6 T. R. 168	935
Boynes, 1 Car. & K. 651	976, 998	Brittain, 3 Cox , 76	1066
Boys, 2 Burr. 802	935	Britton, 1 Moo. & Rob. 297	174, 626
Brackett, 4 Cox , 274	385	Britton, 1 Fost. & F. 354	242
Bradbury, 1 Lew. 639	198	Britton, 5 Cox , 180	906
Bradford, 8 Cox , 309	588, 810	Broadfoot, Fost. 154	771
Bradford, 1 Salk. 189	1302	Broadribb, 6 C. & P. 571	1200, 1210
Bradford, Comb. 304	1241	Brogan, 3 Russ. C. M. 88	211
Bradley, 2 Man. & Ry. 152	1163	Bromhead, 2 Dowl. N. S. 713
Bradshaw, 7 C. & P. 233	950	Bromley, 2 Russ. C. M. 298	373
Bradshaw v. Vaughton, 30 L. J. C. P. 93	829	Bromwich, 1 Lew. 186	748
Brady, Leach , 274	505	Brooke, 2 T. R. 190	142, 945
Brady, Leach , 327	711	Brooke, 2 Lew. 267	832
Brain, 6 C. & P. 349	757	Brooke, 7 Cox , 251	1154
Braithwaite, 8 Cox , 254	1027	Brooks, Dearsl. 184	73
Braithwaite, 3 B. & Adol. 614	1311	Brooks, 1 Cox , 7	171
Bramah v. — Insurance, 3 Chetw. Burn. 532	983	Brooks, 1 Cox , 67	204
Bramley, 8 Cox , 468	380	Brooks, 8 C. & P. 295	375
Bramley, Russ. & Ry. 478	388	Brooks, 4 C. & P. 131	414
		Brooks, Car. & M. 544	466
		Brooks, 1 Fost. & F. 502	523
		Brooks, Den. 217	904
		Brooks, Trem. 151	980
		Brooks, Trem. 195	1238

	PAGE		PAGE
Brooks, Say. Rep. 167	1264	Buckeridge, 4 Mod. 48	1255
Brooks v. Hall, 2 Ro. Rep. 76	1038	Buckhurst, Lord, 2 Keb. 180	892
Brooks v. Warwick, 3 Stark. 289 ..	649	Buckingham, Marq. of, 4 Campb.
Broome, 5 Dowl. & L. 607	297	189	1288
Broome v. Reg. 17 L. J. M. C. 52;		Buckle, 1 Russ. C. M. 409 ..	1051, 1059
11 Q. B. 834	70, 85	Buckler, 5 C. & P. 118	661
Brotherton, Str. 702	94, 1176	Buckler, Dy. 69	779, 890
Broughton, 6 East , 587	123	Bucklugh, Duke of, 1 Salk. 358 ..
Broughton, 13 Rep. 127	1076	1279, 1291
Broughton, Trem. 111	1079	Bucknall, Lord Raym. 792	1279
Broughton v. Prince, 3 Leon. 237 ..	147	Buckner, Str. 467	763, 772
Brown, Car. & M. 314	11	Bucks, JJ. 8 B. & C. 375	1290
Brown, 8 T. R. 26	25	Bucks, 12 East , 192	1276
Brown, 9 C. & P. 509	50	Buckworth, 1 Sid. 377	1032
Brown, 6 Jur. 168	65	Budd, 5 Esp. 230 ..	218
Brown, Moo. & Malk. 163: 85, 464, 1214		Bull, 9 C. & P. 32	228
Brown, 1 Salk. 376	120	Bull, Leach , 841, 1033	493
Brown, 17 L. J. M. C. 145; Den.		Bull, 1 Cox , 281	669
291	125	Bull, 2 Fost. & F. 201	766
Brown, 1 Ventr. 243	186, 843	Bull, 9 C. & P. 22	774
Brown, East, P. C. 731	434	Bullen v. Bullen, Mo. 656	1001
Brown, Leach , 199	446	Bulling v. Ferris, 1 Mees. & W. 628:	13
Brown, East, P. C. 487	454	Bullock, 25 L. J. M. C. 92	532, 533
Brown, East, P. C. 497	458	Bullock, 1 Moo. C. C. 324	62
Brown, 2 Cox , 348	531	Bullock, Leach , 996	630
Brown, East, P. C. 1007	711	Bullock v. Dodds, 2 B. & Ald. 258:
Brown, Leach , 148	763	Bulwer, 7 Rep. 1; East, P. C. 771 ..	397
Brown, 1 Lew. 165	779	Bunce, 1 Fost. & F. 523	370
Brown, Car. & M. 814	948	Bunce, Andr. 163	1301
Brown, Den. 291	993	Bunting, Leach , 991	678
Brown, Moo. & M. 315: 1011, 1025, 1030		Bunts, 2 T. R. 683	286
Brown, 12 Mod. 516	1116	Bunyan, 1 Cox , 74	1185
Brown, 11 Mod. 86	1148	Burbage, 3 Burr. 1440	255
Brown, 1 Freem. 524	1151	Burder, 4 T. R. 778	1310
Brown, Den. 291	1169	Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East , 35
Brown, Russ. & Ry. 232	1227	Burdett v. Colman, 14 East , 164 ..	1086
Brown, 11 Mod. 73	1267	Burdett, 1 Ld. Raym. 48; Salk. 645:	50
Brown, 1 Keb. 49	1313	Burdett, 24 L. J. M. C. 63	228
Brown v. Giles, 1 C. & P. 120	258	Burdett, 12 Mod. 111	269
Brown v. Gillies, 1 Ch. Rep. 372 ..	1003	Burdett, 1 Ld. R. 149	1075, 1078
Brown v. Michel, Cro. El. 500	986	Burdett, 4 B. & Ald. 95
Browne v. Cumming, 10 B. & C. 70:	278	1143, 1148, 1154, 1161, 1162
Brownlow, 8 D. P. C. 157	883, 887	Burdett, 4 B. & Ald. 314	1151
Brownlow, 11 Ad. & El. 119	891	Burgen, 1 Ventr. 13	610
Broxham, 1 Hawk. c. 21, s. 13	929	Burgess, 6 Cox , 293	364
Bruce, Leach , 1095	54, 783	Burgess, Kel. 27	461
Bruce, Leach , 243	552	Burgess, 1 Russ. C. M. 687	837
Bruce, Al. 50	1169	Burgess, 1 Keb. 38	1124
Brumby, 3 Car. & K. 315	429	Burgess, Say. Rep. 169	1263
Brumby v. Rollitt, 16 Mees. & W.		Burgess v. Coney, Trem. P. C.
645	1303	402
Brummitt, 8 Cox , 413; Leigh &		Burgiss, 6 C. & P. 488	27
Cave , 9	426	Burgiss, 7 C. & P. 1490	650, 676, 677
Brumrig v. Hanger, Hardr. 151 ..	978	Burgon, 25 L. J. M. C. 105; Dears.
Branswick, 1 Moo. 26	392	& B. 11	522
Brunt	320	Burke, 2 Stark. 472	228
Brunton, Russ. & Ry. 454	183	Burke, Russ. & Ry. 496	643
Bryan, Dears. & B. 265	527	Burkett, Andr. 226	120
Bryan, Str. 866	614	Burks, 7 T. R. 4	1151
Bubb, 4 Cox , 455	745, 760, 763	Burley, 2 Russ. C. M. 958	192
Bubb, 1 Wils. 93	946	Burn, 1 Jur. 657	143
Buchanan, 1 Cr. & M. 195	292	Burn, 7 Ad. & El. 190	1144
Buchanan, 15 L. J. Q. B. 227	942	Burnard, 1 C. & P. 87	182
Buck v. Buck, 1 Campb. 547	1209	Burnby, 13 L. J. M. C. 28	120
Buck, 6 Mod. 306	1313	Burnett, 4 M. & S. 272	1302
Buck, 18 L. J. M. C. 113	936	Burnside, Bell , 282	522
Buck, Str. 679	946	Burr, 3 Burn. Just. by D'Oyley ,
Buckbridge, 7 Mod. 52	1179	93	457
Buckeridge, 2 Show. 297 ..	270, 281, 285	Burraston, Gow. 216	628

Table of Cases.

xxiii

	PAGE		PAGE
Burraston, 4 Jur. 697.....	1019	Caley, 5 Jur. 709.....	90
Burnell, Leach , 588.....	508	Caley, 3 Inst. 109.....	465
Burridge, Str. 593.....	157	Callahan, 8 C. & P. 154.....	488
Burridge, 2 Moo. & Rob. 296.....	445	Callan, Russ. & Ry. 157.....	455
Burridge, 3 P. Wms. 483.....	958, 959	Callanan, 6 B. & C. 102.....	1019, 1022
Burrow, 1 Moo. C. C. 138.....	277	Calliand v. Vaughan, 1 B. & P. 210:	978
Burrow, 1 Lew. 138.....	119, 277	Calveley v. Rishley, Moo. 657.....
Burrows, 2 Moo. & Rob. 124.....	169	Calvert, 2 Cox , 491.....	211
Burrows, 2 Moo. & Rob. 134.....	261, 285	Calvert, 3 Car. & K. 201.....	799
Burrows, 1 Moo. C. C. 274.....		Cambridgeshire Fens, Commoners,
	459, 559, 561	case of, 1 Hawk. c. 27.....	99
Burrows, Russ. & Ry. 519.....	832	Cambridge Tailors, 8 Mod. 11.....	1057
Burroughs, 11 Mod. 385.....	163	Camfield, 1 Moo. 42.....	461
Burslem v. Fern, 2 Wils. 47.....	753	Campbell, 1 Moo. C. C. 179.....	374, 377
Burt, 5 Cox , 284.....	252	Campbell, Leach , 564.....	379, 474, 1052
Burton, 1 Moo. 237.....	486	Campbell v. Reg., 2 New. S. C. 297;
Burton, Str. 481.....	768	11 Q. B. 799.....	284, 291, 477
Burton, 3 Keb. 345.....	966, 981	Campbell v. Reg., 17 L. J. M. C.
Burton, Sty. 153.....	1007	89.....	293
Burton-upon-Trent, 3 M. & S. 537:		Camplin, Den. 89.....	834
	660, 851	Canadian Prisoners, 1 Per. & D.
Bury, Leach , 201.....	98	516.....	32, 33
Busbey, 2 Barnard. 89.....	1313	Canniff, 9 C. & P. 359.....	764
Bush, Russ. & Ry. 572.....	71, 544	Canning, 19 How. St. Tr. 671.....	165
Bushell, Vaugh. 152.....	999	Canning, Dougl. 794.....	1006
Bushby, 1 Bott. 335.....	1059	Cannon, 1 Lew. 227.....	79
Butler, Moo. & Malk. 54; 2 C. & P.		Cannon, Russ. & Ry. 146.....	446
585.....	13	Cant, 2 Moo. 271.....	936
Butler, 1 Lew. 86.....	175	Capewell, 5 C. & P. 549.....	910
Butler, 2 Car. & K. 221.....	195, 213	Cardigan, Earl of, 24 L. J. M. C.
Butler, 2 Car. & K. 340.....	385	117.....	65, 90
Butler, East, P. C. 776.....	461	Cardigan, Earl of, Dearsi. 477.....	69
Butler, Russ. & Ry. 31.....	863	Careinion Castle, 8 East , 77.....	182
Butler, 6 C. & P. 368.....	1294	Careswell, 5 Jur. 251.....	383
Butler v. Turley, Moo. & Malk. 54:	13	Carew, 1 Ro. Rep. 457.....	45
Butcher, 9 D. P. C. 135.....	102	Carlile, 6 C. & P. 619.....	21
Butcher, 1 Moo. & Rob. 228.....	169	Carlile, 6 C. & P. 415.....	35, 36
Butcher, 28 L. J. M. C. 14; Bell , 6:	524	Carlile, 8 C. & P. 584.....	45
Butcher, Leach , 265.....	195	Carlile, 2 B. & Adol. 971.....	289, 290
Butcher, Peake , 170.....	950	Carlile, 2 B. & Adol. 362.....	290
Butterfield, 2 Moo. & Rob. 352.....		Carlile, Dearsi. 357.....	1057
Butteris, 6 C. & P. 147.....	546	Carlile, 3 B. & Ald. 167.....	1136
Butterwick, 2 Moo. & Rob. 196.....	664	Carlile, 1 Ch. Rep. 451.....	1152
Butterworth, Russ. & Ry. 520.....	1007	Carlile, 6 C. & P. 636.....	1241
Buttery, 4 B. & Ald. 479, 536;		Carlile, 23 L. J. M. C. 100.....	1054,
Russ. & Ry. 342.....	658		1136, 1193
Button, 8 C. & P. 660.....	817	Carlton, 7 C. & P. 151.....	22
Button, 12 Jur. 1017.....	1054	Carmarthen, Marq. of, Fort. 359 ..	895
Button, 18 L. J. M. C. 19.....	1059	Carmarthenshire, JJ., 16 L. J. M.
Buxton v. Gouch, 3 Salk. 269..	975, 985	C. , 167,.....	886
Byce, 1 Bott. 324.....	935	Carney, 1 Moo. 351.....	689
Byford, Russ. & Ry. 521.....	79	Carpenter v. Mason, 12 Ad. & El.
Bykerdike, 1 Moo. & Rob. 179: 1050, 1063		629.....	145, 936
Byrne, 2 Nev. & P. 152.....	126, 1150	Carpenter, 1 Cox , 72.....	170
Byron, Lord, 11 St. Tr. 1177.....	764	Carpenter, 2 Cox , 228.....	213
C.		Carr, Russ. & Ry. 298.....	487
Cabbage, Russ. & Ry. 92.....	384, 1227	Carr, 8 C. & P. 163.....	768
Cadman, 1 Moo. 114.....	790	Carr, Russ. & Ry. 377.....	795
Cadogan, 3 B. & Ald. 902.....	1290, 1296	Carr, 1 Sid. 418.....	1031,
Cain, 2 Moo. C. C. 204.....	395, 403		1032, 1033
Caistor, 7 Ad. & El. 593.....	286	Carr, 2 Keb. 336.....	1078
Caldecott, 1 D. P. C. 315.....	109	Carradice, Russ. & Ry. 205.....	417
Calder, 1 Cox , 348.....	867	Carratt v. Morly, 1 Q. B. 18.....	816
Cale, 1 Moo. 11.....	538	Carroll, 7 C. & P. 145.....	247
Calfield v. —, 1 Ro. Rep. 189.....	777	Carroll, 1 Moo. 89.....	475
		Carroll, 1 Wils. 75.....	927
		Carruthers, 1 Cox , 138.....	444
		Carruthers, 1 Man. & Ry. M. C. 138:	891

	PAGE		PAGE
Carson, Russ. & Ry. 303.....	498	Champneys, 2 Moo. & Rob. 26 ..	129, 623
Cart, Taylor, Ec. 727	190	Chandler, 1 Ld. R. 545.....	5
Carter, 7 Mod. 173	34	Chandler, 1 Str. 612; Dears. 453,
Carter, 1 Str. 442	53	807.....	672
Carter, 7 C. & P. 134	90	Chanell v. Rowbotham, Velv. 68 ..	465
Carter, 9 Jur. 878.....	284	Channel, Str. 793	615
Carter, 1 Car. & K. 173	472	Channen, 1 Moo. C. C. 374.....	160
Carter, 7 C. & P. 134	687	Chapman, 8 C. & P. 556.....	34
Carter, Den. 65	650, 653, 672	Chapman, 8 C. & P. 538.....	50
Carter, Holt , 347	1010	Chapman, 6 Mod. 152	134
Carter, 6 Mod. 168	1030	Chapman, 8 C. & P. 588	221, 257
Cartworth, 3 Gale & D. 162	105, 107	Chapman, 1 Car. & K. 119	495
Cartwright, Russ. & Ry. 106....	526, 673	Chapman, 2 Car. & K. 846	981
Cartwright, 4 T. R. 490	812	Chapman, Den. 432	975
Cartwright v. Green, Leach , 952: 123,	368	Chapman, Ex p. , 4 Ad. & El. 773: 137,	929
Casano, 5 Esp. 231	1203	Chapple or Chappel, 9 C. & P. 355..	83
Case, Leach , 154	722	Chapple or Chappel, Russ. & Ry. 77:	591
Case, 19 L. J. M. C. 174; Den. 580:	833	Chapple or Chappel, Comb. 477....	135
Case, 1 C. & P. 117, on the Midland		Chapple or Chappel, 1 Burr. 402: 140,	1104
Circuit	73	Chapple or Chappel, 1 Moo. & Rob.
Case, Durham Sp. As.	74	305.....	199
Case, Russ. & Ry. 173.....	279	Chapple or Chappel, 5 T. R. 371 ..	1220
Case, from the Recorder, 1814, Russ.		Chapple or Chappel, 3 Campb. 91..	1308
& Ry. 268	284	Charles, 31 L. J. M. C. 69; Leigh &
Case, from the Oxford Circuit, East,		Cave , 90	1183
P. C. 617.....	391	Charlewood, East , 689	373
Case, Den. 580	821	Charlesworth, 2 Fost. & F. 326..	188, 224
Caspar, 2 Moo. 101	540	Charlesworth, 16 Q. B. 1012..	1249, 1250
Cassidy, 1 Fost. & F. 79.....	230	Charnock, Holt's Ca. 301.....	324, 329
Casey, Kel. 62.....	453	Charrettle, 18 L. J. M. C. 100	1198
Castle, 1 Hale , 558	458	Charter v. Græme, 18 L. J. M. C. 73:	581
Castle, Dears. & B. 363.....	932	Chatburn, 1 Moo. C. C. 403; Chater
Castlehaven (Lord), 1 Russ. C. M.		& Cox , 1, 489	94, 217, 260
676	837	Chatley, Say. 152	946
Catapodi, Russ. & Ry. 65.....	649	Cheafor, Den. & P. 361	414
Caton, 1 Russ. C. M. 231.....	1172	Checkett, 6 M. & G. 188	70
Cator, 4 Burr. 20	505	Chedwicke, 1 Keb. 612	1020
Cator, 4 Esp. 117	1154	Chedworth, 9 C. & P. 285	1269
Cator, 2 East , 261.....	1164	Cheere, 9 B. & C. 402	1307
Cattell, app., Ireson, resp., 27 L. J.		Cheeseman, 7 C. & P. 455; Leigh &
M. C. 167.....	179	Cave , 140; 380	746
Caudle v. Symmons, 1 Q. B. 889 ..	211	Cherry, East, P. C. 556	363
Caudle v. Symmons, 1 Gale & D.		Chester Mill case, 10 Rep. 168	1294
145	3	Chichester, 17 Q. B. 504; Den. &
Caudwell, Den. & P. 272.....	268	P. 408	281
Caulkin, 3 Ch. Burn , 443	45	Chichester, Al. 12	769
Causey, 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 23	878	Chigwell, 1 B. & Ald. 67	269, 1271
Cave v. Mountain, 1 M. & Gr. 257:	24	Child, 5 Cox , 197	69, 219
Cave, East, P. C. 438	831	Child, 4 C. & P. 442.....	1099
Cawdry v. Atton, Poph. 59.....	1175	Chipchase, Leach , 699	384
Cawthorn, Ex p. , 19 Ves. 260	1051	Chipping Sodbury, 3 Nev. & M. 104:	605
Chadwick, 6 C. & P. 181	216, 535	Chisholm, Russ. & Ry. 297.....	660
Chadwick, 2 Moo. & R. 545	667	Chisser, Tho. Raym. 275.....	376
Chadwick, Greave's Cr. L. 10.....	751	Cholsey, Comp. 726	305
Chadwick, 17 L. J. M. C. 33.....	851	Christance, 1 Cox , 143	392
Chalehman v. Wright, Noy. Rep. 118:	146	Christance, 1 Cox , 1	524
Chalking, Russ. & Ry. 343	458	Christian, Car. & M. 388....	67, 572, 981
Chalkley, Russ. & Ry. 258	593	Christie, 7 Cox , 506	171
Challicombe, 6 Jur. 481	269	Christie, 2 Russ. C. M. 754	205
Challicombe, 2 Moo. & Rob. 309 ..	1269	Christopher, Den. 536	224
Challoner, 12 Mod. 377.....	135	Christopher, Bell , 9	367
Challoner, Dickinson , Q. S. 245 ..	474	Chubb, Deac. Cr. L. 1687	576
Challoner, 1 Keb. 585	1130	Chute, 3 Keb. 418	1310
Chalmers, 1 Moo. C. C. 352.....	94	Cirwan, East, P. C. 182	726
Chamberlayne, 1 T. R. 206.....	111	City of London, 8 Rep. 121.....	39
Chamberlayne, 6 C. & P. 95....	118, 126	Clapp, 3 T. R. 107.....	1314
Chamberlayne, 1 Moo. 59	132, 218	Clark, 3 Burr. 1362.....	35
Chambers v. Robinson, Bull. N. P.		Clark, Russ. & Ry. 358.....	87
239.....	1033	Clark, 5 B. & Ald. 728	116

Table of Cases.

XXV

	PAGE		PAGE
Clark, 1 Dowl. & Ry. 45	121	Cobbett v. Sloman, 4 Ex. 747; 19
Clark, 3 Burr. 1809	124	L. J. Ex. 270; 7 Q. B. 187; 9 Ex.	31
Clark, 1 Br. & Bing. 473	129	633; 23 L. J. Ex. 144
Clark, 1 Fost. & F. 654	132	Cobbett, In re, 14 M. & Wels. 175;	38
Clark, 12 Mod. 615	135	3 Dowl. & L. 209	259
Clark, 7 T. R. 536	146	Cobbett, 2 Ch. Burn , 528	21
Clark, 2 Stark. 241	185, 836	Cobus, 1 Cox , 207	270
Clark, Car. Cr. L. 59	195	Cochrane, Lord, 3 M. & S. 10	1213
Clark, 2 Fost. & F. 2	211	Cock, 4 M. & S. 71
Clark, 2 Stark. 242	232	Cockburn, 26 L. J. M. C. 136;
Clark, Dearsi. 200	244	Dearsi. & B. 203	209
Clark, 2 Stark. 241	253	Cockburn, 3 Cox , 543	840
Clark, 1 Moo. 376	388	Cockeril v. Apthorp, 3 Bulstr. 147:
Clark, Russ. & Ry. 181	420	1018, 1038
Clark, 1 Car. & K. 420	465	Cockin, 2 Lew. 235	369
Clark, 2 Russ. C. M. 296	525	Cockwaine, Leach , 498	374, 518
Clark, 1 Lew. 229	503	Codrington, 1 C. & P. 661	522, 528
Clark, 3 Cox , 89	680	Coe, 6 C. & P. 403	867
Clark, Comp. 610	812	Coffin, 2 Cox , 44	365
Clark, 3 Ad. & El. 287	815	Cohen, 1 Stark. 516	269
Clark, 24 L. J. M. C. 25	838	Cohen, Den. & P. 249	380
Clark, 5 B. & Ald. 665	941	Cohen, 1 Stark. 511	983
Clark, Str. 1216	943	Cohen, 8 Cox , 41	1220
Clark, 1 Barnard. 304	1153	Colchester, 2 Keb. 53	1277
Clark, 1 Burr. 606	1181	Cole, 6 T. R. 640	143
Clark, 5 Q. B. 88	1269	Cole, 1 Ph. Ev. 195	236
Clark, 12 Mod. 615	1294	Cole, 3 Campb. 371	261, 869
Clark, 1 T. R. 679	1308	Cole, 2 Cox , 340	375
Clark, 1 Fost. & F. 654	1321	Cole, 5 Jur. 200	382
Clark v. Cawthorn, 7 T. R. 321 ..	143	Cole, 4 Cox , 280	395
Clark v. Newsam, 1 Exch. 131	682	Cole, East , P. C. 767	1219
Clark, In re, 2 Q. B. 619	32	Cole, 1 Esp. 169	1222
Clapham, 1 Lew. 200	468, 1032	Cole and ur. v. Eagle, 8 B. & C.
Clapton, 3 Cox , 126	497	409	1108
Clarkson, 1 Cox , 110	673	Colebourne, 1 Fost. & F. 655	1321
Clay, Russ. & Ry. 387	408	Coleman, 6 Cox , 163	238
Clay, East , 580	1232	Coleman, East , P. C. 123	319
Clayburn, Russ. & Ry. 360	458	Coleman, East , P. C. 672	373, 519
Clayfield, 2 Russ. C. M. 943	229	Coleman, Mo. 466; East , P. C.
Clayton, 1 Car. & K. 128	568	513	466
Cleggs, 3 Cox , 295	575	Coleman, 1 Ld. Raym. 443	628
Clement, 1 Lew. 113	410	Coleman, 1 Russ. C. M. 700	874
Clement v. Chivis, 9 B. & C. 172 ..	1132	Collett, Russ. & Ry. 498	465
Clement, 4 B. & Ald. 418	1137	Colley, Moo. & M. 319	230
Clements, 5 Cox , 191	46	Colley, 2 Moo. & Rob. 475	561
Clements, Den. & P. 251	209	Collicott, Russ. & Ry. 212	706
Clerke, 3 Salk. 2	37	Collier, 2 D. C. P. 581	151, 915
Clerke, 1 Salk. 377	889, 891	Collier, 3 Cox , 57	195
Clerke, 1 Keb. 933	1308	Collier, 4 Jur. 703	369
Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221	190, 202, 781	Collier, 5 C. & P. 180	635
Clifford, 1 C. & P. 521	220	Collier v. Hicks, 2 B. & Adol. 663:	826
Clifford, 2 Car. & K. 402	668	Collingwood, 3 Salk. 42	1194
Clifford, 2 Campb. 272	1047	Collins, 9 C. & P. 456	226, 1090
Clifford, 2 Campb. 227	1200	Collins, 5 C. & P. 305	320
Clifford v. Brandon, 2 Campb. 370:	1093	Collins, 2 Moo. & Rob. 461	655, 667
Clifton, 5 T. R. 498	1265, 1268	Collins, 9 C. & P. 456	1155
Closs, 27 L. J. M. C. 54; Dearsi. &		Collison, 4 C. & P. 465	10
B. 460	610, 633	Colson, 3 Mod. 72	1092, 1097
Clube, 3 Jur. 698	217	Collyer, 1 Wils. 332	929
Cluderay, Den. 514		Colvin, 8 Mod. 226	1076
Cluworth, 6 Mod. 163	1272	Combe, Noy. 101	634
Coalheavers, Leach , 64	80	Combrune, 1 Wils. 301	613
Coate, Lofft. 73	819	Comer, Leach , 36	261
Coate, 8 C. & P. 394	795	Commerell, 4 M. & S. 203	1270
Coates, 1 Man. & Ry. 526	109	Commerell v. Beauclerk, 21 L. J.
Coates, 1 Ch. Burn , 941	892	Q. B. 137	49
Cobbett, Holt on Libel , 114	1090	Comings, 5 Mod. 179	611, 1313

	PAGE		PAGE
Compson, 2 Russ. C. M. 834	196	Cornwall, Mo. 502	924
Compton, 7 C. & P. 139	464	Corrott, Noy. 93	1267
Compton, 3 C. & P. 418	471	Corry, 5 East , 372	1313
Compton, Cald. 246	612, 1051	Cosans, Leach , 342, n.	439
Connell, 1 Car. & K. 290	728	Coslet, Leach , 236	362
Connell, 6 Cox , 178	1194	Coster v. Hetherington, 28 L. J. M.
Conner, 1 Cox , 236	167	C. 175
Conner, 7 C. & P. 458	752	Cotesworth, 6 Mod. 172	820
Connop, 4 Ad. & El. 942	61	Cotterill, 1 B. & Ald. 67	1249
Connor, 2 Cox , 65	568	Cottingham, 6 T. R. 20	1258
Connor, 2 Car. & K. 518	786	Cotton, W. Kel. 133	929
Conolly, 8 C. & P. 21	75	Cotton, 3 Campb. 444	1267
Constable, 7 Dowl. & Ry. 663	281	Coulson, Den. 592	526
Coogan, Leach , 448	130, 657	Coulthart, 1 Lew. 194	832
Coogan, East, P. C. 948	656	Countesthorpe, 2 B. & Ald. 489	63
Cook, or Cooke, 1 Fost. & F. 389 ..	52	County, 2 Russ. C. M. 56	376
Cook, or Cooke, 7 C. & P. 559	66	County, 2 Russ. C. M. 118	397
Cook, or Cooke, 2 B. & C. 871	67	Coupey v. Henley, 1 Russ. 373	11
Cook, or Cooke, Russ. & Ry. 176 ..	94	Course, Fost. 349	82
Cook, or Cooke, 5 Jur. 181	102	Court, 7 C. & P. 486	189
Cook, or Cooke, 2 B. & C. 618	126	Court, 6 Cox , 202	588, 810
Cook, or Cooke, 4 St. Tr. 748 ..	226, 335	Courtalli, 1 Q. B. 893	212
Cook, or Cooke, Leach , 1013	220	Courtenay, 5 Cox , 218	462
Cook, or Cooke, 1 C. & P. 321	247, 254, 256	Courvoisier, 9 C. & P. 362	166, 170
Cook, or Cooke, 4 M. & S. 17	288	Cousens, 2 Russ. 948	254
Cook, or Cooke, 2 Salk. 634	334	Coveney, 7 C. & P. 667	17, 213
Cook, or Cooke, 2 Russ. C. M. 12 ..	367	Cover, 1 Sid. 91	1078
Cook, or Cooke, East, P. C. 616;		Cow, 1 Lew. 131	256
Leach , 105	408, 409	Coward v. Baddeley, 28 L. J. Ex.
Cook, or Cooke, 1 Fost. & F. 64 ..	522	269	820
Cook, or Cooke, 8 C. & P. 586		Cowell, East, P. C. 17	540
44, 651, 664, 668, 676, 680		Cowle, 2 Burr. 834	65
Cook, or Cooke, Cro. Car. 537	772	Cowley v. Dunbar, 2 C. & P. 565 :	813
Cook, or Cooke, 14 L. J. M. C. 188 :	893	Cowper, Skin. 637	136, 355
Cook, or Cooke, Den. & P. 462	983	Cox, 1 Fost. & F. 90	203
Cook, or Cooke, 7 C. & P. 159	1005	Cox, 4 C. & P. 538	286, 1096, 1097
Cook, or Cooke, 5 B. & C. 538	1072	Cox, 1 Car. & K. 489	392
Cook v. Field, 3 Esp. 233	46	Cox, 1 Fost. & F. 664	795, 800
Cook v. Nethercote, 6 C. & P. 741 ..	10	Cox, Russ. & Ry. 362	796
Coombes, Cald. 59	916	Cox, 3 Cox , 58	799
Conway and Lynch v. Reg. 1 Cox ,		Cox, 1 Moo. 337	832
210	259	Cox, Leach , 71	1017
Cooper, 5 C. & P. 535	81	Cox, 2 Burr. 785	1177
Cooper, 3 Car. & K. 318	192, 555	Cox v. Coleridge, 1 B. & C. 37	826
Cooper, 3 Cox , 547	369	Coxhead, 1 Car. & K. 623	870, 871
Cooper, Cro. Car. 544	447, 774	Coxon, 7 C. & P. 651	27
Cooper, 2 Car. & K. 586	682	Coyle, 7 Cox , 74	223
Cooper, 2 Car. & K. 876	794	Cozins, 6 C. & P. 351	832, 873
Cooper, 18 L. J. M. C. 16	947	Cozins, Dougl. 426	945
Cooper, 8 Q. B. 533	1159	Cozinc, Leach , 392	1216
Cooper, Cro. Jac. 382	1243	Craddock, 4 Cox , 409	543
Cope, 1 Nev. & P. 515; 7 C. & P.		Craddock, Den. & P. 31	547
720	26	Cramp, Russ. & R. 327	711
Cope, 6 Ad. & El. 226	940, 941	Cranage, 1 Salk. 345	89
Cope, 1 Str. 144	1055, 1067	Cranburn, Fost. Cr. L. 186	320
Copeland, Car. & M. 516	523	Crane, 3 Cox , 53	61
Copeland, Comb. 3	1207	Cranfield, 5 Mod. 203	928
Coppard, Moo. & M. 118	1009	Craven, 1 Lew. 77	205
Coppard, 3 C. & P. 59	1018	Craven, East, P. C. 601	421
Coppen, q. t. v. Carter, 1 T. R. 462 :	149	Crawford, In re , 13 Q. B. 613; 18
Corah, 2 Russ. C. M. 392	678	L. J. Q. B. 215	31, 32
Corbet v. Hill, Cro. El. 609	974	Crawley, 7 C. & P. 28	492
Cordy, 2 Russ. C. M. 248	541	Crawley, Cro. Car. 567	1312
Cordy and another, 3 C. & P. 325 ..	123	Crawshaw, 2 Nev. & M. 378	141
Cornelius, 3 Keb. 525	1041	Crawshaw, 9 W. R. 38	260
Cornish, Dearsl. 425	382	Crawshaw, Bell , 303	1188, 1191
Cornforth, 11 East , 451	845	Crawshay, 8 Cox , 138	357
Cornwall, J., 1 New. S. C. 314 : 105, 107		Crean, 8 Cox , 509	24
Cornwall, Str. 881	459, 876	Creed, 1 Car. & K. 63	496
		Creevey, 1 M. & M. 273	1139

Table of Cases.

xxvii

	PAGE
Crepps v. Durden, Comp. 649	1177
Crespigny, 1 Esp. 280	968
Crespin, 17 L. J. M. C. 128; 11 Q. B. 913	95
Crichton, Russ. & Ry. 62	497
Crick, 1 Fost. & F. 519	766
Crick, 5 C. & P. 508	909
Cricklade, 14 Q. B. 735	1252
Cripland, 11 Mod. 357	1202
Cripplegate, 5 T. R. 500	1265
Crisham, Car. & M. 187	837
Crisp, 6 Mod. 175	615
Crisp, 1 B. & Ald. 282	915
Critchley, 4 T. R. 128	1131
Crockatt, 4 C. & P. 554	205
Crocker, Russ. & Ry. 97	678, 680
Croford v. Blisse, 2 Bulst. 150	972
Croft, 9 C. & P. 219	244
Crofton, 1 Ventr. 63	138
Crofts, 2 Ld. R. 926	1118
Crohagan, Cro. Car. 332	324
Cromwell, Lord, Yelv. 15	1123
Crook, 1 Fost. & F. 251	766
Crooke, Leach , 706	237
Crookes, 3 Burr. 1842	121
Cropper, 2 Moo. C. C. 18	158, 165
Crosby, 3 Wils. 188	31
Crosby, 1 Cox , 20	528
Cross, Dearsl. & B. 68	628
Cross, 1 Fost. & F. 510	860
Cross, Trem. P. C. 846	980
Cross, 2 C. & P. 483	1239
Cross, 3 Camp. 224	1247
Crosse, 1 Sid. 204	881
Crossfield, 26 Howell, St. Tr. 55	322
Crossfield, 6 Mod. 43	943
Crossley, Den. & P. 319	93
Crossley, 2 Esp. 522	217
Crossley, 2 Moo. & Rob. 17	518
Crossley, 10 Ad. & El. 132	942
Crossley, 7 T. R. 315	980, 1021, 1022, 1034
Crouch, 4 Cox , 163	239
Crouch, 1 Cox , 94	256
Crowe, 4 C. & P. 251	52, 111
Crowe, 1 Lew. 88	490
Crowe, Re , 3 Cox , 123	1086
Crowhurst, 1 Car. & K. 370	368
Crowhurst, 2 Ld. Raym. 363	942
Crowther, 5 C. & P. 516	677, 681
Crowther, Cro. El. 654	947
Croydon, 2 Cox , 67	192
Crump, 1 C. & P. 658	407
Crumpton, Car. & M. 597	762, 763, 781, 801
Crunden, 1 Camp. 89	1187
Cruse et ux. 2 Mod. 53	75, 798
Cruse et ux. 8 C. & P. 546, 547	748, 794, 802
Crutchley, 5 C. & P. 33	577
Crutchley, 7 C. & P. 814	757
Cruttenden, 6 Jur. 167	369
Cryer, Dearsl. & B. 314	547
Cuddy, 1 Car. & K. 210	748
Cuddy v. Barlow, 1 Man. & R. 275	277
Culkin, 5 C. & P. 121	779
Cullen, 1 Moo. 300	680, 690
Cullen, 9 C. & P. 681	859
Culley, In re , 5 B. & Adol. 230	889, 891
Culliford, 1 Salk. 382	129

	PAGE
Culpeper, Skin. 673	238
Cumberland, 6 T. R. 195	1283, 1290
Cumberland, County of, v. Regem, 3 Bos. & P. 354	1283
Cumherworth, 3 B. & Adol. 108; 4 Adol. & El. 731	1258
Cundick, 1 D. P. C. 13	1196
Cunningham, Bell , 72	55, 799
Cur, Str. 788	136, 1186
Curling, Russ. & Ry. 123	552
Curnock, 9 C. & P. 730	913
Curran, 3 C. & P. 297; 1 Moo. C. C. 132	7, 9, 13
Currib, Lofft. 156	1068
Curry, 2 Moo. 218	660
Cureton v. The Queen, 8 Cox , 481; 30 L. J. M. C. 149	913
Curtis, 2 Car. & K. 763	224
Curtis, Fost. Cr. L. 135	753
Curtis v. Smith, 1 Ch. Rep. 116	970
Curwood, 3 Ad. & El. 815	133, 1244
Custodes v. Howel Gwin, Sty. 336	989
Cuthell, Moo. & M. 435	1146
Cutis, 4 Cox , 435	1014

D.

Dacre, Lord, Mo. 86; Palm. 35	749
Dade, 1 Lew. 196	22
Dade, 1 Moo. C. C. 307	76
Dadson, 20 L. J. M. C. 57; Den. & P. 35	757
Dakin, 1 Lew. 166	774
Dalby, Peake , 16	1027
Dale, 5 Cox , 171	23
Dale, 7 C. & P. 352	528, 534
Dale, 1 Moo. 5	779
Dale, 6 Cox , 14	790
Dale, Dearsl. 37	935
Dalloway, 2 Cox , 273	768
Dalman, 1 Cox , 95	187
Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 54	856
Dalton, Str. 911	34
Daly, 9 C. & P. 342	916
Damaree and Purchase, Fost. Cr. L. 213	315
Dane, 1 Fost. & F. 323	862
Daniel, 1 Salk. 380	1194
Daniel, 6 Mod. 99	1212
Danger, Dearsl. & B. 307	529
Dann, 1 Moo. C. C. 424	131
Dann, Russ. & Ry. 310	77, 363
Dannelly, Russ. & Ry. 319	453
Dannelly, Russ. & Ry. 310	529
Dansey, Str. 920	1308
Darbishire, 2 Burr. 1182	1309
Darby, Carth. 14	135
Darby, 2 Cox , 315	200
Darby, 3 Mod. 139	928
Darby, 7 Mod. 101	972, 1022
Darby, 1 Salk. 78	1042
Darcey, 1 Sid. 186	1102
Darcey, Lord, v. Markham, Hob. 120	1103
Dark, Den. 276	521
Darley, 4 East , 174	103
Darley, 1 Stark. 359	1189
Darrel, 10 Mod. 322	312
Daubney v. Cooper, 10 B. & C. 237	826

d

	PAGE		PAGE
Davenport, 1 Arch. Peel's Acts , 5...	377	Deakin, Hetl. 73	1038
Davidson v. Elliott, 26 L. J. Q. B. 104; 7 El. & B. 229	1196	Dealtry, Den. 287	625, 627
Davies, 30 L. J. M. C. 159; 8 Cox , 486	16	Dean, 2 Q. B. 731	99
Davies, East , P. C. 707	433	Dean, Leach , 476	131
Davies, 2 Moo. 77	655	Dean, 6 Cox , 23	836
Davies, East , P. C. 956	666	Deane, 5 Cox , 501; 4 Jur. 364..164,	1064
Davies, 1 Russ. C. M. 491	745	Dearing, Cro. El. 193	890
Davies v. Reg. (in error), 10 B. & C. 89	911	De Beauvoir, 7 C. & P. 17	1032
Davis, 7 C. & P. 783	14, 771	De Berenger, 3 M. & S. 67....221,	1061
Davis, 1 C. & P. 470	46	De Berenger, 3 M. & S. 67...1048,	1056
Davis, Den. & P. 231; 26 L. J. M. C. 207	70	Deeley, 1 Moo. 303	90, 865
Davis, Russ. & Ry. 113	80	Deer v. ———, 12 Mod. 325.....	134
Davis, 3 Car. & K. 328; 6 Cox , 326	119	Deering, 5 C. & P. 165.....	166, 277
Davis, 7 C. & P. 183	166	D'Eon, 3 Burr. 1513	50
Davis, 12 Mod. 9	268	D'Eon, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 310.....	1091
Davis, Str. 104	269	D'Eon, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 510	1140
Davis, 6 C. & P. 177..... 197, 202,	241	D'Faria, Peake , 164.....	1028
Davis, 25 L. J. M. C. 91	371	Delaber v. Lyster, 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 23	1112
Davis, Russ. & Ry. 499	456	Delamere, Lord, 4 St. Tr. 232	164
Davis, 6 Cox , 369	457	Delamotte, East , P. C. 124.....	215
Davis, Leach , 876; East , P. C. 499:	457	Delamotte, East , P. C. 53	308
Davis, Russ. & Ry. 322	458	Delamotte, Str. 698.....	1312
Davis, East , P. C. 499.....	474	Delany v. Jones, 4 Esp. 191.....	1133
Davis, Leach , 971	505	Delavel, 3 Burr. 1434	134, 1180
Davis, 6 C. & P. 177.....	541	Delpike, 2 B. & Adol. 226	859
Davis, 1 Fost. & F. 69.....	556	Deman, 2 Lord R. 1221.....1007,	1042
Davis, 4 Camp. 48.....	612	De Matto, 7 C. & P. 458.....	784
Davis, 1 C. & P. 306.....	796	De Mierre, 5 Burr. 2788.....	1310
Davis, Leach , 493.....	798	Denby, Leach , 514	43
Davis, 8 Cox , 486; Leigh & C. 64..	816	Denmour et ux. 8 Cox , 440.....	404
Davis, 5 Cox , 328	827	Dennie, Godb. 88	1038
Davis, 1 Russ. C. M. 574	869	Dennison, Lefft. 148	1150
Davis, 8 C. & P. 759.....	905	Dennison, 2 Lord K. 259	1311
Davis, Say. Rep. 163	935	Denslow, 2 Cox , 230.....	184
Davis, 3 Burr. 1317.....	944	Dent, 1 Car. & K. 249	93, 94, 531
Davis, Lefft. 62.....	945	Dent, 1 Cox , 15.....	535
Davis, Holt , 501.....	1045	Dent, 1 Car. & K. 97	864
Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & C. 28....	24	Depardo, 1 Taunt. 26; Russ. & Ry. 134	784
Davis v. Russell, 3 Bing. 354.....	9	Depuke, 11 Mod. 273	1116, 1121
Davison, 6 C. & P. 177.....	537	Deputy steward and coroner of Lon- don, Jer. Archb. 408	889
Davy, 6 Jur. 949	1127	Derbshire, 1 Moo. & Rob. 307	162
Dawber, 3 Stark. 34.....	180	Derbyshire, 2 Q. B. 745.....	1275
Dawber, 5 Esp. 247	1239	Derbyshire, 3 B. & Adol. 147	1278
Dawnay, Ex p. 8 Jur. 829	37	Derrecourt v. Corbishley, 24 L. J. Q. B. 313	11, 13
Daws, In the matter of, 8 Ad. & El. 936.....	889, 891	Derham, 1 Cox , 56	869
Dawson, 2 Fost. & F. 250	165	Derrington, 2 C. & P. 418	201
Dawson, 8 Cox , 360	259	Designy, Tho. Raym. 474	28
Dawson, East , 978.....	647	Despard, 7 T. R. 736	25
Dawson, Den. & P. 75.....	673	Despard, 1 Man. & R. 444.....	157
Dawson, 3 Stark. 62	840	Despard, 2 Man. & R. 406.....	286
Dawson, 4 B. & Ald. 329	1137	Despard, 28 How. St. Tr. 489	323
Day, 2 Cox , 210.....	195	De Veaux, Leach , 585	401
Day, 6 Cox , 55	208, 210	Devett and another, 6 C. & P. 639	887
Day, 1 Cox , 207.....	793	De Vidil, 188; Ry. & Moo. 144....	1275, 1289
Day, East , 605	1234	Devon and Gloucester Railway Com- pany, 1 Gale & D. 467	106
Day, 9 C. & P. 722	841	Devon, County, 9 Cox , 4	188
Day v. King, 5 Ad. & El. 359	939	Devon, County, 4 B. & C. 670	1283
Day v. The Queen, 2 Cox , 178 ..23,	1199	Devon, Earl of, R. v. 14 East , 477:	1285, 1286
Deacon, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 27..165,	1121	Devonshire, 2 Nev. & M. 212	1278
Deacon, Fost. 9.....	322, 325	Dewhirst, 2 Nev. & M. 253.....	109
Deakin, Leach , 863	88, 395	Dewhirst, 5 B. & Adol. 405.....	109
Deakin, East , P. C. 653	393	Dewhirst, 1 Lew. 47	199
Deakin, 1 Sid. 142.....	633, 634

Table of Cases.

xxix

	PAGE		PAGE
Dewitt, 2 Car. & K. 905	697	Douglas, 1 Campb. 312	520
Dewsnap, 16 East , 194...1238, 1244, 1270		Douglas, 1 Moo. 46	523
Deybel, 4 B. & Ald. 243.....	37	Douglas, 1 Moo. 480.....	871
Dibbens, Parker , 165	285	Douglas, 16 L. J. M. C. 116	1227
Dibley, 2 Car. & K. 818	258	Douglas, In re , 12 L. J. Q. B. 49:
Dickinson, Russ. & Ry. 401	43		30, 33
Dickinson, Russ. & Ry. 420	372	Douglas v. The Queen, 13 Q. B. 74, 1199
Dickinson v. Watson, Tho. Jones ,		Dove, Comb. 477	138, 1105
205	823	Doveton, Ex p. 7 Cox , 16	136
Dicks, 1 Russ. C. M. 19.....	73	Dovey, 20 L. J. M. C. 105	545
Dignam, 7 Ad. & El. 593	286	Dovey, Den. & P. 86	546
Dillon, 2 Ch. Rep. 314	1122	Dovey v. Hobson, 6 Taunt. 460 ..	161
Dilmore, 6 Cox , 52	213	Dowlin, 3 T. R. 511.....	976, 1007, 1015
Dilworth, 2 Moo. & Rob. 531.....	801	Dowlin, Peake , 170	1031
Dimes, 14 Q. B. 554	39	Dowling, 10 Jur. 1056	28
Dimes v. Arden, 6 Nev. & M. 494 :	1293	Dowling, Ry. & M. 433	62
Dingley, 1 Car. & K. 637.....	193, 200	Dowling, 3 Cox , 509.....	124, 161, 245
Dingley, Leach , 840	453	Downes, East, P. C. 997	678, 679
Dinslow, Cro. El. 105	1012	Downey, 7 Q. B. 281	3
Dixon, 10 Mod. 335	75	Downham, 1 Fost. & F. 386	216
Dixon, 6 Mod. 61	112, 614	Downholland, 2 Nev. S. C. 177....	1269
Dixon, 3 Burr. 687.....	233, 255	Downing, Taylor, Ec. 720	192
Dixon, 25 L. J. M. C. 39	367	Downing, Den. 52 ; 2 Car. & K.
Dixon, Russ. & Ry. 53	479	322	780, 786
Dixon, 4 Camp. 12	609	Downshire, Marchioness, 4 Ad. &
Dixon, 3 M. & S. 11	609	El. 232.....	1262
Dixon, 3 Cox , 289.....	687	Dowse, 1 Ld. R. 672.....	946
Dixon, East , 313	757	Dowsell, 6 C. & P. 398.....	906
Dixon, 12 Mod. 198	1251	Doyle, 1 Esp. 125.....	52
Dobson, 9 Ad. & El. 704	581	Doyle, Moo. & M. 329.....	231
Dobson, 7 East , 213.....	612	Doyle, Leach , 67	303
Dobson, 1 Lew. 43.....	869	Drake, 12 Shaw's J. P. 483 ; 4 Cox ,
Dodd, Leach , 155	43	333	86
Dodd, Leach , 130	183	Drake, 22 L. J. Q. B. 304	103
Dodd, 2 Seas. Ca. 33	1145	Drake, 1 Lew. 25	861
Dodd, 9 East , 516	1208	Drake, 11 Mod. 95	1090
Dodd, In re , 4 Jur. 291	38	Drake, 1 Salk. 660	1152
Doddridge, 8 Cox , 335.....	912	Drake, Holt's Ca. 426	1163
Dodson, 3 Car. & K. 148... ..	776	Draper, 1 Car. & K. 176.....	801
Dodsworth, 8 C. & P. 218	1321	Draper, 3 Smith , 396	1149
Doe d. Evans v. Evans, 5 B. & C.		Draper, 4 B. & Ald. 321	1163
584	300	Drayton Bassett, 1 Hale , 444	752
Doe d. Evans v. Pritchard, 2 Nev.		Dredge, 1 Cox , 235	364
& M. 489	300	Drew, Str. 404	136
Doherty, 13 East , 191	897	Drew, 8 C. & P. 140	188
Dolan, Dearsl. 436	275, 540	Drew, 1 Keb. 935	1004
Dolby, 1 Car. & K. 238	152	Driffield, Say. 106.....	613
Dolby, 2 B. & C. 104	158	Dring et ux. Dearsl. 329	74
Donally, East, P. C. 783	435	Dring et ux. 3 Car. & K. 193	128
Donally, Leach , 195.....	446	Drinkwater v. London Assurance,
Donnallan, Leach , 69 ; 2 Sir Wm.		2 Wils. 363.....	315
Bl. 682	560	Drinkwater, Leach , 15	406
Donnelly, 1 Moo. 438	675	Driscoll, Car. & M. 214	823
Doncaster Betting-room case, 2		Drue, 1 Sid. 274	985
Lew. 114	232	Drummond, Lord, 11 Mod. 200 ..	21
Doncaster Betting-room case, 1 Lew.		Drummond, Leach , 337 .	206
71	245	Drury, 3 Car. & K. 190	179
Donnison, 4 B. & Adol. 698	1157	Dudley, 2 Sid. 71	635, 696
Donovan, 4 Cox , 399	788	Dudman, 2 Gly. & J. 389	978
Doody, 4 Cox , 485.....	1194	Dudman, 4 B. & C. 850	1009
Doran, Leach , 538.....	97, 173	Duffin, Russ. & Ry. 365	796
Doran, 2 Moo. 37	177	Duffin, East, P. C. 437	831
Doran, 1 Esp. 127	238	Duffy, 1 Lew. 58, 60.....	814
Dorny, 1 Salk. 260....	1115, 1121, 1123	Dugdale, Dearsl. 64.....	1185
Dorny, 12 Mod. 417	1116	Dugdale v. Reg. Dearsl. 254 ; 2 El.
Dorset, JJ., 15 East , 594	1287	& Bl. 129.....	297
Dossett, 2 Car. & K. 206	241	Dugdale v. Reg. 22 L. J. M. C. 50 :	1185
Douglas, Car. & M. 293 ..	22, 175, 214	Dummer, 1 Salk. 374	999
Douglas, 13 C. B. 42	210	Dunboyne, Lord, 3 Car. & K. 1 :
			993, 1169

	PAGE		PAGE
Duncombe, 8 C. & P. 369	224	Eden, 1 Esp. 98	1007, 1028
Duncombe, Cro. Car. 366	1256	Eden, Cro. El. 697	1119
Dundas, 6 Cox, 380	551	Eden, Left. 72	1155
Dunkin, 2 Lew. 162	265	Edge, Dearsl. & B. 1	413
Dunkley, 1 Moo. 90	448	Edge Lane, 4 Ad. & El. 723	1258
Dunn, 12 Ad. & El. 599; 4 Per. & D. 405	32	Edmeads, 3 C. & P. 390	749
Dunn, 5 Burr. 2640	35	Edmonds, 1 B. & Ald. 471	153, 157
Dunn, 11 Jur. 287	64	Edmonton, Cald. 435	858
Dunn, 8 Jur. 773	111	Edmonton, 1 Moo. & Rob. 24	1257
Dunn, 1 Car. & K. 730....	122, 289, 1037	Edmunds, 6 C. & P. 164.....	203
Dunn, 4 C. & P. 543.....	188	Edmunds, 5 Mees. & W. 309.....	214
Dunn, Leach, 577.....	661	Edmundson, 28 L. J. M. C. 263 ..	497
Dunn, East, 976	686	Edsall v. Russell, 6 Jur. 996	817
Dunn, 12 Ad. & El. 593.....	894, 897	Edwards, 4 T. R. 440	38
Dunn, 16 L. J. Q. B. 382	991	Edwards, 2 Nev. & M. 407; 5 B. & Adol. 507.....	109
Dunn, 1 Dowl. & Ry. 10....	1015, 1037	Edwards, 8 Mod. 326.....	137, 138, 171
Dunn, Ex p., 5 Dowl. & L. 355; 5 C. B. 215.....	33	Edwards, 3 Campb. 208	164
Dunn, In re, 17 L. J. C. P. 105 ..	32	Edwards, 8 C. & P. 26.....	168
Dunn, 12 Jur. 99	1044	Edwards, 1 Burn. 564.....	196
Dunn v. Reg. 18 L. J. M. C. 41: 896, 1044		Edwards, 1 Ph. Ev. 415	197
Dunn v. Reg. 12 L. J. Q. B. 1026: 991		Edwards, 8 C. & P. 26	224, 225
Dunnage, 2 Burr. 1130	614	Edwards, 4 Burr. 2259	269
Dunnett, Leach, 581.....	687	Edwards, Russ. & Ry. 497	391, 398
Dunning, 5 Cox, 142	264	Edwards, 6 C. & P. 515	437
Dunston, Ry. & M. 109	968	Edwards, 1 Cox, 32	440, 443
Dupree, East, 1010	934	Edwards, 1 Moo. & Rob. 257; 5 C. & P. 518	447
Durham, Leach, 478	180	Edwards, East, 820	610
Durore, Leach, 351	89, 95	Edwards, 8 Mod. 320	612, 1051
Duvergier v. Fellows, 5 Bingh. 248: 1209		Edwards, 3 Cox, 89, n.....	680
Dwerryhouse, 2 Cox, 295	120	Edwards, 8 C. & P. 611: 746, 762, 779, 782
Dwyers, 2 Russ. C. M. 88	211	Edwards, 6 C. & P. 401	779
Dyde, 7 T. R. 661.....	163	Edwards, Russ. & Ry. 283.....	851
Dye, 11 Mod. 174	1314	Edwards, 3 Salk. 27	946
Dyer, East, P. C. 76	80, 539	Edwards, 2 Russ. C. M. 518 ..	965, 973
Dyer, 1 Cox, 113	170	Edwards, Str. 707.....	1063
Dyer, 6 Mod. 96	1105, 1121	Edwards, 8 Mod. 326	1313
Dyke, 8 C. & P. 261	180	Edwards v. Buchanan, 3 B. & Adol. 788	653
Dyke, Say. Rep. 19	1245	Edyvean, 3 T. R. 352.....	935
Dyson, Russ. & Ry. 523.....	80, 758	Egan, 1 Cox, 29	688
Dyson, 7 C. & P. 305	119	Egerly, 3 Salk. 183	1248
E.
Eades, 2 Show. 248	1143	Egerton, Russ. & Ry. 375.....	239, 446
Eagleton, Dearsl. 376	614	Egginton, Leach, 913.....	364, 382
Eardisland, 2 Camp. 494	1273	Egginton, East, P. C. 494	458
Eastaff, Gow. 138.....	949	Eldershaw, 3 C. & P. 396	830
Eastall, 2 Russ. C. M. 92	387, 393	Eldridge, Russ. & Ry. 440	201
Easterby, Leach, 94; Russ. & Ry. 37	596	Elkins, Burr. 2129	950
East Adderbury, 5 Q. B. 187..	1276, 1289	Ellers, Say. 222	929
Eastern Counties, 10 Mees. & W. 52	883	Ellicombe, 5 C. & P. 522	216
East Hagbourne, Bell, 135	1252	Ellins, Russ. & Ry. 188.....	1234
Eastington, 5 Ad. & El. 765	1253	Elliott, Leach, 175.....	237, 648
East Lidfurd, Say. 201	1264	Elliott, 1 Hawk. c. 65, s. 9	795
Easton, Den. & P. 275.....	906	Elliott, Leigh & Cave, 103.....	1182
Easton, Ex p., 9 D. P. C. 207; 12 Ad. & El. 645	30	Ellis, 6 C. & P. 145	64, 241
Eaton, 8 C. & P. 417	874	Ellis, Car. & M. 564	121
Eaton, 3 B. & Ald. 162	1173	Ellis, Ry. & Moo. 432.....	200
Ecclesfield, Deac. Cr. L. 36; 1 B. & Ald. 348.....	1265, 1266	Ellis, 6 B. & C. 148.....	286
Ecclesfield, 1 Stark. 395	1265	Ellis, 8 B. & C. 395.....	290
Eccles, Leach, 837	531	Ellis, 8 C. & P. 654	441, 801
Eddy, East, 837	531	Ellis, 8 Dowl. & Ry. 173	472
		Ellis, 4 Cox, 258	690
		Ellis, 2 Car. & K. 470	767, 779, 782
		Ellis, 1 Fost. & F. 309	862
		Ellis, 2 Car. & K. 470.....	879
		Ellis, Str. 1104	1027
		Ellis, 2 Salk. 595	1093
		Ellis, Cro. Jac. 634	1121
		Ellis, 1 Freem. 377	1126

Table of Cases.

xxx

	PAGE
Ellis, Russ. & Ry. 188.....	1234
Ellis v. Sheffield Gas Company, 23 L. J. Q. B. 42	1250
Ellis, Car. & M. 564.....	1322
Ellison, 1 Moo. 336.....	559, 562
Ellor, Leach , 323	671
Elmsley, 1 Lew. 226	392
Elmstead, 2 Russ. C. M. 894.....	446
Elmy, 3 Nev. & M. 733	37
Elnor, Cro. Jac. 180.	63
Elrington, 31 L. J. M. C. 14 ...	132, 829
Else, Russ. & Ry. 142	80, 727, 730
Elsmore v. Hundred of St. Briavels, 8 B. & C. 468	558, 560
Elsworth, 1 Lew. 117; 20 L. J. M. C. 32	84, 544
Elsworth, East , 986	647, 672
Elwell, 3 Lord Raym. 360	1116
Embden, East , 437	129, 1022
Emerton, 2 Show. 20	608
Emmet v. Lyne, 2 New Rep. 225 ..	819
Emmons, 2 Moo. & Rob. 279.....	265
Emmot, Palm. 277	1121
Empson, Leach , 224.....	791
Enclosures, Case of	314
Enfield, 3 Ch. Burn , 82	1258
England, Leach , 770	210
England, Leach , 767	225, 748
England, 1 Cox , 79	553
England, 1 Car. & K. 583.....	561
Enoch, 5 C. & P. 535	188
Entrechman, Car. & M. 248	178
Erbery, 8 Mod. 77	34
Errington, 2 Lew. 148.....	205
Errington, 2 Lew. 217	769
Erle, 2 Lew. 133	798
Esdaile, 1 Post. & F. 213	1051
Esop, 7 C. & P. 456.....	249
Essex, East , P. C. 1125	449
Essex, Earl of, Kel. 21.....	310
Essex and Southampton, Earls of, Kel. 28.....	138
Essex, Dearsl. & B. 371	374
Essex, Thos. Raym. 38	1277, 1290
Etherington, Leach , 671	261, 478
Evami, 1 Moo. C. C. 70 ..	627, 629, 631
Evans, 8 D. P. C. 454	31
Evans, 8 C. & P. 565	88
Evans, 2 Cox , 270.....	370
Evans, Car. & M. 632.....	373
Evans, East , P. C. 776	441
Evans, Car. & M. 298	451
Evans, 1 Hale , 588	450
Evans, 5 C. & P. 553	517
Evans, Bell , 187	525
Evans, East , P. C. 798	549
Evans, Dearsl. & B. 236.....	692, 932
Evans, 1 Russ. C. M. 489	760
Evans, 3 Stark. 35.....	931
Evans v. Phillips, Schw. N. P. 1003;	277
Eve, 5 Ad. & El. 781	141
Everett, 8 B. & C. 114.....	1203
Evet, 6 B. & C. 247.....	888, 890, 891
Ewer, 2 Salk. 364.....	103, 108
Ewington, Car. & M. 319.....	979
Exeter, Earl of, 6 T. R. 373	928
Ex parte ———, gent., one, 4 Ad. & El. 576.....	827
Ex parte, an infant, 3 Myl. & Cr. 471	858

	PAGE
Eyres, 1 Sid. 307	1075

F.

Fabian, Kel. 39	610
Faderman, Den. 565.....	275
Fagent, 7 C. & P. 238	205
Fagg, 4 C. & P. 566	18, 200
Fairlie, 8 El. & Bl. 486	1240
Falkingham, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 269 ..	946
Falkner, Russ. & Ry. 481	201
Fallowes, 5 C. & P. 508	17, 432
Fane, 5 C. & P. 213	1154
Fanshaw, 1 Ventr. 381	291
Fanshaw, Skin. 327	1029, 1033
Farewether, Cro. Car. 348	64
Farington, Russ. & Ry. 207	555
Farlar, 8 C. & P. 206	180
Farley, 1 Cox , 76	188
Farley, Den. 197	233
Farley, East , P. C. 740	475
Farmer, East , 820.....	610
Farnam, 2 Leon. 186	1120, 1121
Farnham, 1 Cox , 349	871
Farr, 8 C. & P. 768.....	222, 252
Farr, Kel. 43	454, 463
Farr, Tho. Raym. 844	635
Farrell, Leach , 322, n.	432
Farrow, Dearsl. & B. 164.....	790
Faulkner, 1 Saund. 249	94
Fauntleroy, 1 Moo. 52	641, 655
Fawcett, East , 862	633
Fawcett, 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 64; Noy. 119.....	1127
Fawle, 2 Ld. Raym. 1452	64
Fearnley, 1 T. R. 316	935
Fearshire, Leach , 202	199, 213
Featherstone, Dearsl. 369.....	275, 386
Featherstonehaugh, 8 C. & P. 109; 116, 826	116, 826
Feist, 27 L. J. M. C. 164.....	1196
Fellowes, 4 D. P. C. 607.....	101
Fellowes, 2 Russ. C. M. 123	369
Fellowes, 1 Car. & K. 115	977
Fells, 5 Mod. 414	958
Fentiman, Re , 1 Ad. & El. 126..	137, 139
Fenton, 1 Lew. 179	769
Fenton, Yelv. 27	1123
Fenwick, 2 Car. & K. 915	85, 999
Fenwick, 1 Sid. 153	1041
Ferguson, Dearsl. 427	97
Ferguson, 1 Lew. 181	767
Ferguson, 2 Stark. 489	1063
Fermor v. Dorrington, Cro. El. 222	162
Fernandez, 31 L. J. M. C. 25; 9 Cox , 40	188
Ferrall, Den. & P. 51	936
Ferrand, 3 B. & Ald. 260	878
Ferrars, Tho. Raym. 84	164
Ferrers, Earl, 1 Burr. 631	38, 897
Ferrers, Earl, Fost. 138	304
Ferrers, 1 Sid. 287	635
Ferrers, Sir H., Cro. Car. 371	755
Ferris, 1 Saund. 312	147, 148
Fidler, 4 Cox , 449	576
Field, Dich. Q. S. 520	180
Field, Leach , 383	904

	PAGE		PAGE
Fielder, 2 D. P. C. 46	270	Ford, Russ. & Ry. 329.....	10
Fieldhurst, Comp. 325	45, 82	Ford, 2 Show. 434	120
Fielding, 2 Car. & K. 621	912	Ford, Den. 285	224
Fielding, Burr. 720	946	Ford, 1 Nev. & M. 776	270, 1068
Filewood, 2 T. R. 145	142	Ford, Rel. 51	774
Filewood, 1 T. R. 692	945	Ford, 2 Ad. & El. 588	815
Finacane, 5 C. & P. 551.....	97, 909	Ford, Cro. Jac. 151	1124
Finch, 1 Moo. 418.....	426	Ford, Yelv. 99	1129
Finchard, 1 Russ. C. M. 692	838	Ford v. Bennet, 2 Salk. 417	1152
Findon, 6 C. & P. 132	252	Forde v. Skinner, 4 C. & P. 329 ..	820
Finmore, 13 East , 4	105	Fordham, 4 Jur. 218	106
Finmore, 8 T. R. 409	110	Fordham, 11 Ad. & El. 73	107
Finnerty, 4 B. & Ald. 320	1163	Forsgate, Leach , 463	393
Finney, 2 Car. & K. 774.....	953	Forster, 1 Lew. 187	772
Fisher, 1 Cox , 68	158	Forsyth, Russ. & Ry. 274 ..217, 629,	630
Fisher, Leach , 310	212	Forsyth, Leach , 836	866
Fisher, 8 C. & P. 182.....	744, 765	Foster, Russ. & Ry. 412.....	70
Fisher, 8 C. & P. 612	1262	Foster, 3 Car. & K. 201	164
Fitch, 26 L. J. M. C. 169	388	Foster, 7 C. & P. 148	198
Fitchie, Dearsl. & B. 175	684	Foster, 1 Lew. C. C. 110	204
Filton, 2 Keb. 502	1142	Foster, 6 C. & P. 305	207
Fitzgerald, 2 Wils. 254	34	Foster, 6 Cox , 93	224
Fitzgerald, 2 Car. & K. 201	52	Foster, 7 C. & P. 495.....	244, 738
Fitzgerald, 1 Salk. 401.....	289	Foster, 1 Ld. Raym. 475.....	392, 1206
Fitzgerald, Leach , 20	657	Foster, 1 Lew. 33	454
Fitzpatrick, Russ. & Ry. 512 ..	237, 953	Foster, 6 Cox , 25	577
Fitzwilliam, Cro. Jac. 49.....	1124	Foster, Dearsl. 456	727, 730
Fitzwilliam, Yelv. 327.....	1128	Foster, Russ. & Ry. 459	975
Flaherty, 2 Car. & K. 782	865	Fountain, 1 Sid. 152	122, 144
Flannagan, Russ. & Ry. 187	475	Fowle, 4 C. & P. 592	1069
Flannery, 1 Lew. 133	256	Fowler, 1 Salk. 350	38
Flecknow, 1 Burr. 461	1256	Fowler, 4 B. & Ald. 273.....	291
Fleet, 1 B. & Ald. 379	1137	Fowler, East , P. C. 461	612, 1051
Fleming, q. t. v. Baily, 5 East , 313:	148	Fox, 5 D. P. C. 232.....	102
Flemming, Leach , 854	210, 832, 839	Fox, 1 Str. 21	137
Fletcher, Str. 633	181	Fox, 1 Str. 652	183
Fletcher, 1 Lew. 68	200	Fox v. Gaunt, 3 B. & Adol. 798....	11
Fletcher, 4 C. & P. 250.....	203	Fox v. Reg. 29 L. J. M. C. 54....	916
Fletcher, 1 Lew. 101	229	Foxby, 1 Salk. 266	1240
Fletcher, 1 Lew. 107	237	Foxhall v. Barnett, 2 El. & Bl. 918
Fletcher, Russ. & Ry. 58	289, 290	Foxhall v. Barnett, Str. 21.....	137
Fletcher, 4 C. & P. 545.....	382	Frampton, 27 L. J. M. C. 29; 8
Fletcher, Leach , 23	439	Cox , 16.....	547
Fletcher, 2 Car. & K. 215	664	France, 2 Moo. & Rob. 207.....	208
Fletcher, 1 Russ. C. M. 507.....	771	Frances, Com. 478; Str. 1015	93
Fletcher, Bell , 63	831, 834	Franceys, 2 Ad. & El. 49	1157
Fletcher, 1 Nev. S. C. 40	210	Francia, 6 St. Tr. 93	319
Fletcher, 18 L. J. M. C. 16	908	Francia, East , P. C. 133.....	323
Fletcher, Leach , 23	1215	Francis, 4 Cox , 57.....	119
Fletcher, 2 Nev. S. C. 529	909	Francis, 4 Nev. & M. 251.....	139
Fletcher v. Calthrop, 1 Nev. S. C.		Francis, Ca. T. Hard. 113.....	272
529; 6 Q. B. 880	908, 909	Francis, Str. 1015	432
Fletcher, Ex p. , 1 Dowl. & L. 956:		Francis, Russ. & Ry. 209.....	662
	167, 245	Frank, Leach , 644.....	227
Fletcher, In re , 13 L. J. M. C. 16:	31, 37	Franklin, 4 T. R. 454	163
Flint, 3 Cox , 66	157	Franklin, 9 St. Tr. 259.....	217, 1090
Flint, Russ. & Ry. 460	325	Franklyn, Leach , 225	1216
Flint, Ca. Temp. Hardw. 370..	635, 1052	Fraser, 1 Moo. C. C. 319.....	13
Flower, 8 T. R. 324	34, 35	Fraser, 1 Moo. C. C. 407	865
Flower, 5 B. & C. 736	290, 988	Fray, East , 236	763
Flower, 5 Rep. 99.....	988	Frazer, 8 Cox , 446	845, 846
Flower, 7 D. P. C. 665	1244	Freakley, 1 Dowl. & L. 10	21
Folkes, 1 Moo. 354.....	175, 837	Frederick, Str. 1094.....	183
Folkes, 2 Moo. & Rob. 460	841	Freegard v. Barnes, 21 L. J. M. C.
Fonereau, 3 Wils. 39	270	320	4
Fonseca, 1 Burr. 10	108	Freeman, 5 C. & P. 534	486
Forbes, 1 D. P. C. 440	65	Freeman, Russ. C. M. 518	765
Forbes, Holt , N. P. C. 599	206	Freeman, Str. 1226	950
Forbes, 7 C. & P. 224	681	Freeth, Russ. & Ry. 127....	518, 520, 525

Table of Cases.

xxxiii

	PAGE
Freiston v. Shillito, Yelv. 165.....	1123
French, 8 Cox , 252	66
French, Russ. & Ry. 491.....	468
Frewin, 6 Cox , 530	192
Friar, 1 Ch. R. 702	948
Friend, 4 St. Tr. 696	226
Friend, Kel. 20; Holt's Ca. 681 ..	310
Friend, Russ. & Ry. 20	1195
Frith, Leach , 11	121, 627
Frost, 24 L. J. M. C. 116	191, 237
Frost, 9 C. & P. 129 .. 155, 312, 325, 327,	328, 330
Frost, 9 C. & P. 163..331, 332, 333, 334,	335, 353
Frost, 2 Moo. 140	331, 332
Froud, Russ. & Ry. 389	675
Frowen, 4 Cox , 266.....	462, 464
Frumpton, 2 Car. & K. 47.....	372
Fry, Leach , 111	116, 826
Fry, Russ. & Ry. 482.....	391, 421
Fry, Dearsl. 449.....	495, 522, 524
Fry, 2 Moo. & Rob. 42.....	908
Fry, 3 Burr. 1703.....	1105
Fulford, 6 Cox , 510	103, 1291
Fuller, 1 C. & P. 259	17
Fuller, 9 C. & P. 35.....	52
Fuller, Russ. & Ry. 408.....	446
Fuller, Leach , 186	457
Fuller, East , 837	531
Fuller, 2 Salk. 417	1152
Fuller, Leach , 790	1322
Fully, 9 C. & P. 227	523, 534
Fulwood, Cro. Car. 485.....	842, 843
Furley v. Newnham, 2 Dougl. 419..	255
Furneaux, Russ. & Ry. 335	498
Furnival, Russ. & Ry. 455.....	465
Furser, Say. Rep. 70	263
Fursey, 6 C. & P. 81	269, 351
Fussell, 3 Cox , 291.....	175, 237, 249
Fylingdales, 1 M. & Ry. 176.....	1260

G.

Gaby, Russ. & Ry. 178	399
Gadbury, 8 C. & P. 676	244
Gade, Leach , 732	638
Gahagan, Leach , 42.....	229
Gainer, 7 C. & P. 231	906, 910
Gale, Ex p. , 3 Dowl. & L. 114; 14
L. J. Q. B. 316.....	31
Gale, 2 Moo. 95.....	1024, 1106
Gallant, 1 Fost. & F. 517.....	57, 59
Gallard, 10 Kel. 163.....	1185
Galle, Carth. 465.....	138
Gallears, Den. 501.....	391
Galloway, 1 Moo. C. C. 236	174
Gamble, 3 Mees. & W. 384.....	100, 1073
Gamlen, 1 Fost. & F. 90.....	248
Gamlingay, 3 T. R. 513	1261
Gammon, 5 C. & P. 321.....	832
Gansfield, 6 Cox , 43.....	233
Gaoler of Shrewsbury, Str. 532....	959
Garbett, Den. 236.....	225
Garbuti, 1 Lew. 295.....	276
Gardner, 1 Moo. C. C. 390.....	11
Gardner, Dearsl. & B. 518.....	40
Gardner, 2 Camp. 513.....	217
Gardner, 1 Car. & K. 628	171, 1228

	PAGE
Gardner, 5 Cox , 145.....	256
Gardner, 1 C. & P. 479	447
Gardner, 2 Camp. 513.....	611
Gardner, 1 Fost. & F. 669.....	771
Gardner, 9 East , 441	1010
Gardner, 2 Moo. 95	1017
Garland, East , 493	458
Garland, 5 Cox , 165.....	1238
Garlick, 1 Cox , 52.....	394
Garlick, Den. 276.....	521
Garner, Den. 329	121
Garnett v. Ferrand, 6 C. & P. 611.	826
Garnham, 2 Fost. & F. 347	905
Garratt, 8 Cox , 368; 2 Fost. & F.
14	402
Garratt, 6 C. & P. 369.....	413
Garratt, Dearsl. 232.....	528
Garside, 2 Ad. & El. 206 .. 127, 128,	303
Garside, 2 Lew. 38.....	183
Gascoigne, 7 C. & P. 772.....	166
Gascoigne, Leach , 280; East , 709 :	434
Gash, 1 Stark. 441	938
Gastineaux, Leach , 49.....	788
Gate Fulford, Dearsl. & B. 74,
94	275
Gate Fulford, 7 Cox , 230.....	1252
Gathercole, 2 Lew. 237	1133, 1148
Gavan, 2 Str. 873.....	322
Gay, 7 C. & P. 530	208
Gayer, 1 Burr. 245	1310
Gaylor, 7 Cox , 253	82
Gaylor, Dearsl. 288.....	762
Gazard, 8 C. & P. 595.....	1024
Geach, 9 C. & P. 499	155, 156
Geering, 18 L. J. M. C. 215	781
Gelan v. Hall, 27 L. J. M. C. 78 :	24
Genese, 1 Salk. 79	1032
Genge, Comp. 13	1309
Genner v. Sparkes, 1 Salk. 79	7
George, Car. & M. 111	181
George, 3 Salk. 188	1205
Gerber, 1 Temp. & M. 647.....	179
Gerrish, 2 Moo. & Rob. 219	727
Gibbon, Leigh & Cave	109
Gibbons, 1 C. & P. 97.....	190, 234
Gibbons, Fost. 167	456
Gibbons, Russ. & Ry. 442.....	458, 558
Gibbons v. Pepper, 4 Mod. 405....	823
Gibbs, 3 D. P. C. 345	151, 915
Gibbs, Dearsl. 445; 24 L. J. M. C.
62	386
Gibbs, Str. 497	608
Gibbs, 1 East , 173	633, 636
Gibson, East, P. C. 413	80
Gibson, 11 Mod. 340 ..	121
Gibson, 8 East , 107.....	126
Gibson, Russ. & Ry. 138.....	219
Gibson, Car. & M. 672.....	224
Gibson, Str. 978	270
Gibson, East, P. C. 357	458
Gibson, 8 Cox , 436	487
Gibson, Russ. & Ry. 138.....	597
Gibson, Russ. & Ry. 343	657
Gibson, Leach , 359	799
Giddins, Car. & M. 596	174
Giddins, Car. & M. 634	441
Gifford, Lord, 1 New. S. C. 490 ..	896
Gifford, Lord, 30 L. J. M. C. 78;
Leigh & Cave , 1	367

	PAGE		PAGE
Gilberdyke, 8 Jur. 792	105, 106	Gompertz, 14 L. J. M. C. 118; 9
Gilbert, 1 Moo. C. C. 185; 1 Car. &		Jur. 401	61
K. 84	469	Gompertz, 9 Q. B. 824; 16 L. J.
Gilbert, 1 East , 583	1207	Q. B. 121	270, 1071
Gilbie, 5 M. & S. 520	110	Gompertz, 2 Cox , 245	1054
Gilchrist, Car. & M. 224	673	Good, 1 Car. & K. 185: 72, 85,
Gilchrist, 2 Moo. 233	1229	1058, 1073
Giles, 1 Moo. 166	648	Good, 8 C. & P. 193	426
Giles, Car. Cr. L. 191	652	Goodall, 1 Ld. R. 122; Say. 129 ..	25
Giles v. Gwyn,	1023	Goodall, Den. 187	867
Gilham, Moo. & Malk. 165	50	Goodbody, 8 C. & P. 665	387
Gilham, 1 Esp. 285	178	Goodchild, 2 Car. & K. 293	867
Gilham, 1 Moo. 186	194, 233	Goode, 1 Ad. & El. 536; Car. & M.
Gill, Russ. & Ry. 434	85	582	388
Gill, 1 Lew. 305	446	Goodenough, Dearsi. 210	497
Gill, Dearsi. 289; 23 L. J. M. C.		Goodenough, 2 Ld. R. 1036	1125
50	493	Goodfellow, Den. 81	905
Gill, Russ. & Ry. 384	557	Goodfellow, Car. & M. 569: 983,
Gill, Str. 190	823, 1248	1013, 1024
Gill, 2 B. & Ald. 204	1055, 1059	Goodhall, Russ. & Ry. 461	523
Gillbrass, 7 C. & P. 444	266, 408	Goodie, 1 Lew. 76	447
Gilkes, 8 B. & C. 439	937	Gooding, Car. & M. 297	861
Gilles, Russ. & Ry. 366	1196	Goodman, 2 Russ. C. M. 130	244
Gillett, 3 Burr. 1707	1105	Goodman, Say. Rep. 19	1245
Gillett, 6 T. R. 265	1314	Goodman, 1 Fost. & F. 502	1321
Gillings, 1 Fost. & F. 36	1229	Goodrich, 3 T. R. 126	657
Gillow, 1 Moo. 85	796	Goodright d. Richards v. Williams,
Gilroy, 1 C. & P. 87	226	2 M. & S. 270	782
Girdwood, Leach , 142	442, 449	Goodwin, 1 Russ. C. M. 563	746
Gisson, 2 Car. & K. 781	130	Goose, Mo. 461	82
Gladwell v. Blake, 4 Tyr. 166	4	Gorbutt, 26 L. J. M. C. 47; Dearsi.
Glamorgan, 2 East , 356	1276	& B. 166	500
Glandfield, East , 1034	565	Gordon, East, P. C. 315 7, 10,	754
Glanvill, 11 Moo. 202	613	Gordon, 1 B. & Ald. 72	37
Glass, Den. 215	387	Gordon, Car. & M. 410	52
Glass, 3 Salk. 350	946	Gordon, Leach , 515; East, P. C.
Glasse, 2 Cox , 236	490	352	82
Glassie, 7 Cox , 11	388	Gordon, Leach , 300	215
Gleed, 2 Russ. C. M. 983	184	Gordon, 2 Dowl. N. S. 417	246
Glenn, 3 B. & Ald. 373	122	Gordon, 1 Russ. C. M. 707	843
Glin, 6 Mod. 87	937	Gordon, Russ. & Ry. 48	866
Gloucestershire, J.J., 7 C. & P. 338 ..	59	Gordon, Lord George, 2 Russ. C. M.
Glover, 4 D. P. C. 292	35	750	233
Glover, Russ. & Ry. 269	413	Gordon, Lord George, East, P. C.
Glover, 1 Sid. 259	890	71	313
Glover, Leach , 670	960	Gordon, Lord George, 2 Dougl. ,
Glover v. Hinde, 1 Mod. 168	1167	591	314
Glusburne Bridge, 2 East , 352	1276	Gordon, Lord George, Holt, Libel ,
Gnosil, 1 C. & P. 304	432, 433	77	1140
Goate, 2 Ld. Raym. 737	634	Gore, or Gower, 8 D. P. C. 101 ..	288
Goddard, Leach , 543	508	Gore, 9 Rep. 81	751
Goddard, 1 Salk. 371	686	Gore v. Moorton, Cro. El. 905	974
Goddard, 2 Fost. & F. 361	1014	Goss, Den. 276	521
Godfrey, 8 C. & P. 563	384	Gossett, 3 Per. & D. 340	31
Godfrey, 27 L. J. M. C. 151; Dearsi.		Gotley, Russ. & Ry. 384	915
& B. 426	532	Gough, 1 Moo. & Rob. 71	173
Goff, Russ. & Ry. 179	58	Gough, 2 Dougl. 791	1006
Goff, 26 L. J. M. C. 47; Dearsi. &		Gough v. Davies, 2 Kay & J. 623;
B. 166	500	25 L. J. Ch. 677	127, 300
Goff, 1 Ventr. 216	772	Gould, 9 C. & P. 364	130, 195
Goffe, 1 Lew. 189	1005	Gould, 3 Ch. Burn , 528	164
Gogerly, Russ. & Ry. 343	79	Gould, Leach , 339, n.	475
Gold, 6 Mod. 164	935	Gould, v. Berry, Chit. 143	1003
Golde, 2 Moo. & Rob. 425	510	Gourlay, 7 B. & C. 669; 1 Man. &
Goldney, M. S.	835	Ry. 619	27
Goldstein, Russ. & Ry. 473	653, 668	Gouldsbrough, Winch. 5	1207
Goldthorpe, 2 Moo. 244	871	Govers, Say. 206	616
Gombert v. Coyney, M^cCl. 469	4	Gowen, East , 1027	504
Gomme, 3 Cox , 64	510	Gower, 1 Keb. 487	1070

Table of Cases.

XXXV

	PAGE
Gower, 8 D. P. C. 102	1246
Grady, 7 C. & P. 650	17, 212
Graham, Leach , 87	84
Graham, Leach , 84	90
Graham, Leach , 547	95
Graham, East , 945	674
Graham, 2 Lew. 97	862
Grainger, 3 Burr. 1617	126
Grampound Corporation, 2 Ld. R. 965	1093, 1094
Grand Junction Railway Company, 11 Ad. & El. 128	879, 883
Granfield, 12 Mod. 98	929
Grantham, Holt , 354	613
Grant, q. t. v. Ridley, 6 Sc. 170; 3 Man. & Gr. 201	151
Grant, East , P. C. 658	194
Grant, 3 Nev. & M. 106	268
Grant, 5 B. & Adol. 1086	269, 1159
Gratland, East , P. C. 826	516
Grattan, Car. Cr. L. 66	184
Gray, 1 Burr. 510	50
Gray, 7 C. & P. 164	96
Gray, Str. 481	453, 455
Gray, Dearl. & B. 303	794
Gray v. Reg. (in error), 11 Cl. & F. 427	154
Great Broughton, 5 Burr. 700	1253
Great Camfield, 1 Esp. 686	1262
Great Midland Railway Company, 2 Cox , 1	95
Great Northern, 16 L. J. M. C. 16: ..	1283
Great Western Railway Company, 3 Q. B. 333	879
Great Yarmouth, Mayor of, Ex p. , 1 Cox , 123	137
Green, Ca. Temp. Hardw. 209	98
Green, Str. 1072	144
Green, 5 C. & P. 312	196
Green, Dearl. 323	374, 484
Green, Dearl. & B. 113	393
Green, 3 Car. & K. 209	546, 651
Green, 7 C. & P. 153	770
Green, Str. 527	894
Green, 8 Cox , 441	961
Green, 3 Dougl. 36	1053
Green, 1 Ld. K. 739	1299
Green v. Edwards, Cro. El. 326	146
Green v. Goddard, 2 Salk. 641	822
Greenacre, 8 C. & P. 35; 83, 167, 246, 743	246, 743
Greenhalgh, Dearl. 267	521
Greenhill, 4 Ad. & El. 624	846
Greeniff, Leach , 363	960
Greenwood, Str. 1138	35
Greenwood, Den. & P. 453; 21 L. J. M. C. 127	81, 730
Greenwood, 2 Car. & K. 339	441
Greenwood, 7 Cox , 404	771
Greepe, Carth. 422	985
Gregg, 10 St. Tr. App. 77	312
Gregg, Fost. 218	315, 323
Gregory, 1 Cox , 198	22
Gregory, 14 L. J. M. C. 82	23, 61
Gregory, 7 Q. B. 274	23, 61
Gregory, 5 D. P. C. 129	28
Gregory, Leach , 98, n.	34
Gregory, 4 Dowl. & L. 777	68
Gregory, 2 Nev. S. C. 229	88

	PAGE
Gregory, 4 Jur. 1015	108
Gregory, 1 Per. & D. 110; 8 Ad. & El. 95	139
Gregory, 1 Salk. 22	144
Gregory, 1 Car. & K. 228	286, 287
Gregory, 15 L. J. M. C. 38	888
Gregory, 8 Q. B. 508	893, 1159
Gregory, 5 B. & Adol. 353	1190
Gregory, 2 Nev. & M. 478: 1244, 1246, 1249	1244, 1249
Gregory v. Reg. 15 Q. B. 95; 5 Jur. 74	61, 284, 288, 1144, 1151
Gregory v. Taverner, 6 C. & P. 280: ..	1241
Gregory v. Tuffs, 1 Cr. M. & R. 310	151
Gresham, Lady, Godb. 59	1265
Grevil, Say. Rep. 249	883
Grey, East , P. C. 708	432
Grey, Kel. 64	746
Grey, 2 Ld. Keny. 387	1245
Grey, Lord, East , P. C. 460 ..	842, 1180
Grey, Lord, Tho. Raym. 473	847
Grey, Lord, 9 St. Tr. 127	1055, 1067
Grey v. Bartholomew, Ow. 20; Gouldsb. 127	415
Grice, 7 C. & P. 803	439, 908
Griepe, Ld. R. 256	987, 1020
Griffin, Russ. & Ry. 151	194
Griffin, 11 Mod. 468	329
Griffin, 2 Barnard. 368	1132
Griffin, app., Colman, resp. 28 L. J. Ex. 134	10
Griffin v. Parsons, Selwy. N. P. 27: ..	822
Griffith, 2 Russ. C. M. 832	189, 195
Griffith, Dearl. & B. 548	635
Griffith, 8 C. & P. 248	788
Griffith, 1 C. & P. 298	793
Griggs, Tho. Raym. 1	185
Grimes, East , P. C. 647	481
Grimes, 3 Mod. 220	1072
Grimshaw, 16 L. J. Q. B. 385	880
Grimwade, 1 Cox , 85	444
Grimwade, Den. 30; 1 Car. & K. 592	445
Grindall, 2 C. & P. 563	1010
Grindley, 1 Russ. C. M. 8	247
Groenvell, 1 Ld. R. 213	1302
Groenvelt v. Burwell, 1 Ld. R. 213: ..	1302
Groombridge, 7 C. & P. 582	831
Groombridge, 3 Salk. 169 ...	1121, 1123
Groombridge, 9 C. & P. 746	836
Grosvenor, 2 Stark. 511	1295
Grosvenor, Str. 1193	1311
Grote, 3 D. P. C. 255	116
Grounsell, 7 C. & P. 788	780
Grout, 6 C. & P. 629	768
Grove, 1 Moo. 447	495
Grove, 5 Mod. 18	924
Grover, 8 D. P. C. 325	100
Grubbins, 1 Lew. 214	110
Gruby, 1 Cox , 249	533
Grundy, 2 Cox , 357	59
Gruncell, 9 C. & P. 365	539
Guelder, 30 L. J. M. C. 34; Bell , 284	497
Guernsey, 1 Fost. & F. 394	383
Gully, Leach , 98	127
Gulston, 2 Ld. R. 1210	1096
Gunn, 11 Mod. 66	998, 1012

	PAGE
Gurnei, 3 Inst. 166	966
Gutch, Lofft. 780; Moo. & M. 433: 1162
Gutteridge, 9 C. & P. 228	50
Gutteridge, 9 C. & P. 471 ..208, 801, 837
Gwilt, 11 Ad. & El. 587; 3 Per. &
D. 176; 8 D. P. C. 476	135, 827
Gwyne, 2 Burr. 749	112
Gyles, Andr. 180	944

H.

Haddock, Say. Rep. 19	1245, 1299
Haddock, Andr. 137	1296, 1299
Hadfield, 1 Russ. C. M. 13	250
Hadfield, 2 Russ. C. M. 231	660
Haigh, 7 Cox , 403	571
Hagan, 8 C. & P. 167 ..11, 108, 754,	764, 800
Hailey, Ry. & M. 94	980
Haines, Leach , 40	127
Haines, Skin. 583	136, 218
Haines, 2 Russ. C. M. 886	198
Haines, Holt , 289	217
Haines, 5 Cox , 114	265
Haines, Russ. & Ry. 451	454
Hair, 1 Car. & K. 389	107
Hair, 2 Car. & K. 368	767
Hake, 1 Cox , 226	207
Hake, 4 Man. & Ry. 483	112
Hales, Str. 816	162
Hales, East , 825	616
Halford, 7 Mod. 193	945
Hall v. Booth, 3 Nev. & M. 315	7, 13
Hall, 1 Lew. 232	20
Hall, 5 Burr. 2684	25
Hall, 1 Lew. 232	85
Hall, 1 T. R. 322	145
Hall, Leach , 559	192, 199
Hall, 3 Stark. 67	219
Hall, Den. 381; 18 L. J. M. C. 62;
2 Car. & K. 947	379
Hall, 3 C. & P. 409	433, 912
Hall, Russ. & Ry. 355	454
Hall, 1 Moo. C. C. 474	488, 497
Hall, Russ. & Ry. 463	495
Hall, East , 895	717
Hall, Cro. Jac. 95	779
Hall, Al. 51	884
Hall, 2 Fost. & F. 16	904
Hall, 1 Lew. 232	911
Hall, 1 Fost. & F. 33	1054
Hall, 8 C. & P. 358	1065
Hall, 1 Str. 416	1147
Hall, 1 Str. 486	1172
Hall, 1 Mod. 76	1241
Hall, 1 Ventr. 169	1243
Hallett, 9 C. & P. 749	210, 834
Hallett, Den. & P. 237	979
Halliday, 29 L. J. M. C. 148; Bell ,
257	184
Hallingby, Com. Rep. 93	1092
Halloway, Den. 370; 2 Car. & K.
942	379
Halloway, 1 Car. & P. 128 ..391, 392, 398
Halloway, Cro. Car. 131	746

	PAGE
Halpin, 9 B. & C. 65	1162, 1163
Halse, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 20	151
Halsey, Noy. 90	1261
Haman, 2 Ld. R.	1103, 1218
Hamilton, 7 C. & P. 448	132, 1070
Hamilton, 8 C. & P. 49	436, 474
Hamilton, 1 Lew. 77	457, 475
Hamilton, 1 Car. & K. 212	445
Hamilton, Leach , 348	475
Hamilton 16 L. J. M. C. ; 9 Q. B.
271	531
Hamilton v. Reg. 16 L. J. M. C. ;
9 Q. B. 271	531
Hamlyn, 4 Camp. 379	1078
Hammersmith, 1 Stark. 357	1263
Hammon, Russ. & Ry. 221	385
Hammond et ux. Leach , 444	74, 444
Hammond, 2 Russ. C. M. 2	362
Hammond, 1 Cox , 123	441
Hammond, 1 Cox , 60	561
Hammond, 2 Esp. 719	1066
Hammond, 10 Mod. 382	1263
Hamp, 6 Cox , 167	216, 1052
Hamper, 2 Leon. 230	969
Hampton, 3 Ch. Burn. 428	395
Hampton, 1 Moo. 235	663
Hamworth, Str. 900	1290
Hancock, East , 170	458
Hancock v. Sones, 28 L. J. M. C.
196	29
Handcock v. Baker, 1 B. & P.
260	12
Handley, 5 C. & P. 565	174
Handley, Car. & M. 547	383
Handley, 1 Fost. & F. 648	846
Handy, 6 T. R. 286	1241
Hanks, 3 C. & P. 419	979
Hann, Lofft. 28, 400	281
Hann, 3 Burr. 1716	944
Hankey, 1 Burr. 316	1104
Hannam, Leach , 420	121
Hannam v. Mockett, 2 B. & C. 934:	414
Hannon, 6 Mod. 311	518, 613, 617
Hannon, 2 Moo. 77	653
Hansill, 3 Cox , 597	84
Hanson, Say. Rep. 229	121
Hanson, 2 Russ. C. M. 770	235
Hanson, East, P. C. 610	415
Hanson, 2 Moo. 245	676
Hanson, 1 Cox , 438	803
Hanson, 8 Cox , 111	805
Hanson, 2 Car. & K. 912	821
Hanway v. Boulton, 4 C. & P.
350	13
Harborne, 4 Nev. & M. 341	859
Hardey, 14 Q. B. 529	1046
Harding, 2 Ventr. 315	310, 311, 315
Harding, Russ. & Ry. 185	385
Harding, M.S. Sarum Lent As.
1832	391
Harding, 2 Salh. 477	916
Harding v. Greening, 8 Taunt. 42:	1146
Hardwick, 1 Phil. Ev. 153	196
Hardwick, 1 Sid. 282	924
Hardy v. Murphy, 1 Esp. 294	11
Hardy, 24 How. St. Tr. 452	215
Hardy, 2 Stark. 136	235
Hardy, 1 Ph. Ev. 192	248
Hardy, East, P. C. 60	314, 324, 326

Table of Cases.

xxxvii

	PAGE		PAGE
Hardy, East , P. C. 113	335	Harrod, Car. & M. 294	128
Hardy, 5 Esp. 127	1068	Harrold, East , 715	446
Hardy, 19 L. J. Q. B. 796	1070	Harrow, 2 Burr. 2092	1261
Hare, 6 Jur. 326	102	Hart, 6 C. & P. 123	61
Hare, 3 Cox , 24	220	Hart, Leach , 145	237
Harford, Comb. 328	1310	Hart, 6 C. & P. 106	421
Hargrave, 5 C. & P. 170	93, 181	Hart, 2 L. T. 248	523
Harland, 8 Ad. & El. 826	1125, 1127	Hart, 1 Moo. 486	667
Harleston, Cro. El. 571	892	Hart, Sir Wm. Bl. 386	1134
Harley, 4 C. & P. 369	790	Hart, 10 East , 94	1160
Harley, Car. & K. 89	1223	Hartall, 7 C. & P. 475	97, 540
Harman, 2 Ro. Rep. 154	431	Hartell, 7 C. & P. 775	166
Harmer, 2 Cox , 487	368	Hartford, Comp. 111	1264
Harmwood, East , 440	832	Hartley, 4 B. & Adol. 869	141, 1150
Harnisse, 5 Mod. 443	1126	Hartley, Russ. & Ry. 129	487
Harpur, 5 Mod. 96	1310, 1311	Hartshorn, 6 Cox , 395	1322
Harrie, 13 East , 270	140	Harvey of Comb, 10 Mod. 334	25
Harrie, 6 C. & P. 105	447	Harvey, 8 Cox , 99	69, 1015
Harrington, 5 Cox , 231	763	Harvey, East , 658	194
Harrington, 1 Ventr. 324	1090	Harvey, St. Tr. 414	259
Harrington v. Churchward, 29 L. J. Ch. 521	487	Harvey, 1 Cox , 21	364
Harrington v. Long, 2 Myln. & K. 590	920	Harvey, 9 C. & P. 353	378
Harris, Deersl. 346	59	Harvey, Leach , 467	393
Harris, Leach , 800	61	Harvey, Russ. & Ry. 227	682
Harris, 3 Burr. 1330	64	Harvey, 1 Sess. Ca. 424	1005
Harris, 1 Salk. 47	67	Harvey, 2 B. & C. 257	1088, 1143
Harris, Holt, Ca. 353	95	Harwood, Str. 1088	281
Harris, 8 Jur. 516	141	Haslam, Leach , 418	182
Harris, Cro. El. 261	146	Haslam, Den. 93	292
Harris, 1 Cox , 166	188	Haslam, 1 Jur. 1139	499
Harris, 1 Moo. 338	199	Haslingfield, 2 M. & S. 558	1258
Harris, 4 Cox , 157	201	Hassall, 8 Cox , 491; Leigh & Cave , 58; 30 L. J. M. C. 175	403
Harris, 2 Russ. C. M. 932	251	Hassell, 2 C. & P. 434	72
Harris, 7 C. & P. 581	252	Hassell, 5 C. & P. 531	109
Harris, 8 Cox , 333	369	Hassell, Leach , 1	1230
Harris, East , P. C. 498	457	Hastings, 9 C. & P. 152	180
Harris, 1 Deersl. 344	490	Hastings, 1 Moo. 82	548
Harris, Fost. 115	564	Hassett v. Payne, Cro. El. 256	162
Harris, East , 1023	564	Haswell, 1 Dougl. 387.. 139, 1149, 1150	957
Harris, Car. & M. 641	572, 573	Haswell, Russ. & Ry. 450	957
Harris, 19 L. J. M. C. 11	627	Hatcher, 12 Mod. 356	134
Harris, 3 Cox , 565	630	Hatfield, 4 B. & Ald. 75	1253, 1263
Harris, 1 Moo. 393	633	Hathaway, 12 Mod. 556	134, 618
Harris, 2 Moo. 247	674	Haughton, 5 C. & P. 559	555, 559, 562, 590
Harris, Leach , 135	721	Havelock v. Geddes, 12 East , 622 ..	49
Harris, Leach , 929	753	Hawdon, 1 Q. B. 664; 3 Per. & D. 44	104, 111
Harris, 7 C. & P. 446	792	Hawe v. Planner, 1 Saund. 13	821
Harris, 5 C. & P. 159	795	Hawes, Den. 270	865
Harris, 5 B. & Ald. 926	1006, 1023	Hawkes, 2 Moo. 60	665
Harris, 11 Mod. 113	1121	Hawkeswood, Leach , 257	220, 666
Harris, 1 Salk. 268	1124	Hawkeswood, East , 275	774
Harris, 12 Mod. 268	1126	Hawkins, 3 Cox , 452	216
Harris, 3 Salk. 313	1126	Hawkins, 3 C. & P. 392	363, 440
Harris, 1 Ld. Raym. 482	1128	Hawkins, East , P. C. 485	454
Harris, 4 T. R. 202	1301	Hawkins, East , P. C. 501	461
Harris v. Dixon, Cro. Jac. 158: 972, 974		Hawkins, 7 C. & P. 281	492
Harrison, Leach , 477	75, 388	Hawkins, Den. 584	494
Harrison, 1 Ch. Rep. 571	101	Hawkins, Trem. 167	980
Harrison, 7 T. R. 60	143	Hawkins, Peake , 8	1011
Harrison, 1 Dowl. & Ry. 267	281	Haworth, 4 C. & P. 254	216
Harrison, Leach , 180	683	Hawtin, 7 C. & P. 281	492
Harrison, 1 Moo. 470	654	Hay, 2 Fost. & F. 2	234
Harrison, East , P. C. 382	881	Hay, Fost. 26	329
Harrison, Cro. Car. 503	929	Hay, 5 M. & S. 300	939
Harrison v. Evans, 6 Bro. P. C. 181	1311	Haydon, 7 C. & P. 445	484
Harrison v. Hodgson, 10 B. C. 825: 445		Haylock v. Sparke, 22 L. J. M. C. 77	1150

	PAGE		PAGE
Hayes, 1 Show . 272	1118, 1123	Herefordshire, JJ., 1 Pr. Rep.
Hayes, 2 Q. B. 128	1254	323	901
Hayes, 2 Moo. & Rob. , 155	174, 543	Herford, 29 L. J. Q. B. 249	878
Hayes, 3 Jones & Lat. 568	258	Herring v. Walround, Carth. 503;
Hayes, 2 Cox , 206	841	1 Salk. 374	144
Hayes, 1 Cox , 302	931	Hescott, 1 Salk. 338	1075
Hayman, Moo. & M. 401	1281, 1290	Hester, 4 D. P. C. 489	102
Haynes, 1 Fost. & F. 666	250, 258	Hetherington, 5 Jur. 529	271, 1172
Haynes, Ry. & Moo. 298	279, 1039	Hethersal, 3 Mod. 80	887, 892
Haynes, 12 Rep. 113; East , 652:		Hevey, Leach , 229, 235..214, 616,
	394, 1196		660, 1051
Haynes, 4 M. & S. 214	615	Hewes, 3 Ad. & El. 725	262
Hays, 2 Sess. Ca. 198	1097	Hewett, Car. & M. 534	192
Hayward, 6 Cox , 160	205	Hewgill, Deasyl. 315	535
Hayward, 2 Car. & K. 234	233	Hewins, 9 C. & P. 786	66, 67, 1008
Hayward, 1 Car. & K. 518	483	Hewlett, 2 Russ. C. M. 278	369
Hayward, 6 C. & P. 157	747	Hewlett, 1 Fost. & F. 91	794
Hayward, Russ. & Ry. 78	793	Hext, 4 Jur. 339	140
Hayward, Cro. El. 148	1261	Hey, Den. 602	386
Haywood, Russ. & Ry. 16	592	Heydon, 3 Burr. 1270	144, 150
Hayworth, 2 Cox , 220	169	Heydon, 1 Cox , 184	779
Hayworth, 1 Lew. 122	687, 690	Heydon, 4 Rep. 41	780, 890
Hazell, 8 Cox , 44	211	Heydon, 3 Burr. 1359	1201
Hazell, Leach , 368	762	Heyrick v. Foster, 4 T. R. 701	149
Head, 2 C. & P. 458	235	Heywood, 4 Jur. 413	101
Head, 1 Fost. & F. 350	414, 779, 783	Heywood, 2 Car. & K. 352	697
Headge, Russ. & Ry. 160	493	Hibburt, 1 Car. & K. 461	279
Healey, 1 Moo. C. C. 1	95, 508	Hibbs v. Wilkinson, 1 Fost. & F.
Heanor, 2 Moo. & Rob. 445	1269	608	1143
Heaps, 2 Salk. 593	261, 1099	Hickeringill, 11 Mod. 113	85
Hearn, Car. & M. 109	195, 198	Hickling, 7 Q. B. 880	1269, 1273
Hearn, 4 C. & P. 215	203	Hickman, East, P. C. 293	95
Heath, 2 Moo. 33	384, 420	Hickman, Leach , 318	426, 451
Heaton, 2 T. R. 184	102	Hickman, 1 Moo. C. C. 34	445, 449
Heaton, 1 Lew. 116	242	Hickman, Leach , 278	446
Heber, Str. 915	138, 944	Hickman, 5 C. & P. 151	770
Hebborne, Poph. 106	1257	Hicks, 2 Moo. & Rob. 80	87
Hedgecock, 1 Russ. C. M. 837	131	Hicks, 1 Cox , 145	466
Hedges, Leach , 201	425	Hicks, Hob. 215	1103
Hedges, 3 C. & P. 410	734	Hicks, Poph. 139	1131, 1154
Helsham, 4 C. & P. 394	779, 784	Higginbotham, Ex p. , 9 D. P. C.
Hely, 10 Jur. 1009	143	200	150
Heming, 5 B. & Adol. 666	139	Higgins, 1 Nev. & P. 50	109
Heming, Leach , 445	444	Higgins, 3 C. & P. 603	107, 202
Hemming, 2 Show. 92	261	Higgins, 4 C. & P. 247	1076
Hemming, 1 Salk. 387	611	Higgins, 2 East , 5	1194
Hemp, 5 C. & P. 468	1032	Higgins, 5 D. P. C. 75	1270
Hempstead, Russ. & Ry. 344	261	Higginson, 1 Car. & K. 129	250
Hems, 7 C. & P. 312	10	Higginson, 1 Ld. Raym. 53	929
Hench, Russ. & Ry. 163	377	Higginson, 2 Burr. 1223	1190
Henderson, 2 Moo. 192	129, 531, 533	Higgon, 2 Car. & K. 769	18
Henderson v. Bromhead, 4 Hurlst.		Higgs, 2 Car. & K. 252	459
& N. 569; 28 L. J. 360	1135	Highfield, 2 Russ. C. M. 859	200
Hendon, 4 B. & Ald. 628	1289	Higley, 4 C. & P. 366	871
Hendricks, Str. 1234	1314	Hillarsden, 1 Keb. 894	1272
Hendy, 4 Cox , 243	445	Hilbers, 2 Ch. Rep. 163	1055
Henry, 2 Moo. 118	437, 446	Hilditch, 5 C. & P. 299	252
Henry, 1 Cox , 101	535, 1058	Hiles v. Hundred of Shrewsbury, 3
Hensey, 4 B. & Ald. 124	1160	East , 457	563
Henson, Den. & P. 24	1242	Hill, 22 L. J. Q. B. 322; 2 El. &
Hepper, 1 Moo. 211	112	Bl. 176	105
Hepper, Ry. & M. 210	151, 1016	Hill, Den. & P. 254	177
Heppingstall, 4 Cox , 138	805	Hill, 2 Moo. & Rob. 458	472
Herbert, East , 461	622	Hill, Russ. & Ry. 190	534
Herbert, 2 Ld. Keny. 466	1051	Hill, Den. 453	541
Hereford, JJ., 4 New. S. C. 179:		Hill, 1 Car. & K. 168	628
	17, 1167	Hill, 2 Moo. 30	668
Herefordshire, JJ., 1 New. S. C.		Hill, 2 Cox , 246	685
413	105	Hill, East, P. C. 439	831

Table of Cases.

xxxix

	PAGE		PAGE
Hill, 1 And. 78	925	Holloway, Den. & P. 18	59
Hill, Cro. Car. 232	925	Holloway, 8 Mod. 288	135
Hill, 2 Ch. Burn , 6	958	Holloway, 1 C. & P. 127	237
Hill, Comb. 64	1079	Holloway, Den. 370	274, 430
Hill, Str. 790	1186	Holloway, 5 C. & P. 524	363
Hill, Ex p. , 3 C. & P. 225	38	Holloway, 8 Mod. 283	826
Hill v. Yates, 12 East , 229	361	Holloway, 2 D. P. C. 525	894
Hilton, Bell , 20; 28 L. J. M. C. 28 : 245, 274, 547		Holloway, 5 B. & Ald. 596	930
Hilton, 2 Cox , 318	627	Holloway, 2 D. P. C. 525	1097
Hilton, 2 Lew. 214	770	Holloway v. Reg. Den. 287; 17 Q. B. 210	288, 961
Hilton v. Byron, 12 Mod. 243	894	Holland, 5 T. R. 607	1312
Hilton v. Eckersley, 24 L. J. Q. B. 353	1062	Holland, 4 T. R. 457	150
Hinchcliffe, 1 Lew. 161	774	Holland, 4 T. R. 691	167
Hinchcliffe, 10 Q. B. 356	936	Holland, East, P. C. 498	457
Hincks, Den. 184	179	Holland, 2 Moo. & Rob. 371	760
Hind, 29 L. J. M. C. 147; Bell , 253	207	Holland, 1 T. R. 692	945
Hind, Russ. & Ry. 253	849, 850	Hollingberry, 4 B. & C. 329	1058
Hinde, 5 Q. B. 944	879	Hollingham, 4 B. & C. 329	235, 270
Hindmarsh, Leach , 569	781	Hollingshead, 4 C. & P. 242	193
Hinley, 1 Cox , 12	175	Hollis, 2 Stark. 536	936
Hinley, 2 Moo. & Rob. 524	547	Holm, 11 East , 381	1063
Hinton, 3 Mod. 122	966, 971, 1007, 1022	Holman, 3 Jur. 722	245
Hinxman, Leach , 310	212	Holmes, 22 L. J. M. C. 122	95, 1185
Hirst, 1 Lew. 46	198	Holmes, 1 Burr.	148
Hoare, 1 Fost. & F. 647	402	Holmes, 1 Lew. 149	173
Hoare, 6 M. & S. 206	1122	Holmes, 2 Car. & K. 248	197
Hoatson, 2 Car. & K. 777	642	Holmes, 2 Lew. 256	487
Hobbs v. Branscomb, 3 Camp. 420	8	Holmes, Cro. Car. 376	564
Hobby, 1 C. & P. 660	116	Holmes, 1 Mod. 73	1114, 1122
Hobby, Ry. & Moo. 241	151	Holt, Leach , 593	96, 235
Hobhouse, In re , 3 B. & Ald. 428 : 31, 34		Holt, 5 T. R. 436	217, 267, 1147, 1158
Hobson, 1 Lew. 66	198, 230	Holt, 7 C. & P. 518	276, 791, 799
Hobson, Russ. & Ry. 56	501	Holt, Bell , 280	535
Hobson, Hell. 73	1119	Holt v. Reg. (in error), 2 Dowl. & L. 774	292
Hodge, East, P. C. 658	194	Holroy, 5 Mod. 341	290
Hodges, 8 C. & P. 195	45	Holroyd, 2 Moo. & Rob. 339	810
Hodges, Moo. & M. 341	429	Holtham, 2 Russ. C. M. 959	83
Hodgson, 3 C. & P. 422	50, 496, 499	Homer, Leach , 270	376
Hodgson, 3 B. & Adol. 351	65	Hone, 3 Ch. Burn , 741	1163
Hodgson, Leach , 6	81, 750	Hood, Moo. C. C. 281	3, 184
Hodgson, 1 Lew. 236	89, 237	Hood, Say. Rep. 161	121
Hodgson, Dearl. 14	104	Hook, Dearl. 606	1026
Hodgson, 4 C. & P. 322	133	Hooker, 7 Mod. 193	826
Hodgson, 1 Moo. 202	195	Hooper, 1 Ch. Rep. 491	38
Hodgson, Russ. & Ry. 211; 226, 834, 835		Hooper, 2 Russ. C. M. 879	199
Hodgson, 25 L. J. M. C. 78 ; Dearl. & B. 3	634	Hoost, East, P. C. 950	648
Hodgson, 1 Lew. 103	651	Hope, 7 C. & P. 136; 1 Moo. & Rob. 396	200, 199
Hodnett, 1 T. R. 96	837	Hope, 1 Moo. 414	682
Hogan, Den. & P. 277	807	Hopkins, 8 C. & P. 591	781, 869
Hogg, 2 Moo. & Rob. 380	87	Hopkins, Car. & M. 294	846
Hogg, 6 C. & P. 176	208	Hopley, 2 Fost. & F. 202	762
Hoggins, Russ. & Ry. 145	494	Hord, Say. Rep. 176	1116
Holcroft, 4 Rep. 46	129	Hornbrook, 1 Cox , 54	188
Holcroft, 2 Car. & K. 341	838, 840	Hornby, 1 Car. & K. 305	544
Holden, 8 C. & P. 605	26, 58, 78	Horne, 11 St. Tr. 283	235
Holden, 3 B. & Ald. 347; 2 Nev. & M. 167	65	Horne, 4 Cox , 263	954
Holden, q. t. v. Weeden, Bunb. 177 : 177	145	Horne, Str. 195	1072
Holden, 8 C. & P. 606	222	Horne, Comp. 672	1151
Holden, Russ. & Ry. 154; 1 Jack. 1019	648	Horne v. Reg. 4 Bro. P. C. 363	1151
Holden, Russ. & Ry. 154	650	Horne, Gouldsb. 102	1175
Holding, 1 Arch. Pr. 193	226	Horner, Leach , 270	33
Holloway, 9 P. & C. 43	46	Horner, Leach , 620	164
		Horner, East, P. C. 702	433
		Horner v. Battyn, Bull. N. P. 62	7
		Horner v. Liddiard, 1 Russ. C. M. 210	58

	PAGE		PAGE
Hornsea, Dears. 291	1255	Hughes, 2 Moo. 190	833
Horsly, 5 T. R. 362	950, 1217	Hughes, 24 L. J. 137	871
Horwell, 1 Moo. 405	677	Hughes, Dears. & B. 188	981
Horwood v. Smith, 2 T. R. 750; Leach , 586	401	Hughes, 1 Car. & K. 519	1035
Hoskins, 12 Mod. 324	949	Hughes, Moo. & M. 178	1093
Hoskins, Holt. Ca. 352	1240	Hughes, 4 C. & P. 373	1096
Hough, Russ. & Ry. 120	677, 679	Hugill, 4 Com. (Chr.) 240	479
Houlditch, 1 Stark. 63	163	Hull, Kel. 40	759, 769
Houncell, 2 Moo. & Rob. 29	871	Hulme, 7 C. & P. 8	1029
House, 7 Ad. & El. 69; 3 Nev. & M. 462	292	Hulse, Ex p. , 21 L. J. M. C. 21....	894
Houseman, 8 C. & P. 180	683	Humblings, Comb. 374	611
Houssin v. Barrow, 6 T. R. 122 ...	753	Humphreys, Car. & M. 601	45
How, 11 Ad. & El. 199	105, 106	Humphreys, 2 Russ. C. M. 745	215
How, Str. 699	1152	Humphreys, 19 L. J. M. C. 189	901
Howard, 1 Moo. & Rob. 187	1035	Hungerford, 11 Mod. 42	136
Howarth, 1 Moo. 207	13, 14	Hungerford, 1 East, P. C. 518	261
Howarth, 3 Stark. 26	530	Hunsdon, East, P. C. 611	415, 416, 417
Howatt, Leach , 83	1231	Hunt, 1 Moo. 93	13, 793
Howe, 1 Campb. 461	253	Hunt, 3 B. & Ald. 679	16
Howe, 4 C. & P. 268	448	Hunt, 10 Q. B. 925; 17 L. J. M. C. 14	63
Howe, Leach , 481	505	Hunt, 3 B. & Ald. 444	65
Howe, 6 Esp. 124	949	Hunt, 3 B. & Adol. 351	65
Howe, Str. 699	949	Hunt, 3 Cox , 215	123
Howell, 9 C. & P. 437: 52, 79, 80, 116, 246, 572, 573, 749	749	Hunt, 4 Cox , 149	201
Howell, 1 Car. & K. 689; Den. 1: 205	205	Hunt, 2 Cox , 239	206
Howell, 7 C. & P. 325	381	Hunt, 2 Cox , 261	208, 302
Howell, Den. & P. 363	414	Hunt, 3 B. & Ald. 566	237
Howell, 1 Cox , 190	465	Hunt, 2 Campb. 583	266, 1161
Howell, 3 Ch. Burn , 868	798	Hunt, 4 B. & Ald. 430	268
Howell, 3 Keb. 465	1190	Hunt, 3 Stark. 103	351, 1084
Howell v. Jackson, 6 C. & P. 723..	11	Hunt, 3 B. & Ald. 566	353, 354
Howes, 6 C. & P. 404	196	Hunt, 8 Cox , 493	403, 530
Howes, 7 Ad. & El. 60	290	Hunt, 8 C. & P. 642	489
Howlett, 7 C. & P. 274	793	Hunt, 1 Lord Keny. 108	1098
Hoyle v. Bush, 1 Man. & Gr. 775:	5	Hunter, 3 C. & P. 591	43
Hube, Peake , 132	233, 1165	Hunter, 3 C. & P. 593	52
Hubert, Cro. El. 531	934	Hunter, 1 Wils. 163	281
Hubson, East, P. C. 258	750	Hunter, Russ. & Ry. 511	677
Hucks, 1 Stark. 521	1008, 1019	Hunter, Leach , 624	683, 684
Huddersfield, 1 Cox , 113	209	Hunter, 4 C. & P. 128	690
Hudson, Russ. & Ry. 285	284	Huntley, 29 L. J. M. C. 170; Bell , 238	543
Hudson, 1 Fost. & F. 56	981	Huntly v. Luscombe, 2 Bos. & P. 530	30, 31
Hudson, Str. 909	1251	Hunts, JJ. 14 L. J. M. C. 99	896
Huet, Leach , 820	214, 652	Hurley, 2 Moo. & Rob. 47	681
Huet, Godb. 438	1095	Hurrell, Ry. & M. 296	508
Huggett, Kel. 59	755	Hurse, 2 Moo. & Rob. 360	727
Huggins, Str. 856	745	Hursfield, 8 C. & P. 269	166
Huggins, 3 C. & P. 414	887, 889	Hurt, 1 Hawk. c. 73, s. 5	1140
Hughes, 2 Lew. C. C. 230	74	Hussey, Law Times , 1844	674
Hughes, 1 Russ. C. M. 18	75	Hussey, 1 Cox , 347	689
Hughes, 29 L. J. M. C. 71; Bell , 242	83	Hutchinson, Leach , 135	129
Hughes, 1 Car. & K. 235	152	Hutchinson, 2 Lew. 141	146
Hughes, 1 Cox , 44	252	Hutchinson, 2 B. & C. 608	207
Hughes, Car. & M. 503	393	Hutchinson, 1 Lew. C. C. 74	276
Hughes, 1 Lew. 301	433	Hutchinson, Russ. & Ry. 412	394
Hughes, Leach , 406	456	Hutchinson, 1 Lew. 195	407
Hughes, 2 Cox , 104	491	Hutchinson, Deac. Cr. L. 1687	577
Hughes, 1 Moo. 370	491	Hutchinson, Leach , 339	1215
Hughes, 1 Fost. & F. 355	526	Hutt, 2 Burr. 1039	896
Hughes, Bell , 242; 8 Cox , 278	538	Huxley, Car. & M. 596	438
Hughes, 2 C. & P. 420	592, 792	Hyams, 7 C. & P. 441	454
Hughes, 1 Fost. & F. 726	626, 630	Hyde, 7 T. R. 710	181
Hughes, East, P. C. 1002	652	Hyde, 1 Hale , 537	277
Hughes, 26 L. J. M. C. 202	770	Hyman, Leach , 925	545
Hughes, 5 C. & P. 126	795	Hymen, 7 T. R. 536	146

Table of Cases.

xli

I.

	PAGE
Iles, Bull. N. P. 243	1030
Illidge, Den. 404	689
Imason v. Cope, 5 C. & P. 293	825
Ince, Leach , 342, 439	1215
Inclendon, 1 M. & S. 168	109
Inclendon, 13 East , 164	1254, 1270
Inder, Den. 325	526, 684
Inge, 2 Smith , 256	938
Ingham, 29 L. J. M. C. 18	630
Ingham, 19 L. J. M. C. 69	976
Ingle v. Bell, 1 Mees. & W. 516...	14
Ingleton, 1 Wils. 139	109, 110
Ingram et ux. 1 Salk. 304	75
Ingram et ux. 1 Salk. 593	1098
Innell, 1 Hawk. c. 89, s. 16	1221
Ion, Den. & P. 475	648
Ipswich murder case, Leach , 388 ..	277
Ireland, 3 T. R. 512	111
Ireton, Pollexf. 592	927
Irish Peer, Case of the, Russ. & Ry. 117	42
Isaac, East, P. C. 1031	566
Isaacs v. Brand, 2 Stark. 167	9
Isaacs, 20 L. J. Q. B. 395	38, 721
Isley, Leach , 320	426
Israel, 2 Cox , 263	118
Israel, 3 Dowl. & Ry. 234	1009
Ivers, 7 C. & P. 213	1307

J.

Jackson, 1 Hale , 464	16, 749, 755
Jackson, 2 Harch. c. 15, s. 79	37
Jackson, 6 T. R. 145	102
Jackson, 7 Cox , 357	158
Jackson, 6 Cox , 525	181
Jackson, 4 Mod. 366	320
Jackson, 1 Moo. 119	373
Jackson, 2 Moo. 32	386
Jackson, Leach , 267	440
Jackson, East, P. C. Add. xxi	446
Jackson, 2 Russ. C. M. 801	466
Jackson, 1 Car. & K. 384	496
Jackson, 3 Camp. 370	518, 616
Jackson, 3 Cox , 89	630
Jackson, 7 Cox , 357	749
Jackson, Russ. & Ry. 393	833
Jackson, 1 Lew. 270	965
Jackson, q. t. v. Gisling, Str. 1169..	149
Jacobs, 4 Cox , 54	193
Jacobs, Leach , 309	198, 212
Jacobs, Leach , 267	437
Jacobs, 1 Moo. 146	857, 859, 863, 873
Jacomb, Str. 953	121
Jagger, East, P. C. 458	185
James, 1 Moo. 329	86
James, 6 Cox , 5	260
James, 2 Russ. C. M. 14	368
James, 1 Russ. C. M. 815	461
James, 8 C. & P. 131	583
James, 7 C. & P. 553	668, 676, 677
James, 4 Cox , 90	679
James, 1 Car. & K. 530	795, 802

	PAGE
James, Russ. & Ry. 17	863
James, 5 B. & Ald. 894	929
James, 2 Str. 679	946
James, 1 Show. 397	1033, 1034
James, 1 Russ. C. M. 177	1098
James, 5 C. & P. 152	1099
James, 19 L. J. M. C. 179	1306
James v. Campbell, 5 C. & P. 272 ..	824
James v. Hayward, Cro. Car. 184 ...	1248
Jannet, Russ. & Ry. 351	70
Jannet, 2 Russ. C. M. 443	657
Janson, 4 Cox , 82	375
Jarvis, 2 Moo. & Rob. 44	83
Jarvis, 1 Moo. 7	462
Jarvis, 25 L. J. M. C. 30	730
Jarvis, 2 Moo. & Rob. 40	788, 791
Jary v. King, Palm. 535	985, 1005, 1031
Jeans, 1 Car. & K. 539	592
Jeffery, q. t. v. Coles, Willis , 634..	147
Jefford, East, P. C. 229	869
Jeffries and another, 3 Cox , 85	80
Jeffs, Str. 984	925
Jellias, East, P. C. 130	323
Jellyman, 8 C. & P. 604	180, 873
Jemet, Russ. & Ry. 243	551
Jenkins, 1 Cox , 177	181
Jenkins, Ca. Temp. Hardw. 301 ..	936
Jenks, East, P. C. 514; Leach , 774:	95, 466
Jennings, Dearsi. & B. 447	95, 387
Jennings, 2 Dowl. & L. 741	138
Jennings, 1 Russ. & Ry. 388	787
Jennings, 2 Lew. 130	792
Jennings, 1 Lew. 93	832
Jennings, 1 Cox , 116	1193
Jennings, 11 Mod. 215	1309
Jennison, Dough. 390	139
Jenour, 7 Mod. 400	1133
Jenson, 1 Moo. 434	487, 488, 497
Jepson, East, P. C. 1115	444, 445
Jermy, Say. Rep. 47	943
Jervis, 6 C. & P. 156	544
Jervois, q. t. v. Hall, 1 Wils. 17 ...	270
Jessop, Dearsi. & B. 442	516
Jewett, 2 Cox , 227	408
Jeyes, 5 Nev. & M. 101; 3 Ad. & El. 416	257, 935
Jeyes, 2 Russ. C. M. 188	499
Jobling, Russ. & Ry. 525	461
Johnson, 2 Car. & K. 394	17
Johnson, 2 Car. & K. 354	51
Johnson, 1 Cox , 59	76
Johnson, 1 Moo. 173	109
Johnson, 1 Wils. 325	121, 1094
Johnson, 6 East , 583	123, 126
Johnson, Str. 1000	157
Johnson, Str. 824	162
Johnson, 2 Russ. C. M. 879	199
Johnson, 2 Car. & K. 355	210
Johnson, 3 Car. & K. 354	222
Johnson, 1 Moo. 173	256
Johnson, 29 L. J. M. C. 133	269
Johnson, Post. 26	329
Johnson, Den. & P. 310	395
Johnson, Dearsi. & B. 340; Russ. & Ry. 493	439
Johnson, Leach , 267	440
Johnson, Leach , 193	446
Johnson, Kel. 58	455

xliii

	PAGE
Kitton v. Walters, Hettl. 12 ..	1017, 1038
Knell, 1 Barnard. 305	1141, 1161
Kneller, 1 Salk. 151	128
Knewland, Leach , 721	435
Knight, 1 Salk. 375	134, 634
Knight, East , P. C. 510	453
Knight, 2 Fost. & F. 46	767
Knight, 1 Lew. 168	768
Knight, 3 Mod. 117	1100
Knight et ux. 1 C. & P. 116	72
Knight, Ex p., 2 Mees. & W. 106..	32, 36
Knightly, Holt , Ca. 388	320
Knill, 5 B. & Ald. 929	1024
Knox, 2 Cox , 165	1005
Knut, 2 Barnard. 114.....	1133
Koops, 6 Ad. & El. 198	984
Krans, 1 B. & C. 258	7, 8
Kroehl, 2 Stark. 343	227, 1065
Kynaston, 1 East , 217.....	6
Kynaston, 2 Barnard. 378	1098

L.

Lacey, Mo. 121	54
Lacey, 3 Cox, 517.....	157, 345
Lad, Leach, 96	760, 836
Ladsingham, Tho. Raym. 193	260
Lafone, 1 Esp. 154.....	181, 1065
Laiston, 2 Ro. Rep. 47	986
Lake, 3 Leon. 268.....	1079
Lallement, 6 Cox, 204.....	69, 89
Lamb, 4 Burr. 2171.....	163
Lamb, East, 664.....	368
Lamb, 9 Rep. 59.....	1141, 1143
Lambe, Leach, 552	198
Lambert, 2 Camp. 400.....	248
Lambert, 2 Cox, 309.....	495
Lambert, 11 Mod. 154	971
Lambert, 2 Camp. 398.....	1089
Lancashire, JJ., 3 Per. & D. 86....	106
Lancashire, JJ., 1 Ch. Rep. 602	138
Lancashire, JJ., 1 Dowl. & Ry. 485:	946
Lancashire, JJ., 12 East, 366.....	1272
Lancashire, JJ., 2 East, 352	1276
Lancashire, 2 B. & Adol. 813..	1278, 1279
Lancaster, 2 Stark. Ec.	792, 1289
Landon, 1 Fost. & F. 381	169
Lands, 25 L. J. M. C. 14.....	627, 630
Landulph, 1 Moo. & Rob. 393	1259
Lane, 6 Mod. 128	94
Lane, 3 Salk. 270.....	970
Lane, Cro. El. 148.....	989, 1013, 1015
Lane v. Hegberg, Bull. N. P. 9 ..	826
Langbridge, Den. 448	212
Langford, Car. & M. 602	571, 572
Langforth Bridge, Cro. Car. 365 ..	1289
Langley, 2 Salk. 697	929
Langley, 2 Ld. Raym. 1029	1103
Langley, 2 Ld. Raym. 790.....	1240
Langstaffe, 1 Lev. 162	759
Lansdell v. Bidwell, Locke, Game
Laws, 101	908
Lapier, Leach, 420	432, 433, 434
Lara, 6 T. R. 365.....	527, 617
Larewood, Ld. Raym. 29	1311
Larking, 1 Lev. 90	1115

	PAGE		PAGE
Larkins, Deare . 365	67, 95	Leeds, 5 D. P. C. 123.....	1261, 1270
Larrieu, 7 Ad. & El. 277	135	Lees, 27 L. J. Q. B. 403...32, 33, 102, 292
Larwood, 1 Salk. 167	136	Leeser, Cro. Jac. 497	285, 610
Latimer, 29 L. J. Q. B. 129	1162	Leefe, Andr. 226	928
Laugher, 2 Car. & K. 225	74, 190	Leefe, 2 Camp. 1341019, 1023,
Launock v. Brown, 2 B. & Ald.		1030, 1036
592	6	Leek, 3 Inst. 15; 12 Rep. 15	638
Lavender, East, P. C. 566	385, 482	Legasley, 1 Hawk. c. 21, s. 13	929
Lavey, Leach , 153.....	722	Leginham, 1 Mod. 71	948
Lavey v. Reg. Den. & P. 504.....	1000	Legg, Kel. 27	743
Lavey, 3 Car. & K. 20.....	1014	Legge, 6 Cox , 220.....	979
Law, 2 Moo. & Rob. 197.....	71	Leggatt v. Tollervy, 14 East , 302..	111
Law v. Crowther, 2 Wils. 21.....	149	Leggett, 8 C. & P. 191.....	766
Lawes, 1 Car. & K. 62	471, 476	Leigh, East, P. C. 694	373
Lawley, Lady, Str. 904	927	Leigh, Leach , 411; 2 Russ. C. M.
Lawley, 1 Barnard. 263.....	1020	57	378
Lawrance, 4 Cox , 438	364	Leigh, Leach , 52	481
Lawrence v. Hedger, 3 Taunt. 14..	9	Leigh, q. t. v. Kent, 3 T. R. 362 ..	148
Lawrence, 12 Mod. 311	136, 1088	Leigh v. Cole, 6 Cox , 329	6
Lawrence, 4 C. & P. 231.....	455	Lembro, Cro. & El. 14	1017
Lawson, 1 Q. B. 486	135	Le Merchand, Leach , 300	215
Lawson, 2 Esp. 262	814	Le Mott, Kel. 42	453
Laxton, 4 Cox , 149	250	Leng, 1 Fost. & F. 77	244
Laycock, 1 Lew. 132; 4 C. & P.		Lennard, Leach , 90.....	738
326	1033	Lennox, 2 Lew. 268.....	94
Layer, Leach , 559.....	194	Leonard, 10 Mod. 429	34
Layer, 6 St. Tr. 259	226	Leonard, Den. 304	532
Layer, 6 St. Tr. 330	319, 333	Leper, Andr. 209	268
Layer, 6 St. Tr. 314.....	322	Lesingham, Tho. Raym. 205.....	948
Layer, Leach , 308	326	Lesley, Bell , 220	830
Layer, 6 St. Tr. 246	335	Lever, 1 Show. 261	925
Layton, 1 Salk. 106.....	35	Leverick v. Mercer, 22 L. J. M. C.
Layton, 1 Salk. 353, 450.....	1116	81	27
Layton, 2 Salk. 450	1130	Levet, Cro. Car. 538	774
Lea, 2 Moo. 8	132, 272	Levi v. Levi, 6 Cox , 239	1050
Leach, Cro. Jac. 167	1011	Levy, 2 Stark. 468	1058
Leach v. Simpson, 7 D. P. C. 511 :		Levy v. Edwards, 1 C. & P. 40 ..11,	825
19, 213		Levy, 2 Stark. 458	173
Leader, 2 Russ. C. M. 122.....	398	Levy, 7 Cox , 73	244
Leake, 2 Nev. & M. 583	1257	Levy, 4 C. & P. 141.....	380
Lear, 1 Russ. C. M. 638	769	Levy, Leach , 173	661
Lechemere, 4 Jur. 656	101	Levy, Russ. & Ry. 7	727
Ledbitter, 3 Car. & K. 108.....	213	Leward v. Basley, 1 Ld. Raym.
Ledbitter, 1 Moo. 76	405	62	822
Leddington, 9 C. & P. 79	758	Lewen, 2 Lew. 161	256
Ledwick, Supp. to Viner. V. 380 ..	1025	Lewen, 1 Sid. 405.....	967
Ledwith v. Catchpole, Cald. 291 ..	12	Lewis, 7 Cox , 406.....	52
Lediard, Say. 242.....	943	Lewis, 6 C. & P. 161..197, 202, 751, 790
Lediard, Say. 112.....	1135	Lewis, 4 Esp. 225	226
Lee, 6 C. & P. 536	84	Lewis, 2 C. & P. 628	456
Lee, 12 Mod. 514	137	Lewis, 1 Moo. 372.....	505
Lee, Russ. & Ry. 361	184	Lewis, Say. 205	614
Lee, Leach , 258	221, 666	Lewis, Leach , 451	654, 660
Lee, 2 Moo. & Rob. 281	650	Lewis, Deare . & B. 182	782
Lee, 3 Cox , 80	674	Lewis, 1 Car. & K. 419	786, 819
Lee, Leach , 416	717	Lewis, 9 C. & P. 523	795
Lee, 1 Lew. 149.....	910	Lewis, 2 Str. 835	896
Lee, 12 Mod. 514	929	Lewis, Str. 70	975
Lee, 2 Russ. C. M. 650	1025	Ley, 1 Lew. 239	119
Lee, 2 Stark. Ev. 324.....	1069	Ley, 1 Lew. 133.....	256
Lee, 5 Esp. 123.....	1136	Leyton, Cro. Car. 584.....	1265
Lee, Exp. 7 Jur. 441	136	Light, Deare . & B. 332; 27 L. J.
Lee v. Gansel, Comp. 1	753	M. C. 1	12, 825
Lee v. Secombe, Cro. El. 297	974	Lilly, 7 Mod. 63	813
Leech, 7 Cox , 100.....	61	Lincoln, Russ. & Ry. 4211007, 1015
Leech, 3 Stark. 71	498	Lincoln, 4 B. & C. 676	1283
Leech, 25 L. J. M. C. 77	536	Lincoln, Mayor of, 8 Ad. & El. 65 :
Leech, 2 Man. & Ry. 119	1010	1285, 1290
Leech, 6 Mod. 145	1293	Lincombe, 2 Ch. Rep. 214.....	1272

Table of Cases.

xl v

	PAGE
Lindsay, 14 East , 317	1280
Line, 2 Cox , 56	680
Line, 1 Car. & K. 393	833, 839
Linford v. Fitzroy, 18 L. J. M. C. 108	21
Lingate, 1 Phil. Ev. 113	196
Linkfield Street, 2 T. R. 514	1253
Lippiatt, 1 Cox , 56	87
Lister, Dearsi. & B. 118	494
Lister, 1 B. & P. 427	1004
Lithgo, East , P. C. 357	458
Little, 1 Lew. 261	477
Little, Burr. 610	1316
Little Bolton v. Reg. 12 L. J. 104 ..	1252
Littleton, 9 C. & P. 671	166
Liverpool, Mayor of, 3 East , 86 ...	1253
Llandillo, 2 T. R. 232	1260
Lloyd, 6 C. & P. 193	189
Lloyd, 4 C. & P. 233	207
Lloyd, 1 Cox , 51	244
Lloyd, 4 B. & Adol. 135	287
Lloyd, 1 C. & P. 301	770
Lloyd, Cunn. 84	1075
Lloyd, 4 Esp. 200	1240
Lloyd, 1 Campb. 260	1250
Lock, 1 Freem. 523	1121
Locker, 5 Esp. 107	183, 185, 1065
Lockett, Leach , 94, 95	660, 673
Locost, Kel. 30	453, 465
Loddon Bridge, 1 Salk. 368	1279
Lodie and Arnold, 1 Salk. 458	1245
Loggen, 1 Str. 73	1075
Lolley, Russ. & Ry. 237	860
London, Mayor of, 5 Q. B. 555	167, 210, 245
London, Mayor of, Dav. & M. 486 : ..	245
London, Mayor of, 1 Cr. M. & R. 1 : ..	285
Lone, Str. 920	1308
Long, 7 C. & P. 314	15
Long, 6 C. & P. 179	189
Long, 4 C. & P. 398	239, 766, 767
Long, Cro. El. 490	396
Long, 5 Rep. 120	779
Longbottom, 3 Cox , 439	768
Longbottom, 1 Barnard. 374 ..	1006, 1023
Longden, Russ. & Ry. 228	747
Longmead, Leach , 694	505
Longstreeth, 1 Moo. 137	370, 377
Lonsdale, 2 Cox , 222	674
Lookup, 3 Burr. 1901	94, 1043
Loom, 1 Moo. 160	408
Loose, Bell , 259	132, 395, 403
Lopez, Dearsi. & B. 525	56
Lopez, 4 B. & Ald. 141	1161
Lord, Ex p. 4 Dowl. & L. 405	291
Loughton, 3 Smith , 575	1272
Loveden, 8 T. R. 615	102
Lovelace, Lady, Comb. 260	1129
Lovell, 1 Moo. & Rob. 349	349
Lovell, 2 Moo. & Rob. 236	489
Lovell, Leach , 248	676
Lovell, 2 Moo. & Rob. 39	791
Lovett, 9 C. & P. 462 ...	176, 1141, 1155
Lowe, 7 Mod. 411	1309
Luckhurst, 23 L. J. M. C. 18 ; Dearsi. 245	191
Lucy, Noy. 87	1267
Luellin, 12 Mod. 445	1307
Luke, 2 Russ. C. M. 83	414

	PAGE
Luther v. Holland, Lat. 132	1039
Luxborough, 1 D. P. C. 527	1270
Lyde v. Russel, 1 B. & Adol. 394	426
Lynall v. Longbotham, 2 Wils. 36 : ..	1189
Lynch, 5 C. & P. 324	763
Lyun, 4 Barnard. 242	826
Lynn, Mayor of, 1 Leon. 205	1077
Lynn, Mayor of, 2 T. R. 733	1196
Lyon, 9 C. & P. 550	84
Lyon, 3 Burr. 1461	111
Lyon, 1 C. & P. 528	262
Lyon, 1 Fost. & F. 54	484
Lyon, Russ. & Ry. 255	654
Lyon, Ry. & Moo. 151	1264
Lyons, Leach , 9 C. & P. 555	182
Lyons, Leach , 185	457
Lyons, Car. & M. 217	540
Lyons, Bell , 38	566
Lyons, Leach , 597	681
Lyons v. De Pass, 11 Ad. & El. 326 ; 3 Per. & D. 177	377

M.

Mabel, 9 C. & P. 474	815
Macajah, 2 Barn. 24	1006
M'Allister v. Haden, 2 Camp. 438 : ..	1189
Mabbett, 5 Cox , 339	766
MacArthur, Peake , 155	970
Macarthy, Car. & M. 265	51
Macarthy, 2 Stark. Ev. 252	199
Macarthy, 2 Car. & K. 379	385
Macarthy, 2 Ld. Raym. 1179	1053
Macauley, Leach , 287	433
M'Clarens, 3 Cox , 425	73
M'Cloughau v. Clayton, Holt , 478 : ..	8
M'Connell, 2 Moo. 290	371
Macculley, 2 Moo. 34	409
Macdaniel, Fost. 121	433
Macdaniel, East , 333	759
Macdaniel, Leach , 44	1052
M'Dermott, Russ. & Ry. 356	793, 798
M'Donagh, Carr. Sup. 23	397
Macdonald, Fost. 59	308
Macdonald, 31 L. J. M. C. 67 ; Leigh & Cave , 85	487
Macdonald, 3 Burr. 1645 ; 2 Cox , 10	1185
Macdonnell, 5 Cox , 153	447
Macirone, Peake , 12	1028
M'Gavarran, 6 Cox , 164	814, 821, 841
M'Gregor, Russ. & Ry. 23 ; Leach , 932 ; 3 Bos. & P. 106	497
M'Gregor, 1 Car. & K. 429	548
M'Grouther, Fost. Cr. 43	313
M'Guire, 2 Ld. Raym. 1179	608
M'Guire, East , P. C. 1002	652
Machynlleth, 2 B. & C. 164 ..	1282, 1291
M'Intyre, 2 Cox , 379	760
Mackalley, 9 Rep. 47	80
Mackalley, 9 Rep. 65	753, 754
M'Kay, 1 Moo. 130	649
M'Kenzie, Russ. & Ry. 429	28, 505
M'Kenzie, 3 Burr. 1922	895
M'Keron, 5 T. R. 316	1013
Mackerell, 4 C. & P. 448	577
Mackintosh, Str. 308	36

	PAGE		PAGE
Mackintosh, East , P. C. 942	673	Marley, 2 Russ. C. M. 137	408
Mackintosh, 32 L. T. 146	891	Marner, Car. & M. 628	630, 991
Macklin, 5 Cox , 216	402	Marriott, 8 C. & P. 425	746
Maclelin, 2 Lew. 225	150	Marrow, Ca. Temp. Hardw. 174:
Macleod, 2 East , 202	163	1113, 1125, 1128
Malony, 9 Cox , 26	226, 786	Marsden, Moo. & Malk. 349.....	174
M'Loughlin, 8 C. & P. 635	792	Marsden, 4 M. & S. 164	1151
M'Michael, 8 C. & P. 758	1245	Marsh, 2 Sir Wm. Bl. 806	25
M'Millan, Russ. & Ry. 333	780	Marsh, 6 Ad. & El. 236	43
M'Millan, 1 Cox , 41	738	Marsh, 1 Jur. 38	66
M'Naghten, 10 Cl. & F. 200:		Marsh, 5 Rep. 111	292
119, 250		Marsh, Leach , 345	375
M'Namee, 1 Moo. C. C. 368	386	Marsh, Den. 505; 19 L. J. M. C. 12:
M'Phane, Car. & M. 212.....	800	533, 617
M'Pherson, 26 L. J. M. C. 134;		Marsh, 2 Keb. 539.....	610
Dearsl. & B. 197	471	Marsh, 3 Mod. 66.....	632
M'Rue, 8 C. & P. 691	832	Marsh, 1 Nev. & P. 157	1319
Madan, Leach , 223	952	Marsh v. Coppock, 9 C. & P. 480:
Madden, 1 Moo. C. C. 277	97	153, 154
Maddock, 2 Ro. Rep. 107	610	Marshall, 8 C. & P. 571	116
Maddock, 2 Russ. C. M. 500	662	Marshall, 13 East , 322	140
Madge, 9 C. & P. 89	398	Marshall, 24 L. J. M. C. 242	141
Maddy, 1 Ventr. 158	744	Marshall, 1 Car. & K. 447.....	208
Madox, Russ. & Ry. 92	382, 481	Marshall, 1 Lew. 66.....	247
Mahon, O'Gorman, 4 Ad. & El.		Marshall, Russ. & Ry. 76	661
575.....	138, 827	Marshall, 2 Jur. 254.....	973
M'Quin, 1 Cox , 34	681	Martin, Den. 398; 18 L. J. M. C.
Major, Leach , 772	445	137	172
Major, Dearsl. 13.....	110, 1042	Martin, 3 Cox , 56	172
Makin, Russ. & Ry. 867	539	Martin, 2 Camp. 100.....	217
Malins, 8 C. & P. 242	169	Martin, 18 L. J. M. C. 137; 2 Car.
Malland, Str. 818.....	946	& K. 950	275
Mallet, 2 Russ. C. M. 867; 1 Cox ,		Martin, Russ. & Ry. 196	359
336.....	887, 892	Martin, Leach , 171	390
Mallinson, 16 Q. B. 367 ..893, 894,	897	Martin, Russ. & Ry. 103.....	458
Mallison, In re , 2 Lew. 132	253	Martin, 2 Camp. 268.....	611
Malmsbury, Mayor of, 8 Mod. 55 ..	136	Martin, 1 Lew. 104	651
Manchester, Mayor of, 28 L. J.		Martin, 1 Moo. 483.....	684, 687
M. C. 65	105	Martin, 7 C. & P. 549	685
Mandy, 2 Ro. Rep. 427	989	Martin, Russ. & Ry. 324.....	711
Mankletow, Dearsl. 159	846	Martin, Leach , 923	726
Manlove, Leach , 662	960	Martin, 3 C. & P. 211	766
Man, Godb. 383	925	Martin, 5 C. & P. 128	779
Mann, 6 Cox , 456	12	Martin, 6 C. & P. 562	835
Mann, 4 M. & S. 336	269, 1268	Martin, 9 C. & P. 215	840,
Mann v. Owen, 9 B. & C. 295	1219	841, 1194
Manners, 7 C. & P. 801	730	Martin, Dav. & M. 386	1269
Manney, 12 Rep. 101	970	Martin v. Armstrong, 3 C. & P. 473:	820
Manning, 2 Car. & K. 903....72, 75, 82		Martin v. Reg. 3 Nev. & P. 472; 8 Ad.
Manning, Den. 467	160	& El. 481.....	532
Manning, Dearsl. 21	379	Marton, Andr. 279	1265
Manning, Tho. Raym. 212744, 765		Mason, Russ. & Ry. 419	434
Mansell, Dearsl. 375	292	Mason, Dowl. & B. N. P. C. 22:
Mansell, Dy. 128	749	511, 513
Mansell v. Reg., 26 L. J. M. C. 137;		Mason, 2 T. R. 581; Leach , 487..531, 532
27 L. J. M. C. 4	154, 156	Mason, 8 Mod. 74; East , P. C. 796:	549
Mansfield, Car. & M. 140.....392, 546		Mason, East , 239	744
Manton, Palm. 383	967	Mason, 2 Car. & K. 622.....993, 1169
Manwaring, Dearsl. & B. 132	865	Massey, 6 M. & S. 108	28
Manzani, 2 Fost. & F. 64	169	Massingham, 1 Moo. 257.....	545
March, 1 Moo. 182	567, 568	Master, Den. 332; 2 Car. & K. 30:
March, 1 Car. & K. 496	820	275, 494
Marcus, 2 Car. & K. 386.....	655	Master, Ex p. , 9 D. P. C. 194.....	37
Margets, Leach , 930.....	460	Masters, Say. 122.....	1133
Marks, 3 East , 157	34, 349	Mastin, 6 C. & P. 346	768
Marks v. Benjamin, 2 Moo. & Rob.		Matthews v. Biddulph, 4 Sc. 54; 1
225	150	Dowl. N. S. 216	530, 531
Marlborough, Duke of, Ex p. 5		Matthews, Den. 596	74, 262
Q. B. 555; Dav. & M. 720	137	Matthews, 5 T. R. 162.....	95

Table of Cases.

xlvi

	PAGE		PAGE
Mitchell, 2 Fost. & F. 44.....	675	Mercier, Leach , 183	117
Matthews, 1 Ch. Rep. 571	100	Meredith, 8 C. & P. 589	841
Matthews, 4 Cox , 73	224	Merionethsh., 6 Q. B. 313	1286
Matthews, 9 St. Tr. 680	309	Merionethsh., 6 Q. B. 348	1292
Matthews, East , P. C. 58; Dearsi. & B. 826	526	Merriman v. Hund. of Chippenham, East , P. C. 709.....	435
Matthews, 3 Leon. 200977, 989, 1002		Merry, 2 Cox , 240	908, 911
Matthews, 9 St. Tr. 979	1153	Merry v. Green, 7 Mees. & W. 623..	335
Maude, 11 L. J. M. C. 120	807	Messenger, Kel. 70	315
Maudsley, 1 Lew. 85	174	Metcalfe, 3 Cox , 220	160, 162
Maudsley, 1 Lew. 73	207	Metcalfe, 1 Moo. C. C. 433.....	384, 420
Maudsley, 1 Lew. 51	1070	Meynell, 1 Lew. 222.....	196
Mawbey, 6 T. R. 619 .. 270, 945, 1052, 1062		Miard, 1 Cox , 22	445
Mawgan, 3 Nev. & P. 502 1267, 1286		Michael, Russ. & Ry. 291	727, 751
Mawgridge, Kel. 128.....	744	Michel, 11 Mod. 261	35
May, 1 Hawk. c. 43, s. 5.....	74	Micklethwaite, 4 Burr. 2522	1270
May, 1 Mod. 149	98	Middleditch, Den. 92	288, 448
May, Leigh & Carr , 13	487	Middlemass, 6 Mod. 212	1095
May, East , 796	548	Middlesex, Governor of House of Correction, 2 Nev. & M. 138	26
May, 5 Cox , 176.....	906, 909	Middlesex, Inhabitants of, 1 B. & Ald. 64	269, 1271, 1289
May, Leach , 192	1018	Middlesex, Inhabitants of, Andr. 101:	1288
Mayhew, 6 C. & P. 315.....	1025	Middlesex, Justices of, 3 Nev. & M. 111	278
Mayhew v. Locke, 7 Taunt. 63	187	Middlesex, Justices of, 2 B. & Adol. 201	1276
Maynard, Russ. & Ry. 240	261	Middlesex, Sheriff, In re, 11 Ad. & El. 273.....	31
Maynard, East , 501	461	Middlesex Special Commission, 6 C. & P. 90	44
Maynard, 1 Ventr. 182.....999, 1006		Middleship, 5 Cox , 275	766
Mayne v. Fletcher, 3 B. & C. 982 ..	139	Midham, 3 Burr. 1720	277
Mayo, Andr. 209	268	Midville, 4 Q. B. 140	1258
Mayor, Com. 94	614	Milbourne, 1 Lew. 251	368
Mazagora, Russ. & Ry. 291	648	Mildmay, 5 B. & Adol. 254	299
Mazeau, 9 C. & P. 677.....	669	Mildrone, Leach , 412	178
Meade, 1 Burr. 452	36	Miles v. Collett, 3 M. & P. 242	19
Meade, 3 Dowl. & Ry. 304.....	64	Miles, Dougl. 284	139, 189, 1149
Meade, 4 Jur. 1014	134	Miles, 1 Cox , 351	394
Meade, 2 B. & C. 605	207	Miles, 6 Jur. 243	821
Meade, 1 Lew. 294.....	257	Mill, 7 C. & P. 146	188
Meade, 3 Ch. Cr. L. 891.....	385	Millar, 7 C. & P. 665	426
Meade, 4 C. & P. 535	420	Millard, Russ. & Ry. 245	652
Meade, 2 Stark. 205.....753, 771		Millard, Dearsi. 166	984
Meade, 3 Burr. 1335	1201	Millen, 3 Cox , 507.....	191
Meade v. Young, 4 T. R. 28	662	Miller, 1 Cox , 466.....	200
Meadham, 2 Car. & K. 633.....	905	Miller, 2 Moo. 240	468
Meadows, Fost. 76.....	164	Miller, 2 Sir Wm. Bl. 881.....	969
Meadows, 2 Jur. 718.....	245	Miller, Noy. 128.....	970
Meadows, 1 Car. & K. 399; Dearsi. 161	846	Miller, Yelv. 720	976
Meakin, 7 C. & P. 297.....	247	Millington, 1 C. & P. 83.....	256
Medland, 5 Cox , 292.....	371	Millis, 10 CL. & F. 534	865
Medley, 6 C. & P. 292.....	1239	Mills, 4 Nev. & M. 67.....	34
Medlor, 2 Show. 36	1190	Mills, Dearsi. & B. 205	529
Meek, 9 C. & P. 513.....	987	Milne, 2 B. & Ald. 606.....	169
Meeres, 1 Show. 53	453	Milne, East , P. C. 602.....	421
Megson, 9 C. & P. 418	205, 836	Milne, 2 Fost. & F. 10	1034
Meigh, 7 Cox , 401.....	685	Milner, 2 Car. & K. 310.....41, 57, 631
Meilham,	373	Milner, 4 Cox , 275.....	1226, 1232
Melen v. Andrews, Moo. & M. 336..	208	Milton, Moo. & M. 107	825
Meller, 3 Inst. 167	1017	Minnes, Bull. N. P. 243.....	1030
Melling, 12 Mod. 128	268, 269	Minton, 2 Russ. C. M. 760.....	295
Melling, 5 Mod. 349.....	1041	Minton, East , 102	563
Mellish, Russ. & Ry. 80.....489, 492		Mitchell, 2 Q. B. 636	57
Mellor, Russ. & Ry. 144.....	59	Mitchell, 6 Cox , 82	220
Mellor, Dearsi. & B. 468	161	Mitchell, Den. & P. 468.....	441
Mellor, 2 Russ. C. M. 883	200	Mitchell, 2 C. & P. 451	626
Mellor, 2 D. P. C. 173	908	Mitchell, Den. 282.....	663
Mellor, 1 B. & Adol. 32	1257
Mence, Car. & M. 234	1228
Mendez, Str. 473	893
Mercer, 6 Jur. 243	835, 836
Merceron, 2 Stark. 366	200, 945

	PAGE		PAGE
Mitchell, 7 C. & P. 800	887	Morley, Lord, 1 Sid. 277; Ld.
Moah, 7 Cox, 60	495	Raym. 1496	748
Moah, 25 L. J. M. C. 66	502	Morley, 1 Y. & Jer. 221	635
Moah, Dearsl. & B. 550	635	Morley v. Pragnell, Cro. Car. 510 :	1238
Moate, 3 B. & Adol. 237	163	Morphew, 2 M. & S. 602	210
Moffatt, Leach , 431	660, 666	Morrell v. Martin, 4 Se. New Rep.
Mogg, 4 C. & P. 361	591	300	816
Mohun, Lord, 1 Salk. 104	33	Morris v. Wise, 2 Fost. & F. 51 ..	7
Mohun, Lord, Holt, Ca. 479	748	Morris, Leach , 1096	82
Moir, 4 Cox, 279	225	Morris, 5 Cox, 205	89
Moir, 7 C. & P. 179	759	Morris, Str. 901	93
Moland, 2 Moo. 276	76, 79	Morris, Leach , 109	95
Mole, 1 Car. & K. 417	364, 365	Morris, 2 Burr. 1189	267
Monday, 5 Rep. 99	988	Morris, 9 C. & P. 349	396
Money, Greaves, Cr. L. (1861) 80 ..	402	Morris, 9 C. & P. 89	423, 424
Money v. Leach, Sir Wm. Bl. 555 ..	3	Morris, Leach , 435	678
Monkhouse, 1 Cox, 55	748	Morris, 2 Burr. 1189	1033
Montague, 4 B. & C. 598	1297	Morris, 1 B. & Adol. 441	1249, 1250
Monteth, Leach , 702	438	Morrison, 28 L. J. M. C. 210; Bell ,
Montgomery, Lord, 10 Mod. 334 :		158	390
	33, 34	Morrison, 5 Cox, 186	563
Montrion, 9 Cox, 27	741	Morrison, 8 C. & P. 22	774
Moody, 5 C. & P. 23	991	Morrison, 2 Cox, 489	871
Moore, Str. 916	121	Morse, 8 C. & P. 605	203
Moore, 7 C. & P. 270	182	Mortlock, 7 Q. B. 459	935
Moore, 2 Lew. 37	184	Morton, 1 D. P. C. 543	101
Moore, 1 Cox, 59	185	Morton, 2 Moo. & Rob. 514	188
Moore, Den. & P. 522; 21 L. J.		Morton, East, P. C. 755	220, 666
M. C. 199	193	Morton, Russ. & Ry. 19	863
Moore, 1 Lew. 141	237	Moseley, 31 L. J. M. C. 24; 9 Cox,
Moore, 6 Jur. 750	248	16; Leigh & Cave , 92	76
Moore, 30 L. J. M. C. 77	367	Moses, 1 Lew. 196	410
Moore, East, P. C. 679; Leach ,		Moses, 7 C. & P. 423	654
314	375	Mosey, Leach , 265	194
Moore, Leach , 335	434	Mosley, 1 Moo. 97	204
Moore, 1 Fost. & F. 73	681, 686	Mosley, 1 Lew. 77	780
Moore, 1 Moo. 122; 1 Car. & K.		Moss, 26 L. J. M. C. 9; Dearsl. &
295	737	B. 104	530, 619
Moore, 3 Car. & K. 319	758	Mothersell, Str. 93	217
Moore, 6 Cox, 137	769	Mott, Crown, C. C. 103	457
Moore, 2 Mod. 128	842	Mott, East, P. C. 1075	591
Moore, Tho. Jones , 159	1169	Mott, 2 C. & P. 521	1054
Moore, 2 Lew. 179	1181	Mouncer, East, P. C. 629	79
Moore, Leach , 575	1231	Mountford, 6 C. & P. 96	44
Moore, 3 B. & Adol. 284	1241	Mountford, 1 Moo. 441	803
Moore, 12 Mod. 235	1242	Moyle, East, P. C. 1076	591
Moore, Carth. 161	1370	Mudie, 1 Moo. & Rob. 128..969, 991,	1025
Moorhouse, Cald. 554	942	Mucklow, 1 Moo. 160	321
Moors, 6 East , 419	215	Mucklow, 1 Moo. 160	371
Moraira, 5 Vin. Supp. 97	134	Mude, Cro. El. 63	1263
Moreau, 11 Q. B. 1028	1032	Mullins, 3 Cox, 526	248, 345
Morfit, Russ. & Ry. 307	382	Mulreaty, 1 Russ. C. M. 699	873
Morgan, 7 C. & P. 642	34	Munday, Leach , 850	508
Morgan, East, P. C. 12	94	Munoos, 7 Mod. 815; Str. 1127 :
Morgan, Dougl. 314	146	516, 531
Morgan, Leach , 54	178	Munton, 3 C. & P. 498	1031
Morgan, 1 Moo. & Rob. 34 ..	215, 241	Muntz, 2 Jur. 538	143, 1150
Morgan, 11 East , 457	286	Murdock, 21 L. J. M. C. 22; Den.
Morgan, Dearsl. 395	370	& P. 298	501
Morgan, 1 Moo. & Rob. 434	448	Mure v. Kaye, 4 Taunt. 34	12
Morgan, 6 Cox, 107	977, 1021	Murlis, Moo. & Malk. 515	228
Morgan, 1 Cox, 109	996	Murphy, Leach , 430	51, 839
Morgan, Str. 1049	1001	Murphy, 8 C. & P. 276	173
Morgan v. Earl of Abergavenny, 8		Murphy, 8 C. & P. 297	221
C. & B. 768	413	Murphy, 8 C. & P. 307	231, 239
Morgan v. Luckup, Str. 1044	149	Murphy, 6 Cox, 340	477
Morice, 13 East , 270	140	Murphy, 10 St. Tr. 183	656
Morison v. Kelly, 1 Sir Wm. Bl.		Murphy, 6 C. & P. 103	764
885	277	Murphy, 8 C. & P. 297..1066, 1067, 1069

Table of Cases.

xlix

	PAGE
Murray, 1 Jur. 37	141, 1150
Murray, 9 Jur. 410	292
Murray, Leach , 344	385
Murray, 1 C. & P. 545	493
Murray, 1 Fost. & F. 80	967
Murray, 1 Ch. Burn , 817	1053
Murray, 1 Dowl. & L. 100; 7 Q. B. 700	296, 865, 866
Murray v. Reg. 9 Jur. 596; 1 Cox , 202	287
Murrow, 1 Moo. 456	807
Murry, East , 496	458
Muscot, 10 Mod. 193	183, 973
Musgrave, 1 Lew. 112	679
Musgrave v. Medez, 19 Ves. 652: ..	981
Musson, 6 B. & C. 74	940
Myddleton, In re , 7 T. R. 739	63
Myne, 19 Vin. Ab. Riot.	1096
Myers, 6 T. R. 26	940
Myott, 6 Cox , 408	932
Mytton, Cald. 536	942

N.

Nailor, Dearsl. & B. 248	770
Naimie, 4 Cox , 115	626
Nanng v. Elliot, Cro. Jac. 212: ..	150, 170
Napper, 1 Moo. 44	464, 476
Nash, 4 B. & Ald. 295	37
Nash, Den. & P. 493	688
Nash, 1 Russ. C. M. 574	809
Nash, Russ. & Ry. 386	907
Naylock, Supp. to Viner , V. 379..	1025
Naylor, 2 St. Tr. 265	1173
Neale, 9 C. & P. 431	354, 1086
Needham v. Smith, 2 Vern. 461: ..	1029
Nehuff, 1 Salk. 151	615, 616
Neil, 2 C. & P. 485	1238
Nelmes, 6 C. & P. 347	94
Nesham v. Armstrong, 1 B. & Ald. 146	584
Netherthong, 2 B. & Ald. 179	1252
Nettle, 1 Hawk. c. 60, s. 5	896
Nettleton, 1 Moo. 259	486, 491
Neville, Peake , 91	1239
Neville, 6 Cox , 69
Neville, 2 B. & Ald. 299
Newcastle, JJ. 1 B. & C. 933	1184
Newhouse, 22 L. J. Q. B. 127	1162
Newland, Leach , 311	183, 652
Newland, 2 Cox , 283	410
Newland, 4 Jur. 322	1107
Newall, 6 Cox , 21	1037
Newdigate, Comb. 10	1105
Newens, Str. 1104	1027
Newill, 1 Moo. 326	562
Newill, 1 Moo. 458	567, 580
Newill, 5 Cox , 162	1050
New Sarum, 7 Q. B. 941	1280
Newman, Dearsl. 85	219, 267, 1147
Newman, 2 Russ. C. M. 6	363
Newman, 3 Car. & K. 252	1159
Newton, 24 L. J. Q. B. 246	34, 292
Newton, 18 L. J. M. C. 201	35, 164
Newton, 2 Moo. & Rob. 503	45
Newton, 1 Car. & K. 469 ..	67, 124, 981
Newton, Str. 413	136, 944

	PAGE
Newton, 1 Fost. & F. 641	205, 212
Newton, 3 Car. & K. 86; 18 L. J. M. C. 201	259
Newton, Car. Cr. L. 285	435
Newton, 3 Keb. 388	686
Newton, 2 Moo. 59	673, 688
Newton v. Harland, 1 Man. & Gr. 644	1111
Newton, In re , 24 L. J. C. P. 148..	39
Newton v. Rowe, 13 L. J. C. P. 73; 7 Sc. 543	39
New Windsor, 1 Smith , 148	1292
Nibbs, 1 Moo. C. C. 25	392
Niccolls, Str. 1227	271, 1072
Nicholas, 2 Car. & K. 246	834, 839
Nicholas, 2 Cox , 136	839
Nicholas, 7 C. & P. 538	890
Nicholls, 8 Mod. 337	136, 944
Nicholls, 2 Russ. C. M. 838	196
Nicholls, 1 Fost. & F. 51	546
Nicholls, 9 C. & P. 269	800
Nicholis, Russ. & Ry. 130	821
Nicholls, 1 B. & Adol. 21	987
Nicholls, 13 East , 412	1067
Nicholls, 2 Ld. Ken. 512	1115
Nicholletts, 6 Nev. & M. 827	1319
Nicholson v. Hardwick, 5 C. & P. 495	867
Nicholson, Ex p. 4 Jur. 506	108
Nicholson, 8 D. P. C. 422: 124, 162,	246
Nicholson, Leach , 610	374
Nicholson, 1 Lew. 300	573
Nicholson, East , 818	613
Nicholson, East , 346	778
Nickless, 8 C. & P. 757	906
Nisbett, 8 Jur. 107	3
Nield, 6 East , 417	1210
Nixon, 7 C. & P. 442	451
Noakes, 5 C. & P. 326	181, 1215
Noakes, 5 C. & P. 600	228
Noakes, 2 Car. & K. 620	499
Noel, 6 C. & P. 336	229
Norden, Fost. 129; East , 666	529
Norfolk, JJ., East, P. C. 383	888
Norman, 1 Wils. 7	134
Norman, Car. & M. 501	496
Norman v. Beaumont, Willes , 484: ..	161
Norris, 9 C. & P. 241	584
Norris, 2 Ld. Keny. 300	1047
North, 8 Cox , 433	380
North, East , 1021	559, 563
North, 1 Str. 140	1096
North Collingham, 1 B. & C. 578..	463
Northampton, Earl of, 12 Rep. 132	1089
Northampton, Mayor of, Str. 421..	1131
Northamptonshire, 2 M. & S. 262: 275, 278
Norton, Russ. & Ry. 510	89
Norton, 8 C. & P. 675	443, 446
Norton, 8 C. & P. 196	532
Norval, 1 Cox , 95	378
Norwich, Str. 177	1279, 1287, 1289
Norwood, East, P. C. 337	862
Nott, 7 Jur. 621	67, 267
Nott, 9 Q. B. 768	267
Nott, Car. & M. 288	933, 997
Nottingham, 4 East , 208	58
Nottinghamshire, 2 Lew. 112	1289

	PAGE
Nottingham Journal, 9 D. P. C.
1042	135
Nottingham, J.J., Say . 216.....	944
Nowell, Yelv. 81	1115
Nunn, 1 New. S. C. 49	106
Nunn, 10 Mod. 186	928, 1144
Nunn, 8 B. & C. 644	1217
Nunez, Str. 1043.....	1027, 1033
Nureys, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 216	1043
Nutbrown, Fost. 76	457
Nute, 2 Russ. 832	194
Nutt, 1 Russ. C. M. 234.....	1090
Nutt, 1 Barnard. 306.....	1146
Nutt, 4 T. R. 127.....	1149

O.

Oakley, 4 B. & Adol. 307.....	1112, 1117
Oates, 1 Moo. 175	109, 256
Oates, Deardsl. 459.....	524
O'Brian, 7 Mod. 378; Str. 1144.....	635
O'Brian, Den. 93.....	779, 780, 786
O'Brien v. Reg. 4 Cox , 398.....	456
O'Carney, Tho. Jones , 180	48
Ockley, 1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 21	966
O'Coigley, 26 St. Tr. 1353	226
O'Connell v. Reg. 11 Cl. & F. 155..
96, 152, 172, 262, 288, 898, 1064,
1068, 1071
O'Connor, 5 Q. B. 16	63
Oddy, 20 L. J. M. C. 198.....	546, 679
Odgers, 2 Moo. & Rob. 479	123, 804
O'Neill, 1 Car. & K. 138.....	116
Offord, 5 C. & P. 168.....	250
Ogden, 6 C. & P. 631	717
Ogilvie, 2 C & P. 230	95
Oglethorpe, Lady, 11 Mod. 114	320
Okey, 8 Mod. 45	136, 944
Oldcastle's Accomplices, Fost. 217..	313
Oldfield, 2 Russ. C. M. 376.....	237
Oldfield, B. & Adol. 659	1189
Oldham, Den. & P. 472; 21 L. J.
M. C. 134.....	472, 1194
Oldroyd, Russ. & Ry. 889	230, 272
Old Malton, 4 B. & Ald. 478	1271
Oliver, 30 L. J. M. C. 12; Bell , 287:
263, 828
Oliver, Leach , 1072	379
Omant, 6 Cox , 466.....	268
O'Mealy v. Newell, 8 East , 364..	934, 981
Oneby, Str. 766	744
Only v. Gee, 30 L. J. M. C. 222....	1188
O'Neill
Onslowe, Dy. 248	999, 1043
Opie, 8 Cox , 312.....	871
Orbell, 6 Mod. 42	121, 1053
Orchard, 8 C. & P. 565.....	68
Orchard, 3 Cox , 348	1184
Orgill, 9 C. & P. 80.....	861, 863
Orm, 1 Sess. Ca. 160.....	1076
Orman, 1 Jur. 1115.....	492
Orme, 1 Ld. R. 486	1133
Orrell, 1 Moo. & Rob. 468	166
Orrery, Earl of, 8 Mod. 96	33
Osborn, 7 C. & P. 799	50
Osborn, 4 Burr. 2126	111
Osborn, 8 C. & P. 113.....	207, 210
Osborn, Car. & M. 622.....	233, 836
Osborn, 5 Jur. 200	382
Osborn, 3 Burr. 196.....	613

	PAGE
Osborn, 2 Burr. 1967	613
Osborn, Com. Rep. 240	1212
Osmer, 819; 5 East , 304	814
Osmer v. Veitch, 1 Fost. & F. 317..	819
Ossulston, 3 Dougl. 37	1053
Oswestry, 6 M. & S. 361	1279
Ouseley, 6 Jur. 193	101
Ouseley, 6 Jur. 62.....	102
Overton, Deardsl. 308	220
Overton, Car. & M. 655	272, 1013
Overton, 2 Rose, B. L. 257	967, 973
Overton v. Reg. 4 Q. B. 83.....	1000
Owen, 9 C. & P. 83.....	35, 182, 197, 276
Owen, 1 Moo. 96.....	79, 539
Owen, 1 Moo. 118	96
Owen, 9 C. & P. 238.....	198
Owen, 4 C. & P. 236.....	251
Owen, Leach , 572.....	375, 474
Owen, 1 Lew. 35.....	455
Owen, 1 Moo. 205	592
Oxford, 9 C. & P. 525..	119, 250, 325, 737
Oxford, Earl of, 1 Chanc. Rep. 1 ..	1001
Oxford, J.J. 1 B. & Adol. 289, 297..	1274
Oxfordshire, Inhabitants, 1 B. &
Adol. 289, 297, 587	1274
Oxfordshire, Inhabitants, 16 East ,
223	269, 1271, 1291, 1292
Oxfordshire, J.J. 4 Q. B. 177; 4 B.
& C. 194	1274
Oxley, 3 Car. & K. 317	1018
Oxley v. Flower, Selv. N. P. 920 ..	819

P.

Pack, 6 T. R. 374	1209
Packard, Car. & M. 236	751
Packer, 2 Russ. C. M. 876.....	199, 213
Packer, East, P. C. 653	392
Paddington Vestry, 9 B. & C. 456..	1257
Paddle, Russ. & Ry. 484	445, 448
Page, 2 Russ. C. M. 80	81
Page, 1 D. P. C. 507.....	124
Page, 6 Esp. 83	238
Page, Russ. & Ry. 392.....	625
Page, 8 C. & P. 122	728
Page, 9 C. & P. 756	729
Page, 1 Russ. C. M. 82.....	730, 731
Page, 6 Esp. 83	1030
Page, 2 Esp. 649.....	1035
Page v. Keble, Cro. Jac. 436	974
Pagham, 8 B. & C. 355.....	1297
Palce, 1 Car. & K. 73	568
Paine, 1 Salk. 284.....	207
Paine, 9 C. & P. 135	256, 455
Paine, Yelv. 111	973
Paine, Carth. 405	1141
Paine, 5 Mod. 163	1158
Paine, 1 East, P. C. 5	1172
Painter, 2 Cox , 244; 2 Car. & K.
319.....	178, 830
Palfrey, Cro. Jac. 527	924
Palmer, Leach , 978.....	76, 647
Palmer, 5 El. & Bl. 1024.....	100
Palmer, 5 Cox , 236.....	224
Palmer, 1 Moo. & Rob. 70.....	439, 908
Palmer, Leach , 352	703
Palmer, 1 Russ. C. M. 209.....	851
Palmer, Ex p. , 6 C. & P. 122.....	279
Pappineau, Str. 686.....	1243, 1248
Paradice, East, P. C. 565	384, 483

Table of Cases

li

	PAGE		PAGE
Pardenton, 6 Cox , 247	810	Payne, 4 C. & P. 558	291
Parfait, Leach , 19	43	Payne, 9 East , 158	1007
Pargeter, 3 Cox , 191	767	Peace, 3 B. & Ald. 579	89
Pargiter, Skin. 109	134	Peach, 1 Burr. 548	136, 143, 1050
Paris, 2 Keb. 572	183	Peacock, Russ. & Ry. 278	662, 678
Parish, 7 C. & P. 782	50	Pear, Leach , 1089	374
Parish, 8 C. & P. 194	169, 667	Pear, East , P. C. 689	516
Parke, 1 Cox , 4	660	Pearce, Peake , 75	214, 1157, 1158
Parker, In re , 5 Mees. & W. 52 ..	33	Pearce, 9 C. & P. 667	251
Parker, In re , 7 D. P. C. 203	33	Pearce, Russ. & Ry. 174	436
Parker, 3 Cox , 299	116	Pearce, Leach , 527	591
Parker, 8 Cox , 465	192	Pearce, East , 603	1229
Parker, 8 Cox , 465; 30 L. J. M. C.		Pearles, East , 741	410
144	192	Pearson, 1 Moo. 513	94
Parker, 1 Cox , 76	226	Pearson, 2 Burr. 1039	124
Parker, 1 Russ. C. M. 9	250	Pearson, 1 Lew. 67	208
Parker, 3 Dougl. 244	253	Pearson, 7 C. & P. 761	213, 246
Parker, 2 Moo. C. C. 5; 7 C. & P.		Pearson, 2 Lew. 144	748, 765
825	518	Pearson, 8 C. & P. 119	1017, 1024
Parker, 9 C. & P. 45	558	Pearson, 4 C. & P. 572	1227, 1228, 1232
Parker, 2 Cox , 274	682	Pease, 4 B. & Ald. 30	1250
Parker, 1 Russ. C. M. 681	831, 873	Peat, Leach , 228	432
Parker, 2 Lew. 140	889	Peat, 2 Lew. 288	861
Parker, 1 Barnard. 52	999	Peat, East , P. C. 219	869, 870
Parker, Car. & M. 639	1010	Peck, 2 Russ. C. M. 180	483, 489
Parker, 3 D. P. C. 242	1031	Peck v. The Queen, 1 Per. & D. 508 :
Parker, 3 Q. B. 292	1060		1060, 1061
Parkes, Leach , 614	373	Pedley, Leach , 720	128, 564
Parkes, East , P. C. 674	378	Pedley, Leach , 327	969
Parkes, Leach , 775	662	Peel, 2 Fost. & F. 21	204
Parkhouse, East , P. C. 462 ..	612, 1063	Peel, Russ. & Ry. 407	410
Parkins, Ry. & M. 166	170	Pegge, 29 L. J. M. C. 134	269
Parkins, 1 Moo. 45	260, 397	Pegge, East , P. C. 420	436
Parkinson, Russ. C. M. 571	869	Pegler, 5 C. & P. 521	225
Parkyn, 4 Str. 651	310, 329	Pelfryman, Leach , 503	435
Parminter, Leach , 537	476	Pelham, 8 Q. B. 959	807
Parnell, 1 Jac. & W. 451	880	Peltier, Holt, Libel , 78 ..	1092, 1139, 1153
Parnell, 2 Burr. 806	978	Pembridge, 6 Jur. 1037	163
Parr, 2 Ventr. 94	370	Pembridge, 3 Q. B. 901	1269
Parr, 2 Moo. & Rob. 346	544	Penderryn, 2 T. R. 513	1253
Parr, Leach , 434	642	Penhallo, Cro. El. 231	94
Parr, 2 Sess. Ca. 6	1242	Penn, Cro. Car. 314	1206
Parratt, 4 C. & P. 570	189	Pennigoes, 1 B. & C. 142	1270
Parris, 1 Sid. 431	134, 616	Penny, 1 Lord Raym. 153	929
Parry, Leach , 108	54	Penprase, 4 B. & Adol. 575	64, 124
Parry, 7 C. & P. 836 ..	128, 129, 153, 154	Penros, 2 Inst. 164	919
Parry, 6 C. & P. 402	559, 562	Penson, 5 C. & P. 412	851, 861
Parry, 8 Mod. 136	582	Pepper, Comb. 298	34
Parry, 1 Lord R. 865	1053	Pepys, Peake , 138	986, 1038, 1039
Parsons, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 392	1066	Perceval, 1 Lew. 156	46
Partridge, 7 C. & P. 557	188, 369	Perfit, 8 C. & P. 288	466
Partridge, 6 Cox , 182	524	Perkins, 4 C. & P. 363	62
Pascoe, Den. 456	405	Perkins, 3 C. & P. 395	205
Pasemore, 2 D. P. C. 529		Perkins, 1 Lew. 273	247
Patch, Leach , 238	375	Perkins, Holt's Ca. 683	324
Patchin, Gilb. Rep. 276	1206	Perkins, Den. & P. 459	539
Pateman, Russ. & Ry. 455	649	Perkins, 21 L. J. M. C. 152	680
Patience, 7 C. & P. 795	4	Perkins, 1 Lew. 44	869
Patinson, Leach , 850	495	Perkins, 14 L. J. M. C. 87	889
Patmore, Leach , 137	762	Perkins, 4 C. & P. 537	1100
Patram, East , P. C. 782	182	Perks, 1 C. & P. 300	456
Patrick, Leach , 355	92	Perrot, 2 M. & S. 379	533
Patrick, Leach , 253	581	Perry, 4 T. R. 453	163
Paty, Ld. Raym. 1105	35	Perry, 2 Russ. C. M. 984	185
Paty, East , P. C. 1074	591, 592	Perry, 5 T. R. 478; 6 T. R. 573 ..	292
Paul, 6 C. & P. 323	24	Perry, Den. 69	420
Paul, 2 Moo. & Rob. 307	1269	Perry, 1 Hawk. c. 41	844
Pawlett, 11 Mod. 114	947, 1177	Perry, 2 Cox , 223	867
Payne, 1 Moo. 378	15	Peters, 1 Burr. 568	288
Payne, M. S.	197	Peters, 1 Car. & K. 245	365

	PAGE		PAGE
Petrie, Leach , 294	475	Pinney, 3 B. & Adol. 947: 64, 932, 1086, 1087
Pettit, 4 Cox , 169	197	Pippett v. Hearn, 5 B. & Ald. 634: 184
Pettit v. Addington, Peake , 62	187	Pitcher, 1 C. & P. 85	226
Pew, Cro. Car. 183	7, 754	Pitman, 2 C. & P. 423	407
Pewtress, Str. 1026	122	Pitt, 8 C. & P. 771	90
Peytenyn, 2 Ro. Rep. 51	638	Pitt, 3 Burr. 1335	1201
Peyton, Leach , 324	476	Pitts, Car. & M. 284	759
Pheasant v. Finch, Tho. Raym. 394	147	Plaice v. Howe, Cro. El. 185	974
Phelps, Car. & M. 180	10, 81, 95, 123, 948	Plant, 7 C. & P. 575	130
Phelps, 2 Moo. 240	786, 801	Platt, Leach , 157	25, 34, 279
Phelps, 2 Lord Keny. 570	945	Plestow, 1 Camp. 494	238, 535
Phetheon, 9 C. & P. 552	371	Plowden, Poph. 205	1115
Phillips, 2 Cox , 114	39	Plowman, Cro. El. 752	958
Phillips, Str. 261	84, 887	Plumer, Russ. & Ry. 264	213
Phillips, Str. 921	120	Plummer, 12 Mod. 627	750
Phillips, 1 Jur. 427	132	Plummer, 1 Car. & K. 600	762
Phillips, 3 Burr. 1564	138, 150	Plummer, Russ. & Ry. 264.. 1154, 1228, 1230
Phillips, 4 Burr. 2089	138, 150	Plympton, 2 Ld. R. 1377	1202
Phillips, Ca. Temp. Hardw. 241: 138, 150		Pocock, Str. 1137	137, 929
Phillips, 2 Russ. C. M. 876	199, 212	Pocock, 5 Cox , 172	766
Phillips, 1 Fost. & F. 165	210	Pocock v. Thornicroft, 12 Mod. 454..	134
Phillips, Russ. & Ry. 363	238	Pole v. Carrel, 2 Ro. Rep. 410	974
Phillips, 2 Moo. 252	571, 572	Polfield, 4 D. P. C. 469	888
Phillips, 3 Cox , 88	573	Pollard, Leach , 586	545
Phillips, 1 Lew. 105	650	Pollard v. Moreton, Mo. 656	1109
Phillips, Russ. & Ry. 369	720, 737	Pollman, 2 Camp. 229	1068, 1197
Phillips, Comp. 830	768	Polly, 1 Car. & K. 77	466
Phillips, 8 C. & P. 536	831	Polwart, 1 Q. B. 818	883
Phillips, 3 Campb. 77	867	Pomeroy v. Ford, Mo. 657	1001
Phillips, Str. 921	1006	Pomfret Honour, Coroner for the Liberty of, 8 Jur. 910	890
Phillips, 6 East , 464	1103	Pond, Com. Rep. 312	1311
Phillips v. Davies, 2 Anstr. 572 ...	1261	Poole, 27 L. J. M. C. 53; Dearl. & B. 345	380
Phillips v. Jansen, 2 Esp. 624	1154	Poole, 9 C. & P. 728	786, 801
Phillpot, Dearl. , 179; 22 L. J. M. C. 113	807	Pooley, Leach , 900	220
Philp, 1 Moo. 263	595, 597	Pooley, Russ. & Ry. 31.. 1227, 1231, 1232
Philpotts, 1 Car. & K. 112	533	Pope, 6 C. & P. 346	364
Philpotts, 22 L. J. M. C. 113	818	Pope, Leach , 336	508
Philpotts, Den. & P. 302	967	Pope, 5 C. & P. 208	1065
Phipoe, Leach , 678	94, 419, 437	Pordage, 1 Mod. 22	1309
Picket, East , 501	460	Porter, 1 Barnard. 52	999
Pickford, 4 C. & P. 227	445	Porter v. O'Meara, 5 Bing. N. S. 627	49
Pickles, 12 L. J. 40	68	Porye, 1 Keb. 565	974
Pie v. Cooke, Hob. 128	146	Post, Russ. & Ry. 101	647
Pie, Hutt. 36	915	Postlethwaite v. Gibson, 3 Esp. 226: 5
Pierce, 6 Cox , 117	27, 368	Potter, 2 Ld. Raym. 938	102
Pierce, 27 L. J. M. C. 31; Bell , 235	299	Potter, Den. & P. 235	472
Pierce, 7 Cox , 206	401	Potts, Russ. & Ry. 353	79, 710
Pierce, 3 M. & S. 62	937	Poultny v. Wilkinson, Cro. El. 907: 1015
Pierce, 2 Show. 327	1238	Poulton, 5 C. & P. 329	757, 758
Pierson, Andr. 320	134, 845, 1181	Pountney, 7 C. & P. 302	190, 192
Pierson, And. 313	143	Povey, Dearl. 32; 22 L. J. M. C. 19	864
Pierson, 1 Salk. 382	1182	Povey, 1 Sid. 237	1027
Pigeon, 1 C. & P. 98	678	Powell, 2 Ld. R. 1452	64
Pigot, 1 Cox , 124	728	Powell, Leach , 110	177, 839
Pike et ux. 3 C. & P. 598	206	Powell, Car. & M. 500	201
Pike, Leach , 317	480	Powell, 1 C. & P. 96	256
Pike, 2 Moo. 70	675	Powell, 2 B. & Adol. 75	262, 827
Pikesley, 9 C. & P. 124	197, 198, 211	Powell, 7 C. & P. 640	401
Pilgrim, 4 D. P. C. 89	255	Powell, Den. & P. 403	465
Piller, 7 C. & P. 337	59	Powell, Sir Wm. Bl. 787	676
Pilling, 1 Fost. & F. 324	675	Powell, Leach , 77	683, 687
Pim, Russ. & Ry. 425	71	Powell, Ry. & Moo. 101	1021
Pinder, Dearl. & B. 236	523	Powell's murderer's case, Leach , 508	258
Pine, Cro. Car. 117	324, 1088
Pinhorn, 1 Cox , 70	779, 782
Pinkerton, 2 East , 556	1163
Pinkney, 2 Burr. 1129	613

Table of Cases.

liii

	PAGE
Powles, 4 C. & P. 571	868
Powlter, 11 Rep. 29	566
Pownell, W. Kel. 58	1132
Poynder, 1 B. & C. 178	1310
Poyntz, Cro. Jac. 214	1123
Poyser, Den. & P. 233	382, 385
Pratley, 5 C. & P. 533	382
Pratt, 1 Moo. 250	377
Pratt, Dearel. 360	483
Pratt, 8 Cox, 334	527
Pratt, Dearel. 502	907
Pratt v. Hutchinson, 15 East, 511: ..	1209
Pratten, 6 T. R. 559	145
Pressly, 6 C. & P. 183	200
Prest, 20 L. J. Q. B. 7	111
Prestney, 3 Cox, 505	15
Preston v. Collins, 3 Jur. 329	151
Preston, Inhabitants of, 30 L. J. M. C. 169	93
Preston, Inhabitants of, Ca. Temp. Hardw. 251	258
Preston, Inhabitants, 7 D. P. C. 593	1269
Preston, Lord, 1 Salk. 678	187
Preston, Lord, 4 St. Tr. 448	310
Preston, Lord, 4 St. Tr. 411	319
Preston, 1 Den. & P. 353	367
Price, 8 C. & P. 282	12
Price, 5 Cox, 277	15
Price, 8 C. & P. 19	75
Price, Leach, 419	182
Price, 7 Cox, 405	222
Price, 6 East, 328	289
Price, 4 Burr. 1925	383
Price, 5 C. & P. 510	573
Price, 9 C. & P. 729	580
Price, 8 Cox, 96	750
Price, Cro. Jac. 120	970
Price, 6 East, 323	1037, 1044
Price, 3 Per. & D. 421	1305
Price, Tho. Jones, 46	1310
Price v. Selby, 10 Cl. & F. 282	12, 14
Prickett v. Greatrex, 8 Q. B. 1020 ..	898
Pries, 6 Cox, 165	684
Priestley, 1 Lew. 74	198
Priestley v. Hughes, 11 East, 1	856
Priestley v. Lamb, 6 Vis. 421	1053
Prigg, Fost. 127	1310
Primett, 1 Fost. & F. 50	846
Prince, Moo. & Malk. 21; 2 C. & P. 517	510, 513
Pringle, 2 Moo. & Rob. 276	85
Pringie, 2 Moo. 127	712
Pritchard, 1 C. & P. 303	118
Privett, Den. 193	383
Probert, Den. & P. 20	102
Prosser v. Edmonds, 1 Y. & Col. 481	920
Prosser v. Rowe, 2 C. & P. 421	46
Prosser, Leach, 290	252
Prosser, East, P. C. 502	463
Proud, 31 L. J. M. C. 71; 9 Cox, 22; Leigh & Cave, 97	499
Prowes, 1 Moo. 349	397
Prowse v. Nany, Cro. El. 93	972
Prynn, Holt's Ca. 635	1092
Puckering, 1 Moo. 242	392, 409
Puckering v. Fisher, 1 Andr. 100 ..	634
Puddifoot, 1 Moo. 247	408
Pugh, Dougl. 188	159

	PAGE
Pugh, Holt's Ca. 635	1093
Pugh, 6 Mod. 140	1098
Pugh v. Owen, Hardr. 501	972
Pulbrook, 9 C. & P. 37	689
Pulham, 9 C. & P. 280	543
Pulling v. Frost, 1 Esp. 235	1189
Punshon, 3 Camp. 96	1036
Purcell, 1 Cox, 107	391
Purchase, Car. & M. 617	123, 499
Purchase, East, P. C. 116	319
Purnell, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 37	1290
Pursell, 8 Mod. 289	268
Pusey, Str. 717	1001
Pye, Leach, 352	89
Pym, 1 Cox, 339	206, 760
Pyne v. Pyne, 27 L. J. Prob. 54 ..	180
Pywell, 1 Stark. 402	1055, 1057, 1060

Q.

Qualters, 6 Cox, 357	207
Quarman v. Burnett, 6 Mees. & W. 499	386
Quarter Sessions, 9 C. & P. 790 ..	39
Queen, Case of the, 2 Br. & B. 297	201
Queen, Case of the, 2 Br. & B. 289	224
Queen, Case of the, 2 Br. & B. 310	246
Queen, Case of the, 2 Br. & B. 302	1065
Quick, Leach, 28	278
Quinch, 4 C. & P. 571	885
Quinn, 1 Lew. 1	72

R.

Raake, 2 Moo. 66	674
Radbourne, Leach, 457	207
Radcliffe, 2 Moo. 68	94
Radcliffe, 2 Sir Wm. Bl. 3	154, 171
Radcliffe, 2 Lew. 59	202
Radford, 1 Moo. 197	195
Radford, Den. 59	680, 685
Radley, 3 Cox, 460	95
Radley, Den. 450	391
Raffety, 2 Lew. 271	440
Ragg, Bell, 214	522
Rainer, 2 Barnard. 293	1089
Rampton, Kel. 41	774
Ramsbottom, Leach, 25	657
Ramsden, 1 Cox, 37	39, 440
Ramsden, 2 C. & P. 604	220
Ramsden, In re, 15 L. J. M. C. 113	51
Randall, Russ. & Ry. 195	665
Ranger, East, 1074	591
Rankett, 16 Vin. Ab. 23	1238
Rankin, Russ. & Ry. 43	747
Ranson, Russ. & Ry. 232	420, 1231
Rant, Kyd on Awards, 64	916
Raphael, Man. N. P. Dig. 232: ..	978, 1036
Rastrick, 2 Cox, 39	215
Ratcliffe, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 3	52, 117, 329
Ratcliffe, 1 Lew. 122	285
Rathbone, 2 Moo. 242	1227

	PAGE		PAGE
Ravenscroft, Russ. & Ry. 161	673	Rex vel Reg. v. ——— 1 Cox , 50 ..	1024
Rawlins, East , P. C. 617.....	407	Rex vel Reg. ——— 1 Ch. Rep. 698:
Rawlins, 7 C. & P. 150	461	1058, 1062, 1070
Rawlins, 8 C. & P. 439	1012	Rex vel Reg. v. ——— Andr. 229:	1132
Rawlins v. Ellis, 16 Mees. & W. 172:	5	Rex vel Reg. v. ——— 1 Russ. C. M.
Rawlinson, 4 Dowl. & Ry. 186 ..	1247	241	1132
Rawson, 2 B. & C. 598	271, 287	Rex vel Reg. v. S. et ux. 5 Cox ,
Raymond, Noy. 122.....	1263	279	1194
Read, Den. 377	840, 841	Reynell, 6 East , 315	1242
Read, 3 Cox. 266	841	Reynolds, 2 Cox , 170	374
Read, 11 Mod. 142	1186	Reynolds, Russ. & Ry. 465	1217
Read v. Coker, 22 L. J. C. P. 201..	819	Reynolds, In re , 1 New. S. C. 51 ..	37
Read v. Dawson, 1 Sid. 49	1041	Rhodes, 4 T. R. 220.....	25
Reading, 6 C. & P. 649.....	199	Rhodes, 2 Ld. Raym. 886..62, 1011,
Reading, 7 How. St. Tr. 196.....	223	1020, 1022, 1032
Reading, 1 Keb. 17	760	Rhodes, Leach , 24	657
Reane, East , P. C. 734	446	Rice, 28 L. J. M. C. 64	426
Reany, 20 L. J. M. C. 43	204	Rice, 6 C. & P. 634	683, 1102
Reason, Str. 500	204	Rich, 1 Russ. C. M. 421.....	958
Reason, 6 T. R. 375	269, 1209	Rich v. Barker, Hardr. 131	1293
Reason, Deansl. 226.....	1227	Rich v. Regem, Cro. Jac. 404	925
Rebord, 5 Burr. 1569	35	Richards, 1 Moo. & Rob. 177	62
Record, 2 Show. 216	1240, 1243	Richards, 8 B. & C. 410.....	109, 256
Reculist, Leach , 763	228, 666	Richards, 5 C. & P. 518	188, 195
Redfern, 2 Ad. & El. 387; 4 Nev.		Richards, 1 Fost. & F. 87	250
& M. 198	48	Richards, 1 Car. & K. 532	384
Redford v. Birley, 3 Stark. 103.....		Richards, Russ. & Ry. 193	665
351, 354, 1084		Richards, 7 Dowl. & Ry. 665.....	1017
Redman, Holt's Ca. 477.....	95	Richards, 8 T. R. 634	1258
Redman, Say. Rep. 303	163	Richardson, Leach , 560	112
Redman, 1 Ld. Kenyon , 384.....	1128	Richardson, 4 Jur. 319	162
Reece, 2 Russ. C. M. 65.....	425	Richardson, 1 Cox , 62	169
Reed v. Cowmeadow, 7 C. & P. 821:	13	Richardson, 1 Cox , 361	232
Reed, Car. & M. 403	199	Richardson, 4 Jur. 104	268
Reed, Moo. & M. 403	200	Richardson, 6 Dowl. & Ry. 141: 271, 1245
Reed, Car. & M. 306	365	Richardson, Leach , 387	277
Reed, 7 C. & P. 848	522	Richardson, 1 Fost. & F. 488	287
Reed, 23 L. J. M. C. 25	613	Richardson, 6 C. & P. 335	451
Reed, 2 Moo. 62; 8 C. & P. 623 ..	671	Richardson, 8 Cox , 448	499
Reeksphear, 1 Moo. 342.....	873	Richardson, 1 Fost. & F. 488	518
Rees, 7 C. & P. 568.....	199, 461	Richardson, Leach , 560	1002
Rees, 5 C. & P. 302	256	Richardson, 1 Moo. & Rob. 492....	1062
Rees, 6 C. & P. 608	277	Richardson, 8 D. P. C. 511	1163
Rees, 6 C. & P. 124	1232	Richmond, 1 Car. & K. 240	123, 739
Reeves, 5 Jur. 716	403	Richmond, 28 L. J. M. C. 188	692
Reeves, Leach , 808	708	Richmond, Bell , 142	932
Reeves, 9 C. & P. 25	758	Ricketts, 3 Camp. 68	14
Reilly, Ry. & Moo. 82.....	856	Rickman, East , 1035..	239, 565
Reilly, Leach , 454.....	1035, 1046, 1089	Rider, 8 C. & P. 531	169
Remnant, Leach , 583	25	Ridgelay, Leach , 189	737
Remnant, Russ. & Ry. 136.....	257, 393	Ridley, 2 Camp. 650	818, 1195
Remnant, 5 T. R. 169	438	Ridley, Russ. & Ry. 515	909
Renshaw, 2 Cox , 285	807	Ridpath, 10 Mod. 152	24
Renshaw, 11 Jur. 615.....	794, 818	Rigby, 8 C. & P. 770	121
Revel, Str. 420.....	187, 928, 929	Rigby, 7 Cox , 507..	521
Rew, Kel. 26	760	Rigmaidon, 1 Lew. 180	769
Rex vel Reg. v. ——— 6 Jur. 131:	65	Riley, 3 Car. & K. 116	209
Rex vel Reg. v. ——— 6 Cox , 391:	69	Riley, Deansl. 149.....	367
Rex vel Reg. v. ——— Russ. & Ry.		Riley, 1 Cox , 98.....	574
489.....	71	Riley, 1 Lew. 149	910
Rex vel Reg. v. ——— 20 L. J. M.		Ring, 8 T. R. 565.....	254, 255
C. 53; 15 Q. B. 1060	109, 110	Riordan, Car. Cr. L. 255	857
Rex vel Reg. v. ——— 2 Anstr. 523:	285	Rioters, Leach , 314.	183
Rex vel Reg. v. ——— 3 Mod. 104:	655	Ripley, Str. 1073; Tho. Jones , 198:	892
Rex vel Reg. v. ——— 1 Cox , 250:	728	Rispal, 3 Burr. 1320....	1052, 1056, 1070
Rex vel Reg. v. ——— O. B. 1815..	859	Rither, Cro. El. 148.....	989
Reg vel Reg. v. ——— 3 Mod. 98:	924	Rivers, 7 C. & P. 177	199
Rex vel Reg. v. ——— 3 Mod. 98;		Robe, 2 Str. 999.....	1079
1 Ld. Raym. 258	985	Roberts, Car. Cr. L. 57.....	117

Table of Cases.

lv

	PAGE		PAGE
Roberts, Kel. 25.....	130	Rollo, Say. 138	121
Roberts, Carth. 226; 1 Shore. 389..	134, 144	Roo, 1 Barnard. 87.....	617
Roberts, 2 Russ. C. M. 609; 1 Wils.		Rook, Hardr. 20	145
77	162	Rook, 2 Hawk. e. 55 (2), s. 6.....
Roberts, 1 Jur. 1094.....	162	Rooke, 1 Post. & F. 107	588, 810
Roberts, 1 Camp. 399	241	Rookwood, 4 St. Tr. 696, 13, Howell,	319, 325
Roberts, 3 Cox. 74.....	378	Rooney, 6 C. & P. 515.....	27, 116
Roberts, 7 C. & P. 485.....	392	Rooney, 7 C. & P. 517.....	441
Roberts, East. 487.....	454	Rollston v. Chambers, 1 Leon. 282:	1124
Roberts, East. 1030	566	Roper, 1 Stark. 518.....	1008
Roberts, 2 Moo. 258.....	688, 1074, 1079	Rose, Leach. 342, 243, n.	439, 1216
Roberts, 7 Cox. 39	738	Rose, 2 Cox. 329	549
Roberts, 2 Car. & K. 607	1026	Rosenberg, 1 Car. & K. 233.....	389
Roberts, 1 Camp. 399	1050, 1066	Rosenstein, 2 C. & P. 414	1142, 1186
Roberts, 1 Barnard. 90	1149	Rosier, 1 Phil. Ev. 105	196
Roberts v. Allatt, Moo. & M. 192..	223	Rosinski, 1 Moo. 19	821
Robey, 5 C. & P. 552.....	256	Rosser, 7 C. & P. 648	186
Robins, Dears. 318.....	670	Rough, East, P. C. 607	391, 414
Robins, 2 Moo. & Rob. 512.....	835	Rourke, Russ. & Ry. 386	451
Robins, 1 Car. & K. 456.....	846	Rouse, 4 Cox. 7	351, 531, 672
Robins, 1 Cox. 114	873	Routledge, Dougl. 532	1309
Robins, 6 T. R. 626	991	Row, 12 Mod. 82	34
Robinson, 2 Stark. Ev. 693	14	Row, Russ. & Ry. 153	189
Robinson, 1 Lew. 203	72	Rowbattel, 1 Lew. 278	58
Robinson, Holt, N. P. C. 595....	88, 395	Rowbattel, 1 Lew. 83	173
Robinson, 5 Vin. Supp. 99.....	143	Rowe, Bell. 93	394
Robinson, 5 Cox. 783	217	Rowed, 3 Q. B. 180	873
Robinson, East, P. C. 1110	241	Rowland, Ry. & Moo. 401	182, 1065
Robinson, 1 Lew. 129	265, 467	Rowland, 1 Fost. & F. 72	977
Robinson, East, P. C. 565	384	Rowland, Den. & P. 364	1062
Robinson, Russ. & Ry. 321	436	Rowland, ap. Eliza. 3 Inst. 164....	970
Robinson, Leach. 749	444	Rowland v. Ashby, Ry. & M. 232:	199, 213
Robinson, 2 Moo. & Rob. 214.....	447	Rowley, Russ. & Ry. 110.....	652
Robinson, 1 Moo. C. C. 327	454	Rowley, Fost. 294	766
Robinson, Leach. 767	505	Rowley, Ry. & Moo. 199	1030, 1031
Robinson, 28 L. J. M. C. 58; Bell,		Royce, 4 Burr. 2073.....	79
34	527	Royley, Cro. Jac. 296.....	744, 765
Robinson, 2 Ro. Rep. 59	638	Royson, Cro. Car. 146	971
Robinson, 1 Moo. 413	727	Roysted, 1 Ld. Keny. 255	120
Robinson, 12 Ad. & El. 672	829	Royston, 1 Lew. 267.....	216
Robinson, 1 Burr. 799	935	Ruddy, 16 Vin. Ab. 308	1012
Robinson, Leach. 37	1053, 1057	Russell, 1 Car. & M. 247	44
Robinson, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 541	1201	Russell, 23 L. J. M. C. 173	269, 270
Robson, Russ. & Ry. 413.....	375	Russell, 4 T. R. 534	292
Robson, 31 L. J. M. C. 22; Leigh		Russell, 1 Moo. 377	455
& Cave. 93	404	Russell, Car. & M. 541.....	558
Robson, Dears. 400.....	546	Russell, Leach. 9	675, 678, 681
Robson, 2 Moo. 183	690	Russell, 1 Moo. 356	788
Roche, Leach. 134.....	131	Russell, 1 Moo. & Rob. 122	832
Roche, Car. & M. 341	199, 210	Russell, 1 Cox. 81.....	953
Roddam, R. v., Comp. 672	38	Russell, 8 East. 427	1247
Roderick, 7 C. & P. 795	1194	Russell, 6 B. & C. 566.....	1295
Rodway, 9 C. & P. 784	380	Russell, Dame, v. Countee de Not-
Roe, Str. 117	958	tingham, Mo. 786	1112
Roe d. Jeffreys v. Hicks, 2 Wils. 13:	299	Russell, Lady, Cro. Jac. 17.....	1134
Roebuck, 25 L. J. M. C. 101; Dears.		Russell v. Men of Devon, 2 T. R.
& B. 24.....	526, 528	667	1287
Rogers, 2 Camp. 654.....	236	Ruck, 1 Russ. C. M. 827	467
Rogers, 3 Burr. 1809.....	302, 303	Rudd, Leach. 117	35
Rogers, Leach. 89	460, 677	Rudd, Comp. 331	183
Rogers, 8 C. & P. 629	661	Rudd, Leach. 127	185
Rogers, 9 C. & P. 41	672	Rudge, 1 Russ. C. M. 825	95
Rogers, 2 Moo. 85.....	727	Rudick, 8 C. & P. 327	393
Rogers, East, P. C. 310	753	Rusby, Peake. 189	1206
Rogers, Holt's Ca. 331.....	929	Rushworth, 2 New. S. C. 415	102
Rogers, 5 Cox. 193	1226	Rushworth, 1 Moo. 404	217, 260
Rogers, 2 Ld. R. 373	1260	Rushworth, Russ. & Ry. 317 ..	635,
Rogier, 1 B. & C. 272	1189	674, 675, 676
Rolfe, Fost. 266.....	883

	PAGE		PAGE
Russen, East, P. C. 416.....	831	Saunders, 10 Q. B. 484.....	140
Rust, 1 Moo. C. C. 183	456	Saunders, 7 C. & P. 277	745
Ruston, Leach , 408	176	Saunders, Plowd. 474	751
Ryall v. Reg. , 17 L. J. M. C. 95; 18 L. J. M. C. 69 ..95, 291, 1014, 1039		Saunders, Str. 167	892
Ryan, 1 C. & P. 117	74	Savage, 5 C. & P. 143	50, 258
Ryan, 2 Moo. 213.....	751, 782	Savage, 1 Car. & K. 75	51
Ryan, 2 Moo. 15	796	Savage, 1 Ld. Raym. 347	121, 1314
Ryan, 2 Cox , 115	831	Savage, 1 Moo. 51.....	152
Rycroft, 6 Cox , 76	1070	Savile, 8 Q. B. 703	142
Ryder, 6 East , 587	123	Savile v. Roberts, 1 Ld. Raym. 378:	1056
Rymes, 3 Car. & K. 379	237	Saward, 5 Cox , 295	382
Rymes, 3 Car. & K. 327	541	Sawyer, Russ. & Ry. 294	780
S.		Sayer v. Glossop, 2 Car. & K. 694 .	865
Sacheverell, 9 Ann. Stark. Cr. P. 124	1152	Scadding, Yelv. 134	959
Sadbury, 1 Ld. Raym. 484.....	1096	Scaife, 9 D. P. C. 653	28
Sadler, 4 C. & P. 218	257, 1268	Scalbert, Leach , 620.....	164
Sadler, 1 Sid. 97	1124, 1128	Scarborough, 3 Cox , 727	88
Sainsbury, 4 T. R. 451.....	946	Scarborough, 12 Shaw, J. P. 285 ..	88
Saint Asaph, Dean of, 3 T. R. 428:		Scaresbrick, 6 Ad. & El. 509	1254
	1147, 1162	Scarfe, Den. & P. 281	208
Saint Benedict, 4 B. & Ald. 44	1257	Scarfe, 17 Q. B. 230.....	268
Saint Botolph, Minister of, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 443	611	Scattergood v. Silvester, 19 L. J. Q. B. 447	401
Saint George, 9 C. & P. 483: 175.		Scavage v. Tatcham, Cro. El. 829..	24
	227, 229, 795, 801, 803, 819	Schiever, 2 Burr. 765	34
Saint George's, 3 Camp. 222..	1252, 1254	Schlesinger, 17 L. J. M. C. 29..	969, 1018
Saint Giles, 5 M. & S. 260	1254	Scholefield, Cald. 397	1194
Sainthill, 2 Ld. R. 1174; 1 Salk. 359	1269	Schoole, Peake , 112	1021
Saint John, 9 C. & P. 40.....	62	Scofield, East, P. C. 1028	564, 566
Saint John, 6 M. & S. 130	1268	Scorey, Leach , 43	885
Saint Mary, Whitechapel, 9 D. P. C. 964	105, 106, 107	Scott, 9 B. & C. 446.....	8
Saint Michaels, 2 Sir Wm. Bl. 718:	43	Scott, Russ. & Ry. 415	94
Saint Pancras, Peake , 219....	1065, 1273	Scott, Leach , 401	131, 132
Saint Peters, York, 2 Ld. R. 1249..	1277	Scott, Russ. & Ry. 13	410
Saint Weonard, 8 C. & P. 879	1264	Scott, 2 Moo. 71.....	532
Salisbury, 5 C. & P. 555	241, 1232	Scott, 3 Burr. 1262.....	1072, 1097
Salisbury, Plowd. 100	750	Scott, 3 Q. B. 543	1250, 1251
Salisbury, Earl of, v. Sir A. Ashley, Palm. 194.....	1037, 1119	Scott v. Shepherd, 3 Wils. 403	820
Sallows, 2 Cox , 631	392	Scotton, 5 Q. B. 493	906
Salmon, 2 Russ. & Ry. 26..	555, 557, 567	Scotton, 8 Jur. 409	1024
Salop, JJ. 13 East , 95.....	271, 1275	Scratchley, 2 Dowl. & L. 29	891
Salter, 5 Esp. 125	1068	Scudder, 1 Moo. C. C. 316.....	867
Salwick, 2 B. & Adol. 136	1268	Scully, 1 Cox , 189.....	364
Sampson, 1 Cox , 355	486	Scully, 1 C. & P. 319	774
Samuel v. Payne, Dougl. 359	813	Searing, Russ. & Ry. 350	414
Samways, Dearsl. 371	370	Searle, 1 Moo. & Rob. 75	242
Sanders, 9 C. & P. 79	472	Sears, Leach , 415	368
Sanders, 9 Q. B. 235	1183	Seaton, 6 Cox , 78	265
Sanderson, 1 Fost. & F. 598	15, 905	Sedley, 1 Sid. 568.....	1184
Sanderson, 1 Fost. & F. 37	588, 810	Seeles, Cro. Car. 557	1181
Sandys, Car. & M. 345	208	Seeley v. Mayhew, 4 Bing. 561....	1004
Sandys, 1 Cox , 8.. ..	437	Seery	165
Sandys, 2 Moo. 227; Car. & M. 345:	779	Sefton, Russ. & Ry. 202	463
Sansome, Den. 545	18	Selbe, 9 C. & P. 346	125
Sarmon, 1 Burr. 516	1248	Self, Leach , 137	745, 762
Sarum, Case at, M. S.	108	Sellars, 3 Mod. 167	1311
Satchell, 2 Cox , 13	1009	Sellers, Car. Cr. L. 233	206
Sattler, Dearsl. & B. 639	56	Sellinger, 12 Mod. 413	1181
Saunders, Tho. Raym. 201.....	135	Sellis, 7 C. & P. 850	757
Saunders, 2 Cox , 249	137	Sells v. Hoare, 3 Br. & Bing. 232..	178
		Selsby, Den. & P. 384	1049
		Selway and another, 8 Cox , 235 ..	436
		Semple, Leach , 426	377
		Senior, Leach , 496	425
		Senior, 1 Moo. 346.....	767
		Serjeant, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 352 ..	185
		Serjeant, 1 Sid. 414	1124
		Serlested, Latch. 202	608
		Serlested, 1 Ventr. 181.....	979

Table of Cases.

lvii

	PAGE		PAGE
Serocold v. Hampsey, 12 East, 622...	49	Sheridan, East, P. C. 416	831
Serva, 2 Car. & K. 53	94, 178	Sherman, Ca. Temp. Hardw. 303 ..	181
Serva, Den. 104	549, 1192	Sherrington, Leach, 513	93, 497
Seton, Inhabitants, Law Times, 1846	204	Sherrington, 1 Lew. 123	196
Seton, Inhabitants, 7 T. R. 373.....	290	Sherwood, Dearsl. & B. 251	522
Seven Bishops, 12 St. Tr. 183: 1082, 1159, 1160	1159, 1160	Sherwood, 1 Car. & K. 556	763
Seward, 3 Nev. & M. 557.....	1063	Shiles, 1 Madd. 248	625
Sewel, 7 Mod. 118	1314	Shillick, 2 Russ. C. M. 876	199
Sewell, 1 Cox, 255	942	Shingleton v. Smith, 2 Lutw. 1481..	824
Sewell, 1 Ad. & El. 706	1052, 1062	Shiple, 4 Dougl. 73	1147
Sexton, 2 Russ. C. M. 827, 833.....	189	Shipman, q. t. v. Henbest, 4 T. R. 109	147
Seymour, 7 Mod. 382	1075	Shipton, 8 C. & P. 772	935
Shackell, M'Cl. & F. 514	285	Shore v. Meddison, Holt's Ca. 356 :	971
Shadbolt, 5 C. & P. 504	792	Short v. Lovejoy, Burr. N. P. 18..	820
Shaftesbury, Earl of, 8 How. St. Tr. 817.....	223	Shott, 3 Car. & K. 203.....263, 841, 1194
Shaftow, 11 Mod. 195	929	Shrewsbury, JJ. 9 D. P. C. 501, 105, 106
Shakespeare, 10 East, 83	70, 126	Shrimpton, Den. & P. 319	244
Sharman, Dearsl. 285	634	Shuckburgh, 1 Wils. 29	36
Sharpe, Ex. p., 9 D. P. C. 513	35	Shukard, Russ. & Ry. 209	648
Sharpe, Dearsl. 615	398	Shuttleworth, Den. & P. 351.....	243
Sharpe, 8 C. & P. 436	698	Sidebotham, Bell, 171	1249
Sharpe, Andr. 384	928	Sidney, Str. 1165	108
Sharpe, Cro. Car. 352	990	Sidney, East, P. C. 119	325
Sharpe, Dearsl. & B. 160	1156	Sidoli, 1 Lew. 211.....	45
Sharpe, 1 Moo. 125	1231	Sidoli, 1 Lew. 244.....	160
Sharples, 4 T. R. 771	1203	Sill v. Reg. Den. & P. 10	102
Sharpless, Leach, 92	376	Sill v. Reg. Dearsl. & B. 132	532
Sharpness, 1 T. R. 288.....	286	Sills, 1 Car. & K. 494	185
Sharwin, East, P. C. 421	439, 440	Silversides v. Reg. 2 Gale & D. 617:	291
Shaw, 6 D. & Ry. 154	28	Silversides v. Reg. 3 Q. B. 406: 1219, 1220
Shaw, 1 Donl. & L. 154	38	Silverton Parish, 2 Wils. 298.....	269
Shaw, 5 M. & S. 403	55	Simmonds, 1 C. & P. 84	230
Shaw, East, P. C. 351.....	81	Simmonds, 1 Wils. 329; Say. 34..	263
Shaw, Leach, 79, 372	189	Simmonds, 1 Moo. 408	410
Shaw, Russ. & Ry. 526.....217, 960, 961		Simmonds, 4 Cox, 277.....	536
Shaw, 2 Lew. 116	242	Simmonds v. Taylor, 27 L. J. C. P. 574	667
Shaw, 6 C. & P. 372.....	1234	Simmonite, 1 Car. & K. 164	45, 862
Shaw v. Tompson, Cro. EL. 609.....	974	Simmons, Bell, 168	981
Sheard, 2 Moo. 13.....	792	Simmons, Al. 49	1120
Shebbeare, 1 Burr. 460	36, 1090	Simmons v. Millingen, 2 C. & P. 524	11
Shee v. Abbott, 2 Br. & B. 619.....	1003	Simon, 6 C. & P. 546	184
Sheen, 2 C. & P. 634	125	Simons, 6 C. & P. 538.....	201
Sheen, 2 Russ. C. M. 724	128	Simons, East, P. C. 772, 731.....	434
Sheen, Bell, 97	515	Simpson, 1 Car. & M. 669	24
Sheering, 7 C. & P. 440	1042	Simpson, 1 Lew. 78	215
Sheffield, 2 T. R. 106	1252	Simpson, 1 Lew. 295	255
Shelburn, 9 C. & P. 277	224	Simpson, 2 Cox, 235.....	381
Shelderton, 2 Keb. 221.....	1264	Simpson, Dearsl. 424	436
Sheldon, Str. 748	635	Simpson, 1 Lew. 172	766
Shellard, 9 C. & P. 279	222, 1067	Simpson, 4 Inst. 333	772
Shelley, Leach, 340	1215	Simpson, 1 Russ. C. M. 481	909
Shellswell, 2 Russ. 855	197	Simpson, 4 Cox, 275	1227, 1232
Shelton, 3 Car. & K. 319.....	869	Simpson v. Lamb, 7 EL. & BL. 84..	920
Shepherd, 7 C. & P. 579	188	Simpson v. Smith, 1 Ph. Ev. 397..	228
Shepherd, 1 Cor, 237	239, 448	Sims, 12 Mod. 511.....	971
Shepherd, East, 1073	591	Sinclair, 2 Lew. 49	796
Shepherd, East, 944	673	Sippet, Taylor, Ev. 725	194
Shepherd, East, P. C. 467	661	Sirrell, Den. & P. 267, 273.....	540
Shepherd, Leigh & Cave, 147	745	Sissinghurst Rioters, 1 Hale, 462 ..	754
Shepherd, 2 Sid. 259	890	Skeen, 28 L. J. M. C. 91.....	512
Shepherd, 25 L. J. M. C. 52	1228	Skeen, Bell, 27	628
Sheppard, Say. Rep. 65	122	Skerrit, 2 C. & P. 427	731
Sheppard, Leach, 101	152	Skerrit, 1 Sid. 312.....	1053
Sheppard, 9 C. & P. 121	376	Skinner, Lofft. 55	1144
Sheppard, Russ. & Ry. 169	691	Skinner, 5 Esp. 219	1256
Shergold v. Holloway, Str. 1002 ..	4

	PAGE		PAGE
Skinner v. Trobe, Cro. Jac. 190 ..	974	Smith, Leigh & Cave , 131	626
Skuse v. Bain, 10 Ad. & El. 635 ..	829	Smith, Dearsl. & B. 566; 27 L. J.
Skutt, 5 Jur. 462	64	M. C. 225	633
Skutt, 10 Mod. 48	85	Smith, 2 C. & P. 633	651
Skutt, 1 Moo. 410	191	Smith, 4 C. & P. 411	652, 680
Skutt, Leach , 106	1230	Smith, 2 Moo. 295	665
Slaney, 5 C. & P. 213	1158	Smith, Den. 79; 1 Car. & K. 700:	674
Slater, 6 C. & P. 334	249	Smith, East , 1000	678
Slaughter, Cald. 246	612	Smith, East , P. C. 376	686
Sleeman, Dearsl. 249	190	Smith, 3 Cox , 258	687
Sleep, 8 Cox , 472	1220	Smith, 1 Moo. 415	704
Sloggett, 25 L. J. M. C. 93	200, 628	Smith, Russ. & Ry. 5	727
Slogrove, 1 Lew. 325	181	Smith, 8 C. & P. 153	745
Sloman, 1 D. P. C. 618	257	Smith, 8 C. & P. 160	747
Sloper, Leach , 81	1231	Smith, 1 Russ. C. M. 546	758, 762
Small, 8 C. & P. 46	378	Smith, 25 L. J. M. C. 20	789
Smith, 2 Car. & K. 207	17	Smith, 8 C. & P. 273	792
Smith, 2 Cox , 586	39	Smith, 6 C. & P. 126	815
Smith, Dearsl. 553	75	Smith, 2 C. & P. 449	818
Smith, 1 Cox , 238	87	Smith, Russ. & Ry. 368	905
Smith, 1 Moo. C. C. 407; 6 C. & P.		Smith, 1 Bott. P. L. 403	937
151	87	Smith, 2 Show. 165	973, 1041
Smith, Dougl. 441	94, 95	Smith, 1 Fost. & F. 98	1015
Smith, 2 Moo. & Rob. 109	94	Smith, 6 Cox , 31	1061
Smith, Comp. 24	102	Smith, Gilb. Rep. 5	1088
Smith, 1 Burr. 54	112	Smith, Russ. & Ry. 368	1216
Smith, 7 T. R. 80	141	Smith, Str. 704	1240
Smith, Peake , 236, n.	171	Smith, 4 Esp. 111	1251
Smith, Ry. & Moo. N. P. C. 295 ..	172	Smith, Sav. Rep. 98	1264
Smith, 3 C. & P. 412	173	Smith, Dougl. 441	1298
Smith, Leach , 479	181	Smith, 1 Salk. 680	1314
Smith, 1 Moo. 289	184	Smith v. Bond, 11 M. & W. 326 ..	151
Smith, 1 Stark. 242	197	Smith v. Langham, Skin. 60	136
Smith, 2 Lew. 81	206	Smith v. Maxwell, Ry. & Moo. 80 ..	856
Smith, Russ. & Ry. 339	207, 212	Smith, q. t. v. Prager , 7 T. R. 60 ..	1029
Smith, Holt , 614	212	Smith v. Reg. (in error), 18 L. J.
Smith, 8 B. & C. 341	219	M. C. 207	290
Smith, 1 Phil. Ev. 171	234	Smithers, 3 T. R. 351	935
Smith, 3 Burr. 1475	236	Smithson, 4 B. & Adol. 841	141
Smith, Leach , 288	251	Smollett, 3 T. R. 432	287
Smith, 1 Temp. & M. 214	274	Smollett, Sir Wm. Bl. 269	1131
Smith, East , P. C. 130	322	Smyth, 5 C. & P. 201	1069
Smith, 2 Car. & K. 207	370	Smyth, Palm. 318	1073
Smith, 1 Car. & K. 428	380	Smyth, 1 Moo. & Rob. 155 ..	1109,
Smith, 1 Moo. 473	381	1113, 1122
Smith, 1 Cox , 10	382	Smythies, Den. 498	634, 636, 866
Smith, 7 C. & P. 147	394	Snead, 2 Show. 339	1053
Smith, 21 L. J. M. C. 111; Den.		Snell, 2 Moo. & Rob. 44	811
& P. 449	421	Snelling, Dearsl. 219	674
Smith, 25 L. J. M. C. 31	421	Snigge v. Shirton, Cro. Jac. 190:
Smith, 1 Lew. 301	431	1108, 1111, 1126
Smith, East , P. C. 783	435	Snow, Leach , 151	763
Smith, Den. 510	445	Snowley, 4 C. & P. 390	490
Smith, Russ. & Ry. 417	452	Soaden, 4 B. & Adol. 294	37
Smith, 1 Moo. 178	456	Soares, Russ. & Ry. 28	80, 82, 647
Smith, East , P. C. 49	458	Soleguard, Andr. 231	136, 551, 949
Smith, 1 Moo. & Rob. 256	460	Soley, 11 Mod. 117	145
Smith, 7 C. & P. 150	461	Soley, 2 Salk. 594; 11 Mod. 100 ..	1026
Smith, 2 Moo. & Rob. 115	472	Solly, 9 D. P. C. 115	105
Smith, Russ. & Ry. 267	489, 493	Solomon, 1 Moo. 292	538
Smith, 1 Lew. 86, Russ. & Ry. 516:	490	Solomon, Ry. & M. 252	1019, 1022
Smith, 2 Russ. C. M. 312	534	Somerland, 16 Vin. Ab. 321	1017
Smith, 6 Cox , 314	535	Somerset, JJ. , 7 B. & C. 514	46
Smith, 24 L. J. M. C. 135; Dearsl.		Somerset, JJ. , 1 Man. & Ry. 272:
494	541	1287
Smith, 3 Cox , 443	549	Somersetshire, 16 East , 305	1282
Smith, 2 Moo. & Rob. 256	558	Somerton, 7 B. & C. 463
Smith, 6 Cox , 198	575, 576	Somerville, 1 And. 104	72, 310
Smith, 5 C. & P. 469	596	Somerville, 2 Lew. 113	459

Table of Cases.

lix

	PAGE		PAGE
Soper, 1 Cox , 128	243	Standen, 4 Jur. 702	246
Soper, 3 B. & C. 857	938	Standley, Russ. & Ry. 305	80, 376
Sorill, 2 Bulstr. 119	1299	Stanhope, 12 Ad. & El. 620	897
Souter, 2 Stark. 423	1015, 1039	Stanlake, 1 Mod. 82	892
Southampton, 2 Ch. Rep. 215	1292	Stanley, Kel. 86	755
Southampton, 2 Ch. Rep. 215	1271	Stannard, 6 C. & P. 673	171
Southampton Railway Company, 2		Stansfield, 1 Lew. 145	76
Dowl. N. S. 53	106	Stansfield, 1 Lew. 118	203
Southern, 1 C. M. 572	870	Stanton, 9 C. & P. 431	266
Southern, Russ. & Ry. 444	907	Stanton, 7 C. & P. 431	266
Southerton, 6 East , 126	1074	Stanton, 1 Car. & K. 415	833
Sover, 1 Leon. 327	1125	Stanton, 2 Show. 307	1296, 1298
Spaekman, 9 D. P. C. 1060	106	Staples, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 294	135
Spalding, Leach , 218	564	Stapleton, Str. 443	270
Spanish Sailors, 2 Sir Wm. Bl.		Stapleton v. Croft, 21 L. J. Q. B.
1320	34	247	179
Sparkes, 1 Post. & F. 388	182	Starkey, 2 Nev. & P. 169	1242
Sparkes, Peake , 78	194, 233	Starkey, 7 Ad. & El. 95	1249
Sparkes, 3 Mod. 78	1175	Starling, 1 Sid. 174	1048
Sparrow, 2 T. R. 196	102	Statham, Leach , 357	393
Sparrow, Bell , 298	263, 828	Stead, 8 T. R. 142	1243, 1245, 1251
Sparrow, 2 Cox , 287	381	Stears, 13 Jur. 41	274
Spears, East , P. C. 586	483	Stears, Den. 349	381
Speke, 2 Salk. 358	247	Stedman, East , P. C. 234	747, 762
Spelman, 1 Keb. 93	1128	Stedman, Cro. El. 137	1015
Spence, 2 Phil. 253	28	Steel, Leach , 451	117
Spence, 1 Lew. 107	374	Steel, 4 Burr. 1927	383
Spencer, 9 Ad. & El. 485	99	Steel, 3 Salk. 189	416
Spencer, 8 D. P. C. 127	106	Steel, 2 Moo. 246	1058
Spencer, 1 Wils. 315	277	Steel v. Houghton, 4 Burr. 1927 ..	383
Spencer, Willmore , 418	423, 424	Steer, 2 Car. & K. 988	375
Spencer, East , 712	434	Stephens v. Myers, 4 C. & P. 340 ..	820
Spencer, Russ. & Ry. 299	491	Stephenson, 5 Jur. 341	64
Spencer, 3 C. & P. 420	525	Steptoe, 4 C. & P. 397	203
Spencer, Dears. & B. 121	580	Sterling, 1 Sid. 114	134
Spencer, 1 Cox , 352	770	Sterling, Leach , 99	656
Spencer, 1 C. & P. 260	970	Stevens, 3 Smith , 366	285
Spencer, Ry. & Moo. 97	1021, 1034	Stevens, 1 Cox , 83	526
Spencer, Earl, v. Swannell, 3 Mees.		Stevens, 1 Moo. 409	792
& W. 154	149	Stevens, 5 B. & C. 246	1016, 1017
Spice, Leach , 343	1215	Stevens, 5 East , 244	1203
Spicer, Den. 82	409	Stevens v. Bagwell, 13 Ves. 159	919
Spicer, Hob. 62	1043	Stevenson, 10 St. Tr. 462	2
Spiller, 5 C. & P. 332	767, 779	Stevenson, Leach , 546	164
Spiller, Sty. 108	1289	Stevenson, Taylor , Ev. 1096	180
Spilling, 2 Moo. & Rob. 207	767	Steventon, 2 East , 362	753, 1217
Spilsbury, 7 C. & P. 187	194	Steventon, 1 Car. & K. 55	1262
Spittal, 6 Jur. 438	102	Steward, 2 B. & Adol. 12	143
Sponsonby, Leach , 332	678	Steward, Str. 701	177
Spragg, 2 Burr. 930	270	Stewart, Russ. & Ry. 363	30
Spragg, 2 Burr. 993	1061, 1062	Stewart, 1 Cox , 174	157, 378
Spriggs, 1 Moo. & Rob. 57	456	Steyning, Say. Rep. 92	1258, 1260
Spriggins, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 2	946	Stile v. Heape, Fel. 72	974
Springal, 1 Bulstr. 203	1263	Stiles, 2 Russ. C. M. 109	392
Spry, 3 Cox , 221	751	Stimpson, 2 C. & P. 415	253
Spurgeon, 2 Cox , 102	365	Stobbs, 3 T. R. 735	825
Squire, 1 Russ. C. M. 20	75	Stock, 1 Moo. C. C. 87	335
Squire, Russ. & Ry. 349	487	Stock, Leach , 1015	461
Squire, 1 Russ. C. M. 190	745	Stockdale, Str. 856	745
Squires v. Whisken, 3 Campb. 140 ..	1190	Stockdale, 1 Russ. C. M. 236	1089
Stacey, 2 Russ. C. M. 839	191	Stocken v. Carter, 4 C. & P. 477 ..	825
Stacey, Latch. 182	1115	Stockham v. French, 1 Bingh. 365 ..	1003
Stacey, 1 Sid. 28	1124	Stockley, East , P. C. 310	2, 7
Stafford, Lord, Skin. 52	138, 1305	Stockley, 3 Q. B. 238	122
Stallion, 1 Moo. 398 .. 557, 558, 559,	563	Stockton and Darlington Railway
Stamper, 1 Arn. & Hodges , 319 ..	942	Company, 8 D. P. C. 516 .. 883, 887,	889
Stanbury, 2 Cox , 272	375	Stolady, 1 Post. & F. 518	1010
Stanbury, Leigh & Cave , 128	536	Stokes, 5 C. & P. 148	3
Stancher, 3 Price , 266	24	Stokes, 2 Car. & K. 526	95

	PAGE		PAGE
Stokes, 6 C. & P. 151	165	Sunley, Bell, 145	1220
Stokes, 17 Jur. 192	190	Surgeon's Company, Case of the, 1 Salk. 514.....	138
Stokes, 3 Car. & K. 185	250	Surrey, 2 Campb. 455	1275,
Stokes, 8 C. & P. 151	305	1276, 1028
Stokes, Den. 307	779	Surrey, 8 Mod. 119	1287, 1292
Stone, 1 Fost. & F. 310	51	Surry Treasurer, 1 Ch. Rep. 650 ..	935
Stone, 2 Stark. 137	234	Sutton, 4 Burr. 416	121, 1302
Stone, 1 East, 639.....	235	Sutton, 8 B. & C. 17	153, 157
Stone, 6 T. R. 530.....	258	Sutton, 4 M. & S. 546	217
Stone, 6 St. Tr. 27	316	Sutton, 2 Nev. & M. 57	269
Stone, 6 T. R. 527	324, 1068	Sutton, 7 Ad. & El. 593	286
Stone, 1 Fost. & F. 311	578	Sutton, 4 M. & S. 532	1158
Stone, Den. 181.....	673	Sutton, 4 Burr. 2116	1240
Stone, 4 C. & P. 379	916	Sutton, 5 B. & Adol. 52	1268, 1271
Stone, 6 Cox, 235	926	Sutton, 3 Ad. & El. 597	1283
Stone, Trem. P. C. 148	980	Sutton, 3 Nev. & P. 569	1296
Stone, Dears. 251	982	Sutton v. Fenn, 3 Wils. 339	62
Stone, 1 Show. 335	1019	Sutton Pool case, 6 B. & C. 573 ..	1285
Stoneham, Sty. 366	1272	Swalles, 1 Lew. 19	28
Stonehouse, 1 Cox, 69.....	476, 477	Swain, 1 Moo. & Rob. 112	154
Stonehouse, 3 Salk. 188	1078	Swallow, 2 Russ. C. M. 793	454
Stonehouse v. Elicott, 6 T. R. 315..	8	Swan, 4 Cox, 108	548, 626
Stonnell, 1 Cox, 142.....	244	Swanson, 7 Mod. 100	844
Stonyer, 2 Russ. C. M. 728	241	Swatkins, 4 C. & P. 148	93,
Storie, Dy. 300	30	190, 568
Storke, 3 Keb. 800.....	892	Sweendjen, 5 St. Tr. 450	844
Storr, 3 Burr. 1699.....	1105, 1121	Sweenie, 8 Cox, 223	833
Storwood Overseers, 3 Jur. 448....	138	Sweeting, East, P. C. 457	845
Story, Russ. & Ry. 81.....	521, 666	Swindall, 2 Cox, 241	174, 768
Stotesbury v. Smith, 2 Burr. 924 ..	1075	Swinnerton, Car. & M. 593	203
Stoitt, East, P. C. 780	544	Sydnam, Cro. Car. 486	1112
Stoughton, 2 Saund. 158.....	1268	Sydser, 11 Q. B. 245	1059
Stoveld, 6 C. & P. 489.....	1031	Sykes, Tho. Raym. 202	1024
Stowell, 5 C. B. 44; Dav. & M. 189	61	Sykes v. Dunbar, Selw. N. P. 44 ..
Stowell, 9 C. & P. 437.....	61	Symond-, Ca. Temp. Hardw. 240 :	816
Stowell, 5 Jur. 1010	122	Szudurskie, 1 Moo. 429	669
Stowton, 1 Barnard. 425	1243
Strahan, 7 Cox, 85	125
Strahan, 7 Cox, 75	515, 628
Strahan, 5 Burr. 2689.....	1146
Strange, 8 C. & P. 172.....	174
Strange, 1 Cox, 58.....	413
Stratford-on-Avon, Mayor of, 14 East, 348	1279
Stratton, 1 Dougl. 239.....	121
Stratton, 1 Campb. 549	1055
Streek, 2 C. & P. 412	164
Stretch, 3 Ad. & El. 503	257
Stretford, 2 Ld. R. 1169	1259
Stringer, 2 Moo. 261	437, 447
Stripp, 7 Cox, 97	199
Stronger, 1 Car. & K. 600.....	835
Strong, 5 D. P. C. 213.....	34
Stroud, 2 Moo. 170	87
Stroud, 2 Show. 150	1094
Stubbs, 25 L. J. M. C. 16	180
Stukeley, 12 Mod. 493.....	134, 891
Sturge, 23 L. J. M. C. 172	237
Styles, Hettl. 97	966
Suddis, 1 East, 306	33
Suffolk, JJ. 5 Nev. & M. 139	262
Sullens, 1 Moo. 129	484, 493
Sullivan, 8 Ad. & El. 831	163, 268
Sullivan, 7 C. & P. 641	769
Sullivan, Car. & M. 209	801, 804
Summers, 1 Salk. 55	285
Summers, 1 Lev. 139	1154
Sunderland, 2 Lew. 109	651, 861

Table of Cases.

lxi

	PAGE		PAGE
Taverner, 1 Ro. Rep. 360.....	748, 1102	Thetford, Mayor of, 11 Mod. 241 ..	140
Tawney, 16 Vin. Ab. 416	1312	Thirkell, 3 Burr. 1696	260
Taylor, 7 C. & P. 266	15	Thistlewood, 38 St. Tr. 691	341
Taylor, 3 B. & C. 502	94	Thody, 1 Ventr. 234	1072
Taylor, 9 D. P. C. 600	120	Thomas, 4 M. & S. 442	60
Taylor, 3 B. & C. 502	131	Thomas, 9 Jur. 984	136
Taylor, 12 Mod. 214	134	Thomas, 13 East , 322	140
Taylor, Str. 1167	135	Thomas, 3 Jur. 272	169
Taylor, 1 Jur. 53	139, 1149	Thomas, Leach , 877	173
Taylor, 1 Fost. & F. 535.....	170	Thomas, 6 C. & P. 353.....	188
Taylor, Peake , 11	177	Thomas, 7 C. & P. 345	189
Taylor, 8 C. & P. 733	191, 192	Thomas, Leach , 637	198
Taylor, 8 C. & P. 726.....	213, 222, 224	Thomas, 1 Cox , 52.....	205
Taylor, 1 C. & P. 84.....	230	Thomas, 7 C. & P. 817	212, 763
Taylor, 6 Cox , 58	238, 1036	Thomas, 9 C. & P. 741	374
Taylor, 5 C. & P. 301	256	Thomas, East , P. C. 781.....	396
Taylor, Leach , 356	393	Thomas, East , P. C. 217.....	438
Taylor, 1 Fost. & F. 513	443	Thomas, Car. Cr. L. 205.....	474
Taylor, Russ. & Ry. 418	475	Thomas, 6 Cox , 403	491
Taylor, Russ. & Ry. 63	501	Thomas, East , P. C. 781.....	544
Taylor, Leach , 49; East , P. C.		Thomas, 4 C. & P. 237.....	572, 573
1020	557, 563	Thomas, Leach , 877	683
Taylor, 1 Fost. & F. 511.....	563	Thomas, 2 Moo. 16	689
Taylor, 5 Cox , 138	567	Thomas, 7 C. & P. 817	748
Taylor, Russ. & Ry. 373	581	Thomas, 1 Russ. C. M. 614	757
Taylor, Leach , 214	661, 678	Thomas, 1 M. & S. 442	786
Taylor, 1 Car. & K. 213.....	673	Thomas, 2 Car. & K. 806	983
Taylor, East , 960	682	Thomas, Cro. El. 137.....	989, 1004,
Taylor, 2 Lew. 215	761		1011, 1017
Taylor, 5 Burr. 2793	763	Thomas, 1 C. & P. 472	1061
Taylor, 9 C. & P. 672	768, 885	Thompkins, 2 B. & Adol. 287	109
Taylor, Leach , 360	783	Thompson, 1 Moo. C. C. 80	10
Taylor, 5 C. & P. 301	885	Thompson, 1 Cox , 268.....	45
Taylor, 2 Sess. Ca. 350	944	Thompson, Leach , 291.....	188
Taylor, 2 Keb. 309	972, 1022	Thompson, 1 Cox , 43	265
Taylor, Skin. 403	980	Thompson, Den. 549.....	388
Taylor, Holt's Ca. 534	980, 1034	Thompson, 2 Russ. C. M. 116 :
Taylor, 1 Campb. 404	1020		397, 441
Taylor, 1 Show. 190	1027	Thompson, 1 Moo. C. C. 78	430, 436
Taylor, Ld. Raym. 879	1088	Thompson, East , 498	457
Taylor, 7 Mod. 123	1122, 1123	Thompson, East , 515	465
Taylor, 1 Ventr. 293	1171, 1172	Thompson, 2 Cox , 377	465
Taylor, 12 Mod. 314	1201	Thompson, Leach , 338.....	475
Taylor, 2 Sess. Ca. 22	1240	Thompson, Leach , 910.....	684
Taylor, Willes , 537	1242	Thompson, 16 Q. B. 382	708
Taylor, Str. 840.....	1243	Thompson, 1 Moo. 139.....	779
Taylor, W. Jo. 269	1248	Thompson, 20 L. J. M. C. 183.....	1071
Teague, Russ. & Ry. 33	666, 677	Thompson, 2 Moo. & Rob. 395	1322
Teague, East , P. C. 979	667	Thompson, Ex p. , 6 Jur. 1247	838
Teal, 13 East , 4.....	105, 112	Thompson v. Shackell , M. & Malk.
Teal, 11 East , 307	181, 270	187	1034
Tensdale, 3 Esp. 68	183	Thorley, 1 Moo. 343	492
Tellicote, 2 Stark. 483	198	Thorn, 2 Moo. 210.....	688
Tempest, 1 Fost. & F. 381	165	Thorn, East , P. C. 622	1219
Tempest, Tho. Raym. 386	1098	Thorney, Cro. Jac. 276	890
Temple, 2 Keb. 727	944	Thornhill, 8 C. & P. 575.....	1029
Templeman, 7 Mod. 40	125	Thornton, 19 L. J. M. C. 113 :	105
Templeman, 1 Salk. 55	281	Thornton, Leach , 634	678
Tennent, 4 C. & P. 582	89	Thorogood, 8 Mod. 179	1024
Tenterden, Mayor of, 8 Mod. 114 ..	138	Thorogood, 1 Mod. 107	1261, 1299
Terrey, Cro. Car. 464	532	Thorp, Comb. 456; 5 Mod. 218 ..	134
Teste, 1 Fost. & F. 244	170	Thorp, Carth. 384.....	1181
Testick, East , P. C. 925	682	Thorpe, Dears. & B. 562	489
Tessymond, 1 Lew. 109	766	Thorpe, 1 Lew. 171	764
Tew, Dears. 429	176	Thorpe, Leach , 396	952
Tew, Say. Rep. 195	1245	Thring, 5 C. & P. 507	219
Thanet, Earl of, Taylor, Ev. 774 ..	186	Thring, 5 C. & P. 145	1310
Thanet, Earl of, East , 408	955	Thristle, Den. 502.....	380
Thelwall, 6 T. R. 530	258	Throckmorton, Dy. 98.....	310.

	PAGE		PAGE
Throcknorton, v. Allen, 7 Taunt.		Towle, Russ. & Ry. 314	79, 80
66	187	Towle, 3 Price, 145	174
Thrower, 1 Ventr. 280	1257	Townley, East, P. C. 51	308
Thurborn, Den. 387; 2 Car. & K.		Townley, Fost. 7, 8	319
831	366	Townsend, Den. 167	487, 498
Thurtell v. Beaumont, 1 Bing. 339	1004	Townsend, Car. & M. 178	1232
Tibshelf, 1 Moo. C. C. 27	190	Townsend, Dougl. 420	1272
Tibshelf, 2 Russ. C. M. 895	213	Towy, 8 Cox, 328	1027
Tibshelf, 1 B. & Ald. 190	851	Trafford, 1 B. & Adol. 874	1297
Tickell v. Read, Lofft. 215	822	Trafford v. The King, 8 Bing.
Tiddeman, 4 Cox, 389	448	204	1297
Tierney, Russ. & Ry. 74	1328	Tracey, 6 Mod. 31	1079
Tilly, Str. 316	184	Tracy, 12 Mod. 556	135
Tilly, Leach, 662	960	Tradgeley, 1 Sess. Ca. 180	1268
Tilman v. Johnstone, 2 Fost. & F.		Travers, Str. 700	176
66	836	Treadwell, 1 Russ. C. M. 451	953
Tilson, 1 Fost. & F. 64	853, 864	Treble, R. v. Russ. & Ry. 164; Leach,
Timberley, 1 Sid. 68	1052	1040	272, 647, 678
Timmins, 7 C. & P. 499	222, 768	Trebilcock, 1 Ath. 633	29
Timmins, Bell, 276	845	Trebilcock, 27 L. J. M. C. 103;
Timothy, 1 Fost. & F. 39	1051	Dearsi. & B. 453	263
Timothy v. Simpson, 1 Cr. M. & R.		Treeve, East, 821	609
757	14	Tregarthen, 5 B. & Adol. 678	894
Tindal, 6 Ad. & El. 143	1298	Tregarthen, 2 Nev. & M. 379	1097
Tinkler, East, P. C. 354	202,	Treharne, 1 Moo. 298	86
	204, 207	Tremearne, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 147:
Tinkler, Russ. & Ry. 133	272	151, 1039
Tinkler, East, P. C. 230	751	Tremearne, 5 B. & C. 254	153
Tinkler, 1 Fost. & F. 513	845	Tremearne, 5 C. & P. 761	161, 1042
Tippet, Russ. & Ry. 509	261	Tremearne, Ry. & Moo. 147	1015
Tippet, 3 B. & Ald. 193	1258, 1298	Trenfield, 9 C. & P. 284	51
Tippin, 2 Salk. 494	48	Trevenner, 2 Moo. & Rob. 476	430
Tippin, Car. & M. 545	393	Trevilian, Str. 1268	1314
Tippington, 1 Cox, 48	836	Trevor, 4 Jur. 292	100
Tite, 8 Cox, 458	487	Trillor, 2 Moo. 260	758
Tiverton, Mayor, 8 Mod. 186	134, 1202	Trinfield, 1 Fost. & F. 43	681
Tivey, Den. 637	591	Trollop, Kel. 39	393
Todd, Leach, 357	392	Trowter, East, P. C. 356	206
Tohayles, Cro. Car. 510	1238	Trueman, 8 C. & P. 727	174
Tolfree, 1 Moo. 243	75, 688	Trueman, 2 Cox, 306	488
Tollemache, 2 Pr. Rep. 201	895	Truman, East, 470	861, 862
Tollett, Car. & M. 112	388, 389	Trusty, East, 417	437
Trapshaw, Leach, 427	462	Tubby, 5 C. P. 530	197
Tomb, 10 Mod. 278	23	Tucker, 4 Burr. 2046	98, 120
Tomkins, 6 East, 180	530	Tucker, 4 Mod. 162	283, 337
Tomlinson, 5 Rep. 122	780	Tucker, 1 Moo. 134	448
Tomson, 12 Mod. 66	750	Tucker, 1 Cox, 73	456
Tong, 2 Cox, 290	44	Tucker, Phil. on Ev. 10	839
Tong, Kel. 17	202	Tucker, Jenk. 315	949
Tongue, 30 L. J. M. C. 48		Tucker, 2 C. & P. 500	968
Tongue v. Tongue, 1 E. F. More,		Tucket, 1 Cox, 103	250
90	851	Tuckwell, Car. & M. 215	82, 475
Topham, 4 T. R. 126	1143, 1156	Tuff, Den. 319	89
Tooke, 25 How. St. Tr. 120	214	Tuff, 5 C. & P. 167	203
Tooke, 25 How. St. Tr. 71	239	Tullay v. Read, 1 C. & P. 6	823
Tooke, 6 T. R. 530	257	Tunnard, East, P. C. 694	373
Tooke, Leach, 823	324	Tunnicliffe, 2 Russ. C. M. 897	230
Tooke, 1 Ch. Burn, 823	1069	Tunnicliffe v. Tedd, 5 C. B. 553	829
Toole, Dearsl. 194	189	Turberville, 4 Cox, 13	667
Tooley, Ld. R. 1296	756	Turberville v. Savage, 1 Mod. 3	821
Toone, 1 Lew. 15	839	Turner, 1 Lew. 176	45
Topham, 4 T. R. 126	1131	Turner, 2 Moo. & Rob. 214	70
Topping, 25 L. J. M. C. 72	861	Turner, Leach, 536	90
Toshack, Den. 492	635	Turner, 15 East, 570	110
Toslin, 2 Salk. 517	1129	Turner, 3 B. & P. 160	110
Tottenham, 1 Moo. 461	580	Turner, 1 Sid. 171	139, 261
Tower Hamlets Commissioners, 7		Turner, 1 Lew. 119	203
Jur. 1169	107	Turner, 1 Moo. 347	204

Table of Cases.

lxiii

	PAGE
Turner, 5 M. & S. 206.....	236
Turner, 1 Moo. 47	285, 729
Turner, Leach, 305; East, 492:	460, 558
Turner, 6 C. & P. 407.....	476
Turner, 1 Lew. 9; 1 Moo. 241	555
Turner, 1 Moo. 239	567
Turner, 2 Moo. 42.....	722
Turner, Comb. 407	762
Turner, 6 C. & P. 370	780
Turner, 1 Lew. 176	785
Turner, 8 C. & P. 755	869
Turner, 3 Cox, 304	906, 908
Turner, 5 Mod. 329	935
Turner, 2 Car. & K. 732.....	1032, 1034
Turner v. Meymott, 1 Bingham. 158..	1111
Turpin, 2 Car. & K. 826.....	664
Turton, 6 Cox, 385	119
Turvy, Holt's Ca. 364	971
Tutchin, Holt's Ca. 424	1189
Tutchin, 2 Show. 468	1151
Twyn, Kel. 22	326
Twisleton, 1 Lev. 257	1179, 1180
Tye, Russ. & Ry. 345	719
Tyers, 8 C. & P. 616.....	80, 754, 755
Tyers, 1 C. & P. 129.....	189
Tyers, 1 Moo. C. C. 428	444
Tyers, Russ. & Ry. 402.....	495, 498
Tyers, 1 Moo. 26	562
Tyler, Den. 319.....	234, 658

U.

Uezzell, Den. & P. 274	906
Underwood v. Hewson, Str. 596 ..	823
Unitt, Str. 567	943
Upchurch, 1 Moo. 165	191
Upper Papworth, 2 East, 413..	1252, 1269
Upsdale, Cald. 247	1051
Upton, 5 Cox, 248	588, 810
Upton, 1 Russ. C. M. 218	862
Upton, 6 C. & P. 133	1266
Upton, Str. 816.....	1314
Upton on Severn, 6 C. & P. 133 ..	1262
Upton St. Leonards, 17 L. J. M. C.	13
13	145
Urlyn, 2 Saund. 208.....	925
Usborne, 5 Jur. 200	382
Usher, Leach, 48	678

V.

Vaile, 6 Cox, 470..	1322
Valler, 1 Cox, 84	737
Van Butchell, 3 C. & P. 629	767
Vandercomb, Leach, 708; East, P.	C. 519.....
130, 236, 278
Vandercomb, East, P. C. 514; Leach,	711
465
Vane, Lord, 2 Sir Wm. Bl. 18	826
Vane, Lord, 13 East, 171 ..	894, 895, 897
Vane, 1 Sid. 355.....	1309
Van Muyen, Russ. & Ry. 118.....	371
Vann, Den. & P. 325; 21 L. J.	M. C. 39
1242
Vantandillo, 4 M. & S. 72	1301, 1302
Varley, Leach, 76	721
Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2494	134, 1203

	PAGE
Vaughan, 8 C. & P. 290.....	172, 827
Vaughan, 5 St. Tr. 37, 15 Howell:	311, 316, 322, 325
Vaughan, 8 C. & P. 276	685, 687
Vaughan, 8 Cox, 256	806
Vaughan, 1 Wils. 22	959
Vaux, 4 Rep. 44.....	754
Venables, 2 Ld. Raym. 1405.....	944
Venastra v. Johnson, 1 Moo. & Rob.	316
199
Venner, Ex p., 3 Atk. 771	1256
Vereist, 3 Camp. 432	982
Vicar, 1 Lew. 199	374
Vide, Fitz Corone Pl. 86.....	837
Villeneuve, Count, 3 T. R. 104	519
Vincent, Den. & P. 464	67, 376
Vincent, 9 C. & P. 91.....	228, 354, 1309
Vincent, 1 Str. 481.....	657, 658
Viner, 1 Freem. 522	946
Vint, Holt, Libel, 79	79
Virrier, 10 Ad. & El. 317	68
Virrier, 4 Per. & D. 101.....	1043
Vivian, Den. 35.....	672
Vodden, Deansl. 229	260
Voke, Russ. & Ry. 431	86, 174, 799
Vowchurch, 2 Car. & K. 397.....	1270
Vyse, 1 Moo. 218	420

W.

Wade, 1 Moo. C. C. 86.....	51, 165
Wade, 1 Car. & K. 739	540
Wade, 1 Russ. C. M. 648	762
Wade, 1 B. & Ald. 861	938
Waddington, 2 Hark. c. 44, s. 76:	86
Waddington, 1 East, 159	280
Waddington, East, P. C. 513	465
Waddington, 1 B. & C. 26	1172
Waddington, 1 East, 143	1207
Wadley, 4 M. & S. 508	1166
Wadsworth, 5 Mod. 13	121, 1079
Wagstaff, Russ. & Ry. 398	444
Waite, Leach, 28	120
Waite, 1 Wils. 22.....	135, 1132
Waite, 2 Cox, 245	488, 493
Waite, East, P. C. 570	504
Waite, Russ. & Ry. 505; 1 Bingham.	121.....
641
Waite, 2 Burr. 786	896
Waite, 4 Mod. 248	1118, 1123
Wakefield, 1 Lew. 275.....	116
Wakefield, 2 Lew. 279.....	184
Wakefield, 2 Russ. C. M. 810	242
Wakefield, 2 Lew. 1	842, 844
Wakefield, Str. 69	892
Wakley, 2 Cox, 484	524
Wakley v. Cooke, 3 Jur. 377	135
Wakley v. Cooke, 16 Mees. & W.	822
141
Wakley v. Cooke, 4 Exch. 511	883
Wakley, Ex p., 14 L. J. M. C.	188
80
Wakeling, Russ. & Ry. 304	527
Walbourne, W. Kel. 63	1260
Walcott, Holt, Ca. 345	635
Waldegrave, Earl. 2 Q. B. 341	110
Walden, 12 Mod. 414	1144
Walford, 8 C. & P. 767	246
Walford, 5 Exp. 63	415

	PAGE		PAGE
Walgrave, Dy. 203	1175	Wardle, Car. & M. 144.....	245
Walkden, 1 Cox , 282	805	Wardroper, Bell , 249; 29 L. J.
Walker, Deansl. 358.....	11	M. C. 116	73
Walker, 1 Cox , 14.....	22	Warman, Den. 183; 2 Car. & K.
Walker, 3 Campb. 264	84, 88, 395	195	779, 781, 792
Walker, 2 Moo. C. C. 446	132	Warne, Str. 644	611
Walker, Leach , 448.....	160, 370	Warner, 1 Moo. 380	15
Walker, Deansl. 280.....	176	Warner, 2 Russ. C. M. 845	196
Walker, 2 Fost. & F. 354	208, 209	Warner, 5 C. & P. 525.....	911
Walker, 1 Phil. Ev. 516	248	Warner, 8 T. R. 375.....	1312
Walker, 1 Moo. 155	424	Warren, Russ. & Ry. 514	412
Walker, Deansl. & B. 600	486	Warren, 6 C. & P. 335.....	451
Walker, 6 C. & P. 657	530	Warren, 1 Cox , 68	564
Walker, 1 Cox , 99.....	536	Warren, Ex. p. , 19 Ves. 163	1051
Walker, 2 Russ. C. M. 326.....	663	Warren, 1 Russ. C. M. 139	1313
Walker, 1 C. & P. 320	768	Warren v. Warren, 1 Cr. M. & R.
Walker, 2 Moo. & Rob. 212	836	250	1154
Walker, Leach , 97	960	Warrington, 12 Mod. 22	152
Walker, 3 Stark. Ev. 356	1009	Warrington, Den. & P. 447	188, 189
Walker v. Kearney, 2 Hawk. c. 46,		Warshamer, 1 Moo. 366	654
s. 103.....	1045	Wartnaby, 2 Ad. & El. 423	101
Walker v. Reg. 27 L. J. M. C. 43 ..	1012	Warwick v. Bruce, 4 M. & S. 140..	1003
Walking, 8 C. & P. 243	170	Warwickshall, Leach , 263	194
Walkley, 6 C. & P. 175	188, 203	Waterage, 1 Cox , 338	871
Walkley, 4 C. & P. 132	539	Waters, 8 Cox , 350	52
Wall, 2 Cox , 288	15	Waters, 1 Moo. 457	87
Wall, 2 Russ. C. M. 890	208	Waters, Den. 356; 2 Car. & K. 864	88
Wall, East, P. C. 953	657	Waters, 6 C. & P. 328.....	770
Wallace, 1 Moo. 200; Car. & M. 200:	597	Waters, Den. 356	779
Wallace, 3 T. R. 403	935	Waters, 1 Trem. 259	1092
Wallengen, 1 Sid. 106.....	1013, 1020	Watford, 4 Dowl. & L. 593....	1260, 1270
Wallis, 3 Cox , 67	363	Watkins, Car. & M. 264.....	93
Wallis, 1 Moo. 344.....	566	Watkins, 2 Moo. 17	466
Wallis, 1 Salk. 334	754	Watkins, 1 Russ. C. M. 574	871
Wallis, Lofft. 38	945	Watkinson, Str. 1122	233
Walls, 2 Car. & K. 214	434	Watson, 3 Car. & K. 111.....	18
Walmsley v. Russell, 6 Mod. 200..		Watson, 9 Ad. & El. 73	33
972, 974		Watson, 2 Stark. 140	215, 327, 1068
Walsh, 1 Moo. 14	363	Watson, 2 Stark. 128	222
Walsh, Leach , 1054; Russ. & Ry.		Watson, 2 Stark. 135	224
215.....	373	Watson, 2 Stark. 151	227
Waltham, 3 Cox , 442	792	Watson, 2 Stark. 148	236
Walter, 3 T. R. 432	287	Wat-on, 2 Stark. 149	251
Walter, Car. & M. 764.....	754	Watson, 6 C. & P. 553.....	257
Walter, 3 Esp. 21.....	1131, 1146	Watson, 2 Stark. 132	324
Walters, 1 Moo. 13	458	Watson, 2 Stark. 137	325
Walters, 5 C. & P. 138	626	Watson, 2 Stark. 141	326
Walters, Car. & M. 588	690	Watson, 2 Stark. 158	332
Walters, 12 St. Tr. 113	764	Watson, 2 Stark. 116	333
Walters, Car. & M. 164	766	Watson, Leach , 640	375
Walters, 1 Russ. C. M. 565.....	785	Watson, East, P. C. 566.....	385
Wandsworth, 1 B. & Ald. 63.....		Watson, East, P. C. 562	482
269, 1271, 1273		Watson, 4 Jur. 14.....	522
Wanklyn, 8 C. & P. 290.....	172, 827	Watson, 27 L. J. M. C. 18	527
Wannop, Say. Rep. 142.....	1121	Watson, 2 T. R. 199	930, 1091
Want, In re , 30 L. J. Ch. 775	880	Watson, 3 Salk. 26	946
Warburton, 12 Mod. 319.....	144	Watson, Russ. & Ry. 468	953
Ward, 1 Fost. & F. 18.....	97	Watson, 1 Campb. 215.....	1155, 1160
Ward, 2 Stark. Cr. P. L. 301	120	Watson, 2 Cox , 376	1184
Ward, 2 Car. & K. 759	222	Watson v. Carr, 1 Lew. 52	7
Ward, 6 C. & P. 367	218	Watts, Deansl. 326	221, 390
Ward, Gow , 168.....	487	Watts, 1 Cox , 349	364
Ward, 2 Ld. Raym. 1461.....	633	Watts, 19 L. J. M. C. 192; Den. &
Ward, Str. 748	635	P. 14.....	493
Ward, East , 270	764	Watts, Russ. & Ry. 436	666
Ward, 12 Mod. 516	924	Watts, Noy. 125.....	1123
Ward, 3 Cox , 279	977	Watts, 1 B. & Adol. 166	1217
Ward, 4 Ad. & El. 384.....	1296	Watts, Moo. & Malk. 281; 2 C. &
Wardle, Car. & M. 647	154	P. 486	1239

Table of Cases.

lxv

	PAGE		PAGE
Watts, 2 Exp. 675	1298	Westley, 2 Scss. Ca. 96	950
Watts v. Brains, Cro. El. 778	765	Westley, 2 Keb. 895.....	1115
Waulley, 1 Moo. 163	859	Westmark, 2 Moo. & Rob. 305 :	1257, 1258
Wavell, 1 Moo. 224	528	Westminster Coroner, Str. 199.....	892
Weale, 5 C. & P. 135	413	Westmoreland, JJ. , 7 Jur. 898.....	105
Weaver v. Bush, 8 T. R. 78	822	Weston, Str. 623	120
Weaver v. Ward, Hob. 134.....	823	Weston, Leach , 157	795
Webb, 3 Burr. 1468	122	Weston, 1 Barnard. 56	989
Webb, 6 C. & P. 595	181	West Riding, 1 New. S. C. 406 :	105, 106
Webb, 2 Russ. C. M. 982	185	West Riding, 7 T. R. 447	288
Webb, 4 C. & P. 564.....	198	West Riding, 2 East , 345, 353 :	1274, 1275, 1276, 1285, 1286, 1288
Webb, Man. Dig. 324	231	Westwood, Russ. & Ry. 495	460
Webb, Den. 338	275, 1185	Wetherell, Russ. & Ry. 381	40, 279
Webb, 5 Cox , 154	378	Wetherill, Cald 432	1312, 1313
Webb, 1 Moo. C. C. 431	379, 430	Whaley v. Pajet, 2 Bos. & P. 51 ..	1189
Webb, Russ. & Ry. 405	663, 664	Whalley, 7 C. & P. 245	4
Webb, 1 Moo. & Rob. 405	766	Whalley, 2 Car. & K. 376	258
Webb, 14 East , 406	1208	Whalley, 19 L. J. Q. B. 14	889
Webb, Ld. R. 757.....	1241	Wharton, 12 Mod. 510.....	1296
Webster, 31 L. J. M. C. 17; 9 Cox ,		Whateley, 4 Man. & Ry. 431.....	581
13; Leigh & Case , 77	388	Wheateley, 2 Burr. 1125	614
Webster, Bell , 154.....	1016	Wheater, 2 Moo. 45	201
Webster, 1 Fost. & F. 518	1026	Wheatland, 8 C. & P. 238	1026
Webster, 3 T. R. 388.....	1149	Wheeldon, 7 Q. B. 582; 8 C. & P.	747
Webster v. Watts, 12 Q. B. 73	1248		452, 455
Wedderburn, Fost. 9	325	Wheeler, 3 C. & P. 585	451
Wedge, 5 C. & P. 298	841	Wheeler v. Whiting, 9 C. & P.	262
Weeks, 8 Cox , 455	736		11
Wegener, 2 Stark. 245.....	1154	Wheele, 8 C. & P. 230	198
Weir, 1 B. & C. 288	4	Wheelhouse, Poph. 208	1241
Welbourne, East, P. C. 358; Leach ,		Wheeling, Leach , 311	202
503	206	Whicksley, 2 Ro. Rep. 244.....	966
Welch, 1 Moo. C. C. 75	57	Whiley, 1 Car. & K. 150; 2 Moo.	186
Welch, Car. Cr. L. 56	181		636, 806
Welch, Den. 199	487	Whiley, Leach , 983	651
Welch, Leach , 364	721	Whiley, Russ. & Ry. 90	661
Welch, Den. & P. 78	728	Whiston, 5 Dowl. N. S. 408	101
Wellings, 1 C. & P. 454	486	Whiston, 6 Jur. 1039	102, 573
Wellings, 1 C. & P. 315	491	Whitbread, 1 C. & P. 84.....	231
Wellington, 7 Jur. 44	101	Whitcomb, 1 C. & P. 124	287
Welman, Dearsl. 188	536	White, q. t. v. Boot, 2 T. R. 274 ..	148
Wells, East, P. C. 414.....	80	White v. Edmunds, Peake , 89	11
Wells, Moo. & Malk. 326	182	White v. Taylor, 4 Exp. 80.....	8
Wells, Bull. N. P. 289.....	678	White, Russ. & Ry. 99	81
Wells, 2 Ro. Rep. 295	925	White, 3 Cox , 79	98
Weltjie, 2 Camp. 142	930	White, In re , 1 New. S. C. 9	108
Wenborn, 6 Jur. 267	245	White, Car. & M. 189	160
Wenman, 2 Russ. C. M. 110	421	White, 5 Cox , 562.....	167
Wenman v. Ash, 22 L. J. M. C.		White, 3 Campb. 98	170
199	1155	White, 2 Cox , 192.....	171
Wenmouth, 8 Cox , 348	472	White, Leach , 430.....	178
Went, Russ. & Ry. 359	395	White, Russ. & Ry. 508	202
Weshbourne, 4 Leon. 49	1126	White, 9 C. & P. 344	383
Wesley, 1 Fost. & F. 528.....	772	White, 22 L. J. M. C. 123; Dearsl.	203
West, 2 Ph. Ev. 419.....	226		390
West, Dearsl. 402.....	367	White, Leach , 282	466
West, Dearsl. & B. 109	420	White, Moo. C. C. 91; 8 C. & P.	742
West, Dearsl. & B. 578	525		489
West, Dracon, Cr. L. 168	577	White, 4 C. & P. 46	513
West, Den. 258	682	White, 1 Fost. & F. 665	541
West, 2 Cox , 237	731	White, Den. 208	660
West, 2 Car. & K. 784.....	751	White, 9 C. & P. 282.....	639
West, 1 Gale & D. 481.....	880	White, 29 L. J. M. C. 257	803
West, 1 Q. B. 826.....	883	White, Cald. 183	942
West, 2 Ld. Raym. 1157.....	937	White, Moo. & Malk. 271	980
Westbeer, Leach , 12	208, 285, 423	White, 2 Cox , 232.....	1008
Westbury, 8 Mod. 357.....	949
Westley, Bell , 193	68, 991, 1037
Westley, 10 East , 851	126

	PAGE		PAGE
White, 1 Campb. 359	1091	Wilkinson, 3 Burn, D'Oyly , 348..	869
White, 3 Campb. 100	1156, 1157	Williams, 8 D. P. C. 301	34
White, 1 Burr. 333	1238	Williams, 7 C. & P. 321	51
White, Dy. 158	1307	Williams, 1 Salk. 304	75
Whitehead, 1 C. & P. 67	248, 1069	Williams, 7 C. & P. 298	88
Whitehead, 2 Moo. 181	299, 395	Williams, Leach , 829	93
Whitehead, 9 C. & P. 429	465, 472	Williams, 14 L. J. M. C. 164	94
Whitehead, 3 Car. & K. 202	781	Williams, 1 Burr. 386	102
Whitehead, 1 Salk. 371	941	Williams, 8 Jur. 559; 1 Cox , 77 ..	109
Whitehead v. Reg. , 9 C. & P. 429..	471	Williams, 1 Moo & Rob. 503	116
Whitehouse, Deursl. 1	111, 268	Williams, Comb. 18	135
Whitehouse, 1 Cox , 144	779	Williams, Ex p , 5 Jur. 1133....	140, 141
Whitehouse, 3 Cox , 86	1026	Williams, 1 Burr. 385	144
Whitehouse, 6 Cox , 38	1054	Williams, 1 Cox , 163	170
Whitely, 1 Lew. 173	744, 764	Williams, 7 C. & P. 320	177
Whiteman, 29 L. J. M. C. 120....	582	Williams, 1 Cox , 289	182
Whitfield, Cun. 100		Williams, 8 C. & P. 284	186
Whitfield, 3 Car. & K. 121	117	Williams, 2 Russ. C. M. 832	189
Whithorne, 3 C. & P. 394	749	Williams, Den. & P. 61	274
Whiting, 7 C. & P. 771	170	Williams, 2 Moo. 144	330
Whiting, 1 Salk. 283	1027	Williams, 1 Car. & K. 195	364
Whitley, 1 Lew. 123	795	Williams, 7 Cox , 355	379
Whitmore, 2 Sir Wm. Bl. 37	1088	Williams, 6 C. & P. 390	379
Whitney, 1 Moo. 3	595	Williams, 1 Moo. 107	408
Whitney, 7 C. & P. 208	1260	Williams, 6 Cox , 49	421
Whitney, 5 D. P. C. 728	1272	Williams, 1 Cox , 16	444, 445
Whitney, 3 Ad. & El. 69	1275	Williams, 1 Hale , 522	461
Whittaker, 2 Fost. & F. 1	3	Williams, 6 C. & P. 626	490
Whittaker, Den. 310	906	Williams, 7 C. & P. 354	529
Whittingham, 9 C. & P. 235	583, 584	Williams, 8 C. & P. 434	658
Whitworth, 1 Fost. & F. 382	205	Williams, 1 Cox , 234	668
Whyte, 5 Cox , 290	660, 664	Williams, 2 Car. & K. 51	672
Wiatt, 8 Mod. 123	1147	Williams, 1 Lew. 123	679
Wicker, 18 Jur. 252	210	Williams, 20 L. J. M. C. 106	687
Wickes v. Clutterbuck , 2 Bing. 483	27	Williams, Car. & M. 259	727
Wickham v. Reg. 10 Ad. & El. 34..	527	Williams, 7 Cox , 43	738
Wicks, Russ. & Ry. 449	665	Williams, Den. 39	756
Wigan, 8 Jur. 930	107	Williams, 1 Car. & K. 589; Den.
Wigg, 1 Salk. 372	121	39	790
Wigges, 4 Rep. 45	129	Williams, 8 C. & P. 286	833, 838
Wigges, Leach , 378	762	Williams, 6 B. & C. 250	890
Wightwick, 2 Burr. 1703	1105	Williams, 3 Burr. 1317	944
Wilcock, 2 Russ. C. M. 498	649	Williams, Den. 529	950
Wilcox, Russ. & Ry. 50	636	Williams, 1 Keb. 124	1041
Wilcox, 1 Salk. 458	1238	Williams, 2 Camp. 506	1103, 1160
Wild, Leach , 17	183	Williams, B. & C. 549	1125
Wild, 1 Moo. 452	195	Williams, 5 B. & Ald. 595	1133
Wild, 2 Lew. 214	774	Williams, 2 Show. 471	1137
Wild v. Copeman , Moo. 404	974	Williams, Lofft. 759	1146
Wild v. Cookeman , Noy. 34	974	Williams, 2 Camp. 646	1161
Wildbore, Comb. 309	947, 950	Williams, Holt, Libel , 69	1173
Wilburn, Noy. 50	1101	Williams, 1 Salk. 384	1182
Wilders, 2 Burr. 1128	614	Williams v. Lyons , 8 Mod. 189	1076
Wilford, Russ. & Ry. 517	463	Williams v. Protheroe , 5 Bing.
Wilkes, 2 Wils. 151	36	309	919
Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527	67, 1186	Williams v. Stott , 1 Cr. & M. 675:	486
Wilkes, 4 Jur. 1061	102	Williams v. Wilcox , 3 Nev. & P.
Wilkes, 25 L. J. M. C. 47	102	606	1294
Wilkes, East , 957	660	Willan, East , P. C. 186	720
Wilkes, 1 Hawk. c. 64, s. 9	896	Willes v. Bridger , 2 B. & Ald. 878:	898
Wilkes, 7 C. & P. 811	910	Willett, 6 T. R. 294	1104
Wilkes v. Reg. 4 Bro. P. C. 367 ..	284	Williamson, 3 C. & P. 365	767
Wilkins, East , P. C. 673	378	Williamson, 1 Cox , 975	768
Wilkins, 31 L. J. M. C. 72; 9 Cox ,		Williamson, 7 T. R. 32	1270
20; Leigh & Cave , 89	830	Willis, 1 Moo. 375	75, 388
Wilkins, Str. 624	950	Willis, Den. 80	88
Wilkinson, 8 C. & P. 662	199	Willis, 6 T. R. 179	941
Wilkinson, East , P. C. 556	363	Willis, 1 Hawk. c. 89, s. 17	1223
Wilkinson, Russ. & Ry. 470	387	Willoughby, East , P. C. 944	673
Wilkinson, Leach , 321	432	Willoughby, East , P. C. 288	749

Table of Cases.

lxvii

	PAGE		PAGE
Willoughby, East , P. C. 581.....	1234	Wood, 5 Jur. 225	57
Willoughby, Cro. El. 90.....	1242	Wood, 1 Lew. 36	62
Willmer v. Jacklin, 31 L. J. Q. B.		Wood, 5 Jur. 295	229
17	631	Wood, 1 D. P. C. 509	257
Wilmott, Ex p. , 30 L. J. M. C. 161 :	1222	Wood, Den. 387; 18 L. J. M. C.
Wilshaw, Car. & M. 145.....	211	140	366
Wilson, 7 Q. B. 984	31, 32	Wood, 25 L. J. M. C. 96.....	413
Wilson, Den. 284	70	Wood, 1 Lew. 36	465
Wilson, 1 New. S. C. 190	102, 106	Wood, 1 Fost. & F. 497	546
Wilson, Dearsi. 79.....	109	Wood, 5 Mod. 18	614
Wilson, 6 Q. B. 620.....	122	Wood, 1 Sess. Ca. 217	615
Wilson, Holt's Ca. 597	201	Wood, Sty. 145	617
Wilson, 2 Lew. 78	206	Wood, Ex p. , 1 Atk. 222	625
Wilson, 8 Cox , 453	210	Wood, 2 Russ. C. M. 632	1012
Wilson, 4 T. R. 487	286	Wood, 3 B. & Adol. 617	1189
Wilson, Dearsi. & B. 157	368	Wood, 1 Esp. 359	1309
Wilson, 8 C. & P. 111	374	Woodcock, Leach , 500	205
Wilson, Russ. & Ry. 115.....	462	Wood Ditton, Surveyors, 18 L. J.
Wilson, 9 C. & P. 27	484	M. C. 218	1143, 1161
Wilson, 8 C. & P. 27	493	Woodfall, Lofft. 780	1146
Wilson, 2 Moo. C. C. 52	544	Woodfall, 5 Burr. 2661	1161
Wilson, Dearsi. 558.....	635	Woodhead, 2 Car. & K. 520	231
Wilson, Den. 284; 2 Car. & K. 527:	667	Woodhead, 1 Moo. & Rob. 549..	479, 575
Wilson, Leach , 285	721	Woodhead, 1 Lew. 163	765
Wilson, 1 Lew. 112	743	Woodhead, 1 Lew. 60	804
Wilson, Dearsi. & B. 127	790	Woodman, Leach , 64	975
Wilson, 1 Wils. 41	1051	Woodrow, 2 T. R. 731.....	1312
Wilson, 5 Nev. & M. 164.....	1112	Woods, 7 Mees. & W. 571	210
Wilson, 3 Nev. & M. 753.....	1117	Woods, 6 Cox , 224	228
Wilson, 3 Ad. & El. 817.....	1118, 1129	Woodward, 1 Moo. 323.....	62, 562, 580
Wilson, 8 T. R. 357.....	1119, 1120	Woodward, Leach , 253, n.	70, 466
Wilson, 1 Ad. & El. 627.....	1128	Woodward, 5 C. & P. 861	72
Wilson v. Dod, 1 Ro. Rep. 135	826	Woodward, Leigh & Cave , 122	74
Wilson v. Short, 6 Hare , 366	916	Woodward, 11 Mod. 137; 6 East ,
Wilts, 9 D. P. C. 524	105	140.....	446, 1074
Wilts, 1 Salk. 359.....	1281	Woodward, East , P. C. 53	592
Wilton, 1 Fost. & F. 309...211, 391,	675	Woodward, Leach , 782	660
Winbow, 5 Cox , 346.....	426	Woolcock, 5 C. & P. 516	1098, 1099
Winch, 6 Cox , 523	69	Wooler, 2 Stark. 111	260
Window, 3 Campb. 78	54, 782	Wooler, 6 M. & S. 366	1161
Wing, 1 Sess. Ca. 915	1076	Woolett, 3 D. P. C. 694	150
Wingfield, Cro. Car. 251.....	7	Woolford, 1 Moo. & Rob. 384
Wingfield, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 602.....	1272	396, 544, 547
Wink, 6 C. & P. 397.....	233	Woolf, 2 B. & Ald. 609; 1 Ch.
Winkworth, 4 C. & P. 444	434	Rep. 583	285
Winnall, 5 Cox , 316	491	Wool, 1 Ch. Rep. 401	260
Winshop, Cald. 76.....	1312	Woolley, 4 Cox , 255.....	488, 489
Winslow, 8 Cox , 397.....	781	Woolley, 19 L. J. M. C. 165....	520, 532
Winter, Russ. & Ry. 295.....	561	Woolley, Den. 559	532
Winter, 2 Keb. 74.....	632, 638	Woolmer, 1 Moo. 334	10
Winter, 2 Salk. 588.....	1124, 1126	Woolmer, 12 Ad. & El. 422....	140, 1157
Winter v. Charter, 3 Y. & Jer. 308 :	1260	Woolston, Fitzg. 964	1172
Winterbottom, Den. 41	668	Woolston, Str. 834	1173
Winton, 5 T. R. 89	37	Worker, 1 Moo. 165	906
Witchell, East , P. C. 830	520	Worley, 3 Cox , 535	1014
Withal, Leach , 88	96, 261	Wormal, 2 Ro. Rep. 120	749
Withers, East , P. C. 233.....	11, 772	Worrall, Skin. 198	134
Withers, 4 Cox , 1767, 120, 632,	1009	Worrall, 7 C. & P. 516.....	425, 563
Withers, Leach , 504.....	218	Worrell, Trem. 106	610
Withers, 2 Camp. 578	234	Wortley, Den. & P. 333.....	220, 496
Withers, 8 T. R. 432.....	287	Wortley, Den. 162.	451, 452
Withers, East , P. C. 295	757	Wren, 5 D. P. C. 222	28
Withers, 1 Moo. 294	791	Wright et ux. Ca. Temp. H. 233 ..	124
Withers, 3 T. R. 428.....	1154, 1162, 1163	Wright v. Reg. (in error), 14 L. J.
Witt, 1 Moo. 248	462, 476	Q. B. 48; 16 L. J. Q. B. 10
Wittenhall, 2 Moo. & Rob. 291	116	49, 161, 293
Wogan, Comb. 288	1123	Wright v. Reg. (in error), 1 Ad. & El.
Wolf, 3 Cox , 518	1184	434.....	292
Womersley, 2 Lew. 162	264	Wright v. Reg. (in error), 2 Cox ,
Wood, 1 Fost. & F. 470	15	91	593

	PAGE		PAGE
Wright, 2 Fost. & F. 320.....	69	Yates, 6 Cox , 441 .. 95, 447, 1069, 1145
Wright, 1 Lew. C. C. 135 .. 70, 238, 673		Yates, 5 Jur. 636.....	184
Wright, 1 Lew. 148	198	Yates, 1 Moo. 170.....	420, 526
Wright, 1 Russ. & Ry. 456.....	242	Yates, 1 Cox , 361	787
Wright, Burn's Just. 640	371, 383	Yates, Car. & M. 137... 986, 1024,
Wright, Leach , 726	432	1027, 1069
Wright, 1 Lew. 268	395, 676	Yates, Car. & M. 132	1027, 1029
Wright, 7 C. & P. 159.....	481	Yeadon, 31 L. J. M. C. 70; Leigh
Wright, Dearsl. & B. 431	496	& Cave , 81	828
Wright, 9 C. & P. 754.....	757, 786, 869	Year Books, 27 Ass. 39.	362
Wright, 1 Sid. 148.....	1021	Yend, 6 C. & P. 176 ..	368
Wright, 8 T. R. 293.....	1138	Yewins, 2 Cox , 678	227
Wright, 2 Ch. Rep. 152.....	1149	York, 5 Burr. 2689	27
Wright, Burr. 1099	1181	York, Den. 335	365
Wright, 3 B. & Adol. 681	1251	York, Fost. Cr. L. 70.....	760
Wright, 1 Ad. & El. 434.....	1267	Yorkhill, 9 C. & P. 213	1269
Wright, 2 Keb. 439	1308	Young, 2 Cox , 280.	52
Wrightson, 2 Salk. 698	929	Young, 2 T. R. 472	102
Wroth v. Capel, 3 Leon. 102.....	1123	Young, Russ. & Ry. 280; Peake ,
Wroughton, 3 Burr. 1683	1166	Add. Ca. 228	175, 678
Wroxton, Inhabitants, 4 B. & Adol.		Young, 3 Car. & K. 106.	212
640	852	Young, 8 C. & P. 644.	748
Wyatt, Russ. & Ry. 230	142	Young, 4 Rep. 40.	755
Wyatt, Fost. 127	947	Young, 3 Cox , 296	851
Wycherley, 8 C. & P. 262... 284, 302, 758		Young, 1 Burr. 557.....	945
Wyer, Leach , 480.....	33, 1225	Young, 1 Russ. C. M. 440	960
Wykes, Andr. 238.....	944	Young, 2 Salk. 417 ..,	1145
Wylde, 6 C. & P. 380	1030	Young, 2 Salk. 417	1152
Wylie, 1 New Rep. 92	651, 679	Young, 2 East , 14	1202
Wymer, 4 C. & P. 591.....	463	Young, Den. 194.....	1228
Wyndham, 1 Str. 2	25, 34	Young v. The King, 3 T. R. 98... ..	519, 532
Wyndham, Russ. & Ry. 197.....	54	Younger, 6 T. R. 449	1178
Wynne, Leach , 413	368	Younghusband, 4 Nev. & M. 850 ..	135
Wynne, Den. 365 .. 384, 1227, 1230, 1234		Yscuardo, 6 Cox , 380.....	162, 224
Wyvill, 7 Mod. 286.	1092
Y.		Z.
Yandell, 4 T. R. 521.....	292	Zulueta, 1 Cox , 20	176
Yates, Leach , 169	27	Zulueta, 1 Car. & K. 215	549

TABLE OF STATUTES.

	PAGE		PAGE
9 Hen. 3, c. 15 - -	- 1279	25 Edw. 3, c. 2 - -	307, 344
9 Hen. 3, c. 16 - -	- 1294	25 Edw. 3, c. 4, s. 4 - -	- 1294
20 Hen. 3, c. 1 - -	- 618	25 Edw. 3, c. 25 - -	- 311
31 Hen. 3, st. 4 - -	- 1080	34 Edw. 3, c. 1 - -	925, 1087
51 Hen. 3, st. 4 - -	- 948	34 Edw. 3, c. 8 - -	- 926
52 Hen. 3, cc. 1, 2, 4 - -	- 948	38 Edw. 3, c. 12 - -	- 926
52 Hen. 3, c. 23 - -	- 1305	42 Edw. 3, c. 1 - -	- 28
3 Edw. 1, c. 5 - -	- 1318	42 Edw. 3, c. 9 - -	- 1081
3 Edw. 1, c. 9 - -	917, 947	1 Ric. 2, c. 4 - -	- 921
3 Edw. 1, c. 16 - -	- 948	1 Ric. 2, c. 9 - -	- 925
3 Edw. 1, c. 19 - -	- 1080	1 Ric. 2, c. 13 - -	- 949
3 Edw. 1, c. 23 - -	- 948	2 Ric. 2, st. 1, c. 5 - -	- 1089
3 Edw. 1, c. 25 - -	- 918	5 Ric. 2, st. 1, c. 7 - -	- 187
3 Edw. 1, c. 26 - -	1076, 1080	5 Ric. 2, sess. 1, c. 8 - -	- 1127
3 Edw. 1, c. 28 - -	- 921	5 Ric. 2, st. 2, c. 4 - -	- 1318
3 Edw. 1, c. 29 - -	923, 946	5 Ric. 2, c. 8 - -	1107, 1110, 1119
3 Edw. 1, c. 30 - -	- 1077	7 Ric. 2, c. 4 - -	- 1073
3 Edw. 1, c. 33 - -	- 921	7 Ric. 2, c. 15 - -	919, 921
3 Edw. 1, c. 34 - -	- 1089	8 Ric. 2, c. 4 - -	692, 931
3 Edw. 1, c. 35 - -	- 1073	12 Ric. 2, c. 2 - -	- 1197
4 Edw. 1, st. 2 - -	- 881	12 Ric. 2, c. 11 - -	- 1089
13 Edw. 1, st. 1, c. 12 - -	- 949	13 Ric. 2, st. 2, c. 1 - -	- 127
13 Edw. 1, st. 2, c. 6 - -	- 1171	15 Ric. 2, c. 2 - -	187, 1107,
13 Edw. 1, c. 49 - -	918, 925		1108, 1110, 1116, 1119, 1125, 1127
21 Edw. 1, st. 2 - -	- 749	16 Ric. 2, c. 5 - -	339, 343
27 Edw. 1, c. 3 - -	- 21	16 Ric. 2, c. 6 - -	- 127
28 Edw. 1, c. 11 - -	- 918	17 Ric. 2, c. 8 - -	- 1097
28 Edw. 1, st. 3, c. 12 - -	948, 1081	1 Hen. 4, c. 11 - -	- 1080
33 Edw. 1, st. 2 - -	919, 1056	4 Hen. 4, c. 5 - -	- 1197
33 Edw. 1, st. 3 - -	919, 921	4 Hen. 4, c. 8 - -	- 1108
33 Edw. 1, st. 4 - -	154, 155	4 Hen. 4, c. 11 - -	- 1294
1 Edw. 2, st. 2 - -	- 956	13 Hen. 4, c. 7 - -	- 1087
1 Edw. 2, st. 2, s. 1 - -	- 961	14 Hen. 4, c. 1 - -	- 283
1 Edw. 3, c. 14 - -	- 921	1 Hen. 5, c. 2 - -	- 1294
1 Edw. 3, c. 16 - -	- 1249	1 Hen. 5, c. 5 - -	- 70
2 Edw. 3, c. 3 - -	- 1100	2 Hen. 5, st. 1, c. 8 - -	- 1097
4 Edw. 3, c. 11 - -	919, 921	2 Hen. 5, c. 8 - -	- 947
5 Edw. 3, c. 10 - -	- 926	9 Hen. 5, c. 1 - -	- 62
5 Edw. 3, c. 11 - -	- 47	6 Hen. 6, c. 1 - -	- 48
18 Edw. 3, st. 4 - -	- 931	8 Hen. 6, c. 9 - -	1108, 1112,
20 Edw. 3, c. 1 - -	- 931		1117, 1119, 1120, 1125, 1126
20 Edw. 3, cc. 4, 5 - -	919, 921	8 Hen. 6, c. 9, s. 7 - -	- 1108
25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2 - -	309,	8 Hen. 6, c. 10, s. 3 - -	- 48
	317, 318, 719	8 Hen. 6, c. 12 - -	- 692

	PAGE		PAGE
10 Hen. 6, c. 6, s. 1	- 48	5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 14	- 147
11 Hen. 6, c. 6	- 282	5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 16 :	1197,
14 Hen. 6, c. 1	- 288		1198, 1199
27 Hen. 6, c. 5	- 1178	5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 25	- 1074
12 Edw. 4, c. 7	- 1294	1 Mar. c. 2	- 1174
3 Hen. 7, c. 1	892, 900, 917	1 Mar. st. 2, c. 3	- 1166
4 Hen. 7, c. 20	- 150, 618	1 Mar. sess. 2, c. 3	- 1167
1 Hen. 8, c. 7, s. 2	- 881	1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 10	- 322, 342
6 Hen. 8, c. 6	- 115	1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 10, s. 8	- 341
21 Hen. 8, c. 7	- 489	1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 11, s. 3	- 721
21 Hen. 8, c. 11	- 299	1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 13	- 199
22 Hen. 8, c. 5	- 1278	2 & 3 Ph. & M. c. 10	- 199
22 Hen. 8, c. 5, s. 1	- 1277	1 Eliz. c. 1	- 343
22 Hen. 8, c. 5, s. 5	- 1286	1 Eliz. c. 1, s. 6	- 1168
22 Hen. 8, c. 9	- 1285	1 Eliz. c. 1, s. 14	- 1174
25 Hen. 8, c. 19, s. 1	- 1168	1 Eliz. c. 1, s. 29	- 343
25 Hen. 8, c. 20, s. 7	- 1168	1 Eliz. c. 1, s. 30	- 309
25 Hen. 8, c. 22, -	- 851	1 Eliz. c. 2, ss. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8	- 1175
26 Hen. 8, c. 3, s. 4	- 506	1 Eliz. c. 2, ss. 9, 12, 13 :
26 Hen. 8, c. 3, s. 20	- 1075		1167, 1174
26 Hen. 8, c. 6	- 782	1 Eliz. c. 2, ss. 10, 11	- 1174
26 Hen. 8, c. 13	- 323	1 Eliz. c. 2, s. 20	- 1175
26 Hen. 8, c. 13, s. 4	- 323	1 Eliz. c. 4, s. 24	- 506
26 Hen. 8, c. 13, s. 5	- 338	1 Eliz. c. 12, s. 1	- 1209
28 Hen. 8, c. 7	- 851	5 Eliz. c. 1, s. 2	- 343
28 Hen. 8, c. 15	- 550, 551,	5 Eliz. c. 4	- 218, 1212
	552, 783, 1192	5 Eliz. c. 9	- 987, 990, 1038
28 Hen. 8, c. 15, s. 1	- 53	5 Eliz. c. 9, ss. 1, 2	- 988
28 Hen. 8, c. 15, ss. 2, 5, 6	- 54	5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 3	- 988, 1043
32 Hen. 8, c. 9	- 919, 921, 922,	5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 4	- 988
	925, 927	5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 5	- 988, 1045
32 Hen. 8, c. 9, s. 3	- 987	5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 6 :	988, 1043, 1045
32 Hen. 8, c. 38	- 851	5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 8	- 988
33 Hen. 8, c. 1	- 516	5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 9	- 988, 998
33 Hen. 8, c. 9	- 1190	5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 10	- 988
33 Hen. 8, c. 20, s. 2	- 338	5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 11	- 988, 999
33 Hen. 8, c. 23	- 342, 784	5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 12	- 988
35 Hen. 8, c. 2, s. 1	- 323	5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 13	- 998
1 Edw. 6, c. 1, ss. 1, 5	- 1174	5 Eliz. c. 14	- 698
1 Edw. 6, c. 7, s. 5	- 282	5 Eliz. c. 15, s. 3	- 1090
1 Edw. 6, c. 12	- 322	13 Eliz. c. 2	- 343
1 Edw. 6, c. 12, s. 13	- 281	13 Eliz. c. 2, s. 4	- 343
1 Edw. 6, c. 12, s. 22	- 321, 342	13 Eliz. c. 5, s. 3	- 1061
2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 1	- 1175	13 Eliz. c. 5, s. 5	- 341
2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 6	- 1080	13 Eliz. c. 6, ss. 1, 2, 3	- 622
2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 24	- 879	13 Eliz. c. 6, s. 4	- 623
5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 4	- 1167	18 Eliz. c. 5	- 147, 148
5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 4, s. 3	- 1101	18 Eliz. c. 5, s. 1	- 147, 148
5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 11	- 322	18 Eliz. c. 5, s. 3	- 915
5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 11, s. 6	- 323	18 Eliz. c. 5, s. 4	- 1074
5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 11, ss. 7, 8	- 336	23 Eliz. c. 1, s. 4	- 1175
5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 11, s. 9	- 338	25 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5	- 637
5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 11, s. 12	- 321	27 Eliz. c. 4	- 623
5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 11, s. 13	- 338	27 Eliz. c. 10	- 915

Table of Statutes.

lxxi

	PAGE		PAGE
29 Eliz. c. 5 - - -	1043	1 Wm. & M. c. 18 - - -	1167
29 Eliz. c. 5, s. 21 - - -	148	1 Wm. & M. c. 18, s. 17 - - -	1172
31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 1 - - -	147	1 Wm. & M. c. 18, s. 18 : 1165,
31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 4 - 148, 920,		1166, 1167
	925, 1080	3 Wm. & M. c. 9, s. 4 : 538,	1225
31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 5 - - -	146, 147	3 & 4 Wm. & M. c. 9, s. 5 - - -	74
31 Eliz. c. 10, s. 20 - - -	148	4 & 5 Wm. & M. c. 18 - - -	143
31 Eliz. c. 11 - 1108, 1124, 1126		4 & 5 Wm. & M. c. 18, s. 3 - 1162
43 Eliz. c. 2 - - - - -	1313	4 & 5 Wm. & M. c. 18, s. 2 :
1 Jac. 1, c. 4 - - - - -	343	134, 142
1 Jac. 1, c. 8 - - - - -	777	4 & 5 Wm. & M. c. 18, s. 6 :
3 Jac. 1, c. 4 - - - - -	343	134, 142
3 Jac. 1, c. 4, ss. 1, 23 - - -	309	4 & 5 Wm. & M. c. 18, ss. 3,
3 Jac. 1, c. 10, s. 1 - - -	26	4, 5 - - - - -	49
3 Jac. 1, c. 21 - - - - -	1172	5 Wm. & M. c. 11 : 184, 1244,
4 Jac. 1, c. 1 - - - - -	311	1270
7 Jac. 1, c. 1 - - - - -	311	5 Wm. & M. c. 11, s. 2 - 99,	104
21 Jac. 1, c. 3 - - - - -	1207	5 Wm. & M. c. 11, s. 3 - - -	105
21 Jac. 1, c. 4 - - 147, 148, 149		5 Wm. & M. c. 11, s. 4 - - -	99
21 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 1 - - 146, 148		5 Wm. & M. c. 13 - - - - -	128
21 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 2 - - - - -	148	5 & 6 Wm. & M. c. 11 : 104,
21 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 3 - - 147, 148		268, 1042, 1290, 1292
21 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 4 - - - - -	149	5 & 6 Wm. & M. c. 11, s. 2 - - -	11
21 Jac. 1, c. 8, s. 2 - - - - -	897	5 & 6 Wm. & M. c. 11, s. 3 :
21 Jac. 1, c. 15 - 187, 1115,		11, 109
1117, 1120, 1122, 1125, 1126		7 Will. 3, c. 3 - - 321, 322, 326
21 Jac. 1, c. 27 - - - - -	758	7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 2 - - - - -	342
21 Jac. 1, c. 28, s. 3 - - - - -	1043	7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 3 - - - - -	336
1 Car. 1, c. 1 - - - - -	1178	7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 4 - - - - -	321
3 Car. 1, c. 2 - - - - -	1176	7 Will. 3, c. 3, ss. 5, 6 - - -	323
3 Car. 1, c. 4 - - - - -	777	7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 8 - - - - -	324
16 Car. 1, c. 10 - - - - -	29	7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 9 - - - - -	335
16 Car. 1, c. 10, s. 6 - - - - -	931	7 Will. 3, c. 3, ss. 11, 12 - - -	336
16 Car. 1, c. 10, s. 8 - - - - -	34	7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3 - - 319, 330
12 Car. 2, c. 22, s. 4 - - - - -	717	7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 1 - - -	320
13 Car. 2, c. 5, ss. 2, 3 - - -	352	7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 27 - - -	321
13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 4, s. 24 - - -	1174	7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 11 - - -	342
22 Car. 2, c. 5 - - - - -	1219	7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 34, s. 3 - - -	994
22 & 23 Car. 2, c. 10, s. 1 - - -	655	8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 6 - - -	983
22 & 23 Car. 2, c. 23 - - - - -	236	8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 20, s. 63 - - -	145
29 Car. 2, c. 7 - - - - -	1178	8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 23, s. 4 - - -	720
29 Car. 2, c. 7, s. 2 - - - - -	1177	8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 25 - - - - -	1314
29 Car. 2, c. 7, s. 6 - - - - -	5	8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 26, s. 1 - - -	737
31 Car. 2, c. 2 - - - - -	28, 36, 38	8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 26, s. 4 - - -	722
31 Car. 2, c. 2, ss. 2, 3, 4, 5 - - -	29	8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 27, s. 15 - - -	949
31 Car. 2, c. 2, s. 6 - 29, 38, 895		8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 30, s. 5 - - -	1313
31 Car. 2, c. 2, s. 7 - - - - -	29	8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 33 - - - - -	104
31 Car. 2, c. 2, ss. 9, 10, 11 - - -	30	9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 5 - - - - -	1268
31 Car. 2, c. 2, s. 12 - - 30, 127		9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 32 - - - - -	1172
31 Car. 2, c. 2, ss. 13, 14, 15, 16,		9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 41 - 506, 1219
17, 18, 19, 20, 21 - - - - -	30	9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 41, s. 2 :
1 Wm. & M. sess. 1, c. 21 - - -	317	1219, 1220
1 Wm. & M. sess. 2, c. 2 : 21, 285		10 & 11 Will. 3, c. 17, ss. 1,
1 Wm. & M. sess. 2, c. 2, s. 9 :		2, 4 - - - - -	1190
309, 340		10 & 11 Will. 3, c. 24, s. 14 - 1178

	PAGE		PAGE
11 & 12 Will. 3, c. 7 :	549, 552, 1192	11 Geo. 1, c. 29 - -	596
11 & 12 Will. 3, c. 7, s. 8 -	548	12 Geo. 1, c. 29, s. 4 -	1045
11 & 12 Will. 3, c. 7, s. 9 -	549	2 Geo. 2, c. 24 - -	1201
11 & 12 Will. 3, c. 12, s. 1 -	55	2 Geo. 2, c. 25 - 666, 974,	988, 990, 998
11 & 12 Will. 3, c. 21, s. 13 -	1178	2 Geo. 2, c. 25, s. 2 -	419, 1044
12 & 13 Will. 3, c. 2 -	127, 340	2 Geo. 2, c. 25, s. 5 -	1044
1 Anne, st. 1, c. 18 :	1277, 1285, 1288	5 Geo. 2, c. 16 - -	1238
1 Anne, st. 1, c. 18, s. 4 -	1291	5 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 2 -	99
1 Anne, st. 1, c. 18, s. 5 -	1290	5 Geo. 2, c. 30 - -	625, 628
1 Anne, st. 1, c. 18, s. 13 -	184	5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 16 -	978
1 Anne, st. 2, c. 9, s. 3 :	255, 990	7 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 2 -	1209
1 Anne, st. 2, c. 17, s. 3 -	340	7 Geo. 2, c. 21 - -	439
2 & 3 Anne, c. 20, s. 34 -	316	8 Geo. 2, c. 6, s. 31 -	693, 698
4 Anne, c. 16 - -	149	9 Geo. 2, c. 5, s. 4 -	618
5 Anne, c. 6, s. 2 - -	939	9 Geo. 2, c. 18 - -	1044
5 Anne, c. 18 - -	693, 698	10 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 6 -	102
6 Anne, c. 7, ss. 1, 2 -	339	12 Geo. 2, c. 13, s. 8 -	994
6 Anne, c. 31, s. 3 - -	1307	12 Geo. 2, c. 29 - -	1285
7 Anne, c. 21 - -	332	12 Geo. 2, c. 29, ss. 1, 14 -	1284
7 Anne, c. 21, s. 8 - -	317	13 Geo. 2, c. 18, s. 5 -	105
7 Anne, c. 21, s. 10 -	337	13 Geo. 2, c. 19 - -	1187, 1189
7 Anne, c. 21, s. 11 :	320, 321, 330, 331, 333	14 Geo. 2, c. 33 - -	1284
7 Anne, c. 25 - -	720	14 Geo. 2, c. 33, s. 1 -	1277
7 Anne, c. 30 - -	698	15 Geo. 2, c. 24 - -	939, 940
9 Anne, c. 14 - -	618, 1187	15 Geo. 2, c. 28 - -	726, 727
12 Anne, st. 1, c. 7 - -	474	15 Geo. 2, c. 28, ss. 2, 9 -	729
1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 5, s. 1 :	1098	15 Geo. 2, c. 30 - -	839
1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 5, s. 3 :	757, 1098	16 Geo. 2, c. 15 - -	264
1 Geo. 1, st. 2, ss. 4, 5 -	1098	16 Geo. 2, c. 31 - -	960
1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 25, ss. 1, 3, 4 - -	507	16 Geo. 2, c. 31, s. 1 -	960
4 Geo. 1, c. 11, s. 7 - -	532	16 Geo. 2, c. 31, s. 4 -	961
4 Geo. 1, c. 12 - -	596	17 Geo. 2, c. 5 - -	939
6 Geo. 1, c. 18 - -	1208	17 Geo. 2, c. 39, s. 3 -	337
6 Geo. 1, c. 18, s. 13 -	717	17 Geo. 2, c. 40, s. 10 -	1219
6 Geo. 1, c. 18, s. 18 -	1207	18 Geo. 2, c. 15 - -	160
6 Geo. 1, c. 19 - -	550	18 Geo. 2, c. 18, s. 1 -	990, 1044
6 Geo. 1, c. 19, s. 2 - -	899, 939	18 Geo. 2, c. 27 - -	479
8 Geo. 1, c. 6, s. 2 - -	995	18 Geo. 2, c. 30 - -	549, 552
8 Geo. 1, c. 24 - -	552	18 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 3 -	549
9 Geo. 1, c. 8 - -	506	20 Geo. 2, c. 30 - -	336
9 Geo. 1, c. 8, ss. 3 4 -	1219	22 Geo. 2, c. 33, art. 5 -	1326
9 Geo. 1, c. 11 - -	405	22 Geo. 2, c. 33, s. 17 -	990
9 Geo. 1, c. 12 - -	152, 567	22 Geo. 2, c. 33, art. 26 -	1322
9 Geo. 1, c. 22, s. 1 :	562, 591, 753	22 Geo. 2, c. 33, arts. 34, 35 :	1326
9 Geo. 1, c. 28, s. 1 - -	962	22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 36 -	994
11 Geo. 1, c. 4, s. 6 - -	1316	23 Geo. 2, c. 11 - -	1012
11 Geo. 1, c. 18, s. 3 - -	990	23 Geo. 2, c. 11, s. 1 -	1000, 1004, 1034
11 Geo. 1, c. 22, ss. 2, 26 -	962	23 Geo. 2, c. 11, s. 2 -	1004
		23 Geo. 2, c. 13 - -	1212
		24 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 8 -	4
		24 Geo. 2, c. 44 - -	4
		24 Geo. 2, c. 45 - -	481

Table of Statutes.

lxxiii

	PAGE		PAGE
25 Geo. 2, c. 29 - - -	886	32 Geo. 3, c. 60, ss. 2, 3, 4 -	1162
25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 2 -	150, 1184	33 Geo. 3, c. 39 - - -	639
25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 5 -	1182, 1183	33 Geo. 3, c. 52 : 1077, 1199, 1203
25 Geo. 2, c. 36, ss. 6, 7, 8, 9 :	1183	33 Geo. 3, c. 54 - - -	937, 938
25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 10 : 99, 102, 1183		33 Geo. 3, c. 54, ss. 2, 15 -	938
25 Geo. 2, c. 37 - - -	786	33 Geo. 3, c. 64 - - -	1273
25 Geo. 2, c. 37, ss. 9, 10 -	963	34 Geo. 3, c. 61 - - -	1177, 1178
26 Geo. 2, c. 6 - - -	1300	35 Geo. 3, c. 55, s. 7 - - -	684
26 Geo. 2, c. 6, s. 1 - - -	1301	35 Geo. 3, c. 67 - - -	866
26 Geo. 2, c. 33 - - -	849, 857, 864	35 Geo. 3, c. 94 - - -	665
27 Geo. 2, c. 3, s. 1 - - -	26	36 Geo. 3, c. 7 - - -	309, 311, 314
30 Geo. 2, c. 24 - - -	516, 518, 531	36 Geo. 3, c. 7, s. 1 - - -	309
31 Geo. 2, c. 22, s. 77 - - -	642	36 Geo. 3, c. 60, s. 2 - - -	1209
32 Geo. 2, c. 25 - - -	549	37 Geo. 3, c. 70 - - -	1325, 1326
32 Geo. 2, c. 25, s. 20 - - -	550	37 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 2 - - -	1325
32 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 17 - - -	631	37 Geo. 3, c. 123 : 349, 1209, 1210
2 Geo. 3, c. 15 - - -	1178	37 Geo. 3, c. 123, s. 1 - - -	347, 672
2 Geo. 3, c. 28, s. 12 - - -	1225	37 Geo. 3, c. 123, ss. 2, 3, 4,
2 Geo. 3, c. 28, s. 13 - - -	1218	5, 6 - - -	348
2 Geo. 3, c. 28, ss. 14, 18 :	1225	38 Geo. 3, c. 52 - - -	57, 58, 60
3 Geo. 3, c. 4, s. 2 - - -	1044	38 Geo. 3, c. 52, ss. 1, 2 - - -	57
4 Geo. 3, c. 37, ss. 15, 16 -	717	38 Geo. 3, c. 52, ss. 3, 5, 6, 7,
5 Geo. 3, c. 14 - - -	416	8, 9, 10, 11, 12 - - -	58
5 Geo. 3, c. 25 - - -	1231	38 Geo. 3, c. 78 - - -	1156, 1160
7 Geo. 3, c. 50, s. 1 - - -	1231	39 Geo. 3, c. 37 - - -	247, 551
8 Geo. 3, c. 15 - - -	264, 952	39 Geo. 3, c. 37, s. 1 - - -	54
9 Geo. 3, c. 29, s. 2 - - -	563	39 Geo. 3, c. 50 - - -	631
10 Geo. 3, c. 48 - - -	538	39 Geo. 3, c. 58 - - -	520
12 Geo. 3, c. 26, s. 7 - - -	1314	39 Geo. 3, c. 79 - - -	1084, 1210
12 Geo. 3, c. 48 - - -	703	39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 2 - - -	349, 1209
12 Geo. 3, c. 71 - - -	1205	39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 3 : 350,
13 Geo. 3, c. 63 - - -	210	1084, 1209
13 Geo. 3, c. 63, ss. 40, 44 :	210	39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 4 - - -	350, 1209
13 Geo. 3, c. 78 - - -	1286, 1292	39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 5 : 350,
14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 84 - - -	1307	1084, 1209
17 Geo. 3, c. 19, s. 25 - - -	672	39 Geo. 3, c. 79, ss. 6, 7 - - -	1209
17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 10 - - -	497	39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 8 - - -	350, 1209
17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 14 - - -	103	39 Geo. 3, c. 79, ss. 9, 10, 11 : 1209
17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 22 - - -	102	39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 13 - - -	350
20 Geo. 3, c. 46 - - -	304	39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 22 - - -	1084
21 Geo. 3, c. 49 - - -	1178	39 Geo. 3, c. 93 - - -	337
21 Geo. 3, c. 53 - - -	853	39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 56 - - -	1212
24 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. 56, s. 17 -	304	39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67 - - -	311
25 Geo. 3, c. 36 - - -	1241	39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 89 - - -	1225
26 Geo. 3, c. 71, ss. 3, 8 - - -	1237	39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 89, s. 1 - - -	506
26 Geo. 3, c. 71, s. 9 - - -	1238	39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 89, ss. 2, 4 : 1219
26 Geo. 3, c. 106, s. 26 - - -	717	39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 89, s. 5 :
28 Geo. 3, c. 55 - - -	575	506, 1219
28 Geo. 3, c. 55, ss. 2, 3 - - -	1219	39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 89, s. 7 :
30 Geo. 3, c. 47 - - -	284	506, 1219, 1220
30 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 1 - - -	337	39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 89, ss. 8, 9,
31 Geo. 3, c. 32, s. 3 - - -	1175	10, 11 - - -	1221
31 Geo. 3, c. 32, ss. 10, 14 -	1164	39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 89, s. 12 : 1220, 1221
32 Geo. 3, c. 56 - - -	619	39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 89, ss. 13,
32 Geo. 3, c. 60, s. 1 - - -	1161	14, 15, 16, 17, 18 - - -	1221

	PAGE		PAGE
39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 89, ss. 19,		52 Geo. 3, c. 143, s. 7 -	703
20, 21, 24 -	1222	52 Geo. 3, c. 155 -	1166, 1167
39 & 40 Geo. 3, ss. 25, 26 -	1221	52 Geo. 3, c. 155, s. 12 -	1165
39 & 40 Geo. 3, s. 27 -	1222	52 Geo. 3, c. 156, ss. 1, 2, 3 :	359
39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 93 -	231, 322	53 Geo. 3, c. 89, s. 6 -	1318
39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94 -	118, 249	53 Geo. 3, c. 151, s. 12 -	695
39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, s. 1 -	250	53 Geo. 3, c. 160 -	1172
39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 99 -	684	53 Geo. 3, c. 162 -	939
39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 106 -	1210	54 Geo. 3, c. 60 -	506, 1222
41 Geo. 3, c. 109, s. 43 -	990	54 Geo. 3, c. 90 -	1278, 1285
42 Geo. 3, c. 81, s. 1 -	1231	54 Geo. 3, c. 90, s. 1 -	1277
42 Geo. 3, c. 85 -	210, 611, 1199	54 Geo. 3, c. 90, s. 2 -	1284
42 Geo. 3, c. 85, s. 1 -	55	54 Geo. 3, c. 96 -	1212
43 Geo. 3, c. 58 : 562, 664,		54 Geo. 3, c. 133, s. 10 -	717
788, 793, 869		54 Geo. 3, c. 144, s. 11 -	717
43 Geo. 3, c. 59 : 1273, 1281,		54 Geo. 3, c. 145 -	299, 300
1285, 1286		54 Geo. 3, c. 146, s. 2 -	337
43 Geo. 3, c. 59, ss. 2, 3 -	1284	55 Geo. 3, c. 50 -	278
43 Geo. 3, c. 59, s. 5 : 1277, 1292		55 Geo. 3, c. 50, s. 9 -	1077
43 Geo. 3, c. 59, s. 7 : 1278, 1284		55 Geo. 3, c. 50, s. 13 -	1078, 1080
43 Geo. 3, c. 59, ss. 98, 111 : 1292		55 Geo. 3, c. 51, s. 1 -	941
43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 19 -	612	55 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 9 -	1080
43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 33 -	815	55 Geo. 3, c. 108, s. 127 -	1218
44 Geo. 3, c. 98 -	630	55 Geo. 3, c. 127 -	1222
45 Geo. 3, c. 10, s. 9 -	1301	55 Geo. 3, c. 137, s. 1 -	92
45 Geo. 3, c. 92, s. 3 -	254	55 Geo. 3, c. 143 -	1285
46 Geo. 3, c. 37 -	227	55 Geo. 3, c. 143, ss. 1, 2, 3,
46 Geo. 3, c. 54 -	550, 783, 1192	4, 5 -	1284
46 Geo. 3, c. 76, s. 9 -	708	55 Geo. 3, c. 156 -	304
48 Geo. 3, c. 58, s. 4 -	47	55 Geo. 3, c. 184 -	420 703, 704
48 Geo. 3, c. 75 -	674	55 Geo. 3, c. 184, s. 7 -	703,
48 Geo. 3, c. 149, s. 16 -	649	704, 705, 706
49 Geo. 3, c. 109 -	717	55 Geo. 3, c. 184, s. 8 -	703
49 Geo. 3, c. 123, s. 35 -	612	55 Geo. 3, c. 184, s. 23 -	649
49 Geo. 3, c. 125 -	938	55 Geo. 3, c. 185 -	704
49 Geo. 3, c. 126, ss. 1, 2, 3 -	1197	55 Geo. 3, c. 185, s. 7 -	705
49 Geo. 3, c. 126, ss. 4, 5, 7,		55 Geo. 3, c. 194 -	1132
9, 10, 11, 12, 13 -	1198	56 Geo. 3, c. 27, ss. 7, 13 -	955
49 Geo. 3, c. 126, s. 14 -	1199	56 Geo. 3, c. 100 -	28, 30, 31, 38
50 Geo. 3, c. 59, s. 2 -	618	56 Geo. 3, c. 100, ss. 1, 2 -	30
50 Geo. 3, c. 105, s. 9 -	619	56 Geo. 3, c. 100, s. 3 -	30, 897
51 Geo. 3, c. 100, s. 1 -	60, 114	56 Geo. 3, c. 100, ss. 4, 5, 6 -	31
51 Geo. 3, c. 100, s. 2 -	58	56 Geo. 3, c. 108, s. 127 -	1219
51 Geo. 3, c. 143 -	939	56 Geo. 3, c. 138 -	282
52 Geo. 3, c. 12 -	506, 1222	56 Geo. 3, c. 138, s. 2 -	506
52 Geo. 3, c. 13, s. 30 -	991	57 Geo. 3, c. 6 -	310
52 Geo. 3, c. 63 -	513	57 Geo. 3, c. 6, s. 4 -	321
52 Geo. 3, c. 104 -	350, 1210	57 Geo. 3, c. 7 -	1325
52 Geo. 3, c. 104, ss. 1, 4, 8 -	347	57 Geo. 3, c. 19 -	350
52 Geo. 3, c. 104, s. 7 -	348	57 Geo. 3, c. 19, s. 25 -	350, 1210
52 Geo. 3, c. 110 -	1278, 1285	57 Geo. 3, c. 19, ss. 26, 27 : 1084,
52 Geo. 3, c. 110, ss. 2, 3, 4, 5 : 1284		1210
52 Geo. 3, c. 143 -	1217, 1232	57 Geo. 3, c. 19, s. 28 -	350
52 Geo. 3, c. 143, s. 3 -	1227	57 Geo. 3, c. 53 -	783, 784
52 Geo. 3, c. 143, s. 6 -	708	57 Geo. 3, c. 90 -	909

Table of Statutes.

lxxv

	PAGE		PAGE
58 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 4 -	265	4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 9 -	850
58 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 7 -	1183	4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 10 -	852
59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 7 -	486	4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 11 -	853
59 Geo. 3, c. 44 -	783	4 Geo. 4, c. 76, ss. 12, 13 -	850
59 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 2 -	356	4 Geo. 4, c. 76, ss. 14, 15 -	853
59 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 7 -	357	4 Geo. 4, c. 76, ss. 16, 17 -	857
59 Geo. 3, c. 69, ss. 8, 9 -	358	4 Geo. 4, c. 76, ss. 18, 19, 20 -	853
60 Geo. 3, c. 1, s. 1 -	353	4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 21 -	1179
60 Geo. 3 & 1 Geo. 4, c. 4 -	134	4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 22 -	850, 858
60 Geo. 3 & 1 Geo. 4, c. 4, ss.		4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 26 -	850, 853
1, 2 -	116	4 Geo. 4, c. 76, ss. 30, 31 -	849
60 Geo. 3 & 1 Geo. 4, c. 4, s. 4 -	100	4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 33 -	853
60 Geo. 3 & 1 Geo. 4, c. 4, s. 8 -	144, 150	4 Geo. 4, c. 91 -	859
60 Geo. 3 & 1 Geo. 4, c. 4, s. 9 -	162	4 Geo. 4, c. 95 -	1284
60 Geo. 3 & 1 Geo. 4, c. 4, s.		4 Geo. 4, c. 95, s. 68 -	1255
10 -	134	4 Geo. 4, c. 95, s. 84 -	1268
60 Geo. 3 & 1 Geo. 4, c. 8 -	1174	5 Geo. 4, c. 32 -	850
60 Geo. 3 & 1 Geo. 4, c. 8, s. 5 -	122	5 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 22 -	641
60 Geo. 3 & 1 Geo. 4, c. 9 -	1156	5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4 -	1186
60 Geo. 3 & 1 Geo. 4, c. 14, ss.		5 Geo. 4, c. 84 -	265, 304, 961
1, 2, 3 -	26	5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 1 -	956
1 Geo. 4, c. 56 -	13	5 Geo. 4, c. 84, ss. 2, 5, 13 -	304
1 Geo. 4, c. 57 -	284	5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 17 -	32, 304
1 Geo. 4, c. 102 -	91	5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 18 -	304
1 Geo. 4, c. 117 -	287	5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 19 -	951
1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 41, s. 2 -	1246	5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 22 -	951, 955
1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 41, s. 3 -	1244	5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 23 -	952
1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 88, s. 1 -	955	5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 26 -	300
3 Geo. 4, c. 10, ss. 1, 2 -	41	5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 29 -	264
3 Geo. 4, c. 24 -	538	5 Geo. 4, c. 97 -	1212
3 Geo. 4, c. 86 -	709	5 Geo. 4, c. 98 -	548
3 Geo. 4, c. 114 -	283, 1043,	5 Geo. 4, c. 113, ss. 2, 9, 10 -	1191
1071, 1097, 1186, 1190, 1194		5 Geo. 4, c. 113, ss. 48, 49, 50 -	1192
3 Geo. 4, c. 126 -	1284	6 Geo. 4, c. 50 -	153
3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 59 -	1268	6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 1 -	42, 159
3 Geo. 4, c. 126, ss. 97, 99 -	1298	6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 2 -	153
3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 110 -	1252	6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 3 -	153, 154, 160
3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 137 -	1268	6 Geo. 4, c. 50, ss. 4, 25 -	162
4 Geo. 4, c. 16 -	548	6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 21 -	321, 331
4 Geo. 4, c. 24, s. 72 -	507	6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 27 -	153, 159
4 Geo. 4, c. 48, ss. 1, 2 -	282	6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 29 -	153, 154, 335
4 Geo. 4, c. 53 -	1218	6 Geo. 4, c. 50, ss. 31, 32 -	162
4 Geo. 4, c. 54, s. 1 -	955	6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 34 -	163
4 Geo. 4, c. 54, s. 2 -	591	6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 37 -	158
4 Geo. 4, c. 64 -	26, 553,	6 Geo. 4, c. 50, ss. 47, 50 -	160
940, 960, 961		6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 61 -	927
4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 1 -	26	6 Geo. 4, c. 59, s. 29 -	155
4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 43 -	958, 960	6 Geo. 4, c. 78, s. 17 -	1300
4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 44 -	958, 961	6 Geo. 4, c. 78, s. 21 -	708, 1301
4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 48 -	59	6 Geo. 4, c. 78, s. 25 -	708
4 Geo. 4, c. 76 -	858, 975	6 Geo. 4, c. 92 -	864
4 Geo. 4, c. 76, ss. 3, 4, 5, 6 -	850	6 Geo. 4, c. 105 -	1197
4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 7 -	850, 851	6 Geo. 4, c. 108 -	1215
4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 8 -	858	6 Geo. 4, c. 108, s. 40 -	1217
		6 Geo. 4, c. 108, s. 52 -	85, 1213

	PAGE		PAGE
6 Geo. 4, c. 108, s. 59 -	- 813	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 10 -	282
6 Geo. 4, c. 108, s. 64 -	- 1216	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 11 -	244
6 Geo. 4, c. 119 -	- 704	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 13 -	127
6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 70 -	- 150	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29 -	326,
6 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 2 -	- 807	362, 396, 481, 520, 526, 532
6 Geo. 4, c. 129 -	- 1057	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 5 -	420
6 Geo. 4, c. 129, s. 3 -	- 1049	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 7 -	446
6 Geo. 4, c. 129, s. 4 -	- 1048	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 12 -	475
6 Geo. 4, c. 129, s. 5 -	- 1049	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 13 : 458, 559
7 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 25 -	- 620	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 19 -	406
7 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 6 -	- 469	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 25 -	266
7 Geo. 4, c. 28, ss. 8, 9 : 708, 714		7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, ss. 34-38 : 236
7 Geo. 4, c. 38 -	- 551	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 44 : 451, 563
7 Geo. 4, c. 46 -	- 650	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 47 -	547
7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 4 -	- 653	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 48 -	95
7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 9 -	- 584	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53 : 102, 516, 518
7 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 70 -	- 968	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 54 -	537
7 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 71 - 968, 990		7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 57 -	299
7 Geo. 4, c. 62, s. 31 -	- 257	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 60 -	538
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 2 - 19, 199		7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 63 -	7
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 3 -	- 199	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 69 -	127
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 4 -	- 884	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 2 -	584
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 9 -	- 597	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 3 -	152
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 11 -	- 654	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 33, ss. 82, 84, 85 -	100
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 12 - 56, 398, 467, 536, 782		7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 40 -	564
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 13 -	- 59	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 31 -	991
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 14 - 91, 568		7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, ss. 40, 43 -	813
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 15 -	- 91	7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 44 -	619
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, ss. 16, 17, 18 : 92		7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, ss. 82, 84 -	1073
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 19 - 68, 71, 126		7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 64 -	214
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 20 : 71, 911, 1265		7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 15 -	426
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 21 - 72, 86, 133, 163, 268, 531		7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 22 -	275
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 22 - 52, 782		7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 75, s. 38 -	1242
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 23 - 109, 1041, 1097		7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 85, s. 38 -	991
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 28 - 264, 467		9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 16 -	1051
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 29 -	- 264	9 Geo. 4, c. 15 - 66, 238, 1005
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 30 -	- 265	9 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 38 -	712
7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 31 -	- 23	9 Geo. 4, c. 18 -	703
7 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 29 -	- 264	9 Geo. 4, c. 18, s. 35 - 705, 706
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 27, s. 1 - 1218		9 Geo. 4, c. 31 - 15, 132, 743, 784, 790, 792, 795, 832, 837, 838, 842, 1101
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 27, s. 17 - 1284		9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 7 -	784
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 27, s. 27 - 955		9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 8 -	782
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28 - 118, 717		9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 9 - 260, 780
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 1 : 117, 125		9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 11 - 787, 795
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 2 - 118		9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 13 -	867
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 3 - 153		9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 16 -	831
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 4 - 128		9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 17 -	841
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 5 - 242		9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 27 -	829
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 6 - 97		9 Geo. 4, c. 32 -	178
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 7 - 281
7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 9 : 710, 713, 717, 1193

Tables of Statutes.

lxxvii

	PAGE		PAGE
9 Geo. 4, c. 32, s. 1 - -	994	1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 1 - -	292
9 Geo. 4, c. 32, s. 2 -	184, 678	1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 9 : 67, 267, 287
9 Geo. 4, c. 32, s. 3 -	127	1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 19 -	54, 782
9 Geo. 4, c. 69 : 14, 15, 907,		1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32 -	184
908, 911		1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 30 -	907
9 Geo. 4, c. 69, s. 1 -	14, 903	1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 31 -	15
9 Geo. 4, c. 69, s. 2 : 14, 439,		1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 37, ss. 9, 10,
904, 911, 912		20, 21 - - -	1211
9 Geo. 4, c. 69, ss. 3, 4, 5, 6,		1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 41 -	932, 1086
7, 8 - - -	904	1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 11 -	1320
9 Geo. 4, c. 69, s. 9 -	14, 905	1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 75, s. 12 -	1222
9 Geo. 4, c. 69, ss. 10, 11, 12,		2 Will. 4, c. 1, s. 1 -	713
13 - - -	905	2 Will. 4, c. 4, s. 47 -	1233
9 Geo. 4, c. 74, s. 56 -	63	2 Will. 4, c. 10, s. 3 -	1301
10 Geo. 4, c. 7, s. 23 -	343	2 Will. 4, c. 16, s. 3 -	706, 707
10 Geo. 4, c. 7, ss. 29, 31, 33,		2 Will. 4, c. 16, s. 4 -	707
34, 36 - - -	1170	2 Will. 4, c. 16, s. 15 -	619
10 Geo. 4, c. 24, s. 41 -	709	2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 42 -	236
10 Geo. 4, c. 44 -	110	2 Will. 4, c. 34 -	719, 722
10 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 124 -	713	2 Will. 4, c. 40, s. 33 -	716
11 Geo. 4, c. 20, s. 89 -	620	2 Will. 4, c. 40, s. 35 -	709
11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 20,		2 Will. 4, c. 40, ss. 45, 46 -	991
ss. 83, 84, 85, 86 -	709	2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 58 -	1318
11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 20,		2 Will. 4, c. 46, s. 33 -	657
s. 88 - - -	709, 710	2 Will. 4, c. 53, s. 49 -	710, 712
11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 20,		2 Will. 4, c. 53, s. 50 -	710
ss. 89, 90 - - -	991	2 Will. 4, c. 59, s. 19 -	709
11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 66 : 682		2 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 4 -	991
11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 70,		2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 34, s. 2 -	733
s. 9 - - -	283	2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 34, ss. 3, 4 : 734
11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 73 : 1174		2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 34, s. 10 -	738
11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 73,		2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 2 -	284
ss. 2, 3 - - -	1156	2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64 -	59
1 Will. 4, c. 3, s. 2 -	160	2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 75 -	1196
1 Will. 4, c. 4 -	984	2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 75, s. 16 -	289
1 Will. 4, c. 22 -	145, 210	2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 75, s. 18 -	1315
1 Will. 4, c. 25 -	210	2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 3 -	712
1 Will. 4, c. 32 -	913	2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 125, s. 16 : 992
1 Will. 4, c. 39 -	284	2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 125, s. 64 : 711
1 Will. 4, c. 39, s. 7 -	304	3 Will. 4, c. 14 -	713
1 Will. 4, c. 64, s. 15 -	1012	3 Will. 4, c. 36 -	1071
1 Will. 4, c. 66 : 647, 653,		2 Will. 4, c. 41, s. 9 -	992
675, 677, 689, 702, 713		3 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 39 -	1268
1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 1 -	717	3 Will. 4, c. 49, s. 1 -	178
1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 2 -	637	3 Will. 4, c. 51, s. 29 -	991
1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 3 -	671	3 Will. 4, c. 53 -	37, 908
1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 4 : 664,		3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 53, s. 8 -	757
665, 673, 717		3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 53, ss. 38, 61 : 1217
1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 10 : 684,		3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 65, s. 16 -	993
685, 709, 717		3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 73, s. 12 -	1193
1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 19 -	653	3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 73, s. 42 -	992
1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 20 -	697	3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 75 -	1301
1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 24 -	86	3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 82 -	178
1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 26 -	717	3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 91 -	152
1 Will. 4, c. 70 -	783	3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 91, s. 50 -	154

	PAGE
3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 94, s. 41 -	931
3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 97, ss. 11, 15, 24 -	704
3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 97, s. 12:	704, 706
3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 10:	300, 337
3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 11:	338
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, s. 3 -	338
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24 -	709
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 35, s. 8 -	818
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36: 23, 40, 62, 552
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 3 -	63
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 16:	34, 100, 102, 111, 1183
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 22:	550, 597, 783, 1193
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 28 -	60
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, ss. 48, 49, 50 -	1192
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 67 -	951, 952
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76 -	813
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 1 -	612
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 2 -	992
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 13:	992, 1316
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 97:	145
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 98:	936, 942
4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 109:	992
5 Will. 4, c. 1, ss. 1, 2 -	304
5 Will. 4, c. 8 -	995
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 20, s. 21:	184
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 33 -	111, 1128
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 33, s. 1:	99, 1166, 1270, 1290
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 33, s. 2:	103, 104
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 33, s. 3 -	20
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 35, s. 7 -	707
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 12 -	712
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50 -	1285
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 5:	1286, 1292
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 20:	1259
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 23:	1252, 1257
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, ss. 51, 52, 55 -	1298
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, ss. 58, 59, 60, 61 -	1254
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 62 -	1255
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, ss. 80, 82, 85, 86 -	1259
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 92:	1254, 1259

	PAGE
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 93 -	1255
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 94 -	1260
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 95:	1260, 1269, 1287, 1290, 1292
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 96 -	1272
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 97 -	1292
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 98:	163, 1268
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 99 -	1286
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 100:	184, 1268, 1290
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 107 -	1290
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 51 -	712
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 54, s. 2:	851, 859
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 59, s. 3 -	1094
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 2:	991, 995
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, ss. 3, 4:	995
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 5:	991, 997
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, ss. 6, 7:	997
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 8 -	995
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, ss. 9, 10, 11, 12 -	996
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 13:	933, 983, 997, 1084, 1137
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 -	996
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, ss. 19, 20 -	997
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 21:	991, 997
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 69 -	91
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 69, s. 7 -	93
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 71, ss. 10, 93 -	992
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76 -	26, 59
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 21 -	990
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 34 -	1320
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 109 -	58
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 82, s. 1 -	695
5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 25 -	865
6 Will. 4, c. 5, s. 8 -	992
6 Will. 4, c. 20, s. 3 -	1169
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 11, s. 8 -	1314
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 20, s. 3 -	620
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 37, s. 22 -	992
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 52, s. 8 -	610
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 65, s. 9:	184, 1024
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 93:	1317
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 76 -	1157
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 1 -	704
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 6:	1155, 1318

Table of Statutes.

lxxix

	PAGE
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 7	- 1156
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 8 :	140, 1156
6 & 7 Will. 4, ss. 9, 10, 12,	13, 21 - - - 1156
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85 : 849, 852,	853, 858, 864, 1305
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 1 : 849,	853
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 2	- 849
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, ss. 4, 6 :	854
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 7 :	854, 855
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 9	- 855
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 10	- 857
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, ss. 11,	12, 13 - - - 855
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 14 :	854, 855
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, ss. 15,	16, 18 - - - 855
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, ss. 19,	20, 21 - - - 856
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 25 :	854, 856
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 26 : 852,	853
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, ss. 28,	29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34 - 852
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 35	- 857
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 36	- 856
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 37	- 855
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 38	- 992
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 39	- 1179
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, ss. 42, 43 :	858
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 45	- 849
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 86, s. 20	- 1305
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 86, s. 41 :	697, 1169
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 86, s. 42	- 1305
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 86, s. 43 :	697, 1305
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 89	- 886
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 89, s. 1	- 885
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 89, ss. 2, 3, 4 :	886
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 89, s. 5	- 887
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 89, s. 6	- 886
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 89, s. 7	- 885
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 6	- 107
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114	- 167,
	168, 214, 901
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 1	- 166
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 2	- 19
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 3 :	17, 166, 167, 245, 334
6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 4 :	17, 167
7 Will. 4, c. 1	- - - 854

	PAGE
7 Will. 4, c. 5	- - - 1174
7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 88, ss. 1,	2, 3, 4 - - - 552
7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 88, ss. 5,	6, 7 - - - 553
1 Vict. c. 14	- - - 249
1 Vict. c. 22, s. 1	- - - 854
1 Vict. c. 22, s. 5	- - - 855
1 Vict. c. 22, ss. 9, 10, 11	- 857
1 Vict. c. 22, s. 23	- - - 856
1 Vict. c. 22, s. 24	- - - 854
1 Vict. c. 22, ss. 32, 33	- 852
1 Vict. c. 22, s. 35	- - - 856
1 Vict. c. 22, s. 36	- - - 849
1 Vict. c. 23	- - - 282, 1043
1 Vict. c. 26	- - - 180
1 Vict. c. 26, s. 9	- - - 657
1 Vict. c. 32	- - - 1231
1 Vict. c. 36, s. 25	- - - 1232
1 Vict. c. 36, s. 26	- 1226,
	1229, 1230, 1231, 1233, 1235
1 Vict. c. 36, ss. 27, 28, 29 :	1226, 1227, 1228, 1230
1 Vict. c. 36, ss. 30, 31	- 1233
1 Vict. c. 36, s. 32	- 507, 1232
1 Vict. c. 36, s. 33	- - - 714
1 Vict. c. 36, s. 35	- 715, 1230
1 Vict. c. 36, s. 36	- - - 1195
1 Vict. c. 36, s. 37	- 715,
	1229, 1234
1 Vict. c. 36, s. 38	- 1226, 1230
1 Vict. c. 36, s. 39	- 715,
	1229, 1234
1 Vict. c. 36, s. 40	- 1229,
	1230, 1231, 1234
1 Vict. c. 36, s. 41	- 714,
	1230, 1235
1 Vict. c. 36, s. 42	- 507,
	715, 1230, 1235
1 Vict. c. 44	- - - 871
1 Vict. c. 44, ss. 1, 2	- - - 872
1 Vict. c. 68, ss. 1, 2	- - - 886
1 Vict. c. 77, ss. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5,	6, 7, 8, 9 - - - 303
1 Vict. c. 78, s. 44	- - - 111
1 Vict. c. 80	- - - 1314
1 Vict. c. 84, s. 1	- 712, 717
1 Vict. c. 84, s. 3	- - - 717
1 Vict. c. 85	- 11, 75,
	175, 291, 798
1 Vict. c. 85, s. 1	- - - 130
1 Vict. c. 85, s. 2	- 69,
	81, 787, 788, 791, 794
1 Vict. c. 85, s. 3	- 787,
	788, 789, 790

	PAGE		PAGE
1 Vict. c. 85, ss. 4, 5 -	787	2 & 3 Vict. c. 87, s. 71	993
1 Vict. c. 85, s. 6 -	790	2 & 3 Vict. c. 93 -	492
1 Vict. c. 85, s. 10 -	552	2 & 3 Vict. c. 94, s. 50	12
1 Vict. c. 85, s. 11: 437, 441, 786, 800, 801, 831, 833, 844, 874		3 Vict. c. 5 -	1187
1 Vict. c. 86, s. 2 -	450	3 Vict. c. 9, ss. 1, 2 -	1138
1 Vict. c. 86, s. 10 -	552	3 Vict. c. 9, ss. 3, 4 -	1139
1 Vict. c. 87, s. 2 -	439	3 Vict. c. 97 -	810
1 Vict. c. 87, s. 4 -	446	3 & 4 Vict. c. 5 -	1189
1 Vict. c. 87, s. 7 -	443	3 & 4 Vict. c. 29, s. 8 -	1302
1 Vict. c. 89 -	555, 556, 557, 558, 564, 596	3 & 4 Vict. c. 47, s. 35	1239
1 Vict. c. 89, s. 2 -	568	3 & 4 Vict. c. 50, ss. 10, 11	8
1 Vict. c. 89, s. 3 -	560, 561, 563, 566, 568	3 & 4 Vict. c. 52, s. 4 -	340
1 Vict. c. 89, ss. 4, 5 -	595	3 & 4 Vict. c. 54 -	21
1 Vict. c. 89, s. 6 -	597	3 & 4 Vict. c. 54, s. 1 -	250
1 Vict. c. 89, s. 10 -	580	3 & 4 Vict. c. 54, s. 2 -	120
1 Vict. c. 90, s. 2 -	590	3 & 4 Vict. c. 54, s. 3 -	118
1 Vict. c. 90, s. 5 -	282, 1219, 1235	3 & 4 Vict. c. 64 -	695
1 Vict. c. 91 -	347	3 & 4 Vict. c. 72, ss. 2, 3, 5:	854
1 Vict. c. 91, s. 1 -	347, 777, 963, 1326	3 & 4 Vict. s. 4 -	854, 993
1 Vict. c. 91, s. 2 -	347	3 & 4 Vict. c. 87, s. 71	991
1 & 2 Vict. c. 7, s. 35 -	993	3 & 4 Vict. c. 90 -	301
1 & 2 Vict. c. 14 -	27, 120	3 & 4 Vict. c. 92 -	865
1 & 2 Vict. c. 38, s. 2 -	1186	3 & 4 Vict. c. 96 -	1229
1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, s. 73 -	993	3 & 4 Vict. c. 96, s. 22	715
1 & 2 Vict. c. 45 -	99	3 & 4 Vict. c. 97, s. 4 -	993
1 & 2 Vict. c. 45, s. 1 -	104, 115	3 & 4 Vict. c. 97, ss. 13, 14:	810, 1307
1 & 2 Vict. c. 77 -	178	3 & 4 Vict. c. 111 -	498
1 & 2 Vict. c. 82, ss. 12, 13, 14 -	962	4 Vict. c. 22 -	281
1 & 2 Vict. c. 85 -	498	4 Vict. c. 54, s. 3 -	250
1 & 2 Vict. c. 94, s. 19 -	692	4 & 5 Vict. c. 35, s. 94:	993, 1317
1 & 2 Vict. c. 105 -	178, 997	4 & 5 Vict. c. 55, s. 239	1317
1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 3, 8 -	991	4 & 5 Vict. c. 58, s. 76	993
1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 100 -	993	5 & 6 Vict. c. 29, ss. 25, 28, 31:	962
2 & 3 Vict. c. 23, s. 67 -	610	5 & 6 Vict. c. 29, s. 27	993
2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 26: 481, 1224, 1225		5 & 6 Vict. c. 38 -	16, 31, 998
2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 27 -	482	5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1:	40, 581, 775, 799, 844, 866, 872
2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, ss. 28, 29, 30, 31, 32 -	621	5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 2 -	39, 41
2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, ss. 33, 34 -	622	5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 3 -	41
2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 54 -	11, 1186	5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 10 -	16
2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 58 -	1184	5 & 6 Vict. c. 39 -	402
2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, ss. 63, 66 -	11	5 & 6 Vict. c. 40, s. 8 -	993
2 & 3 Vict. c. 51, s. 8 -	622	5 & 6 Vict. c. 42, s. 7 -	993
2 & 3 Vict. c. 51, s. 9 -	712	5 & 6 Vict. c. 50, ss. 95, 98	1270
2 & 3 Vict. c. 52, s. 29 -	715	5 & 6 Vict. c. 51 -	322
2 & 3 Vict. c. 54, s. 2 -	993	5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 1 -	309
2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 23 -	993	5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, ss. 2, 3	346
		5 & 6 Vict. c. 54 -	851
		5 & 6 Vict. c. 122:	548, 631, 991
		5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 32	627
		6 Vict. c. 10 -	1099
		6 & 7 Vict. c. 12, ss. 1, 2, 3:	879
		6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, ss. 83, 84:	1320
		6 & 7 Vict. c. 25, s. 26	993

Table of Statutes.

lxxxi

	PAGE		PAGE
6 & 7 Vict. c. 26	- 304	8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 2	- 294
6 & 7 Vict. c. 26, ss. 9, 23	- 962	8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 4	- 296
6 & 7 Vict. c. 26, ss. 22, 26	- 961	8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 5	- 296, 297
6 & 7 Vict. c. 34, ss. 1, 2, 3-9	16	8 & 9 Vict. c. 75, s. 2	- 1145
6 & 7 Vict. c. 58, s. 14	- 993	8 & 9 Vict. c. 84, s. 101	- 36
6 & 7 Vict. c. 73: 110, 121, 1014		8 & 9 Vict. c. 85, s. 2	- 993
6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 2, 35	- 942	8 & 9 Vict. c. 87, s. 101	- 102
6 & 7 Vict. c. 83	- 880	8 & 9 Vict. c. 93, s. 71	- 1218
6 & 7 Vict. c. 83, s. 1	- 880	8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, ss. 5, 23,
6 & 7 Vict. c. 83, s. 2	- 887, 890	27, 44, 50	- 1315
6 & 7 Vict. c. 83, s. 3	- 888	8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, ss. 56, 59,
6 & 7 Vict. c. 85: 180, 182,		63, 64, 78, 90, 93	- 1316
187, 230, 630, 1027, 1040		8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 4	- 1188
6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, s. 1: 179,		8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 17: 530,
207, 653, 678, 721, 1045		618, 1187
6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, s. 2	- 86	8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 18	- 1189
6 & 7 Vict. c. 86, s. 41	- 993	8 & 9 Vict. c. 113	- 699, 700
6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, ss. 1, 2	- 1144	8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 4	- 699
6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, ss. 3, 4, 5,		8 & 9 Vict. c. 141, s. 30	- 1248
7, 8, 10	- 1145	9 & 10 Vict. c. 10	- 620, 622
6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 6	- 1145, 1147	9 & 10 Vict. c. 24	- 63
7 Vict. c. 2	- 55, 552, 782	9 & 10 Vict. c. 24, s. 1	- 304
7 Vict. c. 2, s. 1	- 54, 783, 1193	9 & 10 Vict. c. 24, s. 2	- 23
7 Vict. c. 2, s. 2	- 54, 784	9 & 10 Vict. c. 24, s. 3	- 100
7 Vict. c. 2, s. 3: 54, 550, 784, 1193		9 & 10 Vict. c. 24, s. 4	- 294
7 Vict. c. 2, s. 4	- 54, 784, 1193	9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, ss. 3, 4	- 803
7 Vict. c. 19, ss. 5, 9	- 692	9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, s. 7	- 561
7 & 8 Vict. c. 2, ss. 1, 2	- 550	9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, s. 15	- 799
7 & 8 Vict. c. 24	- 1205	9 & 10 Vict. c. 26	- 305
7 & 8 Vict. c. 24, ss. 2, 3	- 1206	9 & 10 Vict. c. 27, ss. 9, 16	- 993
7 & 8 Vict. c. 29	- 907	9 & 10 Vict. c. 28, s. 16	- 623
7 & 8 Vict. c. 56	- 859	9 & 10 Vict. c. 33	- 350
7 & 8 Vict. c. 62	- 556, 568	9 & 10 Vict. c. 36	- 993
7 & 8 Vict. c. 66	- 160	9 & 10 Vict. c. 38, s. 56	- 993
7 & 8 Vict. c. 83	- 713	9 & 10 Vict. c. 39, ss. 41, 103:	993
7 & 8 Vict. c. 87	- 1237	9 & 10 Vict. c. 39, s. 85	- 587
7 & 8 Vict. c. 92	- 893	9 & 10 Vict. c. 59	- 343
7 & 8 Vict. c. 92, s. 14	- 993	9 & 10 Vict. c. 59, s. 1	- 343, 1175
7 & 8 Vict. c. 92, s. 23	- 879	9 & 10 Vict. c. 59, ss. 2, 4	- 1165
7 & 8 Vict. c. 92, s. 29	- 880	9 & 10 Vict. c. 62	- 779, 883, 889
7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 39	- 623	9 & 10 Vict. c. 66	- 210
7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 40	- 993	9 & 10 Vict. c. 93	- 883
7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 3	- 936	9 & 10 Vict. c. 95	- 977
7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 8	- 1181	9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 57	- 932
7 & 8 Vict. c. 102: 343, 1088, 1175		9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 77	- 979
7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, s. 2	- 1081	9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 84	- 993
7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, ss. 26, 31	- 993	9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 95	- 1000
7 & 8 Vict. c. 111, s. 30	- 993	9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 111:
7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 2	- 549	977, 1035
8 Vict. c. 18, s. 149	- 993	10 & 11 Vict. c. 62, s. 8	- 962
8 Vict. c. 20, s. 160	- 993	10 & 11 Vict. c. 66, s. 1	- 445
8 Vict. c. 112, s. 22	- 993	10 & 11 Vict. c. 67, s. 2	- 304
8 Vict. c. 113, s. 18	- 993	10 & 11 Vict. c. 82	- 300, 399
8 & 9 Vict. c. 16, s. 9	- 688	11 Vict. c. 10, s. 3	- 993
8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 1	- 293, 294	11 Vict. c. 12	- 309, 314

	PAGE		PAGE
11 Vict. c. 12, ss. 3, 5, 7, 10 -	344	11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 5 :	291, 296
11 Vict. c. 12, s. 6 -	307, 344	11 & 12 Vict. c. 98, s. 85 -	993
11 & 12 Vict. c. 7, s. 1 -	550	12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 10 -	66
11 & 12 Vict. c. 12 : 124, 161,	312, 345	12 & 13 Vict. c. 68, s. 16 -	994
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42 -	1, 200	12 & 13 Vict. c. 96 -	56, 550
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 1 -	1, 2	12 & 13 Vict. c. 106 -	548
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 2 -	16	12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 117 -	201
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 3 -	47, 48	12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, ss. 239,
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 4 -	5	252 - - - -	630
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 8 -	2, 3	12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 251 :
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 9 -	1	548, 626, 630
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 10 -	3, 4	12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 253 :
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 11 -	5	627, 630
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 12 -	5, 6	12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 254 :
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 13 -	6	990, 991, 994
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 14 -	6, 20	12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 255 :
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 15 -	6	630, 991
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17 : 17,		12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 256 -	630
210, 901		12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 272 -	631
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18 : 18,		12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 273 -	699
199, 202		12 & 13 Vict. c. 109, s. 20 -	714
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 19 : 18, 19		12 & 13 Vict. c. 109, s. 39 -	297
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 20 : 17		12 & 13 Vict. c. 109, s. 45 -	994
22, 255		13 & 14 Vict. c. 21, s. 4 -	96
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 21 -	24	13 & 14 Vict. c. 23 -	1178
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 22 : 5,		13 & 14 Vict. c. 26, s. 6 -	994
19, 27		13 & 14 Vict. c. 37, s. 1 -	300
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, ss. 23, 24 : 20		13 & 14 Vict. c. 39 -	961
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 25 : 19, 26		13 & 14 Vict. c. 101, s. 9 -	813
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 26 -	27	14 & 15 Vict. c. 19 -	20
11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 27 : 17,		14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, ss. 4, 5 -	799
167, 245		14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 8 : 556, 566
11 & 12 Vict. c. 43 - 411,		14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 9 -	244
605, 741, 877		14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 10 : 14, 812
11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, ss. 1, 2 - 1, 2		14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 11 : 14,
11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 8 - 2		15, 812, 905
11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 10 : 2,		14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 13 -	470
147, 148		14 & 15 Vict. c. 53, s. 1 -	1097
11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11 - 147		14 & 15 Vict. c. 55 -	26, 1315
11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 13 - 1		14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 2 -	1053
11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 36 : 146, 147		14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 8 -	265
11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 2 - 27		14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 13 -	40
11 & 12 Vict. c. 45, s. 112 - 700		14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 18 -	6
11 & 12 Vict. c. 45, s. 113 - 993		14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 19 : 58, 59
11 & 12 Vict. c. 45, s. 114 - 623		14 & 15 Vict. c. 78, s. 37 -	994
11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 1 - 538		14 & 15 Vict. c. 81 -	120
11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 4 - 66		14 & 15 Vict. c. 92 -	399
11 & 12 Vict. c. 59 - 399		14 & 15 Vict. c. 93 : 411, 605, 877
11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 25 - 1320		14 & 15 Vict. c. 94, s. 19 -	994
11 & 12 Vict. c. 78 - 161,		14 & 15 Vict. c. 97 -	741
172, 210, 271, 272, 275, 291		14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, ss. 1, 2 :
11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 1 - 272		180, 230
11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 2 - 273		14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, ss. 3, 4 -	180
11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, ss. 3, 4 - 274		14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, ss. 7, 8,
		9, 10, 11 - - -	220

Table of Statutes.

lxxxiii

	PAGE		PAGE
14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, ss. 12,		16 & 17 Vict. c. 30 -	838
13 - - - - -	220	16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 4 -	100, 101
14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 14 : 220, 1319		16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 5 -	104, 105
14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 15 : 220, 622		16 & 17 Vict. c. 33, s. 7 -	104
14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 17 -	699	16 & 17 Vict. c. 32, s. 8 -	24, 257
14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, ss. 18, 19 : 220		16 & 17 Vict. c. 36, s. 33 -	994
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1 : 66, 238		16 & 17 Vict. c. 42, s. 19 -	994
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, ss. 2, 3 : 47, 66		16 & 17 Vict. c. 45, s. 31 -	713
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 7 : 96, 499		16 & 17 Vict. c. 46, s. 32 -	994
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9 : 130,		16 & 17 Vict. c. 46, s. 14 -	587
263, 471, 1194		16 & 17 Vict. c. 48, s. 1 -	733
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 10 :		16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, s. 102 -	700
799, 800, 840, 844		16 & 17 Vict. c. 71 -	1156
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12 :		16 & 17 Vict. c. 85, s. 2 -	187
165, 263, 841		16 & 17 Vict. c. 96, ss. 4, 5, 7 : 1315
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 18 : 391, 421		16 & 17 Vict. c. 96, ss. 9, 13, 14 : 1316
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 19 : 999,		16 & 17 Vict. c. 96, ss. 52, 54 : 1315
1000		16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, ss. 73, 74,
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 20 : 69,		93 - - - - -	1315
1004, 1007, 1012, 1014		16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, ss. 122,
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 21 :		123 - - - - -	1316
977, 1023		16 & 17 Vict. c. 99 -	304, 305
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 22 :		16 & 17 Vict. c. 99, ss. 6, 7 -	482
1023, 1039		16 & 17 Vict. c. 99, s. 12 -	244
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 23 -	60	16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 28 -	707
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24 : 63,		16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 38 -	994
71, 90, 94, 95		16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 95 -	1218
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 25 : 69, 71		16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 116 -	714
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 27 :		16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 218 -	1216
20, 116		16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, ss. 244,
14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 28 :		245, 246 - - - - -	1213
128, 132		16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 248 :
14 & 15 Vict. c. 105, s. 18 -	813	1214, 1215
15 Vict. c. 31 - - - - -	853	16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 249 -	1214
15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, s. 8 -	301	16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 250 :
15 & 16 Vict. c. 56, ss. 15, 16 -	622	1214, 1215
15 & 16 Vict. c. 57 - - - - -	215	16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 251 :
15 & 16 Vict. c. 57, s. 13 : 993, 994		813, 1216
15 & 16 Vict. c. 62, s. 8 -	622	16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 275 -	1218
15 & 16 Vict. c. 70, s. 57 -	994	16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 303 -	1218
15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, s. 31 -	994	16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 304 :
15 & 16 Vict. c. 81, s. 1 -	941	708, 1218
15 & 16 Vict. c. 83, s. 37 -	622	16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, ss. 305,
15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, ss. 4, 5 -	1306	308 - - - - -	1215
15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 23 -	994	16 & 17 Vict. c. 107, s. 311 -	994
15 & 16 Vict. c. 87, ss. 3, 4 -	1199	16 & 17 Vict. c. 118 - - -	16
15 & 16 Vict. c. 87, s. 33 -	700	16 & 17 Vict. c. 119, ss. 1, 2,
16 Vict. c. 2 - - - - -	653	3, 9 - - - - -	1188
16 Vict. c. 16, s. 3 - - - - -	994	16 & 17 Vict. c. 119, s. 6 -	1189
16 Vict. c. 17, s. 4 - - - - -	994	16 & 17 Vict. c. 121 - - -	961
16 Vict. c. 30, s. 4 - - - - -	1290	16 & 17 Vict. c. 121, s. 1 -	304
16 Vict. c. 30, s. 9 - - - - -	183	16 & 17 Vict. c. 128 - - -	1240
16 Vict. c. 32, s. 1 - - - - -	294	16 & 17 Vict. c. 134, s. 3 -	1306
16 Vict. c. 32, ss. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 : 295		17 & 18 Vict. c. 18, s. 54 -	994
16 Vict. c. 32, s. 7 - - - - -	296	17 & 18 Vict. c. 20, s. 27 -	994

	PAGE		PAGE
17 & 18 Vict. c. 23, ss. 17, 18,		19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, ss. 2, 3, 4,
19 - - - - -	643	5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13,
17 & 18 Vict. c. 26 - - - -	321	14, 15 - - - - -	113
17 & 18 Vict. c. 78, s. 9 -	924	19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, ss. 16, 17,
17 & 18 Vict. c. 67, s. 10 -	700	18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24 -	114
17 & 18 Vict. c. 83, s. 27 : 221, 390		19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, ss. 25, 26,
17 & 18 Vict. c. 90, ss. 1, 2, 3 : 1313		27, 28 - - - - -	115
17 & 18 Vict. c. 90, s. 4 -	1314	19 & 20 Vict. c. 20, s. 5 -	620
17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, ss. 2, 3,		19 & 20 Vict. c. 41, ss. 6, 9 -	713
5, 10, 14, 15, 36 - - -	1202	19 & 20 Vict. c. 47, s. 107 -	1081
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 101 -	714	19 & 20 Vict. c. 54, s. 1 44, 994
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, ss. 103,		19 & 20 Vict. c. 54, ss. 2, 3 -	44
140, 164, 176 - - - -	1317	19 & 20 Vict. c. 64 - - - -	128
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 179 -	714	19 & 20 Vict. c. 113 - - - -	210
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 200 -	1317	19 & 20 Vict. c. 113, s. 3 -	994
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 203 -	714	19 & 20 Vict. c. 119, ss. 2, 18 : 994
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, ss. 217,		19 & 20 Vict. c. 119, s. 24 -	1165
220 - - - - -	1317	20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 - - - -	305
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 267 -	56	20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2 : 281,
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 284 -	1317	304, 344, 346, 347, 348, 350,
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 320 -	1317	359, 552, 644, 692, 695, 699,
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 365 -	1225	700, 706, 707, 708, 710, 712,
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 366 :		714, 717, 813, 903, 951, 952,
1225, 1318		955, 962, 1216, 1218
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, ss. 477,		20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 3 -	305, 951
478, 479 - - - - -	482	20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, ss. 4, 5, 6 : 305
17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, ss. 496,		20 & 21 Vict. c. 4 - - - -	403
518, 519 - - - - -	1318	20 & 21 Vict. c. 12, s. 23 -	1081
17 & 18 Vict. 114, s. 2 - - -	1316	20 & 21 Vict. c. 71, s. 28 -	700
17 & 18 Vict. c. 117, s. 64 -	994	20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, s. 15 -	697
17 & 18 Vict. c. 123, ss. 2, 4 -	1315	20 & 21 Vict. c. 83, s. 1 -	1186
17 & 18 Vict. c. 123, s. 3 :		20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, s. 50 -	994
340, 1315		21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2 - - - -	1237
17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, ss. 21,		21 Vict. c. 22 - - - - -	26
89 - - - - -	994	21 & 22 Vict. c. 25 - - - -	865
17 & 18 Vict. c. 137, s. 13 -	994	21 & 22 Vict. c. 72, s. 90 -	994
18 & 19 Vict. c. 11, s. 103 -	994	21 & 22 Vict. c. 87 - - - -	1202
18 & 19 Vict. c. 12, s. 90 -	994	21 & 22 Vict. c. 95, s. 34 -	994
18 & 19 Vict. c. 42, s. 4 -	994	21 & 22 Vict. c. 118, s. 23 -	994
18 & 19 Vict. c. 42, s. 5 -	716	22 Vict. c. 19, s. 51 - - - -	994
18 & 19 Vict. c. 46, s. 20 -	994	22 Vict. c. 20, s. 2 - - - -	994
18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, ss. 24, 29 : 939		22 Vict. c. 25 - - - - -	305
18 & 19 Vict. c. 81 - - - -	1167	22 Vict. c. 25, ss. 13, 14, 15,
18 & 19 Vict. c. 81, s. 1 -	1165	16, 17, 18, 19 - - - -	961
18 & 19 Vict. c. 90 - - - -	144	22 & 23 Vict. c. 4, s. 4 - - -	40
18 & 19 Vict. c. 91, s. 9 -	1212	22 & 23 Vict. c. 17 - - - -	46, 1000
18 & 19 Vict. c. 91, s. 21 -	56	22 & 23 Vict. c. 21, s. 16 -	994
18 & 19 Vict. c. 96, s. 44 -	1213	22 & 23 Vict. c. 31, s. 29 -	658
18 & 19 Vict. c. 104, ss. 6, 7 : 1212		22 & 23 Vict. c. 31, s. 30 -	694
18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 27 -	1320	22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 24 -	656
18 & 19 Vict. c. 126 - - - -	399	23 & 24 Vict. c. 32, s. 2 : 812, 1167
18 & 19 Vict. c. 126, ss. 1, 3 -	400	23 & 24 Vict. c. 32, ss. 3, 4,
18 & 19 Vict. c. 126, s. 10 -	300	5, 6 - - - - -	1167
18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 2 -	1306	23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 8 -	656
19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, s. 1 : 112, 113		23 & 24 Vict. c. 84 - - - -	1303

Table of Statutes.

lxxxv

	PAGE		PAGE
23 & 24 Vict. c. 86, s. 9	- 994	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 5	- 173,
23 & 24 Vict. c. 92, s. 11	- 994		390, 425, 427, 428
23 & 24 Vict. c. 112, s. 15	- 994	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 6	- 173,
23 & 24 Vict. c. 115, ss. 17,			396, 425, 427, 428
18, 19, 20	- 1325	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 7, 8, 9 :
23 & 24 Vict. c. 116	- 881		244, 399
23 & 24 Vict. c. 116, ss.		24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 10, 11 :	407
2, 3	- 886	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 12, 13,
23 & 24 Vict. c. 116, s. 5 :	878, 1075	14	- 411
23 & 24 Vict. c. 116, s. 6	- 880	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 15, 16 :	412
23 & 24 Vict. c. 123, s. 57	- 994	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 17	- 413
23 & 24 Vict. c. 139	- 602	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 18, 19 :
23 & 24 Vict. c. 139, s. 25	- 875		389, 417
24 Vict. c. 7, s. 15	- 1321	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 20	- 389,
24 Vict. c. 7, s. 16	- 1323		418, 717
24 Vict. c. 7, s. 17	- 506, 1323	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 21	- 414
24 Vict. c. 7, ss. 18, 19, 20 :		24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 22	- 415
	952, 1323	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 23 :	414, 717
24 Vict. c. 7, ss. 21, 22, 39,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 24	236, 415
51, 81	- 1323	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 25	- 416
24 Vict. c. 7, s. 96	- 994	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 26	- 417
24 Vict. c. 8, s. 22	- 506	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 27	- 419
24 Vict. c. 8, ss. 23, 24, 28	- 952	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 28, 29 :	422
24 Vict. c. 132, ss. 54, 145	- 994	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 30	- 423
24 & 25 Vict. c. 5, ss. 13, 19	- 644	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 31 :	425, 451
24 & 25 Vict. c. 7, ss. 37, 48	- 529	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 32	- 427
24 & 25 Vict. c. 8, ss. 20, 21,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 33 :	236, 427
22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 29	- 1322	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 34	- 427
24 & 25 Vict. c. 8, ss. 54, 66	- 529	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 35	- 428
24 & 25 Vict. c. 25, s. 13	- 642	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 36 :	428, 429
24 & 25 Vict. c. 53, s. 5	- 1320	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 37	- 428
24 & 25 Vict. c. 66, ss. 1, 2	- 179	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 38, 39 :	430
24 & 25 Vict. c. 75	- 120	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 40	- 431
24 & 25 Vict. c. 84, s. 1	- 609	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 41 :	431, 441
24 & 25 Vict. c. 94	- 77,	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 42	- 431
	79, 542, 701, 751	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 43	- 439
24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 1	- 77	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 44	- 442,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 2	- 77, 538		445, 802
24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 3	- 77, 83	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 45 :	436, 442
24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 4	- 78, 83	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 46 :	442, 802
24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, ss. 5, 6	- 78	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 47	- 443
24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 7	- 78, 79	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 48 :	437, 443
24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 9	- 54	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 49	- 443
24 & 25 Vict. c. 95 :	282, 450, 529	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 50, 51,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 95, s. 48	- 707	52	- 450
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96	- 79, 381,	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 53 :	450, 458
	386, 399, 400, 613, 616, 1194	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 54	- 450
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 1	- 361,	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 55 :	468, 559
	381, 402, 419, 431, 470, 474,	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 56	- 470
	511, 516, 537, 546	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 57, 58 :
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 2	- 361, 396		470, 473
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 3	- 381,	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 59	- 470
	402, 481	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 60	- 474, 475
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 4	- 399,	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 61	- 474
	419, 425, 427, 428	24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 62	- 479

	PAGE		PAGE
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 63 -	480, 481	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 :	79, 399,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 64 :	413,		556, 558, 562, 564, 602
	480, 481	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 1	- 556
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 65, 66 :	480	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 2 :	556,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 67	- 482		559, 568, 572
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68	- 485	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 3 :	556,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 69, 70	502		559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 567
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 71	- 498	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 4, 5,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 72	- 500	6	- - - - 556
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 73	- 504	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 7, 8	- 557
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 74 :	74, 508	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 9, 10 :
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 75 :	509,		569, 875
	511, 514, 515	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 11	- 570
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 76, 77,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 12	- 571
78 - - - -	511	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 13	- 574
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 79	- 512	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 14 :	574, 475
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 80, 81,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 15	- 575
82, 83 - - - -	514	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 16	- 577
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 84, 85,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 17, 18,
86, 87 - - - -	515	19, 20, 21	- - - 578
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88	- 516	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 22 :	578, 581
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 89, 90 :	517	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 23, 24 -	579
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 90	- 529	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 25, 26,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 91	- 537	27, 28 - - - -	582
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 92 :	97, 542	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 29 :	583, 584
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 93	- 542	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 30, 31,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 94	- 543	32 - - - -	585, 586
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 95 :	537, 543	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 33, 34 :	586
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 96	- 546	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 35, 36,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 97	- 538	37 - - - -	587
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 98 :	81, 541	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 38	- 588
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 99	- 542	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 39	- 589
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 100 :		24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 40, 41 -	590
	266, 400, 536	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 42, 43 -	593
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 101	- 405	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 44	- 594
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 102	- 406	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 45 :	594, 808
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 103	- 3, 13	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 46, 47 -	594
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 104	- 13	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 48, 49 -	595
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 105 :	411, 429	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 50 -	599, 802
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 106	- 411	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 51, 52 -	600
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 107 :		24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 53 -	581, 601
	411, 413	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 54, 55 -	601
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 108,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 56 -	81, 602
109, 110 - - - -	411	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 57, 58 -	602
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 111 :	27, 411	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 59, 60,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 112	- 411	61, 62, 63 - - - -	603
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 113	- 396	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 64, 65,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 114	- 397	66, 67 - - - -	604
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 115	- 398	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 68	- 605
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 116 :	242, 244	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 69 -	27, 605
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 117	- 399	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 70, 73,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 118,		74, 75, 76 - - - -	605
119 - - - -	400	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 71, 72 -	555
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 120	- 411	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 77	- 606
24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 121	- 400	24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, ss. 78, 79 -	555

Table of Statutes.

lxxxvii

	PAGE		PAGE
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98 -	702	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 6 :	732, 734
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 1 -	637	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, ss. 7, 8 :	733, 734
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 2, 3 -	639	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, ss. 9, 10,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 4, 5, 6 -	640	11 -	725
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 7 -	642	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 12 :	725, 726
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 8 -	643, 644	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 13 -	731
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 9, 10,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 14 -	723
11 -	643	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 15 -	726
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 12, 13,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 16, 17 :	723
14, 15 -	645	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 18 -	724
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 16, 17,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 19 -	733
18 -	646	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, ss. 20, 21 :	731
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 19 :	646, 669	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 22 :	724, 732
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 20 :	654, 717	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 23 -	731
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 21 -	656	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 24 :	734, 737
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 22 :	659, 717	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 25 -	735
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 23, 24 :	659, 670	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 26 -	739
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 25 :	659, 669	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 27 -	735
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 26 -	670	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 28 -	739
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 27 :	691, 692	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 29 :	721, 739
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 28 -	691	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, ss. 30, 31,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 29 -	692	32, 33 -	740
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 30, 31 :	693	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, ss. 34, 35,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 32 -	694	36, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42 -	741
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 33 -	695	24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 43 -	720
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 34 :	694, 933	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 -	815, 843
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 35, 36,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 1, 2 -	760
37 -	696	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 3 -	761
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 38 -	698	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 4 -	347
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 39 :	659,	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 5 :	260, 772
664, 668, 670		24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 6 -	778
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 40 -	700	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 7 -	773
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 41 :	635,	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 8 -	743
636, 701		24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 9 -	783
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 42 :	641,	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 10 -	785
655, 676		24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 11 :	788, 790
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 43 -	644	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 12,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 44 :	641, 681	13 -	788
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 45 :	637, 644	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 14 -	789
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 46 -	646	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 15 :	789, 794
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 47 -	698	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 16 -	802
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 48 :	702,	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 17,
707, 708, 709, 711, 712, 713, 717		18 -	803
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 49 -	701	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 20 :	791, 793, 804, 821
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 50, 51 :	702	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 21,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 52, 53 :	703	22 -	805
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 54 -	702	24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 23 :	805, 806
24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, ss. 55, 56 :	637		h
24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 1 -	719
24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 2 :	719, 722
24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 3 :	720, 722
24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 4 -	723
24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 5 -	732

	PAGE		PAGE
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 24,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 67 :
25 - - - - -	806		837, 875
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 26 :		24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 68 :
	806, 818, 876		787, 799, 876
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 27 :		24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 69,
	794, 807, 818	70, 71, 72 - - -	876
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 28,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 74,
29 - - - - -	803, 807	75, 76, 77 - - -	877
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 30,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 78 :
31 - - - - -	808		743, 783
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 32,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 79 -	743
33 - - - - -	809	24 & 25 Vict. c. 101 : 91, 179,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 34 -	810	304, 425, 430, 442, 482, 537,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 35 :		639, 659, 671, 787, 883, 1213
	811, 1242	24 & 25 Vict. c. 110, s. 4 -	538
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 36 -	811	24 & 25 Vict. c. 113, s. 9 -	301
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 37 -	812	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, s. 2 -	1322
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 38 -	813	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, ss. 3, 4,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 39,		5, 6, 7 - - - - -	1323
40 - - - - -	816	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, ss. 8, 9,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 41,		10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 -	1324
42 - - - - -	817	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, ss. 23,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 43 -	828	24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29 -	1327
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 44, 45 :	829	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, s. 30 :
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 46 :			597, 1327
	813, 828	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, s. 31,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 47,		32, 37 - - - - -	1327
48 - - - - -	830	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, s. 38 :
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 49 :			786, 874, 1327
	830, 838	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, s. 39,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 51 -	841	40, 41 - - - - -	1327
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 52 -	842	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, ss. 42,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 53 :		43 - - - - -	597
	842, 844	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, s. 44 -	598
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 54 -	844	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, s. 45 :
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 55 -	845		598, 786, 1327
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 56 -	847	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, s. 46 :
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 57 -	848		598, 786, 874, 1328
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 58,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, ss. 47,
59 - - - - -	867	48, 49 - - - - -	598, 1329
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 60 -	868	24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, ss. 50,
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 61,		51, 60, 61, 63 - - -	1329
62 - - - - -	872	24 & 25 Vict. c. 132, s. 9 -	301
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 63 :		24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 43 -	931
	831, 872	24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 159 -	625
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 64,		24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 189 -	978
65 - - - - -	874	24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 205 -	699
24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 66 -	875	24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 221 -	623

THE CRIMINAL LAW,
AS AMENDED
BY THE STATUTES OF 1861.

PART I.

Of Procedure in Criminal Trials.

CHAPTER I.

PROCESS.

Process.] Offences are punishable by indictment or information, or upon summary conviction.¹ The mode of compelling appearance is by summons or warrant.² A summons is usually employed upon summary investigations, although it is used occasionally upon other cases; but, in felony, and many kinds of misdemeanors, a warrant is commonly granted in the first instance. And a warrant is often issued where there are grounds to suspect that the party will not appear.³ This remark applies chiefly to indictable or other misdemeanors, because the rule in felony, subject to exceptions, is to apprehend the offender. It follows that, unless good ground be shown for absence, a warrant will issue upon non-appearance to a summons.⁴ The summons should be delivered personally by the constable, or left at the most usual abode of the accused.⁵ There is a clause in various statutes which enables the magistrate, sitting summarily, to proceed in the absence of the party summoned, and the rule was made general by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 13.

We will advert presently to the law of arrest in criminal cases.

Summons.] Before the passing of 11 & 12 Vict. cc. 42, 43, it was necessary to send a notice to the accused, unless any par-

¹ Sometimes by one justice, sometimes by more than one, as the law of the subject requires.

² 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, ss. 1, 9; c. 43, s. 1.

³ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, ss. 1, 9.

⁴ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 2; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 1.

⁵ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, ss. 1, 9; c. 43, s. 1. See 11 Mod. 345; 14 East, 267.

ticular statute permitted a warrant in the first instance. Process without such summons would have been a misdemeanor.¹ But the law is now altered, and either a summons or a warrant may be granted.² In the case of a summons the information need not be upon oath, nor in writing; in the case of a warrant, both are required,³ unless in the case of an order.⁴ Our business is not with summary convictions, but as a summons is legal, even in cases of felony, we refer to a case under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 2. A summons was served at 9 A. M. to appear on the next day at 11 A. M. at eight miles distant. This was considered reasonable, although the defendant did not return home till 11 P. M. The justices are the judges of the reasonableness of the time, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 2.⁵

A summons should contain the substance of the charge, the day and place of appearance, the signature of the justice, and a direction to the person accused.⁶

Arrest under warrant.] The warrant to arrest must be in writing, and under the hand of the justice, and it is usual to add the seal, although, perhaps, a seal is not essential, unless when expressly required by statute.⁷ Blank warrants are to be avoided, although where a justice kept some signed, and, in a case of murder, delivered one to the constable, who was killed in executing it, it was held that the case amounted to felonious homicide.⁸ The under-sheriff of Staffordshire was accustomed to deliver blank warrants, and an assistant was killed in executing one of them. The judges certified, upon a special verdict, that the offence was manslaughter.

Warrants are granted likewise by secretaries of state,⁹ the privy council, the speakers of both houses of parliament, justices of gaol delivery and oyer and terminer, justices at sessions, and judges of the Queen's Bench.¹⁰ A judge of the Queen's Bench may cause an apprehension for any offence punishable in that court, not being treason nor felony. The warrant may be made returnable before himself or any other justice, in order to procure sureties for the defendant's appearance.¹¹

It is also the practice for a magistrate to sign a warrant upon a certificate of the clerk of the peace that an indictment has been

¹ R. v. Venables, 2 Str. 630; 2 Lord Raym. 1407; 7 Dowl. & Ry. 663; Steph. Sum. 234; see Andr. 238.

² 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 1; c. 43, ss. 1, 10.

³ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 8.

⁴ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 8.

⁵ R. v. Williams, 21 L. J. M. C. 46.

⁶ Steph. Sum. 234, 235.

⁷ Id. 240.

⁸ 8 T. R. 455. He folded up the warrant, signed and delivered it.

Qu. ? as to "signed," for it was signed before. It is so in the report.—A conviction and commitment had been duly signed, but a blank was left for the amount of costs. The court held the omission a mere irregularity, not an excess of jurisdiction. Bott v. Ackroyd, 28 L. J. M. C. 207.

⁹ R. v. Stockley, East, P. C. 310. R. v. Stevenson, 10 St. Tr. 462.

¹⁰ Steph. 239.

¹¹ 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 16.

found.¹ So, at sessions, a bench warrant issues if it be necessary to take the party into custody immediately, or if he be about to leave the country, but not otherwise.²

Information.] The information upon which the warrant issues must be upon oath or affirmation, and in writing, and it must show the specific offence. It must describe the offender, and direct his apprehension.³ A warrant to apprehend A., "and in safe custody him keep, so as to have his body before Her Majesty's justices of the peace at the next sessions," is ill and the custody illegal.⁴ Some person in particular must be designated,⁵ for general warrants have long since been condemned, either in respect of individuals to be arrested under them, or of houses to be searched for stolen goods.⁶ Of course, a warrant to apprehend all persons is bad.⁷ So a bench warrant, calling upon a defendant to find sureties, without mentioning before what judge or justice he is to be bound to appear, is wrong.⁸ It makes no difference that there is only a case of suspicion if probable grounds for the arrest be shown,⁹ or that no indictment has been found,¹⁰ although the ancient doctrine, backed by Lord Coke, was clear to the contrary.¹¹ And the instrument will not be invalidated by the addition of a direction to search the prisoner's premises for stolen goods.¹²

The warrant must contain the prisoner's christian name, or state specifically who he is, or assign some reason for omitting it, so that a warrant to take the body of, "Hood, of, &c. by whatsoever name he may be called or known, the son of Samuel Hood," to answer, &c. was held bad, and a count for malicious stabbing founded on it wrong.¹³

The word "feloniously" should be used, although, perhaps, not always indispensable. But the offence must be so clearly charged as to admit of no doubt of its being felony. A warrant stated that the prisoner had set fire to a parcel of wheat unthrashed, not saying "feloniously:" the parcel might have been dropt by accident, and the prisoner was bailed.¹⁴

¹ R. v. Stokes, 5 C. & P. 148.

² R. v. Whittaker, 2 Fost. & F. 1.

³ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, ss. 8, 10; Caudle v. Seymour, 5 Jur. 1196; 1 Gale & D. 145. If a warrant directs an apprehension "to answer all such matters and things as in Her Majesty's behalf shall be objected against him by A. B. for an assault committed on," &c., no information being recited, whether such warrant be void.

⁴ 8 Jur. 107; Ex parte Nisbett.

⁵ Steph. 240.

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 13, ss. 10, 17; 4 Com. 291. Money v. Leach, 1 Sir W. Bl. 555.

⁷ Supra, n. 6.

⁸ R. v. Downey, 7 Q. B. 281. The court would not impose a condition that no action should be brought.

⁹ 4 Com. 290.

¹⁰ 1 Hawk. c. 28, s. 12; 5 Mod. 80, Holt, C. J.

¹¹ 4 Inst. 177.

¹² Steph. 241; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 103.

¹³ R. v. Hood, 1 Moo. C. C. 281.

¹⁴ R. v. Judd, Leach, 484; 2 T. R. 255. Whether stealing, without saying "feloniously," would suffice. Semble not. See 1 Leach, 162. By counsel arg^o.

The warrant being completed, is delivered to the officer, commonly the constable, who is the proper person, and indictable for disobedience.¹ He must execute the warrant himself, so that where he delivered it to his son, the arrest was illegal, although he was in sight of the arrest. The prisoner was acquitted on a charge of stabbing.² So, where a warrant was directed to J. A. and W. S., B., the assistant of W. S., was held incompetent to execute it in the absence of J. A. or W. S.³

By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 10, a warrant may be directed, 1, to any constable or other person by name, or, 2, generally, to the constable of the parish or district where it is to be executed, or, 3, to such constable and all other constables, &c., or, 4, generally, to all constables within the district. It may be executed at any time and at any place within the justice's jurisdiction, or, in case of fresh pursuit, at any place in the next adjoining county or place within seven miles of the border of the first county, and without backing it. Moreover, when the warrant is directed to all constables, any constable may execute it within the jurisdiction of the justice, although he be not named, and although the place of arrest may not be within the parish for which he is constable, &c.⁴ A warrant ran thus:—"To the constable of D. in the county of W." A county constable who executed it was held liable, for none other than the constable of D. could act, but the action having been delayed for more than six months, the county constable was held to come within the protection of 24 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 8.⁵ In general, therefore, the Acts concerning constables have not been deemed compulsory upon them out of their districts.⁶ Nor is the warrant of a judge of the Queen's Bench included.⁷ The officer, unless armed with due power, is liable to a double hazard; to a civil action, and to violence, which, if ending in death, would be but manslaughter.⁸ And if he should kill the person destined to be arrested, in the act of resistance, the homicide would not be justifiable. This, however, is where the illegality is apparent on the face of a warrant, as in the case of a warrant for the nonpayment of wages;⁹ for the officer must presume that the justice has the power which he assumes.¹⁰ If the warrant be illegal, the justice, not the constable, is punishable.¹¹ And by 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, a warrant properly penned will indemnify the constable, (and police constables are within its provisions,) although, on the part of the magistrate, there has been an excess of jurisdiction. Nevertheless, an arrest without a warrant cannot be made valid by

¹ 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 35.

² R. v. Patience, 7 C. & P. 795. Had he prepared his weapon for resistance, the case might have been altered.

³ R. v. Whalley, 7 C. & P. 245.

⁴ See the case of the constables of Woolwich. The warrant was directed to them generally, naming them. It was held, that they could not execute it out of their district.

R. v. Weir and others, 1 B. & C. 288; 2 Dowl. & Ry. 444.

⁵ Freegard v. Barnes, 21 L. J. Ex. 320.

⁶ Gombert v. Coyney, M^cCl. 469.

⁷ Gladwell v. Blake, 4 Tyr. 166.

⁸ 1 Hawk. c. 31, ss. 63, 64.

⁹ Shergold v. Holloway, 2 Str. 1002.

¹⁰ 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 10.

¹¹ Id. s. 11.

a subsequent warrant.¹ And, without a warrant, the constable is not entitled to the protection of the statute.² So it is in the case of a warrant to search disorderly houses.³ And a warrant to apprehend A. is not good against B., although B. be the person against whom the information was sworn, and whom it was intended to apprehend.⁴

Time for Arrest.] It is said that an arrest may be made in the night.⁵ But it is not usual to execute a search warrant in the night; unless, indeed, there be positive proof and not a probable suspicion.⁶ So, again, an arrest may be made on a Sunday for treason, felony, or a breach of the peace if an indictable misdemeanor.⁷ And a search warrant may also be executed on that day. And this expression, "breach of the peace," extends to all indictable misdemeanors, and was not limited to actual breaches of the peace.⁸ And a subsequent detainer on a Sunday, without collusion, will not be illegal, although the arrest be so.⁹

A warrant to arrest A., that he may appear at the next sessions, means the next sessions after the arrest, not those after the date of the warrant.¹⁰

Place.] As soon as the limit of the jurisdiction is passed, application must be made to another justice of the county or place where the offender is supposed to be, and, after he has backed the warrant, the constable originally intrusted with it is empowered to make the arrest.¹¹ By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 11, warrants may be backed as heretofore in England or Wales. The person charged may be taken before the justice who issued the warrant, or before any other justice of the county, &c. whence the warrant issued, or before any justice of the county, &c. where the offence appears to have been committed. However, if the prosecutor or any of the witnesses for the prosecution should be in the county or place where the offender was apprehended, such offender may, if the justice shall so direct, be taken before such last-mentioned justice, or before any other justice of the same county, &c., and be by him dealt with according to law.¹² By sect. 12 an English warrant may be backed in Ireland, or vice versa, but the offender must be brought before the justice who granted the warrant, or before some other justice of the same county. The warrant may be executed by the

¹ 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 9.

² Postlethwaite v. Gibson, 3 Esp. 226.

³ R. v. Adey, Leach, 209. See 3 Burr. 1768; 6 B. & C. 351.

⁴ Hoyle v. Bush, 1 Man. & Gr. 775.

⁵ 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 62.

⁶ Burn. Tit. "Search Warrant." See 2 Hale, P. C. 150.

⁷ 29 Car. 2, c. 7, s. 6; 11 & 12

Vict. c. 42, s. 4; East, P. C. 324.

R. v. Chandler, 1 Ld. R. 545.

⁸ Rawlins v. Ellis, 16 Mees. & W. 172; 2 Cox, C. C. 96.

⁹ Re Ramsden, 15 L. J. M. C. 113.

¹⁰ Mayhew v. Parker, 8 T. R. 110; 2 Esp. 683, S. C.

¹¹ East, P. C. 324.

¹² See 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 22.

person producing it, or by any person to whom it may be directed, or by any constable or peace officer within the jurisdiction of the justice who indorses it. Similar powers to those in sect. 12 are given with reference to the Isle of Man, Guernsey or Jersey, Alderney or Sark, and vice versa.¹ So, as to Scotland,² and vice versa with regard to Scotch warrants backed in England or Ireland.³ But a warrant from a judge of the Queen's Bench extends over England and Wales.⁴ A party may be taken in his own house, and not only so, the constable is justified in breaking open doors, after a demand of admittance and a statement of his warrant, the intended apprehension being for treason, felony, or a breach of the peace.⁵ Although doors may be broken open upon other occasions mentioned by Hawkins. As upon an affray in a house or elsewhere in the presence of the constable. In the first case the officer may break the house for the purpose of suppressing the affray; in the second, where the party escapes and flies into a house where the constable is denied admittance. So, where a person is lawfully arrested for any cause and takes shelter in a house. But doors may not be broken open upon a warrant to require persons to come forward and take certain oaths prescribed by statute. Although, if an officer be locked in under such circumstances, his friends may break doors to set him at liberty.⁶ And in cases of misdemeanor admittance must, in general, be demanded.⁷

Manner.] The arrest must be made without unnecessary force. The handcuff should not be used unless resistance be obvious, or an attempt to escape ensue. This is the rule in felony, à fortiori, in misdemeanor.⁸ A misdemeanant should not, without strong reason, be handcuffed to a felon. Even to search a drunk and disorderly person, without a strong necessity, is not allowable.⁹ Still, the taking, when lawful, may be accomplished, although the life of the accused be put in peril by it. For his name appears in the warrant, and, innocent or not, he must answer the charge.¹⁰ Hence, if the capture cannot be reasonably executed without bloodshed, the homicide by the officer is justifiable.¹¹ Again, the officer must not, on any pretence, let his prisoner go at large, because he cannot take him again, nor can the person be arrested again upon the same warrant.¹²

Putting aside the question of force, it may be added, that laying hold of a person,¹³ and pronouncing words of arrest, will suffice.

¹ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 13; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 18.

² 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 14.

³ Id. s. 15. See R. v. Kynaston, 1 East, 217; Clerk v. Woods, 2 Ex. 395.

⁴ 4 Com. 291.

⁵ Id. 293; 2 Hawk. c. 14, ss. 3, 7.

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 14, s. 11.

⁷ Launock v. Brown, 2 B. & Ald. 592.

⁸ 6 Dowl. & Ry. 623.

⁹ Leigh v. Cole, 6 Cox, C. C. 329. But, verdict for the defendant.

¹⁰ Steph. 241.

¹¹ 1 Hawk. c. 28, s. 11.

¹² 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 9.

¹³ Steph. 244.

Indeed, if the prisoner has previously submitted to the constable, the actual touch by the hand seems not to be essential.¹ Bare words are certainly insufficient.² Although, if a constable should order a private person to arrest a man running away, the arrest is not the less valid if the constable happens to be out of sight at the actual taking.³

With respect to the showing of the warrant, it is held, that where the officer is known, as where, being duly sworn, he acts within his own district, he is not under an obligation to exhibit his authority, but that where he is not known, or if he should act out of his precinct, he must, if required, do so.⁴ And a private person must, under any circumstances, produce his warrant.⁵ Yet the constable must state the substance of the warrant. The showing of the staff is a sufficient notification of his being a constable.⁶ So where the prisoner said to a bailiff, "Stand off, come not near me, I know you well enough, come at your peril," and then killed him as soon as he had laid hold; this act was held to be murder.⁷

In surety of the peace there is a distinction, for the officer who has the warrant ought to require the party to go with him before he arrests. Upon refusal, the apprehension may follow.⁸

The arrest being made, the person must not be removed out of the jurisdiction of the magistrate, for instance, out of the county.⁹ Nor out of the way, nor detained unnecessarily, as for three days till evidence could be collected,¹⁰ for a constable is not even to hear a case.¹¹ A man was apprehended under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 63, with turnips in his possession. He was conducted first to the house of the farmer who had been robbed, and thence to the constable's house. It was held, that a wound with a knife given by the prisoner would, in case of death, have amounted to manslaughter only, and an acquittal took place.¹²

The arrest being made, the warrant continues in force. A

¹ 1 East, P. C. 300. Williams v. Jones, Ca. Temp. Hardw. 301, where the person arrested was merely locked up in a room. Horne v. Battyn, Bull. N. P. 62. Arrowsmith v. Le Mesurier, 2 New Rep. 211, where the plaintiff went voluntarily before the magistrate and was not touched. See also Berry v. Adamson, 6 B. & C. 528.

² Genner v. Sparks, 1 Salk. 79. Notwithstanding R. v. Wingfield, cited, Dalt. ed. 1792, c. 170, reported, Cro. Car. 251. But this point is not mentioned there.

³ See Blatch v. Archer, Cowp. 64.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 28.

⁵ 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 28. Of course when necessary.

⁶ R. v. Gordon, 1 East, P. C. 315.

⁷ R. v. Pew, Cro. Car. 183.

⁸ 1 Hawk. c. 60, s. 12.

⁹ Bint v. Lavender, 1 C. & P. 659.

¹⁰ Watson v. Carr, 1 Lew. C. C. 52.

¹¹ R. v. Curran, 3 C. & P. 297. See Hall v. Booth, 3 Nev. & M. 315.

¹² R. v. Curran, supra. The word "forthwith" appears, moreover, in the section. So Morris and ux. v. Wise, 2 Fost. & F. 51. Damages 40s., and 10l. for false imprisonment.

person was ordered to find bail for an assault, upon which he ran away, and, on pursuit, cut the constable with a knife. His conviction for resisting lawful apprehension was held right. The warrant was not functus officio.¹

Arrest in foreign countries.] The rule in all civilized countries is that the government may deliver the accused subject of another state to his own tribunal, in order to a trial.² As where the crew of a Dutch ship mastered the vessel and brought her into Deal, the English authorities sent the mutineers into Holland.³ If an arrest be made in a foreign country for a felony in England, the court will not inquire into the circumstances of the case so as to discharge the prisoner, although he has been taken in opposition to the law of that country.⁴ And the same rule extends to misdemeanors.⁵ And there are conventions reciprocally between this country and foreign states for the same purpose under special Acts.

Arrest without warrant.] There may be arrests without warrant. As where a felony or misdemeanor is committed in the presence of a justice, he may take the offender.⁶ And he may give parol orders to arrest persons charged with riot in his absence,⁷ though not in the case of an affray.⁸ The sheriff and the coroner may apprehend in like manner any felon in the county.⁹

We come next to constables,¹⁰ and other such officers, and private persons. Whenever an arrest may be justified by a private person, it is a rule that an officer can justify it.¹¹ Therefore, where a private person can act with or without a warrant, a constable may. On the other hand, it is said to be difficult to find a case where a constable may arrest, but in which a private person may not.¹² As far as the mere arrest is concerned this may be true; but it is observable that a constable is not liable for an apprehension upon reasonable grounds of suspicion,¹³ though it should turn out that there was no real cause for it, whereas a private person cannot avail himself of any such justification.¹⁴ 1. There must be a felony.

¹ R. v. Williams, 1 Moo. C. C. 387.

² 4 Taunt. 44, Heath, J.

³ Id. 43.

⁴ See R. v. Krans, 1 B. & C. 258; 3 East, 157.

⁵ Ex parte Scott, 9 B. & C. 446; 4 Man. & Ry. 361.

⁶ 4 Com. 292.

⁷ 2 Hawk. 133.

⁸ 1 Hawk. 491.

⁹ 4 Com. 292.

¹⁰ See 3 & 4 Vict. c. 50, ss. 10, 11, &c., Canal Police Act.

¹¹ 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 1.

¹² Id. s. 7.

¹³ Samuel v. Payne, 1 Dougl. 359; M'Cloughan v. Clayton, Holt, N. P. C. 478; Beckwith v. Philby, 6 B. & C. 635; Cowles v. Dunbar, 2 C. & P. 565; Hobbs v. Branseomb, 3 Camp. 420; Nicholson v. Hardwicke, 5 C. & P. 495.

¹⁴ Steph. 242, 243; 4 Com. 293; Cald. 291; White v. Taylor, 4 Esp. 80; Stonehouse v. Elliott, 6 T. R. 315.

2. Suspicion upon probable cause. 3. The arrest by the person suspecting. And suspicion cannot be transferred, so that A., who suspects, cannot command B. to arrest.¹ And the assertion of the principal felon will not justify the constable, without more, in apprehending the supposed receiver.² He must suffer for his error in acting upon foreign information unless he has a reasonable ground.³ The following are said to be reasonable grounds of arrest: common fame; vagrancy; suffering pursuit upon hue and cry.⁴ The constable may demand from others, and must hand over his prisoner, to a justice. The private person cannot require aid, and he must surrender his captive to a constable.⁵ Nevertheless, a bystander must be cautious. A man travelling on the highway complained to the constable of the prisoner for ill-using him. The constable tapped the prisoner on the shoulder, and ordered him to stop, for insulting a man on the road. He then desired assistance from A. The prisoner submitted; but afterwards, having previously struck the man who had charged him with ill-usage, ran away. A. pursued him, and was stabbed by him. The judges held the conviction for a capital felony wrong. A. had been present during the whole time, and ought to have known that the original taking was illegal, in consequence of which the re-capture was also illegal, for the blow given by the prisoner was referred to the influence of provocation. A detainer could not be justified unless dangerous consequences were likely to ensue.⁶ So, again, the private person can merely stay an affray and deliver the affrayers to the officer, but the latter can detain the affrayers, in order to find sureties.⁷

Then, with respect to an arrest by a constable without warrant, as all persons are bound to apprehend an offender when they witness a felony, the officer is of course included in the rule.⁸ The penalty for neglect is fine and imprisonment.⁹ So he may arrest without warrant upon a reasonable charge of felony. The constable was told by a woman that the plaintiff had robbed her, and was shown a supposed intercepted letter, upon which he took the plaintiff out of bed at night, and conveyed him to prison. This was deemed a reasonable suspicion, and a verdict against the constable was set aside.¹⁰ All the particulars of the charge need not be related. The prisoner was delivered to the constable for having a forged note in his possession. He shot the constable. It was objected upon the trial for maliciously shooting, that the charge had not been properly made, and that it imputed no legal offence; but the judges said that the charge need not be so accurate as an

¹ 12 Rep. 92.

² Isaacs v. Brand, 2 Stark. 167.

³ Hogg v. Ward, 27 L. J. Ex. 443.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 12, ss. 9, 10, 14.

⁵ Id. c. 13, ss. 7, 8.

⁶ R. v. Curvan, 1 Moo. C. C. 132.

⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 8; 1 Hawk.

c. 63, ss. 14, 15.

⁸ 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 1.

⁹ Id.

¹⁰ Davis v. Russell and others,

5 Bing. 354; Steph. 242; and see

Lawrence v. Hedger, 3 Taunt. 14.

indictment, and that a guilty possession must be presumed.¹ Yet the following mode of making a charge was held too general. The prisoner's master said to the constable, "That is the man; I give you in charge of him." The constable said, "My good fellow, your master gives me in charge of you: you must go with me." The prisoner then cut the constable. The jury did not find that the prisoner knew the person who took him to be an officer. The majority of the judges held the arrest illegal, supposing it to have taken place, and they laid a stress upon the prisoner's inability to escape, and they said, that if the prisoner had waited to give notice of his intention, the constable might have completed his capture.² And in many misdemeanors there is no pretence for an arrest, as where there was a mere threat to break windows without a violation of the public peace.³ So it was where the prisoners were suspected of having stolen apples, found in their possession, unless there had been a disposition on their parts to use extreme violence.⁴ So it was where the constable apprehended the prisoner with some potatoes under his shirt. A rescue being attempted, a man aiding the constable was killed. Here the offence was manslaughter, and a verdict, "Guilty of assault," having been recorded, the conviction was holden wrong.⁵ So upon a charge of indecently bathing, which was abandoned, the constable was cast in damages for his illegal imprisonment of the plaintiff.⁶

The production of the staff is a sufficient notice of authority.⁷ Harrison, a watchman, sought to apprehend a man without any specific charge. There was, however, some ground for suspicion. The watchman had his coat and lantern, and he pulled out his staff, and was stabbed. The jury found Harrison to have been a watchman; but it was clear that no offence had been committed in his presence, and at most there had been only a common assault. It was held that the arrest would have been legal; that if death had ensued the crime would have been murder, and that the conviction was right.⁸ So where one of the police was called in to clear a house of public entertainment at a late hour, the stabbing of him would have been murder had death ensued.⁹ So it is if a policeman should push a person slightly in the street to

¹ R. v. Ford, Russ. & Ry. 329.

² R. v. Thompson, 1 Moo. C. C. 80. By 8 judges; 2 diss. 2 absent.

³ R. v. Bright, 4 C. & P. 387; Cook v. Nethercote, 6 C. & P. 741.

⁴ R. v. Collison, 4 C. & P. 465.

⁵ R. v. Phelps, Car. & M. 180; 2 Moo. C. C. 240. See 2 Russ. C. M. by Greaves, 534. Although the deceased might not have been aiding the constable at the time of his death, he was still entitled to protection, eundo, morando, et redeundo, per Coltman, J.

⁶ Griffin, appellant, Colman, respondent, 28 L. J. Ex. 134.

⁷ R. v. Gordon, ante.

⁸ R. v. Woolmer and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 334. By 9 judges; 4 contra, 2 absent. Bayley, B., who tried the case, and was one of the dissentients, doubted the power of the watchman out of his limits, and thought he should first have stated to the prisoners why he proposed to arrest.

⁹ R. v. Hems, 7 C. & P. 312.

make him go on, with the view of dispersing a crowd. But if the officer knock the prisoner down, the latter is only guilty of manslaughter should death ensue.¹ This principle, however, does not apply to the army, unless, indeed, evidence of usage or authority be given. As where a serjeant arrested a fifer, who killed him. The judges were unanimous that, as the articles of war were not produced, nor any warrant for the arrest, the conviction for murder was wrong.²

It is clear that a constable cannot arrest for an assault not committed in his presence.³ Nor in his presence unless he immediately secures the offender. So in cases of misdemeanor. The constable saw a person engaged in thimblérig. He escaped, but in the evening the constable met with him, and induced a private individual to attempt his capture. The judges held a conviction for stabbing, with intent to prevent lawful apprehension, wrong.⁴ Such, also, was the case of the policeman, who, being assaulted, went away, and sought to make the arrest in the evening. A count for wounding could not be sustained.⁵ Nor, if the policeman be absent, does the Metropolis Police Act make any difference.⁶ Nor under the 66th section of that Act, unless the offender be caught in the fact.⁷ A fortiori, there can be no arrest upon suspicion that the party has committed a former misdemeanor,⁸ nor for an affray in like manner;⁹ but if persons present at an affray deliver the affrayer to the constable, it seems that a detainer, in order to take him before a justice, would be lawful.¹⁰ And an exhortation to resist would justify a taking by the officer witnessing it, for that is inciting a breach of the peace.¹¹ Loud words in the street will not serve for this purpose.¹² Nor if a man be noisy in a public house, without more, can the constable turn him out as a constable, yet he may, on request, aid the landlord in doing so.¹³ If the noise were to disturb the neighbourhood, the constable would be right in interfering at once, for that would be an offence.¹⁴

The rule in *Gardener's case*¹⁵ becomes varied if there be one continuing transaction. As where a policeman followed a man

¹ R. v. Hagan, 8 C. & P. 167. B. 524; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, ss. 54, 63. The indictment was under 1 Vict. c. 85, for cutting and wounding.

Verdict, guilty of a common assault: three years' imprisonment. Levi v. Edwards, 1 C. & P. 40. ⁷ S. C., Bowditch v. Balchin, 19 L. J. Ex. 327; 5 Ex. 378.

² R. v. Withers, 1 East, P. C. 233; 1 Russ. C. M. 581. ⁸ Fox v. Gaunt, 3 B. & Adol. 798.

³ Coupey v. Henley, 1 Esp. 540; Steph. 242. See also R. v. Brown, Car. & M. 314. ⁹ 1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 17; East, P. C. 305.

⁴ R. v. Gardener, 1 Moo. C. C. 390. ¹⁰ East, P. C. 305. Derrecourt v. Corbishley, 24 L. J. Q. B. 313.

⁵ R. v. Walker, 23 L. J. M. C. 123; Dears. 358. ¹¹ White v. Edmunds, Peake, 89.

⁶ Simmons v. Millengen, 2 C. ¹² Hardy v. Murphy, 1 Esp. 294. ¹³ Wheeler v. Whiting, 9 C. & P. 262.

¹⁴ Howell v. Jackson, 6 C. & P. 723.

¹⁵ Ante.

who had been beating his wife, and arrested him, on request, seventy yards from his own door, for there was ground to fear that he might return and injure the woman.¹ And a policeman at the station may detain a person brought in charge without reference at all to the arrest.² If A. turn aside in the street for a moment, the constable cannot legally collar him.³

Breaking doors without warrant.] To justify the breach of a house without a warrant, there must be a felony, or an affray, or breaking of the peace, so as to make it of necessity to enter; also there must be a statement of the matter, and reasonable cause. In such a case, killing by the person would be murder, but justifiable homicide in the officer.⁴ Mere suspicion will not suffice, it must be reasonable, and the defendant must plead it specially.⁵

Excess of violence.] A reasonable degree of resistance or force on attempting to apprehend, must be preserved. The prisoner got into an empty third-class carriage; when asked for a ticket, he had none, and was locked up in a second-class till he came to S. There a policeman collared him, as he did not pay the full fare demanded. S. was the head quarters, and the prisoner could not have been dealt with at the place where he wished to alight. A struggle took place, and the prisoner used the knife. Wightman, J., allowed a verdict of "Guilty," on the ground of excess, although he would not give any opinion as to the right of conveying a passenger against his will from one station to another.⁶

Arrest by private persons.] Any private person present at a felony may arrest without warrant.⁷ Indeed, he is liable to fine and imprisonment in case of an escape, unless he be under age.⁸ Or if he refuse to assist an officer.⁹ And he may interfere to prevent a felony, as where a husband might, but for the interference of a private person, have murdered his wife whom he was threatening.¹⁰ Under such circumstances, doors may be broken in pursuit.¹¹ And the same tests, whether murder or justifiable homicide, apply, as in the constable's case.¹²

Herein is a distinction. If there be no warrant, the private person becomes liable to an action if no felony nor offence be

¹ R. v. Light, Dears. & B. 332; 27 L. J. M. C. 1.

² Bowditch v. Fosberry, and others, 19 L. J. Ex. 339. Whether the defendant was within the protection of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 94, s. 50. Qu.?

³ Booth v. Hanley, 2 C. & P. 288.

⁴ Steph. 242; 2 Hawk. c. 14, ss. 7, 8.

⁵ 4 Com. 293; Steph. 243. Ledwith v. Catchpole, Cald. 291. Mure v. Kaye, 4 Taunt. 34. Price v. Seeley, 10 Cl. & F. 28.

⁶ R. v. Mann, 6 Cox, 451.

⁷ 1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 16; 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 1. R. v. Price, 8 C. & P. 282; 4 Com. 293.

⁸ 4 Com. 293; 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 1.

⁹ 1 Hawk. c. 63, s. 13; 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 7.

¹⁰ Handcock v. Baker and others, 2 B. & P. 260.

¹¹ 4 Com. 293.

¹² Id.

proved, whereas the constable is discharged in such a case.¹ Yet suspicious conduct at the time of arrest will afford a ground for mitigation of damages.² Although suspicion will not admit of taking a man to the place where a theft has been committed in order to ascertain whether he be the thief.³

Moreover, although an attempt to commit felony is only a misdemeanor, a private person may arrest upon witnessing the attempt. A stable having been recently attempted, the prisoner was found concealed in the yard, and was apprehended by a servant. The prisoner soon afterwards stabbed the servant, being detained by the master. The judges held the detainer lawful, and that the conviction was proper.⁴ And, in this case, the apprehension, without warrant, being on violent suspicion, was lawful. So where a person was seen in a board-house, upon which he ran away, but was captured on fresh pursuit, it was held, that his apprehension and detention were legal, and that his conviction for wounding a private person was right.⁵ It mattered not that the prisoner had abandoned his purpose before the arrest. Some real mischief, however, must evidently be in view. The jury are not to presume it.⁶ But the taking must be in the fact, or on fresh pursuit.⁷

Likewise, by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 103, any person found committing any offence, either upon indictment or summary conviction under this Act, except angling in the day time, may be immediately apprehended without warrant by any person, and taken before a neighbouring justice, with such property, if any. The justice may grant a search warrant upon reasonable grounds of suspicion; and also any person to whom any property shall be offered to be sold, pawned, or delivered, upon reasonable suspicion, may take the person so offering before a justice, together with the property. By sect. 104, any constable or peace officer may take any person without warrant, when he shall be found lying or loitering in any highway, yard, or other place, having reasonable grounds to suspect that the person has committed, or is about to commit a felony against the Act, and shall bring him before a justice as soon as may be.⁸ The owner of property, or his servant, or any person authorized by him, may apprehend any offender without warrant if found in the act.⁹ Under those statutes, a conviction for stabbing a police constable, who caught the prisoner damaging roots and plants in a garden, was supported.¹⁰

¹ Samuel v. Payne, 1 Dougl. 359. Adams v. Moore, Selw. N. P. 910.

² Cowles v. Dunbar, 2 C. & P. 565.

³ Hall v. Booth, 3 Nev. & M. 116.

⁴ R. v. Hunt, 1 Moo. C. C. 93.

⁵ R. v. Howarth, Id. 207.

⁶ Butler v. Turley, Moo. & M. 54; 2 C. & P. 585; under 1 Geo. 4, c. 56.

⁷ Hanway v. Boulton, 4 C. & P. 350.

⁸ The person apprehending is entitled to notice of action, sect. 113; and see Beechey v. Sides, 9 B. & C. 806; 4 Man. & Ry. 334. Bulling v. Ferris, 1 Mees. & W. 628. Reed v. Cowmeadow, 7 C. & P. 821; 6 Ad. & E. 661.

⁹ R. v. Curran, 3 C. & P. 397.

¹⁰ R. v. Fraser, 1 Moo. C. C. 419.

And if a person in his own dwelling-house be disturbed, he may arrest the disturber,¹ that is to say, if there be a continuing, not a momentary affray, or if there be reasonable ground for supposing that the affray will be renewed.²

It is a mistaken notion to suppose that a soldier ceases to be a citizen. This error was very mischievous in 1780,³ and not only was the law misunderstood in that year as to soldiers, but likewise as to private persons. Soldiers can suppress riots in their private character as well as others.⁴

Some notification of the arrest should be made by the private person. The staff of the constable is sufficient in his case, but a private person must desire the party to surrender, or state the reason of the arrest. For want of attending to these observances, a conviction for maliciously cutting was holden wrong, although the prisoner was detected in the act of stealing wheat.⁵ However, if a man be seen breaking in or out of a house, the circumstances themselves are sufficient, and the private person need not give any warning.⁶ So where the owner cried "Stop thief," the notification was sufficient.⁷

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 10, any person may apprehend and deliver to a constable a person found committing any offence against the Act, so that the latter may, as soon as may be, be taken before a justice. And by sect. 11, any person may apprehend another committing any indictable offence in the night, and deliver him to a constable. Doubts had been entertained as to the power according to the preamble of the Act.⁸

[Arrest under 9 Geo. 4, c. 69.] By 9 Geo. 4, c. 69, s. 2, powers to arrest are given to owners and occupiers of land.⁹ Under sect. 9, however, nothing is said on the subject of arrest. Therefore, upon an indictment for shooting at a keeper, it was objected, that as sect. 2 only authorised the taking of offenders against sect. 1, there could be no ground for a capture in respect of an offence under sect. 9. But the judges held, that the prisoners had been guilty of an offence under both sects. 1 and 9. And Bayley, B., had intimated the same opinion at the trial, observing, that although from circumstances of aggravation, the offence was punishable under the 9th section, it was still an offence within the 1st section.¹⁰ As to notification, the principles above mentioned apply. A gamekeeper found the prisoners upon his master's land: they ran away, being armed with guns, obviously for the purpose

¹ Timothy v. Simpson, 1 Cr. M. & R. 757; see also Ingle v. Bell, 1 Mees. & W. 516.

² Price v. Selby, 10 Cl. & Fin. 28.

³ 4 Taunt. 449.

⁴ 2 B. & P. 264.

⁵ R. v. Ricketts, 3 Camp. 68. See R. v. Payne, post.

⁶ R. v. Howarth, 1 Moo. C. C. 207.

⁷ R. v. Robinson, 2 Starkie on Ev. 693, note (k). The prisoner was executed.

⁸ See R. v. Davis, 7 C. & P. 783. R. v. Jones, 9 C. & P. 258.

⁹ See hereafter, "Game."

¹⁰ R. v. Ball, 1 Moo. C. C. 330.

of destroying game. No notice of arrest was necessary.¹ A gamekeeper interfered off his own manor on the manor of another lord, but did not offer forcibly to apprehend the poachers. A wounding under these circumstances was held to be within 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, although the brother of the prosecutor had gently laid hold of a gun in the hands of one of the prisoners in order to see him sufficiently for the purpose of identification.²

A bare right of shooting which negatives ownership and occupation, confers no protection on a person acting as gamekeeper.³

Again, by 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 31, trespassers in the day-time in search of game may be required to quit the land where they are found, and to tell their names and places of abode. In cases of refusal or evasion, or of wilfully continuing or returning upon the land, the offenders may be arrested. It has been held, that the party must not only have been required to quit the land, but also to tell his name, and that the wilful return must be applied to the same land for the purpose of pursuing game there.⁴ Damage was done to a fence by a poacher's dog. This was not a malicious injury within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 24. The gamekeeper was, therefore, not justified in arresting the poacher. But, having arrested him, he might ask him to tell his name, and, on his refusing, might detain him. An indictment, therefore, for wounding the keeper was sustained, the jury having found that the name and place of abode had been asked. In this case likewise it seems to have been considered that both requirements to quit the land and tell the name and abode need not co-exist, that one would suffice. In this respect Long's case does not agree.⁵ It is observable, that the statute 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 11, extends to all indictable offences committed in the night. It consequently includes all cases of night poaching which may be the subjects of an indictment. So that although evidence was wanting to prove ownership or occupation so as to warrant an arrest under 9 Geo. 4, c. 69, Willes, J., had no doubt as to the application of the Act of Victoria.⁶

Hue and cry.] Hue and cry, a mode of pursuit now little in use, and of a much more extensive character than the cry of "Stop thief,"⁷ is so far connected with the criminal law of arrest as that

¹ R. v. Payne and others, 1 Moo. C. C. 378; 7 C. & P. 785.

² R. v. Warner and others, 1 Moo. C. C. 380; 5 C. & P. 525. R. v. Addis, 6 C. & P. 388. See R. v. Taylor and another, 7 C. & P. 266. The fact of shooting as a gamekeeper over a manor for seven years is evidence of the right. R. v. Wall, 2 Cox, 288.

³ R. v. Price, 5 Cox, 277, and R. v. Addis was cited. R. v. Wood, 1 Fost. & F. 470.

⁴ R. v. Long, 7 C. & P. 314.

⁵ R. v. Prestney, 3 Cox, 505.

⁶ R. v. Sanderson and others, 1 Fost. & F. 598.

⁷ In hue and cry the party is described and followed. The constable of the parish gives notice to the adjoining constable if the offender be not found, and so on till he be taken or driven to the seaside.

private persons are bound to take the offender, and, as it seems, without notice. A house may be broken for the purpose of this taking, if the party be there, after a demand of admittance, and should no felony have been committed, if the pursuers have abided by the customary process, it will make no difference. Should the constable be absent, hue and cry may be made without him; and it may be added, that in case of a warrant to apprehend a particular individual, there is no necessity, upon hue and cry made, to have it backed upon entering a strange county. And if a thief turns round upon hue and cry and slay one of his pursuers, he and all his company will be guilty of murder, except such as have been taken, or have quietly submitted.¹

Arrest.—Colonies.] By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 34, ss. 1 and 2, persons having committed offences in the colonies and escaping into the United Kingdom, or vice versa, may be apprehended.² But the offences must have been treason, or such felonies as the justices of the peace cannot try at their quarter sessions under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38.³ But now by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 118, this provision is extended to every felony.

Arrest.—High seas.] By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 2, in all cases of indictable offences committed on the high seas, or in any creek or other place where the admiralty of England claims jurisdiction, and in cases of crimes or offences committed on land beyond the seas, for which an indictment may be preferred in England or Wales, any justice of England or Wales may issue a warrant to apprehend the offender, and cause him to be brought before such justice, or some other justice or justices. And there may be a joint warrant of two or more justices by virtue of the same clause.

¹ R. v. Jackson and others, 1 Hale, P. C. 464. See further on this subject, 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 5, &c.; 4 Com. 293, 294; and as to the evidence necessary to justify an arrest in the county court, see R. v. Davies, 30 L. J. M. C. 159; 8 Cox, 486.

² See sects. 3—9.

³ Sect. 10.

CHAPTER II.

THE DEPOSITIONS.

Depositions.] The next steps are to take the depositions of the witnesses, and the examination of the prisoner,¹ and to return them to the court.² All the depositions must go, not merely those of the witnesses whom the justice binds over.³ Moreover, since the Prisoner's Counsel Bill, all that the witnesses have said should be returned,⁴ for the object of the legislature was to acquaint prisoners with the evidence likely to be brought against them. But it is, of course, no objection that the witness adds to his evidence at the trial.⁵ If the prisoner interposes a material observation, it should be taken down in the depositions;⁶ and if not so taken down, the judge will not allow any evidence of it to be given.⁷ And it is no excuse for a magistrate to urge, in withholding a confession, that it was wanted for the grand jury.⁸ Although, if the magistrate neglect his duty by not returning a confession, such a statement is not, on that account to be excluded.⁹ There is this distinction; the justice must return everything, but it seems that he need not bind over every witness.¹⁰

Copies of the depositions must, on demand, be furnished¹¹ to the accused, and if he wishes to inspect them at his trial, he may do so without fee or reward.¹² But the prisoner is not entitled to a copy of his own statement.¹³

The depositions and examination must be in writing,¹⁴ the former upon oath, the latter without oath. The prisoner must be present when the evidence is given; and if absent, the witnesses must be resworn, and their statements carefully read over to him. He is thus enabled to cross-examine, or put any questions he may think proper or necessary.¹⁵ The depositions are then signed by the justice and by the witnesses, although it is not indispensable that the latter should sign, but it is almost the universal custom for

¹ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17.

² Sect. 20.

³ R. v. Fuller, 7 C. & P. 269.

⁴ A fortiori, what is material. R. v. Weller, 2 Car. & K. 223.

⁵ R. v. Grady and another, 7 C. & P. 650. R. v. Coveney, Id. 667.

⁶ R. v. Weller, ut supra.

⁷ S. C.

⁸ R. v. Fallows and another, 5 C. & P. 508.

⁹ R. v. Wilkinson, 8 C. & P. 662.

¹⁰ R. v. Smith, 2 Car. & K. 207.

¹¹ At a reasonable rate, not exceeding three halfpence for a folio of ninety words; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 27. But the section does not include surety of the peace. Humphreys, ex parte, 19 L. J. M. C. 189; 1 Pr. Rep. 323; 4 New. S. C. 179. S. C. nom. R. v. Justices of Hereford.

¹² 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 4; s. 3 is repealed.

¹³ R. v. Aylett, 8 C. & P. 669.

¹⁴ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17.

¹⁵ See R. v. Arnold, 8 C. & P. 621. R. v. Johnson, 2 Car. & K. 354; 2 Russ. C. M. 875; 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 8.

them to do so. The justice should subscribe the examination of the prisoner,¹ but the prisoner may object to sign it, although it should be tendered to him.²

Before the prisoner's statement is received, the whole of the evidence for the prosecution should be gone through. Garrow, B., once admitted a statement made before, but expressed doubts as to the legality of admitting it.³

The evidence being completed, the statute⁴ directs that, without requiring the attendance of the witnesses, the justice shall have the depositions read over to the prisoner.⁵ It is also ordained⁶ that

¹ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18.

² See 2 Russ. C. M. 881.

³ R. v. Fagg, 4 C. & P. 566.

⁴ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18.

⁵ This being done, these words are to be said by the justice to the prisoner: "Having heard the evidence, do you wish to say anything in answer to the charge? You are not obliged to say anything unless you desire to do so, but whatever you say will be taken down in writing, and may be given in evidence against you at your trial." Then the prisoner's statement, if any, should be written down and read to him; it should be signed by the justice and kept with the depositions, and it may be given in evidence without further proof, unless it be shown that the justice did not sign the statement.

There is a further caution. The justice may give the prisoner to understand that he has nothing to fear from any threat, nor to hope from any promise or favour. A proviso then follows enabling the prosecutor to give in evidence any admission, confession, or other statement which may, by law, be admissible. This proviso was introduced lest, in the absence of the cautions, it might be inferred that the prisoner's confession would not be admissible. Proof of the caution must be given déhors any declaration to that effect contained in the caption of the statement. R. v. Higson, 2 Car. & K. 769.

It would seem that the framer of the clause intended to make both the cautions contemporaneous. But the judges seem to think that if there is no evidence of a threat or promise, the first caution is sufficient. They have considered that the first proviso containing the second caution is directory. The deposition in the schedule contains only the first caution. If a threat or promise appears in the evidence, a second caution comes into action. R. v. Bond, 19 L. J. M. C. 138; Den. 517; 3 Car. & K. 337. R. v. Sansome, 19 L. J. M. C. 143; 3 Car. & K. 332; Den. 545.

By Parke, B., 19 L. J. M. C. 147, "The last proviso appears to me to extend to both parts of the previous clause." So that, in the absence of a threat or promise, the examination, according to the opinion of Parke, B., would be admissible without either caution, if it were admissible by law independently of the statute.

However, in R. v. Sansome, Erle, J., said that it would be prudent to give both cautions, and the court agreed; Den. 548, 549. Instead of putting questions the prisoner made a statement, and the statement was written down without a caution. It was held, that this was not evidence per se, but that any one who heard the prisoner speak might refresh his memory from the written document and give evidence. But in such a case the prisoner should be told by the justice that it was not the time for him to make a statement. R. v. Watson, 3 Car. & K. 111.

⁶ Sect. 19.

the place of examination shall not be deemed an open court, but the justice may debar all access if he shall think that the ends of justice will be thereby promoted.¹ By another clause,² if the offence has been committed out of the jurisdiction of the justice before whom the prisoner appears, then if no witnesses come forward, and no witnesses reside within the jurisdiction, the prisoner may be taken before a justice of the county, &c. where the offence was committed. But should a witness appear against him, and the justice be not satisfied of his guilt, the depositions are to be sent with a warrant to a justice where the offence happened. If a case be made out, the prisoner may be dealt with before the first justice. Should the second justice discharge the prisoner, all recognizances entered into before the first become void.

It has been said that should the slightest case be made out, the justice ought to call upon the accused for his defence.³ But there are judicial opinions to the contrary.

By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 25, after the evidence for the prosecution, the justice is either to discharge or commit the prisoner, and if the evidence should raise a strong or probable presumption of guilt, he is to be committed.

It should be observed, that the prisoner is not, of right, entitled to the assistance of an attorney, but he is never refused. In summary proceedings the accused can claim both counsel and attorney.⁴ Otherwise, it lies in the discretion of the magistrate to allow their presence.⁵ The prisoner may then call witnesses, who are to be examined upon oath;⁶ and, possibly, it may be discretionary with the justice to hear them or not, although the judges are inclined to consider the hearing more obligatory upon the justice since the repeal of 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 2.⁷

Depositions are not merely evidence in the particular case. Upon all subsequent inquiries, civil or criminal, they are so. For such purposes, it is no objection that they are not signed by the authorities.⁸ And they must not be so framed as to follow the clause of a particular statute.⁹

¹ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 19.

² Sect. 22.

³ Steph. 251.

⁴ 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 2.

⁵ Steph. 251.

⁶ Id.

⁷ Which seemed to confine the examination to the prosecution.

⁸ Leach v. Simpson, 7 D. P. C. 513.

⁹ Miles v. Collett, 3 M. & P. 242.

CHAPTER III.

BAIL AND HABEAS CORPUS.

Bail.] By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 23, justices may bail in felony and certain misdemeanors¹ at discretion, with one or more sureties.² The magistrate may bail after commitment; or he may certify on the back of the commitment warrant that he consents to bail, upon which any justice attending at the gaol may, on production of the certificate, admit the prisoner to bail. If the sureties cannot conveniently attend there, a duplicate of the certificate may be signed by the justice committing, and any justice may then take the bail of the sureties, and, on the recognizance being forwarded to the gaol with the certificate, a justice may bail the accused at the gaol. By sect. 24, a warrant of deliverance shall be lodged by the justice with the keeper of the gaol, unless there be a detainer for some other offence.

Upon a committal, however, for other misdemeanors than those mentioned in the note, the justice must accept bail if the accused require it.³ On the other hand, the justice need not offer bail; the prisoner must tender it.⁴ The prisoner may likewise apply at the gaol to a visiting justice. And in all cases where another than the committing justice takes bail, the last-mentioned justice shall transmit the recognizances to the committing justice, who shall transmit them to the proper officer. But no person charged with treason shall be bailed otherwise than by a secretary of state, or by the court of Queen's Bench, or by a judge thereof in vacation.⁵ The right of traverse is abolished, and, in lieu of it, the court may adjourn the trial and impose such terms as to bail as they may think fit, and respite the respective recognizances.⁶

The power to accept bail is a judicial duty, and, without proof of

¹ Assault with intent to commit felony; attempt to commit felony; obtaining property by false pretences, or an attempt at it; receiving property stolen or detained by false pretences; perjury and subornation; concealment of birth; wilful or indecent exposure of the person; riot; assault in pursuance of a conspiracy to raise wages; assault on a peace officer in the execution of his duty, or upon any person acting in his aid; neglect or breach of duty as a peace officer; any misdemeanor the costs of which may be allowed out of the county

rate; for instance, the misdemeanors created by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19. See sect. 14.

² It was customary before the passing of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 33, s. 3 (now repealed), and it is still usual, to require two bail in felony. Although one bail may certainly be taken if thought fit. The prisoner himself should be bound over. See 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 4.

³ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 23.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 4.

⁵ Sect. 23, (n. 3,) sup.

⁶ 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 27.

express malice, no action will lie against the justice, even although the sureties tendered are sufficient.¹ The decision applies to cases where the defendant is entitled to bail.

The absence of a witness for the prosecution will not entitle the party to bail, especially in a case of murder, the bill having been found, and it will not help the prisoner that the coroner's inquisition is evidently faulty.² But the attorney-general may enter his noli prosequi. However, when the trial had stood over for two assizes in consequence of the absence of a material witness, believed to have gone abroad as a soldier (and it was so stated upon affidavit), and that there was no prospect of his return for some time, the judge ordered the discharge of the prisoners, without calling upon them to enter into recognizances at a future day, and he discharged the recognizance of the prosecutor,³ although it is customary not to discharge but respite the recognizance.⁴ So upon a charge of murder, the prisoner being confined as a lunatic under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 54, the recognizances were respited.⁵

Sureties.] The justice must see to the sufficiency of the sureties, and he may examine them upon oath.⁶ If through fraud or mistake inadequate bail should have been accepted, the justice may require a better security and a new recognizance, or commit the prisoner in default.⁷ Strictly speaking, he is liable to a fine for neglect in the matter,⁸ and, at common law, the bailing of persons not bailable is punishable, as it seems for an escape,⁹ and it is not an excuse to plead ignorance of the prisoner's commitment.¹⁰ Nevertheless, if the bail surrender their principal, the justice will be safe.¹¹ Excessive bail must be carefully foreborne. It is complained of as a great grievance by stat. 1 Wm. & M. sess. 2, c. 2,¹² and it is a misdemeanor to deny, delay, or obstruct bail when allowable.¹³ Still, the custom of requiring 24 or 48 hours' notice is not a contravention of this rule, for the magistrate must ascertain, and especially in serious cases, the solvency and respectability of the bail.¹⁴

Fresh bail.] An indictment for conspiracy having been removed ¹ Linford v. Fitzroy, 18 L. J. M. C. 108; 13 Q. B. 240.

² Ex parte Andrews, 1 New. S. C. 199; 2 Dowl. & L. 10.

³ R. v. Bridgeman, Car. & M. 271.

⁴ R. v. Lord Drummond, 11 Mod. 200.

⁵ R. v. Cobus, 1 Cox, 207.

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 4.

⁷ Id.

⁸ 27 Ed. 1, c. 3; 2 Hawk. c. 15, ss. 5, 6.

⁹ 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 7.

¹⁰ Id. s. 12.

¹¹ Id. ss. 5, 6.

¹² No. 10.

¹³ 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 13.

¹⁴ 2 Hawk. ut sup. See R. v. Badger, post. An application for bail was made on Friday, but an intention appeared to keep the prisoner in custody till Monday. Bail was accepted. R. v. Carlile, 6 C. & P. 628.

by certiorari, and bail given, it was moved after conviction, but before judgment, to quash the indictment for insufficiency. Pending the motion, one of the bail became insolvent and offered a composition to his creditors, and it was sought to charge the defendant with fresh bail, but the court would not accede to the demand.¹

Recognizance.] The prosecutor² and witnesses are bound over by recognizance to appear at the trial and give evidence.³ When the recognizances are subscribed by the justice, they must be delivered to the officer of the court.⁴

A recognizance to appear at the next assizes and general gaol delivery does not apply to a special commission as the winter assize, so that upon default, such a recognizance was not estreated.⁵

The binding over must be done by a justice, not by the court, and it was so held in a case under the Act for establishing the Central Criminal Court,⁶ but it may be done at any time during the session.⁷ So where an escaped prisoner was retaken, the judge refused to bind over the constable to the next assizes. He thought that application should be made to a magistrate.⁸

If a witness will not enter into the recognizance, a committal may be made out,⁹ and under such circumstances, it is competent to commit a feme covert,¹⁰ whose husband is the proper person to be bound for her. In the case of a child, the constable or police officer usually enters into the recognizance, and the travelling or other expenses are allowed. In such a case where the child was taken away, the judge respited the recognizance to the next assizes.¹¹ So the recognizances of commoners were respited from session to session until the trial of an indictment against a peer was disposed of.¹²

¹ 3 Dowl. (N. S.), 132, Wightman, J. This motion should be made at chambers.

² Whenever a prosecutor shall have preferred a bill of indictment, and shall move the court for process to issue thereon, the person so applying shall, before the issuing of the process, enter into such recognizances as the court shall direct to prosecute the law with effect. Reg. Gen. C. C. C. Jan. sess. 1842; Car. & M. 254.

³ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 20.

⁴ Id.

⁵ R. v. Walker, 1 Cox, 14.

⁶ R. v. Carlton, 7 C. & P. 151.

⁷ R. v. Carlton, ut sup. R. v. Gregory, 1 Cox, 198.

⁸ R. v. Dade, 1 Lew. 196. But it may be questioned whether the justice would have the power.

⁹ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 20. By this Act the party refusing may be imprisoned till the trial, unless he enters into the recognizances. Should the accused be discharged, the justice may issue his order for the discharge of the witness so imprisoned.

¹⁰ Bennet and ux. v. Watson, 3 M. & S. 1.

¹¹ Harrison, Dig. p. 833.

¹² R. v. Douglas, Car. & M. 193. The indictment was against Lord Cardigan and others. The houses of parliament were not sitting, and the indictment was formed at the Central Criminal Court.

The initials of the names of the magistrates were inserted on a writ of scire facias upon a recognizance of bail. The court held the writ good on demurrer. A consonant, as D., is a good christian name as well as a vowel.¹

By 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, (the Central Criminal Court Act,) no indictment could be presented before the grand jury of that court for misdemeanor, except perjury and subornation, unless the prosecutors were previously bound over by recognizance. But by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 24, s. 2, that provision is repealed, and bills of indictment may be preferred by any person before the grand jury of that court for any offence alleged to have been committed within its jurisdiction as before any other grand jury. Indeed, the provision had been held directory only, and the court was considered to have jurisdiction to try an indictment, although in the absence of recognizances.² And the court would not arrest the judgment because in the caption of the indictment there was no mention of the finding of recognizances.³ The defendant need not have been in custody, nor have been bound to appear.⁴

Estreats.] It is said, that if the party surrenders and takes his trial at the next sessions, the fault of non-appearance is compounded in the Exchequer for a small matter.⁵ An estreat may be with the desire of the King.⁶ The court will exercise their discretion as to estreats.

By 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 31, where any person bound by recognizance for his appearance, or where any other person shall be bound for him to prosecute or give evidence in felony or misdemeanor, or to answer for any common assault, or to articles of the peace, or to abide an order in bastardy, shall make default, the officer of estreats shall prepare a list in writing, specifying the name of the defaulter, and the nature of the offence, and the residence, trade, profession, or calling of such person and surety, and shall distinguish the principals from the sureties, and state the cause of non-appearance, if known, and whether the ends of justice have been defeated or delayed thereby; and the officer shall, before the recognizance shall be estreated, lay such list, if at a court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery in any county besides Middlesex and London, [or at a court of great sessions, or at one of the superior courts of the counties palatine,] before one of the justices of those courts, if at a court wherein a recorder [or other corporate officer] is the judge, before such recorder, &c.; and if at a session of the peace, before the chairman or two other justices who shall have attended such court; who are respectively authorized and required to examine such list, and to make such order touching the estreating or putting in process of any such recognizance, as

¹ R. v. Dale, 5 Cox, 171.

² R. v. Gregory, 14 L. J. M. C. 82.

³ S. C. So was Day v. Reg. 2 Cox, 178.

⁴ R. v. Gregory, 7 Q. B. 274.

⁵ R. v. Tomb, 10 Mod. 278.

⁶ R. v. Baily, Comb. 10.

shall appear just; and it shall not be lawful for the officer of any court to estreat or put in process any such recognizance without the written order of the justice, recorder, [corporate officer,] chairman, or justices of the peace before whom such list shall have been laid.¹

By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 32, s. 8, in every case where default shall be made by any person in performing the condition of any recognizance into which he may have entered to proceed to the trial of any issue joined upon any indictment in Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench, the said court, or any judge of the common-law courts at Westminster, may call upon any party who has entered into such recognizance, by rule or order, to show cause why such recognizance should not be estreated, and unless cause shall be shown, such court or judge may order such estreat into the Exchequer.

Discharge of recognizances.] The recognizance of a defendant bailed for libel is not discharged by a nolle prosequi entered as to the information under which he has appeared, if, in the same term, another information for the same offence be filed against him.² It is no ground for a discharge that a parish is threatened with the wife and family.³

Remand.] By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 21, if from the absence of witnesses or any other reasonable cause, it becomes necessary to defer the examination, the justice may, by warrant, remand the accused, for a time not exceeding eight clear days,⁴ to the common gaol, &c., or if the remand do not exceed three clear days, it may be verbal. The party is then to be brought before the same or another justice acting in the same place. But he may be brought up before the expiration of the remand, and bailed with or without sureties. The justice may certify any default of appearance upon the recognizance, which may then be put in suit, and such certificate shall be deemed prima facie evidence of such non-appearance.⁵ But some charge must be made to warrant a remand. It is not sufficient to allege that a charge is about to be made.⁶

Commitment.] The commitment must be made with convenient

¹ This section does not appear to have been repealed.

² R. v. Ridpath, 10 Mod. 152; Fort. 338.

³ R. v. Stancher, 3 Price, 261. This was the case of a bail whose recognizances had been estreated. He had been surety for a person charged with perjury and compounding of felony. See also R. v. Paul, 6 C. & P. 323. R. v. Adams, Id. 324, n.

⁴ As to clear days, see Woolrych, of Legal Time, p. 150.

⁵ See under the old law, Scavage v. Tatcham, Cro. El. 829. R. v. Gooding, cited, 10 B. & C. 33, 35. Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & C. 28. Cave v. Mountain, 1 M. & Gr. 257; 1 Scott, 132.

⁶ R. v. Birnie, 1 Moo. & Rob. 160. Under a Railway Act there was no power to remand, but the court held, that the justice had power to adjourn the hearing, and to commit in the meantime. Gellan v. Hall, 27 L. J. M. C. 78.

certainty. If it does not show upon the face of it that an offence (as felony) has been committed, it will not be good.¹ But it is said, that the authority to commit need not appear,² and that a commitment for high treason and felony in general will be sufficient,³ for this is not a general warrant as to persons or goods, although it is certainly the practice to specify the particular offence. Again, a commitment for treasonable practices, without more, has been sustained.⁴

The privy council may commit for treason,⁵ and a secretary of state.⁶

In commitments a statute must be pursued with tolerable exactness, although there is not so great a precision in them as there is in indictments.⁷ Still the conclusions prescribed should be followed.⁸ A commitment for high treason at Savannah, in the colony of Georgia, in North America, was held sufficient to show that the offence had been committed without the realm of England, for no place within the realm could be intended by that description.⁹ And it is not necessary to allege that the charge was made upon oath.¹⁰

The commitment must be in writing, and under the hand and seal of the justice. It must express his office and authority, and the time and place where the warrant is made; and it must be directed to the gaoler or keeper of the prison.¹¹ The conclusion is, that the party be duly kept till delivered by due course of law, or, in default of bail, till he find bail, but "not until the justice shall make further order."¹² And a commitment by a special authority concluding "till he shall be discharged by due course of law," would be invalid.¹³

To what gaol.] The common gaol is the proper place for the commitment;¹⁴ although, under various statutes, the commitment may be to the house of correction.¹⁵ And the party may be sent to the next gaol, whether it be in the same county or not.¹⁶ Should the

¹ R. v. Judd, Leach, 484.

² R. v. Goodall, 1 Ld. K. 122; Say. Rep. 129.

³ 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 16. R. v. Sir W. Wyndham, 1 Str. 2. R. v. Harvey of Comb, 10 Mod. 334.

⁴ R. v. Despard, 7 T. R. 736, where the authority of R. v. Wilkes was rather impeached by Lord Kenyon. See Id. 739, 740, further cases. See, however, R. v. Sayer, cited, Leach, 162.

⁵ See 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 4.

⁶ Id. But see the arguments and illustration respecting the secretary of state in 2 Hawk. by Curwood, 175, n.

⁷ R. v. Remnant, Leach, 583.

R. v. Brown, 8 T. R. 26.

⁸ 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 18. R. v. Hall, 5 Burr. 2684; 3 Burr. 1636.

R. v. Judd, 2 T. R. 255.

⁹ R. v. Platt, Leach, 157, 167.

¹⁰ Id. citing several authorities.

¹¹ 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 13. See 2 Str. 934.

¹² 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 18. See also R. v. Rhodes, 4 T. R. 220.

¹³ R. v. Marsh, 2 Sir Wm. Bl. 806.

¹⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 4.

¹⁵ Id. s. 7.

¹⁶ Id. s. 8.

gaoler refuse to receive the prisoner, the town to which the constable belongs must keep him till the next gaol delivery.¹ By 60 Geo. 3 and 1 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1, justices having an exclusive jurisdiction, may commit persons charged with capital offences to the county gaol. By sect. 2, witnesses may be bound over to appear against such persons. And by sect. 3, the expenses are to be paid by the town or place where the offence has been committed.

But the statute 21 Vict. c. 22 abolishes the power of committing to the franchise prisons mentioned in the schedule of the Act, although, to prevent mistake, it should be remarked, that this Act respects the confinement of debtors, not of felons or misdemeanants. The 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, contains the principal regulations concerning our gaols and prisons. In each county, and in some other places, there shall, by sect. 1, be one gaol and one house of correction.

Notwithstanding the Act, the Middlesex magistrates were held justified in committing prisoners to Newgate, which is the county gaol of Middlesex.²

We may add here, that the constable is not the only officer who can execute these warrants of commitment, for constant practice has authorized a messenger to take charge of a prisoner for the purpose of carrying him to gaol.³

By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 25, the prisoner is to be committed to the gaol where, by law, he may now be committed, and, in the cases of offences done on the high seas, or on land beyond the sea, to the gaol of the county, &c. within which the committing justice has jurisdiction.

Expenses.] The expenses of a commitment are most commonly borne by the county, except in Middlesex, where the overseers of the poor are, by statute,⁴ made liable. But if the prisoner has sufficient goods or money within the county where he has been taken, he must bear his own reasonable charges,⁵ which are to be levied upon his chattels, in default of payment, by warrant under the hand and seal of the magistrate.⁶ It seems, therefore, that, in strictness, money found upon a prisoner may be applied to defray the costs of his transport to gaol, although, from motives of humanity, it is frequently returned to him in order to enable him to meet the costs of the defence, and, provided also, that the money be not material to the charge in question.⁷ And, before trial, he may execute

¹ 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 9.

² R. v. Cope, 6 Ad. & El. 226, 1 Nev. & P. 515; 7 C. & P. 720. See also R. v. Governor of Middlesex House of Correction, 2 Nev. & M. 138; and R. v. Holden, 8 C. & P. 606, where it was held, that since the Municipal Corporation Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, all offences committed in Bristol should be tried in Gloucestershire.

³ 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 9.

⁴ 27 Geo. 2, c. 3, s. 1; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55.

⁵ 3 Jac. 1, c. 10, s. 1; 27 Geo. 2, c. 3, s. 1.

⁶ 3 Jac. 1, c. 10, s. 1.

⁷ R. v. Barnett, 3 C. & P. 600. R. v. Bass, 2 Car. & K. 822.

a power of attorney for the purpose of his defence, or, indeed, to satisfy a bonâ fide creditor.¹ Even upon a charge of stealing monies, the judge directed that the prisoner should have 5*l.* of the money found on him for his defence, none of the coin so found being identified.² Still, where there are good grounds for supposing that the money found has been the proceeds of the offence, as in forgery, the judge will not order the return of the property.³ The judge has the power, not the justice.⁴

By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 22, the costs and expenses of carrying a prisoner from one jurisdiction to another, together with the expenses of the constable, are to be repaid by the county into which the prisoner is last taken.⁵ And by sect. 26, general provisions are ordained with respect to the payment of expenses of this nature in a great measure agreeing with the old law.

By the Larceny and Malicious Injuries Acts it is provided,⁶ that no commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, if it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and if there be a good and valid conviction.⁷ This enactment cures formal but not substantial errors; therefore, a commitment without jurisdiction will be invalid, and the justice liable to an action.⁸ But by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 2, no action shall be brought against a justice for any act done under a conviction or order, until the same shall have been quashed.

Commitment under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 14.] The commitment of an insane person not being a commitment in execution, needs not so strict a construction; therefore, in a case of assault, it was held immaterial that the name of the person whom the prisoner intended to assault was not mentioned, nor that it did not appear that evidence had been taken on oath.⁹

Bail by the Court of Queen's Bench and the judges.] The magistrate refuses bail not unfrequently; perhaps it is not applied for. The Court of Queen's Bench, or a judge of a superior court, may then take bail.¹⁰ In term it is usual to apply to the court, but in vacation to a judge.¹¹ And during the term the courts of Common Pleas and Exchequer may be moved; so also the courts of Chancery either in term or vacation.¹²

¹ R. v. Coxon, 7 C. & P. 651.

² R. v. Rooney, Id. 515, Little-dale, J.

³ R. v. Burgiss, Id. 488, Little-dale, J. In this case 2*l.* were returned, being no part of the proceeds.

⁴ R. v. Pierce, 6 Cox, 117.

⁵ See Le Verick v. Mercer, 22 L. J. M. C. 81.

⁶ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 111;

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 69.

⁷ R. v. York, 5 Burr. 2684.

⁸ Wickes v. Clutterbuck, 2 Bing. 483; 11 Moore, 83.

⁹ R. v. Gourlay, 7 B. & C. 669; 1 Man. & R. 619.

¹⁰ 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 77. See R. v. Yates, Leach, 169.

¹¹ 4 Com. 299.

¹² 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 81.

One indicted at York may put in bail in London.¹ But a judge of gaol delivery cannot bail a person not in gaol.² Nor can a person out of custody be bailed before a magistrate in the country. He must surrender for that purpose.³ But if, being in custody, he plead his poverty, the court will allow of his being bailed in the country,⁴ with the sanction of an affidavit.⁵

The principle adopted in considering the subject of bail is, whether the prisoner is likely to appear, not the question of his guilt or innocence. If a bill has been found, the prospect of his appearance is lessened, and that circumstance will weigh with the court.⁶

The courts or the judge have required four bail in felony,⁷ but where the commitment had omitted the word "feloniously," two were accepted.⁸

It must be remembered, that, throughout these remarks, we are dealing with criminal apart from civil cases.

Habeas corpus.] The course to pursue when it is desired to obtain bail in the last resort is to sue out a writ of hab. corp. The writ, however, is grantable of right in all cases except treason or felony.⁹ In treason or felony, the Court of Queen's Bench or a judge can bail by common law.

The old writ was mainprise. It commanded the sheriff to take sureties for the prisoner's appearance. The differences between mainprise and bail were that the mainpernor could not surrender his principal: the mainprenor was bound to produce him to answer all charges, whereas bail can surrender, and are only tied to the special charge. As to the writ de odio et atia, it was confined to murder, and at one time abolished, but revived, according to the opinion of Coke, C. J., by 42 Ed. 3, c. 1. But the great writ at common law was de homine replegiando. It went to the sheriff, who, upon receiving security that the prisoner should be forthcoming to answer any charge which might be made against him, was bound to deliver him out of prison.¹⁰ When the person was conveyed out of the sheriff's jurisdiction, the return was "elongatus est," and then the "capias in withernam" issued to imprison the defendant himself, i. e., the defendant in the hom. repl. without bail or mainprise till he should produce his prisoner.¹¹ The writ de hom. repl. lay upon a ne exeat regno.¹²

¹ R. v. Swailes, 1 Lew. C. C. 19.

² Anon. Id. 20.

³ R. v. Wren, 5 Dowl. N. P. C. 222.

⁴ R. v. Massey, 6 M. & S. 108. R. v. Jones, 1 B. & Ald. 209. R. v. Booker, 2 Dowl. N. P. C. 446; 5 Dowl. N. P. C. 129.

⁵ R. v. Gregory, 5 Dowl. ut sup.

⁶ R. v. Scaife, 9 Dowl. N. P. C. 553.

⁷ R. v. Shaw, 6 Dowl. & R. 154.

⁸ R. v. Dowling, 10 Jur. 1056.

⁹ 31 Car. 2, c. 2; 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 15. See 56 Geo. 3, c. 100.

¹⁰ 3 Com. 128.

¹¹ R. v. Designy, Tho. Raym. 474. See R. v. Spence, 2 Phil. 253.

¹² Anon. 7 Mod. 9.

But several exceptions were attached to it,¹ and hence it did not maintain its rank amongst the charters of British liberty, although an instance of its use may be found as late as the time of Atkins.²

We next find the writ of hab. corp. ad subjiciendum at common law. This is said to be a high prerogative writ, issuing out of the Queen's Bench, both in term and vacation, by a fiat from the lord chief justice, or any other judge.³ For it was long considered that the Court of Common Pleas had no jurisdiction in this matter, and, therefore, notwithstanding the Petition of Right, 3 Car. 1,⁴ which forbade the imprisonment or detention of a freeman without cause, that court, for some time, discountenanced applications of this nature.⁵ Upon this, the Act 16 Car. 1, c. 10, gave a co-ordinate jurisdiction to these courts, so that every subject is entitled, at his option, to the benefit of the common-law writ in both courts.⁶ Still the lord chancellor did not feel himself justified in granting the writ in vacation,⁷ and a practice crept in of delaying obedience to the first writ, the prisoner thus requiring an alias, or even a pluries writ, and other vexatious shifts were resorted to for the purpose of retaining the custody of an obnoxious person.⁸ The well-known Habeas Corpus Act was, consequently, pressed upon the legislature after a lapse of years, and it was hoped that a final stop had been put to the long catalogue of grievances which had occurred and still threatened the subject.

By that statute,⁹ when the writ is brought to the sheriff, &c., the officer, upon payment or tender of the charges, and security by the prisoner's bond for the charges of return in case of recommitment, shall, except the case be treason or felony, produce the prisoner within three days if the distance be within 20 miles, within ten days if within 100 miles, or twenty days if beyond, and shall certify the true cause of the detainer. By sect. 3, the writ may be had in vacation, unless¹⁰ the party has neglected his application for two terms. The 5th section prescribes, that in default of making true returns, or of producing the prisoner, or of delivering to him or his agent, within six hours after demand, a copy of the warrant of commitment, the gaoler, &c. shall forfeit 100l.; for the second offence 200l., and be disabled from holding his office. By sect. 6, if the prisoner be recommitted without the order of the court the penalty is increased to 500l. The 7th section ordains that persons indicted for treason or felony shall be indicted in the next term or sessions, or be bailed, and if not tried in the second term or sessions, shall be discharged. A prisoner was brought up under this section, and it appeared that before the spring assizes of 1840 he had been committed for shooting at A. Then, on account of A.'s illness, he was

¹ 3 Com. 129, note 2.

² R. v. Treblecock, 1 Atk. 633.

³ 3 Com. 131.

⁴ Id. 134.

⁵ Id. 131.

⁶ 3 Com. 132, 135.

⁷ Id. 132.

⁸ Id. 135.

⁹ 31 Car. 2, c. 2, s. 2.

¹⁰ Sect. 4.

remanded till the next assizes. A. died before the summer, and a bill for murder was then found, and the trial was again postponed on account of the absence of a material witness. The prisoner was held not to be entitled to his discharge under this section.¹ The 8th clause excepts civil suits. By sect. 9, the original custody of the prisoner is preserved, unless, indeed, it be altered by another writ, or the prisoner be sent by the judge to a workhouse or house of correction, or unless he be removed from one prison to another in order to his discharge. By sect. 10, the habeas may be had out of all courts of law and equity at Westminster, and, if the judge refuse it, he shall forfeit 500*l.* to the prisoner or party grieved. By sect. 11, the writ shall run in counties palatine and privileged places. By sect. 12, no subject of the King shall be sent to Scotland, Ireland, Jersey, Guernsey, or places beyond sea, except persons contracting or convicts praying to be transported, or persons committing a capital offence in the place whither they are sent, on pain of forfeiting 500*l.* to the party grieved, with treble costs, and of disability to hold any office of trust or profit, likewise of præmunire, and incapacity to receive the King's pardon. But this clause has, of course, no reference to persons transported under particular statutes.² The 13th, 14th, and 15th sections relate to exceptions now of no moment. Sect. 16 empowers the crown to send persons charged with capital offences in Scotland, Ireland, &c., to such places respectively for trial. Sect. 17 appoints two years as the limit for prosecutions where the party is out of prison, or, if in prison, after the decease of the person imprisoned,³ or of his delivery out of prison. Sect. 18 allows of no removal, except it be before the judge of assize, after the assizes have commenced. By sect. 19, after the assizes, the writ of habeas shall enure as usual. By sect. 20, the defendant may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence. Sect. 21 excepts persons charged with petty treason or felony, or as accessories before the fact, or upon suspicion.

The next and last statute is the 56 Geo. 3, c. 100, "An Act for more effectually securing the Liberty of the Subject."⁴ By sect. 1, the Habeas Corpus Act is extended to all cases other than imprisonment for some criminal or supposed criminal matter,⁵ or debt, or process in a civil suit. Any offence created by statute is a criminal matter.⁶ Informations at the suit of the attorney-general are generally criminal charges, and a capias under them is original process.⁷ By sect. 2, non-obedience to the writ is a contempt of court. The writs issued in vacation are returnable in the next term. By sect. 3, the judge shall in-

¹ R. v. Bowen, 9 C. & P. 509.

² And see sect. 21.

³ Sic.

⁴ A.D. 1816.

⁵ Whether a commitment in execution by a justice under the excise laws is a criminal matter, so as to entitle the prisoner to his writ, has been made a question. Huntley v. Luscombe, 2 Bos. & P. 530.

⁶ Easton, ex parte, 9 D. P. C. 207; 12 Ad. & E. 645; 4 Per. & D. 558.

⁷ Douglas, in re, 12 L. J. 49.

quire into the truth of the facts alleged in the return, and he may, if he think fit, bail the party with one or more sureties to appear in the term following. And by sect. 4, the court may controvert the truth of the return, although it has awarded the writ. By sect. 5, the writ shall run into counties palatine, the Cinque Ports, and privileged places,—into Berwick-upon-Tweed, Jersey,¹—into any port, harbour, &c., whether in the body of a county or not, and into any port of Ireland where the writ is issued, whether it be or not in the body of any county there. The writ runs into the Isle of Man at common law, not under 31 Car. 2.² By sect. 6, process of contempt may issue in vacation against any person disobeying the writ of hab. corp., grantable under 31 Car. 2, c. 2. The writ runs, in fact, into every part of the Queen's dominions. No independent jurisdiction can oust her jurisdiction, if the statute, at all events, granting that jurisdiction, be silent. Therefore, the writ went to the gaolers in Upper Canada for the slave Anderson.³ These statutes, however, are not universal in their operation. For instance, the defendant was committed under a commission of rebellion, and Pollock, C. B., said, "The meaning of a supposed criminal charge is a charge which may in law, or in fact, turn out not to be criminal. This is in the nature of civil process." Judgment was given for the defendant in an action for penalties, upon general demurrer to the replication.⁴ Other defendants have unsuccessfully sued out the writ upon commitments by the House of Commons.⁵ So, again, for contempt of court, there is no *hab. corp.*⁶ So where a commitment for contempt took place in the Chancery Court of the Isle of Man, the court held, that they could not, on habeas corp. brought, review the adjudication.⁷ It has been determined, that service of a demand of a copy of a warrant of commitment upon a turnkey, is not sufficient to support an action against the gaoler for false imprisonment, if the gaoler be in the prison at the time.⁸ Under the Mutiny Act, as for assisting at the concealment of a deserter, the notice should be served upon the secretary-at-war.⁹

It is not difficult to see that the framers of the 56 Geo. 3, c. 100, expected that the returns to writs would be controvertible under ¹ That it will run into Jersey, see Belson, in re, 14 Jur. 631; 7 E. F. Moore, 114.

² Crawford, in re, 13 Q. B. 613; 18 L. J. Q. B. 225.

³ In the matter of Anderson, 30 L. J. Q. B. 129.

⁴ Cobbett v. Slowman, 4 Ex. 747; 19 L. J. Ex. 270; affirmed in error, 9 Ex. 633; 23 L. J. Ex. 144. See Cobbett, in re, 7 Q. B. 187.

⁵ R. v. Brass Crosby, 3 Wils. 188. Hobhouse, in re, 3 B. & Ald. 420. R. v. Evans, 8 D. P. C. 454.

R. v. Gossett, 3 Per. & D. 349. Sheriff of Middlesex, in re, 11 Adol. & E. 273. No direction nor advice will be given by the court to the gaoler as to his return. Fletcher, in re, 13 L. J. M. C. 16.

⁶ Re Carus Wilson, 7 Q. B. 984; 14 L. J. Q. B. 105, 201.

⁷ Crawford, in re, 13 Q. B. 613; 18 L. J. Q. B. 225.

⁸ Huntley v. Luscombe, 2 Bos. & P. 530.

⁹ Gale, ex parte, 3 Dowl. & L. 114; 14 L. J. Q. B. 316.

that statute. It was not so much an addition to or extension of the 31 Car. 2, as an Act for enabling persons to deny the validity of a return in certain cases. As, on the one hand, the power of bailing at common law and by statute must be kept quite separate, so the right to be brought up and to controvert a return must be viewed as distinct.

The courts will not allow the prisoner to controvert the validity of a sentence pronounced by a competent jurisdiction, as where a sentence for contempt had been passed at Jersey; here, although the court might have allowed affidavits to impeach the fact of any sentence having been pronounced, it would not otherwise interfere.¹ So where it was sought to deny the fact of not answering satisfactorily in bankruptcy, and the habeas was applied for on that ground upon committal.² So where a committal took place for want of sureties, affidavits controverting the facts of the sureties were not allowed.³ The court would not even allow the prisoner, who had been committed for contempt by the master of the rolls, to controvert the fact stated in the return, that he had been brought to the bar of the court.⁴ Indeed, upon declining to interfere with a supposed irregularity in a commitment by the Court of Chancery, the Court of Common Pleas have declared their want of power to discharge a prisoner upon a habeas.⁵ The same rule was followed in perjury. The court would not review the legality of the judgment related in the warrant of commitment. The comity of courts would not allow the review of a judgment in a superior court. The remedy is by writ of error.⁶ So where a commitment was made by the vice-chancellor in a matter within his jurisdiction, the courts refused the allowance of affidavits to show that the order was made for the breach of an injunction by the lord chancellor, and that the lord chancellor was interested in the cause as a member of the Grand Junction Canal Company.⁷ So where a return stated a sentence of transportation by the Royal Court of Jersey, the Court of Queen's Bench assumed the judgment to be valid, and would not require the authority of the court to be set out in order to substantiate the return.⁸ And a habeas

¹ Re Carus Wilson, 7 Q. B. 984; 14 L. J. Q. B. 105, 204. Fine for contempt and refusal to pay. R. v. Lees, 27 L. J. Q. B. 403.

² Ex parte Knight, 2 Mees. & W. 106.

³ R. v. Dunn, 12 Ad. & E. 599; 4 Per. & D. 415. See R. v. Batcheldor, Re Canadian Prisoners, 1 Per. & D. 516. Notwithstanding this last case, the courts must not be too much relied upon as to their allowance of affidavits in contradiction of a return.

⁴ Clarke, in re, 2 Q. B. 619;

2 Gale & D. 780. Crawford, in re, 13 Q. B. 613; 18 L. J. Q. B. 225, to the same effect.

⁵ Andrews, ex parte, 4 C. B. 226.

⁶ Dunn, in re, 17 L. J. C. P. 105; 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 17.

⁷ Dimes, in re, 19 L. J. Q. B. 158.

⁸ R. v. Brennan, 16 L. J. Q. B. 289. The 5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 17, is directory only, and the fact of a convict not being detained in a prison appointed under that statute will not entitle him to his discharge.

will not in general be granted where the party is in execution on a criminal charge after judgment upon an indictment at common law.¹ In fact, the particular circumstances necessary to warrant the conviction need not be set out in the return;² nor would the court allow of affidavits to show that the particular sentence, transportation, could not be passed.³ And so it was where a pardon was alleged without sufficient certainty.⁴ It makes no difference that a writ of error might be brought on the judgment if erroneous.⁵ And there is one further step to the disadvantage of the habeas. Admitting that there is no repugnancy in the affidavit to the return, it is, nevertheless, incompetent to show that the custody is illegal.⁶

This writ may be granted in vacation by a judge at chambers at common law, and it may be returnable immediately before him. And, of course, by the Court of Chancery in like manner.⁷

Nevertheless, it must be observed, that the Court of Queen's Bench may bail independently of the writ, although justices of gaol delivery cannot.⁸ Indeed, this court may bail when the habeas corpus is suspended. The object is to ascertain the legal or illegal custody of the prisoner.⁹ And if he stands charged with treason or felony, he must move the court, or apply, in vacation, to a judge. And it seems to be settled, that the writ can only be granted upon affidavit.¹⁰ Unless, indeed, it can be shown that the prisoner was so coerced as to be unable to make an affidavit.¹¹ And the court will look into the depositions.¹²

A certiorari issues to remove depositions made before the coroner or a magistrate, and it is the proper course to produce copies.¹³ And the affidavits of defendants in denial of a felony were allowed upon one occasion.¹⁴ But the Central Criminal Court cannot bring up a party in custody of the sheriff upon civil process to be tried

¹ Douglas, in re, 12 L. J. Q. B. 49.

² R. v. Suddos, 1 East, 306.

³ R. v. Brenan, supra.

⁴ Parker, in re, 5 Mees. & W. 32.

⁵ Dunn, ex parte, 5 Dowl. & L. 345; 5 C. B. 215.

⁶ R. v. Batcheldor, Re Canadian Prisoners. S. C. nom. R. v. Leonard Watson, 9 Ad. & E. 731; 1 Per. & D. 516. R. v. Lees, 27 L. J. Q. B. 403, from St. Helena.

⁷ Belson, in re, 7 E. F. Moore, 114.

⁸ R. v. The Apprentices, Leach, 203. See Id. 117, by Lord Mansfield, Id. 168, 204, n.

⁹ 2 Curw. Hawk. 142, n. R. v. Lord Montgomery, cited, 10 Mod.

334. R. v. Earl of Ailesbury, 12 Mod. 117. But see R. v. Lord Orrery, 8 Mod. 96.

¹⁰ Glover, ex parte, 4 D. P. C. 291, 293, Littledale, J. Hobhouse, ex parte, 3 B. & Ald. 420; 2 Ch. Rep. 207. See R. v. Farington, Sir T. Jones, 222. R. v. Barney, 5 Mod. 323. See Blisset, in re, 14 L. J. M. C. 17; 1 New. S. C. 337.

¹¹ Parker, in re Canadian Prisoners, 7 D. P. C. 208.

¹² R. v. Horner, Leach, 270.

¹³ B. v. Barthelemy and another, Dears. 60. See R. v. Acton, Str. 851, where the court were pressed with R. v. Lord Mohun, 1 Salk. 104; Skin. 603. See also R. v. Wyer, Leach, 480.

¹⁴ R. v. Bell and ux. Andr. 64.

for a misdemeanor.¹ The statute² does not apply. Nor, whatever the chancellor may do, will the Court of Queen's Bench grant the writ to remove a defendant in custody on a writ de contumace capiendo, in order that he may do penance.³ And, notwithstanding the dictum in R. v. Flower,⁴ the courts maintain their right to refuse or accede to the writ.⁵

We will now mention some of the cases in which bail has been granted. In outlawry;⁶ commitments by the privy council;⁷ commitments on impeachment, unless parliament be sitting;⁸ accomplices who have made honest disclosures;⁹ or when the principal has not been taken;¹⁰ commitments on bare suspicion;¹¹ perhaps for treason, after a year's imprisonment, without prosecution;¹² and, in treason, where ill health and delay were combined;¹³ or where the species of treason is not expressed in the warrant of commitment;¹⁴ and where two sessions and an assize had elapsed.¹⁵ So, where a person had been imprisoned without prosecution for two years;¹⁶ so, where error appears upon outlawry.¹⁷

On the other hand, although the court is not fettered by examples, the following refusals may be mentioned. Where the warrant of commitment appeared informal, and yet the offence was clear under the depositions returned.¹⁸ Where the grand jury had returned a true bill for murder,¹⁹ without, at least, an affidavit of what passed before the coroner;²⁰ and where the facts upon the coroner's inquisition appeared to amount to murder, although the verdict was manslaughter.²¹ And service of notice may be made upon the coroner where, in a case of killing, neither the husband of a feme covert, nor her next of kin, can be discovered.²² So, under a special commission, the justices of gaol delivery held themselves incompetent.²³ Nor can a person be bailed who has been committed by a rule of court;²⁴ nor a prisoner of war;²⁵ nor a person charged

¹ R. v. Morgan, 7 C. & P. 642.

² 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 16.

³ R. v. Strong, 5 D. P. C. 213.

⁴ 8 T. R. 324.

⁵ R. v. Hobhouse, 3 B. & Ald. 420.

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 18, s. 40.

⁷ Id. s. 66; and see 16 Car. 1, c. 10, s. 8; 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 7; 2 Curw. Hawk. 165, 166.

⁸ 2 Hawk. c. 73, &c.

⁹ 1 Cowp. 334.

¹⁰ Lofft. 334.

¹¹ R. v. Gregory, Leach, 98, n.; see other cases, 2 Curw. Hawk. 70, n.; Lofft. 281.

¹² Str. 2; R. v. Sir W. Wyndham.

¹³ R. v. Lord Montgomery, cited, 10 Mod. 334. R. v. Earl of Ailesbury, 12 Mod. 117.

¹⁴ R. v. Row and another, 12 Mod. 82. R. v. Kendal and another, Comb. 343; 5 Mod. 78; 1 Salk. 347.

¹⁵ R. v. Bell and ux. And. 64. R. v. Barney, 5 Mod. 323.

¹⁶ R. v. Fitzgerald, 1 Wils. 254.

¹⁷ R. v. Erbury, 8 Mod. 177.

¹⁸ R. v. Marks, 3 East, 157.

¹⁹ R. v. Chapman, 8 C. & P. 558.

²⁰ R. v. Mills, 4 Nev. & M. 6.

²¹ R. v. Carter, 7 Mod. 172. R. v. Dalton, Str. 911. R. v. Pepper, Comb. 298.

²² R. v. Williams, 8 D. P. C. 301.

²³ R. v. Platt, Leach, 157. See R. v. Kimberley, Str. 848.

²⁴ R. v. Leonard, 10 Mod. 429.

²⁵ R. v. Schiever, 2 Burr. 765; Case of Spanish Sailors, 2 Sir W. Bl. 1324.

with robbery, if the prosecutor swear to the prisoner, although many counter affidavits may be produced;¹ nor, in larceny, the prisoner being sworn to;² nor in a case of forgery on the eve of the sessions;³ nor in the case of a notorious breach of the peace, the parties being in execution for a fine for forcible detainer upon view;⁴ nor a lunatic;⁵ nor on the score of ill health simply,⁶ unless the illness arise from the confinement;⁷ nor an accomplice who failed to reveal all that she knew;⁸ nor one fined by the House of Lords for a libel;⁹ nor on a conviction for libel on the ground that only one commissioner was present, for the record is an estoppel;¹⁰ nor in cases of breach of privilege;¹¹ nor is bail to be claimed as of right in the case of resisting custom-house officers;¹² and where the prisoners themselves have delayed the trial they are not in general bailable.¹³ And in case of a postponement by reason of the absence of the witnesses for the prosecution, the court would not bail a prisoner charged on the coroner's inquisition for murder, and against whom a bill of indictment had been found for the same crime, although it was alleged that the indictment would fail as far as the depositions before the coroner were concerned.¹⁴ Where three justices after hearing evidence admitted a person to bail, and then, after the production of additional evidence, committed him, bail was refused;¹⁵ nor would bail be allowed, where there was an acquittal for rape, important evidence being expected at the next assizes upon a charge of murder;¹⁶ nor upon the discharge of a jury in a criminal case, at all events, not until two assizes have elapsed.¹⁷ Where the seconds admitted that they had been engaged in what they called a fair duel, the court would not bail.¹⁸ The defendant being in legal custody, it is no objection to urge that the apprehension was illegal.¹⁹ Where a party was in gaol undergoing a sentence of ¹ R. v. Greenwood, Str. 1138. But this would not now be decided in the same way.

² R. v. Mickal, 11 Mod. 261. This case also would now be one for bail.

³ R. v. Rudd, 117.

⁴ R. v. Layton, 1 Salk. 106.

⁵ R. v. Clarke, 3 Burr. 1362.

⁶ Leach, 117, ut sup.

⁷ 2 Curw. Hawk. 171, n.

⁸ R. v. Mrs. Rudd, ut sup.

⁹ R. v. Flower, 8 T. R. 314.

¹⁰ R. v. Carlisle, 4 C. & P. 415. Newton, ex parte, 24 L. J. C. P. 148; 16 C. B. 97. The attorney-general should be applied to for his fiat in order to bring error.

¹¹ R. v. Paty and others, 2 Ld. Raym. 1105. Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East, 1.

¹² R. v. Dunn, 5 Burr. 2640.

¹³ R. v. Rebord, 3 Burr. 1569.

¹⁴ R. v. Andrews, 2 Dowl. & L. 10; 1 New. S. C. 199.

¹⁵ Allen, ex parte, 3 Nev. & M. 35.

¹⁶ R. v. Owen, 9 C. & P. 83.

¹⁷ R. v. Newton, 18 L. J. M. C. 201. As to the right way of raising the question, qu.? The warrant of commitment is a justification of the detention.

¹⁸ R. v. Barronet and another, Dears. 51; 1 El. & Bl. 1; 22 L. J. M. C. 25. R. v. Barthelemy and another, Dears. 60; 22 L. J. M. C. 28; 1 El. & Bl. 1.

¹⁹ Sharpe, ex parte, 9 D. P. C. 513. See other cases, 2 Curw. Hawk. 170, n.

imprisonment, he was not allowed this writ in order to show cause in person against a rule obtained against him and others;¹ nor will bail be allowed upon a charge of concealing effects in bankruptcy;² nor upon a committal for not answering satisfactorily, upon the ground that the bankrupt has so answered;³ nor ad testificandum, if collusion appears.⁴ And treason in Scotland is not within the 31 Car. 2, c. 2.⁵ By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 84, s. 101, no writ of habeas corpus shall be granted under any Act relating to the customs, unless the ground of objection to the proceedings be stated by affidavit in writing.

With respect to the Central Criminal Court, where the ground of application was, that the offence had been committed out of the jurisdiction of that court, the attorney-general refused his fiat for a writ of error, because of the record of sentence of imprisonment, according to R. v. Carlisle,⁶ and the court refused a mandamus to compel him.⁷ Where the secretary of state committed for libel, it was once a question whether the court would not require recognizance for good behaviour as well as common bail,⁸ but in R. v. Wilkes, Pratt, C. J., said, that it was absurd to require surety of the peace, or bail in the case of a libeller.⁹ It may be remarked here, that under any circumstances private opinions, political for instance, ought never to weigh with the court, nor with magistrates. The fact of a county having been the scene of illegal meetings and riots affords no ground for withholding bail in misdemeanor. Therefore, where justices entered into a resolution not to bail certain persons called chartists, and refused bail in a case of sedition, the court compelled them to pay all the costs of a motion for a criminal information, although the information itself was refused in the absence of any corrupt or malicious motive, and although the persons applying for bail were very prominent parties in the violence of the times.¹⁰

Although the penalty for refusing the writ in vacation is 500*l.*, it is not so in term; because the law will not suffer a judge to be liable to an action for what he does as a judge. Writs of habeas corpus granted in vacation do not expire at the commencement of term.¹¹

Return.] The forms of the writ having been complied with,¹²

¹ R. v. Hunt, 3 B. & Ald. 679, n. a.

² Robinson, in re, 23 L. J. Q. B. 286, Coleridge, J.

³ Knight, ex parte, 2 Mees. & W. 106.

⁴ R. v. Burbage, 3 Burr. 1440.

⁵ R. v. Mackintosh, Str. 308.

⁶ 4 C. & P. 415.

⁷ R. v. Newton, 24 L. J. Q. B. 246; 4 El. & Bl. 869.

⁸ R. v. Shuckburgh, 1 Wils. 29.

⁹ R. v. Wilkes, 2 Wils. 151.

¹⁰ R. v. Badger, 4 Q. B. 468; Dav. & M. 375.

¹¹ R. v. Shebbeare, 1 Burr. 460. R. v. Mead, Id. 542; 2 Curw. Hawk. 194.

¹² As by an attestation in writing by two witnesses, &c. when it is demandable in vacation. See 2 Curw. Hawk. 143.

a return must be made.¹ No privilege will excuse disobedience, not even peerage, from obeying the writ.²

The return being made, it is difficult to controvert it, when it makes against the prisoner,³ a circumstance capable of producing occasionally great hardship. Although the court will examine minutely into the facts upon affidavit, and will even commit the prosecutor if justice requires it.⁴ Should the person, as in insanity,⁵ be incapable of being brought up, the court will direct that he shall be attended,⁶ but poverty is not a sufficient excuse.⁷

A return stated that the prisoner had been received by the gaoler under a warrant, which recited a conviction under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 53,⁸ that afterwards, some one came to the gaol, took away the warrant, and left another of the same date, under the hands and seal of the same justices, and without adding that it was a substituted warrant, and that the prisoner was detained by virtue thereof. The court discharged the prisoner.⁹ And where there is an uncertainty as to the jurisdiction, the court will not allow the return.¹⁰ So where the return stated that the commitment was made upon due proof, as by the statute made and provided, it was held insufficient, for want of referring more particularly to the proof.¹¹ So where the conviction was not brought up, and the court found a mistake in the commitment, they presumed that the conviction had the same fault, and ordered the prisoner's discharge.¹² However, a legal warrant of detainer will be sufficient, although granted subsequently to the writ of habeas corpus.¹³

A habeas corpus at common law is different from that of 31 Car. 2, since the defendant may controvert the facts of the ¹ Certifying the day and cause of the caption. Vaugh. 137. Under heavy penalties, 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 19. And attachment, Id. ss. 28, 31. And it is no excuse that the gaoler has not been paid his fees. Id. The following return was held bad, and an attachment issued. "I had not at the time of receiving this writ, nor have I since had, the body of (A.) detained in my custody, so that I could not have him," &c. It did not state: "I have not." R. v. Winton, 5 T. R. 89. Although the court will not advise the gaoler how to make his return, the return needs not to be supported by affidavits. Fletcher, in re, 1 Dowl. & L. 726; 13 L. J. 16; 1 Per. & D. 516.

² 2 Hawk. c. 15, ss. 17, 19.

³ 2 Hawk. c. 12, s. 78.

⁴ R. v. Jackson, 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 79.

⁵ 3 Burr. 1363.

⁶ 3 Curw. Hawk. 143.

⁷ Martins, ex parte, 9 D. P. C. 194.

⁸ A Smuggling Act, which authorized magistrates to amend their warrants.

⁹ R. v. Elmy, 3 Nev. & M. 733. R. v. Clerke, 3 Salk. 2.

¹⁰ R. v. Deybel, 4 B. & Ald. 243. R. v. Souden, Id. 294.

¹¹ R. v. Nash, Id. 295; "upon proof of the matters before mentioned," would have been enough.

¹² Reynolds, in re, 1 New. S. C. 51.

¹³ R. v. Gordon, 1 B. & Ald. 5 n. 72. Dauncey, ex parte, 8 Jur. 829.

return under 56 Geo. 3, c. 100, in the common-law case.¹ The case cited was, however, not a criminal matter.

Costs.] Where the plaintiff successfully opposed the prisoner's discharge upon the habeas corpus, the court said, that they had no power to allow the costs of the opposition.²

Return amendable.] In order to avoid a false statement, the return is amendable, as where one of the names of a prisoner was accidentally omitted.³

Form of bailment.] The Court of Queen's Bench is said to require four sureties in 40*l.* each, and that sum is mentioned as the minimum in the case of a capital crime, but more may be required according to the ability or quality of the prisoner, and the nature of the offence.⁴ As where an indictment for conspiracy was removed by certiorari, and it appeared that the defendants had influenced the magistrate to take a less amount than the nature of the crime warranted.⁵ Less than four sureties will, however, be accepted; three, for instance, in a case of rape.⁶ The bail are to be examined on oath as to their sufficiency, and it was considered a fair question to ask whether any of them had stood in the pillory for perjury.⁷ The writs, being properly directed,⁸ are to be marked with the date of the statute of Charles, and to be signed by the person awarding them,⁹ without which signature the gaoler need not obey the mandate.¹⁰ And it may be added, that in drawing up the rule for a habeas corpus on the ground of an illegal commitment, the judge will not make it part of the rule that the party shall not bring an action against the magistrate.¹¹

By a clause of this Act, 31 Car. 2, c. 2, no person set at large by virtue of the writ shall be again imprisoned for the same offence other than by the legal order and process of the court where he shall be bound by recognizance to appear, or other court having jurisdiction of the cause, under a penalty of 500*l.*¹²

Habeas corpus ad respondendum.] An application for the writ ad respondendum in order to take a prisoner in custody on a charge of felony before justices to answer another charge of felony, must be made to a judge at chambers, not to the court.¹³ If the judge entertains doubts, he will refer the matter to the court. The Court

¹ Beeching and others, ex parte, 4 B. & C., 136; 6 Dowl. & R. 209.

² Cobbett, in re, 14 Mees. & W. 175; 3 Dowl. & L. 79.

³ R. v. Batcheldor, 1 Per. & Dav. 516.

⁴ 2 Hawk. 139. R. v. Earl Ferrers, 1 Burr. 631. R. v. Shaw, 6 Dowl. & Ry. 154.

⁵ R. v. Hooper and others, 1 Ch. Rep. 491.

⁶ R. v. Booth, 2 Ld. Keny. 172.

⁷ R. v. Edwards, 4 T. R. 440.

⁸ Not to the "gaoler or sheriff."

⁹ 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 17.

¹⁰ R. v. Roddam, Cowp. 672. R. v. Fowler, 1 Salk. 350.

¹¹ Hill, ex parte, 3 C. & P. 225, Bayley, J.

¹² Sect. 6.

¹³ R. v. Isaacs, 20 L.J. Q.B. 395; 2 Pr. Rep. 255.

of Queen's Bench will not grant the writ to bring up a prisoner before a coroner's jury who has been committed for murder by magistrates, without a strong case.¹

Motion, by whom made.] The court would not allow a prisoner's father to move for a habeas corpus, but required that the motion should be made by counsel.²

Error.] Whether error will lie upon a habeas corpus may be a question fit to be raised upon some future occasion. In R. v. The City of London the judges resolved that there was in that case a return on a writ of privilege upon which no issue could be taken nor demurrer joined, "neither upon our award herein doth any error lie."³ On the other hand, there is an opinion of Holt, C. J., apparently leaning to the contrary.⁴ And there is the inclination of Jervis, Att. Gen., in R. v. Dimes, in favour of the writ of error.⁵

Waiver.] Supposing the first writ to be irregular, a second writ obtained by the prisoner in order to remove himself into another county will cure the mistake.⁶

Quarter sessions.] If the assizes and quarter sessions occur contemporaneously, and the grand jury at the assizes are discharged, the better course is for the quarter sessions to dispose of their county business and adjourn to a future day for the trials of the prisoners. It was so held where the judge of assize was trying prisoners at the time.⁷ Still, it is not to be understood that the court of assize is a court of appeal from the quarter sessions, nor from the borough sessions where the recorder presides. The commissions are not similar. However inconvenient, therefore, it may be for both courts to sit at the same time, a conviction at the borough sessions is not erroneous because the assizes happen to be then in progress.⁸ An indictment found at sessions, which they cannot try, may be removed by certiorari; and, in that case, a habeas may issue to bring up the prisoner, to the Central Criminal Court, for instance.⁹ Although it has been said, that if such a bill be transmitted to the assizes, the prisoner should be acquitted, the bill being a nullity, and that the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 2, applies only to bills found at the passing of the Act.¹⁰ Parke, B., however, in a case of rape, left the prisoner to his writ of error, the bill having been found at sessions.¹¹ Two indictments had been found against the prisoner at the sessions for the North Riding, one for

¹ Wakley, ex parte, 14 L. J. M. C. 188.

² Newton, in re, 24 L. J. C. P. 148; 16 C. B. 97.

³ R. v. City of London, 8 Rep. 121, 127.

⁴ In Ashby v. White, 14 How. State Trials, 806.

⁵ 14 Q. B. 554.

⁶ Newton v. Rowe, 13 L. J. C. P. 73; 7 Sc. 543; 8 Sc. 26.

⁷ The Quarter Sessions, 9 C. & P. 790, Coleridge, J.

⁸ Smith v. Reg., 3 Cox, 586.

⁹ R. v. Phillips, 2 Cox, 114.

¹⁰ R. v. Ramsden, 1 Cox, 37.

¹¹ R. v. Allum, 2 Cox, 62.

assisting an escape, the other for an escape in person. The court of quarter sessions sent the prisoner to be tried at the assizes. Both indictments were transmitted annexed to a certificate signed by the deputy clerk of the peace that they were found. They had the names of the witnesses on the back, and they were signed by the foreman at the sessions as found. Wood, B., doubted whether he could try the case, and the prisoner was discharged by proclamation. 1. The judge had never tried an indictment found at the quarter sessions, and removed into the Queen's Bench by certiorari, and thence sent to the assizes. 2. The public inconvenience of such a course. 3. The necessity of a new indictment at the assizes found by the grand jury of the county. But the judges held these opinions wrong, and thought that the prisoner should have been tried at the assizes.¹ The jurisdiction of courts of quarter sessions² is pointed out by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1. They are forbidden by that statute to try for the following offences: treason; murder; capital felony; any felony punishable by transportation for life, when committed by a person not previously convicted of felony; misprision of treason; offences against the Queen's title, prerogative, person, or government, or against either house of parliament; offences subject to præmunire; blasphemy, and offences against religion; administering or taking unlawful oaths; perjury and subornation of perjury; making or suborning any other person to make a false oath, affirmation, or declaration, punishable as perjury or as a misdemeanor; forgery; unlawfully and maliciously setting fire to any crop of corn, grain, or pulse, or to any part of a wood, coppice, or plantation of trees, or to any heath, gorse, furze, or fern; bigamy, and offences against the laws relating to marriage; abduction of women and girls; endeavouring to conceal the birth of a child; offences against any provision of the laws relating to bankrupts and insolvents; composing, printing, or publishing blasphemous, seditious, or defamatory libels; bribery; unlawful combinations and conspiracies, except conspiracies or combinations to commit any offence which such justices or recorder respectively have or has jurisdiction to try when committed by one person; stealing or fraudulently taking, or injuring or destroying, records or documents belonging to any court of law or equity, or relating to any proceeding therein; stealing or fraudulently destroying or concealing wills or testamentary papers, or any document or written instrument being or containing evidence of the title to any real estate, or any interest in lands, tenements, or hereditaments; and under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, several such offences were withdrawn from the jurisdiction of certain quarter sessions. But in this respect the Central Criminal Court Act is repealed by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 13.

¹ R. v. Wetherell, Russ. & Ry. 381. By 22 & 23 Vict. c. 4, s. 4, every general session of the peace for the county of Middlesex, and every adjournment thereof, shall have power to try and determine all appeals, and have all other powers which do now or shall hereafter belong to the general quarter sessions for the said county, and such sessions may be held at Clerkenwell.

² "County, riding, division, or liberty," and recorders of boroughs.

This Act does not extend to towns corporate which are not counties of themselves.¹ The venue, however, must be laid in the county of the city or town.²

And such justices and recorders are prohibited from trying in like manner for any offence under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25,³ the Act for "preventing malicious injuries to persons by fire, or by explosive or destructive substances."

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 2, a judge of the superior courts at Westminster, acting under any commission of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, may issue any writ of certiorari or other process, directed to the justices of the peace acting for any county, riding, division, or liberty, or to the recorder of any borough, within the county, commanding them to certify and return, into the court holden under the authority of such commission, any indictment or presentment found before any such justice or recorder, for any offence which such justices or recorder will not have jurisdiction to try, and the several recognizances, examinations, and depositions relative to such indictments and presentments, and also, if necessary, by writ of habeas corpus, to cause any person who may be in the custody of the keeper of any gaol or prison, charged with any such offence, to be removed into the custody of the keeper of the common gaol.

And by sect. 3, every recognizance of every description entered into for the prosecution at any court of sessions of the peace, for any offence beyond their jurisdiction, shall be as obligatory on the parties as to the proceedings before the justices of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery acting in and for that county, as if originally entered into before them. But one week's notice must be given, either personally or by leaving the same at the place of residence as of which the party bound by such recognizance is therein described, to appear before the court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, instead of the said court of sessions of the peace: Provided also, that the judge who shall grant such writ of certiorari or habeas corpus shall cause the party applying for such writ, whether he be the prosecutor or party charged with such offence, to enter into a recognizance, in such sum, and with or without sureties, as the judge may direct, conditioned to give such notice as aforesaid to all parties bound by recognizance.

Commissions of assize.] By 3 Geo. 4, c. 10, s. 1, commissions of assize may be opened on the day succeeding that specified, unless Sunday, and then on the day after. And, by sect. 2, the cause of the delay shall be certified to the lord chancellor. Provided, that the commission shall be opened on the exact day, if possible.

In the case of a special commission read in open court, the court refused in R. v. Bernard to allow a second reading of it, on the ground of the prisoner not having been present at the reading.⁴

¹ R. v. Milner, 2 Car. & K. 310.

² Russ. & Ry. 144. R. v. Mellor.

³ Sect. 15.

⁴ R. v. Bernard, 1 Fost. & F. 240.

CHAPTER IV.

THE GRAND JURY.

Grand jury.] The first proceeding after the committal or other disposal of the prisoner, is to submit a charge against him to the grand jury. This is done by indictment. The sheriff returns the names of persons qualified to serve, and the number must, at the least, be twenty-four, some out of every hundred.¹ A mistake in this respect, as by sending in the names of improper persons, may be amended by the judge, who has power to reform the pannel. And it is a ground of challenge that a grand juror is not duly qualified, or that he has not been rightly returned.² Or that he is a person legally disqualified in other respects, as by outlawry, alienage, attainder, &c.³ But it is said, that although old men above seventy, or such as are sick or infirm, or non-dwellers in the county, ought not to be returned, they may lawfully serve if they think fit.⁴ An Irish peer, not in the House of Commons, ought not to be a grand juror.⁵ A prisoner who takes exception to the indictment by reason of an objection to the grand jury, shall have counsel assigned to him.⁶

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 1, the qualification of a grand jurymen in courts of sessions of the peace is as follows:—The age is between 21 and 60, and the residence must be in the county where the issue is to be tried. Every man is liable to serve who shall have, in his own name, or in trust for him, 10*l.* a year within the county in lands, &c., freehold or otherwise, or in rents issuing out of such lands and rents together, in fee simple, fee tail, or for the life of himself or another, or 20*l.* a year upon a lease for 21 or more years, or any term determinable upon a life or lives; or who shall be a householder and rated to the poor's rate⁷ to the value of 30*l.* in Middlesex, or 20*l.* in any other county; or, lastly, who shall occupy a house containing 15 windows.⁸

With regard to the number of these grand jurors, 12 at least must be sworn, and not more than 23, in order that 12 may be a majority.⁹ However, should there be more than 23, and ¹ 4 Com. 302. In Middlesex, the sheriff makes a return into the Court of Queen's Bench.

² 1 Ch. Cr. L. 310.

³ See 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 16.

⁴ Id. s. 20.

⁵ Case of the Irish peer, Russ. & Ry. 117.

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 29.

⁷ Or inhabited house duty.

⁸ As to the old law of qualification, see Hale, Hist. 155; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 14; Russ. & Ry. 177; 1 Ch. Cr. Law, 308.

⁹ 4 Com. 302.

should the defendant plead and be convicted, the Court of Queen's Bench will not quash the indictment on motion. Should the error appear on the record, the defendant may bring his writ of error in law, and if it do not so appear, he may bring error in fact.¹

But the names of 12 grand jurors must appear on the record.²

We now come to speak of their duties. They are to inquire of all offences in the county determinable by the court into which such offences are returned.³ But they cannot go beyond their precincts,⁴ and the finding of a collateral matter expressly alleged in an indictment to have happened in a different county is void.⁵

They have the power of summoning witnesses before them, and it is considered so highly criminal to refuse to be examined before them, that the court are accustomed to impose an immediate fine for the offence.⁶ And so necessary is it considered to enforce the production of proper evidence, that, if an instrument be withheld, the grand jury may receive secondary evidence of its contents. Unless, indeed, the deed or writing relate to the title of the witness's estate.⁷

The jury, however, are not allowed to see depositions, although there may be grounds for suspecting that a witness has been tampered with in consequence of his prevarication.⁸

The grand jury are, moreover, to examine the witnesses upon oath. In default of this rule being observed, the prisoner was released, the grand jury having been discharged.⁹ But in such a case where they had not been discharged, Alderson, B., desired that the bill should be taken back, and that the witnesses should be examined upon oath.¹⁰ And, after conviction, it was thought fit, under such circumstances, to recommend the prisoner for a pardon without deciding upon the validity of the conviction.¹¹

The better opinion is, that a bill should be found upon probable evidence, and that it should not be required that proof necessary to convince a petit jury¹² should be established, and it is observable, that if a person in custody be carried before the grand jury without a proper authority, it is a matter of justification for the gaoler only, and not of objection on the part of the accused.¹³

The swearing of the witnesses must take place during the session. Where, in consequence of the absence of justices, the session had

¹ R. v. Marsh, 6 Ad. & E. 236; 1 Nev. & P. 187.

² R. v. St. Michael, 2 Sir Wm. Bl. 718. See also Aylett v. Rex, in error, 3 Bro. P. C. 529.

³ 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 1.

⁴ Id. s. 34.

⁵ Id.

⁶ 1 Hawk. c. 22, s. 4.

⁷ R. v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 591.

⁸ R. v. Denby, Leach, 514; Anon. 1 Lew. C. C. 70.

⁹ Anon. 1 Lew. C. C. 322.

¹⁰ Id.

¹¹ R. v. Dickinson, Russ. & Ry. 401.

¹² 2 Curw. Hawk. 354, n., where the cases are collected.

¹³ R. v. Dr. Dodd, Leach, 155.

lapsed, it was held that a party could not be legally convicted upon an indictment found by the grand jury upon the testimony of witnesses sworn by the officer of the court after that event.¹ But the mode of swearing the witnesses in the presence of the jury will not be inquired into by the court, because the jury may find a bill upon their own knowledge. So an improper mode of swearing will not vitiate the indictment.² And now by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 54, s. 1, every foreman of a grand jury shall administer the oath to the witnesses, and the name of every witness shall be indorsed on the back of the indictment, and the foreman shall write his initials against the name of such witness, and a false oath or affirmation shall incur the penalty of perjury: Provided that nothing in this section contained shall affect any fees by law payable to any officer of any court for swearing witnesses.

By sect. 2, no witness need be sworn in open court in order to give evidence before the grand jury. By sect. 3, the word "foreman" shall include any member acting for the foreman, and "oath" shall include "affirmation."

The court, which usually instructs the grand jury in matters of law,³ will also give them assistance with respect to witnesses. Therefore, where the grand jury applied to the court upon an occasion when the only persons whose names were upon the back of the indictment had been proved to have been guilty of a conspiracy, the jury were informed that they ought not to find a bill upon that testimony alone.⁴ The grand jury applied to the court in a case where the witness was too ill to travel, but the gaoler was ready to prove that the prisoner had told him, the gaoler, that he would plead "Guilty." The recorder answered, that the bill might be found upon the gaoler's oath.⁵

The grand jury may not disclose the evidence. Their oath forbids it. It would be a high misprision,⁶ nor can a juror be asked to explain the finding.⁷ Nor can their clerk be compelled to make a disclosure.⁸ Nor will the Court of Queen's Bench receive the affidavit of a grand juror as to what passed in the jury room concerning the indictment.⁹ Although a grand juror may be required to say who was the prosecutor of an indictment, that being a question which does not interfere with his oath.¹⁰ And it is related of Judge Buller, that where a grand juror threw down a note to the prisoner's counsel to the effect that the witness then under examination had stated quite the reverse to the grand jury on that morning, he ruled, that the grand juror should appear and give evidence. This was done, and the prisoner being

¹ Middlesex Sp. Commission, 6 C. & P. 90. That the justices of Middlesex might meet and hold intermediate sessions. See R. v. Mallaney and another, Id. 96.

² R. v. Russell, Car. & M. 247, Wightman, J.

³ 4 Com. 303.

⁴ 2 Curw. Hawk. 354, n.

⁵ R. v. Tong, 2 Cox, 290.

⁶ 4 Com. 126.

⁷ R. v. Cooke, 8 C. & P. 582.

⁸ 12 Vin. Ab. 38 (5).

⁹ R. v. Marsh, 1 Nev. & P. 187.

¹⁰ Stykes v. Dunbar, Selw. N. P. 1066.

acquitted, the witness was afterwards convicted of perjury.¹ The grand jury must not take upon themselves to form a judgment in cases of insanity.²

The evidence being gone through, either a true bill is found or the bill is thrown out, and it is no objection that the bill has not been signed by any of the jurors.³ For an indictment differs from a coroner's inquisition, inasmuch as there is no doubt of its authenticity.⁴ If, by mistake, the jury return a true bill on both counts, where there are more than two, the judgment will be arrested.⁵ Should the bill be ignored, the jury may still find a bill for the same offence at the same assizes or sessions, if there be additional evidence.⁶ But, it seems that no second bill can be preferred upon the same facts.⁷ If the bill be mislaid and not found till the jury are discharged, they cannot find another bill, and the finding being insufficient, the prisoner will be admitted to bail until the next session. He is not entitled to his discharge till the second session.⁸ But Austin's case is to the contrary.⁹

The grand jury cannot find a bill true in part and false in part. As in forcible entry and detainer. If the entry with force be negatived, and the detainer found, the whole bill is void.¹⁰ So, it seems that if two be charged with murder, and the jury find a bill against one for murder and against the other for manslaughter, a new bill should be preferred.¹¹ It is otherwise if the bill be found against one for murder, and ignored as to the other.¹² And upon a bill for murder the jury may find manslaughter.¹³ Although Parke, B., directed a new bill upon such an occasion, notwithstanding a suggestion at the bar that it was usual to allow an altered bill instead of one entirely new.¹⁴ And it is clear that an indictment against several may be found against one or more, and rejected as to the rest.¹⁵ And a bill also may be returned true upon one or more counts amongst several.¹⁶ Thus a true bill was found for an assault, and ignoramus was indorsed upon a count for a riot.¹⁷ For the rejection of the one count leaves the indictment as to the count which the jury affirm, just as if there had been originally that one count only.¹⁸

¹ Law Mag. vol. 17, p. 43 (n. 5); 4 Com. by Christian, 126. It was in a capital case.

² R. v. Hodges, 8 C. & P. 195.

³ R. v. Sidoli, 1 Lew. C. C. 211.

⁴ Id. 54, Holroyd, J.

⁵ R. v. J. Carlisle, 8 C. & P. 584, cited.

⁶ R. v. Newton, 2 Moo. & Rob. 503. R. v. Humphrey, infra, was referred to. S. C. nom. R. v. Simonite, 1 Cox, 30, Wightman, J. Additional evidence had been procured.

⁷ R. v. Humphreys, 1 Car. & M. 601, Patteson, J. R. v. Austin,

4 Cox, 385, Wightman, J., and the recorder.

⁸ R. v. Thompson, 1 Cox, 268.

⁹ 4 Cox, 385.

¹⁰ 1 Hawk. c. 14, s. 40. For other cases, see 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 2.

¹¹ R. v. Carew, 1 Ro. Rep. 407.

¹² R. v. Cary; Sembl. S. C. as Carew, sup. 3 Bulstr. 206.

¹³ R. v. Caulkin, 3 Ch. Burn. 443.

¹⁴ R. v. Turner, 1 Lew. C. C. 176.

¹⁵ Steph. 256, citing 1 Ch. Cr. L. 323-4.

¹⁶ Id. citing 1 Chitty, ut sup.

¹⁷ R. v. Fieldhouse, Cowp. 325.

¹⁸ Id., Aston, J.

The grand jury may themselves amend a mistake. So that where they returned a true bill against P. and others, and indorsed P.'s name as a sworn witness upon the bill, Bolland, B., after objection made, directed that the bill should be handed back to them. They then retired, and soon afterwards returned with a true bill against the others, not including P.¹

In a nisi-prius record, the names of the grand jury need not appear in the caption.²

The grand jury occasionally make presentments of offences within their county, as nuisances, &c.³ And upon this presentment an indictment is framed.⁴

There are some presentments, however, which cannot be entertained.⁵ It may be added, that the presentment of a constable for an offence, whether at the assizes or sessions, must be made before the grand jury.⁶

Lastly, this jury may be called back if they have not left the building of the court, although discharged, or if they have not separated. A new bill may thus be laid before them.⁷

Verdict in civil action when equivalent to finding by grand jury.] In some cases the verdict in a civil action will suffice without the intervention of the grand jury. As where the defendant justified words amounting to a charge of felony, and proved his justification. Here the plaintiff might be put on his trial without the grand jury.⁸ Again, the defendant had money to carry to a bank, and the plaintiff brought an action against him for this money, upon which it was left to the jury to say whether the defendant had or not feloniously converted the property to his own use. The jury having found in the affirmative, the court directed a verdict to be entered for the defendant, and said, that, upon their finding, the defendant might be tried without the intervention of a grand jury.⁹

Vexatious indictments for certain misdemeanors.] By 22 & 23 Vict. c. 17, no indictment for perjury, subornation, conspiracy, obtaining money or other property by false pretences, keeping a gambling house, keeping a disorderly house, and for any indecent assault, shall be presented to or found by any grand jury, unless the prosecutor has been bound over, or unless the accused has been committed or bound to appear, or unless the

¹ R. v. Perceval and others, 1 Lew. C. C. 155. 514; 1 Man. & Ry. 272; Nom. R. v. Somerset, JJ.

² R. v. Davis, 1 C. & P. 470.

³ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 163.

⁴ 4 Com. 301.

⁵ See R. v. Killinghall, 1 Burr. 17.

⁶ R. v. Bridgewater and Taunton Canal Company, 7 B. & C.

⁷ R. v. Holloway, 9 C. & P. 43, Parke, B. Whether any objection can be taken to any proceeding before a grand jury, qu.? R. v. Clements, 5 Cox, 191.

⁸ Cook v. Field, 3 Esp. 133, Lord Kenyon.

⁹ Prosser v. Rowe, 2 C. & P. 421.

indictment be preferred by an order in writing from a judge of the courts at Westminster, or the attorney or solicitor general;¹ or, in perjury, by direction of any court, judge, or public functionary authorized by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, to direct a prosecution for perjury. By sect. 2, if the justice should refuse to commit or bail for any such offence, still the prosecutor may insist upon being bound by recognizance to prosecute, and the recognizance shall be transmitted as if the justice had committed.²

Process.] Supposing the party not to be in custody, or that he should be at large on bail, it is desirable to know how he is to be brought up to answer the charge. In felony, this is carried into effect by a writ of capias, which all courts having the power to try may award.³

By 5 Ed. 3, c. 11, where any person, being indicted or outlawed for any felony in one county, shall be dwelling or received in another county, the justices assigned to hear and determine such felonies shall direct their writs to all the counties of England where need shall be, to take such persons indicted.

And by 48 Geo. 3, c. 58, s. 4, whenever any person shall be charged with any offence in Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench, not being treason or felony, and the same shall be made appear to any judge of any of the common-law courts at Westminster by affidavit or by certificate of the indictment, such judge may issue his warrant under his hand and seal, and cause such person to be apprehended and brought before him or some other judge, or before a justice, in order to his being bound to the Queen's Majesty, with two sufficient sureties, in such sum as in the said warrant shall be expressed, with condition to appear in the said court at the time mentioned in such warrant, and to answer to all indictments for any such offence; and in default the judge or justice may commit such person to the common gaol of the county, city, or place where the offence shall have been committed, or where he shall have been apprehended, until he shall become bound as aforesaid, or be discharged by the Court of Queen's Bench in term time, or by a judge in vacation; and the recognizance to be thereupon taken shall be returned and filed in the said Court of Queen's Bench, and shall continue in force until such person shall have been acquitted, or shall have received judgment, unless sooner ordered by the same court to be discharged; and where any person, either by virtue of such warrant of commitment, or any writ of capias ad respondendum issued out of the said court, is now detained or shall hereafter be committed to and detained in any gaol for want of bail, the prosecutor may cause a copy of the indictment to be delivered to such person, or to the gaoler, keeper, or turnkey of the gaol wherein such person is or shall be so detained, with a notice thereon indorsed, that unless such person shall within eight days from the time of such delivery of a copy of the indictment as aforesaid, cause an appearance and also a plea or demurrer to be entered in the same court to such indictment, an appearance and the plea of "Not guilty" will be entered thereto in the name of such person; and in default the prosecutor, upon an affidavit made and filed in the said court of the delivery of a copy of such indictment, with such notice indorsed thereon as aforesaid, to such person, or to such gaoler, keeper, or turnkey, which affidavit may be made before any judge or commissioner of the said common-law courts authorized to take affidavits in such courts, may cause an appearance and the plea of not guilty to be entered, and such proceedings shall be had as if the defendant had appeared and pleaded not guilty, and if upon the trial the defendant shall be acquitted, the judge may order that such defendant shall be forthwith discharged.

¹ The same in Ireland.

³ 4 T. R. 521; 11 & 12 Vict.

² Not to extend to Scotland, s. 3. c. 42, s. 3.

When the assizes or sessions are over, the clerk of assize or of the peace will upon application by the prosecutor, grant a certificate of the indictment being found, upon which a judge of the Queen's Bench, or a justice, will grant a warrant to apprehend the person therein mentioned.¹ No copy of the indictment is necessary for this purpose.²

And by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 3, similar powers are given to any justice in respect of persons at large, whether bound or not. The warrant enables the justice or any other justice to deal with the prisoner, and upon oath or affirmation as to his identity, he shall be committed or bailed without further inquiry. If the person indicted be in prison, the justice, upon such proof of identity, may issue a warrant of detainer until the prisoner be removed by habeas corpus, or discharged by due course of law.

Outlawry.] In a proceeding by indictment, if the defendant cannot be found so as to be taken upon a capias or bench warrant, he may be outlawed.³ But by several statutes passed in the reign of Hen. 6, before any exigent is awarded in treason or felony, writs of capias shall be directed to the sheriff within six weeks before the return, and after the return the proceedings shall be as heretofore. Any exigent awarded contrary to this provision shall be void.⁴

But the outlawry may be avoided or reversed.⁵ Outlawry does not lie against a parish or corporation, nor against a hundred, nor a peer, except for felony or breach of the peace, nor against an infant for felony under the age of fourteen.⁶ And in misdemeanor, outlawry does not, as in treason or felony, operate as a confession.⁷

¹ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 440.

² R. v. Redfern, 2 Adol. & E. 387; 4 Nev. & M. 198.

³ Steph. 273; for the proceedings on outlawry see Hawkins, Tit. "Outlawry." Counsel need not be assigned upon a collateral matter, as whether the prisoner were beyond sea before the exigent awarded. R. v. O'Carney, T. Jones, 180.

⁴ 6 Hen. 6, c. 1; 8 Hen. 6, c. 10, s. 3; 10 Hen. 6, c. 6, s. 1.

⁵ Steph. 274.

⁶ Id. 1 Ch. Cr. L. 348.

⁷ R. v. Tiffin, 2 Salk. 494.

The prosecutor having moved to reverse an outlawry against the prisoner, which was bad, in order that he might be brought up for judgment, it was endeavoured to go on with the consideration of errors assigned against the conviction; but the court would only reverse the outlawry, declining to go into the matter of errors.¹ It was also held that no objection could be taken for want of continuances from the time of the non-appearance to that of the reversal of outlawry. No continuances were necessary during the proceedings to outlawry, nor during its existence. The record of the Queen's Bench (the indictment had been removed there by certiorari), commenced:—"Pleas before, &c., of the term of St. Michael, 4 Wm. IV.," being the term of the defendant's appearance in the Queen's Bench. Then followed regular continuances down to the non-appearance: then the outlawry: then, after an interval of several terms, an entry "Hil. T. 9 Vict.," being the term in which the defendant was brought into court after the outlawry: then an entry, "And that is to say, on the 26th Jan. 1859, in this same term," recording the bringing in of the defendant. It was held, that this was a sufficient commencement of the proceedings, subsequent to the outlawry without fresh placita, and that it was sufficient for the record to state, that the defendant, "being a prisoner in custody by virtue of a warrant theretofore issued upon the said judgment of conviction of outlawry, is brought in custody aforesaid into court here," without further describing the process under which he was taken.²

By 4 & 5 Wm. & M., c. 18, s. 3, outlawry may be reversed by attorney, without appearance, or bail, except where special bail shall be ordered by the Court of Queen's Bench,³ and this special bail is of course where the action is brought for a sum exceeding 20*l.*, and the defendant being abroad, by his attorney, signs judgment of reversal.⁴ If he is at home, the case may be different.⁵

¹ Wright v. Reg. (in error), 16 L. J. Q. B. 10; 14 Q. B. 48.

² S. C.

³ And see sects. 4, 5.

⁴ Havelock v. Geddes, 12 East, 622. Serocold v. Hampsey, Id.

624, n. Commerell v. Beauclerk, 21 L. J. Q. B. 137.

⁵ Porter v. O'Meara, 5 Bing. N. C. 624; 4 Jur. 1204. Bank of England v. Reed, 7 Mees. & W. 159; 8 D. P. C. 848.

CHAPTER V.

OF THE PROCEEDINGS BEFORE TRIAL.

Postponement of Trial.] A postponement of the trial may take place by leave of the court, as where the inquiry is deferred till the next assizes or sessions, or where a writ of certiorari issues. Again, the trial may be put off at the instance of the prosecutor or of the accused, upon just cause shown. As if there be an excitement against the prisoner: but he must first plead.¹ So, the absence of a material witness, unless abroad and unlikely to return,² especially if tampered with,³ will have this effect. The illness of the prisoner, or of a witness;⁴ the impossibility of producing the fullest evidence for the prosecution or defence, by reason of the shortness of time; an omission to make up a record;⁵ the neglect of the prosecutor to furnish a particular of the charges;⁶ the publication of writings calculated to influence the jury;⁷ want of due

¹ R. v. Bolan, 2 Moo. & Rob. 192.

² R. v. D'Eon, 3 Burr. 1513. Att.-Gen. v. Phillips, 13 Price, 592. Att.-Gen. v. Moss, Id. 258. See R. v. V. Jones, 8 East, 31.

³ R. v. Parish, 7 C. & P. 782. R. v. Gutteridge, 9 C. & P. 228. And the prisoner was not admitted to bail. But the matter lies in the discretion of the judge, who will sometimes take bail with sufficient notice, or, in the absence of collusion, will frequently discharge the prisoner upon his own recognizance. R. v. Osborn, 7 C. & P. 799. R. v. Beardmore, Id. 497.

⁴ R. v. Chapman, 8 C. & P. 558. A trial was put off till the next assizes where the absence arose from illness, although the postponement had taken place once before, on the ground that the prosecutor was too ill to attend, by reason of wounds given to him by the prisoner, and of which he died. The second postponement took place upon an arraignment for murder, a material witness being ill. R. v. Bowen, 9 C. & P. 509. R. v. Savage, 5 C. & P. 143.

⁵ R. v. Bowman, 6 C. & P. 337. Time was given in order that a mandamus might be applied for.

⁶ R. v. Hodgson, 3 C. & P. 422. Embezzlement, but not in the case of the attorney-general. Att.-Gen. v. Lambirth, 5 Price, 386.

⁷ R. v. Gray, 1 Burr. 510. R. v. Jolliffe, 4 T. R. 285. It is a great contempt to circulate partial statements, or, indeed, any papers relating to a cause on the eve of trial. R. v. Burdett, 1 Ld. R. 148; Salk. 645. But it has been held not to be a contempt to exhibit inflammatory publications in an assize town respecting a case about to be tried; as where a model of Gilham, the murderer, was shown in the town hall before the trial, in company with a bust of Williams, who was suspected of being the murderer of the Marrs and Williamsons. R. v. Gilham, Moo. & Malk. 165.

notice by the defendant in perjury of his intention to try;¹ adding counts by leave;² a commission to examine witnesses abroad;³ all these, amongst others, are grounds for delay.

It is worthy of remark to inquire as to what the judge will do if there be no deposition of the witness before the magistrate in the case of absence. It seems, that he will require an affidavit, stating in what point the importance of the testimony rests, from whence he will judge of the materiality of the witness.

This right to apply for a postponement is not for the advantage of the prosecutor only, but also of the prisoner, and the prisoner may apply concerning a witness for the prosecution. As where a witness was absent, having been previously bound over to the assizes, so that the prisoner would, of course, expect his attendance. It was a case of murder, and the prisoner intended, upon cross-examination, to have elicited from this person facts favourable to him. The court postponed the trial, although it was not shown that any endeavours had been made to procure the attendance of the witness.⁴ A child labouring under inflammation of the lungs could not be separated from its mother, nor brought to the court, being unweaned. A surgeon's affidavit to that effect was held sufficient, the mother being a material witness.⁵ Where it was discovered that the principal witness against a party charged with rape was totally ignorant of the nature of an oath, Rooke, J., directed that the trial should stand over in order that the child might be instructed, and, at the next assizes, the prisoner was convicted upon her testimony, and executed.⁶ But, in a similar case, the party being an adult, the rule was different.⁷ So again, where a child was of very immature age, Pollock, C. B., would not postpone the trial for instruction, although he would have so done had she been ten or twelve years old.⁸ So, in a case of murder, where it was proposed to show previous attempts upon the life of the deceased, by witnesses who had not been examined before the justice, the court would not postpone the trial, in order to allow time for investigating the characters of these witnesses, and of the proposed evidence.⁹ Two charges were made, one for riot, another for feloniously demolishing a house. One of the parties had been in gaol for more, the other for less, than twenty days. It was stated that

¹ R. v. Trenfield, 9 C. & P. 284.

² R. v. Stone, 1 Fost. & F. 310. The defendant could not claim to be tried instantly.

³ But not if they have had time to return. Att.-Gen. v. Laragoity, 3 Price, 221. See Att.-Gen. v. Thacker, 2 Price, 116.

⁴ R. v. Savage, 1 Car. & K. 75.

⁵ R. v. Macarthy, Car. & M. 625.

⁶ See R. v. Murphy, Leach, 430, n.; R. v. Williams, 7 C. & P. 321.

⁷ R. v. Wade, 1 Moo. C. C. 86.

The judge doubted whether he had done right in directing that the adult should be instructed, and the judges were of opinion that an acquittal should have been directed. The prisoner having been convicted upon the educated testimony, a pardon was recommended.

⁸ R. v. Nicholas, 2 Car. & K. 246.

⁹ R. v. Johnson, Id. 354.

the first prisoner intended to traverse, and was not prepared to try his case for riot. The judge, upon this, postponed the trial, but only for two days, because the general nature of the charges so far agreed as that the prisoners could not be ignorant of them.¹ A defendant in perjury was arrested on the Wednesday before the trial, as he was going to deliver his brief. The case was called on on Saturday, but the L. C. J. would not postpone the trial unless the arrest could be shown to have been collusive with the prosecution on the part of the person making the capture. Proof that a witness for the prosecution stood by during the arrest was not deemed sufficient.² Where the prosecutor has failed to succeed upon one or more indictments, he will not be allowed to postpone the remaining cases till a future session, the prisoners having been arraigned upon all the cases.³

It is not too late to postpone the trial, upon affidavit, soon after the jury have been charged, but before any evidence has been offered.⁴

Costs and expenses.] In cases of felony, no costs can be allowed to the prosecutor at the prisoner's expense, however far his witnesses may have come, although the prisoner should succeed in postponing the trial. Nor are such costs allowable under 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 22, until the trial takes place.⁵ But, in misdemeanors, if the record be withdrawn by the prosecutor, without a due countermand of trial, he must pay costs to the defendant.⁶ And if the trial, on misdemeanor, be put off at the instance of the defendant, he must pay the costs of the day.⁷

Nor can any costs be allowed to the prisoner, but the court will discharge him on his own recognizance.⁸

Certain costs were incurred upon argument by the prosecutor, which were part of the costs of the prosecution, and allowable under 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 22. Such costs, the court said, would, for the future, be taxed by the officer of the court by which the case was reserved, and who would certify the amount to the clerk of assize, or to the clerk of the peace.⁹ The warders at Millbank brought a prisoner to Wells to be tried for larceny. The court would not allow the costs of transit. The governor of Millbank was a public officer, and bound to produce the prisoner.¹⁰ And, of course, if the clerk of the peace, who is authorized to prosecute, fails in so doing, he cannot have any expenses.¹¹

¹ R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437.

² R. v. Gordon, Car. & M. 410, Lord Denman.

³ R. v. Fuller, 9 C. & P. 35.

⁴ R. v. Fitzgerald, 1 Car. & K. 201. See further upon this head, R. v. Ratcliff, 1 Sir W. Bl. 3.

⁵ R. v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 591.
R. v. Young, 2 Cox, 280.

⁶ R. v. Bartrum, 8 East, 269.

⁷ R. v. Doyle, 1 Esp. 125.

⁸ R. v. Crowe, 4 C. & P. 251.

⁹ R. v. Lewis, 7 Cox, 406.

¹⁰ R. v. Waters, 8 Cox, 350.

¹¹ R. v. Cook, 1 Fost. & F. 389.

CHAPTER VI.

THE INDICTMENT AND ITS INCIDENTS.

Indictment and its incidents.] We will now proceed to consider the indictment and pleas connected with the prosecution and defence, after which the trial, evidence, and their consequences will follow in order.

Indictments are of a public nature,¹ although there is also a remedy by action, where a matter concerning the public convenience is either prohibited or commanded, as the repair or obstruction of a highway.² And where a new offence is created with a particular mode of proceeding, no indictment will lie.³ In the absence of such a specific direction, the proceeding by indictment obtains.⁴ So it is where there is a substantive clause of prohibition, and a particular provision given afterwards with reference to another matter.⁵ So where a further penalty is inflicted for an offence punishable at common law.⁶ So where the statute prescribes the procedure by action or otherwise, an indictment may be preferred.⁷ Some cases have been mentioned in the old books where an indictment has been held unnecessary, but they would hardly avail at this day.⁸ The chief parts of an indictment are,—the venue, the party indicted, the prosecutor, time and place, the facts and intent. The caption is no part of the indictment. It is merely made up with the record as a preamble, although the jurisdiction to try must appear in the caption, as “to hear and determine,” &c.⁹ Other circumstances worthy of consideration in an indictment are, the joinder of prisoners and of offences.—First as to the venue.

Venue.] By 28 Hen. 8, c. 15, s. 1, all treasons, felonies, robberies, &c., committed at sea, or in any haven, river, creek, or place within the jurisdiction of the admiral, may be dealt with as if such offence had been committed upon the land in England, and a commission shall be had under the Queen’s great seal directed to the admiral, or to his lieutenant or deputy, and to three or four such other substantial persons as shall be appointed by the lord chancellor for the time being from time to time. Such persons shall proceed upon the oaths of twelve men of the shire, or four of them at the least.

¹ 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 4.

² Id. For instances where indictments will not lie in respect of matters of a private nature, see 2 Curw. Hawk. 289, n.

³ 2 Curw. Hawk. 290, n.

⁴ 2 Curw. Hawk. 290, n.

⁵ Id.

⁶ Id.

⁷ Id.

⁸ 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 4, &c.

⁹ R. v. Carter, Str. 442.

By sect. 2, every indictment found and presented before such commissioners of any such offence being committed in or upon the sea, &c., shall be good and effectual in law; and there shall be the like order, process, judgment and execution, as if the offence had been committed on land. If the accused deny the charges, the trial shall be by a jury of twelve men, and the same punishment shall follow as in cases of a trial for an offence on land.

By sect. 5, in the case of the Cinque Ports, the commission shall be directed to the lord warden, or to his deputy, and to three or four such other persons as the lord chancellor for the time being shall appoint; and by sect. 6, the inquisition and trial shall be made and had by the inhabitants in the said five ports or the members of the same.¹

Then the stat. 39 Geo. 3, c. 37, s. 1, extended the 28 Hen. 8 to all offences. Still the judge of the admiralty, assisted by two judges, presided, and passed sentence; but by 7 Vict. c. 2, s. 1, Her Majesty's justices, or others Her Majesty's commissioners of oyer and terminer or general gaol delivery, shall have the powers of commissioners of oyer and terminer for the trying of offences committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty.²

By sect. 2, in all indictments so preferred before the said justices and commissioners last mentioned, the venue laid in the margin shall be the same as if the offence had been committed in the county where the trial is had, and all material facts shall be stated to have taken place "on the high seas."³ Sect. 3 directs the trial, and sect. 4 saves the Central Criminal Court.

And by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 9, where any person shall, within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England or Ireland, become an accessory to any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, and whether such felony shall be committed within that jurisdiction or elsewhere, or shall be begun within that jurisdiction and completed elsewhere, or shall be begun elsewhere and completed within that jurisdiction, the offence of such person shall be felony; and in any indictment for any such offence the venue in the margin shall be the same as if the offence had been committed in the county or place in which such person shall be indicted, and his offence shall be averred to have been committed "on the high seas;" provided that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect any of the laws relating to the government of Her Majesty's land or naval forces.

The prisoners were indicted for feloniously wounding in the county of Glamorgan. The offence was committed at sea, close to Penarth Roads in the British Channel, between the Glamorgan-shire and Somersetshire coasts. The indictment charged, that the offence had been committed in Glamorgan, but there was no averment that it had taken place on the high seas, and therefore, it was not framed under 7 Vict. c. 2. The court held, that the place in question formed part of the county of Glamorgan. Both shores of the British Channel form part of England and Wales. Looking at the local situation of this sea, it must be taken to belong to the counties of the shores by which it is bounded. The Flat and Steep Holm islands, which are abreast of the anchorage ground close by which the felony happened, are always treated as part of the parish of St. Mary's, Cardiff. Therefore, as the whole of this inland sea must be distributed between the two counties, it followed, that the locus in quo was within Glamorganshire.¹

¹ See Steph. 261, 264.

² See R. v. Bruce, Leach, 1093; Russ. & Ry. 243. R. v. Lacey, Mo. 121.

³ See 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 19. R. v. Parry, Leach, 108. R. v. Widdow, 3 Camp. 78. R. v. Wyndham, Russ. & Ry. 197.

By 11 & 12 Will. 3, c. 12, s. 1, if any governor, lieutenant-governor, deputy-governor, or commander-in-chief of any plantation or colony within Her Majesty's dominions beyond the seas, shall, within his government or command, be guilty of oppressing any of His Majesty's subjects beyond the seas within his government or command, or shall be guilty of any other indictable offence contrary to the laws of this realm, or the laws in force within his government or command, such offence shall be inquired of, heard, and determined in His Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench at Westminster, or before such commissioners and in such county of this realm as shall be assigned by His Majesty's commission; and by 42 Geo. 3, c. 85, s. 1, if any person employed by or in the service of His Majesty in any civil or military station, office, or capacity out of Great Britain, or having, holding, or exercising any public station, office, capacity, or employment out of Great Britain, shall commit any indictable offence in the execution or under colour or in the exercise of any such station, &c., every such offence may be prosecuted and determined in the Court of King's Bench, either upon an information exhibited by the attorney-general, or upon an indictment found, in which information or indictment such offence may be charged to have been committed in the county of Middlesex; and all such offenders not having been before tried out of Great Britain, shall, on conviction, be liable to such punishment as may by any law now in force, or any Act that may hereafter be passed, be inflicted for any such offence committed in England, and shall also be liable, at the discretion of the Court of King's Bench, to be adjudged to be incapable of serving His Majesty in any station, office, or capacity, civil or military, or of holding or exercising any public employment whatever. This section, notwithstanding the word "indictment," does not extend to felonies. The word "information," was considered unanswerable upon an objection to an indictment for larceny in the Queen's Bench, when the defendant pleaded guilty to a charge of extensive plunder abroad, for "information lies not for a felony."²

¹ R. v. Cunningham and others, Bell, C. C. 72; 28 L. J. M. C. 66.

² R. v. Shawe, 5 M. & S. 403,

By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104,¹ s. 267, offences committed by any master, seaman, or apprentice, either ashore or afloat, who is or has been previously employed for three months in the service, shall be tried as if committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty, although actually committed out of the dominions of Her Majesty. A ship sailed from London towards China. Three chests of tea were stolen from her when off Whampoa, a river twenty or thirty miles from the sea. No evidence was given whether the tide flowed there or not, but the court held, that the Central Criminal Court had jurisdiction without this evidence.²

By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 91, s. 21, if any British subject charged with a crime or offence on board a British ship at sea, or in any foreign port or harbour, or if any person not being a British subject, charged with any crime or offence on board a British ship at sea, is found within the jurisdiction of any court of justice in Her Majesty's dominions, which would have cognizance of such crime or offence if committed within the limits of its ordinary jurisdiction, such court may hear and try the case as if the fact had been committed within such limits.³ The prisoner was a foreign sailor, one of the crew of the British ship Ontario, and he wounded the prosecutor, one also of the crew, and also a foreigner, on the high seas. It was agreed that he was not "found," but brought into the jurisdiction in custody, and against his will. But the court were clear that the conviction was right.⁴ In another case, it was suggested under similar circumstances, that the original capture was illegal for want of a warrant, and therefore that the prisoner could not have been "found." But it appeared that he shot an officer who apprehended him, not to regain his liberty, but out of revenge, and the judges said that the act would then be murder, although the arrest might have been unlawful. The prisoner was executed.⁵

Venue. Boundary.] By 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 12, where any felony or misdemeanor shall be committed on the boundary or boundaries of two or more counties or places, or partly in one county and partly in another, or within the distance of 500 yards of any such boundary or boundaries, or shall be begun in one county or place and completed in another, every such felony or misdemeanor may be dealt with, &c., in any of the said counties or places, in the same manner as if it had been actually and wholly committed therein.

This section applies to county boundaries only, not to limited jurisdictions. The word "borough" is not mentioned. Therefore, where a prisoner was arraigned at a borough sessions

¹ The Merchant Shipping Act.

² R. v. Allen, 7 C. & P. 664.

³ The Act, however, of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 96, is saved by a proviso.

⁴ R. v. Lopez, Dears. & B. 525;

27 L. J. M. C. 48.

⁵ R. v. Sattler, Dears. & B. 539.

in Southwark for an offence committed within the city of London, but certainly within 500 yards of Surrey, the recorder directed an acquittal, and upon the subsequent trial at the Old Bailey, he overruled the prisoner's plea of aut. acq., and the judges held that he had done right.¹ The trial might also have taken place at the assizes, or at the quarter sessions for Surrey.² So, again, an indictment laid an assault to have been committed at the parish of St. Martin, Stamford Baron, in the county of Northampton, and within the borough of Stamford. After traverse and certiorari, a venire was ordered into Lincolnshire, and the defendant was convicted. The assault happened within 500 yards of the boundaries of Northampton and Lincoln, but as the indictment positively stated the offence to have been committed in Northampton, the court arrested the judgment.³ The venue in this case was "borough of Stamford," and it was endeavoured to reject the parish of St. Martin, Northampton, because, in order to have succeeded, the offence should have been laid and tried in the same county. But the court would not permit the rejection.⁴ The calculation of the 500 yards must be made by the direct line of measurement from the border, not by the nearest road.⁵ In counties of cities and towns corporate, prisoners may be committed for trial to the next adjoining county.⁶

So where the prisoner obtained a post-office order in Middlesex and got the money in Kent.⁷ And thus it is that the words "town corporate" in 38 Geo. 3, c. 52 (to which we are coming), means a town corporate which is a county of itself, as Kingston-upon-Hull.⁸

Venue in the county of a city or town corporate.] By 38 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 1, in every indictment removed into the King's Bench by certiorari, and in every information filed by the attorney or solicitor general, or by leave of the Court of King's Bench, if the venue in such indictment be laid in the county of any city or town corporate, it shall be lawful for the court in which such indictment shall be depending, at the prayer of any prosecutor or defendant, to direct the issue to be tried by a jury of the county next adjoining to the county of such city or town corporate, and to award proper writs and take all proceedings necessary for such trial.

By sect. 2, any prosecutor may prefer his bill of indictment in pursuance of such direction, at any sessions of oyer and terminer or

¹ R. v. Welch, 1 Moo. C. C. 175.
The recorder presided at Southwark as well as in London.

² 1 Moo. C. C. 176.

³ R. v. Mitchell, 2 Q. B. 636;
2 Gale & D. 274.

⁴ 2 Q. B. 636.

⁵ R. v. Wood, 5 Jur. 225.

⁶ The trial may generally be in either county. R. v. Gallant, 1 Fost. & F. 517.

⁷ R. v. Jones, 3 Car. & K. 346.

⁸ R. v. Milner, 2 Car. & K. 310.

general gaol delivery; and every such bill when found shall be as valid as if the same had been found to be a true bill by any jury of the county of the city or town corporate.

The 3rd section directs that these indictments shall be filed with the proper officer of the next adjoining county, and by sect. 4 the defendant is to be removed to the gaol of that county.

By sect. 5, the recognizances are to be forfeited for non-appearance.

By sect. 6, notice left at the abode of the recognizers shall be as effectual as if served personally. But the recognizances shall not be estreated till the following sessions, in order that cause may be shown.

By sect. 7, the recognizances are to be returned to the next court of oyer and terminer, and then after such notice no indictment shall be preferred in the city or town corporate.

Sect. 8 places the expenses in the discretion of the judges.

By sect. 9, York is to be deemed adjoining to Kingston-upon-Hull, and Northumberland to Newcastle.

There are excepted from the Act, by sect. 10, London, Westminster, Southwark, Bristol, Chester, and the criminal jurisdiction of Exeter. But the exceptions of Bristol, Chester, and the Exeter criminal jurisdiction are withdrawn by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 109.¹

By 51 Geo. 3, s. 2, all expenses not provided for by 38 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 8, are included. And now, lastly, by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 19, all offences not triable at quarter sessions may be tried in the adjoining county, when committed within the above jurisdictions, but in which the Queen has not, for five years previously, granted a commission of oyer and terminer.

Bail had surrendered the defendant to the custody of the York city gaoler, under 38 Geo. 3, c. 52, and a habeas corpus issued to bring up the body, and the judge made out a committal to the county. The old bail then renewed their undertaking at the judge's lodgings. The clerk of arraigns attended with the indictment and recognizances, and the judge made an order to file them amongst the records of the county. A new traverse was entered, and a new jury pannel struck.² The statute of Geo. 3, however, does not apply to indictments sent by the Court of Queen's Bench to be tried in the next adjoining county, after a removal by certiorari.³ It needs not to be averred in the indictment that the county where the venue is laid is that next adjoining. When the record is drawn up, that may appear in the memorandum or caption.⁴

A venue was stated to be "Yorkshire, being the next adjoining county to the town and county of Kingston-upon-Hull, to wit."

¹ Sect. 11 of 38 Geo. 3 relates to ancient privileges, and sect. 12 to extra costs.

² R. v. Rowbattel, 1 Lew. C. C. 278.

³ R. v. Nottingham, 4 East, 208, under sect. 12.

⁴ R. v. Goff, Russ. & Ry. 179. As to Bristol and Gloucestershire, R. v. Holden, 8 C. & P. 606.

There is no county of Kingston-upon-Hull; it should have been, "town of Kingston-upon-Hull and county of the same town." Nevertheless, it was held sufficient.¹ And although an offence may be tried in the county although committed in the county of the town, yet it should be laid in the county of the town.² The prisoner was tried by a jury of Haverford West, a county of itself, but the offence was committed at P., which was added by the Boundary Act, 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64, to the borough of Haverford West, and by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, was declared to be part of it. Coleridge, J., after having been referred to the case of R. v. Gloucestershire Justices,³ allowed the trial to proceed.⁴ So where an offence was committed in a borough situate partly in one county and partly in another, the offence was deemed triable in either county under the Act of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 19.⁵

An indictment at the quarter sessions in Coventry was held to have been rightly tried by a jury of the whole county, although by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 110, the quarter sessions and assizes are to be held separately at Coventry for the city of Coventry and certain other parts of the county of Warwick.⁶ An offence, if any, took place at the gaol of Worcester, within the county of that city, and more than 400 yards from the county. The county of the city had a separate jurisdiction, its own recorder and quarter sessions. It was made a question whether the quarter sessions had power to try the case. The statute 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 48, was relied on for the prosecution.⁷

Venue. Journey, voyage, inland navigation, &c.] By 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 13, where any felony or misdemeanor shall be committed on any person or on or in respect of any property in or upon any coach, waggon, cart, or other carriage whatever employed in any journey, or shall be committed on any person or on or in respect of any property on board any vessel whatever employed on any voyage or journey upon any navigable river, canal, or inland navigation, such felony or misdemeanor may be dealt with in any county through any part whereof such coach, &c., or vessel shall have passed in the course of the journey or voyage during which such felony or misdemeanor shall have been committed, in the same manner as if it had been actually committed in such county; and in all cases where the side, centre, or other part of any highway, or the side, bank, centre, or other part of any such river, canal, or navigation, shall constitute the boundary of any two counties, such felony or misdemeanor may be dealt with in either of the said counties through or adjoining to or by the boundary of

¹ R. v. Grundy, 2 Cox, 357.

² R. v. Mellor, Russ. & Ry. 144.

³ Cited, 7 C. & P. 338.

⁴ R. v. Piller, 7 C. & P. 337; 5 Cox, 187.

⁵ R. v. Gallant, 1 Fost. & F. 517.

⁶ R. v. Holloway, Den. & P. 287; 12 Q. B. 319.

⁷ R. v. Harris, Dears. 346.

any part whereof such coach, &c. or vessel shall have passed in the course of the journey or voyage during which such felony or misdemeanor shall have been committed, in the same manner as if actually committed in such county.

An assault was committed in a Brighton train before its arrival at Three Bridges: there the parties separated. It was urged that trains were not within the Act, that the journey to New Cross (where the assault was alleged) was not performed in the same carriage, and that the words, "should have passed," must be confined to the time of the offence. The recorder overruled the objections, and referred the words to the time of the trial. Therefore, the trial was right at the Central Criminal Court under 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 28.¹

By 51 Geo. 3, c. 100, s. 1, it shall be lawful for the court before which any conviction shall have taken place upon any indictment under 38 Geo. 3, c. 52, to order every such convict to be punished according to law, either within the county where such conviction shall have taken place, or within the county of the city or town corporate wherein such offence shall have been committed; and in cases where the court shall order such convict to be punished within the county of such city or town corporate, it shall be lawful for the court, after passing sentence upon every such convict, to order him to be delivered into the custody of the sheriff, gaoler, or other proper officer of the county of such city or town corporate; and the sheriff, gaoler, or other proper officer of the county of such city or town corporate is hereby commanded to receive into his custody every such convict, and to execute the sentence so passed upon him in such adjoining county, as if he had been tried and had received such sentence in the county of such city or town corporate.²

We come now to a very important clause. By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 23, it shall not be necessary to state any venue in the body of any indictment, but the county, city, or other jurisdiction named in the margin shall be taken to be the venue for all the facts stated in the body of such indictment; provided that in cases where local description is or hereafter shall be required, such local description shall be given in the body of the indictment; and provided also, that where an indictment for any offence committed in the county of any city or town corporate shall be preferred at the assizes of the adjoining county, such county of the city or town shall be deemed the venue, and may either be stated in the margin of the indictment, with or without the name of the county in which the offender is to be tried, or be stated in the body of the indictment by way of venue.

A larceny of a post-office letter was stated to have taken place at Peterborough. Peterborough has an ordinary commission, and a commission to try all treasons, murders, &c. There is no non-intromittant clause, but the county magistrates exercise no jurisdiction. There is a separate custos rotulorum and clerk of the peace. It was held that the jurisdiction of the gaol delivery at Northampton was not ousted.¹ A letter containing a false pretence was received in C., a borough. It had been posted out of the borough. The letter produced some money which came to hand out of the borough. The venue in this case was held to have been well laid in the borough.² The county used always to be considered a sufficient venue without more,³ although some parish or ward was formerly mentioned in the body of the indictment; and an indictment for perjury, laying the offence to have been committed "at the Guildhall of the city of London," was held bad.⁴ So where, upon not guilty pleaded, it turned out that the crime was committed in a different county, an acquittal was the consequence.⁵ And where local description comes in question, the local rule must prevail. As where an indictment was removed by certiorari and tried in Middlesex, judgment was arrested for want of an allegation that the offence had been committed in that county, and the court would not allow a suggestion nunc protunc.⁶ So where the venue in the margin was Central Criminal Court, but that in the body of the indictment "St. Mary, Lambeth, in Surrey," it was held that the indictment should have been at the assizes for Surrey, it having been removed into the Queen's Bench by certiorari.⁷ But, with consent, the indictment may be amended in this respect.⁸ So, in libel, the venue was, "Central Criminal Court to wit," and the publication was said to have taken place "at the parish of St. Mary, in the county of Middlesex, within the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court." The defendant having removed the indictment by certiorari, afterwards withdrew his plea of Not guilty, and moved to arrest the judgment. But the allegation was deemed sufficient, and judgment was pronounced by the court at Westminster.⁹ He "withdrew" it, whereby the Queen remaineth against him without defence. This form was held sufficient.¹⁰

¹ R. v. French, 8 Cox, 252.

² See 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 23.

For ecclesiastical purposes, a parish may, perhaps, be divided, each part being called a parish. Nevertheless an indictment is good which calls the whole a parish, it being usually known as such for common purposes, as the "parish of Birmingham."¹¹ The correct name of a parish was "St. Mary, W." The indictment called it "the parish of W." In the Central Criminal

¹ R. v. Crane, 3 Cox, 53.

² R. v. Leech, 7 Cox, 100; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 34.

³ R. v. Gompertz, 14 L. J. M. C. 118; 9 Jur. 401.

⁴ R. v. Harris, Leach, 800.

⁵ R. v. Hart, 6 C. & P. 123. Not aided by 7 & 8 Geo. 4. See 3 Camp. 77, as to the old law. Steph. 264.

⁶ R. v. Stowell, 5 Q. B. 44; Dav. & M. 189.

⁷ R. v. Connop, 4 Ad. & El.

942.

⁸ R. v. Lord Ashburton, 5 Q. B. 48, n.; 15 L. J. M. C. 97.

⁹ R. v. Gregory, 14 L. J. M. C. 82; 7 Q. B. 274.

¹⁰ Gregory v. Reg. 15 Q. B. 957; 15 Jur. 74.

¹¹ R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437.

Court Act¹ this parish is called "the parish of W." The court held the statement sufficient, although the correct name was "St. Mary, W."² The indictment mentioned "St. Botolph, Aldgate," and there being no negative proof that there was no such place as "St. Botolph, Aldgate," the conviction was supported.³ And it is quite clear, that it needs not to be proved affirmatively for the prosecution that the parish laid is the right parish, though, upon one occasion, the judges expressed their doubt how they should hold if the non-existence if the parish laid were proved negatively for the prisoner.⁴ Subsequently, however, it seems to have been the opinion that the objection could only avail as a plea in abatement, at least, where there was nothing of locality in the charge, and the court will now amend under the statute. A charge of setting fire to a stack of pulse was deemed to be of this nature, and the judges unanimously affirmed a conviction where the parish laid was "Normanton-on-the-Would," and the prisoner proved that there was no such parish. Moreover, the judges at the trial thought, that they could not reject "on-the-Would" as surplusage, because it was likewise in proof that there were two Normantons, Normanton-on-the-Would and Normanton-on-Trent, but not Normanton singly. The opinion of the judges, however, being that the objection could only be by plea in abatement, the point of surplusage became immaterial.⁵ Hence it follows, that unless local description be necessary, the mention of the county is not now met with.⁶

Where a parish extended into two counties, an indictment charging the offence in either was held good.⁷ But if a penalty be given to the poor of a particular parish, the parish must, of course, be correctly set out.⁸ So if there be two townships, and the matter be local, it is better to lay it in the parish at large, for if the wrong township be stated, the error will be fatal.⁹

To these observations we may add, that the words, "parish aforesaid," refer to the parish last mentioned. So that where the prisoner and two others of the parish of Walcot were indicted for being riotously assembled at the parish of St. Peter and St. Paul, and for beginning to demolish a house, situate at the parish aforesaid, Park, J., held the indictment sufficient for the cause above mentioned, although two parishes had been previously named.¹⁰ So as to counties, that in the margin shall be preferred if more than one are mentioned.¹¹ After verdict, it was held, that ¹ 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36.

² R. v. St. John, [Burglary,] 9 C. & P. 40.

³ R. v. Bullock, 1 Moo. C. C. 324, n.; Car. Cr. L. 282.

⁴ R. v. Dowling, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 433. The statutes 9 Hen. 5, c. 1, and 18 Hen. 6, are repealed. See 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 83.

⁵ R. v. Woodward, 1 Moo. C. C. 323.

⁶ Post. Burglary. Stealing in a dwelling house, &c.

⁷ R. v. Perkins, 4 C. & P. 363.

⁸ 2 Russ. C. M. 800, citing Arch. Cr. Pl. 95.

⁹ R. v. Wood, 1 Lew. C. C. 36.

¹⁰ R. v. Richards, 1 Moo. & Rob. 177.

¹¹ R. v. Rhodes and another, 2 Ld. R. 888. See Sutton v. Fenn, 3

this statement, "a foreign country called America," was good. The objection was, that the particular country in America should have been pointed out.¹

By 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 3, all offences which in other indictments would be laid to have been committed in the county where the trial is had, and all material facts which would be, in other indictments, averred to have taken place in the county where the trial is had, shall, in indictments prepared and tried in the Central Criminal Court, be laid to have been committed, and be averred to have taken place "within the jurisdiction of the said court." Where an allegation was introduced that the offence had been committed in Middlesex, the venue being "Central Criminal Court to wit," it was deemed sufficient upon certiorari.²

India.] The statute 9 Geo. 4, c. 74, s. 56, does not extend to persons not otherwise amenable to the jurisdiction of the court. The words "within the limits of the charter of the said united company" mean, within the trading limits.³

Defective venues.] Nevertheless, although venues are sometimes so imperfectly laid as to hazard the verdict, yet the stat. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24, has provided, that no want of a proper or perfect venue shall vitiate the indictment. If, however, there be no jurisdiction, the imperfect venue cannot be cured. A fortiori, if there be no venue at all, the statute will not cure, for where there is no venue there is none to cure.

Therefore, where the count had "Lancashire" in the margin, but no words of reference were added to show where certain unlawful assemblies mentioned in that count had been held, the judgment on that count was arrested.⁴ But another count in the same indictment was attended with better success. The defendants were charged with aiding and abetting certain unlawful assemblies. The places where these assemblies were held were imperfectly stated. Thus, "at divers places," without more, but the aiding Wils. 339. But see R. v. Elnor, Cro. El. 184. All such objections are, however, at present, for the most part, unavailable by reason of the statutes and the powers of amendment.

¹ R. v. Myddleton, 7 T. R. 739. There might have been another place called America besides that continent. Per Cur.

² R. v. Hunt, 10 Q. B. 925; 17 L. J. M. C. 14. The indictment had been found at the Central Criminal Court, with the marginal venue, "Central Criminal Court." It charged, that A., late of the parish of M. in the county of Middlesex, vi et armis, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, did, &c. The indictment was removed by certiorari into the Queen's Bench, and was tried by a Middlesex jury. This was held not to be a mis-trial. It was before 9 & 10 Vict. c. 24, and R. v. Countesthorpe, 2 B. & Adol. 487, was cited.

³ Nga Hoong v. Reg. 7 Cox, 489. The judgment of the supreme court of Calcutta was reversed.

⁴ R. v. O'Connor, 5 Q. B. 16; Dav. & M. 761.

and abetting were charged to have taken place at the parish aforesaid in the county aforesaid, and there being Lancashire in the margin, the latter venue was proper ; the former¹ being an imperfect statement, was helped by the statute.² The venue in the margin shows that the indictment was found by a grand jury in the county named, not (as in civil cases) that the complaint is laid as arising within the county.³ An indictment described the defendant as of the parish of S. in the city of London. The venue in the margin was, "Central Criminal Court to wit;" but the venue in the body omitted the words "in the county aforesaid," saying only, "at the parish aforesaid." Here there was merely an imperfect venue, and the statute came in aid to cure it, for as nothing appeared to the contrary, it would be presumed that all the parish of S. was in the city of London, and, accordingly, the trial was well had at the sittings of the Central Criminal Court in London.⁴ And it may be added, that besides the remedy by statute in this respect, there is, on the part of the judge, a power to amend. Hence, if a venue should be unnecessarily introduced in the body of the indictment, it may be rejected as surplusage, or struck out.

Changing the venue.] For the purpose of securing an impartial trial, the Court of Queen's Bench will change the venue, but the power is quite discretionary. Upon a criminal information, very strong grounds must be shown.⁵ A prejudice existing in the county is insufficient without more.⁶ Nor will the fact of the witnesses being in another county cause the court to change the venue.⁷ The question is, whether the defendant can have an impartial trial.⁸ The gentry of a county were addicted to fox-hunting, and there was an indictment for a conspiracy to destroy foxes. Here seemed to be a proper case for interference ; but the court would not change the venue.⁹ There was a charge of conspiracy for procuring false votes to be given at an election for bridge-master of the city of London. The venue was changed from the Central Criminal Court to Westminster.¹⁰ Perhaps the rank of magistrate may be the cause of prejudice so as to destroy impartiality.¹¹ The mode of changing the venue is by entering a sug-

¹ "At divers places."

² R. v. O'Connor, ut sup.

³ S. C.

⁴ R. v. Albert, 5 Q. B. 37 ; Dav. & M. 89. Whether the statement in question was, in reality, defective, qu. ?

⁵ R. v. Harris and others, 3 Burr. 1330.

⁶ R. v. Penprase, 4 B. & Adol. 575 ; 1 Nev. & M. 312. R. v. Stephenson, 5 Jur. 341.

⁷ R. v. Dunn, 11 Jur. 287. R. v. Meade, 3 D. & Ry. 301.

⁸ See R. v. Fawle, 2 Ld. Raym. 1452 ; and R. v. Powell, from Salop, as cited in S. C. ; R. v. Thomas, 4 M. & S. 442 ; R. v. Ellis, 6 B. & C. 145 ; R. v. Pinney, 3 B. & Adol. 947 ; R. v. Russell, 4 B. & Adol. 536, n., and there are very many other instances.

⁹ R. v. King, 2 Ch. Rep. 217.

¹⁰ R. v. Simpson, 5 Jur. 462.

¹¹ R. v. Farewether, Cro. Car. 348. R. v. Pinney, 3 B. & Adol. 947.

gestion on the record when removed by certiorari, that the jury process should be awarded in a foreign county.¹ This suggestion, however, needs not to state the facts which warrant the change.² Usually the venue goes into some other county upon the same circuit.³ Not necessarily the next adjoining county.⁴ With reference to the time for applying to change, it seems that issue must first be joined.⁵ And, moreover, one of several defendants may apply for the purpose of removing the venue in misdemeanor into an adjoining county, and a suggestion will be entered, although there be no affidavit of consent on the part of the others. Nevertheless, there should be no ground for presuming dissent on the part of the latter.⁶ Sometimes terms will be imposed on the defendant in order that the prosecutor may not be injured by the departure from the usual course of procedure.⁷

Amendments.] Very considerable powers are confided to the judges by the legislature with regard to amendments, and these powers are exercised with a liberality commensurate with their importance.

Any judge sitting at nisi prius, or any court of oyer and terminer, gaol delivery, or general or quarter sessions of the peace, on the trial of any indictable offence, if he shall see fit, may cause the record whereon the trial is pending, when any variance shall appear between any matter in writing or in print produced in evidence and the recital upon such record, to be forthwith amended. So, in felony or misdemeanor, in case of any variance between the record and the evidence, in the name of any county, riding, division, city, borough, town corporate, parish, township, or place,⁸ or in the name or description of any person or body politic or corporate, or alleged to be the owner of any property, real or personal, which shall form the subject of any offence charged therein, or in the name or description of any person, &c., therein alleged to be injured or damaged, or intended so to be by the commission of such offence, or in the christian name or surname, or both christian name and surname, or other description, of any person therein named or described,⁹ or in the name or description of any matter or thing whatsoever therein named or described, or in the ownership of any property therein named or described, for the court, if it shall consider such variance not material to the merits of the

¹ R. v. Holden, 5 B. & Adol. 347 ; 2 Nev. & M. 167.

² R. v. Hunt and others, 3 B. & Ald. 444.

³ R. v. ———, 6 Jur. 131.

⁴ R. v. Coule, 2 Burr. 834. The trial being in Northumberland, upon an indictment found in Berwick, although Durham was the next adjoining county. 1 T. R. 365 ; see R. v. Amery, Id. 363.

⁵ R. v. Forbes, 2 D. P. C. 440.

Whether upon an indictment for libel, after the striking of a special jury, the venue can be changed, qu. ? R. v. Tarpeley, 1 Har. & Wol. 58.

⁶ R. v. Browne, 6 Jur. 168.

⁷ R. v. Hunt, R. v. Hodgson, 5 B. & Adol. 351.

⁸ "Liberty" is omitted.

⁹ See R. v. Lord Cardigan, 1841, cited, 24 L. J. M. C. 117. Dears. 477, n.

case, and that the party accused cannot be prejudiced thereby in his defence on such merits, may order such record to be amended, according to the proof, by some officer of the court or other person, both where such variance occurs and elsewhere where necessary, on such terms, as to postponing the trial to be had before the same or another jury, as such court shall think reasonable; and after any such amendment the trial shall proceed, whenever the same shall be proceeded with, both with respect to the liability of witnesses to be indicted for perjury and otherwise, as if no such variance had occurred; and if the trial shall be had at nisi prius the order for the amendment shall be indorsed on the postea, and returned with the record, and all such papers, &c., shall be amended; and in all other cases the order for the amendment shall either be indorsed on the indictment, or be engraved on parchment, and filed with the indictment among the records of the court. Provided that in the case of postponement the court may respite the recognizances of the prosecutor and witnesses, and of the party accused, and his surety or sureties, if any, in which case the prosecutor and witnesses shall be bound to attend to prosecute and give evidence respectively, and the party accused shall be bound to attend to be tried, at the proper time and place, without any fresh recognizances. Provided also, that where any such trial shall be to be had before another jury, the crown and the party accused shall respectively be entitled to the same challenges as they were respectively entitled to before the first jury was sworn.¹

Amendments were by no means unknown before the more modern statutes. Nevertheless it has been a ground for amending indictments with a sparing hand, that the amendment is, in point of fact, an alteration of the presentment upon oath of the grand jury.²

There must be something to amend by. Where the object was to show that twenty-eight, instead of twenty-three, persons had acted as grand jurors, the court could not interfere for want of minutes to amend by, the town clerk of the place where the indictment was found swearing that he had none in his possession.³ The names of grand jurors need not, as it seems, be set out in the caption of an indictment removed by certiorari, and as the cap-

¹ 9 Geo. 4, c. 15; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 4; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 10; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1. The verdict and judgment shall then be as valid as if they had been originally so. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 2. The records may be drawn up in the amended form, without noticing the amendments. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 3.

² R. v. Hewins, 9 C. & P. 786. R. v. Cooke, 7 C. & P. 559. In

R. v. Hewins, the indictment stated that four commissioners were commanded to examine witnesses. The commission put in was, that the commissioners, or three or any two of them, might examine. The judge would not allow the amendment under 9 Geo. 4, c. 15.

³ R. v. Marsh, 1 Jur. 38. The indictment had been removed by certiorari. 6 Ad. & El. 236.

tion may be amended, the court would not stop a case upon the suggestion of such an omission.¹ Here, again, there must be minutes to amend by.² Sometimes the court will invite the consent of the defendant before an amendment is permitted. As where an indictment had the venue "Central Criminal Court" in the margin, but there was no venue in the body: here the amendment was not made without the consent of the defendant.³ Whilst, in R. v. Wilkes, an information for a misdemeanor was amended without such consent, and after the record was made up and sealed.⁴ And this may be done even just before trial,⁵ à fortiori, after plea pleaded.⁶ A variance in a letter was always amendable.⁷ The word "commissioner" has been exchanged for commissioners in the case of an affidavit upon which perjury was assigned.⁸ So if misrecitals do not affect the merits of the case, the judge will be apt to accede to an application to amend.⁹

A plea in abatement may not be amended.¹⁰ And the judge will not amend where ordinary care might have avoided the mistake.¹¹ As where in a case of receiving stolen goods, the name of the prosecutor was used in the scienter, instead of that of the prisoner.¹² But in an indictment for stealing and receiving, the power to amend by inserting the right name was yielded to without argument.¹³ Where under the 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 9, judgment was pronounced at the assizes on a criminal trial upon a King's Bench record, the court could amend the judgment by setting it aside or by arresting it.¹⁴ In January, 1843, the defendant pleaded not guilty to a misdemeanor, the indictment for which had, at his instance, been removed by certiorari. In Michaelmas Term he withdrew his plea, and judgment was entered, but sentence was deferred. The plea roll, including the retraxit, was then made up. But the clerk omitted, after the several days of the month in the jury process, to state the term and year of the reign in which they respectively were. He entered a venire facias juratores as issuing out of Hilary Term, 1843, returnable on April 16, which was Sunday. The prosecutor entered up judgment, and all the subsequent proceedings down to the sentence in Trinity Term, 1845, by which the defendant was sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and, in so doing, the term and year of the reign after

¹ R. v. Davis and others, 1 C. & P. 470.

² Ut sup. R. v. Davis. See note (b) there.

³ R. v. Lord Ashburton, 8 Jur. 143.

⁴ R. v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527. And before a single judge.

⁵ R. v. Harris and others, 1 Salk. 47; 4 Burr. ut sup.

⁶ 1 Salk. ut sup.; and see Id. Tit. "Amendment."

⁷ R. v. Withers, 4 Cox, 17 Harniss for Harness, p.

⁸ R. v. Christian, Car. & M. 388.

⁹ See R. v. Newton, 1 Car. & K.

469.

¹⁰ R. v. Cooke, 2 B. & C. 871.

¹¹ R. v. Hewins, 9 C. & P. 786.

¹² R. v. Larkins, 23 L. J. M. C.

125; Dears. 365.

¹³ R. v. Vincent and another, Den. & P. 464; 21 L. J. M. C. 109.

¹⁴ R. v. Nott, 7 Jur. 621.

the several days of the continuances were omitted, together with the continuances from Easter Term, 1844, to Easter Term, 1845. The Bail in Error Act passed in August, 1845, and the defendant then sued out a writ of error with recognizances, assigning for error that the 16th of April was Sunday, that the terms and years in the jury process and continuances were omitted after the months, and that the continuances from Easter Term, 1844, to Trinity Term, 1845, were omitted. The defendant was discharged from prison in Trinity Term, 1845, having undergone two months of his sentence. In Trinity Term, 1846, the prosecutor obtained a rule, pending the writ of error, to issue a ven. fac. jur. as of Hilary Term, 1843, returnable in Easter Term, 1843, and not on a Sunday, to correct the roll accordingly, and to insert the terms and years after the months, together with the omitted continuances, on the roll. The court made the rule absolute.¹ And the court amended the description of Acts of parliament which were misrecited in the indictment.² There were three assignments in an indictment for perjury. The first and third being almost the same, the judge directed the jury upon the second as though it had stood first, and upon the first and third together as the third. The verdict was guilty on the second, and not guilty on the first. But the jury meant to acquit on the second, and to convict on the first and third, treating the assignments as the judge had in summing up. The judge amended the postea by entering up judgment for the crown on the first and third, and for the defendant on the second. But the court thought that this amendment should not have been made from the judge's recollection.³ It would seem, that an indictment cannot be altered after verdict, for that would make a jury party to the finding.⁴ The amendment of "widow" for "wife" was allowed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 19.⁵ And it is to be understood generally, that if a party applies to the court, as for a mandamus, and fails for want of being properly prepared, and is thus incapacitated, according to the rule, from coming again with new or amended materials, not only a private person, but public officers also, as churchwardens, are concluded by it.⁶

The following cases have been decided since the stat. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100:—The prisoner was charged with poaching on land belonging to George William Frederick Charles, Duke of Cambridge. A witness proved "George William," and that the duke had other names. An amendment was prayed to strike out "Frederick Charles." This was refused by the quarter sessions. The ¹ R. v. Gregory, 4 Dowl. & L. 777; 2 B. C. Rep. 47. The earlier statutes of amendment applied to criminal as well as civil cases, ut sembl.

² R. v. Westley, 29 L. J. M. C. 35; Bell, 193.

³ R. v. Virrier, 12 Ad. & El. 317; 4 Per. & D. 161.

⁴ By Cresswell, J., in R. v. Harris, Dears. 347.

⁵ R. v. J. and M. Orchard, 8 C. & P. 565.

⁶ R. v. Pickles, 12 L. J. 40; 6 Jur. 1039.

jury found a verdict of "Guilty," and the identity of the duke. On a case reserved, the court held the conviction wrong:—1. The names were not proved as laid. 2. The court of quarter sessions might have struck out all the christian names, but not "Frederick Charles" only. And they were not bound to amend. Their power was discretionary. They should have directed an acquittal, having refused to amend.¹ The court considered themselves bound by R. v. Lord Cardigan.² In an indictment for concealment, it was charged that the child's body had been laid in and among a heap "of carrots." The evidence showed, that it was not laid "in," but "behind." No amendment was permitted.³ The judge allowed a count, under 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 2, with intent to murder a particular individual, to be inserted after plea, because, before plea, it might have been demurrable for generality to charge an intent to murder a person unknown.⁴ W. was indicted for stealing the goods of B. and another, and C. as receiver in the same indictment. There was a count against C. for a substantive felony. W. pleaded guilty, C., not guilty. The prosecutor did not appear, and the names of the owners, as laid in the indictment, were not proved. It was proposed to amend by stating the property to have belonged to persons unknown. To this it was objected, that the amendment would falsify the record as to the prisoner W., upon which Platt, B., amended the record as to the substantive felony.⁵ An indictment for arson called the thing burned a "barn," whereas it was a stack of barley. Both barn and barley had, however, been destroyed by fire. This was amended.⁶ So again in arson, where the house of the tenant was irregularly described as that of the landlord, Crompton, J., allowed an amendment, promising to save the point, but there was an acquittal.⁷ So "cutting and wounding" may be exchanged for "wounding" only.⁸ In bigamy the allegation of apprehension in the county was allowed. The notes of a judge at a former trial were not allowed to be amended.⁹ If the materiality of an averment in perjury be not sufficiently stated, the omission is not amendable under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 25.¹⁰ And Hill, J., refused to strike out the word "feloniously" in a case where it appeared that the forgery of an agreement was only a forgery at common law.¹¹

The jurors, &c.] To say "the jurors of," instead of the "jurors

¹ R. v. Frost and another, Dears. 474; 24 L. J. M. C. 116.

² Cited, 24 L. J. M. C. 117; Dears. 477, note (a).

³ R. v. ———, 6 Cox, 391.

⁴ R. v. Lallement, 6 Cox, 204.

⁵ R. v. Winch, Id. 523.

⁶ R. v. Neville, Id. 69.

⁷ R. v. Kimbrey, 6 Cox, 464.

⁸ R. v. Child, 5 Cox, 197, and in this case, after "Common Pleas," the words "and others their fellows" were allowed to be inserted, and "assizes" was struck out as surplusage. The words "assigned to deliver the said gaol" were deemed to refer to the last-named judge only.

⁹ S. C.

¹⁰ R. v. Harvey, 8 Cox, 99; not cured by sect. 20 of that Act.

¹¹ R. v. Wright, 2 Fost. & F. 320.

for," &c., is no ground of objection in arrest of judgment. For "of our lady the Queen" may be rejected as surplusage, and the jurors shall be intended to be those jurors who are mentioned in the caption.¹ Nor is it error; as where it was said, "the jurors of our lady the Queen," &c., "in the tenth year of our sovereign lady Queen Victoria," &c. For the caption and indictment taken together destroy the objection, or the caption itself cures the defect.² And it seems that they should be called "jurors of the county." A record of conviction at the assizes began, "Yorkshire to wit." It recited a commission to justices to hear and determine, &c., and it set forth an indictment found by A., &c. grand jurors, mentioning, except in one instance, their places of residence, but omitting to call them "good and lawful men within the county of York," and not mentioning the county. Patteson, J., inclined to think an objection made upon this account fatal.³ If there be a Quaker juryman, the form is, "the jurors, &c., upon their oath and affirmation present," &c.⁴

Name and description of accused.] It is necessary to state the christian name and surname of the prisoner, and formerly the place of abode was added, as well as the condition of the prisoner, usually labourer, and if he had more names than one, an alias dictus was employed.⁵ But either a bad addition, or the want of one, was cured by appearance.⁶ But these forms are now no longer necessary by reason of the statutes of amendment.

Idem sonans.] When the name proved sounds the same as that in the indictment the variance will be immaterial. As Segrave for Seagrave,⁷ Whyneard for Winyard,⁸ McNicole for McNicoll,⁹ Beneditto for Benedetto.¹⁰ But not M'Carn for M'Cann,¹¹ nor Shakespeare for Shakepear,¹² nor Townend for Tewnend,¹³ nor, of course, Lunns for London.¹⁴ And upon the question, whether Darius and Trius were the same, the court said that the jury should have had the question submitted to them, and the conviction was quashed.¹⁵ The judge can only decide when the names must necessarily sound the same.¹⁶ If the defendant refuse to tell his name and be unknown, he is to be indicted as a "person to the jurors unknown," but who is personally

¹ R. v. Turner, 2 Moo. & Rob. 214.

² Broome v. Reg. (in error), 17 L. J. M. C. 52; 12 Q. B. 834.

³ Whitehead v. Reg. (in error), 7 Q. B. 582.

⁴ 9 C. & P. 78.

⁵ See 1 Hen. 5, c. 5. R. v. Checkets and others, 6 M. & S. 188.

⁶ 1 Sid. 247; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 47. R. v. Matthews, Leach, 584.

⁷ Str. 889.

⁸ R. v. Foster, Russ. & Ry. 412.

⁹ R. v. Wilson, Den. 284; 2 Car. & K. 527.

¹⁰ Abitbol v. Beneditto, 2 Taunt. 401.

¹¹ R. v. Tannet, Russ. & Ry. 351.

¹² R. v. Shakespeare, 10 East, 83.

¹³ R. v. Wright and others, 1 Lew. C. C. 135.

¹⁴ R. v. Woodward, Leach, 253,

¹⁵ R. v. Davis, Den. & P. 231;

20 L. J. M. C. 207.

¹⁶ S. C.

brought before the jurors by the keeper of the prison. Under such a mode of preferring a charge a prisoner was convicted for libel.¹ An indictment against a receiver stated a burglary by a certain person, or certain persons, to the jurors unknown; and it turned out that a bill had been previously presented to the grand jury, charging one H. M. as principal, and it also appeared that both indictments related to the same offence. The conviction of the receiver was held good, although the principal felon was alleged in the indictment to have been unknown. This circumstance formed no good objection to the second indictment.²

Dilatory pleas of misnomer are, indeed, now entirely discouraged,³ and amendments may be made.

Defects in indictments.] The defects which shall not vitiate an indictment are pointed out by 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 20, and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24. No indictment or information shall be held insufficient for want of the averment of any matter unnecessary to be proved, nor for the omission of the words, "as appears by the record," or of the words, "with force and arms," or of the words, "against the peace," nor for the insertion of the words, "against the form of the statute," instead of "against the form of the statutes,"⁴ or vice versa, nor for that any person mentioned in the indictment or information is designated by a name of office or other descriptive appellation, instead of his proper name, nor for omitting to state the time at which the offence was committed, in any case where time is not of the essence of the offence, nor for stating the time imperfectly, nor for stating the offence to have been committed on a day subsequent to the finding of the indictment or exhibiting the information, or on an impossible day, or on a day that never happened, nor for want of a proper or perfect venue, nor for want of a proper or formal conclusion,⁵ or for want of or imperfection in the addition of any defendant, nor for want of the statement of the value or price of any matter or thing, or the amount of damage, injury, or spoil, in any case where the value or price, or the amount of damage, injury, or spoil, is not of the essence of the offence.⁶

If any objection should be taken notwithstanding this clause it must be on demurrer.⁷ Thus, by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 25, every objection to any indictment for any formal defect apparent on the face thereof shall be taken, by demurrer, or motion to quash such indictment, before the jury shall be sworn, and not afterwards; and every court before which any such objection shall be taken for any formal defect may, if it be thought necessary, cause the indictment to be forthwith amended in such particular by some officer of the court or other person, and thereupon the trial shall proceed as if no such defect had appeared.

¹ R. v. —, Russ. & Ry. 489.

² R. v. Bush, Id. 372.

³ 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 19.

⁴ R. v. Collins, Leach, 827, R. v. Pim, Russ. & Ry. 425, no longer apply.

⁵ As "to the great scandal" instead of "the common nuisance."

R. v. Holmes, 22 L. J. M. C. 122.

⁶ Sill v. Reg., Dears. 132; 22 L. J. M. C. 41.

⁷ R. v. Law, 2 Moo. & Rob. 197.

And by 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 21, where the offence charged has been created by any statute, or subjected to a greater degree of punishment by any statute, the indictment or information shall, after verdict, be held sufficient to warrant the punishment prescribed by the statute if it describe the offence in the words of the statute.

Baron and feme.] There are sufficient distinctions both with regard to the framing of an indictment against a married woman, or one reputed to be such, as well as with reference to the facts themselves which affect individuals under coverture, to warrant us in entering a little at large into the matter. Thus, where the evidence was that the woman had passed as a wife, and had been addressed in that character before third persons, and nothing arose to rebut the presumption of marriage, Hullock, B., left it to the jury to say whether the prisoner were wife or not, and, that question being found in the affirmative, an acquittal ensued.¹ In the last case, the prisoner had pleaded to an indictment, charging her as a single woman. If, however, the indictment charges her as a wife, the evidence of a presumptive marriage is not necessary.² And herein rests the distinction. For where the charge was laid against A. as a single woman, and the evidence was, that both she and her pretended husband had committed the offence, that the woman had lived with the man for two years, and was reputed to be his wife, it was held, that an acquittal on the ground of coercion could not be directed, in the absence of evidence to convince the jury of the marriage.³ This is entirely a question for them.⁴ So, where a woman was charged with harbouring a murderer, the counsel for the prosecution was considered to be justified in not offering any evidence against her if he had reason to suppose that she had been married to the murderer, and when also it appeared that the woman considered herself a wife, and had, as such, lived with the man for years. And this was held correct, in spite of a suspicion that the marriage, if not invalid, was at least irregular.⁵

The wife is not, as a general principle, answerable for any felonies committed in the presence of her husband, except treason and murder, to which latter offences she may likewise be accessory before the fact;⁶ perhaps manslaughter;⁷ perhaps an assault to commit murder.⁸ And it has been said that robbery is an exception;⁹ but this is very doubtful, unless it be construed as robbery

¹ R. v. Quinn, 1 Lew. C. C. 1. R. v. Robinson, 203. See also R. Atkinson, 1 Russ. C. M. 24.

² R. v. Knight and ux. 1 C. & P. 116.

³ See R. v. Hassell, 2 C. & P. 434. R. v. Adey, Leach, 208.

⁴ See R. v. Woodward, 5 C. & P. 861.

⁵ R. v. Good, 1 Car. & K. 185.

⁶ R. v. Somerville and Arden, 1 And. 204; 1 Hale, P. C. 45, 47. R. v. Manning, 2 Car. & K. 903.

⁷ 1 Hale, P. C. 47, 434, 516; 2 Moo. C. C. 58.

⁸ 2 Moo. C. C. 58.

⁹ 1 Hawk. c. 4, s. 11; Kel. 31; 2 Moo. C. C. 58. But see 1 Curw. Hawk. 4, n. (7.)

with violence, for burglary was very early held to be within the rule.¹ Although, if a woman were to use violence during a burglary in company with her husband, it may be a question as to the view which the judges would take of the rule and exceptions. Forgery is clearly within the rule;² of course, larceny. A woman can no more be charged with a felony in receiving goods from her husband knowingly, than she could be accessory after the fact for receiving her husband after the commission of a larceny.³ The rule is the same with regard to coining instruments. The woman tried to break them up, but this was not deemed to be a felonious possession of them, the husband being in the house.⁴ However, if the woman should act an independent part, or if there be other circumstances to repel the presumption of coercion, the case will differ. Even if she is the principal actor, and incite, it is said that she may be charged.⁵ In fact this would negative coercion, à fortiori, if she should do the act voluntarily,⁶ or in her husband's absence.⁷ Upon one occasion a woman was convicted of taking a false oath to obtain letters of administration, although her husband was present, and the decision must have proceeded upon the fact of her having been the chief promoter of the crime.⁸ So, where the wife was most active in concealing stolen goods, she was presumed to have escaped from control, and was convicted.⁹ The husband being reluctant to commit a robbery, was persuaded by his wife, yet he was convicted, and the woman acquitted.¹⁰ The distinction is between the active agency of the wife, as where she received goods in order to make profit of them, and her attempt to screen her husband. In the first case she may be convicted, in the second she should be acquitted.¹¹ The presence of the husband is the main question, and yet if the wife should act in his absence, obviously under duress, she ought to be acquitted. The jury must find with what view she received goods in her husband's absence; so that, if the question of guilt be left generally to the jury, without particular reference to the law of husbands and wives, the conviction will be set aside.¹² So,

¹ 1 Hale, P. C. 45; Kel. 31. See Leach, 351.

² R. v. Atkinson, 1 Russ. C. M. 20.

³ R. v. Brooks, 22 L. J. M. C. 121; Dears. 184.

⁴ R. v. Boober and ux., 4 Cox, 272.

⁵ 1 Hale, P. C. 516.

⁶ Id. East, P. C. 559.

⁷ 1 Hale, P. C. 516.

⁸ R. v. Dicks, 1 Russ. C. M. 19.

⁹ R. v. Eliza Archer and others, 1 Moo. C. C. 143. See R. v. Banks, 1 Cox. 238. But a pardon was recommended for her, because the charge against husband and wife having been joint, it had not been left to the jury whether she had received goods in the absence of her husband, although she had been the most active.

¹⁰ Case on the Midland Circuit, cited, 1 C. & P. 117, n.

¹¹ R. v. M'Clarens and others, 3 Cox, 425. Receiving stolen goods.

¹² R. v. Wardroper, Bell, 249; 29 L. J. M. C. 116. Had the question been properly left, and had the jury convicted the wife, the court would have supported the conviction. The woman knew that the goods were unlawfully obtained, for she wore part of them, and offered others for sale, but the point was not left to the jury.

where a wife got implements to rescue her husband from prison by his direction.¹ A husband put his hand into the room where his wife was engaged in committing a felony, and said "Get on," and yet the wife was convicted, for the jury thought she was acting an independent part.² A wife, in her husband's absence, though by his order, procuration, and command, uttered a forged certificate, and yet was held rightly convicted.³ This case, however, would at this day be seriously scrutinized, although just in the main, for if the fear were continuing, it would be difficult to support a conviction. A wife wrote a threatening letter, and her husband delivered it. It was held that she alone might be found guilty, if the husband could be believed ignorant of the contents.⁴ A woman went from shop to shop without going in, but attending upon her husband, who was illegally engaged, and she was acquitted. Had she taken an independent part, she might have been convicted.⁵ There was a joint indictment for receiving, and a general verdict, "Guilty." The evidence showed either one joint receiving, or two several acts of receiving; if the one, the wife could not be convicted because of her husband's presence; if the other, the charge against the wife could not be proved as laid. He was convicted, and the wife acquitted. Here the court severed the verdict, and there was a several summing up.⁶ On the other hand, where the receiving is quite apart and without his control, he cannot be convicted, although he adopts her receipt.⁷ A woman robs lodgings let to her husband, in his absence. In the house she is supposed to be subject to a continuing dominion, and the exception in her favour as to absence is made out;⁸ whereas, where the lodgings were let to the wife, and the husband rarely came, the presumption failed, and the case assumed an appearance unfavourable to the woman.⁹ A man and his wife were tried before Vaughan, J., for arson. The man was a cripple, and bedridden in the room. The learned judge, after conferring with Tindal, C. J., held, that the presumption of coercion was repelled.¹⁰ Even what the woman says in her husband's presence may be considered as having been said under coercion; as, where the wife exonerated her husband in a case of receiving stolen goods found in the house, and took the blame upon herself.¹¹ A notion once prevailed that a married

¹ R. v. Ryan, cited, 1 C. & P. 117, n.

² R. v. Hughes, Starkie on Ev. 1440, citing 2 Lew. C. C. 230.

³ R. v. Morris, Russ. & Ry. 270; Leach, 1096.

⁴ R. v. J. & M. Hammond, Leach, 444. Both were acquitted.

⁵ Case at Durham Sp. Assizes, 1829. Math. Cr. Dig. 262.

⁶ R. v. Mathews and ux. Den. 596. Primâ facie, if goods are found in a man's house, he not the thief, is the receiver. Den. 601, Coleridge, J.

⁷ R. v. Dring and ux. Dears. & B. 329.

⁸ R. v. May, 1 Hawk. c. 43, s. 5.

⁹ R. v. Mann, Id. s. 6. Under 3 & 4 Wm. & M. c. 9, s. 5; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 74.

¹⁰ Maidstone Sp. As. 1838. 2 Moo. C. C. cited.

¹¹ R. v. Laughner, 2 Car. & K. 225.

woman should be liable in all cases not capital,¹ but certainly, in the majority of misdemeanors she is answerable: as for keeping a bawdy-house,² a gaming house,³ riot, &c.,⁴ assault and battery,⁵ uttering counterfeit coin,⁶ an assault under 1 Vict. c. 85.⁷ However, in assault, the wife must herself assault. Upon a joint indictment against husband and wife for a felonious wounding, it appeared that the wife wrote letters which induced the prosecutor to come within reach of the husband, who hurt him. The jury found, that the wife acted under coercion, and that she did not personally inflict a blow. Pollock, C. B., "The jury have disposed of this case." The wife's conviction was reversed.⁸ Offences against the laws of customs. Still, there are exceptions: if the husband should fail to provide his apprentice with food, this, in law, would be a breach of duty, and although his wife would be liable if she were to be an active agent in withholding the food, she is not otherwise responsible.⁹ So, although the husband would be guilty of harbouring his wife knowingly after a felony, the converse holds with respect to her.¹⁰ And it is said, that, as a feme, a woman cannot be convicted of conspiracy,¹¹ nor can a wife be convicted of stealing her husband's goods.¹² But if a man takes the husband's goods and elopes with the wife, he is guilty of larceny, although not if he receives them from her.¹³ Lastly, should the woman accomplish her criminal act without her husband's interference, no subsequent conduct of his will take away her liability, nor consequently make him a principal, however such conduct might affect him as accessory,¹⁴ although it is said that a husband may be accessory to the wife before the fact.¹⁵ The joinder of husband and wife is by no means a ground for quashing the indictment, because the charge must be considered as joint and several, as the facts may appear.¹⁶ Where, in larceny of the woman's goods, one count laid the

¹ 1 Hawk. c. 1, s. 13.

² Id. s. 12. R. v. Williams, 1 Salk. 384; 10 Mod. 63. So, ravishment of ward, and trespass. Id.

³ R. v. Dixon and ux., 10 Mod. 335.

⁴ 1 Russ. C. M. 20. Citing Dalt. 447.

⁵ R. v. Ingram and ux., 1 Salk. ut supra.

⁶ R. v. Price, 8 C. & P. 19. See R. v. Conolly, Id. 21.

⁷ R. v. Cruse and ux. 2 Moo. C. C. 53.

⁸ R. v. Smith and ux. Dears. & B. 553; 27 L. J. M. C. 204.

⁹ R. v. Squires, 1 Russ. C. M. 20.

¹⁰ 1 Hawk. c. 1, s. 10; 2 Car. & K. 390. R. v. Manning.

¹¹ 1 Hawk. c. 72, s. 8. If the husband should abscond after a verdict against him and his wife, the court will not delay judgment against the wife. R. v. Thomas and ux., Ca. Temp. Hardw. 278.

¹² 1 Hale, P. C. 514. R. v. Willis, 1 Moo. C. C. 375. R. v. Harrison, Leach, 47.

¹³ R. v. Tolfree, 1 Moo. C. C. 243.

¹⁴ R. v. Hughes, 1 Russ. C. M. 22.

¹⁵ Notwithstanding that it could not be so in the case cited. Leach, 1102, n.

¹⁶ See 1 Hale, P. C. 46.

property in the wife and another in the crown, the wife admitted her coverture, and judgment was arrested for want of the record of the husband's conviction. It might have been for misdemeanor.¹

Principal and accessory.] As to the principal and accessory,—1, there is the principal in the first degree; 2, in the second degree; 3, the accessory before the fact; 4, after the fact.² The first is he who commits the act, the second is the aider and abettor.³ The third, absent at the time, has yet counselled the commission of it;⁴ and the fourth is he who, cognizant of the offence, receives, relieves, comforts, or assists the felon after the deed.⁵

Properly speaking, persons who counsel misdemeanors are termed abettors, and those who procure felonies, accessories. In many manslaughters there cannot be accessories, as on sudden quarrels, debates, or affrays;⁶ but in others there may be accessories. As if a husband should leave a poisonous ingredient in the way of his wife, and she dies after the taking, he is guilty of manslaughter, if not of murder.⁷

Principals in the first degree are those who assemble with a felonious intent, and continue in company till they have accomplished their design, aiding and abetting one another at the same time.⁸ So where one procures another to commit felony although the former be absent, as in the case of a man persuading his companion to drink a poisonous liquor under the pretence of physic, and then leaving him to take the potion. Here is the principal in the first degree, although absent.⁹ Or that of a man giving a forged note to an innocent person, and then absenting himself whilst it is uttered.¹⁰ So, where several unite to commit forgery, and each executes a part of the fabricated instrument, although they may not be together when the writing is completed.¹¹ Each may not know the particular confederates who respectively execute portions of the forged instrument.¹² In these cases a substantive.

¹ R. v. Johnson and another, 1 Cox, 59.

² 4 Com. 34. A new felony carries with it all the incidents of accessory at common law. But where an offence at common law is only made more penal, aiders and abettors are not to be understood of such as aid before and after the fact, but such as are present only. This is to be understood when an offence is made more penal by a particular description of the fact, and not under a general denomination of the crime. 2 Salk. 543.

³ 4 Com. 34.

⁴ Id. 35.

⁵ Id. 37.

⁶ R. v. Bibithe, 4 Rep. 43 (b); East, P. C. 218.

⁷ R. v. Gaylor, Dears. & B. 288.

⁸ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 7, where several examples are given.

⁹ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 11.

¹⁰ R. v. Palmer and another, 1 New. Rep. 96; Leach. 978.

¹¹ R. v. Bingley and others, Russ. & Ry. 446. R. v. Stansfeld and others, 1 Lew. C. C. 145.

¹² R. v. Kirkwood and others, 1 Moo. C. C. 304. R. v. Dade and others, Id. 307. To the same effect and establishing the same principle, although the case was one of misdemeanor, see R. v. Moland and others, 2 Moo. C. C. 276.

agency is always present with the guilty party. In the case of the innocent destroyer of his own life, the real agency of the murder is with the absent man: he, therefore, though absent, is the principal in the first degree. In the case of the forged notes, each forger is carrying on chief agencies; each is a principal in the first degree. So in privately stealing from the person, there are no principals in the second degree, for the hand which takes the property is alone guilty of the offence.¹ However, where several agreed to commit a burglary, and one communicated the intention to the officer for the purpose of apprehension, it was held, that the party thus impeaching his confederates, although present, and pretending to aid in the commission of the crime, could not be said to be a principal, and that the fact of his having agreed for a reward under the statute made no difference. But some of the judges thought that he might have been indicted as an accessory before the fact.² So where two persons had been admitted into a house by previous concert with the servant, who, however, had laid a trap for them, and betrayed them to the police, it was held, that though the prisoners could not be convicted of burglary, yet, that one of them, who took some plate, might be found guilty of stealing in the dwelling house; and the others, who were in the house but took nothing, might have been convicted of being accessories before the fact.³

Accessories, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 1, whosoever shall become an accessory before the fact to any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, may be indicted, tried, convicted, and punished in all respects as if he were a principal felon.

By sect. 2, whosoever shall counsel, procure, or command any other person to commit any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, shall be guilty of felony, and may be indicted and convicted either as an accessory before the fact to the principal felony, together with the principal felon, or after the conviction of the principal felon, or may be indicted and convicted of a substantive felony whether the principal felon shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice, and may thereupon be punished in the same manner as any accessory before the fact to the same felony, if convicted as an accessory, may be punished.

Accessories after the fact:

By sect. 3, whosoever shall become an accessory after the fact to any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, may be indicted and convicted either as an accessory after the fact to the principal felony, together with the principal felon, or after the conviction of the principal felon, or may be indicted and convicted of a substantive felony whether the principal felon shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice, and may thereupon be punished in like manner as any accessory after the fact to the same felony, if convicted as an accessory, may be punished.

¹ R. v. Baynes, Leach, 7; East, P. C. 700.

² R. v. Dannelly, Russ. & Ry. 310.

³ R. v. Jones, Car. & M. 218.

By sect. 4, every accessory after the fact to any felony (except where it is otherwise specially enacted), whether the same be a felony at common law or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, shall be liable to be imprisoned in the common gaol or house of correction for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and it shall be lawful for the court, if it shall think fit, to require the offender to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace, in addition to such punishment. Provided that no person shall be imprisoned for want of sureties for more than one year.

By sect. 5, if any principal offender shall be in anywise convicted of any felony, it shall be lawful to proceed against any accessory, either before or after the fact, in the same manner as if such principal felon had been attainted thereof, notwithstanding such principal felon shall die, or be pardoned, or otherwise delivered before attainder; and every such accessory shall upon conviction suffer the same punishment as he would have suffered if the principal had been attainted.

By sect. 6, any number of accessories at different times to any felony, and any number of receivers at different times of property stolen at one time, may be charged with substantive felonies in the same indictment, and may be tried together, notwithstanding the principal felon shall not be included in the same indictment, or shall not be in custody or amenable to justice.

By sect. 7, where any felony shall have been wholly committed within England or Ireland, the offence of any person who shall be an accessory either before or after the fact to any such felony may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined, and punished by any court which shall have jurisdiction to try the principal felony, or any felonies committed in any county or place in which the act by reason whereof such person shall have become such accessory shall have been committed; and in every other case the offence of any person who shall be an accessory either before or after the fact to any felony may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined, and punished by any court which shall have jurisdiction to try the principal felony or any felonies committed in any county or place in which such person shall be apprehended or be in custody, whether the principal felony shall have been committed on the sea or on the land, or begun on the sea and completed on the land, or begun on the land and completed on the sea, and whether within Her Majesty's dominions or without, or partly within Her Majesty's dominions and partly without; provided that no person who shall be once duly tried either as an accessory before or after the fact, or for a substantive felony under the provisions hereinbefore contained, shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for the same offence.

In treason, all are principals, except where a new treason is enacted, and the words, "counsellors, aiders, and abettors," or words to that effect, are made use of. In that case it has been long used to exclude receivers or comforters after the fact from the penalties of treason.¹

In misdemeanors all are principals, whether present or not.²

Abettors, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 7, whosoever shall aid, abet, counsel, or procure the commission of any misdemeanor, whether the same be a misdemeanor at common law or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, shall be liable to be tried, indicted, and punished as a principal offender.

This had long been the rule,³ and it extends to misdemeanors not indictable,—those, for instance, under the Larceny and Malicious Injuries Act, which are punishable upon summary conviction.⁴

Principals in the second degree.] Those who are present aiding and abetting are principals in the second degree, so that the indictment against them states that they were "feloniously present,"⁵ or there should be words to that effect, as that the prisoner was present aiding and abetting the felony aforesaid.⁶ They may be constructively present, as in the case of a determined breach of the peace, when murder is committed, although some of the party may have been out of view.⁷ So in robbery, when one of the gang rides away from the rest, robs a man, and then returns to his companions, though it seems that the gang should be near enough to render mutual assistance.⁸ So where the abettors screened the actual burglar with an umbrella.⁹ So where some of the thieves were in a shop, and one waited without, he was held equally guilty as a principal with those who were taking the goods.¹⁰ So where a prisoner was charged under similar circumstances as a receiver, his conviction was held wrong.¹¹ The fact of an infant of tender years being made the instrument of a burglary, a man waiting without, will make no difference as to the man's guilt as principal.¹² Persons present and acting in concert are, à fortiori, principals, as duellists,¹³ rioters,¹⁴ personators.¹⁵ In cases of felo-

¹ 1 Hale, P. C. 235; Fost. 341; and see East, P. C. 96. As to offences at sea, see ante.

² 2 Moo. C. C. 277.

³ R. v. Moland and others, 2 Moo. C. C. 276.

⁴ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96. Id. c. 97.

⁵ R. v. Cannon and another, 1 Lew. C. C. 227.

⁶ R. v. Towle and others, Russ. & Ry. 314; 2 Marsh. 466. See 2 Hawk. c. 23, s. 89.

⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 8. R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437.

⁸ 2 Hawk. ut sup.

⁹ R. v. Jordan, 7 C. & P. 432. See 2 Hawk. ut sup.

¹⁰ R. v. Gogerly and others, Russ. & Ry. 343. R. v. Byford and another, Id. 521. R. v. Mouncer, East, P. C. 639.

¹¹ R. v. Owen, 1 Moo. C. C. 96.

¹² 1 Hale, P. C. 555.

¹³ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 8.

¹⁴ R. v. Royce, 4 Burr. 2073.

¹⁵ R. v. Potts, Russ. & Ry.

niously shooting, although the fact be negatived that the prisoner's hand fired the shot.¹ Several, therefore, may be guilty of the same act of shooting.² In R. v. Gibson,³ Eyre, B., observed that it was the same as if a string were tied to the trigger and all pulled it.⁴ So if one persuade another to self-murder with an understanding that both should die, and then, the attempt being made, one dies, the survivor is guilty of murder as a principal.⁵ So upon a preconcerted scheme to steal goods, A. managed to get the owner out of the way, so that B. might commit the robbery, it was held, that the receipt by one was a felonious taking by all. Thus A. B. and C. got the prosecutor to intrust them with money. A. handed it to B. and enticed the prosecutor away, upon which B. and C. ran away with the property.⁶ So in rape. The aiders and abettors are principals in the second degree.⁷ One was to counterfeit coin, another to put it off. Here both were principals in the first degree. But had there been no agreement, but the second party, nevertheless, were to put off the coin with a guilty knowledge, he would be guilty in the second degree,⁸ and any alteration in the character of the act makes no difference. If parties assemble with intent to commit a trespass, and a felony is committed by some of them, all present are guilty of felony.⁹ However, the principal assumes a new character,—1, when there is no crime in the agent; 2, where the person accused as principal is absent; 3, where one does an act without the cognizance of the others. The offence might be committed by an insane person. In such a case a count framed for aiding and abetting a murder was held invalid, for there must be an abetting of a sane person. But the prisoners were deemed principals in the first degree under another count.¹⁰

Again, unless persons are assembled for the purpose of accom-

¹ R. v. Towle and others, ante. " R. v. Towle is good law: it was acted on in R. v. Tyler," 8 C. & P. 616, per Lord Denman, C. J.

² R. v. The Coalheavers, Leach, 64, 66.

³ East, P. C. 413; Leach, 359.

⁴ East, ut sup.; Leach, 359, n. See R. v. Bear, East, ut sup. R. v. Wells, Id. 414. R. v. Mackally, 9 Rep. 67; 3 T. R. 105; per Buller, J.

⁵ R. v. Dyson, Russ. & Ry. 523.

⁶ R. v. Standley and others, Id. 305.

⁷ East, P. C. 446.

⁸ Id. 186.

⁹ R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437.

¹⁰ R. v. Tyler, 8 C. & P. 616. Formerly, the abettor must have been near enough to have given his help. R. v. Stewart and another, Russ. & Ry. 363. R. v. King, Id. 332. R. v. M'Makin and another, Id. 333, n. R. v. Kelly, Id. 421. R. v. Soares and others, Id. 25. R. v. Dyer, East, P. C. 767. As where A. unlocked a door and went away, and B. then came and stole. A. was not a principal. R. v. Jeffries and another, 3 Cox, 85. A person came to a town with an utterer of a forged note, and went out with him, but managed to be absent while the note was uttered. He rejoined him again soon afterwards, and near the place of uttering. Here, although the person ran away when the utterer was apprehended, the judges held that he was not aiding and abetting. R. v. Davis and another, Russ. & Ry. 113. So in the case of counterfeit coin. R. v. Else, Id. 142. R. v. Badcock and others, Id. 249. R. v. Page and another, 2 Russ.

plishing the specific crime charged, or to do some act to show their participation in it, they are not principals, nor, indeed, accessories. Two went out to commit a felony; upon an alarm given, one, in running away, maimed a pursuer. The other was held to have been improperly convicted for maliciously cutting.¹ The character of the offence was not the same. Had the other prisoner gone out with the intention of resisting the apprehension of his confederate, (not a very probable surmise,) the case might have been different.² Three soldiers went to rob a pear tree. One stood at the gate with his sword drawn. The owner's son collared this man, who stabbed him, and although the soldier who gave the blow was guilty of murder, the others were considered to be entirely innocent of the higher offence.³ So upon a charge under 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 2, for inflicting a bodily injury dangerous to life, the abettor must have been aware of the intention to murder, in order to warrant a conviction.⁴ A fortiori, where the original purpose is lawful, and death ensues.⁵ And a person entirely passive during the commission of a felony, although guilty of misdemeanor, is neither principal nor accessory.⁶

It may be added here, that in charging a person with an offence, the same party might have been arraigned as principal or accessory, as where A. commanded B. to kill C., and afterwards joined with him in the fact.⁷ Now, however, he would be charged as principal. Moreover, a person charged as principal in the first degree may be acquitted, and yet the aider and abettor may be found guilty, the indictment concluding that both did the murder, and the verdict finding that the prisoner convicted did the act.⁸ There were two counts for murder, the first charged three persons as principals in the first degree; the second charged A. as principal in the first degree, and B. and C. as abetting. The grand jury ignored the first count as to B. and C., and found a true bill against A. on both counts, and against B. and C. on the second count. Here although A. was acquitted, it seems that B. and C. might be convicted upon the second count as principals.⁹

C. M. 82. But the judges have subsequently decided that these cases of Else and Page were wrongly decided, the distinction between felony and misdemeanor not having been sufficiently adverted to. R. v. Greenwood, Den. & P. 453; 21 L. J. M. C. 127.

¹ R. v. White and another, Russ. & Ry. 99. R. v. Arrigoni, East, P. C. 399, 400. R. v. Borthwick, 1 Dougl. 207.

² See R. v. Tattersall and others, 1 Russ. C. M. 27. R. v. Moore, Leach, 314.

³ Fost. 353. See also R. v. Hodgson, Leach, 6; Anon. Id. 7, n.

⁴ R. v. Cooper and another, 5 C. & P. 535.

⁵ Fost. 354; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 9.

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 10.

⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 1; and see R. v. Byford and another, Russ. & Ry. 521.

⁸ R. v. Shaw, East, P. C. 351; Leach, 360.

⁹ R. v. Phelps, Car. & M. 180. Principals in the second degree are punishable as principals in the first degree under the Malicious Injuries Act, and upon summary conviction. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 98. Id. c. 97, s. 56.

Accessory before the fact.] Accessory before the fact is he who consents to the felonious design of another, but is so far absent at the time of its perpetration as to be unable to render any aid to the principal, either in that or in any other felony which might ensue in consequence.¹ There is a difference between misprision of felony and being accessory to it; for instance, if a man conceal, or tacitly acquiesce in a crime, this is misprision.² And there is a distinction between the accessory and the principal in the second degree, for the latter must be present,³ and this offence before the fact is capable of being countermanded.⁴ The offence, however, is complete upon agency. As in arson, where A. commissions B. to procure the aid of another. Here it is sufficient to make A. accessory before the fact that he employs an agent without naming the person to be procured.⁵ In treason there is no accessory.⁶ So in forgery at common law, or by statute.⁷ And there can hardly be an accessory in manslaughter because of the sudden provocation,⁸ unless, for instance, in the administering of drugs. In that case there might be accessory before the fact.⁹ A person may be accessory before the fact at common law.¹⁰ And there may be an accessory who procures another to be himself accessory to the principal.¹¹

However, the principal may not obey, or may exceed his instructions. In the first case, it seems that a substantial compliance with the order will involve the accessory. As if A. should counsel B. to poison C., and B. should shoot instead of poison.¹² But if the plan of A. and B. be to burn C.'s house, and B., the principal, burn the house of D. without any mistake, A. is not accessory.¹³

So as to the excess, if the consequence be a probable event, the procurer will be guilty. As if A. should counsel B. to rob C., and, in so doing, B. should kill C.,¹⁴ or should procure the burning of D.'s house, in doing which the house of E. is burnt.¹⁵ If A. desire a child under the age of discretion to commit an offence, A. is a principal; but if the child be of capacity, A. is accessory.¹⁶ Where one counselled a pregnant woman before the birth to murder the child, which was done, he was held to be an accessory, the procurement being considered in the light of a continuing felony.¹⁷ So where A. invited B. to a house with a view of murdering him, A.

¹ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 16. R. v. Soares and others, Russ. & Ry. 25. R. v. Tuckwell, Car. & M. 215.

² Steph. 9; 1 Hawk. c. 59, s. 2; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 23.

³ R. v. Gordon, Leach, 515; East, P. C. 352.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 16.

⁵ Id.

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 1.

⁷ R. v. Bothe, Mo. 666.

⁸ R. v. Goose, Mo. 461; 4 Rep. 43; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 24.

⁹ R. v. Gaylor, 7 Cox, 253.

¹⁰ R. v. Morris, Leach, 1096.

¹¹ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 1.

¹² 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 20.

¹³ Id.

¹⁴ Id. s. 18.

¹⁵ Id.

¹⁶ R. v. Course, Fost. 349.

¹⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 18.

was held to be accessory to the murder.¹ There was an attempt at assassination in Paris by means of an explosive machine, which killed one person. A., an alien Frenchman, was privy to the plot, and was resident in England. Whether he was indictable either as a principal or an accessory, was made a question.²

*Accessory after the fact.*³ Accessory after the fact is he who harbours or aids the principal or accessory before the fact after the commission of the deed.⁴ In treason there are no such accessories, nor in crimes under the degree of felony.⁵ Where an attempt is made to defeat the ends of justice by hindering the apprehension of the criminal;⁶ where there is an agreement to take money in order to keep witnesses out of the way;⁷ where the prisoner procures a person to harbour the principal or accessory before the fact, although he himself do not act;⁸—all these are cases of accessory after the fact. Yet the harbourer must do some personal act.⁹ Merely suffering an escape will not create the offence,¹⁰ unless, indeed, the party arresting be he who suffers the escape;¹¹ nor taking back goods which have been stolen, if the person so receiving them back be the owner.¹² But these are high misdemeanors. And the receipt of a felon under bail is excusable, for there is no hindrance of the trial.¹³ Nor is the advising of the friends of the accused to persuade the witnesses not to appear against him such an act, nor rendering him general assistance of that nature, although these acts may be otherwise punishable.¹⁴ Next, there must, of course, be a guilty knowledge, and the felony must be complete when the aid is given. So that if one gives a mortal wound, and B. receives him, and then death ensues, B. is not guilty as accessory after the fact.¹⁵ If a man be indicted for a great offence, as murder, and he be convicted of the less, a party charged as accessory after the fact is not the less liable to conviction.¹⁶

¹ R. v. Manning, 2 Car. & K. 903.

² R. v. Bernard, 1 Fost. & F. 240. See S. C. post, "Homicide."

³ Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, a general verdict of "guilty of stealing and receiving at the same time" was considered right. R. v. Hughes, 29 L. J. M. C. 71; Bell, C. C. 242. The old law, making the conviction of the principal felon a condition precedent to the conviction of the accessory before the fact, is taken away by the modern Acts. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, ss. 3, 4, ante.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 26.

⁵ East, P. C. 93.

⁶ See 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 27, &c.

⁷ Anon. Mo. 8.

⁸ R. v. Jarvis, 2 Moo. & Rob. 40. And he may be convicted upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. See R. v. Good, 1 Car. & K. 185.

⁹ R. v. Chapple, 9 C. & P. 355.

¹⁰ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 18.

¹¹ Id.

¹² Anon. Mo. 8.

¹³ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 29.

¹⁴ Id. As misdemeanors.

¹⁵ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 35.

¹⁶ R. v. Greenacre, 8 C. & P. 35. He, however, was convicted of the greater offence.

This question as to accessory after the fact is for the jury.¹

Name of prosecutor.] The name of the prosecutor, if known, should be stated in the indictment; so that where the prosecutor came before the grand jury in support of an indictment charging the felony to have been done by a person unknown, it was held that the case could not be supported.² Further, it is necessary that the principal should be said to have committed the offence, and not merely that he has been indicted for it.³ Where there was a statement in the usual form that the principal felon stole the property, without any addition to the prisoner's name, and without adding "contra pacem," it was doubted whether that was an indictment against the principal, or merely an inducement to the charge against the accessory. It would seem that it was an indictment.⁴ But the judge would not amend.

More than one principal.] The accessory may be arraigned with reference to two principals or more, and if he be found guilty as to one only the verdict will be good.⁵ In a case of sending threatening letters, the letters were admitted in evidence although the principal was absent.⁶

No repugnance.] There must not be any repugnance in setting forth a charge against an accessory. If the indictment should charge the stroke on one day, and the death on another, and then call on the accessory to answer the abetting at the time of the felony and murder, without more, it was deemed insufficient.⁷

Time in indictment.] With respect to the allegation of time in the indictment, it was usual in old days⁸ to require the day of the month and year, and either the year of the King's reign or the year of our Lord, in words at length, or at least in Roman numerals.⁹ Although where the indictment stated that the prisoner committed the offence on the 20th of July, in the 4th year of the

¹ See R. v. Lee and another, 6 C. & P. 536; R. v. Greenacre, ut sup. For further information as to this accessory, see 2 Curw. Hawk. 445, 457.

² R. v. Walker, 3 Camp. 264; East, P. C. 651, 781. And see R. v. Elsworthy, 1 Lew. C.C. 117.

³ 9 Rep. 118. R. v. The Lord Sanchar.

⁴ R. v. Lyons, 9 C. & P. 555. See, as to the indictment, 1 Ch. Burn. Tit. "Accessory."

⁵ See Fost. 361, R. v. Graham, Leach, 87, where, however, the indictment was held bad for saying "the felony aforesaid," after charging the prisoners respectively with two different offences.

⁶ R. v. Hansill, 3 Cox, 597. Whether if A. demands money by letters, with menaces, and B. inserts letters and articles in a newspaper in order to assist A. in obtaining money, B. is an accessory after the fact to A.'s felonious act. Qu.? S. C.

⁷ See 2 Hawk. c. 23, s. 88.

⁸ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 217; Lofft. 228; 5 T. R. 607.

⁹ R. v. Philips, Str. 261.

reign of King George the Fourth, concluding, "against the peace of our lord, the now King," whereas, in fact, the trial took place in 1820, at the summer assizes, in 1 Geo. 4, the judges held, that "fourth year of the" might be rejected, and then, that the words, "20th of July, in the reign of King George the Fourth," could only mean July, 1820; and also, that "against the peace of our lord the now King" showed the mistake to have been in the year and not in the reign.¹ But where the offence was laid on the 21st of June, 1 Vict., and the indictment concluded "against the peace of Her Majesty," and the proof was of an offence committed in April, 7 Will. 4, the prisoner was held entitled to an acquittal.² "Victoria the First" was held mere surplusage.³ Nevertheless, these distinctions have given way before the new statutes.

Hence, if time be material, it would be bad to⁴ allege a certain Act of parliament as having passed in the 2nd and 3rd years of the reign, &c., instead of an Act passed in the session holden in the two years.⁵ Under 6 Geo. 4, c. 108, s. 52, it was made penal to exhibit lights to persons at sea between the 21st of September and the 1st of April. The indictment laid the offence to have been committed on the 9th of March. It was objected that as the prosecutor was not bound to the day laid, although the fact was proved as laid, yet that there ought to have been a distinct and substantive averment in the words of the statute, time having been of the essence of the offence. But on motion to arrest the judgment, Littledale, J., held, that the indictment was good, and that he was bound to take judicial notice of the truth of the allegation of time.⁶ And, where, in a case of poaching, the time was laid "7th October, in the year" without more, Alderson, J., took the opinion of the judges, who held, that the fault was that of time imperfectly stated, and so cured by verdict.⁷ So it was again where the indictment alleged, that the jurors, &c. present, that J. B. "on the 17th day of November, in the 10th year of our sovereign lady Queen Victoria, assaulted," &c. This was a defective statement and cured by the statute.⁸ On the other hand, an indictment for perjury stated the act as having been done on the 29th of June, in the year 1846. Parke, B., after considering, said, that he had never seen an indictment without the year of the monarch or the "year of our Lord," but he left the defendant to his writ of error, and did not arrest the judgment.⁹ The Statutes of Amendment, however, award a very extensive power to the judges to correct, before verdict, these errors.

¹ R. v. Gill, Russ. & Ry. 431.

² R. v. Pringle, 2 Moo. & Rob. 276. See also R. v. Fenwick, 2 Car. & K. 915. R. v. Scott, 25 L. J. M. C. 128.

³ R. v. Bevis et ux., 1 Cox, 27.

⁴ See 1 Ch. Cr. L. 224.

⁵ R. v. Biers, 1 Ad. & E. 327; 3 Nev. & M. 475. See R. v. Hick- eringill, 11 Mod. 113; 2 M. & S. 123.

⁶ R. v. Brown and others, Moo. & Malk. 163; and see R. v. Simpson, 10 Mod. 248, 341.

⁷ R. v. Hall and others, 1 Lew. C. C. 232; before the statute.

⁸ Broome v. Reg. 17 L. J. M. C. 152; 12 Q. B. 934.

⁹ R. v. Kimpton, 2 Cox, 296.

Unless the hour be material, as, for instance, in burglary and night poaching, it is not usual to mention it.¹ And even in those cases an allegation that it was done in the "night" might be sufficient, although the custom is to mention the hour. When a bare omission is charged, as not scouring a ditch, no time, it is said, needs to be alleged.² On the other hand, to charge a man with several offences at several times, without specifying a day certain, was held bad,³ but time not being essential, it is a fault now helped by the statute.

The date of a note was July 2, 1830, and the forged instrument was charged as having been done on the same day. The statute⁴ did not come into operation till 20th July, and there was no evidence to show that the crime had been done in the county where the prisoner was apprehended. The jury found that the forgery had been committed after 20th July, but it was moved to arrest the judgment by reason of misstating the time. The judges held, that as there was no provision varying the charge, nor introducing any additional statement, but merely a power for the prosecutor to charge in one county that which before the statute he must have charged in another, the conviction was good.⁵

Offence.] Some offence in particular must be accurately set out. There cannot be either intendment or implication.⁶ The statement and the fact should correspond.⁷ Where the offence charged has been created by statute, or subjected to a greater degree of punishment, the indictment or information, after verdict, shall be held sufficient to warrant the punishment prescribed by the statute, if it describe the offence in the words of the statute.⁸ In a case of arson, the word "unlawfully" was left out, a word which the statute used. The judge would now, probably, amend. But although judgment was arrested, the prisoners were convicted upon a fresh indictment, and executed.⁹ It is often the custom to use the words "last aforesaid," where various acts, as shootings, are alleged; yet the words "as aforesaid" are sufficient.¹⁰ Unless the value of property be of the essence of the offence, it is no longer necessary to mention it.¹¹

Affirmation of jurors.] By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, s. 2, in any legal proceedings, whatever proceedings may be set out, it shall not be necessary to specify that any particular persons who acted as jurors, had made affirmation instead of oath, but it may be set

¹ 2 Hawk. c. 44, s. 25. See R. v. Waddington, Id.

² 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 79.

³ Id. s. 82.

⁴ 1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 24.

⁵ R. v. Treharne, 1 Moo. C. C. 298.

⁶ See Say. Rep. 204.

⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 25.

⁸ 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 21.

⁹ R. v. Turner and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 239.

¹⁰ R. v. Voke, Russ. & Ry. 531. The words in each count being grammatically and legally referable to the last antecedent matter.

¹¹ See 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 75.

out that they served as jurymen, as if no Act had passed for enabling persons to serve as jurymen without oath.

Name of prosecutor or party injured.] The court will amend errors in the name of the prosecutors or persons injured. Still, a certain amount of caution should be used. If a man is confirmed in a different name from his baptismal name, he should be described by his name of confirmation.¹ And, in other cases, an ordinary degree of care should be exercised to prevent the consequences of an impunity which might, at length, amount to neglect. Care ought likewise to be used where the judges would have a difficulty in amending or inserting a name. A child was baptized by the name of Louis; his mother's maiden name was Drake, and he was recognized by that name. This was evidence for the jury to say whether he was not a bastard, and had acquired the name of Drake by reputation.² The following cases must be read with reference to the power of the court to amend. Upon a trial for the murder of a bastard, the mother's name, Clark, was added to the name of baptism, George Lakeman, and it did not appear that the infant had gained its mother's name by reputation; it was held upon this, that the indictment could not be supported, because there was nothing except the name by which he could be identified.³ So where the indictment neither stated the name of the child, nor that it was unknown to the jurors, nor accounted for the absence of the name, judgment was arrested.⁴ So where the name of Harriet was known, a second count, stating the name to be "to the jurors unknown," was held insufficient, although the first count had failed.⁵ But the absence of the name is well accounted for by the words, "then lately born of the body of J. H."⁶ Again, upon an indictment for the murder of a female child, "whose name to the jurors was unknown," it was not deemed sufficient by the judges for the prisoner's counsel to show in cross-examination, for the purpose of proving a name by reputation, that the prisoner had said she should like the child to be named Mary Ann and little Mary. The father was a dissenter, and the child was not baptized. The conviction was, accordingly, held right.⁷ So, where the child was baptized on Sunday, and was called by her mother's name, and the name of baptism, till Tuesday, it was considered sufficient evidence for the jury to find ¹ R. v. Smith, 1 Cox, 248. But the court will amend upon being satisfied.

² R. v. Drake, 12 Shaw, J. P. 483; 4 Cox, 333.

³ R. v. Clark, Russ. & Ry. 358; 1 Brod. & B. 473. R. v. Waters, Moo. C. C. 457. R. v. Lippiatt, 1 Cox, 56.

⁴ R. v. Biss, 2 Moo. C. C. 93. R. v. Hogg, 2 Moo. & Rob. 380.

The judge must have something to amend by.

⁵ R. v. Stroud, 2 Moo. C. C. 270. The indictment called the child "Harriet Stroud," but the child was called and baptized by the name of Harriet only. The judge would, probably, amend.

⁶ R. v. Hogg, 2 Moo. & Rob. 380.

⁷ R. v. Smith, 1 Moo. C. C. 402; 6 C. & P. 151.

that the deceased had been rightly described.¹ An indictment neither stated the name, nor that the name was "to the jurors unknown." It appeared that the child had been born alive, but there being only the mere fact of birth, there could be no presumption that the child had a name. The indictment, moreover, was silent as to any name by reputation or baptism, and, had there been an averment that the name was unknown, the circumstance of there being some name would have been implied.² An indictment for murder charged an assault upon a female child of tender age, and not named. This was held sufficient. "Not baptized" would not have been enough, but, "not named" means, that she had acquired no name, neither by baptism nor usage.³ So, upon an indictment against the mother for murdering the illegitimate son of Sarah Scarborough, it was considered sufficient to show that he was sometimes called "Sarah Scarborough's child," and, in his mother's presence, "William Scarborough," and there was no proof of his having been baptized. He was generally called "William," or "Colly." Coltman, J., however, thought this very slight.⁴ An indictment called the prosecutor (a boy), "Edward Dobson," although he gave his name to the constable as "Peach," and it turned out that he was not known by the name of "Peach;" it was held, that as his right name was certainly "Dobson," he had been rightly described.⁵ Still, it is sufficient to give the name by which the prosecutor is best known.⁶

If the charge be for killing a woman "to the jurors unknown," and the proof raises a question whether the person killed was not the prisoner's wife, the prisoner is entitled to an acquittal if the jury affirm that point. For, although there might be no evidence of the christian name, the woman would have a right to her husband's surname.⁷ So, in general, upon a charge which contains the words "to the said jurors unknown," if the name transpired at the trial, it has been usual to direct an acquittal;⁸ but if it should appear that the defendant could not be prejudiced by the substitution of the right name, there seems to be no reason why the judges should not amend, for here would be something to amend by, the real name being disclosed.

An indictment for forging a will charged, in one count, the intent as being to defraud some person or persons unknown. It

¹ R. v. Evans, 8 C. & P. 765. The judge might now amend.

² R. v. Willis, Den. 80; 1 Car. & K. 722. Here there was no need of amendment, as the conviction was supported, and besides there was nothing to amend by.

³ R. v. Waters, Den. 356; 2 Car. & K. 864.

⁴ R. v. Scarborough, 12 Shaw, J. P. 265; 3 Cox, 72. Semble the judge might amend.

⁵ R. v. Williams, 7 C. & P. 298. But the judge might amend.

⁶ R. v. Gregory, 8 Q. B. 508. But the judge would now amend.

⁷ R. v. Campbell, 1 Car. & K. 82. The judge might amend. There would be something to amend by.

⁸ R. v. Robinson, Holt, N. P. C. 595. R. v. Walker, 3 Camp. 264. R. v. Deakin and another, Leach, 862. R. v. Woolford, 1 Moo. & Rob. 384.

did not appear that the forged will was capable of effecting a fraud upon any person. No person's name, therefore, appeared who could have been defrauded. Still, the judges were evenly divided.¹ The only proof of a christian name upon a trial for larceny was the statement of a witness, that he had seen the prosecutor sign his name to the charge against the prisoner, and to the depositions. From that only he knew that the name, as laid in the indictment, was Thomas. This evidence was held admissible, although the documents themselves might not be receivable. The conviction was affirmed.² Jervis, C. J., once held, that upon an indictment for shooting at some boys who had irritated the prisoner in the street, an intent to shoot at some person in particular must appear in order to satisfy the statute.³

In cases similar to the following, in the event of any doubt, the judge would, probably, amend, there being no prejudice to the prisoner. Where the name of the prosecutor is known with convenient certainty, and yet some other appellation attaches.⁴ So Baroness Turkheim, her name being Selina Victoire, but generally known by both names.⁵ So, Mary Davies's goods were held rightly described as those of Mary Johnson, she having assumed the latter name for many years.⁶ An indictment charged an assault upon Eliza Edwards. There were mother and daughter of that name. The conviction was held good, for the real question was as to the party assaulted.⁷ So Thomas Dabbs, though the name was Thomas Tyrrel Dabbs.⁸ And this was different from charging the offence of shooting to have taken place in the dwelling of James B., when the evidence showed that it was the house of John B.⁹ Here, however, the judge would amend, in the absence of prejudice, and this case of Durore, even under the old law, was hardly consistent with subsequent authorities,¹⁰ and the name of the owner of the house would now be omitted.

It has long been settled, that no addition is necessary to the

¹ R. v. Tuffs, Den. 319.

² R. v. Toole and others, Dears. & B. 194; 26 L. J. M. C. 79.

³ R. v. Lallament, 6 Cox, 204.

⁴ R. v. Berriman, and others, 5 C. & P. 601. The property laid in J. H. and another was rightly described, though the name was J. W. H., the prosecutor being generally known by both names.

⁵ R. v. Sulls, Leach, 861. R. v. Morris, 5 Cox, 205. S. P. known well by each name.

⁶ R. v. Norton, Russ. & Ry. 510.

⁷ R. v. Peace, 3 B. & Ald. 579.

⁸ Tyrrel having been disused. Att.-Gen. v. Hawkes, 1 Tyr. 3.

⁹ R. v. Durore, Leach, 351; see East, P. C. 415. The variance was fatal. See R. v. Hodgson, 1 Lew. C. C. 236. Stealing a horse from Joshua Jennings, not saying the elder, there being two persons of that name. R. v. Bland, cited, 1 Lew. C. C. 236.

¹⁰ R. v. Harris, Salop. Sp. As. 1801. Firing on prosecutor in prisoner's own house. Name wrongly stated. R. v. Pye. Robbing R. F. in the dwelling house of A. But the ownership was not proved. R. v. Johnstone, robbing R. D. in the dwelling house of Joseph Johnstone, her husband, but the name Joseph was not proved. All these convictions were right, Leach, 352, n. But R. v. Cranage, 1 Salk. 365, is contra. See other cases, post; "Burglary," &c.

name of a prosecutor.¹ But although additions are dispensed with, the different titles and relations of life should not be forgotten. It is necessary to mark the identity of the party; and, on the other hand, it is not safe nor proper to allege more than can with certainty be proved. For, although there are large powers of amendment, there is also a large discretion, and there is the important question of prejudice to the defendant. A judge will perhaps amend when the sessions will decline: the discretion, therefore, is not only ample, but much distributed amongst various courts.

The title of a peer should be set forth. But "The Earl Cornwallis" was deemed an insufficient appellation,² for earl is not necessarily a name of degree. But the judge would amend. A peer of Ireland was called J. H. Esq., commonly called Earl of C." The judges held, that the proper mode of naming this nobleman was "J. H. Esq. Earl of C.," and that they must reject "commonly called," in order to sustain the indictment, for this was a name of dignity, and not a title by courtesy.³ So, where the indictment charged the prisoner with killing Henry Sandford, Baron Mount Sandford, the judges, although they sustained the conviction, would have preferred that "Sandford" should have been omitted.⁴ So, where the indictment said "G. T., Lord D." the court would have had it "Baron D.," but held the indictment good.⁵ William Byron, Baron Byron, was sufficient.⁶ A woman was robbed when unmarried; afterwards, and when the bill came before the grand jury, she became a feme covert; the indictment described her by her maiden name: this was held correct.⁷ A forged request was addressed to a woman in her maiden name; she married, and the averment of intent was laid to defraud the husband, and not the woman unmarried: this was held sufficient.⁸

More, however, than is necessary should be carefully avoided. In bigamy, the second wife was described as "E. C. widow." The evidence showed that she was a single woman. The misdescription was fatal,⁹ but an amendment could be applied for.

It is better to leave out christian names which are uncertain, or omit them altogether if a person can be otherwise well described. The Earl of Cardigan was charged with shooting at Harvey Garnett Phipps Tuckett: these christian names could not be proved. The prisoner was acquitted.¹⁰

So, in a case of night-poaching on the lands of the Duke of Cambridge, his Royal Highness was styled "George William ¹ Leach, 862. R. v. Keys and others, 2 Cox, 225. As to the addition of defendants, see post, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24.

² R. v. Caley, 5 Jur. 709.

³ R. v. Graham, Leach, 547. And an amendment would now do as well.

⁴ R. v. Brinklett, 3 C. & P. 416. The family name, however, being "Sandford," there was no variance, ⁵ R. v. Pitts, 8 C. & P. 771.

⁶ 19 How. St. Tr. 1177. But William Baron Byron would have been better.

⁷ R. v. Turner, Leach, 536.

⁸ R. v. Carter, 7 C. & P. 134.

⁹ R. v. Deeley, 1 Moo. C. C. 303.

¹⁰ House of Lords, 1841; 24 L. J. M. C. 117.

Frederick Charles." But only George and William could be proved, although that the duke had other christian names was admitted by the witness. The quarter sessions were invited to strike out "Frederick Charles," but they declined. The prisoner was convicted, but the court held that the case ought not to have been left to the jury, the christian names not having been proved as laid. The course would have been to ask for the erasion of all the christian names, and the sessions, although not bound, ought to have acceded to this request.¹

Property.] With reference to the mode of alleging property by statute, important alterations have been made.

Thus, by 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 14, in any indictment or information for any felony or misdemeanor, wherein it shall be requisite to state the ownership of property, whether real or personal, which shall belong to or be in the possession of more than one person, whether partners in trade,² joint tenants, parceners, or tenants in common, it shall be sufficient to name one of such persons, and to state such property to belong to the person so named, and another or others, as the case may be; and whenever, in any indictment or information for any felony or misdemeanor, it shall be necessary to mention, for any purpose whatsoever, any such partners, &c., it shall be sufficient to describe them in the manner aforesaid; and this provision shall be construed to extend to all joint-stock companies and trustees. Still, if a firm be described, and it turns out that the property belongs to one person alone, the variance will be fatal, unless the powers of the Amendment Acts should be called in aid.³

By 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 15, with respect to the property of counties, ridings and divisions,⁴ in any indictment or information for felony or misdemeanor committed as to any bridge, court, gaol, house of correction, infirmary, asylum, or other building, erected or maintained in whole or in part at the expense of any county, riding, or division, or any goods or chattels whatsoever, provided at the like expense, to be used for making, altering, or repairing any bridge, or highways at the ends thereof, or any court or other such building as aforesaid, or to be used in or with any such court or other building, it shall be sufficient to state any such property, real or personal, to belong to the inhabitants of such county, riding, or division; and it shall not be necessary to specify the names of any of such inhabitants.

So again, in any indictment or information for felony or misdemeanor committed as to any workhouse, poorhouse, buildings, lands, or hereditaments of any union formed under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 69, or any parish placed under the control of a board of guardians by virtue of that Act, or as to any goods, chattels, or other property belonging to such union or parish, or provided for the use of the poor

¹ R. v. Frost, 24 L. J. M. C. 116.

² 1 Geo. 4, c. 102, [Partners,] repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 101.

³ R. v. Hampton, 2 Russ. C. M. 102, citing Greenwood, Coll. St. 143.

R. v. Wright, 1 Lew. C. C. 268.

⁴ Liberty is omitted, thereof, or to be used in or upon any workhouse, poorhouse, building, or land belonging to the same, or by the master of such workhouse or poorhouse, or by any workmen or servants employed therein, such property may be stated to belong to the guardians of the poor for the time being.¹ And in other workhouses than those under unions, similar provisions are enacted, and the property may be laid in the overseers.²

By 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 16, in any indictment or information for felony or misdemeanor committed on or with respect to any materials, tools, or implements provided for making, altering, or repairing any highway within any parish, township, hamlet, or place, otherwise than by the trustees or commissioners of any turnpike road, it shall be sufficient to aver that any such things are the property of the surveyor of the highways of such parish, &c., and it shall not be necessary to specify the name of the surveyor.

So, by 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 17, with respect to turnpike trusts, in any indictment or information for any felony or misdemeanor committed on or with respect to any house, building, gate, machine, lamp, board, stone, post, fence, or other thing, erected or provided in pursuance of any Act for making any turnpike road, or any of the conveniences or appurtenances thereunto respectively belonging, or any materials, tools, or implements provided for making, altering, or repairing any such road, it shall be sufficient to state any such property to belong to the trustees or commissioners of such road, and it shall not be necessary to specify the names of any of such trustees or commissioners.

And by sect. 18, as to sewers, in any indictment or information for any felony or misdemeanor committed on or with respect to any sewer or other matter within or under the view, cognizance, or management of any commissioners of sewers, it shall be sufficient to state any such property to belong to the commissioners of sewers, and it shall not be necessary to specify the names of any of such commissioners.

The following cases are inserted because they have been, and may now be, to some extent, authorities, but nevertheless with due regard to the powers of amendment. In a prosecution by a corporation, the particular names of the private persons were mentioned, and then their corporate name, as A. B. and C., churchwardens of Enfield. The indictment was held bad,³ but this fault could now be amended. So, where there was a corporation of the guardians of the poor of certain parishes, and the property belonging to the corporation was vested in the directors for the time being, the judges held, that an indictment for embezzlement should have laid the property as the monies of the guardians by their corporate names, or in the directors for the time being in their individual names.¹ So, where there was no corporation, and the indictment laid the property in the trustees of the Old Artillery Ground, it was held, that the property ought to have been alleged in A. B. and C., as trustees, &c.² Also, in an indictment the poor law commissioners ought to be described by their name of office.³ So, in the case of a joint-stock bank, it was deemed quite sufficient to lay certain brass to be the property of one of the partners; and an objection that it was indispensable to allege that the property belonged to the "public officer" was not sustained. It signified nothing that neither a manager nor a public officer had been appointed.⁴

¹ 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 69, s. 7; 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 16.

² 55 Geo. 3, c. 137, s. 1; 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 16.

³ R. v. Patrick and another, Leach, 253; East, P. C. 1059.

Then and there.] The words "then and there" are now rarely used. Even when local description is required, as in burglary, "there" is no longer employed; "then" continues to be inserted upon all occasions. Till lately, however, questions were raised upon this point. In manslaughter the stroke was alleged at All Saints, Poplar, the death at "St. Paul's, Deptford;" and the indictment then charged, that the prisoner was "then and there" aiding, &c. It was objected that "there" referred to both parishes, but Patteson, J., replied, that the blow constituted the felony, and, consequently, that "All Saints, Poplar," could alone be intended by those words.⁵ At the present day, if the words should be inartificially introduced, the judge would at once amend; unless, indeed, the local description itself, when necessary, should be, of itself, faulty. The words would be struck out, or amended to meet the difficulty.

The omission of "then and there," as to the swearing of the jury, was held sufficient, in an old case, to warrant an arrest of judgment.⁶

The said.] The first count of an indictment mentioned the wife of the defendant, and the third spoke of the "said wife." It was held sufficient to denote the defendant's wife in the third count.⁷

Last mentioned.] It was charged upon the defendant, that he had produced a false paper of his wife's death and burial; and further, that he was entitled to 5*l.*, in accordance with the rules of

¹ R. v. Beacall, 1 Moo. C. C. 15.

² R. v. Sherrington and another, Leach, 513.

³ R. v. Crossley, 10 Ad. & El. 132; 2 Per. & D. 319.

⁴ R. v. Pritchard, 30 L. J. M. C. 169; 8 Cox, 461; Leigh & Cave, 34. Williams, J., cited R. v. Beard, 8 C. & P. 143, post, "Forgery." And by Wilde, B., "Is it lawful for a man to steal their property because they do not comply with the regulations of a statute?" 30 L. J. M. C. 170.

⁵ R. v. Hargrave, 5 C. & P. 170. See R. v. Swathins, 4 C. & P. 548, where the words were omitted after at, &c.; also 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 78. R. v. Williams, Leach, 529; East, P. C. 424. R. v. Watkins, Car. & M. 264. There are other cases now not applicable, as R. v. Frances and others, Com. 478; Str. 1015.

⁶ R. v. Morris, Str. 901.

⁷ R. v. Dent, 1 Car. & K. 249.

a society, by reason of the death of his wife, "by which said last-mentioned pretence" he obtained the money. This was held sufficient.¹

Against the form of the statute.] This form has also been protected from the consequence of a fatal variance, by the statute 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24. But it is still in common use, although the plural number, "the statutes," is not cared for.² And the reason is because if an offence be no crime at common law, as the forgery of a bank note, and the words "against the form," &c., be omitted, the judgment will be arrested.³ On the other hand, an offence at common law ought not to conclude, "against the form," &c.,⁴ although it is surplusage. In some cases it may be laid in both ways, as in riot.⁵

Against the peace.] Formerly the words "against the peace of our lord the king" or "our lady the queen" were indispensable.⁶ But the more modern objection was where the offence was committed in the reign of the deceased monarch, and the indictment ended "against the peace" of the successor. This fault was once held fatal;⁷ but afterwards, the word late was rejected as surplusage.⁸ And where the word "late" did not appear, the judges held that the statute 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, cured the defect.⁹

An indictment for misdemeanor concluded, "to the great scandal of the liege subjects," &c., not saying, "ad commune

¹ R. v. Dent, 1 Car. & K. 249.

² As formerly. R. v. Adams, Car. & M. 299.

³ R. v. Pearson, 1 Moo. C. C. 313. R. v. Radcliffe, 2 Moo. C. C. 68; see also R. v. Penhallo, Cro. El. 231. R. v. Faulkner, 1 Saund. 249. R. v. Brotherton, Str. 702. Contrà, in murder, which was a common-law felony. R. v. Sawyer, Russ. & Ry. 294. R. v. Chatburn, 1 Moo. C. C. 403. R. v. Serva and others, 2 Car. & K. 53, murder on the high seas. So in horse-stealing; Williams v. Reg. (in error), 7 Q. B. 251. Previous conviction for felony. R. v. Blea, 8 C. & P. 735. In robbery, the word "rob" having been used. R. v. Lennox, 2 Lew. C. C. 268. So in the case of disobedience to a statute, which is a common-law offence. R. v. Smith, 2 Dougl. 441. See also, to the same effect, R. v. Nelmes, 6 C. & P. 347; R. v. Williams, 14 L. J. M. C. 164; and see also Leach, 678, n.; R. v. Morgan, East, P. C. 601; 1 Saund. 135 (a).

⁴ R. v. Smith and others, 2 Dougl. 441. Obstructing navigation.

⁵ Anon. 12 Mod. 502; Holt, C. J.

⁶ Whether in felony or misdemeanor. R. v. Cook, Russ. & Ry. 176; 4 Bro. P. C. 302. R. v. Lane, 6 Mod. 128; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 92.

⁷ R. v. Lookup, 3 Burr. 1901. Judgment of King's Bench reversed in the House of Lords.

⁸ R. v. Scott, Russ. & Ry. 415. The objection was not taken on demurrer, but the doubt occurred after verdict. The mistake was held bad on demurrer. R. v. Taylor, 3 B. & C. 502. R. v. Smith, 2 Moo. & Rob. 109.

⁹ R. v. Chalmers, 1 Moo. C. C. 352. Anon. 2 Jur. 14.

nocumentum." But the court said that the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24, afforded a complete answer to the objection.¹

Surplusage.] Surplusage to some extent was always rejected by the courts,² though now it may be said to have entirely yielded to the statutes of amendment. Still there cannot be an amendment after verdict, in respect of surplusage; as to substitute C. D., the prisoner, for A. B. in a count of receiving the goods of A. B., "the said A. B. well knowing," &c.³

Lord Denman was disposed even to question Morris's case upon a rule to quash an inquisition, where the nominative case was used without the verb.⁴ In a case of embezzlement with more than one charge, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 48, and where the embezzled property was stated to belong to different persons, the words connecting the first with the second count were rejected, and the second count was left independent.⁵ In feloniously shooting the words were, did shoot, discharge, and "send forth;" "send forth" was rejected.⁶ The charge was, that A.'s servant stole his money; the proof, that B.'s money, in A.'s possession, was stolen, A. being the agent to B. The words "servant to A." were rejected.⁷ Where the indictment was for breaking the house of J. D. with intent to steal the goods of J. W., and it appeared that J. W. was put, by mistake, for J. D., the prisoner was acquitted.⁸ But now, this is a case in which the judge would amend. So it was held, that if a man be charged with stealing a black horse, the allegation of colour must be sustained.⁹ It was thought fit to name a

¹ R. v. Holmes, 22 L. J. M. C. 122.

² R. v. Morris, Leach, 109, 468. R. v. Harris, Holt's Cases, 353. R. v. Redman, Leach, 477. R. v. Rudge, 1 Russ. C. M. 825, note (e). R. v. Radley, Den. 450; 18 L. J. M. C. 184. R. v. Crespin, 17 L. J. M. C. 128; 11 Q. B. 913. R. v. Phelps, Car. & M. 180. A case of murder. The word "was" was rejected. Ryalls v. Reg. (in error), 17 L. J. M. C. 93; 18 L. J. M. C. 69. "The jurors did say" instead of "say." R. v. Yates and another, 6 Cox, 441. Indictment for conspiracy by false pretences; no pretence was proved. Crompton, J., rejected "false pretences." See likewise, R. v. Smith, Dougl. 441; 1 Saund. 135, n. (3). R. v. Mathews, 5 T. R. 162; Leach, 585. Other cases of surplusage have been a name of title. R. v. Graham, Leach, 547. R. v. Ogilvie, 2 C. & P. 230. An undue allegation of property. R. v. Hickman, East,

P. C. 293. A judgment. R. v. Baldwin, 3 Camp. 265. The owner of lodgings in robbery. R. v. Healey, 1 Moo. C. C. 1. "Coin," in an indictment for uttering. R. v. Jones, 9 C. & P. 761. A false pretence made to J. B. "and others." "And others" was rejected. R. v. Kealy, 20 L. J. M. C. 57.

³ R. v. Larkin, Dears. 365; 23 L. J. M. C. 125.

⁴ R. v. Great Midland R. C. 2 Cox, 1. Rule absolute to quash the coroner's inquisition as insensible.

⁵ R. v. Woolley, 4 Cox, 251.

⁶ R. v. Stokes, 2 Car. & K. 536; 17 L. J. M. C. 116.

⁷ R. v. Jennings, Dears. & B. 447.

⁸ R. v. Jenks, East, P. C. 514; Leach, 774. R. v. Durore, ante.

⁹ 3 Stark. Ev., 1531. But no allegation of colour is necessary, and the judge would strike out the epithet, the question being whether the prisoner had stolen a horse.

place where a defendant was found armed under 57 Geo. 3, and the evidence negatived the allegation of place: here the judges held that this was not surplusage.¹ If there be a count containing a charge rightly made out in proof, and another not rightly laid, the latter may be rejected, and a general finding upon the whole indictment will not be invalid.²

Videlicet.] The ancient form of videlicet is now wholly out of use: at least it may be said, that, should it ever appear, it is not of value.³

Averments.] The reader will find the doctrine of averments in different parts of this work under the heads of "Forgery," "Perjury," "Libel," &c. It is a rule that immaterial averments need not be proved.⁴

Interpretation.] By 13 & 14 Vict. c. 21, s. 4, the masculine gender shall include females, the singular the plural, and vice versâ, unless, as to gender and number, the contrary is expressly provided. "Month" shall mean calendar month, unless words be added showing that lunar month is intended; and "county" shall mean county of a town or of a city, unless such extended meaning is expressly excluded by words. "Land" shall include messuages, tenements, and hereditaments, houses and buildings, unless where there are words to exclude houses and buildings, or to restrict the meaning to tenements of some particular tenure; and the words, "oath," "swear," and "affidavit" shall exclude affirmation, declaration, affirming, and declaring, in the case of persons allowed to declare or affirm instead of swearing.

Joinder of counts.] The joinder of counts is a subject in some measure connected with election; but the election is, in some cases, dispensed with.

A capital offence may be joined with one not capital, burglary with larceny, for example.⁵ So in the case of principals in the first and second degrees.⁶

But counts for felony and misdemeanor ought not be joined. So that if a count for a common assault were to be joined with counts for stabbing with felonious intents, and a general verdict were taken, there would be error upon the record,⁷ and there cannot be an amendment after verdict. But in the last case, the verdict was taken separately, that is, upon one of the counts for ¹ R. v. Owen and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 118. ⁵ T. R. 456. See 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 7.

² O'Connell v. Reg. (in error), 11 Cl. & F. 155. ⁶ R. v. Kershaw, 1 Lew. C. C. 218.

³ See R. v. Gillham, 6 T. R. 265; 16 East, 416. ⁷ R. v. Gray, 7 C. & P. 164.

⁴ See R. v. Holt, Leach, 593; ⁷ R. v. Jones, 2 Moo. C. C. 94.

felony, and the judge, who was aware of the mistake, forbore to put the last count for the assault to the jury. Upon this, the conviction was held right.¹ So, where an assault with intent to rob was joined with a count on misdemeanor for attempting to steal, and a verdict was found against the prisoner upon the count for felony only, Lord Campbell said, that there could be no doubt on the subject. The conviction was affirmed.² Still the courts do not approve of this joinder. In a case of arson there was a count for felony under the statute, and one for misdemeanor at common law. Eyre, C. B., expressed his disapproval of the practice at Hicks's Hall, and desired that it might be discontinued. Here the counsel for the prosecution withdrew the capital charge.³ Counts in misdemeanor may be joined. As an assault upon a gamekeeper in the execution of his duty with a common assault.⁴

By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 6, benefit of clergy was abolished with respect to persons convicted of felony, but the joinder of counts which might have been joined before the passing of the Act, was expressly saved. It is no objection that A. and B. received part of the property stolen unconnectedly with each other.⁵ But counts for receiving certain articles cannot be joined with counts for receiving others.⁶ And counts for being accessory before, and after the fact, to the same felony, ought not to be joined.⁷

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 92, in any indictment containing a charge of feloniously stealing any property, a count or several counts for feloniously receiving the same or any part or parts thereof, knowing the same to have been stolen, may be added; and in any indictment for feloniously receiving any property knowing it to have been stolen, a count for feloniously stealing the same may be added; and where any such indictment shall have been preferred and found against any person, the prosecutor shall not be put to his election, but the jury who shall try the same may find a verdict of guilty, either of stealing the property, or of receiving the same, or any part or parts thereof, knowing the same to have been stolen; and if such indictment shall have been preferred and found against two or more persons it shall be lawful for the jury who shall try the same to find all or any of the said persons guilty either of stealing or receiving any part or parts thereof, knowing the same to have been stolen, or to find one or more of the said persons guilty of stealing, and the other or others of them guilty of receiving.⁸

¹ S. C.

² R. v. Ferguson, 24 L. J. M. C. 61; Dears. 427. Whether the recorder of Manchester left the count for misdemeanor to the jury does not appear.

³ R. v. Doran, Leach, 538.

⁴ R. v. Finacane and another, 5 C. & P. 551.

⁵ R. v. Hartall, 7 C. & P. 475.

⁶ R. v. Ward, 2 Fost. & F. 18.

⁷ R. v. Blackson and others, 8 C. & P. 43.

⁸ Under the old law. R. v. Madden, 1 Moo. C. C. 277.

Several felonies.] If several felonies be charged in the same indictment, the objection should be made before plea, or the swearing of the jury, for it cannot be taken upon demurrer, nor in arrest of judgment, since each count reveals a distinct offence. But the court will sometimes quash the indictment when the fault is discovered before plea, or before the charging of the jury, or afterwards will put the party to his election.¹ Where there are two indictments against different persons for different offences, both charges may be tried at once, by consent, the foundation being being the same transaction.²

Superfluous counts.] If there be an oppressive number of counts in an indictment, the better course is to apply to the attorney-general for a summons to the prosecutor's attorney to show cause why the superfluous matter should not be struck out.³ Or, if the clerk of assize should draw an indictment with unnecessary prolixity, he may be compelled to bear the expense of the superfluous part.⁴ And he has no lien on the records in his custody for his fees.⁵

Joinder of parties.] It is said, that when the offence is joint, as the joint keeping of a gaming house, the defendants may be charged either jointly or severally.⁶ But where the offence arises from the personal default of a particular individual, as the following a joint trade without apprenticeship on the part of one partner, the indictment must charge severally and not jointly.⁷ Yet, in the case of publishing two distinct libels upon two several persons,⁸ or in cases of assault upon two persons (whatever the opinion might have been formerly),⁹ the offence may be laid in either way.¹⁰ Under circumstances of positive misjoinder, the indictment will be quashed.¹¹ Where several are charged with several offences, the better opinion seems to be, that there ought not be a joint charge, unless in respect of some one thing to which all of them have a relation.¹²

¹ Stark. Cr. Pl. 39.

² R. v. Brett and another, R. v. White and others, 3 Cox, 79.

³ R. v. Green, Ca. Temp. Hardw. 209. It was an indictment for riot, and there were 200 sheets of paper. At first, the attorney-general refused to interfere.

⁴ R. v. May, Dougl. 194.

⁵ R. v. Bury, Leach, 201.

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 89.

⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 89.

⁸ R. v. Benfield and another, 2 Burr. 980.

⁹ R. v. Clendon, Str. 870; 2 Ld. R. 1572; overruled, 2 Burr. 984.

¹⁰ See 2 Burr. 983, 984.

¹¹ R. v. Tucker and others, 4 Burr. 2046.

¹² 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 89.

CHAPTER VII.

THE WRIT OF CERTIORARI.

Certiorari.] The writ of certiorari is always granted at the instance of the attorney-general, being an officer of the crown,¹ whether as prosecutor or for the accused, and the court has no discretion.² But it is otherwise in the case of other prosecutors and defendants. It is very considerably governed by statutes. Thus, no writ of certiorari, at the prosecution of any party indicted, shall issue in term time out of the Court of Queen's Bench, to remove any indictment for any trespass or misdemeanor found at sessions, assize, or elsewhere, before trial had, unless such certiorari shall be granted or awarded upon motion of counsel, and by rule of court, before the judge or judges of the said court sitting in open court, or by leave of the judge of that court, the attorney-general being excepted.³

In vacation writs of certiorari may be granted by any judge of any of the common-law courts at Westminster; and the name of such judge, and also the name of such person at whose instance the same is granted, shall be indorsed on the said writ.⁴

An indictment moved into the Central Criminal Court for keeping a disorderly house may be moved into the Court of Queen's Bench at the instance of the prosecutor or defendant, notwithstanding 25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 10.⁵ And it may be remarked that a certiorari to remove an indictment for the purpose of quashing it, as for want of jurisdiction, is not within these provisions. And although the attorney-general does not interfere, nor the crown, having no direct interest, yet a private person may, in this latter case, have the writ.⁶

To what courts.] This writ lies from the Court of Queen's Bench or Chancery to all courts of inferior jurisdiction, unless there be a statute or charter conferring upon such inferior courts an absolute jurisdiction.⁷ No certiorari was necessary to remove ¹ Under 5 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 2. The rule does not apply to prosecutors, i. e., not under that Act. So that the court refused to quash a certiorari where the sessions had quashed a conviction, and the informers had removed the proceedings without entering into any recognizance. R. v. Spencer, 9 Ad. & El. 485. But where the quarter sessions had discharged the recognizances, the court refused to interfere by granting a writ to remove the indictment to the assizes.

R. v. Dean, 2 Q. B. 731; 6 Jur. 149. The court also refused a mandamus to the sessions to rehear the case.

² 1 Ch. Cr. C. 378.

³ 5 Wm. & M. c. 11, s. 2; 5 & 6 Wm. 4, c. 33, s. 1.

⁴ 5 Wm. & M. c. 11, s. 4; and see 1 & 2 Vict. c. 45.

⁵ R. v. Brier, 14 Q. B. 568.

⁶ R. v. Boulton, 6 Nev. & M. 26; 4 Ad. & El. 498.

⁷ Case of the Commoners of the Cambridgeshire Fens, 2 Hawk. c. 27, proceedings upon appeal from the quarter sessions under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 33, ss. 82, 84, 85 (an Excise Act). The Court of Exchequer gave judgment under that Act without a certiorari.¹

By 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 16, (the Central Criminal Court Act,) indictments found at sessions may be removed by certiorari into that court, and indictments found at that court may be removed into the Court of Queen's Bench.

By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 24, s. 3, doubts having been entertained as to the proper place of trial in cases of removal, every writ of certiorari shall specify the county or jurisdiction in which the same shall be tried, and a jury shall be summoned, and the trial proceed as if the indictment had been originally preferred in that county or jurisdiction. And the certiorari may be applied for upon a prosecution before the finding of the indictment in the same manner as after the finding. It is observable that this writ may issue before any indictment is found upon any prosecution for misdemeanor.²

By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 4, no indictment, except against bodies corporate not authorized to appear by attorney, shall be removed into the Court of Queen's Bench, or into the Central Criminal Court, by certiorari, either by the prosecutor or the defendant (other than the attorney-general acting on behalf of the crown,) unless it be made to appear to the court from which the writ is to issue, by the party applying, that a fair and impartial trial of the case cannot be had in the court below,³ or that some question of law of more than usual difficulty and importance is likely to arise upon the trial, or that a view of the premises, or a special jury may be required.⁴

Certiorari, for what causes.] The doubt as to an impartial trial is one of the causes of the issue of this writ. As where an unreasonable prejudice exists, a prepossession against the accused.⁵ And a prejudice in the court below.⁶ Likewise, if the prejudice be the other way, in favour of the defendant. As in the case of a magistrate who circulated a printed account of the charges against him amongst his brethren.⁷ So where the defendant, a member of Oxford University, was the son of an influential magistrate of the neighbourhood, an indictment found at the Oxford sessions was removed.⁸ However, the mere fact that the defendant was a magis-

s. 22; see sect. 23, &c. That the Cinque Ports are not exempt, see sect. 24, Style, Rep. 9, where it was granted from the Cinque Ports. In the case of a certiorari in London and Middlesex, it was said to be customary to give three days' notice to the other side. Tho. Raym. 74.

¹ R. v. Gamble, 16 Mees. & W. 384, 398.

² 60 Geo. 3 and 1 Geo. 4, c. 4, s. 4.

³ R. v. Bell, 8 Cox, 287.

⁴ See R. v. Chipping Sodbury, 3 Nev. & M. 104.

⁵ R. v. Palmer, 5 El. & Bl. 1024.

⁶ R. v. Matthews, cited, 1 Ch. Rep. 571, n.

⁷ R. v. Grover, 8 D. P. C. 325.

⁸ R. v. Trevor, 4 Jur. 292. A placard and a series of articles concerning the prosecutor also appeared in the case.

trate will not be sufficient.¹ But it will not be awarded on the bare ground of political prejudice. Again, this writ was allowed where the number of jurors in a borough was small, and the defendant was shown to have been in terms of intimacy with many of them.²

Another ground is that of legal difficulty.³ This is provided for by the statute. But the court are to use their discretion upon the subject, especially if the application comes not from the court below, but from the defendant. Proceedings concerning matters of account were mixed up with an indictment for perjury. This was deemed a sufficient ground for withdrawing the case at the defendant's suggestion from the Central Criminal Court. But it will not be allowed on the ground that points of law may arise.⁴ Where the crown lawyers had instituted a prosecution, and the defendant was desirous of having a special jury and the aid of Queen's counsel, Mr. Justice Coleridge allowed the writ to go.⁵

Upon a charge of feloniously demolishing a house, the judge overruled an objection as to the means of destruction, and the court were desired to grant the writ for the purpose of bringing up the record of conviction to be quashed. But the writ was denied.⁶

With respect to that part of the clause of 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 4, which speaks of a special jury, it was held to be no objection that the writ lay to a court of high jurisdiction, as the Central Criminal Court.⁷ But the court will use its discretion. A special jury was denied upon the suggestion that the truth of the evidence (in a case of perjury) given by the defendant, would depend upon the result of a long series of accounts.⁸ So, although the allegation was, that the assault which occasioned the proceedings arose out of a claim of property, and that difficult questions might arise, so that a special jury would be desirable, the court refused the writ, no suspicion being cast upon the sessions.⁹ A constable seized a butcher's stock as being "corrupt and unwholesome victual," and preferred an indictment against him. The butcher brought an action for the seizure. Here the writ was allowed so that the charge and action might come before the same forum.¹⁰ This case, however, cannot be considered as authority unless upon the ground of the absence of impartiality. So, in nuisance, where a view of the premises is desirable, the writ will issue.¹¹ The writ is available

¹ R. v. Fellowes, 4 D. P. C. 607.

² R. v. Ouseley, 6 Jur. 193.

³ 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 27.

⁴ R. v. Wartnaby, 2 Ad. & El. 423. R. v. Harrison, 1 Ch. Rep. 571. R. v. Josephs, 8 D. P. C. 128. Perjury. See R. v. Heywood, 4 Jur. 413. R. v. Lechemere, Id. 656. Assault.

⁵ R. v. Jeffs and another, 1 Cox, 194.

⁶ R. v. Whiston, 2 Dowl. (N. S.), 408.

⁷ R. v. Caldecott, 1 Dowl. (N. S.), 556.

⁸ R. v. Morton, 1 Dowl. (N. S.), 543.

⁹ R. v. Wellington, 7 Jur. 44.

¹⁰ R. v. Broomhead, 2 Dowl. (N. S.), 715. On the motion of the constable.

¹¹ See 4 Com. 272, 273.

at bar as well as at nisi prius.¹ Where the court of quarter sessions quashed a writ for forcible entry, the writ was allowed to see whether there had been a regular judgment so as to found a writ of error. But the court would not review the decision of the sessions upon bringing up the writ of certiorari.² And the writ was granted in conspiracy upon the application of one defendant, without the consent of the others, that defendant entering into a recognizance to pay costs if he or any other of the defendants should be convicted.³

Refusals of the writ.] The writ has been refused in cases of convictions with regard to assessment to the land tax and poor's rates.⁴ Where issue has been joined, the court will not allow the writ.⁵ If granted, the court, in such a case, will remand the record.⁶ So between verdict and judgment.⁷ So after a conviction, unless the judge below should hesitate as to the sentence.⁸ So upon appeals, at least pending the appeal.⁹ Nor will the court remove the record and proceedings of a court leet in order to inquire into the propriety of an amercement which had been paid.¹⁰ Nor the record of a conviction from St. Helena, the attorney-general not having granted his fiat.¹¹ And the court cannot mitigate a fine imposed by an inferior court, the record of which is brought before them by certiorari.¹² So where a discretionary power of imprisonment was given by 10 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 6, the court granted a procedendo for the sessions to enforce the judgment. The rule in the Queen's Bench that, after a certiorari, the record cannot be remanded, applies only to cases where the judg-

¹ 4 Com. 320.

² R. v. Wilson, 1 New. S. C. 190. See R. v. Wilks, 4 Jur. 1061. R. v. Oulsley, 6 Jur. 62. Spittal, in re, 6 Jur. 438. R. v. Hare, 6 Jur. 326.

³ R. v. Foulkes and others, 20 L. J. M. C. 196; 1 Pract. Rep. 720. R. v. Probert and others, Dears. 30. R. v. Wilkes, 25 L. J. M. C. 47. And the removal of one operates as to the other, the name of the party requiring the writ being indorsed on it. 12 Mod. 601. R. v. Worsenholm and another.

⁴ R. v. King, 2 T. R. 235; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 27. Other cases are, R. v. Fox, 5 D. P. C. 242. Keeping a bawdy-house, 25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 10. But see R. v. Brier, ante, 19 L. J. M. C. 121. R. v. Cook, 5 Jur. 1181. Embezzling materials, 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 22. R. v. But- cher, 9 D. P. C. 135. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53. False pretences, where the Court of Queen's Bench granted a writ in the nature of a certiorari to remove the proceedings, notwithstanding the statute. R. v. Sill, 21 L. J. M. C. 214. Dears. 10. 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 16. R. v. Smith, Cowp. 24; R. v. Young and another, 2 T. R. 472. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 87, s. 101 (Smuggling Act). R. v. Williams, 1 Burr. 386. R. v. Hester, 4 D. P. C. 589. R. v. Whiston, 6 Jur. 1039; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 34.

⁵ 1 Hawk. c. 27, s. 30.

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 30.

⁷ R. v. Potter, 2 Lord Raym. 938. R. v. Jackson, 6 T. R. 145.

⁸ 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 31.

⁹ R. v. Sparrow, 2 T. R. 196, n.

¹⁰ R. v. Heaton, Id. 184.

¹¹ R. v. Lees, 27 L. J. Q. B. 403.

¹² R. v. Loveden, 8 T. R. 615.

ment of the inferior court cannot be carried into effect by the court above.¹ Mr. Justice Erle once refused the writ, notwithstanding an affidavit that the question was, whether the defendants were liable to certain repairs, and that the right to repair would come in issue.²

Writ accurate.] The writ must be particular, for should the record certified be materially different from that described by the writ, the certiorari cannot be available. As if it should speak of an indictment for stealing two horses, but the record certified it for stealing only one.³ Thus, in cases where the record fails to be removed through error, the court will either quash the writ and award a new writ, or make such order for the defendant's appearance in the inferior court to answer the proceedings against him, as may be most suitable.⁴

Formal proceedings.] Amongst the formal proceedings necessary to the carrying out of this writ, the first matter to be noticed is the recognizance.

By 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 33, s. 2, every person indicted or presented in any court,⁵ who shall obtain this writ of removal to the Queen's Bench, not being in custody for want of bail to answer such indictment, shall, before the allowance of such writ, enter into a recognizance before some judge of one of the common-law courts at Westminster, or a justice of the peace of the county or place in which the offence is charged to have been committed, or in which such person shall reside, in such sum, and with such sureties,⁶ as the said Court of Queen's Bench or any such judge or justice shall, by indorsement on the said writ, order and direct; and if any such person shall be in custody for want of bail to answer the charge contained in such indictment, he shall be detained in custody until the like recog-

¹ R. v. Neville, 2 B. & Adol. 299. R. v. Rushworth, 1 New. S. C. 415, on 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 14, where the court again doubted its power to imprison, a return of nulla bona for a writ of levari facias having been made. Procedendo awarded.

² R. v. Fulford (Inhabitants), 6 Cox, 510.

³ See 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 77, &c. As to the amendment of a return to this writ, see R. v. Darley, 4 East, 174. R. v. Atkinson, Id. 177. R. v. Aylett, Id.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 82.

⁵ The exact words of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 33, s. 2, are any other court.

The words include presentments by a court of sessions. R. v. Baker, 28 L. J. Q. B. 377.

⁶ If some find sureties, and others not, the indictment ought to be removed as to those who find them, for they ought not to be prejudiced by the default of others. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 51. But if a defendant out of custody should move for the writ, as in conspiracy, when his co-defendant is in prison, the consent of the latter should be obtained, or at least the applicant should find bail for him. R. v. Drake and others, 22 L. J. Q. B. 304.

nizances shall have been entered into, or until such person be discharged by due course of law.¹

By 5 Wm. & M. c. 11, s. 2, the condition of the recognizance shall be, that the party indicted shall at the return of the writ appear and plead to the said indictment in the Court of Queen's Bench, and that he shall, at his own costs, cause the issue joined, or any plea relating thereunto, to be tried at the next assizes for the county wherein the indictment was found; after such certiorari shall be returnable, if not in the cities of London or Westminster or county of Middlesex, and if in the said cities or county, then to cause or procure it to be tried the next term after the writ, or at the sitting after, if the said Court of Queen's Bench shall not appoint any other time, and that he shall give due notice of such trial to the prosecutor or his clerk in court.

And further, by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 5, whenever any such writ of certiorari shall be awarded at the instance of the defendant, the defendant shall enter into a recognizance with the provision following: that is to say, that the defendant shall pay to the prosecutor, in case he shall be convicted, his costs incurred subsequent to such removal. And the prosecutor shall enter into the same recognizance with regard to the defendant. By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 7, in default of recognizance, the court shall proceed to trial as if no certiorari had been awarded.

Still one defendant may apply for the writ and others may remain passive. In this case, the certiorari goes as to all, and the recognizances of those who have not applied are discharged, nor need they enter into any fresh recognizance. The rule for a procedendo was refused.²

The surety not only undertakes to produce the defendant, but he likewise pledges himself to pay the prosecutor's costs in case of a conviction, although the payment of such costs is not mentioned in the recognizance, the statute 5 & 6 Wm. & M. c. 11, being in effect incorporated in the recognizance.³ The recognizance stood thus:—"Before J. J., Esq., one of the justices for the county of," &c. It was held good.⁴ Whether it be directory or not may be a question. Buller, J., upon one occasion, said that the case of R. v. Goter had, he believed, been overruled, where the name of the prosecutrix not being on the back of the indictment, she was refused costs, although it was well known that she was the real prosecutrix.⁵

¹ 5 & 6 Wm. & M. c. 11, s. 2. R. v. Ewer, 2 Salk. 369; 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 33; 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 33, s. 2; and see 1 & 2 Vict. c. 45, s. 1.

² R. v. Boxall, 4 Ad. & El. 513; 2 Ch. Rep. 159.

³ R. v. Hodgson, Dears. 14; 21 L. J. M. C. 181; 7 Exch. 915. R. v. Hawdon, 1 Gale & D. 135;

9 D. P. C. 1009; 1 Q. B. 464. But the court stayed proceedings on account of the defendant's poverty, yet without reference to the liability of the sureties.

⁴ R. v. Hodgson, ut supra.

⁵ 2 T. R. 48, note. The recognizance of course continues in force till the costs are paid. R. v.

Bodies corporate are relieved from entering into any recognizance under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 5.¹ The identity of the party applying for the writ must be made out, and likewise that of the parties upon whom it is to be served. As under 13 Geo. 2, c. 18, the person's name who applies must be specified upon affidavit, and it must likewise be sworn that the applicant is the same party who gave notice to the justices.² And the name of the person must also appear in the notice.³ Secondly, as to the justices, the court will not infer their identity from the mere coincidence of names and descriptions in the order and notice, and affidavit of service. The affidavit must go further and state positively that the justices mentioned as having received notice were those who made the order.⁴ But an affidavit that the notice was served on three justices, naming them, and that they were present at the trial, and hearing the appeal, was held sufficient notice under 13 Geo. 2, c. 18, s. 5.⁵ By that statute, no certiorari shall be granted without proof made that six days' notice⁶ has been given to the justice or justices, or two of them, by or before whom such proceedings were had. The affidavit must, therefore, follow this requirement by an allegation that, at least, two of the justices present at the making of the order were served,⁷ and it is not enough to say that they were present at the sessions, without adding that they were present at the bench when the case was heard.⁸ And it seems that a subsequent affidavit will not cure the omission.⁹ If a justice on the bench expresses his determination not to vote, he must not be considered as a party to any notice; there must be two justices without reckoning him.¹⁰

The following forms of notice have been supported:—"W. & S. attornies for the overseers of K."¹¹ "Solicitor for the present churchwardens and overseers of Market Harborough."¹² By the Finmore, 8 T. R. 409. R. v. Teal and others, 13 East, 4. R. v. Besant, 7 D. P. C. 680. R. v. Thornton, 19 L. J. M. C. 113, as to the bail. And bankruptcy makes no difference as to the bail, although the bankrupt may be released. R. v. Hill, 22 L. J. Q. B. 322; 2 El. & Bl. 176. Where a side-bar rule was issued under 5 Wm. & M. c. 11, s. 3, and an attachment moved for by the prosecutor for nonpayment of costs, it was held unnecessary to have an affidavit that the prosecutors were the parties grieved. S. C.

¹ R. v. Mayor, &c., of Manchester, 26 L. J. M. C. 65.

² R. v. JJ. of Shrewsbury, 9 D. P. C. 501.

³ Ibid. R. v. How, 11 Ad. & El. 159; 4 Per. & D. 320.

⁴ R. v. How, ut sup. 9 P. D. C. 501.

⁵ R. v. Wilts, JJ, 9 D. P. C. 524.

⁶ Notice on Oct. 13. Application on Oct. 20 held sufficient, and that the 16th would have been time enough. R. v. St. Mary, White-chapel, 2 Dowl. (N. S.), 964.

⁷ R. v. Cartworth, 3 Gale & D. 162; 1 Dowl. & L. 837. R. v. Cornwall, JJ., 1 New. S. C. 414.

⁸ R. v. West Riding, JJ., 1 New. S. C. 406.

⁹ R. v. Gilberdyke, 8 Jur. 79.

¹⁰ R. v. Herefordshire, JJ., 1 New. S. C. 413.

¹¹ R. v. Westmorland, JJ., 7 Jur. 898.

¹² R. v. Solly, 9 D. P. C. 115.

attorney or the clerk, without further proof that the party is attorney or clerk.¹ "A. and B. solicitors for C. a ratepayer of the township of M., within and part of the said borough," without any affidavit by C. that the solicitors acted by his authority.² The notice, however, must be accurate in the body of it. It was alleged, that R. N., Esq., was served by giving a counterpart of the notice to W. R., the medical attendant of R. N., whilst R. N. was in bed. But the notice thus failed to state that the counterpart was delivered to W. R. at R. N.'s dwelling house, and it was held insufficient.³

The affidavit (for of course there must be one) should not be entitled in a cause.⁴ The words "before me," are not to be dispensed with. So that a jurat was deemed insufficient which omitted these words before the signature of the commissioner, and the omission could not be cured by reference to the notice.⁵ To this it may be added, that notice to the justices is not the less necessary, because the parties particularly interested in the case have been served.⁶ And the enlargement of the rule nisi will not cure objections to the notice, although the justices had appeared.⁷

It is competent to explain any alleged defect in the affidavit of a service by a counter-affidavit. As when it was sworn that a copy of the notice had been left at the chambers of one of the justices on a certain day. Here the prosecutor was permitted to explain by another affidavit that the notice had been put into the letter-box at the chambers, and that the justice had duly acknowledged its receipt.⁸ The notice cannot even be dispensed with if the justices grant a case.⁹

The rule for the certiorari is, in misdemeanor, for the most part, though not always, absolute in the first instance; in felony, it is a rule nisi.¹⁰ However, where a railway company was indicted, the rule was made absolute in the first instance, because no indictment lies against a railway or other company, unless for non-feasance.¹¹

There are limitations as to time in cases of certiorari. If a case comes on for argument, it is too late to impeach the form of the writ.¹² So as to the time for applying where a levy was made by commissioners of sewers in May, 1842, it was considered too late

¹ R. v. West Riding, JJ., 1 New. S. C. 406.

² R. v. Lancashire, JJ., 3 Per. & D. 86.

³ R. v. Nunn, 1 New. S. C. 49.

⁴ R. v. Southampton R. C., 2 Dowl. (N. S.), 53. R. v. Jones, 8 D. P. C. 80. R. v. Gilberdyke, 8 Jur. 79.

⁵ R. v. Bloxham (Inhabitants), 1 New. S. C. 370; 2 Dowl. & L. 168; 6 Q. B. 528.

⁶ R. v. Spachman, 9 D. P. C. 1060.

⁷ R. v. Shrewsbury, JJ., Id. 501. R. v. How, 11 Ad. & El. 159.

⁸ R. v. St. Mary, Whitechapel, 2 Dowl. (N. S.), 964.

⁹ R. v. West Riding, JJ., 1 New. S. C. 406.

¹⁰ R. v. Spencer, 8 D. P. C. 127. R. v. Wilson, 1 New. S. C. 190.

¹¹ R. v. Devon and Gloucester R. C., 1 Gale & D. 457.

¹² R. v. Fordham, 4 Jur. 218.

to apply for the writ to remove the presentment, assessment, order, and decree in Easter Term, 1843.¹ And if the six months prescribed by a statute, as the 13 Geo. 2, elapse while the matter is being discussed, the court, upon quashing the writ for want of due notice, will not allow of a new writ after the limited period has passed.² Nor would they grant a mandamus to enter continuances.³ The judge will not stop the case upon the ground that the prosecutor has not received notice of trial, but if he has not received it, a mis-trial will accrue.⁴

Next we come to the rules as to quashing the writ, or the documents brought up by it; and here, again, there is a limitation as to time. Where a side-bar rule had been obtained, requiring a clerk of assize to return two indictments, and it was served on the 30th of April, a motion to discharge the rule on the 23rd of May was considered too late.⁵ The 20th of April and the 20th of October agree so to save the limitation. As when the order was made on the first-mentioned day, and the application on the day secondly mentioned. However, as in this case, the judge was absent from town, it was made a question whether the application could be valid. But the writ was quashed, the fiat of the judge not having been got till the 21st.⁶

The court will not listen to an objection that the documents proposed to be quashed have been misdescribed in the writ.⁷ An order of sessions which confirms an order of justices should be the subject of a separate rule. The former does not necessarily draw after it the order of justices.⁸ The order, or a statement that it was in writing, should be expressed in the writ. The consequence of such an omission was, that neither the order nor a copy of it was returned, and the court then reverting to the writ of certiorari, recognized the default and quashed the writ itself.⁹

With reference to the merits, the distinction seems to be this: where it evidently appears that the justices had jurisdiction over the subject matter, it will not be permitted to impeach their decision upon affidavit. This view admits that the proceedings themselves were found to be regular upon the hearing of the case on certiorari. But when there is evidently no jurisdiction, affidavits

¹ R. v. Tower Hamlets Comrs., 7 Jur. 1169.

² R. v. Cartworth, 1 Dowl. & L. 837.

³ S. C. But as a doubt was suggested whether the record itself had been filed, or merely a transcript, a procedendo, to carry back the record to sessions, was made the subject of a rule nisi. S. C.

⁴ R. v. Hair, 1 Car. & K. 389.

⁵ Newton v. Bayley, 4 Jur. 192. In this case the court said, that a refusal to return indictments until certain fees were paid should be accompanied by a statement of the amount due, though such fees may be fixed by Act of parliament. S. C.

⁶ R. v. St. Mary, Whitechapel, 2 Dowl. (N. S.), 964.

⁷ R. v. Fordham (Inhabitants), 11 Ad. & El. 73.

⁸ R. v. Cornwall, JJ., 1 New. S. C. 414.

⁹ R. v. Wigan, JJ., 8 Jur. 930. The order was made under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 6.

to show that fact will be admissible. As when an Act had given to justices an original and final jurisdiction, but it was alleged that the charge actually before them and which gave rise to the certiorari, was one independent of the Act, and, therefore, not within its protection.¹ And further, when such a want of jurisdiction is disclosed, it is no answer to say that the proceedings have been made regular on the face of them.² An order was made under 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 24, directing that a parish house should be given up to parish officers. The information stated a refusal by a pauper to give up the house upon demand. This being a matter within the cognizance of the bench, affidavits tending to invalidate the statements in the information were rejected.³

If it be sought to quash this writ, care should be taken to quash the right instrument. The prosecutor of a certiorari was called upon to answer an objection to the writ, because certain recognizances had not been entered into.⁴ These recognizances were entered into after the allowance, but not before the issuing of the writ. It appeared that, in fact, the recognizances were not necessary, because the statute did not apply to cases where an order was confirmed without appeal, and here the order was so confirmed. Therefore, the application should have been, not to quash the writ itself, but the allowance, and the rule was discharged.⁵

Some of these writs are, of course. As to bail a person in the country.⁶ So, where a party bound at quarter sessions to keep the peace was convicted of an assault at the petty sessions within the given period, a certiorari issued as of course to remove the recognizances in order that proceedings might be taken by scire facias to estreat them.⁷

It seems that costs are not required in a common-law recognizance.⁸

By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 6, these costs shall be taxed according to the course of the Court of Queen's Bench. At the expiration of ten days after demand made of the person at whose instance the writ of certiorari was awarded, and on oath made of demand and refusal, there shall be a writ of attachment granted against him by the court for such contempt;

¹ R. v. Bolton, 5 Jur. 1154; 1 Q. B. 66. See R. v. Badger, 25 L. J. M. C. 81, where all the cases were considered. 6 El. & B. 137.

² R. v. Bolton, ut sup.

³ S. C.

⁴ Under 5 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 2.

⁵ R. v. Jones, 9 D. P. C. 504.

⁶ R. v. Gregory, 4 Jur. 1015; in which case an affidavit that the prisoner could not afford to come up by habeas corpus, was not necessary. This was a case of felony, and the depositions were removed. See Ex parte Nicholson, 4 Jur. 506.

⁷ Re White, 1 New. S. C. 9. See also 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 37. Judge's fiat. The direction of the writ. Id. s. 38. The mode of returning it. Id. s. 65, &c. The removal of judgments or orders of magistrates. Id.

⁸ R. v. Sidney, Str. 1165. R. v. Ewer, 2 Salk. 564. R. v. Fonseca, 1 Burr. 10.

and the said court shall and may also order the said recognizance to be estreated.

By 5 & 6 Wm. & M. c. 11, s. 3, upon conviction, the Court of Queen's Bench shall give reasonable costs to the prosecutor, if he be the party grieved or injured, or be a justice of the peace, mayor, bailiff, constable, headborough, tithing-man, churchwarden, or overseer of the poor, or any other civil officer, who shall prosecute upon the account of any fact committed or done, that concerned him as officer to prosecute or present, which costs shall be taxed according to the course of the court; and the prosecutor, for the recovery of such costs, shall, within ten days after demand made of the defendant and refusal of payment, on oath, have an attachment for contempt; and the recognizance shall not be discharged till the costs so taxed shall be paid.

The party grieved being entitled to costs, it is necessary to decide as to the persons who belong to that denomination, as well as those who are to be considered as civil officers. The prosecutor of an indictment for a riot was held not to be a party grieved, and his costs were refused, the judges being of opinion that the costs could not be awarded under 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 23.¹ So, a person injured at a riot which took place at a political dinner, was not entitled to costs upon an indictment for libel concerning the dinner, which was removed by the defendants, and upon which libel they were convicted.² So, where a public body indicted the defendant for a libel upon one of their officers, although the indictment was in the name of that officer, costs were not allowed.³ Nor when the city solicitor prosecuted by reason of the inability of the prosecutor to carry on the proceedings.⁴ Nor will the court give costs to a nominal prosecutor, for he cannot be at any expense, as when the prosecution is conducted by a private subscription.⁵ Nor to a mere volunteer.⁶ Although where the prosecutor was himself a subscriber, and where the proportions of the subscriptions were not stated, he was allowed to tax all the costs of the proceedings.⁷ So, where the defendant did not consent to the writ, notwithstanding his subsequent appearance, plea, and trial.⁸

¹ R. v. Richards, 8 B. & C. 420. R. v. Johnson, 1 Moo. C. C. 173. R. v. Oates, Id. 175. R. v. Ingleton, 1 Wils. 139. R. v. Kelsey, 1 D. P. C. 481.

² R. v. Caldecott and others, 1 Dowl. (N. S.), 556.

³ R. v. Dewhurst, 2 Nev. & M. 253; 5 B. & Adol. 405. By Lord Denman: "R. v. Edwards decides this case," 5 B. & Adol. 408.

⁴ R. v. Wilson, 22 L. J. M. C. 53; 1 El. & Bl. 597; Dears. 79.

⁵ R. v. Cook, 1 Man. & Ry. 526. R. v. Barnard Castle (Inhabitants), 5 Jur. 799.

⁶ R. v. —, 15 Q. B. 1060; 20 L. J. M. C. 53. But see S. C. infra.

⁷ R. v. Williams and others, 8 Jur. 559; 1 Cox, 77.

⁸ R. v. Hassell, 5 D. P. C. 531. See also R. v. Incledon, 1 M. & S. 268. R. v. Thompkins, 2 B. & Adol. 287. R. v. Higgins, 1 Nev. & P. 50.

Although another person may have entered into the recognizances, yet he who employs the attorney to conduct the prosecution is the person entitled to costs, if it be a case for costs and he the party grieved.¹

Under 10 Geo. 4, c. 44, the commissioners of police are justices and civil officers, so that where the defendant removed an indictment preferred by the commissioners, and was convicted, the commissioners had their costs awarded to them.² So is a justice who indicts a road.³ So a party grieved by the stoppage of a footway.⁴ So a society was held entitled to costs for prosecuting an attorney for practising contrary to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73.⁵ So the guardians of the poor, who preferred an indictment against a father for ill-using his child, were held to be parties grieved.⁶ So a person not bound to prosecute, but yet incurring expense reasonably and with a view to justice, is within the Act.⁷ And in perjury it was deemed no answer to say that the fraud did not succeed, and that the prosecutors were only interested as executors.⁸ It was sufficient that the perjury was complete, and that it might have caused damage to the prosecutors.⁹ And herein lies the distinction between this case and R. v. Ingleton,¹⁰ which M. Justice Wightman pointed out. Again, an attempt was made to persuade a person to fire a house, but the individual solicited gave information, and no harm occurred. The defendant removed the indictment, and was convicted and paid her fine, and upon an application for costs against her the court refused them, for no damage was done. It was only intended. The statute only extends to officers and persons grieved.¹¹ In the former case the perjury was accomplished, here the offence was incomplete.

If judgment be arrested, the defendant is not liable under any circumstances.¹² And it seems that the costs are confined to such counts as the defendant is convicted upon.¹³ These costs include the carrying of a defendant to gaol in execution of his sentence, as being incurred in consequence of the sentence; though not immediately occasioned by the certiorari.¹⁴ If the defendant die before the day in banc, his bail are liable to the costs,¹⁵ and their

¹ R. v. Bishop, 6 Dowl. & L. 499.

² R. v. Earl Waldegrave, 2 Q. B. 341. The court noticed the contents of the indictment without having the record brought before them.

³ R. v. Kettleworth, 5 T. R. 33.

⁴ R. v. Williamson, 7 T. R. 32.

⁵ R. v. Buchanan, 3 Cox, 427.

⁶ R. v. —, 20 L. J. M. C. 53; 15 Q. B. 1060.

⁷ R. v. Kenealey, 4 Cox, 345. A side-bar rule had been obtained for costs, and the rule to discharge that rule was discharged.

⁸ R. v. Major, 21 L. J. M. C. 221; Dears. 13. The defendant had removed the indictment.

⁹ S. C. by Wightman, J.

¹⁰ 1 Wils. 139.

¹¹ R. v. Ingleton, 1 Wils. 139.

¹² R. v. Turner and others, 15 East, 570.

¹³ R. v. Hawdon, 3 Per. & D. 44.

¹⁴ R. v. Gilbie, 5 M. & S. 520.

¹⁵ R. v. Finmore, 8 T. R. 409. R. v. Turner, 3 B. & P. 160. Whether the recognizance be previously forfeited or not.

recognizances will not, under any circumstances, be discharged, unless the court be satisfied that these costs have been liquidated.¹ But after a rule for a new trial the bail are not so liable. The defendant was allowed a new trial upon payment of costs. He gave notice of trial, upon which the prosecutor obtained a judge's order, by which the notice was only to stand good if the costs were paid by a certain day. The defendant did not pay them, and died before the assizes, and so before trial. The court held that a side-bar rule calling on the bail to pay costs could not be supported, and that the bail ought not to have been mentioned in the rule. The default of the defendant did not restore the original verdict nor the order of the judge. Had the court in a subsequent term set aside the rule for a new trial, and (the defendant being then alive) had judgment been then entered, the case might have been different. But here there was a conviction within the true meaning of the recognizance of bail.² The Central Criminal Court Act³ was held not to affect the right of the prosecutor to these costs, since they depended upon the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 33.⁴ In accepting taxed costs, the prosecutor is not restrained from aggravating the fine to be imposed,⁵ but, in a case where one-third of the fine had been awarded to him by an order of the judges, it was directed that the master should deduct one-third from the amount of the taxation.⁶ Therefore, the payment of a fine does not destroy the defendant's recognizance for the costs.⁷

These costs become a vested debt on taxation, and the personal representatives of the party may proceed to recover them.⁸ And, upon the statute,⁹ should the defendant's recognizance be forfeited, it shall stand as a security for costs.¹⁰ Under 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 44, the court will not give costs unless they are applied for on the hearing of the motion to disallow the order of the town council.¹¹ It is scarcely necessary to observe, that no costs are allowable to prisoners in cases of felony.¹² Where an indictment for misdemeanor was removed, and a new trial granted on the ground of surprise, the costs were ordered to abide the event of the trial.¹³ An attachment cannot be granted against a person refusing to pay costs under 5 & 6 Wm. & M. c. 11, s. 2, until the expiration of ten days.¹⁴ Under 5 & 6 Wm. & M. c. 11, ss. 2, and 3, it was insisted that no name was indorsed upon the indictment as of the party grieved, or a public civil officer. But Lord Mansfield said, that it was

¹ R. v. Lyon, 3 Burr. 1461.

² R. v. Bowen, 19 L. J. Q. B. 103.
63; 7 Dowl. & L. 312.

³ 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 16.

⁴ R. v. Hawdon, 9 D. P. C. 1007.

⁵ 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 53.

⁶ R. v. Osborne, 4 Burr. 2126.

⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 53.

⁸ R. v. Chamberlayne, 1 T. R.

⁹ Secus at common law.

¹⁰ 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 53.

¹¹ R. v. Dunn, 8 Jur. 773. See R. v. Prest, 20 L. J. Q. B. 17.

¹² R. v. Crowe, 4 C. & P. 251.

¹³ R. v. Whitehouse, Dears. 1.

¹⁴ R. v. Ireland, 3 T. R. 512.

enough if the fact of the prosecutor being a civil officer was proved, as in the case before the court, by affidavit.¹

Still these costs are not limited to the sum of 20*l.* in the recognizance, which is only a further security for them. Therefore the court would not discharge the recognizance until the taxed costs were paid.²

Supersedeas.] This writ, bail being filed according to the statute, is a supersedeas as to all subsequent proceedings in the court below.³ Not in the absence of bail.⁴ And there is a difference between a ministerial and a judicial proceeding. In the former case, as where process is committed to the hands of a sheriff, the writ is available to stop his proceedings, unless he afterwards obtain a venditioni exponas, but, in the latter, where the certiorari has not been delivered till after the jury have been sworn upon an indictment, the act being judicial, it is said that the justices may proceed.⁵

Time.] The usual course is to apply for the writ after the finding of the indictment and before issue is joined, and not after a confession in the court below,⁶ but, as we have seen, it may issue, upon application, before indictment found.⁷ The writ is seldom granted after conviction. It may be for special cause, and it will receive no countenance if it be not served till after verdict, although obtained before.⁸ But where no remedy by writ of error exists, a special cause may be found, and the writ may issue at any time before the day given above, and even after then, where error does not lie.⁹ The consequence of such a writ is not to release a prisoner who is in custody without finding sureties, although, if he were out on bail, the removal would discharge the recognizance.¹⁰

It happened in the case of a notorious criminal named Palmer, that the indictment against him could not be conveniently tried at Stafford, and it was proposed to move it to another place than the Court of Queen's Bench, whither the writ of certiorari had already placed it. Upon this, the Central Criminal Court was selected as the most worthy, and an Act was passed which fully embraced the whole matter.

By 19 & 20 Vict. s. 1, whenever any indictment or inquisition for felony or misdemeanor committed or supposed to have been committed at any place out of the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court shall have been removed by certiorari into the

¹ R. v. Smith, 1 Burr. 54. See Lofft. 520.

² R. v. Teal and others, 13 East, 4.

³ 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 57.

⁴ R. v. Bethell, 6 Mod. 33.

⁵ 2 Hawk. c. 27, ss. 58, 59. As to Berwick. See R. v. Boyall, 2 Burr. 834.

⁶ R. v. Gwynne and others, 2 Burr. 749.

⁷ Procedendo awarded, ante.

⁸ R. v. Dixon, 6 Mod. 61.

⁹ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 380; 2 Com. 67; by Ryland, 320, n.

¹⁰ R. v. Richardson, Leach, 560. Perjury.

Queen's Bench, and it shall appear to such court in term, or to any judge thereof in vacation, that it is expedient for the same to be tried at the said Central Criminal Court, the Court of Queen's Bench in term, or the judge in vacation, shall order the trial to take place at the Central Criminal Court. Upon this, the indictment shall be transmitted to the Central Criminal Court with all depositions, &c.¹ Whether the indictment however or inquisition has been into the Queen's Bench or not, by sect. 3 power is given to that court to remove it for trial to the Central Criminal Court, and a writ shall issue for the purpose of certifying and returning them.

Upon this, with reference to such orders made under the sections 1, 2, and 3, the 4th section directs that all recognizances, depositions, &c. relating to the offence charged in such indictment or inquisition, shall be returned by the justices, coroner, &c. to the Central Criminal Court. Then by sect. 5, upon the order under those sections, that the indictment or inquisition be transmitted, the prisoner may be removed to Newgate, without a habeas, with his commitment and detainer.

The 6th section provides, that the defendant needs not to appear personally in the Court of Queen's Bench, nor plead there.

By sect. 7, the prisoner may be arraigned as though the offence had been committed within the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court.

The 8th section enjoins the court to which the writ is delivered, to bind over the prosecutor and witnesses to the Central Criminal Court.

And by sect. 9, the defendant may be bailed or committed by the court receiving the writ.

By sect. 10, every recognizance shall be as obligatory as if entered into originally to appear at the Central Criminal Court. But notice must be given to the persons so bound, and the prosecutor or party charged must enter into a further recognizance to give such notice to their respective witnesses. Although if a witness has been personally served with such notice, it shall be sufficient without a fresh recognizance.

The 11th section forbids the discharge of a defendant in prison when the writ arrives. But of course he may be bailed.

The 12th section provides for the apprehension of a defendant at large, and for the compulsory attendance of witnesses in like manner as in cases originally arising in the Central Criminal Court.

So as to expenses and rewards, as though the jurisdiction had been original.²

By sect. 15, it shall not be lawful for any person, by himself or by his counsel, to take any objection, either in the said Central

¹ Sect. 2, by the Queen's coroner and attorney, &c. rules concerning Newgate, or any other gaol, for the purposes of the ² Sect. 13. Another clause (14) Act, and may alter commissions, provides that the Queen may make writs, &c.

Criminal Court, or in any court of error, to any writ of certiorari, or to any order of the Queen's Bench or of any judge thereof, or to any other proceeding under or by virtue of which any indictment or inquisition shall have been removed into the said Court of Queen's Bench, or transmitted or removed, under the provisions of this Act, to the said Central Criminal Court, or to any caption of any court before which such indictment shall have been found, or to any matter or thing set out or appearing on the face of the record, save and except only to such indictment or inquisition alone.

Then, upon the transmission or removal of the indictment, the Central Criminal Court acquires full, and, as it were, original jurisdiction.¹ And the question of the proper removal or transmission shall not be inquired into.² And every verdict and judgment in the Central Criminal Court upon such an occasion shall be valid.³

Then, as under 51 Geo. 3, c. 100, s. 1, the sentence may be executed in the county where the offence was committed, or within the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court.⁴

By sect. 20, whenever any person shall have been removed into the custody of the said keeper of Newgate, under the provisions of this Act, or shall have been committed to the custody of such keeper by the said Central Criminal Court, such person shall, without writ of habeas corpus or other writ, be removed into and from the said Central Criminal Court, when and as often as it may be necessary, by the keeper of the said gaol of Newgate, with his commitment and detainer, in order that he may be tried, sentenced, or otherwise dealt with according to law, and such removal shall not be deemed an escape.

And by sect. 21, such prisoner, whilst he is thus removed or detained, shall be deemed to be in lawful custody.

By sect. 22, a defendant out on bail, who appears under his recognizance, may be bailed again from time to time, and as often as the court may think fit, or may be committed. And this same power, by sect. 23, is given with respect to the prosecutor and the witnesses.

By sect. 24, upon any application under this Act, the Court of Queen's Bench, or a judge thereof in vacation, may impose such reasonable terms upon the prosecutor or the defendant as to bail, the payment of the costs of the prosecutor and witnesses, and of the removal and transmission or removal of such indictment or inquisition, and of the removal of such defendant, and any other matter, as in the judgment of such Court of Queen's Bench or judge may reasonably be imposed.

But when the crown obtains the trial, a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, to enable such person to defray the charges and expenses of

¹ Sect. 16.

² Sect. 17.

³ Sect. 18.

⁴ Sect. 19. See schedules A. and

B., with form of warrants of execution.—Palmer was executed in the county (Stafford) where the offence happened.

the attendance of his witnesses, shall be advanced to the defendant, provided that the sum so advanced shall be allowed for in the sum which, in the event of the acquittal of such person, may become payable under the order in the next succeeding section mentioned.¹

For, under sect. 26, the expenses of a person acquitted shall be ordered to be paid to him, and he shall be so paid out of the treasury.

As to the costs of maintaining the prisoner in Newgate, they shall be paid by the treasurer of the county where the offence was committed.² And an account of those expenses shall be delivered to such treasurer by the clerk to the visiting justices at Newgate, and shall be deemed conclusive, unless objection in writing shall be made by the treasurer within one calendar month.³

Lastly, peers and peeresses, and persons claiming privilege of peerage, are expressly excepted out of the Act by the 29th section.

Carrying down the record.] A defendant cannot carry down a record removed by the prosecutor without the leave of the court.⁴ Should the defendant neglect to carry down the record, the crown will apply for a procedendo. The judge may grant this, in the first instance, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 45, s. 1, without causing the defendant to be previously summoned to show cause. It is in his discretion to make a conditional or an absolute order.⁵ And the power is not limited to the full court. It may be exercised by a single judge, within the meaning of 6 Hen. 8, c. 6, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 45, s. 1. There were two indictments for conspiracy against D. and others, and R. and others. The prosecutor entered them Nos. 2 and 3, and in that order. But the defendants entered them 10 and 13, and placed R. first. It was contended, that the prosecutor need not enter the records at all, and that it was not the case of an entry by proviso. Erle, J., said that the prosecutor had done right, and that the case should be tried in that order.⁶

Traverse.] In cases of misdemeanor it used to be competent for

¹ Sect. 25.

² Sect. 27.

³ Sect. 28.

⁴ R. v. Banks, 6 Mod. 245; 11 Mod. 33; 2 Ld. Raym. 1082. Where a record may be removed without certiorari, see 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 41.

⁵ R. v. Scaife and another, Den. & P. 513; 21 L. J. M. C. 221; 18 Q. B. 773. The prisoners were convicted after the procedendo and sentenced to transportation, upon which they moved the Court of Queen's Bench for a rule to show cause why the procedendo should not be set aside, and all the subsequent proceedings treated as a nullity. The rule was refused. In this case the indictment had been removed from quarter sessions and tried at nisi prius. The prisoners were convicted, but the Court of Queen's Bench granted a new trial. Neither side brought down the record, and the prisoners applied to be tried there, but this could not be done for want of the record.

⁶ R. v. Duffield and others, 5 Cox, 286.

a defendant to put off his trial till the next assizes or sessions by traversing the indictment. And the judge would not discharge a defendant at the assizes who had traversed to the sessions.¹

But now, by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 27, there shall be no traverse of any indictment, but the trial may be adjourned to the following sessions, upon such terms as to bail, &c. as the court shall think fit, and the recognizances of the prosecutor and his witnesses may be respited, but there needs not to be a fresh recognizance. It was no excuse that the prosecutor had taken down the record, and that the defendant was ready for trial, if the defendant neither made up the record, nor gave notice of trial, and no notice of estreat to himself is necessary.² One entered into a recognizance to appear and try in Trinity Term. She appeared and pleaded, but no trial took place. The court, in Michaelmas Term, declined to discharge her recognizances, but ordered, that they should not be put in suit till the last day of term.³

No imparlance.] By 60 Geo. 3 and 1 Geo. 4, c. 4, s. 1, where any person shall be prosecuted in the Court of Queen's Bench for misdemeanor, by indictment, and shall appear in term in person to answer to such indictment, such defendant, upon being charged, shall not be permitted to imparle to a following term, but shall be required to plead or demur thereto within four days from the time of his appearance; and in default of his so pleading or demurring, judgment may be entered against him for want of a plea; and in case he shall appear by his attorney, it shall not be lawful for him to imparle to a following term, but a rule requiring him to plead may forthwith be given, and a plea or demurrer to such indictment enforced, or judgment by default entered thereupon.

By sect. 2 it is provided, that it shall be lawful for the said court or for a judge of the same, upon sufficient cause shown for that purpose, to allow further time for such defendant to plead or demur to such indictment.

¹ R. v. Arlett, 2 Car. & K. 596. 109. R. v. Minshall, Id. 576. R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437. R. v. Williams, 1 Moo. & Rob. 503. R. v. Wettenhall, 2 Moo. & Rob. 291. R. v. Wakefield, 1 Lew. C. C. 275, 311, 313, n. R. v. Grubbin, Id. 314. Anon. Id. 309. R. v. O'Neill, 1 Car. & K. 138. R. v. Parker, 3 Cox, 299.

² R. v. Clark, 5 B. & Ald. 728.

³ R. v. Grote, 3 D. P. C. 255; see likewise R. v. Fry, Leach, 111. R. v. Hobby, 1 C. & P. 660. R. v. James, 3 C. & P. 222. R. v. Jones, 6 C. & P. 343. R. v. Donnell, 7 C. & P. 138. R. v. Burgiss, Id. 488. R. v. Rooney, Id. 515. R. v. Featherstonhaugh, 8 C. & P.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF ARRAIGNMENT AND ITS INCIDENTS.

Arraignment.] The indictment being found, the prisoner is put to the bar to answer it, which is called arraigning him.¹ If he should plead "Not guilty" in treason, felony, or piracy, not having privilege of peerage, he puts himself upon the country.² But the court may postpone the trial. If, being charged with treason, felony, piracy, or misdemeanor, he stands mute of malice, (which a jury must try,) and will not plead, the court may order a plea of "Not guilty" to be entered.³ But circumstances occasionally happen which delay this general plea or repel it altogether. These incidents are either of law or of fact. Of the former kind are demurrers to the indictment. The latter may be divided into physical incapacities or wilful impediments. To take the physical defects first, the most usual are dumbness, deafness, idiotcy, or insanity. When such symptoms of incompetency appear, a jury of twelve, who may be bystanders, are sworn to try whether the prisoner stands obstinately mute, or is under the visitation of God.⁴ Upon this issue the counsel for the prisoner may address the jury.⁵ Should the jury return, "Dumb by the visitation of God, or affirm the presence of any such imbecility, the course is to endeavour to explain the nature of the arraignment, and to elicit an answer by some sign. As where it turned out after such a verdict that one deaf and dumb had been in the habit of communicating his ideas with a woman. In this case she was sworn, and the fact being established, the prisoner was convicted and transported.⁶ In a later case the inquiry was, 1, as to the dumbness; 2, whether the prisoner was of sane mind. The counsel pleaded "Not guilty," and the trial proceeded, the evidence not being interpreted. Here the person was deaf and dumb, and the offence was misdemeanor.⁷ So, where a woman who could speak, but of whose deafness there was presumptive evidence, was found "mute by the visitation," &c.; the judges, having considered her case, she was again tried upon the collateral issue, and a second verdict of "mute" having been found, she was immediately given in charge to the same jury in chief, convicted, and sentenced to transportation.⁸

Where a party refused to plead because he had before pleaded to an indictment for the same offence, which was held invalid, by reason of its having been found upon the testimony of witnesses

¹ 4 Com. 322. As to the old system of holding up of the hand, (which, however, was not of necessity,) see 2 Curw. Hawk. 434. R. v. Ratcliffe, 1 Sir W. Bl. 3.

² 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 1.

³ Id. s. 2, which they did in R. v. Bernard, 1 Post. & F. 240,

⁴ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 424.

⁵ Id. R. v. Roberts, Car. Cr. L. 57.

⁶ R. v. Jones, Leach, 102; Id. 452, n.

⁷ R. v. Whitfield, 3 Car. & K. 121.

⁸ R. v. Steel, Leach, 451; R. v. Mercier, Id. 183. R. v. Halton, Ry. & Moo. N. P. C. 78.

not duly sworn, it was held that the corresponding section of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 2, applied to his case.¹ In such a case the party may be required to plead to the second indictment, without questioning the first.² A jury is empannelled, as before, to try the question of "mute of malice" and, without such a trial, evidence cannot be admitted.³

Insanity.] By 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, s. 1, persons charged with treason, murder, and felony, and acquitted on the ground of insanity, shall be detained during the pleasure of the crown. By sect. 2, if any person indicted for any offence shall be insane, and shall upon arraignment be found so by a jury lawfully impannelled for that purpose, so that such person cannot be tried, or if upon the trial such person shall appear to the jury to be insane, the court before whom any such person shall be brought to be arraigned or tried as aforesaid may direct such finding to be recorded, and order such person to be kept in strict custody until Her Majesty's pleasure shall be known; and if any person charged with any offence shall be brought before any court to be discharged for want of prosecution, and such person shall appear to be insane, it shall be lawful for such court to order a jury to be impannelled to try the sanity of such person; and if the jury shall find him to be insane it shall be lawful for such court to order such person to be kept in strict custody, in such place and in such manner as to such court shall seem fit, until Her Majesty's pleasure shall be known; and in all cases of insanity so found Her Majesty may give order for the safe custody of such person during her pleasure. This 2nd section was considered to include misdemeanors.⁴ But still it was thought right to pass a separate Act, expressly giving the same powers in cases of conviction for misdemeanor, as under 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94.⁵

Upon one occasion the judge directed the following issues:—
1, whether the prisoner stood mute by the visitation of God;
2, whether he were able to plead. These issues the jury found severally in the affirmative. The prisoner then pleaded by a sign "Not guilty." Then, 3, the judge directed the inquiry, whether the prisoner were sane or not. On this question he requested the jury to consider whether the prisoner were of sufficient capacity to comprehend the proceedings, to make a proper defence, to challenge any juror he might wish to object to, and to comprehend the details of the evidence, and that, if they thought him incompetent, they should find him "Of unsound mind." The verdict being "Of unsound mind," the judge ordered his detention under the statute.⁶ In another case, where the prisoner, deaf and dumb,

¹ R. v. Bitton, 6 C. & P. 92.

² R. v. Chamberlain, Id. 93. Therefore, under the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, the trial proceeded as though the party had pleaded, whereas before, the standing mute of malice was considered in the light of a confession, and there were, at least, two executions under such circumstances.

³ R. v. Israel, 2 Cox, 263.

⁴ R. v. Little, Russ. & Ry. 430.

⁵ 3 & 4 Vict. c. 54, s. 3.

⁶ R. v. Pritchard, 7 C. & P. 303.

was charged with the murder of a bastard child, Park, J., said he should impanel a jury to try whether she were sane, as she did not appear to understand the proceedings, and that he would then reserve it for the judges to say whether she should be detained during pleasure under the Act then in force, or instructed so as to be put upon her trial. The jury, however, found her insane.¹ Indeed, if the prisoner's sanity is in the least doubtful, and the surgeon so pronounces it, the prisoner ought not to be put on his trial.² And it has been held, that a medical man may be asked his opinion, as a matter of science, whether the evidence given discloses a state of mind incapable of distinguishing right from wrong.³ But Alderson, B., would not accede to this case. A physician was called upon a trial, who had never seen the prisoner before that time, in order to say whether the evidence he had heard savoured of insanity. The baron would not allow the question. He said, that particular parts of the evidence might be taken, and assuming them true, it might be asked whether such facts, in the opinion of the physician, showed insanity.⁴

With respect to the proof. Upon one occasion, the counsel for the prosecution began, and called his witnesses to prove the prisoner's sanity.⁵ In this case, the insanity having been suggested as feigned, it was held that, after the case for the prosecution, the prisoner's counsel might controvert it by proof of insanity, so that, in the absence of absolute proof, the judge would ask the officers of the prison concerning the matter, or postpone the trial till the next assizes. The judge then examined the officers in a private room, with the medical attendant. A jury was then impanelled, and, the evidence conflicting, the jury found the prisoner insane.⁶ However, Cresswell, J., would not recognize this case, and he compelled the prisoner's counsel to prove the suggestion made in the first instance. The presumption was in favour of sanity, and he thought that there was no reason for departing from the old practice.⁷ In a case where the prisoner was committed for murder, and was removed to a lunatic asylum by an order of the secretary of state, and a true bill found against him, the recognizances were respited sine die.⁸ In a case of manifest insanity, the prisoner needs not to be asked whether he will examine the witnesses. The jury may form their conclusion simply from the prisoner's appearance, without further evidence.⁹ It is to be observed that where the prisoner was declared to be insane by the jury, yet had not done what the law considered essential to constitute the crime charged, he was acquitted generally. Such a case was casus omissus in the statute. And the court could not order his detention under 39 & 40 Geo. 3.¹⁰ In

¹ R. v. Dyson, 7 C. & P. 305.

² R. v. Ley, 1 Lew. C. C. 239; and see R. v. Burrow, Id. 238.

³ R. v. M'Naghten, 10 Cl. & Fin. 200.

⁴ R. v. Frances, 4 Cox, 57.

⁵ R. v. Davies, 3 Car. & K. 328.

⁶ R. v. Davies, 6 Cox, 326.

⁷ R. v. Turton, 6 Cox, 385.

⁸ R. v. Blackwell, 7 Cox, 353.

⁹ R. v. Goode, 7 Ad. & El. 536.

¹⁰ R. v. Oxford, 9 C. & P. 525.

The general question of insanity will be considered under the head of the case of an insane prisoner committed by magistrates for safe custody under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 54, s. 2, Patteson, J., directed that he should be brought up, if not dangerous. However, the recognizances were respited, and the costs allowed.¹

Fetters.] The prisoner is entitled, upon his arraignment, to humane treatment, and is not to be subjected to any unnecessary ignominy nor reproach, and it is said, that he ought not to be brought to the bar with fetters on his feet, unless there be danger of a rescue or escape.² But upon one occasion the court refused to interfere till after plea, saying, that until the jury were charged they had no authority, and then they ordered the fetters to be knocked off.³

Quashing the indictment.] We have said that the plea may be postponed or dispensed with by matter of law, as by demurrer, or upon an application to the court to quash the indictment. This proceeding may be adopted where it is plain that the judgment, if given upon the charge, would be erroneous.⁴ But here the statute as to amendment interposes and cures, under judicial discretion, a number of formal errors⁵ which formerly operated to destroy the indictment. So that, as the courts have always preferred to leave the defendant to his demurrer, the application to quash is still more rarely made. An indictment cannot be quashed in part.⁶ If an indictment for perjury be preferred at the sessions, that defences to indictments. As to the removal of persons of European birth from India to England when acquitted on the ground of insanity, see 14 & 15 Vict. c. 81.

¹ R. v. Dwerryhouse, 2 Cox, 291. It seems (p. 291) that the prisoner was brought up. The bill had been found. See 1 & 2 Vict. c. 14; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 75.

² 4 Com. 322.

³ R. v. Waites, Leach, 28, 36. But the court would not now be so nice. Indeed, fetters are disused, unless in cases of danger.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 146. So that if the judgment could not be arrested, the application would fail. R. v. Taylor, 9 D. P. C. 600. R. v. Burnby, 13 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 29.

⁵ "Formal errors," now amendable. The style of the court. R. v. Roysted, 1 Ld. Keny. 255. The caption of the indictment. The indictments presented are true bills, because bill found, the bills do not become indictments. R. v. Brown, 1 Salk. 376. Inserting "King Charles," without saying first or second. R. v. Ford, 2 Show. 454. The addition after the alias dictus, instead of the first name. R. v. Ward, Stark. Cr. Pl. 301. The omission of "on the oaths of twelve men." R. v. Burkett, Andr. 230. Charging persons jointly and severally. R. v. Weston, Str. 623. R. v. Tucker and others, 4 Burr. 2046. Several for the same perjury, R. v. Phillips and others, Str. 921. Or for perjury. R. v. Withers, 4 Cox, 17. And Rolfe, B., said that the application to quash arises from the prosecution, not from the defendant. Including charges, several in their nature, in the same indictment. R. v. Kingston and others, 8 East, 41; Leach, 1105, n. Principal and accessory. R. v. Austin, 7 C. & P. 796.

⁶ R. v. Withers, 4 Cox, 17.

tribunal will remit the case to the assizes, and the prisoner may be bailed, if in custody, before a magistrate, or he may apply to a judge. And a judge would, if applied to for the purpose of quashing, probably remit the case, and quash the indictment. Indictments have been quashed for such faults,¹ and in forgery.² However, in serious cases the judge will leave the defendant to demur.³ In cheating;⁴ false weights;⁵ extortion;⁶ forcible entry;⁷ nuisance,⁸ unless it be shown that the nuisance has been removed;⁹ indecency;¹⁰ disturbance in church;¹¹ a qui tam action;¹² overseers refusing to pay over to their successors, being, as the court said, a growing evil;¹³ offences against the Hawkers' Act;¹⁴ informations, ex officio,¹⁵ or by the master of the crown;¹⁶ an indictment for practising as an attorney, contrary to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73;¹⁷ a plea in abatement.¹⁸ So, where a corporation was indicted for misdemeanor, the court discharged the rule for quashing the indictment, leaving the defendants to their demurrer, with liberty to plead over in the event of a decision against them.¹⁹ Moreover, the court will not quash sitting at nisi prius.²⁰ Nor, after demurrer, at the instance of the prosecutor.²¹ Nor after plea pleaded.²² Nor will the indictment be quashed at the request of the prosecutor where the defendant has been compelled to incur expense, unless he will indemnify the defendant for costs.²³ So, again, unless all things were replaced in statu quo, as in the case of an amendment, by

¹ R. v. Bainton, Str. 1088. R. v. Bristow, Say. Rep. 138.

² R. v. Rigby, 8 C. & P. 770. The judge ordered that new indictments should be preferred at the assizes.

³ 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 146.

⁴ R. v. Orbell, 6 Mod. 42. R. v. Gibson, 11 Mod. 340. R. v. Hanson, Say. Rep. 229.

⁵ R. v. Crookes, 3 Burr. 1842. R. v. Beechcroft, 12 Mod. 255.

⁶ R. v. Wadsworth, 5 Mod. 13.

⁷ R. v. Johnson and others, 1 Wils. 325.

⁸ R. v. Bishop, Andr. 220. R. v. Sutton, 4 Burr. 2116. R. v. Wigg, cited, 1 Salk. 372. Id. R. v. Belton. R. v. Hood, Say. Rep. 161.

⁹ Cro. Car. 584.

¹⁰ R. v. Rollo, Say. Rep. 158.

¹¹ Stark. Cr. Pl. 303.

¹² R. v. Jocamb, Str. 953.

¹³ R. v. King, Id. 1268.

¹⁴ R. v. Savage and another, 1 Ld. R. 347.

¹⁵ R. v. Stratton and others, 1 Dougl. 239.

¹⁶ See the cases collected in 1 Ch. Burn, 458.

¹⁷ R. v. Buchanan, 1 Cox, 200.

¹⁸ R. v. Clarke, 1 Dowl. & R. 45.

¹⁹ R. v. Birmingham and Gloucester Railway Company, 1 Gale & D., 457.

²⁰ R. v. Hepper, Ry. & Moo. C. C. 210.

²¹ R. v. Smith, 2 Moo. & Rob. 109.

²² R. v. Fry, Leach, 111. R. v. Hannam, Id. 420, n. R. v. Ellis, Car. & M. 564. R. v. Dunn, 1 Car. & K. 730. See also R. v. Wynn, 2 East, 226, where the court enlarged the prosecutor's rule to quash a defective indictment, in order to give him time to prepare another.

²³ R. v. Moore, Str. 946. An indictment was removed by certiorari and the defendant paid costs for not going to trial, and then the prosecutor moved to quash. The court required him to pay costs.

which arrangement the defendant would receive his costs.¹ Nevertheless, the attorney-general has this advantage, that he may move to quash without costs.² And if the recognizance for the trial of an indictment removed by certiorari be forfeited, the court will not interfere for the defendant to quash.³ Two indictments were found against the same defendant: one for felony, and the second for misdemeanor. Both were removed, and it was moved to quash them upon affidavit that both related to the same transaction. But the court refused the application.⁴ One Dunn was indicted for perjury at the spring assizes, 1843. He then entered into a recognizance to try at the summer assizes, 1844. But another indictment was preferred against him at these assizes for the same offence, the former indictment having been found defective. The question arose, how this first indictment should be disposed of. Wightman, J., quashed it upon these conditions: That the prosecutor should pay to the defendant the costs of the traverse and recognizance, and that the defendant should proceed to trial on the second indictment without traversing. The defendant's right to have the first indictment disposed of before entering upon the second was admitted.⁵ A motion for leave to quash may be made on the last day of term.⁶ It is absolute in the first instance, even although the defendant has removed the indictment, and has neither appeared nor pleaded.⁷

The court of quarter sessions has the power of quashing indictments. And the Court of Queen's Bench, upon finding an indictment for forcible entry, assault, and riot, quashed at sessions, would not enter upon the question whether the indictment was properly quashed, but referred the defendants to their writ of errors. And it made no difference that the defendants had been held to bail twenty days before the sessions, and had given the prosecutor notice of their intention to appear there. For the statute 60 Geo. 3, and 1 Geo. 4, c. 8, s. 5, did not take away the common-law power of a criminal court to deal with an indictment properly before them.⁸

Striking out counts.] Where an assault was laid in twenty-one different ways, the court refused, after the finding by the grand jury, to strike out superfluous counts; but they added, that as the clerks in the Crown Office ought to draw the indictments, those officers might be punished for the vexation.⁹ There were counts for sedition, for attending a seditious meeting, and for riot. It was moved to quash the indictment, or put the prosecutor to his election. But the court refused to accede to the application.¹⁰

¹ R. v. Webb, 3 Burr. 1468. Sir Wm. Bl. 460. Stark. Cr. P. 300. S. P. R. v. Glenn, 3 B. & Ald. 373.

² R. v. Fountain, 1 Sid. 152, ex officio.

³ 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 146; 1 Salk. 380.

⁴ R. v. Stockley, 3 Q. B. 238.

⁵ R. v. Dunn, 1 Car. & K. 730.

⁶ R. v. Sheppard. Say. Rep. 65. See 3 Chit. Burn, 443, 444.

⁷ R. v. Stowel, 5 Jur. 1010. 1 Dowl. (N. S.), 320.

⁸ R. v. Wilson, 6 Q. B. 620. Nor would the court enter into the motives which actuated the court at sessions.

⁹ R. v. Pewtress, Str. 1026.

¹⁰ R. v. Fussell, 3 Cox, 291.

Demurrer.] Should the court refuse to quash the indictment, the prisoner may demur; but still, as substantive objections may be urged in arrest of judgment, or before the court of appeal, or by writ of error, it is not usual to press them by demurrer,¹ because there is a chance of acquittal upon the merits.²

The demurrer admits the truth of the facts alleged, so that if it be overruled, the defendant stands convicted. But, in felony, he may be allowed to plead over.³ If the demurrer be determined in favour of the defendant, he is discharged, or where the objection is one of form, the indictment is quashed.⁴ Nevertheless, it is not of right that the defendant, in cases not capital, demurs and pleads over in felony,⁵ whilst, even in misdemeanor, the court will, in its discretion, permit the respondent ouster.⁶ In fact, the prisoner may demur and plead over in felony at the same time.⁷ Even although in the absence of his counsel he may have pleaded first.⁸ Upon these demurrers issue is joined by the prosecutor.⁹ In general, however, after plea, without surprise or advice, the prisoner must not recur to a demurrer. He must not withdraw his plea of "Not guilty" for the sake of a mere technical objection.¹⁰ And even supposing that the judgment should be for the prisoner,¹¹ where the indictment does not sufficiently charge the facts, this judgment will be no bar to a subsequent indictment for the same felony.¹²

Upon the removal of an indictment by certiorari, the superior court will, upon demurrer, look into the whole record in order to see whether judgment can be given upon it.¹³ There were some good and some questionable counts in an indictment, and it was objected before plea, that the latter counts, although bad upon demurrer, might be aided after verdict; upon this, the court allowed the case to go on, with an understanding that the supposed bad counts should be taken as if demurred to.¹⁴

¹ With respect to joinders in demurrer in misdemeanors, see R. v. Johnson, 6 East, 583. R. v. Ryder, Id. 587. R. v. Broughton, Id.

² 4 Com. 334.

³ See Leach, 603; 2 Hawk. c. 31, ss. 1, 5, 6, 7; 4 Com. 334. R. v. Phelps, Car. & M. 180. It has, however, been made a question whether the pleading over is not confined to capital cases, so that a judgment against the prisoner upon demurrer in felony would operate conclusively as in misdemeanor. R. v. Bowen, 1 Car. & K. 501. As to the time for joining in demurrer, see 6 East, 583.

⁴ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 441.

⁵ R. v. Odgers, 2 Moo. & Rob. 479.

⁶ R. v. Birmingham and Gloucester Railway Company, 6 Jur. 804.

⁷ R. v. Adams, Car. & M. 299. See R. v. Phelps, Id. 180.

⁸ R. v. Purchase, Car. & M. 617.

⁹ Steph. 285.

¹⁰ R. v. Hunt, 3 Cox, 215, Maule, J.

¹¹ R. v. Odgers, ut supra.

¹² R. v. Richmond, 1 Car. & K. 240.

¹³ R. v. Fearnley, Leach, 425. As to a bill of discovery charging a felony, see Cartwright v. Green, Leach, 952.

¹⁴ R. v. Cordy and another, 3 C. & P. 425.

Reading over the indictment.] The prisoner is entitled to have the indictment slowly read over. Thus, an indictment for perjury tried as a nisi prius record, has been read at length.¹ So, in R. v. Dowling, indicted under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, (an Act for the better security of the crown and government,) the indictment was once slowly read over.²

Confession.] If the accused confesses the indictment, the plea which follows the indictment is, of course, not reached. Confessions, formerly discouraged by the courts,³ and not without reason, are now, with equal reason, received, when they bear the test of sincerity. But when fear, menace, duress, weakness, or ignorance appear, the judges will not allow the plea of "Guilty" to be recorded.⁴

Defence in formâ pauperis.] When a person is allowed to defend in formâ pauperis, he has counsel and a clerk assigned to him by the court, and he is not liable to pay office fees.⁵ Some ground or circumstance, however, must be alleged. As upon an affidavit that the defendant is not worth 5*l.*⁶ beyond his necessary apparel and tools of trade.⁷ And it is no objection that the recognizance of the defendant has been estreated,⁸ nor that the indictment was removed at his instance from the sessions.⁹ Nevertheless, there must be a cause in court, so that an attachment for contempt will not warrant this proceeding.¹⁰ And, in order to enable a prosecutor to avail himself of this course, there must be very special circumstances. The court will refuse to a prosecutor the licence which they really award to defendants.¹¹ Then, as to a personal plea of this nature, the prisoner must, in general, plead in his own person in cases of felony. Nevertheless, under special circumstances, the Court of Queen's Bench will permit a plea by a clerk in court for an indictment removed by certiorari, upon condition, however, that error should not be brought upon the plea so taken.¹²

¹ R. v. Newton, cor. Atcherley, Serjt., 1 Car. & K. 469.

² R. v. Dowling, 3 Cox, 509; and see R. v. Bernard, 1 Fost. & F. 240.

³ See Steph. 281.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 31, s. 2.

⁵ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 413; and see R. v. Page, 1 D. P. C. 507.

⁶ R. v. Page, ut supra.

⁷ R. v. Nicholson, 8 D. P. C. 422.

⁸ R. v. Wright and ux., Ca. Temp. Hardw. 253; and see Id. 211, 253, where the question of allowing this plea was very much discussed. At first, the court refused the application, but subsequently acceded.

⁹ R. v. Nicholson, ut supra. The defendant was a prisoner in a debtor's prison when the indictment was removed.

¹⁰ R. v. Pearson, 2 Burr. 1039.

¹¹ R. v. Clarke, 3 Burr. 1309.

¹² R. v. Penprase, 4 B. & Adol. 573. R. v. Blackburn, Id. Whether a writ of error in felony can be sued in formâ pauperis, qu.?

CHAPTER IX.

PLEAS.

Pleas.] The prisoner may plead as many pleas as he likes, provided they be not repugnant.¹

The ordinary plea, both in felony and misdemeanor, is "Not guilty."² Another plea is "Guilty," and it is said, that you may even then give anything in evidence which justifies the fact, or proves the party to be not guilty, for the entry is, "Non vult contendere cum Dominâ Regina, sed posuit se super gratiam curiæ." And it is not like the case of being found guilty by verdict.³ No special plea, however, can be allowed conjointly with "Guilty" or "Not guilty," because of the repugnancy.⁴

Withdrawal of plea.] The plea, as of "Guilty," cannot be withdrawn after sentence.⁵ And whether it be "Guilty" or "Not guilty," it cannot be withdrawn without leave of the judge. And the judge's discretion will not be discussed upon a case reserved.⁶ And although the plea be inadvertent, it must not be withdrawn in order to take a technical objection on demurrer.⁷ The prisoner having pleaded "Guilty," gave evidence against his fellow prisoner, and swore that he had himself uttered a forged instrument, but not knowing it to be forged. He was then allowed to withdraw his plea of "Guilty."⁸

To the jurisdiction.] A plea to the jurisdiction is rare, because when the objection appears on the face of the record, it may be taken advantage of by demurrer, in arrest of judgment, or by writ of error, and it is said, that under "Not guilty," it may at all events be called in aid.⁹ But Hawkins says, that this plea must be specially pleaded,¹⁰ i. e., where the blot is not upon the face of the record.

¹ 2 Hawk. c. 73, s. 128. Ashford v. Thornton, 1 B. & Ald. 405. See, however, R. v. Sheen, 2 C. & P. 634, Burrough, J., where the pleas were repugnant. R. v. Strahan, post.

² 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 1. And formerly, in felony, the prisoner was asked how he would be tried, but this is at an end. Steph. 291.

³ R. v. Templeman, 7 Mod. 40; 1 Salk. 55.

⁴ R. v. Strahan and others, 7 Cox, 85.

⁵ R. v. Sell, 9 C. & P. 346.

⁶ R. v. Brown, 17 L. J. M. C. 145; Den. 291. See the note, Id. 293.

⁷ S. C.

⁸ R. v. Clouter and another, 8 Cox, 237. But he was convicted, and the other acquitted.

⁹ Steph. 284.

¹⁰ 2 Hawk. c. 34.

Moreover, the court will not reject a prisoner's special plea for informality, but will assign counsel for the purpose of reducing it into form, and will postpone the trial accordingly.¹ The plea must disclose to the court some other jurisdiction under which the case may be tried.² And a conclusion that "the defendant prays judgment, and that he may not be compelled to answer," is good.³

The crown may demur or reply instantly, and if the plea be found against the defendant, the judgment is that he answer over. But in misdemeanor, it is a favour to allow of this pleading over, for in that case the decision, if unfavourable, operates as a conviction.⁴ Where a prisoner, having pleaded in chief, and being put upon his trial before a jury sworn, suddenly urged matter against the jurisdiction of the court, the attorney-general withdrew a juror, and suffered him to retract his plea. But the plea to the jurisdiction being overruled, and the prisoner being again put on his trial and convicted upon his plea of "Not guilty," it was urged in arrest of judgment that he could not be sentenced, inasmuch as the second arraignment was wrong, and he could not be twice placed in jeopardy for the same offence. And of this opinion was Wright, J.; but nine judges held, that as the prisoner had withdrawn his plea at his own prayer, and by his own consent, he had been legally convicted.⁵

In abatement.] A plea in abatement is that of misnomer, but since the statute which authorizes an immediate amendment,⁶ it seems almost idle to plead it. The judgment in treason and felony is that the defendant answer over. In misdemeanor it is final.⁷ The crown might reply and take issue, and the trial take place instantly before a jury of the same county.⁸ The plea must be verified by affidavit.⁹ Still, if bad, the court will not quash such a plea upon motion,¹⁰ nor will they suffer it to be amended.¹¹ Nevertheless, upon a capias utlagatum, it still seems that the defendant may come in and avoid the outlawry by a plea of misnomer.¹²

Pardon.] A plea of pardon is a plea in bar. If found against the defendant, he must, except in misdemeanor, answer over. If found against him in misdemeanor, the result is equivalent to a conviction.¹³ And this plea must be specially pleaded,¹⁴ unless there

¹ R. v. Chamberlain and another, 6 C. & P. 93.

² R. v. Hon. R. Johnson, 6 East, 583.

³ R. v. Shakespeare, 10 East, 83; R. v. Westly, Id. 85.

⁴ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 439.

⁵ R. v. Kinlock, 1 Wils. 157. The King, however, pardoned him.

⁶ 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 19.

⁷ R. v. Gibson, 8 East, 107.

See R. v. Earl of Devon, Comb. 49;

8 East, 111, cited.

8 Steph. 287.

9 R. v. Grainger, 3 Burr. 1617.

10 R. v. Cooke, 2 B. & C. 618.

11 S. P. Id. 871.

12 2 Hawk. c. 50, s. 10. See further, 1 Ch. Burn, tit. "Abatement."

13 1 Ch. Cr. L. 470.

14 2 Curw. Hawk. 551.

be an amnesty under a public Act of parliament, in which case the court will notice it ex officio.¹ Regularly, a pardon should be under the great seal,² and the letters patent should be set out with a profert.³ But indulgence as to time will be given by the court at their discretion.⁴ And by 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 13, the discharge out of custody in case of a free pardon, or the performance of the condition in the case of a conditional pardon, shall have the effect of a pardon under the great seal. But the statute does not extend to civil rights; it only releases the punishment, and it must be pleaded. By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 69,⁵ the King may pardon for any offence under that Act, although the party be imprisoned for nonpayment of money otherwise than to the crown.⁶ Nevertheless, the endurance of the punishment for felony has the effect of a pardon under the great seal, yet not so as to interfere with any subsequent conviction.⁷ With respect to the time of putting in this plea, it may be upon arraignment, after verdict, in arrest of judgment, or even in stay of execution,⁸ with this notification, that the party must plead it at the first opportunity. And thus, it will not be sufficient for a person who has got a pardon before arraignment, to plead not guilty, and then endeavour to avail himself of the pardon.⁹ Although where an act of grace passed between the plea of not guilty and the conviction, the court held, that the defendant should have the benefit of it, paying, however, to the prosecutor, his full costs out of pocket.¹⁰

The plea may be ore tenus after judgment, and so likewise may be a demurrer to it.¹¹ There may be some grounds on the part of the crown for resisting this plea. There are also general objections as well as objections to the record. Of the first description, are:—An impeachment by the commons in parliament.¹² Committing a person to prison out of the realm, which incurs a præmunire.¹³ A common nuisance continuing. An offence against a penal statute, commenced by a private informer. But after the determination of the impeachment the pardon may issue, and, in the case of a nuisance, the fine may be subsequently remitted.¹⁴

Then, with respect to the record, a variance between the record of attain and the charter of pardon will be fatal.¹⁵ So the particular conviction or attainder upon which the pardon is claimed, must be carefully set out. For a pardon of all felonies will not include a conviction on attainder, nor a piracy.¹⁶ A fortiori, a ¹ 2 Hawk. c. 37.

² 2 Hawk. c. 37, s. 58. R. v. Gully, Leach, 98.

³ Steph. 290.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 37, s. 66.

⁵ Gough v. Davies, 2 Kay & J. 623; 25 L. J. Ch. 677.

⁶ To a party aggrieved, for example. The same, 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 35.

⁷ 9 Geo. 4, c. 32, s. 3.

⁸ Steph. 290.

⁹ 2 Hawk. c. 37, s. 67.

¹⁰ R. v. Haines, Leach, 40. Information for mayhem.

¹¹ R. v. Garside, 2 Ad. & El. 266; 4 Nev. & M. 33.

¹² 12 & 13 Will. 3, c. 2.

¹³ 31 Car. 2, c. 2, s. 12.

¹⁴ Steph. 334, 335.

¹⁵ 2 Hawk. c. 37, s. 66.

¹⁶ 13 Ric. 2. st. 2, c. 1; confirmed as to the first part, which includes this, by 16 Ric. 2, c. 6, pardon for felony in 1842, specially granted, will not bar an indictment for horse-stealing in 1841, for the felonies were distinct.¹

However, if there be no repugnance, any apparent difference on the record may be reconciled by proper averments.² And even in the absence of such averments, the court may give time, either to perfect the plea, or purchase a better pardon.³ So, where a proclamation promised a pardon, although the court could not receive this as a plea of pardon, they stayed execution in order to enable the prisoner to apply for a pardon according to the terms of the proclamation.⁴ In former days the law enabled justices to remand the prisoner who pleaded a pardon, till he should enter into a recognizance for a term not exceeding seven years,⁵ but this Act was not usually put in force, and was repealed by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 64.

Auterfois acquit.] The next pleas which will occupy our attention are those of auterfois acquit, auterfois convict, and auterfois attain. The last plea, however, is of no avail, unless the attainder be for the same offence as that charged in the indictment.⁶

*Auterfois acquit*⁷ alleges that the defendant was indicted on a former occasion for the same offence, and acquitted, and this must be proved by the record.⁸ Indeed the statute 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 28, ordains, that whether the plea be auterfois convict, or auterfois acquit, it shall be sufficient for the defendant to state that he has been lawfully convicted or acquitted of the offence charged in the indictment. And, therefore, by a jury. A judgment reversed on error without a jury does not warrant a plea of auterfois acquit.⁹ And, although this mode of stating a prior acquittal is not always successful, the test seems to be, that if the evidence brought forward on the second indictment would have sufficed to have convicted the prisoner on the first, the plea must avail.¹⁰ As where goods belonged to John Wilson, but in the indictment he was called William Carr. The judge having directed an acquittal, a second indictment was preferred, laying the goods in the right name, upon which a plea of auterfois acquit was offered, and, although Platt, B., doubted at first, he yielded to the authority of Hawkins,¹¹ and held the plea good.¹² It is no matter that the proper evidence was not brought forward on the first trial, for that is the very question which determines the validity or invalidity of the plea.¹³ And thus it is that an acquittal upon an insufficient which, though it may be obsolete, is not repealed.

¹ R. v. Harrod, 2 Cox, 242.

² 2 Hawk. c. 37, s. 66.

³ Id.

⁴ R. v. Garside, 2 Ad. & El. 266; 4 Nev. & M. 33.

⁵ 5 Wm. & M. c. 13.

⁶ 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 4; Steph. 290.

⁷ See R. v. Parry, 7 C. & P. 836; Leach, 711, 712. R. v. Wildey,

1 M. & S. 189; 2 Hawk. c. 35, s. 2; Id. c. 39, s. 13.

⁸ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 452.

⁹ R. v. Drury, 3 Car. & K. 193. See S. C. post.

¹⁰ And vice versa. R. v. Pedley, Leach, 720.

¹¹ 2 Hawk. c. 35, s. 3.

¹² R. v. Austin, 2 Cox, 59.

¹³ R. v. Birchenough, 1 Moo. C. C. 477.

indictment is no bar to a second indictment for the same offence. And, by parity of reasoning, an acquittal abroad, by a competent jurisdiction, purges any future liability, for there the evidence necessary to the proof of the case might have been brought forward.¹ An acquittal for larceny in the county where the goods are found may be pleaded in bar to an indictment for the same offence in the county where they were taken.² The jurat of an affidavit is not conclusive as to the place of swearing, and, therefore, in perjury, the same evidence as to the real place might have been given upon the first indictment, and, hence, the defendant's plea of auterfois acquit was allowed in a case where he was charged twice in Middlesex for the same perjury.³ An acquittal for murder will repel a charge for manslaughter, and vice versâ.⁴ And an acquittal for murder is an answer to a charge upon the coroner to question, and hence arises the usage of arraigining the prisoner upon both at once.⁵ A plea of acquittal upon an indictment for administering poison to a child was held good against a charge of poisoning the same child, although there were some variances in laying it, inasmuch as in substance and effect the indictment was similar.⁶ Four were for rape upon counts charging each as principal and the rest as accessories; upon their acquittal, it was proposed to try three of them on the next day for a rape upon the same woman. To this indictment, which, omitting the fourth prisoner, was the same as the other, there was a plea of auterfois acquit. The prosecutor replied, that the offences were different. The prisoner's counsel having begun upon this issue, put in the commitment and the former indictment, and the minutes of the former acquittal written on the indictment, upon which the jury found that the offences were the same, and it was held that the verdict was final, and the prisoners were discharged.⁷ But auterfois acquit was considered to be of no avail in the following instances, where the indictment was laid in the wrong county in the first instance.⁸ Where a crime charged as a felony was a misdemeanor, and so vice versâ,⁹ as if a party be acquitted of a larceny, and be then charged for the same act upon an indictment for obtaining money and goods by false pretences.¹⁰ Strictly speaking, auterfois acquit will not help an insolvent debtor who has been acquitted for omitting certain goods in his schedule upon an indictment charging him with omitting those goods and others. In point of law, a prosecutor might prefer an indictment for each omission, but the course would not be favoured.¹¹ And it will not answer an indictment for stealing other goods on ¹ 3 Keb. 785. R. v. Hutchinson, Leach, 135, n. He was acquitted of a murder in Portugal, and produced an exemplification of the record here.

² 2 Hawk. c. 35, s. 4.

³ R. v. Emden, 9 East, 437.

⁴ R. v. Wigges, 4 Rep. 45.

⁵ R. v. Culliford, 1 Salk. 382.

⁶ R. v. Clark, 1 Br. & Bing. 473.

⁷ R. v. Parry and others, 7 C. & P. 836. See 8 Ad. & El. 482.

⁸ 2 Hawk. c. 35, ss. 3, 4.

⁹ Id. s. 5.

¹⁰ R. v. Henderson and another, 2 Moo. C. C. 192.

¹¹ R. v. Champneys, 2 Moo. & Rob. 26.

the same day.¹ Where the party is acquitted as accessory, whereas he should have been charged as principal, the plea is no bar.² Though formerly, where the prisoner was acquitted as principal, he could not, subsequently, be charged as accessory before, though he might have been accessory after the fact.³ But, more recently, where one was acquitted of aiding and abetting in a murder, but convicted upon a second indictment as accessory before the fact, the judges held the conviction right.⁴ However, upon a verdict of "Not guilty," in a case of murder, upon proof of distinct and independent assaults, some of which did not conduce to the death, the plea of auterfois acquit was rejected by a majority of the judges.⁵

Auterfois acquit of a burglary actually committed cannot be pleaded to a charge of burglary with intent to commit felony. They are distinct offences.⁶ Yet, if one be acquitted of murder committed during a burglary, and he be then charged with burglary accompanied with violence, auterfois acquit will cover that part of the charge which relates to the violence, although the prisoner may still be convicted of the simple burglary.⁷ John Coogan was acquitted upon a charge of forging a will, beginning, "I, James Gibson, &c.;" it was held, that he could not substantiate his plea of auterfois acquit to a subsequent indictment, beginning, "Jas. Gibson, &c."⁸ Nor will an acquittal for stabbing, with intent to do grievous bodily harm, be available against an indictment for an assault, although the accused might have been convicted of an assault under 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 1.⁹ And auterfois acquit, pleaded to an indictment for an assault with intent, &c., will be rejected if the acquittal was for the rape itself.¹⁰ So upon a charge of administering poison, where the poisoner had been acquitted of murder with reference to the same fact, a plea by him of auterfois acquit was rejected, although he urged the statute 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9, for the attempt under that clause would only be a misdemeanor, whereas this charge amounted to felony.¹¹

In considering a plea of auterfois acquit the court will not go beyond the record. As where the indictment laid the goods incorrectly

¹ Gouldsb. 132.

² 2 Hawk. c. 35, s. 11.

³ R. v. Roberts, Kel. 25. See Post. 360, 362.

⁴ R. v. Birchenough, 1 Moo. C. C. 477; S. C. 7 C. & P. 575, nom. R. v. Plant. But the statute has settled all these points.

⁵ R. v. R. & S. Bird, 20 L. J. M. C. 70; Den. & P. 94. By eight judges against six.

The indictment was for wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm. Plea, auterfois acquit. For the conviction:—Pollock, C. B.;

Patteson; Coleridge; Wightman; Creswell; Erle; Williams; Talfourd, JJ.—Against: Lord Campbell, C. J.; Jervis, C. J.; Parker, B.; Alderson, B.; Maule, J.; Martin, B.

⁶ R. v. Vandercomb and another, Leach, 708; East, P. C. 519; overruling R. v. Turner, 1 Sid. 171, and Jones v. Bever, Kel. 52.

⁷ R. v. Gould, 9 C. & P. 364.

⁸ R. v. Coogan, Leach, 448; see R. v. Vaux, 4 Rep. 39.

⁹ R. v. Gisson, 2 Car. & K. 781.

¹⁰ Id.

¹¹ R. v. Connell, 6 Cox, 178.

in A., upon which a new bill was preferred, but, by possibility, the original indictment might have been amended by the judge. Here the court declined to go further than the record of acquittal, holding that the prisoner had never been in jeopardy, and they rejected the plea.¹ An indictment charging a prisoner singly as a receiver might be met by a plea of aut. acq., stating that he had been previously tried with others for the same offence, although one of those others was convicted. For if the plea were not a bar, he might be convicted of the very offence committed jointly with that other person, and of which the latter was convicted.² A plea of auter. acquit of an offence committed in the reign of Geo. 3 will not apply to a charge made in the reign of Geo. 4, notwithstanding an averment of identity with respect to the offence.³

Nevertheless, a variance between the indictment and the record may be helped by proper averments; as with reference to the description of the prisoner, time, and place, &c.⁴ And further, it has been said, that the defendant must plead over to the felony at the same time when he says, Auter. acquit,⁵ and that in the event of the special plea being found against him, his plea of "Not guilty" will still avail.⁶ Yet these are distinct issues, and the jury could not be charged with both at once; for if the first finding were for the prisoner, it would, of itself, have been a bar.⁷ It may be added, that the trial of this issue is always by a jury, and the consequence of an adverse finding is, that the prisoner answer over, but in misdemeanor it is final.⁸

It seems that the plea may still be in writing, and in that case it would appear that the replication also must be written.⁹ The replication usually disputes the fact of the acquittal.¹⁰ Formerly, instead of a trial, it was competent for the crown to demur, and so it was in Vandercomb and Abbott's case.¹¹ And, in misdemeanor, in a case where the demurrer was sustained, final judgment was given against the defendant,¹² but the Act referred to has dispensed with these technicalities.

The replication or counterplea needs not to set out the tenor of the indictment. Defects in the original indictment are matters of error which are not to be taken advantage of in the counterplea.¹³ The prisoner might, again, reply to the counterplea, and time was given him for the purpose, as in the case of the plea itself.¹⁴ It seems that the prisoner should have averred that he had pleaded not guilty to the same indictment, and that the record of acquittal should have been referred to or vouched.¹⁵

¹ R. v. Green, 26 L. J. M. C. 17 ;
Dears. & B. 113.

² R. v. Dann, 1 Moo. C. C.
424.

³ R. v. Taylor, 3 B. & C. 502.

⁴ 1 Hawk. c. 35, s. 3.

⁵ Leach, 712, 713.

⁶ R. v. Welch, Car. Cr. L. 56.

⁷ R. v. Roche, Leach, 134.

⁸ Steph. 289.

⁹ Steph. 289.

¹⁰ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 461.

¹¹ Leach, 708.

¹² 3 B. & C. 502.

¹³ R. v. Scott, Leach, 401.

¹⁴ R. v. Dean, Id. 476.

¹⁵ R. v. Hedgcock, 4 Ch. Cr. L.
530.

Auterfois convict.] Auterfois convict states, that the prisoner has been already convicted of the offence charged against him.¹

This plea must be in writing.² An erroneous judgment is no bar, as that the prisoner was sentenced to transportation for ten instead of seven years.³ Such a plea can only be proved by the record.⁴ A plea of aut. conv. stated the proceedings up to conviction to have taken place at a session of the peace duly holden by adjournment on Friday the 5th of July. The record stated that the indictment was found at a session holden on the 1st of July, and adjourned till the 2nd, and that the court re-assembled on the 4th, &c. (not proceeding with adjournment), and then adjourned to the 5th, when the prisoner was convicted. This plea was held bad, because, from want of an adjournment from the 2nd to the 4th, the proceedings were coram non judice, and a nullity.⁵ If there be a difference in a second indictment, as "part" instead of "part or parts," aut. conv. cannot be sustained.⁶

If a verdict should pass for the prisoner upon this issue, it cannot, whatever be its demerits, be set aside. The rule applies both to aut. acq. and aut. convict. As where the jury found for the prisoners contrary to the opinion of the judge upon a plea of aut. acq., and without sufficient evidence of the identity of the offence. Here the judges being requested to say, whether there was any evidence to justify and support the verdict, and if not, whether such verdict was final and operated as a bar to further proceedings by the crown upon the second indictment, expressed at once their opinion that they were not a court of appeal, and that they could do nothing but discharge the prisoners.⁷ A plea of auter. convict before justices for an assault, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, was held to be a bar to an indictment for feloniously stabbing, the transaction being the same.⁸ But if two articles belonging to the same person be stolen at the same time, aut. conv. cannot be pleaded as to one which was not the subject of the first indictment, although the prosecution for the second at a subsequent assize ought not, as it seems, to be proceeded with.⁹

The court will assign counsel to put an informal plea of aut. conv. into a proper shape, and will give time to prepare it.¹⁰

Highways and bridges.] Both a parish and a private person may plead the general issue to indictments for the non-repair of highways or bridges, but such a plea goes only to the repair or non-repair. If the parish would discharge itself, it must plead

¹ 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 28; Under the old law, see R. v. Scott, Leach, 401.

² R. v. Clarke, 1 Fost. & F. 654.

³ R. v. Drury, 3 Cox, 544.

⁴ R. v. Bowman, 6 C. & P. 101.

⁵ R. v. Bowman, ut supra.

⁶ R. v. Phillips, 1 Jur. 427. Coining.

⁷ R. v. Lea and others, 2 Moo. C. C. 9.

⁸ R. v. Walker, 2 Moo. & Rob. 446. R. v. Stanton and others, 5 Cox, 324, Erle, J.

⁹ R. v. Brettel, Car. & M. 609.

¹⁰ R. v. Chamberlain, 6 Cox, 93.

prescription, or ratione venune. And although a private person may, under the circumstances, show his non-liability, yet if he choose to plead specially, he must show in particular who ought to repair, adding a traverse of his non-liability. Where, however, an Act of parliament throws the burden on others than the parish, a plea of not guilty will suffice.¹

Puis darrein continuance.] A plea puis darrein continuance, embraces matters arising after the continuance, but it must be pleaded in time, and may be set aside if not so tendered. Thus, a plea pleaded after the first day of Michaelmas Term, and entitled of the term generally under a continuance from Trinity Term to the first day of Michaelmas Term, is not good, and the court, upon that occasion, ordered that it should be taken off the file.² An instance of this plea was where the judge discharged the jury.³

Particulars.] The defendant is entitled to have the particulars of the specific charges against him where there is a general count. This application will be granted upon proper affidavits; as in embezzlement,⁴ nuisance,⁵ conspiracy.⁶ In an indictment for conspiracy eight counts set out particular charges, and the ninth was general. The defendant was held entitled to particulars of the specific charges intended to be relied on in support of the general count.⁷ Proper affidavits are necessary to show the facts, but it does not seem to be the practice to require an affidavit that the defendant does not know on what charges the prosecutor means to rely.⁸

Similiter.] It is enacted by 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 21, that no judgment after verdict shall (amongst other things) be stayed or reversed for want of a similiter.

¹ 3 Camp. 222.

² Lyttleton v. Cross, 3 B. & C. 317.

³ R. v. Newton, 3 Car. & K. 85; 13 Q. B. 716; 18 L. J. M. C. 201. It was not actually put in, as the specific facts required appeared on the record without it. "An entry on the record in a general form may be sufficient to warrant the remand of the prisoner, and yet the prisoner may want certain specific facts to appear on the record in order to raise some question hereafter." 3 Car. & K. 89. Conway v. Reg. (in error), 7 Irish Law Rep. 149, cited, 2 Car. & K. 87, note (c). Here the necessity for discharging the jury did not appear on the record, and although judgment was, in the first instance, given for the crown, that judgment was reversed by the Court of Queen's Bench. Now, in R. v. Newton the necessity did exist, and it appeared on the record, inasmuch as Coltman, J., was obliged to go to the Hereford assizes.

⁴ R. v. Hodgson, 3 C. & P. 422. R. v. Bootyman, 5 C. & P. 300.

⁵ R. v. Curwood, 3 Ad. & El. 815.

⁶ R. v. Hamilton and others, 7 C. & P. 448.

⁷ R. v. Alleyne and others, Dears. 32, n. in Q. B. Mich. 1851, cited there.

⁸ R. v. Probert and others, Id. 32, n.

CHAPTER X.

OF CRIMINAL AND OTHER INFORMATIONS.

Informations.] The subject of informations, which differ but little from indictments,¹ remains to be considered. Informations are—1. On the complaint or relation of some private person, and these are not granted without the leave of the Court of Queen's Bench.² 2. Upon penal statutes, in which case, where half the penalty goes to the informer and half to the Queen, they are called qui tam. 3. Ex officio, by the attorney-general, or, in case of a vacancy, by the solicitor-general, for libels on the government, offences calculated to endanger the crown, offences against public morals, and nuisances. 4. In the nature of quo warranto, to try the right to a franchise or office, which last is usually considered to be rather a civil than a criminal proceeding,³ so much so, that it is excepted from the clauses of the Act 60 Geo. 3 and 1 Geo. 4, c. 4.⁴ It follows that no information will lie for a capital crime, nor for misprision of treason.⁵

The first species of information is granted upon affidavits disclosing all the facts of the case.⁶ But the courts watch these cases with jealousy, and will not permit the rule to go upon light or trivial grounds.

Informations have been granted for the following amongst other causes:—For bribery;⁷ cheating and frauds;⁸ conspiracies, whether with intent to defraud or otherwise;⁹ extortion;¹⁰ malversa-

¹ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 4. See the statute 60 Geo. 3 & 1 Geo. 4, c. 4.

² 4 & 5 Wm. & M. c. 18, ss. 2, 6.

³ Steph. 269, 271.

⁴ Sect. 10.

⁵ 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 3.

⁶ 4 Com. 312, n. 15, by Ryland.

⁷ R. v. Mead, 4 Jur. 1014. R. v. Mayor of Tiverton, 8 Mod. 186. Even although the complainant be equally culpable. Indeed, an information will then go against him. Id. R. v. Taylor, 12 Mod. 314. R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2494.

⁸ R. v. Parris and others, 1 Sid. 431. Anon. 7 Mod. 40. R. v.

Worrall, Skin. 108. R. v. Knight, 1 Salk. 375. R. v. Hatcher, 12 Mod. 355. R. v. Pargiter, Skin. 109. — v. Deer, 12 Mod. 325. R. v. Hathaway, Id. 556. Anon. Id. 495. Pocock v. Thornicroft, Id. 454.

⁹ Anon. 12 Mod. 248. R. v. Sterling and others, 1 Lev. 125; R. v. Thorp, Comb. 456; 5 Mod. 218, 221. R. v. Blackie and another, 7 Mod. 39. R. v. Delaval and others, 3 Burr. 1434. R. v. Pierson and others, Andr. 310.

¹⁰ R. v. Roberts, Carth. 226; 1 Show. 389; Holt's Ca. 363.

tions in office;¹ riot,² and breach of the peace;³ nuisance⁴; a rescous or rescue;⁵ a challenge to fight.⁶ However, if the prosecutor be the first sender of the challenge, the court will leave him to his ordinary remedy,⁷ although the challenge may be sent by the prosecutor to a third person connected with the party against whom he moved, and into a foreign country, so that no intention appeared to break the peace here.⁸ Assault,⁹ although the prosecutor had given his assailant into custody.¹⁰ The rule, however, was refused upon the granting of a warrant at his instance.¹¹

Libel¹² and slander.¹³ But, as in the case of challenges, the libellous attack must not appear on the other side, for, if so, the prosecutor will be left to the common remedy.¹⁴ A libel reflecting upon a verdict was inserted in a newspaper. A juror animadverted upon this libel, and sent copies of his letter to the other jurors, who had not expressed any disapprobation. It, moreover, appeared, that the jury might have expressed their dissent from the letter before its publication, which was signed by the foreman "for self and fellows." Under these circumstances, the court would not grant a criminal information, either on behalf of the foreman or of the jury.¹⁵ So where the prosecutor put himself into communication with the defendant in order to retort upon him, or obtain redress, the court would not interfere.¹⁶ Indeed, the court will not encourage retaliation,¹⁷ and if there be any doubt the court will not interfere. As where a magistrate assaulted an attorney who had previously conducted some proceedings against

¹ R. v. Stukely, 12 Mod. 493. R. v. Borough of Abingdon, Id. 308. R. v. Chapman, 6 Mod. 152. R. v. Norman, 1 Wils. 7. R. v. Moravia, 5 Vin. Suppl. 97; 14 Vin. Ab. 411, pl. 29.

² R. v. Abraham and others, Holt's Ca. 361; Comb. 141. R. v. Prynn, 5 Mod. 459. R. v. Corporation of Bewdly, Holt's Ca. 353.

³ R. v. Sir J. Knight, 3 Mod. 117. R. v. Chaloner, 12 Mod. 377.

⁴ R. v. Clark, 12 Mod. 615; Anon. Id. 398. R. v. Taylor, [Keeping gunpowder,] Str. 1167.

⁵ R. v. Jourdan, 14 Vin. Ab. 412, pl. 38; 12 Mod. 256. R. v. Tracy, Id. 556.

⁶ R. v. Dove, Comb. 477. R. v. Chappel, 1 Burr. 402. R. v. Younghusband, 4 Nev. & M. 850. C. delivered a message as from A. The court granted the rule against C., but not against A.

⁷ R. v. Hankey, 1 Burr. 316. R. v. Larrieu, 7 Ad. & El. 277.

⁸ R. v. Larrieu, ut supra.

⁹ R. v. Gwilt, 11 Ad. & El. 587; 8 D. P. C. 476. R. v. Sir C. Holloway, 8 Mod. 283.

¹⁰ R. v. Gwilt, ut supra.

¹¹ Ex parte gent. one, &c. 4 Ad. & El. 576, n.

¹² R. v. Williams, Comb. 18. R. v. Sanders, Tho. Raym. 201. R. v. Staples, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 294; Andr. 228. R. v. Waite, 1 Wils. 22. R. v. Benfield and another, 2 Burr. 980. R. v. Jolliffe, 4 T. R. 284.

¹³ R. v. Darby, Carth. 14. And a refusal to grant such an information is no bar to an action for the same cause. Wakley v. Cooke, 11 Jur. 377.

¹⁴ R. v. Nottingham Journal, 9 D. P. C. 1042.

¹⁵ R. v. Lawson, 1 Q. B. 486; 1 Gale & D. 15.

¹⁶ Ex parte Beauclerk, 7 Jur. 373.

¹⁷ See R. v. Peach and others, 1 Burr. 548. And post, where the point is further examined.

him for an assault. It was suggested, that this assault had been committed from motives of revenge, but the court declined to grant the extraordinary remedy.¹ So, in a similar case, where a magistrate was concerned in an assault upon an attorney, the court decided in like manner, taking the distinction that the assault had not been committed by the defendant qua magistrate.² Certain resolutions were agreed to at a public vestry. G. was the chairman. They imputed sacrilege and felony to the clergyman with reference to some stones. The rector took steps to exculpate himself, and succeeded. A second meeting was called, when the imputation was withdrawn. But the rector moved for an information against G. The court said, that the whole parish might be indicted if they were to sanction the rule, and it was refused.³

An information will lie for disturbing a leet,⁴ but not for arresting a juror at the leet.⁵

It will lie against foreigners for hiring a boat in order to go abroad to assist the King's enemies.⁶ For writing a seditious letter.⁷ For kidnapping.⁸ For printing an obscene book.⁹ For an illegal impressment.¹⁰ For refusing leave to the coroner to come aboard a ship in order to take an inquisition.¹¹ For not taking oaths and acting as an alderman.¹² But, in such a case, too long a delay will favour the defendant, and, at all events, the town clerk is not the proper person to prosecute for neglect, because he ought to have been the first to discover the error.¹³ Again, for refusing the office of sheriff.¹⁴ But not that of common councilman, because of the byelaw.¹⁵

Informations on behalf of and against magistrates have been already adverted to.¹⁶ They deserve, however, a separate mention. If a magistrate neglects his duty in any particular, he is liable, as if he refuse to administer an oath where an Act requires it.¹⁷ So if he send a man to prison without due cause,¹⁸ or deny a warrant when it should be granted. But the court will make allowances for the justice, and if the prosecutor's intent be malicious, and with a tendency to hurt and disgrace the justice, the court will make the former pay the costs.¹⁹

¹ R. v. Arrowsmith, 2 Dowl. (N. S.), 704.

² Ex parte Lee, 7 Jur. 441.

³ Ex parte Doveton, 7 Cox, 16.

⁴ Anon. Latch. 198.

⁵ Id.

⁶ R. v. Cowper and others, Skin. 637; 5 Mod. 206.

⁷ R. v. Laurence, 12 Mod. 311.

⁸ R. v. Willmore, Skin. 47.

⁹ R. v. Curl, Str. 788; 1 Barnard, K. B. 29.

¹⁰ R. v. Drew, Str. 404.

¹¹ R. v. Soleguard, Andr. 231; Str. 1097.

¹² R. v. Haines, Skin. 583.

¹³ R. v. Mayor and Burgesses of Malmesbury, 8 Mod. 55.

¹⁴ R. v. Larwood, 1 Salk. 167.

¹⁵ R. v. Hungerford, 11 Mod. 142. But a mandamus would have been granted. See Anon. Skin. 114.

¹⁶ Supra.

¹⁷ Smith v. Langham, Skin. 60. R. v. Newton, Str. 413.

¹⁸ R. v. Okey, 8 Mod. 45. R. v. Jones, 1 Wils. 7.

¹⁹ R. v. Nicholls, 8 Mod. 337. R. v. Thomas, 1 Jur. 984.

An information will lie against a justice for a voluntary absence from the sessions, it not being competent to hold such sessions without him.¹ Justices held a petty sessions to search for vagrants. One confessed himself settled at A. They removed him thither. He returned the same day, when one of the justices present at the sessions convicted him without summons or oath. The court granted an information.² So it is if bail be improperly refused. But the impropriety does not consist in an erroneous judgment, but in acting from corrupt motives, as partiality, resentment, &c.³ Or from manifest misconduct, as the rejection of undoubtedly good bail on the score of political opinions. A rule was granted on this latter ground in a case of misdemeanor.⁴ Of course, it will be at the magistrate's peril if he should dissuade persons from becoming bail.⁵ So, under the old poor law, if justices removed a sick person to the endangering of his health.⁶ But not for the bonâ fide exercise of a legal right, whatever the mistake may be.⁷ Nor for the omission to administer an oath, or to give a caution to a dying man before the taking of his examination, nor for a mere display of temper.⁸ A county-court judge asked a defendant if he was ready to pay. The defendant was entering into an explanation of his circumstances when the judge ordered his immediate committal, but the court would not grant an information.⁹

On the other hand, in favour of magistrates, where the justice is the person aggrieved, it by no means follows that this criminal process is allowed. For words, as "He is an old rogue for sending his warrant for me." But the court thought that the speaker of them deserved to be bound to his good behaviour.¹⁰ The defendant called a magistrate a liar, and accused him of misconduct, because he had absented himself from an election of clerk to the magistrates, and he even threatened to repeat such conduct, but the court declined to interfere unless an intention to provoke a breach of peace could be detected.¹¹ Words unwritten, not spoken whilst the justice was acting, although they might have imputed malversation, fell within the same rule.¹² The distinction obtains, if words of such a nature or of an indecorous character are addressed to the justice when he is discharging his duty.¹³

Upon a dispute with a corporation concerning the taking of a tax from persons living out of the corporation as a contribution towards the building of a bridge, the court granted an information

¹ R. v. Fox, Str. 21.

² 5 Supp. to Viner, 98, pl. 8.

³ Fear or favour. Re Fentiman, 2 Ad. & El. 127; 4 Nev. & M. 128.

⁴ R. v. Badger, 6 Jur. 994. R. v. Saunders, 2 Cox, 249.

⁵ R. v. Saunders, ut supra.

⁶ Corruptly. R. v. Edwards, 8 Mod. 326.

⁷ R. v. Blurton, 8 Jur. 33.

⁸ R. v. Barton, 4 Cox, 353.

⁹ Anon. in re, 16 Jur. 995.

¹⁰ R. v. Lee, 12 Mod. 514. But an indictment lay, Id. R. v. Pocock, Str. 1157.

¹¹ Chapman, ex parte, 4 Ad. & El. 773. Duke of Marlborough, ex parte, 5 Q. B. 955; Dav. & M. 720.

¹² Chapman, ex parte, ut supra.

¹³ Ex parte Mayor of Great Yarmouth, 1 Cox, 122.

upon the ground of its being the more convenient method of trying the question.¹

The remedy for inducing paupers to remove to another parish is by indictment, not information.²

However, if overseers move a person whose condition will not allow of the removal, the information will be granted.³

Moreover, an information qui tam, or by the attorney-general, will lie for disobedience to an Act of parliament.⁴ But the statute to which the information applies must be properly recited.⁵ And it is to be observed, that the cases quoted respect statutes which give a penalty to the informer, or which the attorney-general may prosecute. For there cannot be an information of this kind where a statute barely prohibits the doing of any act.⁶

Generally speaking, "information lies for any offence against the public good, or against the first and obvious principles of common honesty."⁷ Again, informations will not be granted where a civil suit is depending for the same cause.⁸ And it is not an answer that the prosecutor is willing and offers to discontinue the action, as for an assault.⁹ But as, in the case of assault just referred to, the defendant thought fit to use violent language towards the prosecutor, the court bound him to his good behaviour.¹⁰

Mode of proceeding on either side.] In the case of a justice the court will not grant the information until they have the conviction before them,¹¹ nor unless it has been quashed.¹² Nor at the suit of the attorney-general, because he may file it ex officio.¹³

A private individual cannot move in person for a criminal information. It must be made by the law officers, or by a barrister.¹⁴ And the court refused an information against the proprietor of a newspaper for articles in his journal tending to encourage volunteering to serve in a foreign legion.¹⁵ The grounds for an information may be sufficient, and yet the proceedings may be imperfect, or the prosecutor may have so conducted himself as to preclude him from this remedy.

¹ R. v. Mayor of Tenterden, 8 Mod. 114. See also R. v. The Surgeons' Company, 1 Salk. 374.

² R. v. Jennings, 2 Dowl. & L. 741. R. v. Overseers of Storwood, 9 Jur. 448.

³ R. v. Edwards, 8 Mod. 326.

⁴ Anon. Skin. 110. Leonard v. Beech. R. v. Galle, Carth. 465; 1 Salk. 372; Holt, Ca. 363. R. v. Lord Stafford, Skin. 52.

⁵ R. v. Dove, Comb. 477.

⁶ R. v. Crofton, 1 Ventr. 63.

⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 86, s. 1.

⁸ R. v. Phillips and others, Ca. Temp. Hard. 241.

⁹ R. v. O'Gorman Mahon, 4 Ad. & El. 575.

¹⁰ 5 Ad. & El. ut supra.

¹¹ R. v. Heber, Str. 915.

¹² Cowp. 645, Aston, J.

¹³ R. v. Phillips and others, 3 Burr. 1564. R. v. Philipps, 4 Burr. 2089; 2 Hawk. c. 26.

¹⁴ R. v. JJ. of Lancashire, 1 Ch. Rep. 602.

¹⁵ Crawshay, ex parte, 8 Cox, 356.

The mode of proceeding varies in a slight degree upon different occasions. In libel, the affidavit denies the charge,¹ and, usually, the very words of the charge.² At all events, the applicant must disconnect himself from the subject-matter of the libel.³ And slanderous words in the affidavit will be fatal to the applicant.⁴ Yet, if other persons be attacked, the court will not forbear to grant the information, although the character of the principal party attacked be impeached upon showing cause.⁵ In libel, the publication must be sworn to, and it is not sufficient if the affidavits on the other side admit such publication.⁶ It is no objection that there are two distinct libels on two persons respectively, as on a son and daughter, with intent to disturb the father and them.⁷ Again, where the complaint is against a magistrate for an improper conviction, there must be an exculpatory affidavit on the magistrate's part, denying the charge.⁸ And a magistrate must have six days' notice. It is not enough that six days have elapsed between the notice and the application, if the notice contemplates an earlier application.⁹ And it makes no difference, as to notice, that other misconduct is charged against the justice in another capacity.¹⁰

Nevertheless, the rule concerning exculpatory affidavits must be read with this modification. If the person libelled is abroad or at a great distance, or is charged generally with misconduct, as with treason or theft, or with criminal language in parliament, the court will not require the affidavit.¹¹ "It would be absurd to require a prosecutor to swear that he was not a traitor or a thief."¹²

In libel, the affidavit upon which the information was founded described the defendant, the publisher of a newspaper, differently from the form contained in the affidavit at the stamp office, and although the rule had been twice enlarged, the court discharged it, and would not allow time to amend.¹³ There must be a correspondence in those particulars, and it extends to every other description.¹⁴

In libel, although all matters correspond according to the pro-

¹ R. v. Miles, Dougl. 284. R. v. Haswell and another, Id. 387, and post.

² Steph. 269.

³ R. v. Taylor, 1 Jur. 53.

⁴ R. v. Byrne, 2 Nev. & P. 152.

⁵ R. v. Gregory, 1 Per. & D. 110; 8 Ad. & El. 907.

⁶ R. v. Baldwin, 8 Ad. & El. 168; 3 Nev. & P. 342. An affidavit of printing and inserting a libel in a newspaper, a copy of which is annexed, is not a sufficient publication to warrant a rule nisi.

⁷ R. v. Benfield and another, 2 Burr. 980.

⁸ R. v. Webster, 3 T. R. 388.

⁹ R. v. Fentiman, 2 Ad. & El. 127; 4 Nev. & M. 126.

¹⁰ R. v. Heming, 5 B. & Adol. 666; 2 Nev. & Man. 477.

¹¹ R. v. Haswell and another, Dougl. 387. R. v. Jennison, Id. 390, cited.

¹² Id. 390, Lord Mansfield.

¹³ R. v. Francis, 4 Nev. & M. 251.

¹⁴ Mayne v. Fletcher, 9 B. & C. 382.

visions of the particular law which applies, as the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 8, yet if the rule be not drawn up upon reading the newspaper, or if the newspaper be neither annexed to the affidavit, nor filed, the proceeding will not be good either at common law nor by the statute, and the court will not suffer the newspaper to be shown to them upon moving to make the rule absolute.¹ Upon an application for sending a challenge, if copies of the letter are verified, the court will grant the rule without having the original before them.² Of such verification there must be good evidence, such as might warrant a grand jury in finding a true bill. The information, therefore, of other persons will not suffice to prove handwriting, the party swearing not being able to speak from his own knowledge.³ Nor can affidavits be read which do not relate to the same information, as an affidavit in a motion against another, because, if false, the swearer cannot be prosecuted.⁴

Informations are filed in the Queen's Bench only, excepting when they relate to the revenue, and then they are brought in the Exchequer.⁵

When.] The court does not encourage delay. As if a whole term should be permitted to intervene between the fact and the application.⁶ Or in libel, with full knowledge, if the second term after the publication should be allowed to pass.⁷ Indeed, the motion should be made within a reasonable time after such second term has commenced.⁸ Unless, indeed, the prosecutor swears that he had no knowledge of the libel so as to enable him to take the earlier course.⁹ And in the case of a magistrate, it is a rule to apply sufficiently early in the second term to enable the justice to show cause in the course of that term.¹⁰ At one time, the intervention of an assize would prevent this application in the second term.¹¹ But more recently another doctrine has prevailed, and the motion was granted after the assize, time being allowed to show cause in the same term.¹² Twelve months are too late, although the prosecutor should swear that he had not heard of the fact till just before the application.¹³ And the last day of term is usually too late.¹⁴ Although it seems that at one time the court would grant the rule for misconduct during the term at the end

¹ R. v. Woolmer, 12 Ad. & El. 422; 4 Per. & D. 137.

² R. v. Chappel, 1 Burr. 402.

³ Ex parte Williams, 5 Jur. 1133.

⁴ R. v. Mayor of Thetford, 11 Mod. 141.

⁵ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 844.

⁶ R. v. Hext, 4 Jur. 339.

⁷ R. v. Jollie, 4 B. & Adol. 867; 1 Nev. & M. 483.

⁸ R. v. Jollie, ut supra.

⁹ R. v. Jollie, ut supra.

¹⁰ 13 East, 322. R. v. Marshall and another; and R. v. Thomas, is cited there to the same effect. R. v. Morice and others, Id. 270, n.

¹¹ R. v. Harries and another, 13 East, 270.

¹² R. v. Saunders, 10 Q. B. 484.

¹³ R. v. Bishop, 5 B. & Ald. 612.

¹⁴ Ex parte Tanner, 3 Jur. 10.

of the term in the case of magistrates, although not for misconduct before the term.¹ But the reporter adds, that a similar application for misconduct was refused almost immediately afterwards.²

With respect to the material circumstance of knowledge, there is a distinction between the case of a magistrate and an individual. For this want of knowledge will help the prosecutor where he charges one who is not a magistrate, even if he should delay beyond the second term, provided he do not procrastinate too long.³ Whilst, on the other hand, where the knowledge had been full early in Easter Term, but the party neglected to move against the magistrate till the last day but three of Trinity Term, the court refused the rule.⁴ A libel appeared in May; the party heard of it in July, but took no notice till November, and did not move till January. The libel affected the character of the applicant, and the court held, that he should have vindicated it more speedily.⁵ Nor will the information be granted should the prosecutor have adopted another mode of redress, as in the case of a county court judge, where the prosecutor sent in a memorial to the lord chancellor to remove the judge.⁶

Affidavit and jurat.] The correctness of the affidavit must be attended to, for the court will not encourage additional affidavits. The county in which a deponent is sworn must appear in the affidavit as well as the jurat. Moreover, the court will refuse to enlarge the rule in order that the affidavit may be resworn.⁷ However, according to an observation of Patteson, J., it would seem to be sufficient if the affidavit should contain the county, though not the jurat,⁸ although the court has, more than once, refused to allow additional affidavits, or to reswear affidavits.⁹ The judges will view a false affidavit differently. The rule for a criminal information being discharged upon the strength of an oath swearing to the truth of a libel, the party was, subsequently, indicted for perjury, and he absconded. Upon this the court granted another rule nisi, and made it absolute.¹⁰

Certain requisitions must be complied with under the statute.

¹ R. v. Smith, 7 T. R. 80.

² R. v. Beavis and others, Id. 242.

³ R. v. Jollie, ante. See R. v. Hartley, 4 B. & Adol. 869, n.

⁴ R. v. Harris, 8 Jur. 516.

⁵ Rule refused. R. v. Murray, 1 Jur. 37. However, in a case where the rule was discharged, the prosecutor was not thereby debarred from bringing an action in another court for the publication of the same libel. Wakley v. Cooke, 16 Mees. & W. 822.

⁶ R. v. Marshall, 24 L. J. Q. B.

242.

⁷ R. v. Cockshaw, 2 Nev. & M. 378.

⁸ 2 Nev. & P. 152; 1 Jur. 657.

⁹ R. v. Francis, 4 Nev. & M. 251. Ex parte Williams, 5 Jur. 1133. R. v. Smithson, 4 B. & Adol. 861.

¹⁰ R. v. Eve, 5 Ad. & El. 780; 1 Nev. & P. 229.

Thus by 4 & 5 Wm. & M. c. 18, s. 2, the clerk of the crown in the Court of Queen's Bench for the time being shall not, without express order, to be given by the said court in open court, exhibit, receive, or file any information for any misdemeanor, or issue out any process thereupon, before he shall have taken or shall have delivered to him a recognizance from the person procuring such information to be exhibited, with the place of his abode, title or profession, to be entered, to the person against whom such information is to be exhibited, in the penalty of 20*l.*, that he will effectually prosecute such information, and abide by and observe such orders as the said court shall make; which recognizance the said clerk of the crown, and also every justice of any county, city, franchise, or town corporate (where the cause of any such information shall arise), are hereby empowered to take; after the taking whereof by the said clerk of the crown, or the receipt thereof from any justice, the said clerk of the crown shall make an entry thereof upon record, and shall file a memorandum thereof in some public place in his office, that all persons may resort thereunto without fee; and in case any person against whom any information for any of the causes aforesaid shall be exhibited shall appear thereunto, and plead to issue, and the prosecutor of such information shall not, at his own proper costs and charges, within one whole year next after issue joined, procure the same to be tried, or if upon such trial a verdict pass for the defendant, or in case the said informer procure a noli prosequi to be entered, then in any of the said cases the said Court of Queen's Bench is hereby authorized to award to the said defendant his costs, unless the judge before whom such information shall be tried shall, at the trial of such information, in open court, certify upon record that there was a reasonable cause for exhibiting such information; and in case the said informer shall not within three months next after the said costs taxed, and demand made thereof, pay to the said defendant the said costs, then the said defendant shall have the benefit of the said recognizance to compel him thereunto: provided by sect. 6, that nothing in this section contained shall extend to any other information than such as shall be exhibited in the name of Her Majesty's coroner or attorney in the Court of Queen's Bench for the time being (commonly called the Master of the Crown Office).

This certificate of the judge must be entered upon the postea.¹ Costs will not be required beyond the provisions of the Act. Therefore, an additional security for costs upon the granting of a criminal information against magistrates has been refused.² And the defendant is only entitled to the amount of the prosecutor's recognizance, either when he succeeds, or in the event of there being no trial.³ After information filed, it seems too late to re-

¹ Comb. 345; Holt, C. J.

190. See R. v. Filewood and another, Id. 145.

² R. v. Brooke and others, 2 T. R.

³ R. v. Savile, 18 Q. B. 703.

quire security for costs.¹ A rule nisi was served, but it did not reach the defendant till the day before argument; the court enlarged the rule.²

Should there be an information ex officio, proceedings upon a prior information against the same individual for the same offence will be stayed.³

Defendant's answer.] The information being granted nisi, it remains for the defendant to show cause. He may do this successfully by disproving the offence attributed to him to the satisfaction of the court. Or he may say that he has been acquitted upon an indictment for the same cause. Or that it is intended to try a civil right. Or that the complaint is trifling, vexatious, or oppressive.⁴ Or that the parties prosecuting are confederated in a common act of illegality, as where the applicant and the defendant were common cheats.⁵ Or that the applicant has been equally violent or guilty with the defendant. But the affidavits in answer should be carefully purged from any angry matter, for the court, to say the least, will then censure the defendant for his want of temper.⁶

There is a difference between public interests and private animosity. In a case of bribery, it appeared that the only material affidavit which the defendant had not contradicted was that of his being a particeps criminis, and R. v. Peach was relied on for him. But the court took the distinction above noticed, and made the rule absolute upon the ground of public policy.⁷

The rule being granted, the applicant should not be hasty in his prosecution, especially if he knows that there is to be an opposition by the defendant. A prosecutor obtained a rule to show cause why he should not be at liberty to enter an appearance and sign judgment. He did this because the rule had been enlarged upon the conditions of the defendant appearing and pleading immediately. But the defendant had not had time to instruct his London solicitors, and the court said, that he ought to have been allowed a reasonable time. However, they made the rule absolute, but awarded costs against the prosecutor.⁸ The ¹ 4 & 5 Wm. & M. c. 18; 12 Mod. 325. Perhaps the matter might have been pleaded. Holt, C. J.

² R. v. Hely, 10 Jur. 1009.

³ R. v. Alexander, 3 Ch. Burn, 458. And see Att.-Gen. v. Brooksbank, 1 Y. & Jer. 439.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 8.

⁵ See R. v. Peach and others, 1 Burr. 548.

⁶ R. v. Burn, 1 Jur. 657.

⁷ R. v. Steward, 2 B. & Adol. 12. The affidavits upon showing cause may be entitled thus: The King v. A. (the defendant). R. v. Jones, Str. 704. They may, according to some authorities, be entitled, or not. R. v. Robinson, 5 Suppl. 10 Viner, 99, pl. 7, in the note. R. v. Harrison and others, 6 T. R. 60. According to others, they must be entitled in order to show a cause in court. R. v. Pierson, Andr. 312. And see King, q. t. v. Cole, 6 T. R. 640. Clark v. Cawthorne, 7 T. R. 321.

⁸ R. v. Muntz, 2 Jur. 538, better way is to serve a copy upon the defendant, and to show him the original, and then an affidavit of service can safely be made, without which the rule cannot be absolute.¹

The information being now on foot, the court will not quash it on motion. The defendant must demur, although there be a fault in the body of it.² But it is said that when the attorney-general files an information ex officio, it may be quashed, for the crown pays no costs, whereas it is different in the case of a private person.³ Nevertheless, in the matter of the attorney-general, there are authorities the other way.⁴ The attorney-general, however may amend on payment of costs,⁵ yet, if the defect be as to the jurisdiction, the court will quash the information.⁶ And, by consent, the court has been known to quash informations for perjury.⁷ Supposing that a nol.-pros. be entered in consequence of the defendant's absence, there cannot be another information without a new rule. And the new rule will only be granted upon payment of costs.⁸

Five several rules cannot be followed by a joint information against five several defendants.⁹

As to the time of pleading, it is said, that in Middlesex a defendant shall have all the term to plead, where he is bound by recognizance to appear on the first day of term. In any other county he shall have till the next term to plead.¹⁰

By 60 Geo. 3 and 1 Geo. 4, c. 4, s. 8, in all prosecutions for misdemeanors instituted by the attorney or solicitor general, the court shall, if required, make order that a copy of the indictment shall be delivered after appearance, upon application, and free from expense, unless he or his attorney shall have previously had a copy.

Pleading.] Regularly, the same accuracy is required in an information as in an indictment.¹¹ Therefore, where there was an information against a foreigner for extortion, the charge of extorting from divers of the King's subjects was held too general and uncertain, for a single offence should have been laid and ascertained, and, for want of this, judgment was arrested.¹² But in the case of a riot, riotose et routose was deemed sufficient without saying

¹ Steph. 269.

² 14 Vin. Ab. 415, pl. 1.

³ R. v. Fountain, 1 Sid. 152. The crown pays costs under the informations and proceedings particularly mentioned in 18 & 19 Vict. c. 90, but not otherwise, therefore not here. The cases decided upon that Act do not relate to these informations. They are, 26 L. J. M. C. 111; 27 L. J. Ch. 511; Id. 837.

⁴ R. v. Gregory, 1 Salk. 372.

⁵ Attorney-General v. Ray, 11 Mees. & W. 464; 1 Dowl. & L. 278.

⁶ R. v. Williams, 1 Burr. 385.

⁷ R. v. Green, R. v. Roper, Str. 1072.

⁸ R. v. Warburton, 12 Mod. 319; Anon. Id. 325.

⁹ R. v. Heydon and others, 3 Burr. 1270.

¹⁰ Anon. 2 Salk. 514. See R. v. Hertford Town, Carth. 503; 1 Salk. 374.

¹¹ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 4.

¹² R. v. Roberts, Carth. 226. Comb. 193.

that the defendants assembled with the intent to commit a riot.¹ The word "wilfully" must not be left out, when the offence is for misapplying monies.²

In informations upon statutes, it is usual to set out everything requisite to bring the offence within the particular Act,³ and the words "contra formam statuti," will not aid substantial defects.⁴ Moreover, if there be any exceptions in the enacting clause of a statute, the information should negative all the exceptions. As where certain persons were, by virtue of a statute, permitted to buy raw hides. The defendant was convicted upon an information for disobeying the statute, but the information did not negative the exceptions in favour of certain persons, and the court quashed the conviction.⁵

And if an exception be negatived when the statute does not require it, that part of the information will be surplusage.⁶

If A. be in prison for defrauding the revenue, this imprisonment is no satisfaction to the crown, so as to prevent another information against B. for the same offence, as for unshipping goods. If a defence at all, it should have been pleaded puis darrein continuance.⁷

A criminal information is not an "action depending" within 1 Will. 4, c. 22. Therefore an order for the examination of a witness upon interrogatories will not be made in such a matter.⁸

It is said, that even after evidence given, the King's counsel may withdraw the information, and try it over again without the consent of the party.⁹

In an information at the suit of the crown, notice of trial was given in Trinity Term, 1838, but it was afterwards countermanded.

The defendant obtained a rule in Hilary Term, 1842, and set down the cause for trial at the sittings after Easter Term, but the court discharged the rule.¹⁰

In an information by the attorney-general, a tales may be prayed by the crown, although the attorney-general be not present, and in the absence of his warrant, but it is not so in the case of the defendant.¹¹ A criminal information was moved against W. by E.; W. in answer filed affidavits containing fresh charges. E. also sued C. for libel, and C. pleaded a justification similar to ¹ R. v. Soley, 11 Mod. 117. For further cases, see 14 Vin. Ab. 415, E. 4, 417, F. pl. 7, 8, 11. Information upon 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 20, s. 63; 5 Vin. Supp. 100, F. pl. 1. Information on 10 Ann. c. 17, s. 21, for mooring a merchant ship.

² Carpenter v. Mason, 12 Ad. & El. 629; 4 Per. & D. 439. Information on 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 97. Misapplication of monies by overseers.

³ See Holden, q. t. v. Weedan, Bunb. 177. See other informations upon statutes. 14 Vin. Ab. 417, F. pl. 1, 2, 4, 5, 6.

⁴ R. v. Rook, Hardr. 20.

⁵ R. v. Pratten, 6 T. R. 559.

⁶ R. v. Hall, 1 T. R. 322.

⁷ Attorney-General v. Popplestone, Bunb. 311.

⁸ R. v. Upton St. Leonard's, 17 L. J. M. C. 13.

⁹ Anon. 1 Ventr. 28.

¹⁰ R. v. Ray, 9 Mees. & W. 760.

¹¹ Attorney-General v. Parsons, 2 Mees. & W. 23; 2 Cr. & J. 279.

W.'s fresh charges. The court would not stay hearing the argument against W. till the action against C. had been tried.¹

Sometimes the court considers it a sufficient punishment to inflict costs, as in a case where the charge was for carrying a challenge. The defendants entered into an undertaking to this effect.² There is no appeal from the Court of Queen's Bench under the Common Law Procedure Act in criminal cases.³

Informations upon penal statutes.] Under penal statutes, it is necessary that the whole or part of the penalty should be given to him who will sue for it,⁴ although, as to the offence itself, an immediate damage to the party connected with an injury to the public peace will warrant an information qui tam.⁵ The King may sue for the whole of a penalty, if the common informer has not commenced his suit qui tam.⁶ And where a statute gives a penalty to the King and to him who will sue for it, the informer cannot sue if the King has already exhibited his information.⁷ And yet, in general, the proceeding is carried on by a mere informer, who claims the penalty prescribed by the Act.

If an informer should sue, another informer cannot sue for the same thing,⁸ and it is said, that if there be two informations on the same day for the same offence, the court cannot give judgment upon either.⁹ And herein consists the difference between informations by the attorney-general, and those qui tam by an informer. In the former case the pendency of the first information would be no plea to the second.¹⁰

By 21 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 1, the proceedings on a penal statute are declared to be by action, bill, plaint, information, or indictment, and the information must be confined to the county where the offence has happened, whether the trial be before justices of assize, &c., or justices of quarter sessions. And the same process is to be awarded as in an action of trespass vi et armis at common law. And, moreover, all other informations, either by the attorney-general or a common informer, or otherwise, are to be void. Where the forfeiture is given to the crown alone, two years were the prescribed limit for bringing the information; but where the informer or other person is to participate, it must have been brought within one year.¹¹ But the statute of Elizabeth is repealed in this respect of limitation,¹² and it seems, that whether the crown or the

¹ R. v. Willmer, 15 Q. B. 50.

² R. v. Morgan and another, Dougl. 314.

³ R. v. Leatham, 8 Cox, 498. The court discharged a rule for a new trial after a conviction upon a criminal information filed by the attorney-general. The right to appeal was at once denied.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 17.

⁵ Id.

⁶ R. v. Hymen, 7 T. R. 536.

⁷ R. v. Clark and others, cited, Id. Attorney-General v. —, Hardr. 201.

⁸ R. v. Harris, Cro. El. 261. Green v. Edwards, Id. 326. Chalchman v. Wright, Noy. Rep. 118. Anon. Styl. 417. Hutchinson v. Thomas, 2 Lev. 141.

⁹ Pie v. Cook, Hob. 128.

¹⁰ Dougl. 240.

¹¹ 31 El. c. 5, s. 5, Godb. 158.

¹² 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 36.

party be a participator, the time is confined to six calendar months from the time when the matter of complaint arose.¹ But should the informer make default, it is still competent for the crown to prosecute within two years,² and so it is if the time as to the informer has lapsed. In the last case the King shall have judgment for his part.³ A party grieved, however, is not bound to the year, for the restraint affects common informers only.⁴ The legislature requires an oath previously to the exhibition of the information that the offence was committed within the year.⁵ There must be likewise a special note of the day, month, and year of exhibiting the information.⁶

The prosecution of an offence at common law remains as before,⁷ and so it is with regard to a party grieved.⁸ None but the party grieved can sue in a case where, but for the grief, he could not, by reason of some misdemeanor by him committed, "follow or pursue any suit upon any penal statute."⁹ Notwithstanding the above-mentioned statute of James the First, the courts, looking to the 18 El. c. 5, have determined that the proceedings qui tam are confined to the Court of King's Bench, where the liberty given is to sue in a court of record, and that, in such a case, they cannot be brought before justices of assize, of oyer and terminer, or justices of the peace.¹⁰ On the other hand, where there is a concurrent jurisdiction, the jurisdiction of the superior courts is excluded.¹¹ The stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 4, restrains actions under 18 El. c. 5, from being brought at Westminster, unless for offences arising in Middlesex, where these courts sit.¹² The contrary was once holden.¹³ The proceedings in these courts are by indictment or information.¹⁴ It is said that this statute of 21 Jac. 1, is confined to such statutes as were in being when it was made;¹⁵ that it gives no jurisdiction to the inferior courts where

¹ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, and see s. 10, at the end.

² 31 El. c. 5, s. 5.

³ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 46.

⁴ Broughton v. Prince, 3 Leon. 237.

⁵ 21 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 3.

⁶ 18 El. c. 5, s. 1, which in this particular does not seem to have been repealed by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 36. See also rules and orders of the Exchequer, 5 Vin. supp. 100, E. pl. 11.

⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 44.

⁸ Id. s. 47.

⁹ 31 El. c. 5, s. 1. This is not repealed.

¹⁰ "Pœnal Leys," Sir Wm. Jones, 193. Pheasant v. Finch, Tho. Raym. 394. Shipman, q. t. v.

Henbest, 4 T. R. 109; 1 Saund. 312, (note 1,) citing other cases.

¹¹ Jeffery, q. t. v. Coles, Willes, 634; and see 635, note. "The true rule is, that in all penal laws antecedent to 21 Jac. 1, where the justices of assize and superior courts had a concurrent jurisdiction, the suit must be commenced before justices of assize and sessions, and not before the justices at Westminster." Id. 635, note (2). This was an action to recover a penalty under 5 & 6 Ed. 6, c. 14, and judgment of nonsuit was entered.

¹² 1 Saund. 312, (note 1,) citing several cases.

¹³ Id. citing the cases.

¹⁴ Id. citing the cases.

¹⁵ 1 Saund. 312, n. citing the cases.

they had none before;¹ that where the informer has an election, he may sue for the penalty in the inferior courts;² but that the informer cannot sue for the penalty, unless the election is clearly given, in the superior courts.³ The form of a declaration as for 20*l.* given by a statute has no weight when the jurisdiction is express, as to the amount of 20*l.* before justices, and beyond 20*l.* to the courts at Westminster.⁴ The informer must have then exhibited his suit in his own person, and so pursue it, or by his attorney in court,⁵ but now any complaint or information may be laid or made by the complainant in person, or by his counsel or attorney, or other person authorized in that behalf;⁶ whereas the defendant may appear by attorney,⁷ that is to say, if he be a natural-born subject, or a denizen.⁸ Neither an infant nor a corporation can sue as a common informer.⁹ In the Exchequer, if the defendant be in custody, he may have a habeas corpus to enable him to defend in person.¹⁰

Venue.] Unless for champerty, buying titles, extortion, usury, &c., the venue must be laid in the county where the offence happened.¹¹ If, upon the general issue, the offence shall not be so proved, the defendant shall be acquitted;¹² and although the assizes or sessions are mentioned, there may be an information in the King's Bench or Exchequer for an offence happening in the same county where those courts are sitting.¹³ But oath must be made concerning the county,¹⁴ or the court will set aside the process, although they will not deem the whole proceedings erroneous,¹⁵ yet they will not do this after verdict.¹⁶ And no jurisdiction is given by the 21 Jac. 1, c. 4, to courts which had no jurisdiction before.¹⁷ Indeed, if any clause of a previous statute (as 18 El. c. 5), should give a remedy in any court of record, the informer may sue in Westminster Hall, notwithstanding the statute,¹⁸ and the course by certiorari or writ of error is not taken away.¹⁹ Nor will the return to a writ of certiorari containing amendments purge the original errors, but proceedings will be stayed.²⁰

¹ 1 Saund. 312, n. citing the cases.

² R. v. Ferris, Id., near the end.

³ R. v. Ferris, 1 Saund. 312.

⁴ Fleming, q. t. v. Bailey. See generally 1 Wms. Saund. 312, note 1, in R. v. Kilderby.

⁵ 18 El. c. 5, s. 1.

⁶ 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 10, at the end.

⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 53; 29 El. c. 5, s. 21, not repealed.

⁸ 31 El. c. 10, s. 20, at the end, not repealed.

⁹ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 51.

¹⁰ Attorney-General v. Cleave, 2 D. P. C. 668.

¹¹ 31 El. c. 5, s. 4, not repealed; 21 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 1.

¹² 21 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 2.

¹³ 2 Hawk. c. 26, ss. 30, 34.

¹⁴ 21 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 3.

¹⁵ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 38.

¹⁶ Leigh, q. t. v. Kent, 3 T. R. 362, overruling White, q. t. v. Boot, 2 T. R. 274.

¹⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 36.

¹⁸ Id. s. 39.

¹⁹ Id. s. 37.

²⁰ 5 Vin. Supp. 89, E. 6, citing R. v. Holmes, 1 Burr. Qu.?

Other matters.] If the plaintiff has put in his information, the penalty becomes appropriated to him, although the party is not served with process to answer it.¹ It has been said, that the structure of informations is much the same with that of indictments.² But it may be observed, that the informer may have judgment for as much of the information as is well laid,³ provided there be no repugnancy so as to affect the general charge.⁴ The very sum due to the informer should be demanded, although a mistake in this respect will not deprive the King of his share.⁵ The conclusion need not to be "against the peace," &c.,⁶ and if it say, "to the great damage," &c. without adding "of the plaintiff," it is still good.⁷

Answer.] In answer to the charge, the defendant should plead nil debet to the informer, and also to the King.⁸ And possibly, not guilty may be a good plea;⁹ but, if there be more than one defendant, the pleas should be several.¹⁰ And if the offence be alleged from a matter of record, such a plea will not suffice.¹¹ Moreover, there cannot be double pleading in qui tam, for the statute, 4 Ann. c. 16, does not extend to penal suits.¹² But by 21 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 4, the defendant may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence;¹³ and non est factum and conditions performed have been allowed in the Exchequer upon an information of debt upon a bond.¹⁴

A conviction, an acquittal, and a bona fide release are, if well pleaded, answers to this action.¹⁵ So, a pardon by the King unless the informer has actually commenced his suit before the King, in which case the King cannot interfere.¹⁶ But the King may not bar the suit of the party grieved, nor proceed in it after the death of the plaintiff.¹⁷ A plea of priority of suit should be placed upon the record,¹⁸ and then the plaintiff may reply nul tiel record, so that if the defendant should be desirous of showing a recovery against him at another time, the exact day of such recovery must be set forth.¹⁹

Another answer is, that a penal suit is depending for the same offence, but this is a plea in abatement.²⁰ It is no objection to this

¹ Godb. 158.

² See ante, 2 Hawk. c. 26.

³ Id. c. 26, s. 19.

⁴ Id.

⁵ Id. s. 21.

⁶ Id. c. 25, s. 92.

⁷ Id. c. 26, s. 21.

⁸ Id. c. 26, s. 66; and note, that the modern rules of pleading do not apply to 21 Jac. 1, c. 4, so that nil debet continues to be a good plea. Earl Spencer v. Swannell, 3 Mees. & W. 154; 6 D. P. C. 326.

⁹ Coppin, q. t. v. Carter, 1 T. R. 462.

¹⁰ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 67.

¹¹ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 68.

¹² Morgan v. Luckup, Str. 1044. Heyrick v. Foster, 4 T. R. 701. Law v. Crowther, 2 Wils. 21.

¹³ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 69.

¹⁴ Attorney-General v. Snow, Bunb. 96.

¹⁵ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 64.

¹⁶ Id.

¹⁷ Id.

¹⁸ Breden, q. t. v. Harman, Str. 701.

¹⁹ Jackson, q. t. v. Gisling, Str. 1169.

²⁰ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 63.

plea that the offence in the subsequent suit is laid on a subsequent day, nor is a mistake of the day material, if the first suit has been really commenced.¹ It is said, indeed, that two informations on the same day may mutually abate each other.²

By 4 Hen. 7, c. 20, a plea of recovery in a former suit, which recovery shall turn out to be fraudulent or covinous, shall subject the defendant to two years' imprisonment, and the plaintiff, if he has sued bonâ fide, shall recover.³ With respect to the replication, the attorney-general is entitled to make it to a special plea at Westminster. Before justices of assize, the clerk of assize shall plead it.⁴ So it is in the case of the general issue in the courts of King's Bench and Exchequer.⁵ Although, if the attorney-general refuse, the informer himself may plead it.⁶ And it seems, that he may demur without mentioning the attorney-general.⁷ In actions the replication is made by the plaintiff only.⁸

The attorney-general has the liberty of amending his information, provided that he do not harass the subject.⁹ He must also sign a demurrer to a plea, and it is not necessary that a matter of law should be stated in the margin.¹⁰

With respect to the information ex officio, the attorney-general is not bound to proceed either upon oath or motion, but he usually acts upon affidavits. Nor needs he, nor a witness for the crown, to enter into a recognizance to prosecute with effect.¹¹ And there are no costs on either side.¹²

The time of proceeding is, by 60 Geo. 3 and 1 Geo. 4, c. 4, s. 8, limited, for in case any prosecution for a misdemeanor, instituted by Her Majesty's attorney or solicitor general, shall not be brought to trial within twelve months next after the plea of not guilty shall have been pleaded therein, it shall be lawful for the court in which such prosecution shall be depending, upon application to be made on the behalf of any defendant in such prosecution, of which

¹ 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 63.

² Id.

³ See 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 64.

⁴ Id. s. 72.

⁵ Id.

⁶ Id.

⁷ Id.

⁸ Id.; and see 2 Curw. Hawk. 387. As to the issue and trial, see 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 73, et seq.; 14 Vin. Ab. 417, F. pl. 3. The costs, 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 56, &c. R. v. Heydon, 3 Burr. 1304. The verdict, 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 75. The judgment, Id. s. 76; as to compounding, s. 77.

⁹ R. v. Holland, 4 T. R. 457. As to informations in the Exchequer, see 14 Vin. Ab. 419, pl. 10; 5 Vin. Supp. E. 100, pl. 10. As to the information of intrusion, see Nannge v. Rowland, ap. Ellis and others, Cro. Jac. 212; 14 Vin. Ab. 413, c. 3. Att.-Gen. v. Parsons, 2 Mees. & W. 23; 5 D. P. C. 165. See also Tancred on Quo Warranto. As to particular penalties, see Marks v. Benjamin, 2 M. & Rob. 225, on 25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 2. Masquerades, &c. Bail. by Scott. 7 Mees. & W. 93. [Pilot Act.] 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 70. R. v. Tuddenham, 9 D. P. C. 937. Lotteries. Ex parte Higginbotham, 9 D. P. C. 200. Papers without printer's name.

¹⁰ R. v. Woollett, 3 D. P. C. 694. See Hil. T. 4 Will. 4, Rule 3.

¹¹ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 846.

¹² Steph. 316. See also R. v. Phillips and others, 3 Burr. 1564.

application twenty days' previous notice shall have been given to Her Majesty's attorney or solicitor general, to make an order, if the court shall see just cause so to do, authorizing such defendant to bring on the trial in such prosecution; and it shall thereupon be lawful for such defendant to bring on such trial accordingly, unless a noli prosequi shall have been entered in such prosecution. The court will not stay proceedings upon a suggestion that a statute is about to pass which will relieve from the penalties;¹ nor on account of a false description of the plaintiff's abode, for the defendant is not thereby prejudiced; but the parties guilty of the fraud may be punishable for contempt.²

Compounding.] A penal action cannot be compounded for without the consent of the attorney-general, where the crown is entitled to part of the penalty,³ nor unless the defendant has pleaded.⁴

The court will not set aside a verdict for the defendant as being against evidence,⁵ although they will do this if the jury have misapprehended the law, though there be no misdirection by the judge.⁶ If counsel appear, being retained, and claim to proceed, the plaintiff cannot be nonsuited.⁷

Entry of records.] The records, we speak in cases of misdemeanor, shall be taken in the order of entry. The attorney-general may make his election, but in the case of a private prosecutor the defendant's record, if entered first, shall be tried first.⁸

Issue.] In any case, issue being joined between the crown and the defendant, the legal consequence of the appearance must be the discharge of bail where there is suretyship. The prosecutor must himself appear generally. In misdemeanor, if he appear, he cannot question the proof of notice of trial. The defendant may prove notice by affidavit, and must be acquitted if the prosecutor do not appear, and if the defendant's proof fail the court may adjourn the trial.⁹

Discretion of judge as to trying indictment.] The judges will not try an indictment which is manifestly bad, i. e. in the opinion of the judge;¹⁰ and the objection must come from the court, for counsel will not be permitted to argue upon the invalidity of the indictment in the first instance, although they may make a suggestion.¹¹

¹ Grant, q. t. v. Ridley, 5 Man. & Gr. 201.

² Smith v. Bond, 11 Mees. & W. 326.

³ R. v. Gibbs, 3 D. P. C. 345.

⁴ R. v. Collier, 2 D. P. C. 581.

⁵ Preston v. Collins, 2 Jur. 329.

⁶ Gregory v. Tuff's, 1 Cr. M. & R. 310; 2 D. P. C. 711.

⁷ Marks v. Benjamin, 2 Moo. & Rob. 225.

⁸ R. v. Halse, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 20. See 2 Salk. 652; 2 East, 206, n.

⁹ R. v. Hobby, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 241.

¹⁰ R. v. Tremearne, Id. 147. R. v. Hepper, Id. 210.

¹¹ R. v. Abraham, 1 M. & Rob. 7.

CHAPTER XI.

OF JURIES, CHALLENGES, AND OTHER INCIDENTS.

Petty jury.] The petit, or petty jury, are now sworn subject to the challenges of the crown or of the prisoner.

Challenges.] The challenge may be to the whole array,¹ or to the poll. For example, if the sheriff be the prosecutor, the challenge is to the pannel, and it is called a principal challenge, and it must be taken advantage of in this way, and not in arrest of judgment.² Upon particular statutes certain requisites are required before a challenge can be made. As under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 3, a party damnified by rioters, in certain cases, must within seven days after the offence go before a justice for the purpose of stating the circumstances of the case, and of being bound over to prosecute, or he cannot recover against the hundred. Under the old Act, 9 Geo. 1, c. 22,³ which was similar, it was held necessary to show, where the sheriff was an inhabitant of the hundred, that the preliminary requisites had been complied with, and the judges held, that, in default of doing so, the challenge to the pannel was properly withdrawn by the prisoner's counsel.⁴

There is also a challenge for favour.⁵ As if the sheriff be a subscriber to a society who prosecute the defendant for libel.⁶

The array cannot be challenged after any of the jurors are sworn.⁷ Such a challenge also must be clear, and not too general. It is insufficient to say "that the sheriff has not chosen the pannel indifferently and impartially as he ought to have done, and that the pannel is not an indifferent pannel."⁸ Lord Denman inclined to think the following challenge sufficient; that the jurors' book had not been completed according to 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 91,⁹ that the names of qualified persons had been fraudulently omitted from the list in order to prejudice the defendants. No specific accusation was alleged against the sheriff or other officer.¹⁰

¹ The challenge must be in writing, 1 Ch. Cr. L. 546. When there are two sheriffs, and an objection exists as to one by reason of affinity, the venire shall go to the other, and not to the coroner. R. v. Warrington, 12 Mod. 22; 1 Show. 327.

² R. v. Sheppard, Leach, 101.

³ Sect. 8.

⁴ R. v. Savage, 1 Moo. C. C. 51.

⁵ Steph. 298.

⁶ R. v. Dolby, 1 Car. & K. 238. Three special jurors appeared, and the defendant challenged the array of the tales. Two triers being appointed by the court, they found for the challenge, and the cause was made a remark, whether the sheriff, whose array is challenged, can be a witness to prove his impartiality.

⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 1.

⁸ R. v. Hughes, 1 Car. & K. 235.

⁹ An Irish Act.

¹⁰ O'Connell v. Reg. (in error), 11 Cl. & F. 155.

Challenges to the polls are for honour, on account of some defect, for favour, for disqualification, as by reason of crime, and there is the peremptory challenge. The Queen must assign a cause for challenge as soon as the pannel has been exhausted.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 29, whether before the Queen's Bench or courts of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery or sessions of the peace, the truth of the challenge shall be inquired of according to the custom of the court; but no person arraigned for treason or felony may challenge peremptorily above the number of twenty. And by 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 3, if any person, indicted for treason or felony, shall challenge peremptorily a greater number than he is entitled by law to challenge, every such peremptory challenge shall be entirely void, and the trial shall proceed as if no such challenge had been made. But the cause needs not to be assigned till the pannel is gone through.¹

The first challenge to the poll is where a peer is called to be sworn on the trial of a commoner.² He may challenge himself, and a member of the House of Commons will be discharged upon his own request, especially if parliament be sitting, although he may not be challenged.³

Instances of the second kind are, amongst others, alienage,⁴ or non-age, or want of property, &c.⁵ And this would include incapacity, as idiotcy, old age, &c.⁶

With respect to the want of qualification, which is a sufficient cause of challenge, it is enacted, that want of freehold shall not be a good cause if the person be otherwise qualified.⁷ But special jurors are excepted by the proviso.

In capital cases, the juror must be such as may serve in civil cases, and, for this purpose, he may be examined.⁸

The third ground, for partiality, contains many incidents, as eating and drinking at the expense of the parties, relationship within the ninth degree, the connection of master and servant, the expression of ill-will, or the contrary, on the part of the jurymen.⁹ The expressions, however, must be duly proved. A jurymen may not be asked questions in order to found a challenge.¹⁰ And it is no cause of challenge that a jurymen has convicted others upon the same indictment.¹¹

¹ 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 10. R. v. Parry and others, 7 C. & P. 836. Since the Jury Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 50.

² 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 2; Steph. 299.

³ Steph. 299.

⁴ R. v. Sutton and others, 8 B. & C. 417. But it is probable, that since 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 27, this ground of challenge is taken away in the case of a special juror, because the party has had an earlier opportunity of making the objection.

⁵ 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 3; Steph. 299; 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 12, &c.

⁶ See 6 T. R. 531. R. v. Tre-mearne, 5 B. & C. 254.

⁷ 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 27.

⁸ Id. s. 50.

⁹ See Steph. 299. It will be remembered, that the crown can challenge as well as the prisoner.

¹⁰ Anon. 1 Salk. 153. R. v. Edmonds, 4 B. & Ald. 471. See other instances, 2 Hawk. c. 43, ss. 28, 30.

¹¹ 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 29. Marsh v. Coppock, 9 C. & P. 480.

The prosecutor may challenge a jurymen for having been active in the commission of the same offence which he is called upon to try, as a riot.¹ It is not a cause of challenge that a juror is the tenant of a nobleman whose interest in the borough is supposed to be affected.² And the mistake, if any, concerning partiality should be early discovered. It is too late to allege relationship after the jury have been sworn, at all events, during the trial. The jury cannot be discharged.³

The fourth species of challenge includes outlawry, excommunication, and, of course, felonies, or any infamous crime.⁴ And it is said, that such exceptions are not salved by a pardon.⁵

But the fifth challenge is the more usual, and this is the peremptory challenge. The crown is entitled to this challenge until the pannel has been gone through, and this cause must be shown.⁶

We have shown, that, in felony, the prisoner is limited to the number of twenty, and in treason to thirty-five.⁷ The privilege belongs to all felonies, whether capital or not.⁸ So, at least, it has been held by the judges, although the statute 33 Ed. 1, st. 4,⁹ ordains, that if they who sue for the King will challenge, they shall assign of their challenge a cause certain. And by the same opinion, the peremptory challenge survives to the crown until the pannel has been exhausted, notwithstanding 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 29.¹⁰

Having challenged, however, the prisoner cannot withdraw a challenge in order to make an exchange, as where the prisoner had challenged twenty, and then desired to make an alteration.¹¹

There is no challenge in misdemeanor, nor on collateral issues.¹²

However, in treason and felony the prisoner may challenge for cause upon condition of showing his cause forthwith,¹³ and if his challenge be disallowed, he may then challenge peremptorily.¹⁴ In a case of an exhausted pannel, owing to the peremptory challenges of the prisoner and the challenges of the crown, the course is to call over the whole of the pannel in the same order as before,

¹ R. v. Swain, 2 Moo. & Rob. 112.

² Marsh v. Coppock, 9 C. & P. 480.

³ R. v. Wardle, Car. & M. 647.

⁴ 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 3. See 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 25.

⁵ 2 Hawk. ut sup.; 2 Hale, 578.

⁶ At least, such was the opinion of the court in R. v. Mansell, (infra), and, in this light, the old authorities must now be viewed. Anon. 1 Anders. 299; Co. Litt. 156, 161; Anon. 1 Ventr. 309; 21 Vin. Ab. (Trial), 275; and several cases in the state trials.

⁷ See also 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 29;

2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 7, &c. In misprision of treason, qy.? See Steph. 300.

⁸ Gray v. Reg. (in error), an Irish case, 11 Cl. & Fin. 427. The Irish and English law agree in this respect.

⁹ Only repealed as to Ireland, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 91, s. 50.

¹⁰ Mansell v. Reg. 26 L. J. M. C. 137. Confirmed in the Exchequer Chamber, 27 L. J. M. C. 4.

¹¹ R. v. Parry and others, 7 C. & P. 836.

¹² R. v. Ratcliff, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 3.

¹³ 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 16.

¹⁴ Id.

omitting those whom the prisoner has challenged peremptorily. The counsel for the prosecution should then state their cause of challenge, and, if there be no good cause, each juror is sworn till the full number be complete, unless, indeed, the prisoner, not having challenged twenty previously, should go on with his challenges.¹

The question of the exhaustion of the pannel was very much considered in 1857. The prisoner was tried in 1856 before Bramwell, B. The pannel of jurymen contained the name of Wm. Ironmonger. The prisoner challenged sixteen peremptorily, then two were sworn, and another was challenged by the prisoner, and then followed Ironmonger, who was challenged for the crown. The prisoner's counsel then insisted that cause should be shown forthwith, but the objection was overruled. Several others were then challenged by the crown, subject to the same objection. There was, at this time, another jury who had retired to consider the case of one Chapman, and three jurymen being wanted to complete the twelve to try Mansell, Ironmonger was called again, and was again challenged by the crown, notwithstanding the renewal of the objection. The other jury then returned with their verdict, and the counsel for the crown prayed that they should be called in their order to fill the vacancies. It was insisted, on the other side, that the pannel should be gone over again, and that one Jacobs was the next person in order after Ironmonger. It was, however, resolved that an election should be made from the other jury. Accordingly, Perry, Philpott, and Paston were called. Philpott said that he had conscientious objections against capital punishment, upon which he was challenged, and upon cause being demanded, the judge advised him to withdraw. There were then some other challenges on both sides, and the three jurors having been elected, tried, and sworn, the trial proceeded, and the prisoner was convicted. Errors were assigned upon these facts. It was argued, that jurors were improperly prevented from being sworn; that the peremptory challenge of the crown was illegal; that the crown could only challenge for cause; that the statutes of 33 Ed. 1, st. 4, and 6 Geo. 4, c. 59, s. 29, ordained thus much, that, at all events, the crown must show cause when the pannel is exhausted, and that is when the names have been called over, and before the clerk of arraigns commences the second calling of the pannel; that, in the absence of a full jury, the right of the crown ceases after such exhaustion, even admitting the original right; that the return of the other jury was too late to be efficient, although the judge had not, at that moment, decided as to Ironmonger; that the court had no power to order Ironmonger to "stand by" for the second time without cause shown; that the names of the second jury were not called over in order, but from different parts of the pannel;² that Philpott ought not to have withdrawn; it was too late; and that it was not stated that the jurors were good and lawful men of the county.

¹ R. v. Geach, 9 C. & P. 499. ² See R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 137.
R. v. Blakeman, 3 Car. & K. 97.

The court gave judgment for the crown. They held that the object of 33 Ed. 1, was to prevent the crown from exercising its power of peremptory challenge, so as to make the trial go off while there were twelve returned upon the pannel who could not be proved to be liable to a valid objection. This, they said, was supported by the current of authorities. And R. v. Frost was cited, where Tindal, C. J., is reported to have laid down that doctrine with great earnestness, to which Parke, B., and Williams, J., assented. The court held likewise that the pannel was not exhausted, for it did not occur that there were no more jurors on the pannel whose attendance could be procured. It was the same thing as if the twelve jurymen had been in court and answered to their names when the pannel was first called over. As to Philpott, the court thought, that the judge was bound, on the prayer of the crown, to order him to "stand by." They viewed the matter as a challenge by the crown without a reference to anything said by Philpott or the judge. And they held the return of the pannel right, for the sheriff must be presumed to have obeyed the mandate he received in the venire. And they denied the dictum in Brownlow,¹ and declined to give any opinion as to the correctness of the dictum of Patteson, J., in Whitehead v. The Queen, i. e., that the caption of the indictment was bad, for want of showing that the indictment was found by good and lawful men of the county.²

In R. v. Geach, it was decided that there was no cause of challenge where the juror was a client of the prisoner, who was an attorney, nor that the juror had visited the prisoner in gaol as a friend. And it was likewise held, that although the prisoner had gone through his challenges, he might still examine a jurymen as to his qualification.³

Upon the trial of a previous conviction there can be no challenge, because the jury cannot be legally resworn.⁴

All these five challenges may be made verbally,⁵ but the prisoner, not his counsel, must make them.⁶ Whether a challenge can take place on another issue than the plea of not guilty has been questioned.⁷ It has, however, been allowed on the trial

¹ A person eighty years old, prayed to be excused. The court said it would be error, as he had appeared. But he was discharged by consent. Mich. 5 Jac.

² Mansell v. The Queen, 26 L. J. M. C. 137; Dears. & B. 375. Confirmed in the Exchequer Chamber, 27 L. J. M. C. 4; Dears. & B. 409. The rules in civil cases do not apply. The prisoner must be brought up to the court, pray over of the record, and assign errors, and he must be present during the argument. The counsel representing the attorney-general may orally join in error, immediately upon the assignment of errors delivered.

³ R. v. Geach, 9 C. & P. 499.

⁴ R. v. Key, Den. & P. 347; 21 L. J. M. C. 35.

⁵ Steph. 301.

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 4.

⁷ Id. s. 6.

of a counter-plea, where the replication was "Nul tiel record."¹ The time for making the challenges to the polls is the same with the array, i. e. between the appearance and the swearing of the jury.² If challenges are made before the appearance of a full jury, they are irregular,³ although a challenge has been allowed after the swearing of the jury, but before they were charged.⁴

Thus, alienage is not a good objection after verdict, because the point might have been made earlier.⁵ And, after the striking of a special jury, alienage cannot be allowed as a ground of challenge.⁶

Counsel will not be allowed to ask a question of a jurymen in order to elicit the expediency of challenging him.⁷

Trial of the challenge.] As to the trial. The court has the discretion, whether the challenge be for favour or otherwise.⁸ And the opposite party may not only plead but demur, and the court may immediately decide upon demurrer.⁹ If the array be quashed, a new venire issues to the coroners or to elisors upon the application of the prosecutor.¹⁰ If a challenge, however, be improperly disallowed, no new trial can be had. A venire de novo is the right course.¹¹ The challenge also must be put upon the record, in order that there may be a demurrer, counter-plea, or denial, in which latter case alone triers are to be appointed.¹²

A peremptory challenge, of course, needs no trial, and the challenge for the cause is determined by the court; but the challenge to the poll for favour is referred to two persons, who are sworn in court, and are called triers.¹³ As, however, these triers are, in point of fact, to be jurymen, it follows that their office, as such, will cease after two of the jury have been sworn; and should the challenge be of the first party proposed as a juror, some persons not on the pannel should be selected as jurors. Then, as soon as a jurymen is sworn, he is joined with the triers in determining the

¹ R. v. Scott, Leach, 404.

² 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 1.

³ R. v. Edmonds and others, 4 B. & Ald. 471. R. v. Lacey and others, 3 Cox, 517.

⁴ R. v. Flint, 3 Cox, 66. So was 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 1; And by consent even after the jury are charged. Id.

⁵ R. v. Sutton and others, 8 B. & C. 417.

⁶ R. v. Despard, 1 Man. & Ry. M. C. 444.

⁷ R. v. Stewart and others, 1 Cox, 174.

⁸ Steph. 301.

⁹ Id.

¹⁰ Id. 302.

¹¹ 4 B. & Ald. 471.

¹² R. v. Edmonds and others, 4

B. & Ald. 471. In this same case the court held, that there cannot be any challenge to the array for unindifferency where the jury are nominated by the master of the Crown Office; that he was right in selecting from the freeholders' list those who had the title of esquire, &c., but wrong in selecting the grand jurymen who had found the bill of indictment, although there was no ground for imputing partiality. And, because the sheriff's officer had neglected to summon one of the twenty-four special jurymen returned, it was, nevertheless, not deemed any ground of challenge for unindifferency. See R. v. Burridge, Str. 593; R. v. Johnson, Id. 1000.

¹³ 2 Hale, 275.

next challenge; and when the second jurymen accedes, the triers are at an end, and the jury themselves become the judges of the matter.¹ The proposed juror himself, when challenged, may be examined on the voir dire by the triers.²

Some persons are not allowed to make challenges. As a peer, who may not challenge any of his peers.³ And as, notwithstanding his privilege, he can be indicted by a grand jury of commoners.⁴

So, if one prisoner challenge a juror, others indicted with him upon a joint process shall be bound likewise, because there is only one pannel.⁵ So, in the case of principal and accessory, the prisoners cannot insist upon severing their challenges.⁶ Where depositions disclose statements by one prisoner implicating another, the judges are not unanimous as to the rule. On one occasion the judge declined to allow a severance.⁷ But upon another, upon the application of the prisoners' counsel, where the statements were evidence for the prosecution, the severance was permitted.⁸ Yet, before justices of gaol delivery, the prisoners may sever the pannel if they deem it expedient. Upon a gaol delivery the consequence of an exhaustion of the pannel by reason of challenges is, that a new pannel must be awarded, whereas in the Court of Queen's Bench a tales may be prayed upon indictments or informations,⁹ by the warrant of the attorney-general.¹⁰

Upon one occasion, the judge finding that the jury could not agree, discharged them, and ordered a new pannel of seventy-two to be summoned. Fifty-six names were called from the new pannel by reason of challenges before the jury were sworn, and the prisoner was convicted. Upon a question reserved as to the propriety of this new pannel, the conviction was held right.¹¹

As to the tales, the defendant may challenge such a number as will complete his original number, and no more; and it follows that a jurymen challenged upon the original pannel cannot be sworn upon the tales.¹² And, so far from its being indispensable that the talesmen shall be taken from the bystanders, they may be selected from persons previously appointed by the sheriff to be in attendance.¹³

In ex-officio informations the tales may be prayed in the absence of the attorney-general, but not in the absence of the defendant.¹⁴

¹ 2 Hale, 275; Steph. 302.

² Steph. 302.

³ 1 Hawk. c. 43, s. 4.

⁴ Id.

⁵ Id.

⁶ R. v. Fisher, 3 Cox, 68. Platt, B., did not approve of R. v. Seeley, cited by Cole, amicus curiæ.

⁷ R. v. Blackburn and others, 6 Cox, 333.

⁸ R. v. Jackson and another, 7 Cox, 357.

⁹ Steph. 302.

¹⁰ R. v. Jones, cited, 6 Mod. 246.

¹¹ R. v. Cropper, 2 Moo. C. C. 18. Patteson and Coltman, JJ. dub.; absent, Lord Abinger, Park, J., Gurney, B.

¹² Steph. 303.

¹³ R. v. Dolby, 2 B. & C. 104; 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 37.

¹⁴ Steph. 303, citing 1 Ch. Cr. L. 551.

Justices of gaol delivery may reform the pannel of jurors.¹

Jury.] In proceeding of speaking of jurors, it is observable that the 27th section of 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, has a proviso declaring that nothing therein contained shall extend to any special juror. An action was brought to recover a penalty of 500*l.* for bribery. The cause was to be tried by a special jury, and the attornies on both sides had given to the associate a list of names of certain common jurors whom, if a tales were prayed, they did not wish to be called. There were not sufficient common jurors to make up a full jury when a tales had been prayed, omitting those who did not appear, and it was urged that the case should stand over. But the court ordered all the common jurors to be called over in the usual way, and said that no challenge should be allowed, except for cause.²

It being premised, that a peer, upon his petition or otherwise, should be tried by his peers, or the court of the lord high steward, for treason or felony, or misprision of either, and that for other crimes he must be tried by a jury,³ we proceed to the trial per pais, or the country, i.e., upon the oaths of twelve men. These persons are in general to come from the body of the county where the offence has been committed.⁴ And so, upon a special commission, to try indictments for offences in A. which have been found in B., the trial shall be by jurors of B.⁵ But this point has been discussed in a previous page concerning venue.⁶

Qualification of jurors.] The qualification of jurors is provided for by 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 1. The person, being between the ages of twenty-one and sixty, and residing in England, must possess a freehold, copyhold, or customary tenement to the amount of 10*l.* per annum, or a leasehold estate of 20*l.* annually, or a house rated to the poor on a value of 30*l.* in Middlesex, and 20*l.* in any other county, or a house as occupier, containing fifteen windows. And, independently of certain exemptions which are referred to in the note,⁷ no man, not being a natural-born subject, nor any one

¹ Attorney-General v. Parsons, 2 Mees. & W. 23.

² Marsh v. Coppock, 9 C. & P. 480.

³ See Steph. 221-223.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 40, s. 1.

⁵ Id. s. 5.

⁶ Ante.

⁷ Sect. 2. Peers; judges of the courts of Westminster; clergymen; Roman Catholic priests; dissenting preachers; serjeants, and practising barristers; doctors of law, and advocates; attornies; solicitors; proctors; officers belonging to courts; coroners; gaolers; keepers of houses of correction; members of the college of physicians, and licentiates; surgeons, being members of the colleges of London, Edinburgh, and Dublin; certificated apothecaries; officers of the army and navy on full pay; licensed pilots; the King's household servants; officers of customs and excise; sheriffs' officers; high constables; parish clerks; the inhabitants of a hundred exempted by immemorial custom from serving on juries. R. v. Pugh, Dong. 188. [In the liberty of St. Alban, the age of exemption is seventy, instead of sixty, by charter.] The attaint of treason or felony, nor convicted of any infamous crime, unless he should have obtained a free pardon, nor any one under outlawry or excommunication, shall be qualified.¹

However, an alien is entitled to a jury de medietate lingue, except in treason,² and there shall be no challenge for want of freehold or other qualification.³ Unless the alien, being a female, be married to a natural-born subject. In that case, the statute 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, applies. By sect. 16, any woman married, or who shall be married to a natural-born subject or person naturalized, shall be deemed and taken to be herself naturalized, and shall have all the rights and privileges of a natural-born subject. This matter was discussed at length upon one occasion, when it was urged that the prisoner, who had been convicted of murder, should be deemed naturalized as to the possession of all rights and privileges of a natural-born subject, but not to the deprivation of her rights as a foreigner.⁴

Quaker.] A Quaker is still disabled from serving on criminal trials. It was so held where a prisoner had been convicted and sentenced for murder.⁵

A jurymen may, however, be sworn according to the form of his own particular religion, as in the case of the Scotch covenanters, who was allowed to hold up his hand instead of kissing the book.⁶ If a jurymen be sworn by a wrong name, it seems that a mis-trial will be the consequence.⁷

Jury process.] The jury process in an indictment for conspiracy was made returnable on one of the three days before full term. On the same day a new continuance by venire was awarded. This was not considered erroneous, because it was conformable to the statute 1 Will. 4, c. 3, s. 2, and the court, although not sitting for the despatch of business before full term, might award the con-exemption claimed by the Barbers' Company, under the charters of 1 Ed. 4 and 7 Car. 1, and 18 Geo. 2, c. 15, is confined to the local courts of London, as those of the mayor, sheriff, and coroner, and does not extend to the Central Criminal Court. Re White, Car. & M. 189.

¹ Sect. 3. London and other cities and boroughs are subject to other provisions, sect. 50. And see Steph. 295.

² 4 Com. 352. R. v. Sidoli, 1 Lew. C. C. 244.

³ 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 47.

⁴ R. v. Manning, Den. 467. The prisoner was executed. 2 Car. & K. 887. Whether, if an alien be indicted jointly with a British subject, he is ousted of this privilege. Qu. ? Sembl. aff. 13 Jur. 962. See R. v. Barre, Mo. 557. Whether the proper time to pray for a jury de med. lingue is not before the award of the venire facias, and whether it is not necessary to enter a suggestion of the fact, that the party who prays for the jury is an alien before the award of venire facias, according to the ancient form, qu. ?

⁵ R. v. Channen, 1 Moo. C. C. 374.

⁶ R. v. Walker, Leach, 498. As to the Central Criminal Court juries, see ante.

⁷ R. v. Metcalfe and another, 3 Cox, 220.

tinuance on the return days. Had there been a discontinuance, the plea of guilty would have cured the fault.¹

Under the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, the Act for the better security of the crown and government, the prisoner is not entitled to a copy of the jury pannel.²

Mis-trial.] Upon an indictment for perjury one J. W. being called on the common-law pannel, his son, R. H. W., was sworn and served. R. H. W. was not on the pannel, was under age, and not qualified. A rule was obtained for a new trial, and the court made it absolute.³ Aaron Mellor was sentenced to death for murder. But it transpired that J. H. T. had been called as one of the jury, and a person had been duly sworn as J. H. T. But it appeared on the next day that W. T. had, by mistake, answered for J. H. T., and that the prisoner had been offered his challenge to the supposed J. H. T. The judge reported that the prisoner might have had ground of objection to W. T. though not to J. H. T., and he thought, that notwithstanding Hill v. Yates, he ought to reserve the point. After argument, and some doubt whether the court had jurisdiction under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, the judges gave their opinions seriatim, not being by any means unanimous. Five were of opinion that there had been a mis-trial. Six were of the contrary opinion. Seven thought that they had no jurisdiction under the statute to entertain the question. On the whole, eight being in favour of the conviction, it was affirmed.⁴ Lord Campbell did not lay much stress on Hill v. Yates,⁵ but rather relied on Norman v. Beaumont,⁶ and the Juryman's case.⁷ He took the distinction between misnomer and one person serving instead of another, and *Dovey v. Hobson*⁸ was also mentioned by Lord Campbell to illustrate the

¹ Wright v. Reg. (in error), 14 Q. B. 148; 2 Cox. 91.

² R. v. Dowling, 3 Cox, 509.

³ R. v. Tremearne, 5 B. & C. 254. See Hill v. Yates, 12 East, 229.

⁴ R. v. Mellor, Dears. & B. 468; 27 L. J. M. C. 121. That there had been a mis-trial, but that the court had jurisdiction: Lord Campbell, C. J., Cockburn, C. J., Coleridge, J., dub., Martin, B., dub., Watson, B.—Contra, Erle, Crompton, Crowder, Willes, J. J., Channell, B., Byles, J. That there was no jurisdiction: Pollock, C. B., Erle, Williams, Crompton, Crowder, Willes, J. J., Channell, B. Wightman, J., who tried the case, was absent.

⁵ 12 East, 229. The son of a juryman summoned and returned, answered to his father's name, and served. The defendant moved for a new trial, but Lord Ellenborough refused the rule.

⁶ Willes, 484; Barnes, 453. R. S., not summoned, answered when R. G., who was on the pannel, was called. This was held to be a mis-trial. R. S. was no juryman at all.

⁷ 12 East, 230, n. R. C. being summoned, answered to the name of J. C., who was not summoned, although J. C. was at one time, but not then, resident within the town or county. The judges held this to be a mere misnomer. Cor. Eyre, B., at Newcastle.

⁸ 6 Taunt. 460. A person not summoned was sworn instead of one summoned, and to whose house he had succeeded. The objection was raised before verdict.

distinction between personation and misnomer, and *R. v. Tre-mearne*¹ was likewise cited.²

Special jury.] A special jury, which is frequently had recourse to in cases of misdemeanor, and which, indeed, belongs to every criminal case, except felony, is only where the prosecution is by indictment or information in the Queen's Bench at Westminster, and, therefore, not at the assizes. It may be allowed upon the application of either party, and the attorney-general usually prefers it upon an application ex officio.³ The defendant shall have every means of knowing his prosecutor before the striking of the jury, although a list may not be granted.⁴ But the defendant must plead before he applies for the prosecutor's name.⁵

Juries are impannelled by a writ of venire facias,⁶ as in civil cases.⁷ The venire upon the traverse of an inquisition must be made returnable on a general return day and not on a day certain.⁸

Trials for misdemeanors are at nisi prius; for felonies, in the Queen's Bench, at bar; and a misdemeanor, if it be a case of great difficulty and importance, may also be tried at bar.⁹ Yet, where the prosecutor is a private person, the trial at bar is not de jure, and in capital cases the defendant must be present at the application.¹⁰

The time of trial has already been adverted to in some degree in treating of traverses,¹¹ although we may observe that the attorney-general has the option, subject to the statute 60 Geo. 3 and 1 Geo. 4, c. 4, s. 9, of bringing forward his informations at what time he thinks proper. And, in the case of a special jury, where the plaintiff or prosecutor has withdrawn his record, the defendant may take down his record by proviso, and claim a common jury.¹² So, upon informations in the Crown Office, filed by the master, the prosecutor must proceed to trial within a year after issue joined, or enter a nol. pros., upon pain of costs.¹³ And either of the parties might proceed to trial upon such informations after notice at the next sittings after traverse,¹⁴ and this rule applied also to indictments in the Queen's Bench.¹⁵ However, care must be ¹ Supra.

² See also Fermor v. Dorrington, Cro. El. 222. Hasset v. Bayne, Id. 256. Bond v. Devys, Willes, 493. R. v. Metcalfe, 3 Cox, 220. A case of personation. Maule, J., would not pronounce judgment, but ordered another indictment to be preferred.

³ See Steph. 295. For the mode of choosing the jury, see 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, ss. 31, 32.

⁴ R. v. Nicholson, 8 D. P. C. 422.

⁵ S. C. R. v. Richardson, 4 Jur. 319.

⁶ See, as to this, 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, ss. 4-25.

⁷ As to process for compelling the attendance of jurors, see 2 Hawk. c. 41. As to joining several defendants in one venire, see Id. ss. 8, 9.

⁸ R. v. Roberts, 1 Wils. 77.

⁹ 4 Com. by Ryland, 309, n. 14.

¹⁰ R. v. Hales, Str. 816.

¹¹ R. v. Johnson, Id. 824.

¹² Ante.

¹³ R. v. Derbyshire, 1 Moo. & Rob. 307.

¹⁴ Steph. 296.

¹⁵ Id.

taken to distinguish between prosecutions by the crown or by individuals as to the trial by proviso. Where the attorney-general prosecutes the defendant cannot so deal with his record, although the crown should countermand notice of trial.¹

Special juries must be taken in their order. Where two special juries were struck by the prosecutor in two cases, against different parties to the same transaction, and the defendant entered them as common-jury cases, it was held, that the prosecutor could not, by withdrawing the record, reverse the order of trial. In such a case the judge will order the common-jury case to be called first.²

Where a case goes off for default of jurors, a special jury having been struck, a rule for striking a new jury will not be granted. The cause must be tried by the first jury, with the addition of talesmen, should default be made.³ The attorney-general prays the tales,⁴ and the talesmen come from the pannel of jurors summoned to try the other causes, and not from the bystanders.⁵

With respect to the costs of a special jury, unless the judge certify, these costs cannot be allowed to the prosecutor, nor the costs of a reference and award, although the cause having been referred to arbitration, the arbitrator found the defendant guilty.⁶ The judge's power to certify upon a criminal trial is given by 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 34.⁷

It is not a mis-trial if a special juror have sat on the grand jury. This fact was discovered upon an indictment for misdemeanor, and it was proposed that the juror should leave the box, but the defendants objected, and they were convicted. A new trial was refused.⁸ Where the defendant persisted in challenging the array after the striking of a jury by consent, the court granted an attachment.⁹

By 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 21, no judgment after verdict for any felony or misdemeanor shall be stayed or reversed by reason that the jury process has been awarded to a wrong officer upon an insufficient suggestion, nor for any misnomer or misdescription of the officer returning such process, or of any of the jurors, nor because any person has served upon the jury who has not been returned by the sheriff or other officer.

The jury being charged are impannelled. In a case of murder, ¹ R. v. Dyde and another, 7 T. R. 661. R. v. Macleod, 2 East, 202. R. v. Sir Jacob Banks, 6 Mod. 245. See Willes, 535.

² R. v. Houlditch and another, 1 Stark. 63. The cases were R. v. Houlditch, and R. v. Houlditch and another. Park proposed to withdraw the first, but Lord Ellenborough said he should call on the common juries, and then R. v. Houlditch would come first, as in the original order. Both cases were at length taken together by consent.

³ R. v. Franklin, 5 T. R. 454, cited there by Buller, J. R. v. Perry and others, 1d. 453.

⁴ R. v. Lambe, 4 Burr. 2171.

⁵ R. v. Hill, 1 C. & P. 667.

⁶ R. v. Moate, 3 B. & Adol. 237.

⁷ R. v. Pembridge, 6 Jur. 1037. Indictment for non-repair of a highway, see 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 98.

⁸ R. v. Sullivan, 1 Per. & D. 96; 8 Ad. & El. 831.

⁹ R. v. Burroughs, 11 Mod. 385.

a witness not having arrived, but being expected by a railway train, the judge ordered that the jury should be locked up, and proceeded to other business with another jury.¹

Illness of juror.] Many instances have occurred where the jury have been discharged from giving a verdict. Amongst these may be enumerated illness or disagreement. And whatever might have been the rule formerly,² it is now competent for the judge to order another jury to be sworn, and without the prisoner's consent.³ In one case, a juror fell down in a fit, and Lord Kenyon, informing the prisoner that the circumstance would not work his acquittal, asked his consent to have another jurymen sworn with the eleven, and to have the evidence delivered to the new jury. The prisoner assented, and another jurymen was sworn, the prisoner making no challenge, and a conviction ensued.⁴ In 1795, at York, a jurymen was seized with a fit, and Lawrence, J., discharged the jury, and ordered another jury to be sworn, and the other eleven jurors served upon this new pannel. It was a charge of murder, and the prisoner was convicted and executed.⁵ In 1812, at Monmouth, a similar occurrence happened, and Wood, B., pursued the same course. The prisoner was convicted, and the judges cited authorities in favour of the practice.⁶ So, where the prisoner fell down in a fit, the second Middlesex jury were discharged from him, and the first Middlesex jury were charged with him on the following morning.⁷ Yet the prisoner may have his challenge, not only to the new jurymen, but also again to the other eleven.⁸ In this case also, the evidence was, by consent, read from the judge's notes, and the witnesses for the crown were asked whether it was true.⁹ So it was where, after a plea of not guilty, the prisoner was evidently insane.¹⁰ The judge might direct the jury to be discharged of him, in order that he might be tried after the recovery of his understanding.¹¹ In a case in Ireland, there was a disagreement amongst the jury, and they were discharged, and another jury being sworn, ⁴ R. v. Joyce, Leach, 621, n. R. v. Deane, 5 Cox, 501.

¹ R. v. Foster, 3 Car. & K. 201.

² 2 Hawk. c. 47, s. 1. R. v. Jeffs, Str. 984. R. v. Lord Delamere, 4 St. Tr. 232. R. v. Joyce, Leach, 621, n.

³ See 2 Hale, P. C. 295. R. v. Ferrars, Tho. Raym. 84; Fost. 31, et infra.

⁵ R. v. Scalbert, Leach, 620. R. v. Horner, Id. cited by Lawrence, J., where Buller, J., ruled the same way in the case of intoxication of a juror.

⁶ R. v. Edwards, 3 Camp. 207; Russ. & Ry. 224; Leach, 621, n. R. v. Beere, 2 Moo. & Rob. 472. R. v. Gould, 3 Ch. Burn, 528.

⁷ R. v. Stevenson, Leach, 546.

R. v. Meadows, Fost. 76. R. v. Streeks, 2 C. & P. 413.

⁸ R. v. Edwards, 3 Camp. 208.

⁹ Id. See R. v. Newton, 18 L. J. M. C. 201; 3 Car. & K. 85; 13 Q. B. 716.

¹⁰ 1 Hale, 34. But now the trial would proceed, and the prisoner would be acquitted on the ground of insanity, and detained.

¹¹ 1 Hale, 34; Russ. & Ry. 431, n. This could not now happen, because of the acquittal on the ground of insanity, unless the judge were to discharge the jury, which he would not now do.

the prisoner was convicted at the same assizes.¹ And, in forgery, the judge, after discharging the jury for want of agreement, summoned a new pannel of twelve jurors, forty-eight of the old pannel having been challenged at the first trial, and upon a different charge of forgery. The judges held the conviction right.² Again, the judge has discharged the jury upon an indictment for forcible entry, the indictment being plainly bad upon the face of it, although the defendant might have demurred, or moved to quash it.³ And, generally, if agreeable to justice, and the prisoner desires it, the jury may be discharged at his instance.⁴ So, again by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12, no person tried for misdemeanor, which turns out to be felony, shall be again prosecuted, unless the court shall discharge the jury, and direct a prosecution for felony.

But the jury may not be discharged in order that a witness may be instructed in the nature of an oath. As in rape, where the party injured, an adult, was ignorant of religion. The opinion of the judges was, that he had done wrong in discharging the jury.⁵ Such a state of ignorance, however, may be a good ground for postponing the trial before the jury are charged.

The dispersion of the jury by leave of the court is not a discharge. Such a separation was held to form no ground for granting a new trial, there being no suspicion of any improper communication.⁶ Upon retiring, the jury must not take any evidence with them without leave of the court or consent of the parties.⁷ To do so would be a great contempt. Nor, without consent, can the jury have a view.⁸ And, after the jury have been sworn, the judge will not allow an adjournment.⁹

¹ R. v. Seery. And it being a case of maliciously shooting with intent to murder, the prisoner was executed. See R. v. Newton, ante; R. v. Dawson, 2 Fost. & F. 250; Conway v. R., 7 Irish Rep. 149.

² R. v. Cropper, 2 Moo. C. C. 18. Absent, Lord Abinger, C. B., Park, J., Gurney, B.; dub. Coltman, J., Patteson, J.

³ R. v. Deacon and others, Ry. & Moo. N. P. C. 27.

⁴ R. v. Stokes, 6 C. & P. 151.

⁵ R. v. Wade, 1 Moo. C. C. 86.

⁶ R. v. Kinnear and others, 2 B. & Ald. 462; 1 Ch. Rep. 401. R. v. Woolf. R. v. Canning, Eliz., 19 Howell, St. Tr. 671.

⁷ R. v. Burdett, 1 Ld. Raym. 148; 2 Salk. 645.

⁸ R. v. Redman, Say. Rep. 303. The power of the court to order a view is confined to civil actions, Dennison, J. As to a view, see 1 Price, 130; 2 Ch. Rep. 422.

⁹ R. v. Tempest, 1 Fost. & F. 381.

CHAPTER XII.

OF COUNSEL.

Counsel.] Counsel are heard, in the first instance, for the prosecution. And it is the duty of a counsel to confine himself to the facts he means to prove, nor can he offer declarations in evidence, unless he previously mention them in his opening.¹ Should there be counsel for the prisoner, it is expected that counsel for the prosecution should open the case, but, unless there should be some peculiarity in the charge,² not otherwise, and declarations, not being confessions, ought to be opened.³ In opening a case of murder, the counsel may suppose that an attack may be made upon the character of a witness for the crown, and he may state that he is prepared to rebut such attack.⁴ He may also read to the jury the general observations of a learned judge concerning circumstantial evidence made in a case tried some years before, but he must adopt them as his own opinions, and make them part of his own address to the jury. It is the duty of the prosecuting counsel to assist the court,⁵ and not to be the counsel of any particular party.⁶ A counsel to whom the depositions are handed is, however, to combine the duties of assisting the judge with those of counsel for the crown.⁷

Till the reign of Will. 4, the counsel for the prisoner could not address the jury on his behalf upon the general issue, although, in cases of felony, he might do so upon a collateral question, whilst, in misdemeanor, the defendant was always entitled to that assistance. But it is well known, that cross-examinations were, as now, allowed, and the judges permitted counsel to instruct the prisoner with reference to such questions.⁸

By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 1, all persons tried for felonies shall be admitted, after the close of the case for the prosecution, to make full answer and defence thereto, by counsel learned in the law, or by attorney in courts where attornies practise as counsel.

By sect. 3, all persons who, after the passing of this Act, shall be held to bail or be committed to prison for any offence, shall be entitled to require and have, on demand, (from the person who shall have the lawful custody thereof, and who is hereby required

¹ R. v. Orrell, 1 Moo. & Rob. 468.

² R. v. Gascoine, 7 C. & P. 772, 362.
Park, J.

³ R. v. Orrell, ut supra. R. v. Hartel, 7 C. & P. 773. R. v. Davis, Id. 785. As to conversations, see R. v. Deering and another, 5 C. & P. 165.

⁴ R. v. Courvoisier, 9 C. & P.

⁵ Id.

⁶ R. v. Hursfield, 8 C. & P.

⁷ R. v. Littleton, 9 C. & P. 269.
671.

See Steph. 304.

to deliver the same,) copies of the examinations of the witnesses respectively upon whose depositions they have been so held to bail or committed to prison, on payment of a reasonable sum for the same, not exceeding three halfpence for each folio of ninety words: Provided, that if such demand shall not be made before the day appointed for the commencement of the assize or sessions at which the trial of the person on whose behalf such demand shall be made is to take place, such person shall not be entitled to have any copy of such examination of witnesses, unless the judge or other person to preside at such trial shall be of opinion that such copy may be made and delivered without delay or inconvenience to such trial; but it shall nevertheless be competent for such judge or other person who shall preside at such trial, if he shall think fit, to postpone such trial on account of such copy of the examination of witnesses not having been previously had by the party charged.

And by sect. 4, all persons under trial shall be entitled at the time of their trial to inspect, without fee or reward, all depositions (or copies thereof) which have been taken against them, and returned into the court before which such trial shall be had.

The stat. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 27, re-enacts the provisions of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 3, as to the copies of depositions. And the provision given by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, as to a subsequent grant of such depositions upon application to the judge, although not re-enacted, is said not to be affected by this Act of Victoria.¹ These copies of depositions are only to be had when the case is ripe for trial, not upon remand.² And they are not grantable where there can be no trial at all, as in the case of surety of the peace.³ Nor can fresh evidence be communicated which has been obtained since the committal, nor can the prisoner have a list of the fresh witnesses, but he or his counsel may look at the bill, and even at the back of the bill with consent, which should hardly be refused.⁴

The coroner is not bound to return his depositions to the court, but should he do so, the court, in their discretion, will allow the prisoner to have copies.⁵ And the prisoner is not entitled, under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 3, to a copy of his own statement.⁶ Nor can a defendant be allowed access to collateral matters, as the report of a board of inquiry in India. It was so decided in an information filed by the attorney-general for delinquency.⁷ At the meeting of the judges for choosing the spring circuits in 1837, twelve of their lordships came to certain resolutions con-

¹ Archb. Jervis's Acts, 80.

² R. v. Mayor of London, 5 Q. B. 555. Ex parte Fletcher, 1 Dowl. & L. 996.

³ Ex parte Humphrys; R. v. Herefordshire, JJ., 19 L. J. M. C. 189. If the depositions be refused, the course is to apply for a mandamus.

⁴ R. v. Conner and another, 1 Cox, 233.

⁵ Ex parte Greenacre, 8 C. & P. 32. R. v. White, 5 Cox, 562.

⁶ R. v. Aylett and another, 8 C. & P. 669.

⁷ The rule was refused. R. v. Holland, 4 T. R. 691.

nected with this statute, 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, which we will here subjoin :—

1. That, where a witness for the crown has made a deposition before a magistrate, he cannot, upon his cross-examination by the prisoner's counsel, be asked whether he did or did not, in his deposition, make such or such a statement, until the deposition itself has been read, in order to manifest whether such statement is or is not contained therein; and that such deposition must be read as part of the evidence of the cross-examining counsel.

2. That, after such deposition has been read, the prisoner's counsel may proceed in his cross-examination of the witness as to any supposed contradiction or variance between the testimony of the witness in court and his former deposition; after which the counsel for the prosecution may re-examine the witness, and, after the prisoner's counsel has addressed the jury, will be entitled to the reply. And in case the counsel for the prisoner comments upon any supposed variance or contradiction, without having read the deposition, the court may direct it to be read, and the counsel for the prosecution will be entitled to the reply upon it.

3. That the witness cannot, in cross-examination, be compelled to answer, whether he did or did not make such or such a statement before the magistrate, until after his deposition has been read, and it appears that it contains no mention of such statement. In that event the counsel for the prisoner may proceed with his cross-examination; and if the witness admits such statement to have been made, he may comment upon such omission, or upon the effect of it upon the other part of his testimony; or if the witness denies that he made such statement, the counsel for the prisoner may then, if such statement be material to the matter in issue, call witnesses to prove that he made such statement. But in either event, the reading of the deposition is the prisoner's evidence, and the counsel for the prosecution will be entitled to reply.

4. If the only evidence called, on the part of the prisoner, is evidence to character, although the counsel for the prosecution is entitled to the reply, it will be a matter for his discretion whether he will use it or not. Cases may occur in which it may be fit and proper so to do.

5. In cases of public prosecutions for felony, instituted by the crown, the law officers of the crown, and those who represent them, are, in strictness, entitled to the reply, although no evidence is produced on the part of the prisoner.¹

The right of the judges to make these resolutions has been questioned,² but it seems that they are now acted upon generally;³ and the judge may put a question to the witness as to any differences which appear between his evidence and the deposition, subject, perhaps, to a reply on the part of the counsel for the prosecution.⁴

If the counsel for several persons cannot agree as to their

¹ 1 Moo. C. C. 495. See 7 C. & P. 676; Law Mag. xvii. 470.

² 8 C. & P. 28.

³ 8 C. & P. 31.

⁴ R. v. Edwards and others, 8 C. & P. 26.

seniority, or as to their order of addressing the jury, the court will look to the order in which the names of the prisoners stand in the indictment, and will call upon counsel accordingly.¹ If there be no counsel for some of the prisoners, counsel shall have the preference, although it was once thought otherwise, but all the counsel must address the jury before any witnesses are called.² However, in one case, A. was principal; B., accessory after the fact. A. had no counsel, but was allowed to address the jury first.³ And yet Martin, B., seems to have ruled the contrary, and to have allowed the receiver, who was defended by counsel, to make his defence first.⁴ The prisoner's counsel should forbear from giving the prisoner's account of the transaction as part of his address. It might produce a reply from the counsel for the prosecution.⁵ In fact, he must not speak concerning any matter not in proof, or which he is not about to prove;⁶ and he must not read law cases to the jury, as part of his address, for the law flows from the judge.⁷

Queen's counsel.] If a Queen's counsel be desired on the prisoner's behalf, there must be a licence from the crown, and not merely a certificate from the secretary of state;⁸ and the same law applies to criminal informations. An application to the secretary, to which no answer has been returned, is insufficient, even admitting that a letter of licence would suffice.⁹

Addresses by prosecutor or prisoner.] The prosecutor must not at any time state his case and address the jury.¹⁰ Lord Ellenborough once allowed a prosecutor to address the jury, compelling him, however, to waive giving evidence in the case; but he afterwards felt that he had done wrong. Even with the waiver it was not the right course.¹¹ Again, the prisoner or defendant may not address the jury by himself and also by his counsel, unless under very special circumstances.¹² Yet there may be occasions when the prisoner will be allowed to make a statement, and one upon which his counsel may comment,¹³ provided it be not considered a pre-

¹ R. v. Barber, 1 Car. & K. 434; 1 Cox, 62, S. C. nom. R. v. Richards and others.

² R. v. Richards and others was overruled, as to the first point, by R. v. Hazell and another, 2 Cox, 220, Williams, J.

³ R. v. Thomas, 3 Jur. (N. S.), 272.

⁴ R. v. Belton, 5 Jur. (N. S.), 276. So was R. v. Martin, 3 Cox, 56.

⁵ R. v. Butcher, 2 Moo. & Rob. 228. R. v. Beard, 8 C. & P. 142.

⁶ R. v. Beard, ut sup.

⁷ R. v. Parish, 8 C. & P. 94.

⁸ R. v. Jones, 9 C. & P. 401.

⁹ R. v. Burtlett, 2 Car. & K. 321.

It is said, that the crown has no precedence in a criminal court, only in criminal cases in the Court of Exchequer. R. v. Landon, 1 Fost. & F. 381.

¹⁰ R. v. Brice, 2 B. & Ald. 606; 1 Ch. Rep. 352.

¹¹ R. v. Milne, 2 B. & Ald. 606, n.

¹² R. v. Boucher, 8 C. & P. 141. R. v. Burrows, 2 Moo. & Rob. 124. R. v. Rider, 8 C. & P. 539.

¹³ R. v. Malings, 8 C. & P. 242. A case for doing grievous bodily harm, the prosecutor and the prisoner being the only persons present. R. v. Manzani, 2 Fost. & F. 64.

cedent.¹ But Alderson, B., has commented very strongly upon the injustice arising from such a rule, and has admitted the right of the prisoner to speak, and of his counsel to comment.² Whilst, on the other hand, Byles, J., refused, in 1859, at York, to allow counsel for the prisoner to address the jury after the prisoner's statement.³ Again, if the defendant should persist in reserving to himself the right of addressing the jury, the court will not allow counsel to cross-examine for him, although they may suggest questions or argue points of law.⁴ And in the case of a prisoner, the court left it to him to choose whether he would make his own defence or leave it to his counsel, as both could not be heard. This was at the close of the case, and after the cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution.⁵ Should any new fact transpire during the trial, the prosecutor's counsel is not to claim a speech in order to lay those facts before the jury.⁶

The rule concerning hostile witnesses called for the prosecution is thus stated by Alderson, B. "If you are obliged by law to call a witness, you may contradict him; if you create the contradiction, you cannot remove it, but if it arises in the course of the case, you may. You may always contradict a fact stated by your witness, but you cannot prove that he said something else at another time."⁷

When witnesses are called for the prisoner the counsel for the prosecution may reply.⁸ The rule seems to be, that if prisoners be jointly indicted, and call witnesses, there may be a general reply; but if the offences are separate, and if the prisoners might have been separately indicted, the reply must be confined to the case of him who has called the witnesses.⁹ Three were indicted for murder: witnesses for the defence were called for one only: the counsel for the crown, nevertheless, might reply generally upon the whole case, although the evidence for the one prisoner did not affect the other two. But if the evidence in the case affects the prisoners with different offences, as larceny and receiving, and one only calls witnesses, there is no right of reply against both.¹⁰ But where a witness was called to prove an alibi for one prisoner, and the other called no witness, a general reply upon the whole case was allowed.¹¹

Again, if a witness be called merely to character, the prosecutor's counsel may reply upon the whole case,¹² but it is a very unusual

¹ R. v. Walkling, 8 C. & P. 243.

² R. v. Dyer, 1 Cox, 113. R. v. Williams, Id. 63.

³ R. v. Taylor, 1 Fost. & F. 535. Nor would he allow the counsel for the crown in a mint case to reply, no evidence having been called for the prisoner.

⁴ R. v. White, 3 Campb. 98. R. v. Parkins, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 166; 1 C. & P. 548.

⁵ R. v. Teste, 1 Fost. & F. 294.

⁶ R. v. Courvoisier, 9 C. & P. 362.

⁷ R. v. Carpenter, 1 Cox, 72.

⁸ There were instances in former days of replies without such testimony. See Peake, 236, n., and post.

⁹ R. v. Hayes, 2 Moo. & Rob. 155. See also R. v. Jordan, 9 C. & P. 118.

¹⁰ R. v. Blackburn, 3 Car. & K. 330.

¹¹ R. v. Briggs, 1 Fost. & F. 106.

¹² R. v. Whiting, 7 C. & P. 771. R. v. Corfell, 1 Cox, 123.

course, and ought rarely to be exercised.¹ So, if the judge should insist upon a deposition being read in favour of the prisoner, there may be a reply. If, notwithstanding the resolutions of the judges,² the judge himself thinks fit to cross-examine a witness as to any discrepancy between his deposition and evidence, whether, new facts being elicited, the prosecutor's counsel can reply, is made a question.³ Again, if new facts be opened by the prisoner's counsel, although not proved by him, the reply is let in.⁴ If a counsel commence his reply per incuriam, and propose to put in a statement, he shall not be hindered from doing so. So, if the issue be material, as where, in answer to the prisoner's witnesses, he proposed to give in the prisoner's statement before the justice, containing a different account of the transaction.⁵

It has been said, that there can be no reply unless the prisoner calls witnesses. As in R. v. Lord Abingdon, it was in vain urged that counsel for the crown always had that privilege, that it was common on the circuit, and of usual occurrence. Lord Kenyon would not permit it.⁶ Yet two years afterwards, it is strange to say that, according to a note in Peake, Lord Kenyon allowed this reply, also in libel, although his decision in R. v. Lord Abingdon, was cited to him by the defendant's counsel.⁷ But the noble chief justice admitted the undoubted right of the attorney-general. The attorney-general has extensive powers, as in the instance just cited, where he may reply in the absence of witnesses for the defence.⁸ And the same privilege adheres to a counsel who appears as the representative of the attorney-general.⁹ Although some judges have expressed a wish that the privilege had never been conceded, and it is strictly confined to the attorney-general of England. The attorney-general of a county palatine cannot claim it. He has been refused at Liverpool.¹⁰ So again, at York, the crown counsel was refused upon the assertion of a similar claim.¹¹

Again, in collateral issues the attorney-general may reply with new matter, although no witnesses are called on the other side.¹² In a case which followed, R. v. Marsden, the full right was allowed, no witnesses being called for the defence.¹³ Again, the attorney-general said, that he appeared as the counsel and private friend of the lord chancellor, whom the defendant had libelled, and in this case he did not reply. No witness had been called for the defendant.¹⁴ Where

¹ R. v. Stannard, 7 C. & P. 673, Patteson and Williams, JJ.

² See 7 C. & P. 676; Roscoe on Ev. 220. R. v. Brooks, 1 Cox, 7.

³ R. v. Edwards, 8 C. & P. 26, 27. Case at Monmouth.

⁴ R. v. Bignold, 4 D. & Ry. 70.

⁵ R. v. White, 2 Cox, 192.

⁶ R. v. Peake, N. P. C. 236. Libel.

⁷ R. v. Smith, Id. 236, n.

⁸ R. v. Lord Abingdon, sup. R. v. Marsden and others, Moo. & Malk. 439.

⁹ R. v. Gardener, 1 Car. & K. 628.

¹⁰ R. v. Beckwith, 7 Cox, 505.

¹¹ R. v. Christie, Id. 506; 1 Fost. & F. 75.

¹² R. v. Radcliffe, 1 Sir W. Bl. 3.

¹³ Moo. & Malk. 439.

¹⁴ R. v. Bell, Moo. & Malk. 440.

the crown is the defendant in error, and the really litigant party, the counsel for the crown is, in this case, not entitled, ex jure, to the reply.¹

Counsel will be assigned to a prisoner at his request where there is a doubt, whether, in point of law, the facts charged maintain the indictment; whether the witnesses are legal, the jurors lawful, or the indictment and process right. The prisoner must first propose the point, and then counsel will be assigned to argue it.² The court, however, will not hear more than two counsel upon a point of law.³ By leave of the court, counsel may assist the prisoner as well in as out of prison.⁴ But the request must come from the prisoner.⁵ The peers will not permit counsel to argue a question concerning parliamentary proceedings.⁶ In error, when there are separate writs, there may be separate counsel, and each counsel is entitled to a reply, although the writs have proceeded from one indictment only.⁷

The judges will hear counsel for the crown under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, although there be no counsel for the prisoner.⁸

If counsel be an interpreter he must be sworn.⁹

¹ O'Connell v. Reg. 11 Cl. & Fin. 155. As to cross indictments for assaults where there is no reply on either side, see R. v. Wanklyn, R. v. Vaughan, 8 C. & P. 290.

² 2 Hawk. c. 39, s. 4.

³ R. v. Bernard, 1 Fost. & F. 240.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 39, s. 7.

⁵ R. v. Yscuado, 6 Cox, 386.

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 39, s. 6.

⁷ O'Connell v. Reg. (in error), 11 Cl. & F. 155.

⁸ R. v. Martin, Den. 398; 18 L. J. M. C. 137.

⁹ R. v. Kelly and another, Id. 75.

CHAPTER XIII.

OF ELECTION.

Election.] Amongst other preliminary matters which occur to the mind of counsel, that of requiring the prosecutor to elect upon what charge, if there be two or more, he may choose to proceed upon, is not unfrequent.¹ This idea is founded upon the supposition that the case extends to more than one charge, and that the prisoner is likely to be embarrassed in his defence.² For long, the prosecutor could only proceed upon one charge of larceny in one indictment, and the same rule still applies in most cases of felony.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 5, it shall be lawful to insert several counts in the same indictment against the same person for any number of distinct acts of stealing, not exceeding three, which may have been committed by him against the same person within the space of six months from the first to the last of such acts, and to proceed thereon for all or any of them.

By sect. 6, if upon the trial of any indictment for larceny it shall appear that the property alleged in such indictment to have been stolen at one time was taken at different times, the prosecutor shall not by reason thereof be required to elect upon which taking he will proceed, unless it shall appear that there were more than three takings, or that more than the space of six months elapsed between the first and the last of such takings; and in either of such last-mentioned cases the prosecutor shall be required to elect to proceed for such number of takings, not exceeding three, as appear to have taken place within the period of six months from the first to the last of such takings.

In misdemeanor, the prosecutor is confined to two or more charges,³ according to the number of counts which allege the offence to have been committed on different days. Where one was indicted for an indecent exposure of his person, and there were two counts, Parke, B., confined the proof to two instances, i. e., either one on each of two separate days, or two separate instances on the same day.⁴ And several misdemeanors may be tried upon the same indictment, as libels, assaults, &c., and various frauds are allowed to be given in evidence under the same prosecution.⁵ And where there were several counts which stated the commission of several misdemeanors of the same nature, and naming the same day in each count, the prosecutor was not confined to that day, but was allowed by Abbott, C. J., to introduce evidence of the charge upon other days, notwithstanding the

¹ See 3 T. R. 106, Buller, J.; 8 East, 41.

² R. v. Trueman, 8 C. & P. 727.

³ See, in felony, R. v. Smith and another, Ry. & Moo. N. P. C. 295.

⁴ R. v. Rowbattel, 1 Lew. C. C. 83.

⁵ R. v. Jones, 2 Campb. 132.

omission of the words, "divers other days and times."¹ But two indictments for the same transaction cannot be maintained. There must be an election.² There was a joint offence of stealing in the county of Gloucester, where the booty was distributed, and the shares were carried off into Worcestershire in separate bags. Upon an indictment in Worcestershire against four persons jointly for this offence, the judge put the prosecutor as to his election as to which prisoner he would proceed against, and the trial then proceeded upon one case only.³ And where two were charged with conspiracy and libel, and it turned out that there was evidence against both with regard to the conspiracy, but, as to the libel, against one only, Coleridge, J., compelled the prosecutor to elect before he would suffer the defence to be entered into.⁴

The rule in felony may be easily illustrated. There were two indictments, one for stabbing, the other for an assault, and the judge put the prosecutor to his election, expressing his disapprobation of the double charge.⁵ So, where there was a count for burglary, and one for larceny, with a former conviction appended, the same rule prevailed.⁶ Counts for rape, and the assault with intent, &c., have been ranged under the same law.⁷ So it is in the case of robbery, and the assault with intent to rob.⁸ Again, where there were indictments against the prisoner for night poaching and for stealing a coat, the court refused to allow evidence of the coat having been found in the prisoner's house to prove his identity upon the poaching charge, unless the prosecutor would consent to an acquittal upon the indictment for larceny.⁹ Where the prisoner was tried for forging navy receipts, it was not considered necessary that the prosecutor should be directed to point out the particular receipt upon which he intended to proceed, because the indictment charged him with uttering all the receipts at one and the same time.¹⁰ So, the custom of allowing counts for forging and uttering to be proceeded with, is founded upon the supposition that the same man might forge a bank note or other negotiable instrument, and utter it on the very instant it was forged, so as to constitute one continuous act.¹¹ But the judges, upon the consideration of this case, directed that the clerk of assize should not put both charges into the same indictment.¹² So it is with respect to the forgery of a bill with the acceptance

¹ R. v. Levy and others, 2 Stark. 458.

² R. v. Britton, 1 M. & Rob. 297.

³ R. v. Barnett and others, 2 Russ. C. M. 118.

⁴ R. v. Murphy, 8 C. & P. 297.

⁵ R. v. Smith, 3 C. & P. 412, Vaughan, B. R. v. Doran, Leach, 538, Eyre, C. B.

⁶ R. v. Holmes, 1 Lew. C. C.

149. Bolland, B., after consulting with Lord Denman. R. v. Bland, 1d.

⁷ Anon. Id. 276.

⁸ R. v. Gough, 1 Moo. & Rob. 71.

⁹ R. v. Westwood, 4 C. & P. 547.

¹⁰ R. v. Thomas, Leach, 877.

¹¹ By the recorder in R. v. Galloway, 1 Moo. C. C. 236.

¹² 1 Moo. C. C. 236.

and indorsement. No election was required.¹ So, where a gun was fired off, and one count charged the intent to have been to kill the husband, and the other the wife, Park, J.; held that the prosecutor need not elect.² And in a case of shooting, the prosecutor need not elect to proceed against the prisoners as principals in the first or second degree.³ So, where there were two indictments, one for shooting at a gamekeeper, and the other for night poaching, both arising out of the same transaction, no election was necessary.⁴ So, upon an indictment for poisoning, and a conspiracy to poison, the same doctrine obtained.⁵ So under 1 Vict. c. 85, no election is needed as to the respective offences of stabbing and wounding, maiming and disabling, &c., although the judgment is different. It is for the jury to decide to which count the evidence applies.⁶ So, where there were several houses in a row, and the prisoner stood charged with firing the whole, (for it was one transaction,) no election was necessary.⁷ So, in a case of robbery of two persons, one shilling was taken from one, and two from the other; if the whole was one transaction, no election accrues.⁸ So, upon an indictment for housebreaking, the property being laid in different persons in several counts, it was held, that there might be as many counts for stealing as receiving, and that the prosecutor need not elect.⁹ So, where two persons were driving furiously, the one inciting, and the other using the whip, there was no election.¹⁰ The judge will hear the facts of one continued transaction, and then, if necessary, will require the prosecutor to elect upon what facts he means to rely.¹¹ It is in the discretion of the judge to confine the prosecutor to one proof of felony, or to allow him the liberty of proving acts which are all parts of the same transaction. So, that where the evidence respecting felonies of the same character cannot be separated without inconvenience, the judge may admit the double evidence without requiring election.¹² There were counts for sedition, for attending seditious meetings, and for a riot. The court refused an application that the prosecutor should make an election.¹³ If all the articles missed might have been stolen at once, the prosecutor needs not to elect, although the probability may be the other way.¹⁴ Seventy sheep

¹ R. v. Young, Russ. & R. 280, n. Le Blanc, J.; Peake, Add. Ca. 228.

² R. v. Butter, 1 Lew. C. C. 86. R. v. Voke, Russ. & Ry. 531.

³ R. v. Towle, Russ. & R. 314; 3 Price, 145.

⁴ R. v. Handley and another, 5 C. & P. 565.

⁵ R. v. Maudsley and another, 1 Lew. C. C. 85; and see R. v. Folkes and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 354.

⁶ R. v. Strange, 8 C. & P. 172.

⁷ R. v. Trueman, 8 C. & P. 727.

⁸ R. v. Giddins, Car. & M. 634.

⁹ R. v. Beeton, Den. 414; 2 Car. & K. 960; 18 L. J. M. C. 117. The counts for receiving were under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46.

¹⁰ R. v. Swindall and another, 2 Cox, 141. Manslaughter.

¹¹ R. v. Hart, 7 C. & P. 652; Littledale, J. Uttering a forged bill.

¹² R. v. Hinley, 1 Cox, 12.

¹³ R. v. Fussell, 3 Cox, 291.

¹⁴ R. v. Dunn, 1 Moo. C. C. 146.

were put on a common on June 18th, and were not missed till November. The prisoner was in the possession of four of the sheep in October, and of nineteen in November. Bayley, J., would not compel the prosecutor to elect.¹ The discretion as to election lies with the judge.²

We are now about to proceed with the consideration of witnesses and evidence. Anterior to this, we may just mention, that the prisoner's place is at the dock, or bar of the court, if the charge be for felony. In cases of misdemeanor the defendant may sit with his counsel. The consent of the prosecutor cannot alter the rule in a case of felony.³ This inconvenience may, however, be mitigated. The prisoner may have friends to stand by him. As at the request of a captain in the army who was charged with murder in a duel.⁴ The circumstance of the party being a foreigner makes no difference. As where a merchant of London was indicted for slave dealing, his counsel applied that the prisoner might sit by him, not because of his rank in society, but because several documents connected with the trial were in a foreign language, but the court refused the application,⁵ whereas, upon a charge of sedition, the defendant was suffered to sit at the table of the court.⁶

¹ R. v. Dewhirst, 2 Stark. Ev. 614.

² R. v. Jones, 2 Russ. C. M. 185.

³ R. v. St. George, 9 C. & P. 483.

⁴ R. v. Douglas, Car. & M. 193.

⁵ R. v. Zulueta, 1 Cox, 20; 1 Car. & K. 215; Maule and Wightman, JJ.

⁶ R. v. Lovett, 9 C. & P. 462.

CHAPTER XIV.

OF EVIDENCE.

Evidence.] The evidence¹ against the prisoner is now gone into; and this involves two subjects: first, with respect to the witnesses, and, secondly, the testimony which is to be adduced. The competency or disqualification of parties formed at one period a considerable portion of the law concerning witnesses. Recent Acts of parliament, however, have very much modified the objections to competency. There used to be four main branches of disqualification upon this head:—1. Want of understanding. 2. Want of religious belief. 3. Infamy. 4. Interest. The two former objections are still retained, the two latter have been abolished by an Act of the legislature.

Want of understanding.] With reference to the first class—idiots, deaf and dumb persons, lunatics, and children are included. But if the deaf and dumb can communicate by signs, or if the lunatic should have lucid intervals, the one is entirely admissible,² and likewise the other during his term of sanity. And even in the case of a delusion upon a particular subject, if the lunatic is sane in other respects his testimony is admissible; the weight of it is for the jury to determine. So it was when the lunatic was called to prove that the prisoner threw down the deceased.³ He was first examined on the “voir dire,” and it lay with the judge to determine upon his admissibility.⁴ The reception of an infant’s testimony lies in the discretion of the court. And this discretion will be exercised according to the capacity of the child to distinguish between good and evil. Even in cases almost of necessity. As where a rape had been committed. The infant’s testimony ought not to have been received, as she could not comprehend the nature of an oath, and hence it follows that such an infant must be sworn.⁵ It has been held that instructions given merely for the purposes of trial are insufficient.⁶ Nor can the child’s information be given to other persons with that view, for that would be to dispense with the best evidence.⁷ But the trial may be postponed so that the infant may be instructed generally, ¹ See an instance of a committal at sessions, where the judges of criminal appeal declared that there was not a scintilla of evidence. R. v. Walker and another, Dears. 280. The witness need not be sworn by the clerk of the peace; if sworn in open court, as by the crier, it is sufficient. 24 L. J. M. C. 62. R. v. Tew, Dears. 429.

² R. v. Ruston, Leach, 408. Where the party, mutus et surdus nativitate, was examined through an interpreter, his own sister.

³ R. v. Hill, Den. & P. 254; 20 L. J. M. C. 222.

⁴ S. C. Whether he could be objected to on the ground of insanity after his examination in chief, qu. ? Sembl. not. S. C. acquitted.

⁵ R. v. Powell, Leach, 110, n. R. v. Steward, Str. 701. R. v. Travers, Id. 700.

⁶ R. v. Williams, 7 C. & P. 320.

⁷ R. v. Brasier, Leach, 199.

although this cannot be done in the case of an adult.¹ Nor, indeed, can it be done when the infant is quite young, for example, only six years of age.²

If a person examined before a magistrate is of weak intellect, the magistrate's questions and the answers of the witness as to the capacity of the proposed witness to take an oath, should be written down by the clerk.³

Want of religious belief.] Secondly, a difference in religious belief from that which is recognized as the law of the land, will sometimes interfere with the witness. The test is the credit which the party attaches to future rewards and punishments, and even if the belief be of a retribution in this world, it is said that the person will not be incompetent.⁴ Ignorance, again, arising independently of wilful unbelief, will have a disqualifying effect. As when one sworn on the voir dire, said he had heard of a God, and believed that liars would come to the gallows, but acknowledged that he had never learned the catechism, that he was altogether ignorant of the obligation of an oath, or of a future state of rewards and punishments, or of the existence of another world, or of what became of wicked people after death. He was rejected.⁵ We may, therefore, conclude that the questions put by Buller, J., to the witness were correct, when he asked—1. Whether he believed in God? 2. Whether he admitted the obligation of an oath? 3. Whether he believed in a future state of rewards and punishments?⁶ The reason formerly for excluding Quakers was, because they scrupled to take an oath, not through an imputation of any defect in religious principles. Now, however, by 9 Geo. 4, c. 32, and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 49, s. 1, Quakers or Moravians who may be required to give evidence, may, instead of an oath, make their solemn affirmation, in all places, and for all purposes, where an oath can be required either at common law or by Act of parliament, both in civil and criminal cases, and, in case of falsehood, they are rendered liable to the penalties of perjury. And a similar relief is afforded to Separatists by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 82. By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 77, persons who have been Quakers or Moravians are permitted to make a solemn affirmation and declaration in lieu of an oath, being liable, in cases of falsehood, to the penalties of perjury.⁷ And by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 105, in any case where an oath may be lawfully administered to any person, either as a jurymen or a witness, or a deponent in any proceeding civil or criminal, in any court of law or equity in the United Kingdom, or on appointment to any office or employment, or on any occasion whatever, such person is bound by the oath administered, provided the same shall have been administered in

¹ R. v. Wade, 1 Moo. C. C. 86.

² R. v. Nicholas, 2 Car. & K. 246.

³ R. v. Painter, 2 Cox, 244; Willes, 549.

⁴ Willes, 549.

⁵ R. v. White, Leach, 430.

⁶ R. v. Taylor, Peake, N. P. C.

11. Erskine wished the test to be, whether he believed in Jesus Christ, or in the Holy Gospels of God.

⁷ Providing for the difficulty in R. v. Doran and another, 2 Moo. C. C. 37.

such form, and with such ceremonies, as such person shall declare to be binding, subject as aforesaid to the pains of perjury in case of false swearing.¹ However, before this Act the Scotch covenant was sworn by the holding up of his hand instead of touching or kissing the book.² And by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 66, s. 1, if any person called as a witness in any court of criminal jurisdiction in England or Ireland, or required or desiring to make an affidavit or deposition in the course of any criminal proceeding, shall refuse or be unwilling, from alleged conscientious motives, to be sworn, it shall be lawful for the court or judge, or other presiding officer or person qualified to take affidavits or depositions, upon being satisfied of the sincerity of such objection, to permit such person, instead of being sworn, to make his or her solemn affirmation or declaration, in the words following; videlicet, "I, A. B., do solemnly, sincerely, and truly affirm and declare, that the taking of any oath is, according to my religious belief, unlawful; and I do also solemnly, sincerely, and truly affirm and declare," &c. Which solemn affirmation and declaration shall be of the same force and effect as if such person had taken an oath in the usual form. By sect. 2 an affirmation or declaration wilfully false will subject the witness to the penalties of perjury. So a Mahometan upon the Koran.³ A Jew and a Gentoo. And a Jew may be sworn upon the New Testament, although he has not formally renounced his ancient religion.⁴ So, again, a Chinese might be sworn according to his custom.⁵ And where a witness, a negro, stated that he was a christian, and had been baptized, Platt, B., would not allow him to be asked any further question as to his competency.⁶

Infamy and interest.] The difficulties which arise from infamy and interest have been very considerably removed and abated. By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, s. 1,⁷ no person offered as a witness shall be excluded by reason of incapacity, from crime or interest, from giving evidence, either in person or by deposition, according to the practice of the court, on the trial of any issue joined, or of any matter in question, or on any inquiry arising in any suit, action, or proceeding, civil or criminal, in any court, or before any judge, jury, sheriff, coroner, magistrate, officer, or person, having by law, or by consent of parties, authority to hear, receive, and examine evidence. But any person so offered may and shall be admitted to give evidence on oath, or solemn affirmation, in those cases

¹ See the Mutiny Acts.

² Leach, 412. R. v. Mildrone.

³ Id. 54. R. v. Morgan.

⁴ 1 Esp. 285. R. v. Gilham.

If the witness should take an oath in the usual form, it is no objection that he is of another religion, or that some other form of swearing is more binding on his conscience. If he swear falsely under such circumstances, he may be punished for perjury. Sells v. Hoare, 3

Brod. & Bing. 232, Richardson, J.

See also 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 147, &c.

⁵ Car. & M. 248. R. v. Entrehman.

⁶ 2 Car. & K. 53. R. v. Serva and another.

⁷ See the preamble. The stat. 27 Geo. 3, c. 29, is repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 101.

wherein affirmation is by law receivable, notwithstanding that such person may or shall have an interest in the matter in question, or in the event of the trial of any issue, matter, question, or inquiry, or of the suit, action, or proceeding, in which he is offered as a witness, and notwithstanding that such person offered as a witness may have been previously convicted of any crime or offence. A proviso follows, that no person individually named in the record, suit, &c., shall be competent, nor any lessors of the plaintiff, nor the husband nor wife of any of the persons above mentioned. But this is repealed by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 1. By sect. 2 of that Act, all parties may be admissible witnesses. Only by sect. 3, they shall not be compellable to criminate themselves. Nor shall any husband be "competent or compellable" to give evidence against his wife, and vice versa. Nor in civil cases, neither, by any inference.¹ Nor can a wife prove desertion.²

Under sect. 2, a defendant upon an information under the revenue laws may give evidence in his own favour.³

The phrase, "any party to any proceeding individually named in the record," soon came to undergo consideration. Two persons were charged with larceny, and a third as receiver. One pleaded guilty, and judgment was respited. He was then tendered as a witness for the prosecution, and was admitted. Upon argument before the judges, it was submitted,—1, that, independently of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, he should not have been so admitted; 2, that proceeding meant "criminal" as well as civil; 3, that the witness was a party to the proceeding. The judges were clear against the first objection. As to the second, Alderson, B., remarked that the witness was not a party to the issue. And as to the third objection, the judges were unanimous that the witness was admissible at common law.⁴

No provision, however, of the Statute of Wills⁵ shall be repealed by the Act. By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 3,⁶ no person can give evidence for or against himself,⁷ either upon a charge by indictment or upon summary conviction, nor need he answer any question tending to criminate himself, nor need he, nor can he give evidence for or against his wife, nor needs nor can the wife give evidence for or against her husband. Hence, upon a charge under the game laws, the defendant was not allowed to give evidence on his own behalf.⁸ The Act, however, does not interfere with the rules laid down by the judges respecting accomplices and king's evidences. Confirmation of the stories of those persons is

¹ Nor in civil proceedings. Alcock v. Alcock, 21 L. J. Ch. 856. Barbat v. Allen, 21 L. J. Ex. 155. Stapleton v. Croft, 21 L. J. Q. B. 247, Erle, J., diss.

² 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 4. Pyne v. Pyne, 27 L. J. Prob. 54.

³ Att.-Gen. v. Radloff, 10 Exch. 84; 23 L. J. Exch. 240. Platt, B., and Martin, B., acc.; Pollock, C.B., and Parke, B. diss.

⁴ R. v. Hincks and others, Den. 184. R. v. Drury, 3 Car. & K. 190. R. v. Gerber, 1 Temp. & M. 647. R. v. Arundel and another, 4 Cox, 260.

⁵ 1 Vict. c. 26.

⁶ Ante.

⁷ See Taylor on Ev. 1096. R. v. Stevenson.

⁸ Cattell, appellant, Ireson, respondent, 27 L. J. M. C. 171.

still required by the court, and the admission of a king's evidence lies still in the discretion of the judge. And the interest consequent upon the relationship of husband and wife survives as a disqualification. The statute affects pecuniary interest alone.

We will, therefore, advert to the subjects of accomplice, king's evidence, and interest by relationship. And first, concerning accomplices. The accomplice is admissible whether separately indicted or not, and he need not plead guilty in either case, nor is it usual indeed to include him in the indictment, when it is intended to make use of his testimony. The promise of pardon or reward may operate as a blow to his credit, but it does not touch his competency. A fortiori, a particeps criminis in an information against whom no evidence is given, and who has even been left out for the purpose, may appear, although a recovery against the defendant will discharge himself.¹ So a person who has received a bribe at an election may be a witness against the defendant.² However, although the admissibility of confederates is not destroyed by their union in crime, it is scarcely necessary to repeat that their testimony is received with a sufficient degree of suspicion. And although, in strictness, the evidence of a confederate accomplice is of itself enough to convict a prisoner,³ the court will frequently direct an acquittal unless part of the story be confirmed by other evidence.⁴ Although, latterly, the question has been considered to be one for the jury.⁵ The rule extends to a woman who appears before the jury as a consenting party to her husband, who has committed an unnatural offence with her. She is an accomplice, and her story must be confirmed.⁶

Then the questions arise as to what part this confirmation should extend, and how far. As to the first point, it seems that the accomplice should be confirmed not only as to the circumstances of the crime, but also as to the person of the prisoner, although the rule was much more lax formerly.⁷ The jury may be told that they may convict on unsupported testimony, but the judge will advise them not to act upon it.⁸ A conviction at Durham upon unsupported evidence as to one of three was affirmed, but the court intimated their disapprobation of the ruling, although they

¹ 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 100.

² Post.

³ Leach, 464. R. v. Atwood and another, 2 Campb. 132. R. v. Jones. In this last case, however, Lord Ellenborough said he considered that the accomplice had been amply confirmed.

⁴ Leach, 479, n. R. v. Smith and another. See 5 C. & P. 326. R. v. Noakes.

⁵ R. v. Hastings and another, 7 C. & P. 152. The reporters affirm that this is a distinct decision in favour of the question so much contended for: that there needs not to be any confirmation of the testimony of the accomplice. Id. 153, n. The verdict, however, was Not guilty.

⁶ R. v. Jellyman, 8 C. & P. 604.

⁷ See R. v. Atwood and another, Leach, 464; 7 T. R. 609. R. v. Hyde, cited, 7 T. R. 710. R. v. Durham and another, Leach, 478. R. v. Jones, Leach, 466, n.; 2 Campb. 132, 133. R. v. Dawber, 3 Stark. 34. R. v. Webb and another, 6 C. & P. 595. R. v. Farler, 8 C. & P. 106. R. v. Dyke, Id. 261.

⁸ 25 L. J. M. C. 16. By Parke, B., as his practice, and Jervis, C. J.

could not interfere.¹ The confirmation in the case of prisoners charged with the same offence should extend to all. It would not be safe to convict those of whose guilt there is no confirmation.² The right rule is to recommend the jury to acquit the prisoner when the accomplice, as to him, is not supported.³ A confirmation by the wife of the accomplice is of no value.⁴ Where the offences are distinct, as in the case of principal and receiver,⁵ a confirmation as to one will not affect the other.⁶ A fortiori, where the confirmation failed as against the principal felon, and was very slight as to the receivers.⁷

Secondly, as to the point how far the confirmation should extend, it is laid down that it need not apply to the whole of the evidence, because in that case there would be no use in calling the accomplice.⁸ Nor will it apply to certain offences, as in the instance of a prize fight, to prove which persons present were called as witnesses.⁹ In another case the accomplice proved that the prisoner stole certain sheep, and, in confirmation of this story, evidence was given that a certain quantity of mutton was found in the prisoner's house, which corresponded with portions of the stolen sheep. This testimony was held sufficient.¹⁰

An accomplice may likewise appear for the defendants.¹¹ And since the statute 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, it makes no difference, as formerly, whether he appear before or after judgment against him.

Where the evidence against a prisoner is very slight, the court will occasionally direct an acquittal as to him, in order that his fellow prisoners may have the benefit of his testimony.¹² Two persons were charged with house-breaking. One pleaded guilty, but sentence was not passed; (and since the statute this makes no difference;)¹³ the other went to trial, and desired that his fellow prisoner might appear as a witness in his behalf. And the judge allowed his request.¹⁴ So it was, where it was proposed to call the prisoner, who had pleaded guilty, as a witness for the prosecution. It was urged, but in vain, that he was a party to the record.¹⁵ So

¹ R. v. Stubbs, 25 L. J. M. C. 16; S. C. 7 Cox, 48.

² R. v. Field, Dick. Q. S. 520.

³ S. C.

⁴ R. v. Moore and another, 7 C. & P. 270.

⁵ R. v. Wells and others, Moo. & M. 326.

⁶ R. v. Jenkins and another, 1 Cox, 177.

⁷ R. v. Wells, ut supra.

⁸ R. v. Hargrave, 5 C. & P. 170.

⁹ R. v. Birkett, 8 C. & P. 732.

As to principal and accessory, see R. v. Lyons, 9 C. & P. 555.

¹⁰ See Anon. 1 Lew. C. C. 324, Alderson, J. R. v. Slogrove, Id. 325.

¹¹ R. v. Fletcher, Str. 633, Pratt, C. J. R. v. Sherman, Ca. Temp.

Hardw. 303. See R. v. Lafone and others, 5 Esp. 154.

¹² R. v. Teal and others, 11 East, 309, 310; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 98. R. v. Careinion Castle, 8 East, 77; Id. 78, Lord Ellenborough; Id. 79, Lawrence, J. R. v. Lyons, 9 C. & P. 555.

¹³ Although upon such an occasion, Erle, J., thought it the most proper way to pass sentence first. R. v. Jackson and another, 6 Cox, 525.

¹⁴ R. v. George, Car. & M. 111. R. v. Archer, 3 Cox, 228.

¹⁵ R. v. King and another, 1 Cox, 232, and the above case was cited; so was R. v. Williams, cor. ten judges, 1 Cox, 289.

in informations, such of the defendants as are not affected by the evidence may be acquitted in order to be witnesses for the rest.¹ It is almost a matter of right that a prisoner, who is not touched by the testimony for the prosecution, should be acquitted in order that he may give evidence.² On the other hand, the prosecutors may insist upon the acquittal of a defendant in order that he may be a witness for the crown.³ Indeed it is customary to intrust the matter to the counsel for the prosecution as one for their discretion, and so it was held in a case of rape, where the application was acceded to, notwithstanding the opposition of the counsel for the prisoners.⁴ Thus, the principal felon may be witness against the receiver,⁵ or against one charged with taking a reward to help to the recovery of stolen goods.⁶ A prisoner pleaded guilty, but his evidence against others was not received until after the corroboration of his intended testimony.⁷

By 16 Vict. c. 30, s. 9, a secretary of state or judge may, upon affidavit, issue a warrant to bring up any prisoner under sentence, or commitment, or otherwise, (except civil process,) before any court, &c., to be examined as a witness in any case, civil or criminal. Such witness shall be dealt with in all respects as though he had been brought up by habeas corpus.

King's evidence.] The practice of admitting a person to give evidence on behalf of the crown is very nearly related to the subject of accomplices. It is done by an application commonly made before the trial, and the usual course is for counsel to state that he has read the depositions, and that, in his opinion, there is not evidence sufficient without that of the accomplice.⁸ But it rests with the judge to allow the proceeding or not. In general, it seems objectionable to suffer two persons to go before the grand jury.⁹ But where the learned judge was acquainted with the fact that two persons were to give evidence on two separate indictments for different offences, although arising out of the same transaction, he permitted them to go.¹⁰ And it is not usual to suffer a man who stands charged with another felony, to be a witness for the crown.¹¹ Yet if he be so admitted, he may still be tried for the other felony.¹² Indeed, the king's evidence is not

¹ 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 98.

² East, P. C. 313, n. The Bounty.

³ Ry. & M. N. P. C. 401. R. v. Rowland and others.

⁴ 9 C. & P. 83. R. v. Owen. Rape and murder. Three were charged, and it was sought to acquit one, that he might appear against the two others.

⁵ Leach, 418. R. v. Haslam, East, P. C. 782. R. v. Patram, Leach, 419, n.; East, ut sup. R. v. Price, Leach, 419, n.

⁶ R. v. Wild, Leach, 17, n.

But whether a person charged as principal in the same indictment with the accessory is a competent witness against the accessory, without being first acquitted or confessing, and suffering his punishment, is made a question? 9 C. & P. 555.

⁷ R. v. Sparks, 1 Fost. & F. 388.

⁸ 1 C. & P. 87. R. v. Barnard.

⁹ 1 Lew. C. C. 5. R. v. Barnsley Rioters, per Park, J.

¹⁰ Id.

¹¹ 2 C. & P. 411, per Park, J.

¹² S. C.

entitled, ex debito justitiæ, to a pardon for the offence which he has volunteered to disclose against his fellow prisoner, although the usage is in favour of lenity, and the party has an equitable recommendation to the mercy of the crown.¹ And he is certainly not so entitled in respect of other offences not connected with the particular matter at issue.² Therefore, it is not very uncommon to find convictions of witnesses of this description for other offences. For forgery,³ burglary,⁴ sheep-stealing,⁵ or for the same, as the accomplice refused to go before the grand jury.⁶ In the case of sheep-stealing the judges considered that it lay properly in the breast of the judge to order execution or not, according to his discretion.⁷ Murder is not an exception to the rule of admitting a king's evidence.⁸ But when a receiver gave important evidence as to another robbery, Coleridge, J., advised that he should not be prosecuted.⁹

There is still a disqualifying interest, although not pecuniary.¹⁰ But a father may appear for or against his son; a brother may give evidence where his brother or sister may be concerned, and should any bias be suspected upon such occasions, it is rather the credibility of the witness than his competency which is affected. It is the rule respecting husband and wife with which we have chiefly to do in this place; and it is not so much the tie of relationship which renders the husband and wife incompetent witnesses for each other, as the principle of law which recognizes them as one. This rule is maintained with some strictness. As where a joint offence is charged, and it is proposed to call the wife of one of the defendants as a witness for the other. This cannot be done because the cases cannot be separated, and the evidence must have a tendency to assist the husband.¹¹ So where D., a

¹ Cowp. 334.

² 1 Phil. Ev. 37.

³ Leach, 115. R. v. Rudd, S. C. Cowp. 331, where the king's evidence was admitted by the magistrates as far as they could.

⁴ Russ. & Ry. 361. R. v. Lee.

⁵ Id. 454, R. v. Brunton, note (6). R. v. Burley, 2 Russ. C. M. 958.

⁶ R. v. Holtham, 2 Russ. C. M. 959.

⁷ Russ. & Ry. 454. The king's evidence in this case had prevaricated so much as to render his testimony unworthy of credit. In fact he breaks the condition, if any. R. v. Moore, 2 Lew. C. C. 37.

⁸ East, P. C. 356.

⁹ R. v. Garside, 2 Lew. C. C. 38.

¹⁰ As to the old law respecting pecuniary interest, see 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 114, et seq.; East, P. C. 993; 1 Phil. Ev. 52, 53, 54. R. v. Fox, Str. 652. R. v. Machartney and others, Holt, Ca. 300. R. v. Paris and another, 2 Keb. 572. R. v. Muscott, 10 Mod. 193. R. v. Tilly, Str. 316. R. v. Dodd, Leach, 155, 157. R. v. Newland, Id. 311. R. v. The Rioters, Id. 314, n. R. v. Yates, 5 Jur. 636; 3 Esp. 68. R. v. Teasdale and others, 3 Esp. 68; Ry. & M. N. P. C. 243, n. Statutes, 5 Wm. & M. c. 11; 1 Ann. st. 1, c. 18, s. 13; 9 Geo. 4, c. 32, s. 2; 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32; 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 20, s. 21; c. 50, s. 100; 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 65, s. 9.

¹¹ R. v. Locker and others, 5 Esp. 107. R. v. Frederick and another, Str. 1094.

prisoner, proposed to call his daughter in support of an alibi, but it appeared that she was the wife of another prisoner at the bar, Littledale, J., rejected the evidence, and the judges held that he had done right;¹ but she might be examined upon an alibi for the other prisoner, not her husband.² Nor can a married woman prove a conversation between the prisoner and her husband, so as to show that these two persons committed the felony at issue,³ nor can this kind of testimony be received, even by consent, nor after a divorce, at least as to anything which has happened during coverture.⁴ But where the wife was not indicted, although she was alleged in the indictment to be one of the parties who had conspired to obtain money by a false document, the evidence of her husband was admitted against the other conspirator, to prove that the document had been filled up without his authority.⁵ And upon a trial for murder, it seems that the wife of one prisoner was allowed to appear as a witness for the prosecution, although her testimony went to prove both prisoners (who were brothers) guilty as principals.⁶ And what a wife says in the presence and hearing of her husband, when charged with felony, is evidence on the trial.⁷ So what he is overheard to say to his wife is evidence.⁸ And in collateral matters these parties may not only be called to give evidence, which, however incapable of being used against them, might indirectly affect them, but they may likewise, upon such occasions, be suffered to contradict each other.⁹ And upon the same principle, in those cases where the wife is allowed to testify, however indirectly, against the husband, she may also be a witness, so far as such indirect evidence goes, in his favour.¹⁰ Two persons were indicted for burglary; some of the stolen property was found in the house of each prisoner. The wife of one of them was called to prove that she had taken to the house of the other the property found there, and she was deemed a competent ¹ R. v. Smith and others, 1 Moo. C. C. 289. R. v. Hood, Id. 281. R. v. Denslow, 2 Cox, C. C. 230, when Smith's case was relied on and Bartlett's case distinguished.

² R. v. Moore and another, 1 Cox, C. C. 59. R. v. Bartlett, Id. 105, admitted by Wightman, J., with considerable doubt.

³ 2 Russ. C. M. 983. R. v. Glead.

⁴ Barker v. Dixie, Ca. Temp. Hardw. 264.

⁵ R. v. Halliday, 29 L. J. M. C. 148; Bell, 257. The first count charged the prisoner with the false pretence; the second count charged him with conspiring, together with E. F. (not indicted), to cheat a savings bank. An acquittal on the second count was deemed quite consistent with a conviction on the first. See R. v. All Saints, Worcester, 6 M. & S. 194. R. v. Bathwick, 2 B. & Adol. 639.

⁶ R. v. Grattan, Car. Cr. L. 66. This is seriously overruling the opinion of Bolland, B., who in a trial for sheep-stealing, would not permit the wife of one prisoner to give evidence against the rest. R. v. Webb and others, 2 Russ. C. M. 982. Mr. Pitt Taylor is also dissatisfied with this ruling. Of Ev. 1101.

⁷ R. v. Bartlett, 7 C. & P. 832.

⁸ R. v. Simons, 6 C. & P. 540.

⁹ See 2 Russ. C. M. 983.

¹⁰ Ry. & M. N. P. C. 354, per Abbott, C. J.

witness.¹ Although the wife of a receiver not indicted with the prisoner has been held not compellable to give evidence against the prisoner.²

There is one other principle which forms an exception to the general rule. In cases of personal injury the law would sometimes be defeated if the party who had sustained the mischief were incapacitated from attesting it; and therefore whether the charge be for beating the wife, or shooting at her,³ or forcibly abducting her, although she may consent afterwards to the cohabitation,⁴ or otherwise maltreating her,⁵ she may be sworn, in order to make good her story against her husband. And there is likewise the common case of swearing the peace. Where murder has been committed, the dying depositions of either party are also evidence, subject to the usual rule concerning those means of proof.⁶ However, it may be added here, that personal violence is the circumstance which lets in the evidence. So, in conspiracy against defendants for procuring marriages, neither husband nor wife can be called, for the facts may be proved aliundè, and so it has been held where the testimony of the wife in favour of a co-defendant with her husband might have enured to his acquittal.⁷ And so again it was where the husband appeared to substantiate a charge of conspiracy for marrying him to a woman of indifferent fame.⁸ Upon the principle lately mentioned, the husband has been allowed to testify, in a case of assault with intent, &c., that his wife speedily complained to him, and also to speak to her situation and appearance.⁹ The presence, however, of a wife or husband when injured is not indispensable. As when a man was charged with shooting at his wife with intent to murder her, the husband insisted that his wife should be present as a witness necessary to his interests. The counsel for the prosecution declined to call her, and the judge acquainted the prisoner that although his wife was a competent witness against him, yet that her presence was not necessary.¹⁰ The evidence of a wife against a prisoner may be received, although she may entertain a hope that, in case of conviction, her own husband may be pardoned; the objection going to her credit, not to her competency.¹¹ And where B. had been convicted of sheep-stealing, B.'s wife was held competent to testify against A., to prove that A. had stolen the sheep jointly with B.¹²

¹ R. v. Sills, 1 Car. & K. 494.

² R. v. Ast, Car. C. L. 66.

³ R. v. Jagger, East, P. C. 455.

⁴ R. v. Wakefield, 2 Lew. C. C. 279. R. v. Brown, 1 Ventr. 243.

⁵ R. v. Ld. Audley, 1 St. Trials, 393. R. v. Azire, Str. 633. R. v. Perry, Ry. & Moo. N. P. C. 354, cited. R. v. Wakefield, Taylor on Ev. 1107. And see Lord Audley's case, R. v. Griggs, Tho. Raym. 1, where it was denied that Lord Audley's case was law. It should have been understood as between the husband and a third person, not the husband and his wife.

⁶ R. v. Woodcock, Leach, 500.

⁷ R. v. Locker and others, 5 Esp. 107.

⁸ R. v. Sergeant and others, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 352.

⁹ R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark. 241.

¹⁰ R. v. Pearce, 9 C. & P. 667.

¹¹ R. v. Rudd, Leach, 127.

¹² R. v. Williams, 8 C. & P. 284.

A question has sometimes presented itself, whether a woman who has cohabited with a man can be allowed to deny the marriage upon oath, so as to become a witness in his favour. Upon this point Richards, C. B., said, in Campbell v. Twemlow, that he remembered a prosecution before Lord Kenyon in 1782, for forgery, in which a woman to whom the prisoner had frequently alluded in his defence as his wife, was rejected as a witness for him.¹ But this ruling of Lord Kenyon, although adopted by Best, C. J., upon one occasion, was not sustained upon argument, and the C. J. admitted that he had been misled by Lord Kenyon's decision.²

Again, in pecuniary matters, although the stat. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, includes pecuniary interest in its provisions, yet the law remains the same as far as husband and wife are concerned. In a case of forcible entry and retainer, the wife of the party expelled was rejected by Littledale, J., for the statutes entitle the prosecutor to restitution.³ This case seems to be still an authority, notwithstanding the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 85, which enables the husband and wife of any party in an action to be competent and compellable to give evidence. For criminal cases are excepted by the 2nd section. Judges, arbitrators, and counsel are good witnesses in collateral matters, or after the subjects of their respective jurisdictions or employments are at an end, but they are otherwise not compellable to give evidence.⁴

Juryman.] A juryman may be a witness when he has any knowledge of a particular subject, as of the branch of a trade. Here he should be sworn and examined, although jurors are at liberty to make use of their general knowledge in order to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion.⁵

Time for objecting to witness.] The time for making an objection to the competency of a witness is on the voir dire, that is, before he is sworn in chief. He may either be questioned upon the subject, or a witness may be called to prove his incompetency. And should he deny the fact which would go to disqualify him, evidence may still be produced to contradict him. However, should the party objecting call a witness without questioning the person objected to, it is not competent for the counsel who has called that person to examine him for the purpose of repelling the charge against him.⁶

¹ 1 Price, 83; and he was executed.

² Bathews v. Galindo, 3 C. & P. 238; and see Wells v. Fletcher, 5 C. & P. 12.

³ R. v. Beavan and others, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 242. See 5

Ric. 2, st. 1, c. 7; 15 Ric. 2, c. 2; 21 Jac. 1, c. 15.

⁴ R. v. Earl of Thanet, Taylor on Ev. 774, citing 27 How. St. Tr. 845.

⁵ R. v. Rosser, 7 C. & P. 648.

⁶ See Anon. 1 Lew. C. C. 323.

Committal for contempt.] A witness as well as any other person may be committed for contempt.¹ A judge at nisi prius or of gaol delivery may commit by parol, and a chairman at quarter sessions. And it should seem that the commitment ought to be for a time certain.² Whether a magistrate can commit for all contempts is doubtful. He may, if there be a danger of a breach of the peace, and in that case by parol. It has been held that he may commit for insolent language in his presence, and whilst he is in the execution of his duty; but subsequent dicta question this decision.³ Certainly a justice cannot commit for contempt towards himself personally without a warrant in writing;⁴ whether he may, for contempt towards him at his office, not sitting in court, may be a question.⁵ But the decision rests with the judge.⁶

Evidence.] Having now spoken upon the subject of witnesses, we proceed to mention the mode of examining them, and the extent to which their examination, both in chief and otherwise, may be carried.

The rules in criminal cases are, for the most part, not unlike those applicable to civil issues. Thus the best evidence must, if possible, be produced. Another rule is, that hearsay cannot be admitted.⁷ A third rule is, that he who asserts the affirmative must prove it. And it is likewise a well understood regulation that the evidence must be confined to the point at issue.

Confessions.] It will, however, occur to the reader, that the prisoner may have confessed or admitted the crime charged against him: in this case, notwithstanding his plea of not guilty, his voluntary statement may be brought forward. It is generally tendered to the jury at the close of the case. The law of England, ¹ For refusing to be sworn at sessions in a case of high treason. R. v. Lord Preston, 1 Salk. 278.

² 7 Taunt. 66. By Onslow and Copley, Serjts. argo.

³ R. v. Revel, Str. 420.

⁴ Mayhew v. Locke, 7 Taunt. 63; 2 Marsh. 377. See other cases of committals, 7 Taunt. 66. Sir G. Throgmorton v. Allen, cited there from 2 Bro. Ab. 558.

⁵ Pettit v. Addington, Peake, Ca. 62.

⁶ R. v. Charlesworth, 2 Fost. & F. 326. A Mr. Fernandez refused to answer on the ground of privilege from criminating himself, and the judge fined him 500*l.* and sentenced him to imprisonment for six calendar months. A habeas corpus being moved for, the courts of Common Pleas and Exchequer unanimously refused the motion. 2 Fost. & F. 337, n. The son of the Baron De Vidil was committed for one month, in August, 1861, for refusing to give evidence against his father. It seems that this assumption of authority by the judges should undergo the revision of parliament, that the time of punishment should be limited, and that both fine and imprisonment ought not to be allowed, and that the amount of fine should be also limited.

⁷ Conversations between third persons in the prisoner's absence were admitted upon a charge of murder by Gurney, B., to show the condition of the murdered person. 1 Cox, 95. R. v. Dalmas.

following that of nature, presumes that a man will not criminate himself, and it accordingly requires that his confession of a crime should neither be extorted by threats, nor wrung from him by persuasion. It is rejected under such circumstances not from regard to public faith, but because it does not seem entitled to credit when tainted by the flattery of hope or the torture of fear.¹ It may be added, that the validity of confessions is for the judge's decision, and that he will require to be satisfied that the confession flows from the inducement. The onus of showing the negative of that matter lies on the prosecutor.² We give the following expressions as inadmissible:—"Unless you give me a more satisfactory account, I shall take you before a magistrate,"³ or, "send for a constable."⁴ "I am in great distress about my irons; if you will tell me where they are I will be favourable to you."⁵ "If you will give me a glass of gin, I will tell you about it." Two glasses were given.⁶ "I should be obliged to you if you would tell us what you know about it; if you will not, of course we can do nothing."⁷ "You had better not add a lie to the crime of theft."⁸ "You had better split, and not suffer for all of them."⁹ "It would have been better if you had told at first."¹⁰ "What you say will be taken down, and used for or against you, at your trial."¹¹ "What you are charged with is a very heavy offence, and you must be very careful in making any statement to me or anybody else that may tend to injure you, but anything in your defence we shall be ready to hear, or to send to assist you."¹² "You had better tell the truth, otherwise it will lie upon you, and the man will go free."¹³ "It would

¹ Leach, 263. R. v. Dunn, 4 C. & P. 543.

² Den. & P. 447. R. v. Warrington, cited. Lord Campbell, however, intimated in R. v. Baldry (post), that if the case were res integra, he might be disposed to allow confessions to be given in evidence, and let the jury give what weight they please to them. Id. 446.

³ R. v. Thompson, Leach, 291.

⁴ R. v. Richards, 5 C. & P. 318.

⁵ R. v. Cass, Leach, 293, n.

⁶ R. v. Sexton, 2 Russ. C. M. 827. R. v. Jones, Russ. & Ry. 152. Mr. Serjeant Russell cites several text books which deny R. v. Sexton to be law, and he is himself of that opinion. 2 Russ. C. M. 827, note (k).

⁷ R. v. Partridge, 7 C. & P. 551.

⁸ R. v. Shepherd, Id. 579. By the constable.

⁹ R. v. Thomas, 6 C. & P. 353.

¹⁰ R. v. Walkley and another, Id. 175. See also R. v. Mills, Id. 146.

¹¹ R. v. Drew, per Coleridge, J., 8 C. & P. 140, to which he adhered. R. v. Hornbrook, 1 Cox, C. C. 54, where the word "defence" was used by the constable:—"If you can say anything in your defence, we are willing to hear it," but these opinions of the learned judge seem to be open to discussion, and have since been overruled. R. v. Baldry, Den. & P. 430; 21 L. J. M. C. 130. R. v. Farly, 1 Cox, 76, also overruled, ut supra; and R. v. Harris, 1 Cox, 106.

¹² R. v. Morton, 2 Moo. & Rob. 514. R. v. Williams, 2 Russ. C. M. 832.

¹³ By the constable in a case of child murder. R. v. Enoch. By Parke and Taunton, JJ., 5 C. & P. 539. The decision of Coleridge, J., was also overruled.

be best for him if he would tell how it was transacted.”¹ A fortiori, abuse joined to threats will exclude a confession.² The same principle extends to a party in illegal custody. As where one detained without a warrant confessed under a promise of liberty and ten guineas’ reward; for supposing the confession voluntary, still it was made in illegal custody.³

Admissible.] The following have been held admissible confessions. Where no threat nor promise had been made, although the party had been perhaps illegally arrested, and although the conduct of the officer who had obtained the confession might have been calculated to intimidate.⁴ The law having gone far enough in rejecting confessions.⁵ Where the constable promised the prisoner that he should see his wife if he would disclose where the stolen property was, for that the prosecutor could ill afford to lose his money.⁶ Where a fellow prisoner pressed a man to tell how he murdered the boy. Having sworn his fellow prisoner to secrecy, the prisoner made a statement, and this relation of the circumstances was held admissible.⁷ Where a person upon being asked by the prisoner whether he had better confess, said he had better not, but added, that if the prisoner would say anything, it should go no further.⁸ Where the prosecutor said in the hearing of the prisoner that he considered him the tool of G., and the magistrate telling the prisoner to be sure to tell the truth, he made a statement,⁹ “A very serious oath has been made against you;” this expression did not exclude the evidence.¹⁰ Where some neighbours admonished the prisoner to tell the truth and consider his family, when the constable was present, who, however, made no comment, nor did the prisoner answer at that time; it was held, that a confession made to the constable an hour afterwards was admissible,¹¹ for although the person in authority was present he did not say anything.

A person in authority is, the magistrate, the constable,¹² the prosecutor, or a surgeon in some cases. A woman was charged with the murder of her bastard. She confessed certain things to the surgeon. But it turned out, that some time before a woman had ¹ R. v. Warrington, cited, Den. & P. 447. The indictment was for stealing the goods of partners in their absence: the wife of one of them induced the prisoner to confess. Held inadmissible. S. C. So is R. v. Griffith, 2 Russ. C. M. 832.

² R. v. Parratt, 4 C. & P. 570.

³ R. v. Ackroyd and another, 1 Lew. C. C. 49.

⁴ R. v. Thornton, 1 Moo. C. C. 27.

⁵ R. v. Miles, per Park, J., Car. Cr. L. 61.

⁶ R. v. Lloyd, 6 C. & P. 393.

⁷ R. v. Shaw, Id. 372.

⁸ R. v. Thomas, 7 C. & P. 345.

⁹ R. v. Court, Id. 486.

¹⁰ R. v. Long, 6 C. & P. 179.

¹¹ R. v. Row, Russ. & Ry. 153. R. v. Tyler, 1 C. & P. 129.

¹² The constable ought not, in general, to interrogate the prisoner. If he does, his questions ought not to be confined to such as are calculated to compromise the prisoner. R. v. Stokes, 17 Jur. 192.

told the prisoner in the surgeon's presence that it would be better to tell, to which recommendation, however, no attention was, at that time, paid, but, subsequently, the confession was made. This acknowledgment was held receivable.¹ So where the prisoner proposed to make a disclosure to a magistrate, who was also a clergyman, being told that some one would tell if he did not, and, subsequently, the prisoner, being informed that his confession would not benefit him, confessed to the coroner, who expressly informed him that his statement would be used against him, it was held receivable.² Again, a prisoner was in the custody of a constable, and was then taken charge of by another constable. He confessed to the latter, and whether his confession could be received would depend upon his being an accused party or an unwilling witness. In the former case, the first constable must have been called to show that he had not held out an inducement.³ The prisoner was charged with firing her master's premises. She was given into the charge of her master's daughter by the constable. The following words ensued, "I am sorry for you, you ought to have known better. Tell me the truth, whether you did it or no." "I am innocent." "Do not run your soul into more sin, but tell the truth." The girl then confessed. It was held—1. That here was neither threat or inducement. 2. The daughter was not a person in authority. And the conviction was affirmed.⁴ In Rew's case, had the confession been made immediately to the constable, and in that of Gibbons, had it been made to the surgeon without delay, neither statement would have been admissible, even in the absence of any threat or promise on the part of the individual in authority. The presence of such a party might seem to give a sanction to the inducement held out by the stranger. Agreeably to this, where a surgeon, in a case of administering poison, said, "You are under suspicion of this, and you had better tell all you know," the statement was rejected.⁵ So a confession made to an innkeeper in the presence of a constable, and which the constable was called to prove, was not admitted.⁶ So where the husband urged the wife to confess in the presence of a constable, upon which she made a statement: it was rejected.⁷ So a

¹ R. v. Gibbons, 1 Car. & P. 97.

² R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221. In this case also it was said to be but fair to call the magistrate before the confession was put in, because the prisoner might show an inducement. And it was also held, that the prisoner himself might call that person prior to the reading of the confession.

³ R. v. Swatkins and others, 4 C. & P. 548. "The distinction is very clear. You are not to suppress the truth, but you are not to take any measures of your own to endeavour to extort it." By Lord Denman. R. v. Cart, Taylor on Ev. 727.

⁴ R. v. Sleeman, 23 L. J. M. C. 19; Dears. 249.

⁵ R. v. Kingston, 4 C. & P. 387.

⁶ R. v. Pountney, 7 C. & P. 302.

⁷ R. v. Laughner, 2 Car. & K. 225; 2 Cox, C. C. 134.

confession made to a medical man in the presence of the mistress and her husband, in a case of poisoning, was held inadmissible, he having also said that it would be better for the prisoner to speak the truth.¹ "You had better tell the truth." The constable was present, but did not contradict: held inadmissible.² So the mother of the prosecutor's wife, and a neighbour, assailed a girl of fifteen charged with arson, with both promises and threats, upon which she confessed. There was little evidence besides. Littledale, J., upon its being suggested that no person in authority had interfered here, admitted the statement, and the prisoner was convicted, but the judges held that the evidence was inadmissible and the conviction wrong.³ Again, the wife of the prosecutor told the prisoner, a girl of thirteen, that perhaps it might save her neck if she would confess, this statement was deemed inadmissible, although Parke, B., had received it, and ten judges held the conviction wrong.⁴ It is the presence of a person in authority which is said to operate prejudicially to the reception of this evidence.⁵ The mistress said nothing whilst her servant confessed to a third person, who was not in authority, but held out an inducement. The mistress did not dissent, and the confession was refused, because the inducement which the third person held out was considered as the inducement of the mistress.⁶ Had not the mistress been present, the statement would have fallen under the rule, that a confession made to one not in authority is receivable.⁷ And so where one went with the prosecutor to assist him, a confession made to him in the presence of the prosecutor was rejected.⁸ Although doubts were at one time entertained even upon that point, and the judges were not unanimous.⁹ The prisoner being suspected of stealing money, her mistress told her that if she would tell the truth, she would forgive her. On a subsequent day, the superintendent of police and the mistress together visited the girl, when, after being cautioned, she made a statement. But her statement was rejected, because the original

¹ R. v. Garner, Den. 329. When the confession is found to have proceeded from inducement, it should be struck out of the judge's notes. But, per Erle, J., the judge is to decide in each case whether the words used conveyed the inducement or not. S. C. And by Patterson, J., it lies on the prisoner to show that the inducement was held out.

² R. v. Millen and another, 3 Cox, 507, where all the cases were cited.

³ R. v. Simpson, 1 Moo. C. C. 410.

⁴ R. v. Upchurch, 1 Moo. C. C. 465.

⁵ Together with the neglect of caution and warning. A policeman ought always to take care to warn a prisoner. And it is not desirable that the officer should question the prisoner. R. v. Kerr, 8 C. & P. 177.

⁶ R. v. Taylor, 8 C. & P. 733. R. v. Luckhurst, 23 L. J. M. C. 18; Dears. 245.

⁷ S. C.

⁸ R. v. Stacey, 2 Russ. C. M. 839. A threat accompanied the confession.

⁹ R. v. Spencer, 7 C. & P. 776.

promise of the mistress might be considered as still in the girl's mind, more especially as the mistress was present.¹ So it was where the prisoner confessed to her nurse a child murder. Lord Abinger would not admit a confession made subsequently to a surgeon.² An attorney likewise is a person in authority.³ However, upon the principle that the rule as to excluding confessions should not be extended, when the girl confessed to a surgeon in a case of child murder, in the presence of her mistress, the statement was admitted. The mistress was not the prosecutor, nor engaged in the case, neither in the apprehension, prosecution, or examination of the prisoner. Nor was the mistress in any way connected with the management of the house where the misfortune happened.⁴ So where a third person said in the presence of the prosecutor and policeman, who had said nothing, "You had better tell," the evidence was received.⁵ Should the prisoner confess by mistake, imagining that the person has authority, and it turns out that the individual to whom the confession was made, was not within the rule, it may be that the evidence will be received. Cresswell, J., was willing on one occasion to admit it.⁶

Enough has been said to show the necessity of a voluntary confession. It may appear superfluous to allege this, but there are occasions where a prisoner may be said to confess without hope or fear, and yet where the confession is not entirely free. As where the accused had desired the witness to apply to the justice that he might be admitted king's evidence, relating at the same time circumstances which went to prove him guilty. It was held, that as this disclosure was made under an idea of his being a witness for the crown, it could not be called a voluntary confession, and was accordingly not admissible.⁷ And so it was where the justice said he would do what he could for the prisoner if he would confess, upon which he confessed to a turnkey without inducement, especially as the turnkey had not given the prisoner any warning.⁸ So, in the case of a handbill by which a reward and promise of pardon were offered; a statement made under inducements created by the handbill was rejected, although the mere knowledge of the existence of a handbill concerning a murder would not have caused such rejection.⁹ But as soon as it can be made to appear that the prisoner was not actuated by any particular inducement, the case is different. As where, in a case of murder, the prisoner inquired whether there had been any proclamation or

¹ R. v. Hewett, Car. & M. 534. Taylor, Spencer, and Pountney

² R. v. Downing, Taylor on Evidence, 720. were cited for the prisoner.

³ R. v. Croydon and another, 2 Cox, C. C. 67. ⁶ Ballantine declined to press it.

⁴ R. v. Moore, Den. & P. 522; R. v. Frewin, 6 Cox, 530.

⁵ L. J. M. C. 199; 2 Car. & K. 153. ⁷ R. v. Hall, cited, Leach, 559.

⁶ R. v. Parker, 8 Cox, 465; C. & P. 535. See R. v. Burley, 2 Russ. C. M. 958;

Leigh & Cave, 42. The cases of ⁸ R. v. Cooper and another, 5 offer of pardon. Being informed that there had been, but without knowing the particulars, and after an express warning by the chaplain of the gaol that no inducement could be held out, the prisoner went before a magistrate and made a statement. This was held receivable.¹ The statement, in order to warrant its rejection, must be made with the knowledge and in the hope of receiving a reward. If the prisoner wished to screen himself and implicate others, the objection will not avail.² A printed copy of a reward was hung up in the magistrates' room, in the county gaol, and a promise of pardon was offered to any except the perpetrator of the murder. A prisoner being cautioned that any statement he might make would be used against him, made a statement. He was able to read. This paper or printed copy was held inadmissible.³ But statements made, and anonymous letters written before the prisoner's apprehension were admitted, and the facts of the prisoner's knowledge of the reward, and of his having been paid by the police for his support, did not affect these documents.⁴

Hence, we gain the principle that threats or promises will taint a confession where the person making them is in authority, but still, that if they are not followed by the avowal of guilt at the time, and thus an interval be allowed to elapse, a subsequent acknowledgment may be valid. A threat held out to the prisoner in the presence of another prisoner has been deemed not to invalidate a statement made by the latter at the time of the threat.⁵ Temporal favour is the benefit which excludes this evidence. Therefore, where a mistress told her servant, who was suspected of setting fire to an outhouse, that if she would confess God would forgive her, upon which she confessed, Lord Eldon admitted the confession, together with another made on the next day, out of the hearing but in the sight of the mistress, under a representation that her mistress said she had confessed.⁶ This case, however, is not to be relied upon, because the jury said they thought the first confession made under a hope of favour here, and the second under the influence of having made the first. The judges said that these points were not for the jury, and that although Lord Eldon agreed with the jury, the confessions were not receivable. Many of them thought the expressions not calculated to raise hopes of favour here, and so receivable as far as that point was concerned. Nevertheless, it seems that the mistress ought to have cautioned the woman that the words she might be induced to speak would be used against her at a future day.⁷ So, where a person, not a constable, told a boy not fourteen to kneel down, and then conjured him to tell the truth in the presence of the Almighty, upon which the boy (the prisoner) confessed to a murder, but neither threat nor promise was held out, the judges held

¹ R. v. Dingley, 1 Car. & K. 637.

² R. v. Blackburn and others, 6 Cox, 333.

³ S. C.

⁴ R. v. Blackburn, ut supra.

⁵ R. v. Jacobs and another, 4 Cox, 54.

⁶ R. v. Sarah Nute, 2 Russ. C. M. 832, citing 1 Burn. D'Oyley & W. 1086.

⁷ S. C.

the evidence receivable, much disapproving, however, of the mode by which the confession was obtained.¹ So, in Gilham's case, a confession induced by the persuasions of a clergyman, who held out no hopes of temporal benefit, was received. Although it must be noticed that the prisoner had previously been expressly cautioned against indulging any hopes of mercy here.² This caution was not given in Radford's case by the clergyman to whom confession was made, and, accordingly, in that case, the prisoner's statement was rejected.³

So, after several questions of a religious tendency, a policeman asked a boy between eight and nine, "Do you think God knows everything that is done?" "Yes." "Do you think He knows who set fire to the haystack?" The boy did not answer, but began to cry. The officer then asked whether he could give any information about the fire at Mr. Wright's, and said he should apprehend him for setting fire to Mr. Wright's ricks. A statement was then made. Cresswell, J., after consulting Williams, J., rejected the evidence.⁴ Drunkenness will not exclude a confession.⁵ But what a prisoner said whilst talking in his sleep was refused by Tindal, C.J.⁶ Another principle presents itself. Can any fact be ascertained, so as to be given in evidence, in consequence of the prisoner's confession, although the confession itself be not admissible? Lord Eldon, upon one occasion, intimated that in his opinion, unless the fact proved could have been sufficient to warrant a conviction, without any confession leading to it, he should direct the jury to acquit; and his lordship so directed in the case before him.⁷ But this is not now the rule. As a general principle, the fact is admitted in evidence, but not the acknowledgment of the prisoner. And the reason is this. The ground for excluding confessions is the apprehension that the accused may have been induced to say that which is false, whereas the fact discovered shows, that so much of the confession as immediately relates to it is true.⁸ The following circumstances, therefore, have been admitted. The finding of property concealed within the sackings of a bed.⁹ The observations of a prisoner connected with the finding of such property; as where he gave up to the prosecutor a guinea and a 5*l.* note as the guinea and one of the notes which had been stolen from him.¹⁰ But where the prisoner gave up some money to the prosecutor, and said that was all he had left of it, and it turned out that the prosecutor had previously said, "he only wanted his money, and if the prisoner gave him that he

¹ R. v. Wild, 1 Moo. C. C. 452.

⁷ R. v. Harvey, 2 East, P. C.

² 1 Moo. C. C. 186. R. v. Hodg-

658.

son, cited, Id. 202.

⁸ Leach, 265, n.

³ Id. 197, 202, cited there; and see R. v. Sparke, Peake, N. P. C. 78.

⁹ R. v. Warwickshall, Id. 263.

⁴ R. v. Day, 2 Cox, 209.

To the same effect are, R. v. Mosey, Id. 265, n.; R. v. Butcher, Id.; R. v. Lockhart, Id. 386; R. v. Grant, East, P. C. 658; R. v. Hodge, Id.

⁵ R. v. Spilsbury and another, 7 C. & P. 187.

⁶ R. v. Sippet. Taylor on Evidence, 725.

¹⁰ R. v. Griffin, Russ. & Ry. 151.

might go to the devil if he pleased," the conviction was holden wrong by a majority of the judges, on the ground that this evidence ought not to have been entertained.¹ Indeed, where property is found, the matter ought to be put in proof.² A servant was charged with arson. A spoon, and other things, were found in the sucker of a pump. The master threatened the prisoner concerning the things found, but was silent as to the fire. The prisoner made a statement with respect to the fire, but it was held inadmissible, because the whole was one transaction.³ Here is the distinction. Therefore where the prisoner in custody for one offence made a statement to the constable concerning another of which he was not suspected, the judge received it.⁴ The same principle prevails where the property is not found, as far as the conduct of the prisoner is concerned. Thus, the prisoner having made an inadmissible confession, carried the officer to a house, as being that where he had disposed of the stolen property. This latter evidence being admitted, the conviction was holden wrong, because the same influence which might produce a groundless confession might produce groundless conduct.⁵ However, the facts obtained by a clue furnished by the prisoner are admissible.⁶ Again, the confession, if received, must relate to the same felony which is being tried. The prisoner was on trial for stealing a marked shilling. A constable, who had found the shilling, proved asking the prisoner whether he had any more of Mr. —'s money about him. Upon this the prisoner produced some half-crowns, and made a statement. But the court would not receive it, because it was no part of the present felony, but connected with one altogether distinct. There is one more point.⁷ If a second confession follow one which is not admissible, is it right to admit such second statement? The principle here is, that the party must first be cautioned, and if, after his mind has been impressed with the idea that his prior statement cannot be used against him, he still thinks fit to confess again, the latter declaration is receivable.⁸ For the accused otherwise might imagine that, having once confessed, it would be of no use to deny what he had once said, and no distance of time will cure the defect of want of previous caution.⁹ Half-an-hour, therefore, although a caution was administered, was deemed insufficient, especially as there had been two prior inad-

¹ R. v. Jones, Id. 152. By five judges against three; one doubted. R. v. Clarke, by Vaughan, B., Car. C. L. 59.

² R. v. Gould, 9 C. & P. 364.

³ R. v. Hearn, Car. & M. 109.

⁴ R. v. Warner, 2 Russ. C. M. 845.

⁵ R. v. Jenkins, Russ. & Ry. 482.

⁶ R. v. Leatham, 8 Cox, 498. As if a written confession be found at a place, or a murdered body, in consequence of what the prisoner may have said. Crompton, J., Id. 501.

⁷ R. v. Butler, 2 Car. & K. 221.

⁸ R. v. Richards, 5 C. & P. 318. R. v. Griffiths, 2 Russ. C. M. 832. See R. v. Sexton, 2 Russ. C. M. 833. As to continuing influence, see Car. & M. 534.

⁹ R. v. Edwards, 1 Burn by Chetw. 564. R. v. Nute, 2 Russ. C. M. 832. See also R. v. Howes, 6 C. & P. 404.

missible confessions, for the fear or hope continued.¹ Even a whole day was deemed insufficient, there having been no caution.² But two days having elapsed, the influence was held to have ceased.³ The remaining topics for discussion, the general principles having been disposed of, are, first, the particular method of regulating these confessions before magistrates; and, secondly, the legal effect of them when actually received in evidence. With regard to the first point, it is observable that a marked distinction obtains between confessions before magistrates and those which are communicated to private persons. In the case of the magistrate, a positive and careful caution must be adopted.⁴ In other cases, it is not amiss to give this warning; but, before a justice, it is indispensable, because the presence of such an officer of the law might, in case of confession, naturally induce a hope of mercy. And where previous expectations had been raised in the mind of the accused, so as to produce some statement, Buller, J., although he would not reject the subsequent confession, required the most unequivocal testimony that the caution was thoroughly understood.⁵ So, notwithstanding the caution, it is necessary for the magistrates to go further in the case of a second confession, and to inform the party that his first statement cannot be used to his prejudice.⁶ Not merely to caution him not to say anything to injure himself.⁷ And it may be said that the warning must be administered before the justice, and not elsewhere.⁸ Where the prisoner was urged by a constable to confess, but, before doing so, he asked the magistrate's advice, who said he did not think it would do any good, upon which the prisoner declined to confess, but, on his way to prison, acknowledged the offence to another constable, the statement was admitted.⁹ A magistrate ought not to dissuade a prisoner from confessing.¹⁰

The wife of the constable had exhorted the prisoner to confess some days before his examination, but this circumstance was not deemed sufficient to exclude the confession before the magistrates.¹¹ And where the prosecutor desired the prisoner, when before the magistrate, to speak out and tell the truth, but was instantly checked by the magistrate or his clerk, a confession immediately obtained was held admissible.¹² Lord Denman, on one occasion, suggested the following useful observations upon this subject. "The frequent warnings given to prisoners not to say anything that may criminate themselves, renders it right for me to set right a prevalent error on this subject, and to state what I con-

¹ R. v. Collier and another, 3 Cox, 57.

² R. v. Meynell, 2 Lew. C. C. 122.

³ R. v. Nicholls and another, 2 Russ. C. M. 838.

⁴ R. v. Lingate, 1 Phil. Ev. 414.

⁵ 2 East, P. C. 658.

⁶ R. v. Howes, 6 C. & P. 404.

⁷ R. v. Smith, 2 Russ. C. M. 833. R. v. Compson, Id. 834. R. v. Sherrington, 2 Lew. C. C. 123.

⁸ R. v. Payne and others, Sarum, Sp. As. 1830, cor. Gaselee, J.

⁹ R. v. Rosier, 1 Phil. Ev. 105.

¹⁰ R. v. Green and others, 5 C. & P. 312.

¹¹ R. v. Hardwick, 1 C. & P. 98, n. 1 Phil. Ev. 410. See Den. & P. 449.

¹² R. v. Edwards, 1 Phil. Ev. 415.

ceive to be the proper course of proceeding. A prisoner is not to be entrapped into making a statement,¹ but when a prisoner is willing to make a statement, it is the duty of the magistrates to receive it; but magistrates, before they do so, ought entirely to get rid of any impression that may have before been in the prisoner's mind, that the statement may be used for his own benefit, and the prisoner ought also to be told, that what he thinks fit to say will be taken down and may be used against him on his trial."² The following expression of a magistrate was held not to exclude the confession. "Be sure you say nothing but the truth, or it will be taken against you, and may be given in evidence against you at your trial."³ Again, "Your wife has confessed the whole, and there is case enough to send the bill before the grand jury." Park, J., considered this speech of the magistrate a caution and not a menace, and admitted the confession.⁴ This confession must not be taken upon oath. If the examination should so purport, no evidence can be received to contradict that which appears upon the face of the document itself.⁵ So particular is this rule, that when during an investigation for poisoning before a magistrate, the prisoner had been sworn, after which he himself became the accused and was committed for trial, it was held that his examination could not be used against him.⁶ So, where one gave evidence against A. in his presence, and was afterward joined as a prisoner jointly with A., the same rule prevailed.⁷ So what the prisoner said before the coroner upon a charge of murder was rejected.⁸ Although it seems, that in R. v. Owen, indicted for rape, Williams, J., was inclined, at the trial for rape, to admit evidence of the prisoner's deposition made upon oath before the coroner; and he did receive it, but promised, if necessary, to reserve the point.⁹

Where, however, the mistake was discovered and the deposition destroyed, a subsequent statement was received.¹⁰ And Vaughan, B., received a statement made on oath by a prisoner at a time when he was not under any suspicion.¹¹

The validity of a statement is not affected by a mistake of the magistrate in returning that the prisoner had not made any statement. As where the prisoner admitted certain facts on the 10th

¹ For instance, a magistrate must ask no question without a previous caution; R. v. Pettit, 4 Cox, 164; and it is better that he should abstain altogether from such questions.

² R. v. Arnold, 8 C. & P. 621.

³ R. v. Holmes, 1 Car. & K. 248. R. v. Attwood, 5 Cox, 322.

⁴ R. v. Wright, 1 Lew. C. C. 48.

⁵ R. v. Smith and another, 1 Stark. N. P. C. 242, per Le Blane, J., 2 Stark. Ev. 52. R. v. Wheeley, 8 C. & P. 250. R. v. Pikesley, 9

C. & P. 124. R. v. Shellswell, 2 Russ. C. M. 855.

⁶ R. v. Lewis, 6 C. & P. 161.

⁷ R. v. Davis and another, Id. 177.

⁸ R. v. Wheeley, 8 C. & P. 250. R. v. Owen, 9 C. & P. 238.

⁹ R. v. Owen, 9 C. & P. 83.

¹⁰ R. v. Webb and another, 4 C. & P. 564. R. v. Davis and another, 6 C. & P. 177.

¹¹ R. v. Tubby, 5 C. & P. 530.

of November, but the final settlement of the depositions did not take place till the 14th, when the magistrate returned that the prisoner declined saying anything. The statement on the 10th was received.¹ But where the prisoner's statement had been by a mistake entered into the deposition book as "The information and complaint of A. B." Gurney, B., refused to admit it, although the magistrate's clerk was present, and was prepared to explain the mistake.² So, where the examination concluded thus: "Taken and sworn before me," under which was the signature of the magistrate, Park, J., rejected it altogether, and would neither suffer the clerk to prove that it was not so sworn, nor to give parol evidence of what the prisoner had said.³ Then the questions arise, whether the confession must be in writing, and how far parol evidence of the prisoner's declaration is admissible in the absence of such a written statement. By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18, all that a prisoner says must be taken in writing, and signed by the magistrate, and transmitted to the court, upon which it becomes evidence without more, unless it can be shown that the magistrate did not sign the paper.⁴ And this, indeed, was the usual practice before the provision just referred to.⁵ But there is this difference. Before the late Act, unless the prisoner had signed his examination, or admitted its truth, it was not competent to tender it in evidence, but parol evidence must have been given.⁶ Now, however, the absence of the signature or the silence of the prisoner, as to the genuineness of his words, will not prevent the writing from being received if attested conformably to the statute.⁷ And it is presumed, that although a prisoner might formerly have retracted what he had said so as totally to set aside his confession,⁸ yet now the examination, duly signed, must be forwarded in the usual course in order to be presented, quantum valeat, to the jury. And, on the other hand, whatever might have been the practice formerly,⁹ should the magistrate now neglect to sign the document

¹ R. v. Wilkinson, 8 C. & P. 662.

² R. v. Bentley, 6 C. & P. 148.

³ R. v. Rivers, 7 C. & P. 177.

⁴ See, under the old law, R. v. Jacobs, Leach, 309. R. v. Fearshire, Id. 202. R. v. Hollinshead, 4 C. & P. 242. R. v. Hopes, 7 C. & P. 136. R. v. Foster, Id. 148. R. v. Priestley, 1 Lew. C. C. 74. R. v. Rees, 7 C. & P. 568. R. v. Reading, Id. 649. R. v. Hearn, Car. & M. 109. Case at Sarum, M. S. ex relatione Penruddock. Patteson, J., refused to allow the magistrate's signature to be proved by a witness, the justice and his clerk being absent. R. v. Pikesley, 9 C. & P. 124. All these cases are virtually superseded.

⁵ 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 13; 2 & 3

Ph. & M. c. 10; 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, ss.

2, 3. All repealed.

⁶ See R. v. Foster, 1 Lew. C. C. 46. R. v. Dewhurst, Id. 47. R. v. Hirst, Id. R. v. Bell, 5 C. & P. 162. R. v. Tarrant, 6 C. & P. 182.

⁷ See R. v. Haines, 2 Russ. C. M. 886.

⁸ R. v. Bennet, Leach, 553, n. R. v. Telicote, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 483.

⁹ R. v. Lambe, Leach, 552. R. v. Thomas, Id. 637. R. v. Hobson, 1 Lew. C. C. 66; and see R. v. Bradbury, Leach, 639. R. v. Jones, Car. Cr. L. 13.

it cannot be admitted. Although, if taken in writing and read over to the prisoner, the clerk to the magistrate may refresh his memory with the examination so taken and read, though not signed.¹ The clause of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, only applies when the examinations are complete and the depositions read over. A voluntary statement on remand, although not taken in writing and without caution, is admissible.² It will be taken as a fact likewise since the Act, that the statement was read over to the prisoner.³

The coroner was permitted to give parol evidence of the prisoner's statement before him upon an indictment for murder, where some irregularity interfered to hinder the confession from being received, and the prisoner was subsequently executed.⁴

So that the rule before the statute was that when negative proof appeared, parol evidence might be tendered,⁵ and the same rule applies since the statute, for the negligence of the magistrate or his clerk ought not to exclude a free declaration made after the most solemn cautions. As where the justice, being very deaf, did not take down what the prisoners said, Taunton, J., admitted parol evidence.⁶ But the clerk or some other person must prove that the examination was not taken in writing.⁷ So a parol statement duly made before a written examination will not be superseded by the latter, but may be given in evidence.⁸ And if several witnesses hear a confession, not made in the course of a regular examination, and one of them reduces it to writing as it was being delivered, the testimony of the other witnesses is not thereby excluded.⁹ Indeed, Best, C. J., has said, that upon clear and satisfactory evidence the prisoner might be shown to have said something beyond what was taken down before the magistrate.¹⁰ As where he said something in a loud tone to a witness before the justice.¹¹ Or, indeed, anything not taken down.¹² And there have been recent decisions by which the power of adding to an examination, though taken in writing, has been acknowledged.¹³ If a conversation should have passed between the prisoner and the magistrate concerning a statement, and be reduced to writing, and especially

¹ R. v. Pressly, 6 C. & P. 183.

² R. v. Stripp, 7 Cox, 97.

³ See R. v. Chappel, 1 Moo. & Rob. 395. R. v. Hope, Id. 396. R. v. Richards, Id.

⁴ R. v. Reed, Moo. & M. 403. Tindal, C. J. The form, "Prisoner admits," &c. is an improper one, though it will not invalidate the deposition. R. v. Roche, Car. & M. 341. But see R. v. Mallet, 2 Russ. C. M. 867, where Littledale, J., refused to admit any other statement than the prisoner's own words.

⁵ R. v. Hall, cited, Leach, 559.

⁶ R. v. Shilleck and another, 2 Russ. C. M. 876.

⁷ R. v. Packer, 2 Russ. C. M. 876. R. v. Philips, Id.

⁸ R. v. M'Carthy, 2 Stark. Ev. 52. R. v. Fletcher and Squire, 1 Lew. C. C. 68. See also 16 St. Tr. 35, per Eyre, J.

⁹ R. v. Harris, 1 Moo. C. C. 338; and see R. v. Laver, 12 Vin. Ab. 96, Leach, 559, cited.

¹⁰ Ry. & M.N.P.C. 232, in Rowland v. Ashby.

¹¹ R. v. Johnson, 2 Russ. C. M. 879.

¹² R. v. Hooper, Id.

¹³ Venafray v. Johnson, 1 Moo. & Rob. 316. R. v. Harris and others, 1 Moo. C. C. 338.

if tacked to the confession, the judge will have the memorandum read before he decides upon the admissibility of the evidence.¹ If the prisoner volunteers a statement before the case for the prosecution is concluded, or says anything, whatever might have been the contrary opinions, it is now receivable.²

Some few words may be introduced here upon the subject of statements which may happen to be gained from the prisoner by questions or otherwise, and such may thus be termed indirect avowals. On one occasion, indeed, such evidence, elicited by a magistrate who had examined the prisoner in the same manner as a witness, was rejected by Richards, C. B.³ But later consideration has not affirmed that decision. In a case where it appeared that part of the examination had been elicited by questions put by the magistrate, Littledale, J., quoted Stark. on Ev. App. pt. 4, p. 52, where it was said that Holroyd, J., had received an examination under such circumstances, and the learned judge, expressing his approbation of that ruling, admitted similar evidence upon the trial before him.⁴ So evidence taken on oath before commissioners of bankruptcy after due caution and permission to elect certain questions for answers and to reject others, has been held admissible in a case of forgery.⁵ So where the bankrupt was examined under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 117, and answered questions beyond the compulsory power given by the Act, and without claiming the right to refuse: these answers were held admissible against him, upon an indictment for uttering a forged letter to obtain goods.⁶ So his answers to questions concerning his books, given under a threat of committal, were held to be admissible.⁷ So answers and depositions in chancery before any charge made were admitted.⁸ But the distinction arose when the solicitor for the prosecution put questions to the bankrupt, which he was compelled to answer, with a view to criminate him.⁹ Upon an indictment, it appeared that after the examination and subscription thereof by the bankrupt, he was asked a question. Mr. Justice Williams laid down the rule thus:—He would not receive parol evidence of any answers to questions put before the commissioners subscribed their names to the examination. He would presume that all the answers prior to that which were material were taken down and included in the examination before signature. But he would receive answers to

¹ R. v. Dingley, 1 Car. & K. 637.

² R. v. Mellor, 2 Russ. C. M. 883. R. v. Fagg, cont. 4 C. & P. 566.

³ R. v. Wilson, Holt, N. P. C. 597.

⁴ R. v. Ellis, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 432. R. v. Bartlett, 7 C. & P. 832.

See also R. v. Mercer, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 366; 1 Moo. C. C. 203, per Lord Tenterden.

⁵ R. v. Wheater, 2 Moo. C. C. 45.

⁶ R. v. Sloggett, 25 L. J. M. C. 93, and R. v. Wheater was cited.

⁷ R. v. Scott, 25 L. J. M. C. 128; Dears. & B. 47.

⁸ R. v. Highfield, 2 Russ. C. M. 859.

⁹ R. v. Darby, 2 Cox, 316, and R. v. Garbett, was distinguished.

subsequent questions.¹ So where the prisoner when in gaol gave a letter to the turnkey, who instead of sending it by post to the father of the prisoner, as directed, gave it to the visiting magistrates, whence it found its way to the prosecutor; it was held by Garrow, B., that the letter was admissible, and the judge said that Gould, J., had ruled the samething.² What a prisoner says to himself is evidence.³ And if the prisoner has said before the magistrate that the deposition of a certain witness was true, this deposition may be read at the trial as part of the prisoner's statement, although the witness be examined for the prosecution.⁴

The second point is the legal effect of these confessions as evidence. They are sufficient of themselves without proof aliunde of a felony having been committed, that is to say, although entirely uncorroborated.⁵ This point was, after the decision above referred to, presented distinctly to the judges, and they held the same opinion.⁶ In another case there was no proof that a robbery had been committed unless through the confession of the prisoners; one of whom was proved to have sent a message to the person robbed to prevent him from appearing. The judges held the conviction right.⁷ On the other hand, notwithstanding a voluntary confession, evidence may be received to show that the prisoner was not of the party who committed the robbery.⁸ And a party may be convicted upon his own confession, who after having been admitted king's evidence, refused to give his testimony, there being no other proof of the offence.⁹ Before the statute 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18, the prisoner might have impeached his written statement.¹⁰ But now where the statement is transmitted to the court, it may be admitted without further proof than the fact of the transmission, unless it be proved negatively that the justice did not sign it.¹¹ Still a statement made before the magistrate, and not given in evidence, cannot be set up to contradict the prisoner's defence.¹² And the whole of the admissions must be taken together. Where there was no evidence beyond the possession of stolen goods, and the prosecutor's counsel put in the prisoner's declaration, in which he said he had bought the goods,

¹ R. v. Radcliffe, 2 Lew. 57.

² R. v. Derrington, 2 C. & P. 418.

³ R. v. Simons, 6 C. & P. 538.

⁴ R. v. John, 7 C. & P. 324.

⁵ R. v. Wheeling, Leach, 311, n.

⁶ R. v. Eldridge, Russ. & Ry. 440.

⁷ R. v. Falkner and another, Id. 481. R. v. White and another, Id. 508. R. v. Tippet, Id. 509.

⁸ R. v. Barnet, 4 Cox, 269. R. v. Falkner and Wheeling were cited.

⁹ Stark. on Ev. pt. 4, p. 23.

¹⁰ Stark. on Ev. p. 1045. See R. v. Jones, 2 C. & P. 129, where it was said that if part of the statement admits guilt, and part asserts innocence, the whole should go to the jury; and also if the whole contains nothing incompatible with innocence, it would be right, in the absence of other evidence, to direct an acquittal. And see 2 Brod. & B. 297, in the Queen's case, per Abbott, C. J.

¹¹ See R. v. Harris, 4 Cox, 157. R. v. Hunt, Id. 149, Erle, J.

¹² R. v. Powell, Car. & M. 500.

Bolland, B., directed an acquittal, for in the absence of other testimony, such an assertion must be taken as true.¹ If, however, there be other evidence, the judge, on the whole, will leave it to the jury, although the prosecutor has given in evidence the prisoner's exculpatory statement.² But if tendered generally the statement will not be evidence in his behalf.³

So, in a case of murder, if the prisoner should say he was present but took no part in it, although the judge will not direct an acquittal, there must be evidence to show that he did more than he had stated. The confession operates for, as well as against, him, and the jury may believe one part and reject the other.⁴ But whatever the legal effect of a confession may be with regard to the prisoner himself, it will not affect other accused persons.⁵ And the question then is, how such a statement would operate without prejudicing the jury against the supposed accomplices. It makes no difference that the confession has been made in the presence and hearing of a party implicated, who did not deny it. As where three were charged with stealing a horse, and one said before the magistrate that he and B. committed the offence, which B. did not deny. This was held no evidence against B.⁶ A prisoner pleaded guilty. It was held, that his confession could not be read, so as to charge a fellow prisoner, and, moreover, that the record of a conviction founded upon such a confession, could not be received for a similar purpose.⁷ For the prisoners before the magistrate are to answer depositions taken upon oath, and not statements made by a party accused together with them.⁸ But where it becomes necessary to read the confession of a prisoner, a question ensues whether the names of other accused parties upon trial should be read or omitted, and the better opinion is that they ought to be read, upon the principle that the whole of what a prisoner says must be stated.⁹ The jury, however, are instructed to lay out of their consideration such parts as affect the others. Park, J., has held a contrary opinion, saying that he did not concur with Mr. Justice Littledale upon the subject, and ordering the names to be omitted.¹⁰ And the author has a strong impression that the latter learned judge directed the names to be read in blank at Salisbury some years since. But Littledale, J., has ruled in favour

¹ 2 C. & P. 129, ut supra.

² R. v. Steptoe, 4 C. & P. 397. R. v. Higgins, 3 C. & P. 603. See Ry. & M. N. P. C. 258, 259, n.

³ R. v. Haines, 1 Fost. & F. 86.

⁴ R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221; 3 C. & P. 603, ut supra.

⁵ R. v. Tong, Kel. 17; Leach, 235. However, as to the dying declaration of an accomplice, see R. v. Tinkler, East, P. C. 354.

⁶ R. v. Appleby, 3 Stark. N. P.

C. 33. Holroyd, J., cited a case at Chester, where the judges held the same opinion.

⁷ R. v. Turner and another, 1 Lew. C. C. 119; and see R. v. Lewis, 6 C. & P. 161. R. v. Davis, Id. 177.

⁸ R. v. Swinnerton, Car. & M. 593.

⁹ R. v. Jones, 4 C. & P. 217. R. v. Clewes, Id. 221. See R. v. Boroski, 3 St. Tr. 474.

¹⁰ R. v. Maudsley, 1 Lew. C. C. 73.

of the principle above laid down, in the case of a letter, directing the names of the other persons to be read aloud, but telling the jury not to pay the slightest attention except as far as the document concerned the prisoner who wrote it.¹ So, in a conversation where a witness was deposing to what one of several prisoners had said, it was objected, that the names of the others should be suppressed, but Lord Denman, C. J., was clear to the contrary.² Nevertheless, if the magistrates' clerk leaves a blank for the names, the court will not suffer parol evidence of the names to be admitted.³ Where a man charged with forgery escaped before trial, Littledale, J., admitted evidence of what he said upon the subject of the forgery then under trial, the prisoners having been already connected together with the charge.⁴ Where a party, again, was convicted of an assault before two magistrates, and then the person assaulted died of the blow, it was held upon the trial of that party for murder, that the evidence of one of the justices might be received as to certain expressions used by the one in the presence of the other, together with the answer.⁵ It has also been held, that a confession by the principal will not be evidence against the accessory, to prove the guilt of the principal. Nor will the conviction of the principal upon a plea of guilty, or of not guilty, be evidence for the same purpose. The guilt of the principal must be proved by other means.⁶ But this rule does not hold in the case of a receiver.⁷ At least, what the thief says in the receiver's presence is evidence against the receiver,⁸ or is to be presumed, with reference to the circumstances, certainly not as to the guilty knowledge. Lastly, a confession must be full enough. Where the prisoner acknowledged having taken two heifers from the "West End, Dolver," the name of the prosecutor's farm, but the prosecutor would not swear that there was not another farm of that name, the confession was holden insufficient.⁹

Examinations.] We now come to speak of examinations before magistrates, dying declarations, letters, depositions, public docu-

¹ R. v. Fletcher and others, 1 Lew. C. C. 107; 4 C. & P. 250. S. P. by Littledale, J., in the Oddingley murder case. S. P. by Alderson, J., in a case of poaching. R. v. Hall and another, 1 Lew. C. C. 232. The attention of the learned judge having been called to the two opinions. R. v. Walkley and another, 6 C. & P. 175.

² R. v. Foster and others, 1 Lew. C. C. 110. R. v. Barstow, Id. R. v. Hearn and others, 4 C. & P. 215.

³ R. v. Morse and others, 8 C. & P. 605, Patteson, J.

⁴ R. v. Stansfield and others, 1 Lew. C. C. 118.

⁵ R. v. Edmunds, 6 C. & P. 164.

⁶ R. v. Turner, 1 Moo. C. C. 347.

⁷ R. v. Blick, 4 C. & P. 377.

⁸ R. v. Cox, 1 Fost. & F. 90.

⁹ R. v. Tuffs, 5 C. & P. 167. See generally on the subject of confessions, 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 46, s. 31, et seq.; East, P. C. 657, et seq.; Burn's Just. Tit. "Confession."

ments, or records, &c., and private documents, as policies of insurance, &c. We need not pause long upon examinations, for it rarely occurs that an examination which goes further than a mere denial or confession does not contain some facts which implicate the person making it. And the matter is so mixed up with the point of confessions, that the cases bearing upon both confessions and examinations, not being confessions, have been already for the most part noticed.

Dying declarations.] The admission of dying declarations as evidence lies entirely in the breast of the court. The court will judge of the circumstances of each particular case.¹ The dying declaration is an exception to the doctrine that hearsay evidence cannot be admitted, and it may also be remarked that these statements, although parol, are receivable, and even so when a subsequent story has been reduced to writing.² The statement, however, must relate to the offence which caused the death. A woman, who had been ravished, cut her throat, and under a sense of impending dissolution, implicated the prisoners in the criminal assault. This story, as a dying declaration, was held inadmissible.³ Upon these occasions the judge will have to consider the integrity of the feeling of approaching death, in other words, the hopelessness of life. Where the deceased has evidently no hope, the matter is very clear. And also where the wound or state of illness is such as to preclude hope.⁴ A woman lay mortally wounded, and in such a condition that her immediate death was almost inevitable. Eyre, C. B., held her declaration admissible, although no explanation escaped her as to her peculiar situation.⁵ The surgeon's opinion that there are hopes will not exclude the evidence, if the patient himself declare that he has no prospect of life, and that he must die.⁶ So, where the surgeon gave some slight hopes, but the man said, "I do not myself think that I shall ultimately recover." The declaration was held admissible.⁷ The patient's words were, "Oh God, I am going fast. I am too far gone to say any more." This expression was held sufficient without further evidence of the condition of the injured person.⁸ On the contrary, where the surgeon declared that recovery was just possible, and the deceased said, "I am satisfied," his state-

¹ See 6 C. & P. 386; 7 C. & P. 187.

² R. v. Reason and another, Str. 500.

³ R. v. Newton and another, 1 Fost. & F. 641.

⁴ East, P. C. 358.

⁵ R. v. Woodcock, Leach, 500. R. v. Johns, ut supra, S. P. R. v. Tinkler, East, P. C. 354. R. v. Brooks, 1 Cox, 6.

⁶ 1 Moo. C. C. 97. R. v. Mosley and another. The words were, "I shall not continue long. A few days will finish me. I am sure I shall not get better." R. v. Bonner, 2 Russ. C. M. 759; 6 C. & P. 386.

⁷ R. v. Reany and another, 26 L. J. M. C. 43. R. v. Peel, 2 Fost. & F. 21. R. v. Seton, Law Times, 1846.

⁸ R. v. Nicholas, 6 Cox, 120. But the declaration was read by consent.

ment was deemed inadmissible, because he was in hope.¹ It is not enough to exclude, that he has some hope left in his own mind. Scarcely a human being could be found who would not entertain some hope.² Although where the deceased said she should not recover, but on the same day inquired of some one whether she would "rise again," her declaration was rejected.³ The dying declaration of a child four years old was rejected, on the ground of inability, by reason of tender age, to have an idea of a future state, which is necessary, in order to make such evidence admissible.⁴ But the declaration of a boy ten years old was deemed receivable, being made under the immediate expectation of death and with reference to a future state.⁵

The custom among Catholics, when a person is desirous of making his peace with God, is to send for a priest and to receive extreme unction.⁶ Extreme unction is not considered necessary to salvation by the Roman Catholic Church. The deceased being shot was asked whether he would have a priest fetched; he replied, "That is not of much use." Being asked whether he would see a magistrate, his answer was, "Not yet." He then made a statement, and it was received as a declaration in articulo mortis.⁷ The dying declaration is not quite confined to the person where death is the subject of the charge. If another person has died by the same means and mode of destruction which are laid to

¹ R. v. Christie, 2 Russ. C. M. 754, citing Carr. Sup. 202. R. v. Megson, 9 C. & P. 418.

² R. v. Pym, 1 Cox, 339.

³ R. v. Fagent, 7 C. & P. 238. R. v. Hayward, 6 C. & P. 157. Other instances of admissible declaration are as follow: "I am afraid I shall never get better," said some weeks before death. R. v. Craven, 1 Lew. C. C. 77. "You are in great danger." "I fear I am." He soon got better, so as to think himself out of danger. R. v. Simpson, Id. 78. But Patteson, J., did not think that hope was sufficiently excluded in Simpson's case. R. v. Errington, 2 Lew. C. C. 148. Believed he should die. R. v. Wm. Smith, Id. 81. Desire to make a will immediately. R. v. Thomas, 1 Cox, 52. Religious expressions. Id. Fluctuations between hope and no hope, governed by the surgeon. At length hope ceased. R. v. Ashton, 2 Lew. C. C. 147. Contra:—"I never thought I should recover; I have no great hopes of it now."

R. v. Wilson, Id. 78, Littledale, J. It was, however, received as a deposition upon oath. "I hope you will do what you can for me for the sake of my family." R. v. Crockett, 4 C. & P. 544; see also R. v. Welbourn, East, P. C. 358; Leach, 503, n. Felt herself getting worse; she had been in hopes she would have got better, but as she was getting worse, she thought it her duty to mention what had taken place. It did not appear that there were no hopes of recovery. R. v. Megson, 9 C. & P. 418. Merely a strong sense of danger; a great anxiety for the arrival of the surgeon. R. v. Thomas, 1 Cox, 52.

⁴ R. v. Pike and ux., 3 C. & P. 598.

⁵ R. v. Minton, 2 Russ. C. & M. 760.

⁶ R. v. Perkins, 9 C. & P. 395; 2 Moo. C. C. 135. R. v. Whitworth, 1 Fost. & F. 382.

⁷ R. v. Howell, 1 Car. & K. 689; Den. C. C. 1.

the prisoner's charge with respect to the party he is charged with having murdered, the declaration of that other person is admissible.¹ Matters of opinion cannot be received as dying declarations, and it is a principle that nothing can be so received which would be rejected if the party were examined.² And thus it was that the declaration of a convict at the place of execution was refused,³ although the statute 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, s. 1, would now make such a statement admissible. Explanations, however, of the causes of an accident are not dying declarations. A witness went up to a man who was run over. The witness did not see the injury, but saw the carriage and heard him groan. It was held that the statement made by the deceased as to the nature of the accident was receivable in evidence.⁴

These declarations need not be made in the presence of the prisoner, and herein they differ from depositions at a death-bed, at which the prisoner must, of necessity, be present. Properly taken, these latter depositions are evidence.⁵ But where the prisoner was absent during the examination, the court refused to admit them, although they had been drawn up carefully and were duly signed.⁶ And where the prisoner came in during the examination, upon which the subsequent part of the depositions was distinguished by a cross, Chambre, J., refused to permit any of the previous testimony to be given, observing, that the manner and demeanour of the witness ought to be exhibited in the presence of the prisoner.⁷ Yet where the prisoner came into the room just before the three last lines of the deposition were taken down, but had the whole of the evidence carefully read over to him, and the deceased was asked whether what had been written was true, which he answered in the affirmative, after which he made the statement contained in the three last lines, which was duly taken down, ten judges held that the deposition had been well received.⁸ Parol evidence of dying declarations is not admissible unless they have been previously reduced into writing,⁹ nor will the declaration itself be receivable.¹⁰ But the document needs not, on the face of it, appear to be a dying declaration. That circumstance may be proved by parol testimony.¹¹

Again, the dying declaration must have reference to the death of the deceased. Therefore, in a case of perjury, such a document

¹ R. v. Baker, 2 Moo. & Rob. 53.

² R. v. Seller, Car. C. L. 233.

³ R. v. Drummond, Leach, 337.

⁴ R. v. Foster, 6 C. & P. 325.

⁵ R. v. Radbourne, Leach, 457 ; and see R. v. Wilson, 1 Lew. C. C. 68.

⁶ R. v. Dingler, Leach, 561 ; and see R. v. Maudsley, 1 Lew. C. C. 73.

⁷ R. v. Forbes, Holt, N. P. C. 599, 616.

⁸ R. v. Smith, Russ. & Ry. 339 ; Holt, N. P. C. 614 ; Abbott, C. J., diss. 2 Stark. 208. The prisoner was executed. See 19 L. J. M. C. 104 ; Alderson, B., in R. v. Christopher and another.

⁹ R. v. Trowter, East, P. C. 356.

¹⁰ R. v. Gay, 7 C. & P. 530.

¹¹ R. v. Hunt, 2 Cox, 239.

was rejected, where, during the proceedings, the defendant had shot the prosecutor.¹ So it was in a case of using instruments to procure miscarriage, the death of the woman being the consequence.² So in the case of administering poison with a similar intent.³ So in a case of robbery, where the person robbed died in consequence of the violence.⁴ So likewise upon the same principle the dying declaration of an accomplice would be inadmissible, unless it should relate to the self-destruction of the accomplice,⁵ namely, that the death of the individual is the sole ground for admitting such a paper. Nevertheless, the prisoner may show that the deceased was not of a character likely to be impressed by a religious sense of his approaching dissolution.⁶ It should be added, that dying declarations are admissible as evidence in favour of a prisoner charged with the death.⁷ And lastly, the declaration must point distinctly to the time of the statement, and not to anything said upon an anterior day.⁸

Depositions.] Depositions are admitted in evidence upon the proof of certain forms. The occasions are said to be, the death of the deponent, his insanity, collusion between him and the prisoner, his sickness or inability to travel.⁹ First, with regard to death. Not only may the depositions of an ordinary person be received, but likewise that of a deceased accomplice, although in common with other proofs of a similar kind, it will be watched with suspicion.¹⁰ And such a deposition may be used in a case quite different from that respecting which the prisoner is charged. As where the prisoner was at first brought before the magistrates for an assault and robbery, when the deposition was taken, and the document in question was subsequently received upon a trial of murder.¹¹ But the rule extends only to felony, and, therefore, depositions in case of information for libel were not admitted.¹² And such evidence in another case was held not admissible, because the prisoner had an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses.¹³

Insanity is a civil death, and the impossibility of producing the witness lets in as a consequence the deposition which he ¹ R. v. Mead, 2 B. & C. 605; 4 Dowl. & Ry. 420. The defendant shot the prosecutor in the interval between the verdict of Guilty and the motion for a new trial, and the dying declaration was tendered upon affidavits.

² R. v. Hind, 29 L. J. M. C. 147; Bell, 253.

³ R. v. Hutchinson, cited, 2 B. & C. 608.

⁴ R. v. Lloyd and others, 4 C. & P. 233.

⁵ 2 Russ. C. M. 763. R. v. Tinkler, East, P. C. 354.

⁶ 1 Phil. Ev. 278.

⁷ R. v. Scaife, 1 Moo. & Rob. 551.

⁸ R. v. Qualter, 6 Cox, 357.

⁹ Steph. 308.

¹⁰ R. v. Westbeer, Leach, 12; R. v. Smith, Russ. & Ry. 339. R. v. Osborne, 8 C. & P. 113. R. v. Hake and another, 1 Cox, 226.

¹¹ R. v. Smith, Russ. & Ry. 339; 2 Stark. N. P. C. 208.

¹² R. v. Paine, 1 Salk. 281.

¹³ Melen v. Andrews, Moo. & Malk. 336. Although taken in the presence of the party charged. The may have made.¹ And it is no objection to the reception of the evidence that the insanity is but temporary. Although, if the complaint be only delirium or depression of spirits in consequence of a blow on the head, and there be a probability of recovery, the deposition is not receivable, because this is not viewed in the light of insanity.² But where the witness at the time of his trial, and for some time previously, had been insane, his deposition before the coroner was rejected, because he might then have been insane.³ Again, the case of collusion furnishes a very natural ground for a deviation of this kind from the usual rule.⁴ Where it was alleged that a person who had been ravished was kept out of the way by the prisoners, her deposition was allowed to be read.⁵ But the evidence affects the delinquent only, not a prisoner tried with him and who is free from that imputation. Therefore, when such evidence was suffered to go to the jury against others than the offending party, the Court of Queen's Bench granted a new trial.⁶ Again, sickness will afford a ground for introducing the deposition. As where the prosecutor was bedridden, and there was no probability of his ever leaving his house.⁷ So, indeed, if attendance would place life in jeopardy.⁸ Mere illness, however, is insufficient, although it may operate as a reason for putting off the trial.⁹ The proposed witness was seen in bed on the 18th, and appeared ill. The trial was on the 23rd. No surgeon was present. The judge refused to receive the depositions.¹⁰ So in a case of pregnancy, Crompton, J., refused in like manner, although he said he was not positive, as a different opinion had been entertained.¹¹

As to travelling, a case has occurred where the prisoner desired to have the deposition of a witness for the prosecution, and who was at sea, read on his behalf, but the court refused, without the prosecutor's consent, to allow the request.¹² But where the witness was obliged to go home ill under medical advice, he was held to be within the words "unable to travel," and his deposition was prisoner was tried for the murder of E. S., her child. Another child died after E. S., and the prisoner was examined on oath before the coroner touching the death of the second child. Whether this deposition was receivable in evidence upon the trial of the prisoner for murdering E. S. qu.? R. v. Sandys, Car. & M. 345.

¹ 3 T. R. 720, per Ashhurst, J.

² R. v. Marshall, 1 Car. & K. 147.

³ R. v. Wall, Worcester Sum. As. 1830; 2 Russ. C. M. 890.

⁴ See 2 Russ. C. M. 889.

⁵ R. v. Gutteridge, 9 C. & P. 471.

⁶ R. v. Scaife and others, 20 L. J. M. C. 229; Den. & P. 281. This case was tried, upon certiorari, in the Queen's Bench at York.

⁷ R. v. Hogg, 6 C. & P. 176. R. v. Wilshaw, Car. & M. 145.

⁸ R. v. Day, 6 Cox, 55.

⁹ R. v. Savage, 5 C. & P. 143.

¹⁰ R. v. Riley, 3 Car. & K. 116.

¹¹ R. v. Omant, 6 Cox, 466. See R. v. Walker, 1 Fost. & F. 534.

¹² R. v. Hagan, 8 C. & P. 167. By consent, almost all depositions may be read. R. v. Hunt, 2 Cox, 261.

read.¹ So where the deponent suffered under paralysis, so as neither to be able to hear nor to speak, and his physician did not allow him to go about, his deposition was read, although his life might not have been in danger had he come into court.² And so it was where a witness could travel, but could not give evidence, being ill and nervous.³ A material witness was about to leave the country, and the defendant desired to postpone his trial. The court acquiesced upon condition of his consent to allow the examination of the witness (i. e. upon interrogatories) to be read at the trial.⁴ So it would be if a party should happen to reside abroad,⁵ especially if he has been asked to come over.⁶ The court has, however, no power under 13 Geo. 3, c. 63, nor by 1 Will. 4, c. 25, to direct a commission to examine witnesses at the instance of the defendant.⁷ By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17, after providing that examinations shall be taken in the presence of the accused, and read over and signed by the witnesses, it is enacted that the deposition of one who is dead, or not able to travel, may be read in evidence if it be proved that it was taken in the presence of the accused, and that a full opportunity of cross-examination was afforded, and that it purported to have been signed by the justice. It may be so read either before the grand or petit jury.⁸ For the word "trial" may well be coupled with that of prosecution.⁹ But Lord Campbell said, that the judges entertained some doubt whether they could entertain the question under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, and whether, if the evidence had not been rightly submitted to the grand jury, the conviction would have been invalid.¹⁰ "It is probable that although the cases of death and inability to travel from illness¹¹ are expressly stated in this statute as those in which the deposition of a witness may be read against a prisoner at his trial, it may be holden, that such depositions may also be read in evidence if the ¹ R. v. Wicker, 18 Jur. 252. Yet the depositions must, in order to be read, be regular on the face of them, notwithstanding any certificate of illness. By Parke, B., and Channell, Serj. R. v. Miller, 4 Cox, 166.

² R. v. Cockburn, 26 L. J. M. C. 136; Dears. & B. 203.

³ R. v. Wilson, 8 Cox, 453, and R. v. Cockburn was relied upon.

⁴ R. v. Morphey, 2 M. & S. 602; Anon. 2 Ch. Rep. 199.

⁵ 1 Phil. Ev. 364. As to depositions in India. See 13 Geo. 3, c. 63, ss. 40, 44. R. v. Douglas, 13 C. B. 42. Mandamus from the Q. B. to the Supreme Court of Madras for the examination of witnesses. As to depositions of witnesses abroad in cases of prosecutions against public servants, see 42 Geo. 3, c. 85. Note.—The statute 1 Will. 4, c. 22, which gives the power of issuing commissions for the examination of witnesses, does not extend to indictments. R. v. Briscoe, 1 Dowl. N. P. C. 520. See also 19 & 20 Vict. c. 113, as to foreign evidence in civil and criminal suits.

⁶ R. v. Austin, 25 L. J. M. C. 48.

⁷ R. v. Wood, 7 Mees. & W. 571. Attorney-General v. Bovet, 15 Mees. & W. 60; 15 L. J. Ex. 755; Taylor on Evidence, 436.

⁸ R. v. Clements, 20 L. J. M. C. 193.

⁹ R. v. Clements and others, Den. & P. 251.

¹⁰ Id. 253.

¹¹ Pregnancy and confinement seem not to be illnesses within this statute. R. v. Walker, 1 Fost. & F. 534. R. v. Huddersfield (Inhabitants), 9 & 10 Vict. c. 66, witness be insane, or kept out of the way by the prisoner, or by some person on his behalf at the time of the trial."¹ Alderson, B., doubted in *Austin's case*² whether the admission of depositions was not limited to the two cases mentioned in the Act. Coleridge, J., would not hold himself bound by those limits.³ There must have been the fullest opportunity of cross-examination, question by question, and the accused must have been asked whether he had any question to put.⁴ The depositions taken before a coroner may be treated as those before a magistrate.⁵

The next matter is the usual mode of proof. The justice,⁶ the coroner, or the clerk may be sworn to the fact of having duly taken the depositions. And we have seen, that in a serious case the magistrate ought to be present, although proof of his handwriting is certainly admissible.⁷ So where neither the magistrate nor his clerk was present, the constable was allowed to prove the magistrate's handwriting.⁸ So, in the case of the coroner, where both the coroner and four deponents were dead, the testimony was rejected, because the witness called to prove it could not recollect whether he saw the coroner sign, nor could he prove the coroner's handwriting.⁹ The document, therefore, should be attested by the magistrate or other officer. But, nevertheless, it is not invalid for want of a signature.¹⁰ Where the magistrate omitted to sign his name at the end of each deposition, and signed only once at the end of a sheet on which all the depositions were written, the deposition of a deceased prosecutor was admitted.¹¹ And the deposition of a deceased witness needs not to have a separate caption. The caption at the head of the body of the depositions is sufficient.¹² Indeed, it is said, that no caption is necessary. It is sufficient to describe the deposition as the examination of the witness taken in the presence and hearing of the prisoner, and to state that the evidence referred to the charge, that the prisoner was apprised of the charge, and that he had the opportunity of cross-examination. And it was considered no valid objection upon an 1 Cox, 113. But the delivery of a dead child is such. R. v. Wilton, 1 Fost. & F. 391. Of course there must be medical evidence of illness, as before the grand jury. R. v. Philips, Id. 105.

¹ Arch. Jervis's Acts, p. 47.

² Ante.

³ 7 Cox, C. C. 55.

⁴ R. v. Day, 6 Cox, 55; Platt, B.

⁵ R. v. Hazell, 8 Cox, 44. "But he (Wightman, J.) doubted whether such a power ought to be exercised."

⁶ It is the duty of the justice to complete and sign the depositions as soon as they are taken. R. v. Mayor of London, 5 Q. B. 555; Dav. & M. 486.

⁷ R. v. Pikesley, ante. The witness had given evidence in contradiction to what she had stated before the magistrate. She denied her deposition, which was verified by a mark. The officer read the deposition to the witness in order that the judge might examine her upon it. But the counsel for the prosecution could not so examine.

⁸ R. v. Hallett, 9 C. & P. 748. R. v. Wilshaw, Car. & M. 145.

⁹ R. v. England, Leach, 770. See also R. v. Roche, Car. & M. 341.

¹⁰ R. v. Flemming and another, Leach, 854.

¹¹ R. v. Osborne, 8 C. & P. 113.

¹² R. v. Johnson, 2 Car. & K. 355.

indictment for obtaining money under false pretences that the word "unlawfully," or any word to that effect, was left out in the caption of a deposition offered by reason of absence through sickness.¹ One caption contained the names of all the witnesses, and there was one jurat. Each witness signed his name and deposition. This was held to be correct.² A caption for murder had appended to it, by mistake, the examination of a deceased person for injuries done to himself, and of which he died. This was received as a dying declaration, being of that character.³ But where a deposition, inadmissible as a dying declaration, was put in, having no caption at all, it was rejected, and no parol explanation could be received.⁴ However, where the magistrate was absent, a deposition on oath taken by his clerk was held irregular, and no justification of any proceedings founded upon it.⁵ Yet, in this particular, the case has been shaken. For in a more recent case, *R. v. Smith*⁶ was referred to by the judges as decisive, even where the evidence was not taken on oath in the first instance; and it was received, the magistrate being present afterwards when the oath was taken.⁷ So where the deposition was taken in the presence but fair-copied in the absence of the prisoner, it was admitted.⁸ We have said that the judge is the examiner, when a deposition is repudiated by the witness. An accomplice, who could not read, gave evidence falling short of his deposition. The judge allowed him to see the deposition, but refused to let the officer of the court read it to him in order that the counsel for the prosecution might examine him upon it.⁹ In a case where there were certain interlineations, the proof tendered was the coroner's handwriting, and the evidence of one present at the inquest, but Lord Lyndhurst required the presence of the clerk who took down the examination.¹⁰ There is a qualification as to the presence of the prisoner. If the deceased subsequently assents to the deposition upon its being read over to him in the presence of the prisoner, it will then be competent to read the paper in evidence.¹¹ For the prisoner must be allowed his opportunity of cross-examining the person who makes the deposition;¹² and, more than this, the deposition taken in cross-examination

¹ R. v. Langbridge, Den. 448.

² R. v. Young, 3 Car. & K. 106.

³ R. v. Clarke, 2 Fost. & F. 2.

⁴ R. v. Newton and another, 1 Fost. & F. 641.

⁵ Caudle v. Seymour, 1 Q. B. 889.

⁶ Russ. & Ry. 339.

⁷ R. v. Calvert, 2 Cox, 491. Rolfe, B., however, condemned the practice, and on a former occasion, Mr. Robinson, the master, said, that a magistrate had been convicted in the Queen's Bench for committing a prisoner when the examination had been taken in his absence. R. v. Courtalli, 1 Q. B. 893. Under the Vagrant Act.

⁸ R. v. Bates, 2 Fost. & F. 317.

⁹ R. v. Beardmore, 8 C. & P. 260, Gurney, B.

¹⁰ R. v. Brogan, [murder,] 2 Russ. C. M. 887, citing Rosc. Cr. Ev. 60. See R. v. Dwyers, 2 Russ. C. M. 887, note (p). Interlineation. Attendance of clerk.

¹¹ R. v. Smith, Holt, N. P. C. 614.

¹² R. v. Arnold, 8 C. & P. 621.

must be returned carefully, else the whole will be rejected. A fortiori, if such depositions are taken at a subsequent period, and not duly attested, the depositions in chief will be refused. And it will be in vain for one of the committing magistrates to offer his evidence that all were accurately taken.¹ So where one deposition was shown to have been taken in writing, and the other not, the judge rejected that which was tendered, because non constat, but that the other deposition might have been in the prisoner's favour.²

But depositions taken before the coroner in the prisoner's absence are admissible.³

If any part of the deposition which is material to the charge should have been kept back, it seems that the document cannot be read. For the object of the legislature was to enable the prisoner to know what he has to answer.⁴ And yet immaterial statements need not be returned.⁵ It has been said by great authority, that depositions cannot be added to, nor varied by, parol evidence.⁶ And it is certain that parol testimony of such documents is inadmissible unless it be shown that they were not reduced to writing.⁷ But it was held to be competent, upon a fitting occasion, to add to the examination of a prisoner by parol.⁸ There is, indeed, much difference between adding to a deposition and contradicting it.⁹ In such a case, Lord Chief Justice Wilde cited R. v. Moore,¹⁰ to show the distinction between the reception of evidence independent of a judicial inquiry, and one belonging to it. "An incidental observation made by a prisoner in the course of his examination before a magistrate, but which does not form part of the judicial inquiry, so as to make it the duty of a magistrate to take it down in writing, and which was not so taken down, may be given in evidence against him at the trial." Therefore where the inquiry turned upon the mode in which the prisoner was dressed, and what had become of a particular coat, the evidence was rejected because it belonged to the magistrate to take it down.¹¹ Depositions made by the prisoners before magistrates containing infamous accusations, were held to be evidence against them. But the answers elicited on the cross-examination were not receivable. They were not relevant to the charge in the indictment. The judges looked into the depositions to ascertain how far the proposed evidence was mate-

¹ R. v. France, 2 Moo. & Rob. 207.

² R. v. Pearson, 1 Lew. C. C. 67.

³ See 2 Russ. C. M. 893, and the learned comments of Mr. Pitt Taylor, Of Evidence, p. 429.

⁴ See R. v. Grady, 7 C. & P. 650.

⁵ R. v. Coveney, Id. 667.

⁶ R. v. Thornton, 2 Russ. C. M. 895; Holroyd, J. See note (m).

⁷ R. v. Jacobs, Leach, 309. R. v. Fearshire, Id. 202. R. v. Hinxman, Id. 310, n. R. v. Fisher,

Id. R. v. Packer, 2 Russ. C. M. 876, note (p); Park, J. R. v. Phillips, Id.; Bosanquet, J. The clerk proved in the last case that nothing was taken in writing, and then the parol evidence was received.

⁸ R. v. Harris, 1 Moo. C. C. 338.

⁹ R. v. Coveney, 7 C. & P. 667.

R. v. Thomas, Id. 817.

¹⁰ Math. Cr. Dig. 159.

¹¹ R. v. Carpenter and another, 2 Cox, 228; and see Ry. & M. N. P. C. 231. Rowland v. Ashby.

rial.¹ If the statement be duly made the judge will hand it down, and no further proof is required.²

It has been held, that the statement of a deceased person may be received in evidence at a future trial, not, indeed as proving the facts stated as if it were a deposition under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 64, but as a conversation in the presence of the prisoner.³

Before the passing of the statute 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, the counsel for the prisoner could not, of right, see the depositions against his client, nor could the prisoner himself have copies of them. But we shall see presently, when we come to speak of cross-examination and of the prisoner's defence, that the statute alluded to has worked an alteration in this respect.⁴ However, whatever may be the deposition, it must be identical with the case, if there be no opportunity for the prisoner to cross-examine. Upon a charge for stealing shillings which were marked, the prisoner made a statement concerning some half-crowns. This was held inadmissible.⁵

A deposition taken for assault was refused upon a trial for feloniously wounding, notwithstanding the sameness of the transaction,⁶ but this case is not of much authority, for as soon as the power of cross-examination arises, the difference of the charge works no change in the admissibility of the deposition. As upon an indictment for murder, a deposition taken upon a previous charge for feloniously wounding was received by the judge, and his opinion was sustained by the Court of Criminal Appeal.⁷

Letters.] Letters, unless found in the prisoner's possession, can scarcely be tendered in evidence against him. And even then the jury must not arrive at an unfavourable conclusion, merely from the facts contained in the letter.⁸ Where a person was in confinement upon a charge of forgery, and a letter appearing to have come from his brother abroad, and containing passages which might seem to affect the prisoner with a guilty knowledge, was left at his lodgings, the judges were of opinion that it ought not to have been received as evidence against him, and he was pardoned.⁹ So where letters were directed to the prisoners as a firm, the court refused to admit them, because they had never been in the custody of the prisoners.¹⁰ The custody of a servant was upon

¹ R. v. Braynell and another, 4 Cox, 402.

² R. v. Harris and another, Id. 147.

³ R. v. Edmunds, 6 C. & P. 164. A case of murder. In fact the written deposition is evidence of what the witness said before the magistrate, although not signed, and it is not limited to the individual case, but extends to all future cases, civil and criminal. 5 Mees. & Wels. 309. Leech v. Simpson, 7 D. P. C. 513.

⁴ See post. And further as to depositions, R. v. Pearson, 7 C. P. 671; R. v. Taylor, 8 C. & P. 726; and as to their being evidence generally, post.

⁵ R. v. Butler, 2 Car. & K. 221.

⁶ R. v. Ledbetter, 3 Car. & K. 108.

⁷ R. v. Beeston, 24 L. J. M. C. 5; Dears. 405. Crompton, J., said he decided according to R. v. Dilmore, 6 Cox, 52.

⁸ R. v. Plumer, Russ. & Ry. 264.

⁹ R. v. Huet, Leach, 820.

¹⁰ R. v. Hevey and another, Id. 235.

one occasion considered to be so far that of the master as to warrant the leaving of that fact to the jury as evidence that the letter had reached the hands of the master.¹ A person was charged with shooting at H. G. P. Tuckett. Tuckett gave one of the witnesses his card in the presence of the prisoner, but the contents did not appear to have been communicated to the prisoner. It was held, that the card was not evidence under these circumstances to prove the name of H. G. P. Tuckett.²

But where a letter was found in a writing desk in the room where the prisoner and his brother were, which letter was directed to a person in the neighbourhood of the prisoner's late residence, this letter was admitted in evidence upon a charge of abduction, the prisoner having told a policeman that it had nothing to do with the business he had come about.³ And when found in possession, the letters derive much greater weight in evidence if answers can be traced to them.⁴ So, although there was no evidence to connect one A. with the prisoner, a letter found at his residence after his arrest, with a memorandum in his own handwriting, was admitted as relevant to the inquiry.⁵ And under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 57, where the secretary to the commissioner produced a letter from the agent, but the answer of the agent was not forthcoming, secondary evidence of it was allowed, notwithstanding the provision in the statute that no statement made before the commissioners in answer to questions put by them should be evidence except in perjury.⁶

Papers.] At one time it was held that papers, found subsequently to the apprehension of the prisoner, in the possession of persons implicated in the same crime with himself, could not be read against him, unless, indeed, they could have been shown to have existed before.⁷ But lately such papers were admitted under these two circumstances:—1st, where the lodgings in which the papers were found had not been entered by any one in the interval between the apprehension and the finding; 2ndly, where the papers were intimately connected with the conspiracy.⁸ Should there be any doubt of the connection of such papers with the case, it seems that they cannot be admitted, although found in the prisoner's possession.⁹ The handwriting need not be proved. So that should a letter be found in the prisoner's house, neither his handwriting nor any publication on his part need be shown, provided the letter relate to the case at issue.¹⁰ And it may be added here, that com-

¹ R. v. Col. Gordon, Id. 300, note (a). By Eyre, B., and Hotham, B.; contra, Gould, J. R. v. Pearce, contra, Peake, N. P. C. 76.

² R. v. Douglas, Car. & M. 193.

³ R. v. Barratt, 9 C. & P. 387.

⁴ R. v. Horne Tooke, 25 How. St. Tr. 120, Eyre, C. J.; Taylor on Evidence, 661. See R. v. Watson, post.

⁵ R. v. Bernard, 1 Fost. & F. 240. Not to show any partnership with A. in the order to make certain grenades.

⁶ R. v. Leatham, 8 Cox, 498.

⁷ R. v. Hardy, 24 How. St. Tr. 452.

⁸ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 140.

⁹ Id. 141.

¹⁰ Id.

parison of hands is not allowable, at least with respect to documents which are not evidence in the cause. Therefore, where the counsel for the prosecution sought to put in evidence a document undoubtedly written by the prisoner, but quite unconnected with the charge, Bolland, B., refused to admit it.¹ It became necessary to prove for the prosecution that certain sums had on a particular day been written on a paper. The owner proved that he had searched for this document at his residence, that he had not searched at his shop, and that he did not usually preserve these memoranda. Platt, B., would not receive secondary evidence of the paper.²

Notice to produce.] Here may perhaps be a convenient opportunity to introduce the question of notice to produce documents. It has long since been decided that in spite of the suggestion that a party need not produce evidence against himself, an attested copy of an instrument may be received, upon the principle that it is the best evidence which the party tendering it is able to give. There is no difference in this respect between civil cases and criminal prosecutions. Reasonable time for such production must be allowed, and upon the defendant's neglect, secondary evidence may be given.³ However, the fact of the document being in court will not supersede the necessity of notice.⁴ Yet there are occasions where no such notice is required. As where a party is charged with stealing a bill or note or with forging an instrument. Here, from the nature of the accusation the party has notice that the document in question will be required in evidence, and parol notice will be sufficient.⁵ So, where the originals of treasonable papers were proved to be in the prisoner's handwriting, copies were deemed admissible without notice.⁶ And where the prisoner read an oath from a paper, it was held that no notice to produce that paper was requisite upon an indictment for administering an unlawful oath.⁷ A charge was for stealing iron out of a canal boat. The boat was weighed at the lock, and a ticket given of the weight. Notice to produce was held necessary. Here the ticket might not have been wanted at the trial.⁸ When notice is required it must be a reasonable notice. Notice to produce should be served before the assizes when the party lives away from the assize town, in order that he may have an opportunity of bringing the paper demanded. Therefore, a fortiori, where the party is in prison at a distance from his home, it must be so.⁹ And thus where notice was served during

¹ R. v. Morgan, 1 Moo. & Rob. 134, n.

² R. v. Rastrick, 2 Cox, 39.

³ R. v. Le Merchand, Leach, 300, n.; 2 T. R. 203, cited in the note; Id. 201, n., per Buller, J., Nom. Att-Gen. v. Le Merchant.

⁴ 2 Russ. C. M. 745. So said at least to be the better opinion.

⁵ R. v. Aickles, Leach, 294. R. v. Spragge, cor. Buller, J., 14 East, 276, cited before Lord Ellenborough, where the prisoner had swallowed the note he was charged with forging.

⁶ R. v. De la Motte, East, P. C. 124.

⁷ R. v. Moors and another, 6 East, 419, n.

⁸ R. v. Humphries, 2 Russ. C. M. 745.

⁹ 1 Moo. & Rob. 260, per Little-dale, J.

the assizes to produce a policy of insurance upon a charge of arson, one day only before the trial, Littledale, J. (after consulting with Park, J.), held it insufficient.¹ In a similar case notice given in the middle of the day before the trial was deemed too late.² Upon a subsequent occasion, a notice was given to produce, and served on Tuesday evening, on the prisoner's attorney. The policies were at twenty miles' distance, and the trial was on Thursday: this was held sufficient.³ The commission day was on the 16th. On the 23rd, a notice to produce a scrip paper connected with an insurance company was served on the prisoner in custody, after the discharge of the grand jury, Maule, J., held it to be too late.⁴ But where the document can be produced without inconvenience, it is not too late to call for it the day before the trial, and after the assizes have begun.⁵ Notice to produce a cheque, served at the office of the London agents for the country attorney of the defendants, at 3 P. M. of the day before the trial in London, was held sufficient, although it appeared that the cheque had been seized by the sheriff, on account of an estreated recognizance.⁶ And so it was ruled again upon a prosecution for forging a deed, where the notice was not given till after the commencement of the assizes.⁷ However, where the prisoner was to be tried on Wednesday, a notice given on Monday to produce a note was held insufficient by Hullock, B.⁸ In case of a loss, secondary evidence may of course be given.⁹ A notice, however, which is valid for one trial stands good with reference to a second, and if other circumstances concur, service in gaol will be sufficient.¹⁰ A person may be asked to mention the address of a letter he ordered to be posted, although he has had no notice to produce the letter.¹¹ If the attorney for the prisoner has applied to bail him, a notice on such attorney to produce will suffice.¹² Otherwise the attorney must be shown to be the prisoner's attorney. The attorney must not be asked whether he had shown the notice to produce to his client.¹³

Public documents.] Public documents, as Acts of parliament, records of various kinds, books of office, &c., are admissible evidence, and no evidence can be admitted to dispute a record. Even should the indictment refer to it as being filed amongst certain records, evidence that it has not been so filed cannot be

¹ R. v. Ellicombe, 5 C. & P. 522; 1 Moo. & Rob. ut supra.
² R. v. Kitson, 22 L. J. M. C. 118; Dears. 187.
³ R. v. Barker, 1 Fost. & F. 326; and R. v. Ellicombe was cited.
⁴ R. v. Allison, 1 Cox, 24.
⁵ R. v. Hankins, 3 Cox, 434.
⁶ R. v. Hamp and others, 6 Cox, 167.
⁷ R. v. Haworth, 4 C. & P. 254.
⁸ R. v. Royston, 1 Lew. C. C. 267.
⁹ R. v. Chadwick, 6 C. & P. 181.
¹⁰ R. v. Robinson, 5 Cox, 183.
¹¹ R. v. Clube, 3 Jur. (N. S.), 698.
¹² R. v. Boucher, 1 Fost. & F. 486.
¹³ R. v. Downham, Id. 386.

adduced.¹ The journals of parliament are evidence, but not the printed journals.² So also is the Gazette, which may be tendered in evidence, without proof that it was bought of the King's printer, or, indeed, from whence it came.³ Upon an indictment for exercising a trade unlawfully, and against the statute 5 Eliz. c. 4, the Act was set out as an Act containing divers orders, &c. But that printed by the King's printer, and which the defendants produced in evidence, was an Act touching divers orders, &c. Lord Ellenborough held this no variance upon the production of Ruffhead, where the word "containing" appeared. Had the statute been recent, the decision would have been different, but the lord chief justice considered Ruffhead good authority with regard to a statute of Queen Elizabeth. Unless, indeed, an examination of the parliamentary roll should be brought forward to show the contrary.⁴ The Gazette, however, is not evidence to prove a military appointment therein notified.⁵ A proclamation, articles of war, and "any acts done by, or to, the King in his regal character," are evidence.⁶

Answers in chancery; depositions in chancery; wills.⁷ But there must be an indorsement upon the probate of a will before it can be tendered in evidence.⁸

Judgments in inferior courts.⁹ Foreign judgments.¹⁰ And if not made up, minutes of the proceedings or an examined copy will suffice.¹¹

Foreign laws and judgments.¹² Irish judgments not being records in England.¹³ Convictions before magistrates.¹⁴ So again, navy books,¹⁵ bank books,¹⁶ corporation books,¹⁷ and vestry books¹⁸ are evidence. The day books of a public prison.¹⁹ The book from the mas-

¹ R. v. Shaw and others, Russ. & Ry. 526.

² 2 Russ. C. M. 805.

³ R. v. Forsyth, Russ. & Ry. 274.

⁴ R. v. Barnett, 3 Camp. 344. See also R. v. Chatburn, 1 Moo. C. C. 403. R. v. Rushworth, Id. 404. R. v. Berry, 1 Moo. & Rob. 463.

⁵ R. v. Gardner, 2 Camp. 513.

⁶ 2 Russ. C. M. 805. And see R. v. Franklin, 9 State Trials, 259. As to the journals of the House of Lords, vol. 17 of Howell. Leach, 594, cited. R. v. Withers, Leach, 594, cited. As to the articles of war. 5 T. R. 446, S. C. cited. R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436, 443. As to the Gazette. R. v. Sutton, 4 M. & S. 546. As to the King's proclamation. As to the mode of proving records and writs, see 2 Russ. C. M. 806, 808. Answers in chancery, depositions in chancery, wills, Id. 809.

⁷ See supra.

⁸ R. v. Barnes, 1 Stark. 243.

⁹ R. v. Haines, Comb. 337.

¹⁰ R. v. Wakefield, Moo. & Malk. 197, n.

¹¹ 12 Vin. Ab. 99.

¹² 2 Russ. C. M. 811, 812. R. v. Haines, supra.

¹³ Harris v. Saunders, 4 B. & C. 411.

¹⁴ 12 East, 74, 76; 16 East, 13, 15.

¹⁵ R. v. Fitzgerald, Leach, 20. R. v. Rhodes, Leach, 24.

¹⁶ 2 Esp. 665, or rather copies from them, Id.

¹⁷ R. v. Mothersell, 1 Str. 93.

¹⁸ R. v. Martin, 2 Camp. 100.

¹⁹ R. v. Aickles, Leach, 391. See the note.

ter's office in the Queen's Bench, &c.¹ Poll books,² registers, &c.³ But examined copies of the books of the Queen's Bench and Fleet Prison have been rejected.⁴ If an appointment be proved, the determination of it must be shown by the defendant, if he means to rely upon that fact.⁵ The minute book of the court of quarter sessions is not the record which should be produced in evidence upon future trials. The record should be made upon parchment, and an examined copy might then (it being a record) be admitted.⁶ But where, in order to prove an allegation in an indictment, that a certain bill had been preferred and found at quarter sessions, an examined copy of the bill of indictment, without any caption, together with the minute book of the sessions produced by the deputy clerk of the peace, was tendered in evidence, the court refused the proof.⁷ And they would not in a criminal case receive the town clerk's book.⁸ So again, upon an indictment for perjury upon the hearing of a parish appeal, the sessions book was rejected. There must be a regular record, and, it should seem, made up on parchment.⁹ A fortiori, the minute book of mere entries made at the time, is not evidence.¹⁰ But Abbott, C. J., inclined to think that an entry upon a separate leaf of the minute book, in the form of a record, might be admitted. It did not, however, become necessary to decide the point.¹¹ And the indictment upon which a person has been tried and acquitted may, during the sitting of the same commission, together with the minutes of the verdict, be admitted as evidence upon a plea of autrefois acquit, without drawing up a regular record. But the calendar, signed by the clerk of the assize, will not suffice, nor the evidence of a person who heard the sentence passed. The proof of lawful custody must appear by the record of the conviction, and so it was held upon a charge of wounding a person in a bridewell.¹²

A kirk-session book was rejected.¹³ So was a certificate purporting to have been given by the ministers and elders of the kirk, and if the minister's writing had been proved, it would have made no difference.¹⁴ So a document under the seal of

¹ R. v. Crossley, 2 Esp. 524.

² Willes, 423, 424.

³ Bell, N. P. 247.

⁴ R. v. King, 2 T. R. 234.

⁵ R. v. Budd, 5 Esp. 230. And an assumed official character is evidence of the appointment. Taylor, Ev. 653.

⁶ R. v. Thring, 5 C. & P. 507.

⁷ R. v. Smith and others, 8 B. & C. 341; Car. Cr. L. 189.

⁸ R. v. Haines, Skin. 584.

⁹ R. v. Ward, 6 C. & P. 366.

¹⁰ R. v. Bellamy, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 174.

¹¹ Id. 175.

¹² R. v. Bourdon, 2 Car. & K. 366.

¹³ R. v. Barber, 1 Car. & K. 434.

¹⁴ S. C. A certificate was found indorsed on the outside by one J. S. A servant delivered it, with other papers, to a party who appeared at the trial, but the servant was not called. Here the evidence only showed that one paper had been in the possession of J. S., and the statement in his writing was not evidence. S. C.

the holy office of Rome, no ratio decidendi being given. It was only evidence of the judgment, not primâ facie evidence of the facts.¹ The 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 7, contains the following provisions concerning public documents. All proclamations, treaties, and other acts of state of any foreign state, or British colony, and all judgments, &c. of any foreign court or British colony, and all affidavits, pleadings, &c., may be proved by certified copies without seal or signature, or judicial character of the person signing the same. The 8th section relates to the certificates of apothecaries; the 9th extends the provisions to Ireland. The 10th section makes documents which are receivable in Ireland receivable also in England. The 11th section provides the same rule for the colonies. "Colony" is defined by sect. 19. The 12th section relates to the registry of vessels. By the 13th section a conviction or acquittal, certified under the hand of the clerk of the court, shall be received. The formal parts may be omitted and the record itself needs not to be produced.² By sect. 14 every book or document of a public nature is classed within the same rule, and by sect. 15 to certify falsely is made a misdemeanor. By sect. 18 Scotland is excluded.

However, the notes of a judge are not evidence to prove what was said at a particular trial.³

Private documents.] Private documents, as bonds, bills, &c., may be produced in evidence. But where the instrument in question might, if duly stamped, be enforced between the parties, it became necessary, before the statute, in such cases to show that they had been so stamped. As where a prisoner, a clerk, gave a receipt on plain paper, Bayley, J., refused, upon an indictment for embezzlement, to admit this document, being unstamped.⁴ So upon an indictment for arson with intent to defraud the London Assurance Company, it was objected that the policy could not be received in evidence for want of a proper stamp upon an indorsement made thereon, and although Heath, J., admitted the evidence,—six judges against five held the conviction wrong, probably upon the principle that, if duly stamped, the policy might have been made use of against the prosecutors.⁵ Upon an indictment for embezzlement an entry was read in evidence. In the first column the dates appeared; in the second, the name of the person on whose behalf the money was received; in the third the signature of the person receiving; in the fourth, the amount of the parti-

¹ R. v. Dr. Newman, Dears. 85, 100. It was admitted as evidence of the judgment under a plea of justification in libel.

² The Act commenced November 1, 1851.

³ R. v. Child, 5 Cox, 197. Whether the contents of handbills written under the dictation of conspirators, are provable by oral evidence, is made a question. Taylor, Ev. citing 33 How. St. Tr.

⁴ R. v. Hall, 3 Stark. N. P. C. 67.

⁵ R. v. Gilson, Russ. & Ry. 138; Leach, 1007; 1 Taunt. 95. See also R. v. Wortley, 21 L. J. M. C. 44; Den. & P. 333.

cular payment made. This entry was held, as explained by evidence, to be a receipt, and the conviction was wrong, because the entry was not stamped, and it should not have been read to the jury.¹ By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 83, s. 27, every instrument liable to stamp duty shall be admitted in evidence in any criminal proceeding, although it may not have the stamp required by law.² This, however, is not the case where the purpose for which the instrument is offered in evidence is collateral. As where the prisoner was charged with forgery. For the Stamp Acts, being revenue laws, meant to make no alteration in the crime of forgery, but only to provide that the instrument should not be available for the purpose of recovering under it in a court of justice.³ So where a prisoner was charged with stealing a letter, a cheque drawn on unstamped paper, thirty miles from London, which in itself was invalid, was admitted by the court upon the authority of R. v. Morton and R. v. Reculist.⁴ A map or plan is in general inadmissible unless verified as to facts before the court.⁵

A paper containing an inventory of goods was found in a portmanteau, but not in the handwriting of the prisoner, who was charged with larceny, but on the outside was the prisoner's name, and "private" was indorsed, and in his handwriting. Here the word "private" might have been previously written and the evidence was rejected.⁶

Sometimes, upon application, the judge, after a verdict, will order papers to be impounded, but this authority is not exercised with respect to any documents which have not been produced in evidence.⁷

¹ R. v. Overton, Dears. 308; 23 L. J. M. C. 29. However, the proof might have been thus: a witness might have shown that the false signature was made by the person who received the money, and then another might have showed that the signature was the handwriting of the prisoner.

² Passed in consequence of the decision in R. v. Watts, Dears. 326, where an unstamped agreement was held not to be the subject of larceny. Parke, B., valdediss.

³ R. v. Morton, East, P. C. 955. R. v. Hawkeswood, Leach, 257. R. v. Lee, Id. 258, n. R. v. Reculist, Id. 703. And see other cases, Id. 707, in the note.

⁴ R. v. Pooley, Leach, 900. R. v. Cook and another, cited, Id. 1013; 1 Taunt. 101.

⁵ R. v. Mitchell, 6 Cox, 82.

⁶ R. v. Hare and another, 3 Cox, 247.

⁷ R. v. Clifford, 1 C. & P. 521.

CHAPTER XV.

OF THE EXAMINATION, CROSS-EXAMINATION, &C. OF WITNESSES.

Examination, &c.] We have now presented a summary of written evidence to the reader. The usual testimony, however, is oral, and this point will involve the mode of examining and cross-examining witnesses on either side. These interrogatories, therefore, shall now be considered with reference to examination, cross-examination, and re-examination. Questions in chief must be put so as to elicit a free and unbiassed answer, and such an answer as may appear in the first instance to be quite independent of the wishes of the examining counsel. And thus it is that leading questions are exiled from our courts. This rule, however, does not apply when it becomes necessary to identify a prisoner by directing the attention of the witness towards him. And this may be done in the most direct way.¹ And there are circumstances which will justify the most leading inquiries. As where the witness appears to be reluctant or evidently hostile, and so again where he betrays a decided dislike to the cause on behalf of which he is under examination. In these emergencies the judge will permit him to be asked plainly whether such and such things have happened, for otherwise the truth could not be arrived at.

Nevertheless Bayley, J., seems to have entertained a different opinion. That learned judge thought that it would prevent collusion if such a practice were not suffered. A witness might be instructed to make certain answers in order to make him an adverse witness, and then the counsel might put leading questions to him.² The matter rests in a great measure with the judge.³ The mere situation, as relationship, in which one party stands to the other will afford no ground for permitting this mode of cross-questioning by the prosecutor's counsel.⁴ So that the brother of the prisoner would not be so examined unless he first showed an unfair bias, but if, as in a case of murder, the brother kept back his evidence, the court would then relax the rule and suffer him to undergo a more searching examination.⁵ The prosecutor's counsel suggested that what a witness had said upon his cross-examination was untrue, and that what he had said before the magistrate had been different, and that he had made different statements to other persons, and ¹ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 128. R. v. De Berenger, 3 M. & G. 67; 1 Stark. Ev. 170. See R. v. Ball, 8 C. & P. 745.

² Anon, 1 Lew. C. C. 322.

³ R. v. Murphy, 8 C. & P. 297.

⁴ R. v. Ball, Id. 745.

⁵ R. v. Chapman, 8 C. & P. 558.

he wished to cross-examine the witness, although his own witness in chief. It was held that he could not do so.¹ If it be wished to establish the fact that a witness swore differently before the magistrate, the deposition should be produced and shown or read to him, and then, but not before, he may be asked whether he has or not stated certain things.² The question to be put where it is sought to charge the witness with conflicting statements is, "Have you always said so except before the magistrates?" or generally not even with this exception.³ Not, "Have you always told the same story,"⁴ or, "except before the coroner?" If the witness answer "Yes," the judge will not look into the deposition in order to make it evidence.⁵ Papers are occasionally put into the hands of a witness during the examination, for the most part to refresh his memory.⁶ Whether it be in consequence of forgetfulness through age or infirmity, such as blindness, or whether the witness propose to use written entries made by himself within a short time after the transactions to which they relate, the court will always allow this kind of reference for the purpose of aiding the memory of the person examined, and in furtherance of justice.⁷ These papers, however, must be open to the inspection of the adverse counsel, unless when merely used to prove a handwriting.⁸ It should be observed that the prosecutor is not confined to the depositions; he may give material evidence independently of them.⁹

If the prosecutor's witness disproves the case for the prosecution, the prosecutor may call witnesses to prove facts in opposition to his statement, but still bearing upon the issue, and he may thus discredit his own witness. But he cannot adduce any irrelevant evidence for that purpose.¹⁰ In a case of manslaughter the deceased was at an inn for three days, and the innkeeper asked him his name, which he gave. Letters arrived in that name which the deceased had as his. It was held that the innkeeper might be asked the name which the deceased gave him.¹¹ In a case of murder, by poisoning, the deceased's conversations as to his state of health were admitted in evidence, being recent, and soon before the poison was supposed to have been administered.¹² Where the prisoner was a foreigner, in a case of murder, the better course was considered to be, that the whole of the evidence of each witness should be read over to the prisoner as soon as the witness had finished his testi-

¹ R. v. Farr, 8 C. & P. 768.

² R. v. Taylor, Id. 726.

³ R. v. Price and another, 7 Cox, 405.

⁴ R. v. Shellard, 9 C. & P. 277.

⁵ R. v. Helden and others, 8 C. & P. 606.

⁶ The inspector of police took down in writing what four persons said who reported the facts of a conspiracy. These reports were read over to them and all signed them. The inspector was allowed to refresh his memory from them.

⁷ See Phil. on Ev. and Russ. C. M.

⁸ 2 C. & P. 604.

⁹ R. v. Ward, 2 Car. & K. 759.

¹⁰ R. v. Ball, 8 C. & P. 745.

¹¹ R. v. Timmins, 7 C. & P. 499.

¹² R. v. Johnson, 2 Car. & K. 354.

mony, and that each question and answer need not be interpreted at the exact time of giving them.¹ A witness may be asked questions to show that at a former trial the counsel for the defence had notice of the facts then adduced in evidence, as that a particular question was put to the prisoner in cross-examination. That question may be asked at the second trial, i. e., for perjury.²

Questions touching the proof of particular offences will be found in the course of the sections which treat of each offence in particular.

Pardon under the great seal.] There is no privilege, and a person is bound to answer if he has a pardon under the great seal for bribery, for he is not now obliged to plead it.³ Although the ruling was once otherwise.⁴ At a much later date than R. v. Reading, where it appeared that the time for proceeding for a penalty was past, Lord Tenterden ordered the witness to answer, as there was no danger of punishment.⁵ And again, the court went the length of committing the individual, who, although under the protection of a pardon, refused to answer, and they discharged the jury.⁶

Informer.] But the rule is not to compel an informer to disclose his part in the prosecution. He cannot be asked whether he himself was not the informer.⁷ There shall be no unnecessary disclosure of the channel through which detection of a crime is made.⁸ Both in crown prosecutions and exchequer informations it is not permitted to disclose the name of the informer.⁹

Cross-examination.] The witness having delivered his testimony in chief, becomes now open to the scrutiny of the opposite counsel. A cross-examination cannot go to the contents of written instruments, although shown to be in the possession of the opposite party, who has even had notice to produce them.¹⁰ However, leading questions may be put without much reserve, especially if the witness should show any bias against the cross-examining counsel, whilst, on the other hand, should he seem favourable towards that counsel, the more extended privilege will be restrained.

¹ R. v. Yscuado, 6 Cox, 386.

² R. v. Coyle, 7 Cox, 74.

³ R. v. Boyes, 2 Fost. & F. 157; 30 L. J. Q. B. 301.

⁴ R. v. Reading, 7 Howell, St. Tr. 296, North, C. J.; Stark. on Ev. pt. 2, p. 137. R. v. Earl of Shaftesbury, 8 Howell, St. Tr. 817. See Taylor, Ev. 1178.

⁵ Roberts v. Allatt, Moo. & Malk. 192.

⁶ R. v. Charlesworth, (15 & 16 Vict. c. 57,) 2 Fost. & F. 326. R. v. Leatham, 8 Cox, 498. The discharge of the jury seems to have been an unconstitutional act, however just the committal might have been.

⁷ Att.-Gen. v. Briant, 15 Mees. & W. 169.

⁸ 24 How. St. Tr. 808, Eyre, C. J.

⁹ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 135; and Abbott, J., cited R. v. Hardy. However the Chief Baron and Buller, J., were against Eyre, C. J., Hotham, B., and Grose, J., on this point. See Taylor, Ev. 1176.

¹⁰ 2 Camp. 14; 2 Stark. 22.

And "it is not allowable to go the length of putting into a witness's mouth the very words which he is to echo back."¹

A witness may be asked whether he has not stated certain facts before the grand jury, and he is bound to answer the question.²

But a witness cannot be asked as to what another witness has said, on other occasions independent of the trial, for what he has said at other times is only matter of cross-examination of the witness himself.³ And a witness may be asked by the prisoner's counsel, without putting in the depositions, a material question, although the witness's answer would, according to the evidence, appear upon such depositions.⁴ And, on the other hand, a question may be asked as to a statement made upon cross-examination before the magistrates, although no note of such cross-examination appears upon the depositions.⁵

Papers may be put into the hands of a witness by the defendant's counsel, as well as by the advocate on the other side, and in such a case, we may observe, that the latter is entitled to look at them without reading them in evidence. And he may likewise ask the witness as to the time when they were written, and still without making them evidence.⁶ The rule, however, is so far qualified, that if the examination with reference to a paper does not elicit anything, the opposite counsel has no right to see the paper.⁷ The counsel for the prisoner may cross-examine from copies of depositions if the originals cannot be found. But the existence of such depositions must be proved, and they must be verified by the magistrate's clerk.⁸ And it is not incompetent for a counsel to put depositions into the hand of a witness, and then to ask him whether he adheres to his statement.⁹ The deposition must either be read to the witness at the time of the cross-examination, and the witness must be then cross-examined upon it, or the counsel for the prisoner must put it in as part of his case at the proper time,¹⁰ or the questions may be put through the court by the prisoner's counsel;¹¹ otherwise the jury might be led to believe that the deposition contained a different statement from that given in evidence by the witness.¹² The deposition, being put in evidence, may not be contradicted.¹³ To allow such a practice would be to put

¹ R. v. Hardy, 24 How. St. Tr. 755.

² R. v. Gibson, Car. & M. 672. See R. v. Taylor, 8 C. & P. 726.

³ R. v. St. George, 9 C. & P. 483.

⁴ R. v. Christopher and others, 19 L. J. M. C. 103; Den. 536; and see Id. 542, note (a).

⁵ R. v. Curtis, 2 Car. & K. 763.

⁶ R. v. Ramsden, 2 C. & P. 603.

⁷ R. v. Duncombe, 8 C. & P. 369.

⁸ R. v. Shellard, 9 C. & P. 277.

⁹ R. v. Matthews, 4 Cox, 93,

Erle, J. R. v. Ford and another, 20 L. J. M. C. 171; Den. & P. 245.

¹⁰ 20 L. J. 172, per Lord Campbell, C. J., citing the Queen's case, 2 Br. & B. 288.

¹¹ R. v. Peel, 2 Fost. & F. 21.

¹² 20 L. J. 172, per Alderson, B. R. v. Palmer, 5 Cox, 236.

¹³ R. v. Palmer, ut supra, and overruling R. v. Edwards, 8 C. & P. 26, 31. In R. v. Tooker, 4 Cox, 93, Coltman, J., disapproved the practice but admitted the evidence. In these cases the witness could not read.

the officer of the court in the position of a witness, without being on oath, to contradict the sworn testimony of the witness in the box.¹ But a witness may be asked, where the statement he has made does not appear in the deposition, whether he ever made such a statement before, without putting in the deposition.²

A witness admitted before the magistrate that the prisoner's solicitor had cross-examined him. No cross-examination appeared to have been returned by the magistrate. The judge allowed the prisoner's counsel to examine the witness as to the answer he gave.³

It will not fail to strike the reader that amongst the methods which are resorted to for the purpose of weakening the testimony in chief, that of bringing discredit upon the witness is not unfrequent. This is done by demanding answers from him to certain inquiries which are calculated to disgrace him, as whether he has been tried for theft, &c., and the rule is, that he need not reply to the question, if the consequence will be to subject him to punishment.⁴ But again, having replied, he must abide the event. It is sufficient, likewise, for a refusal, that the answer would tend to criminate him.⁵ As, "Have you not said, that you committed the offence?"⁶ This matter was very much considered in a case which arose in the Central Criminal Court in 1847, and it was decided by nine judges,⁷ that if a witness claims the protection of the court on the ground that the answer will criminate himself, and there appears reasonable ground to believe that such might be the case, he is not compellable to answer. And if obliged to answer, what he says must, notwithstanding, be considered to have been obtained by compulsion, and cannot be given in evidence against him; and they thought it made no difference as to the right of the witness to protection, that he had chosen to answer in part, being of opinion that he was entitled to it, at whatever stage of the inquiry he might choose to claim it.⁸ And the nine judges did not consider themselves bound by the ruling of Best, C. J., in Dixon v. Vale, 1 C. & P. 178; and of Lord Tenterden in East v. Chapman, 2 C. & P. 573.⁹ And should the witness have answered such questions in his examination in chief, he must not shrink, as it seems, from similar answers on the cross-examination, although they might implicate his life.¹⁰ And a party is under no obligation to answer questions which may have a tendency to expose him to

¹ 4 Cox, 94, Erle, J.

² R. v. Moir, 4 Cox, 279.

³ R. v. Edwards, 8 C. & P. 26, and though the resolutions of the judges are binding, the judge himself may examine the witness as to any discrepancy between the deposition and the evidence. S. C.

⁴ R. v. West, 2 Phil. Ev. 419.

⁵ R. v. Slaney, 5 C. & P. 213.

⁶ R. v. Pegler, Id. 521.

⁷ Parke, B., Rolfe, B., Alderson, B., Wightman, J., Coltman, J., Cresswell, J., Maule, J., Platt, B., Williams, J.

⁸ R. v. Garbett, Den. 236; 2 Car. & K. 474. Six judges contra: Lord Denman, C. J., Wilde, C. J., Pollock, C. B., Patteson, J., Coleridge, J., Erle, J.

⁹ S. C. Den. 258.

¹⁰ Man. Ind. Tit. "Witness," per Dampier, J., and see R. v. England, Leach, 767.

the forfeiture of his estate, or to any penalty whatsoever, although he is not protected from the consequences of a civil suit by his refusal.¹ Even a king's evidence need not answer any questions touching other cases than those at issue, seeing that he is only entitled to a favourable consideration in respect of these cases.² So in the case of a public libel, a witness for the crown, who had belonged to the "General Convention," but subsequently became a town councillor of Birmingham, was not allowed in cross-examination to be asked as to what he said at a meeting at which the convention was agreed on, but which took place nearly a year before the publication of the alleged libel.³ Nevertheless, the principal ground of difference amongst the judges has been whether a witness need give such replies as may be calculated to degrade without subjecting him to any punishment. Upon this point it seems that there has been a great variety of opinions; some judges holding that questions tending merely to disparage might be asked; some, that only such as might immediately tend to that effect should be forbidden; and others, that no such questions should be put under any circumstances.⁴ "Have you not stood in the pillory for perjury?" This question was allowed to be put to a proposed bail.⁵ Whether the witness had not been turned out of his office of constable for misconduct? This question was admitted.⁶

It is clear, however, that if given, the answers of the witness must be taken as conclusive, and therefore it was held incompetent for a prisoner's counsel to adduce any evidence short of the record of conviction, in order to falsify his denial of a crime imputed to him.⁷ So where the witness was asked whether he had not been charged with robbing his master, which he denied, it was proposed to prove that he had been accused of that act, but Lawrence, J., would not permit it.⁸ He was likewise asked whether he had not said that he would be revenged of his master, and would soon fix him in Monmouth Gaol. This he denied as well, and the judge said, that the words were material as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, and consequently that evidence might be adduced to show that he had spoken them.⁹ Another

¹ 46 Geo. 3, c. 37.

² R. v. Holding and another, 2 Russ. C. M. 927, citing 1 Arch. Cr. Pl. 150; Id. 929, citing 1 Arch. Pract. 193, Bayley, J.

³ R. v. Collins, 9 C. & P. 456.

⁴ See R. v. Friend, 4 St. Trials, 606, vol. 13 of Howell. R. v. Cook, Id. 748, vol. 13 of Howell. R. v. Laver, 6 St. Trials, 259, vol. 16 of Howell. R. v. O'Coigley and O'Connor, 26 Howell's St. Trials, 1353. R. v. Lewis, 4 Esp. 225. R. v. Hodgson, Russ. & Ry. 211. R. v. Pitcher, 1 C. & P. 85. Against the necessity of answering and in favour of it, R. v. Edwards,

4 T. R. 440, together with some cases in the civil courts; and see Russ. C. M. 927, 930. R. v. Barker, 3 C. & P. 589. R. v. Parker and another, 1 Cox, 76. If the matter be of an infamous nature the question may be asked, but the witness need not answer; Cresswell, J.

⁵ R. v. Edwards, 4 T. R. 440.

⁶ R. v. Gilroy and another, 1 C. & P. 87 (n.)

⁷ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 151; Id. 244, per Holroyd, J.

⁸ R. v. Yewin, 2 Camp. 678.

⁹ S. C.

point is, that although, prima facie, the contrary might be surmised, the fact of a refusal to answer questions can have no effect with the jury,¹ although the opposite party may in that case produce legal evidence to prove that which the witness has declined to answer.²

A question once arose, upon the trial of three defendants for conspiracy, concerning the cross-examination of a witness called by one only of the defendants. This person's object was to present to the jury a conversation between himself and one K., another defendant. The counsel for the prosecution then proposed to cross-examine as to another conversation between the same parties, when the counsel for K. interposed and said, that as his client had called no witnesses, there would be a hardship in bringing forward a new case against him, in consequence of this latter evidence, a circumstance which might possibly happen. But Abbott, J., although he would not decide then, whether the counsel for K. might not address the jury upon it, refused to shut out this second conversation.³

Three prisoners were indicted for larceny. They were defended separately; the court discharged one of them. This man was called as a witness by one of the other two to criminate his companion at the bar. Upon this, a right of cross-examination and reply was claimed. But this was opposed, although the chairman offered to put the questions. Both prisoners were convicted, but the case was reserved as to him who was thus criminated, and whose counsel was refused liberty to cross-examine and reply, and the judges reversed the conviction. Jervis, C. J., observed that it must not be understood, that if the evidence does not criminate the other prisoners, there may be a cross-examination and reply.⁴

Two prisoners were charged with manslaughter; they were the drivers of rival omnibuses. They were separately defended. The counsel for one called no witnesses; the counsel for the other called witnesses, who threw the blame upon his fellow prisoner. The court held, that these witnesses might be cross-examined by the counsel for the other prisoner, and that he might address the jury for the second time. He should cross-examine first, then the counsel for the prosecution, and the re-examination should follow. Then would ensue the second address, and the general reply for the prosecution.⁵ The witness alone is concerned in this matter. Lord Tenterden, upon one occasion, declared that he had done wrong to allow the attorney-general to support an objection raised by a witness for the prosecution, who said he had been threatened in consequence of the publication (an alleged

¹ 2 Stark. N. P. C. 158, per Holroyd, J.

² 2 B. & B. 314.

³ R. v. Kroehl and others, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 343.

⁴ R. v. Burdett and others, 24 L. J. M. C. 63; Dears. 431.

⁵ R. v. Woods and another, 6 Cox, 224.

libel) then before the court.¹ Park, J., has permitted the counsel for the prisoner to ask the witnesses for the prosecution whether A. and B. (who were admitted king's evidence) were not persons of very bad character.²

When the prisoner brings forward a witness to character, the prosecutor's counsel may ask him if he has ever heard of the commission of a felony (mentioning it) some years previously. If the witness replies in the affirmative, the counsel may go on to ask whether the prisoner was not suspected of having been the perpetrator of it.³

Then, lastly, it may be said that there are some occasions when a person appearing in court for the purpose of giving certain evidence cannot be subjected to this test of cross-examination. As when in an action for a malicious arrest the justice was called to produce the information, it was held by Holroyd, J., that he could not be cross-examined.⁴ And the reason was because the justice was not sworn, and the reason of his not being sworn was because he merely tendered a document which another witness, namely, the clerk, would be called upon to prove. And Gaselee and Littledale, JJ., held the same in a case where the sheriff's officer had been subpoenaed to produce a warrant of the sheriff.⁵ As soon as the oath is administered, the witness becomes subject to cross-examination.⁶ Supposing that the name of a witness is on the back of the indictment, it was held discretionary, both in felony and misdemeanor, to permit the witness to be cross-examined, although the counsel for the prosecution does not call him.⁷ But it is better that the counsel for the prosecution should examine the witness, especially if he should call him.⁸

Re-examination.] To the cross-examination succeeds, if thought fit, the re-examination. And in connection with what has just been said, we may observe, in the first instance, that a counsel may examine a witness from whom certain facts have been drawn in cross-examination, in order that the witness may have an opportunity of explaining any statement that he may have made.⁹ And his reasons for giving any particular account of a transaction to a third person may be asked in such re-examination if that account has been elicited from him on the opposite side. But the ordinary course seldom goes further than an explanation of some facts connected with the cross-examination, out of which it is not com-

¹ R. v. Adey, Gent. one, &c.;
1 Moo. & Rob. 94.

² R. v. Nichols and others, 5
C. & P. 600.

³ R. v. Wood, 5 Jur. 295.

⁴ Simpson v. Smith, 2 Phil. Ev.
467.

⁵ R. v. Murlis, Moo. & M. 515.

⁶ R. v. Burke, 2 Stark. N. P. C.
472.

⁷ R. v. Vincent, 9 C. & P. 91.

⁸ R. v. Bull, Id. 22. Whether the prosecutor's counsel, who, at the instance of the prisoner's counsel, calls a witness, may examine that witness after his examination by the prosecutor's counsel, qu.?
R. v. Harris, 7 C. & P. 581.

⁹ See the opinion of Abbott, C.J.,
2 Brod. & B. 297.

petent to travel. Therefore, where an accomplice confessed to several robberies committed on the same night with that charged in the indictment, the court refused to allow a re-examination having for its object the disclosure of particular circumstances so as to affect the prisoner with these robberies. The questions had only gone to the witness's discredit, and the other robberies did not arise out of the cross-examination.¹ And if counsel call a witness whose name is on the back of the indictment, but fail to examine him, any question put after the cross-examination must be considered as a re-examination, and be limited accordingly.²

In cross-examination, a witness was asked whether he did not put a certain age (as sixty-five) on a tombstone from the best information he could get. He said he put it there in consequence of what J. S. had told him. The prosecutor's counsel then desired to know what J. S. had said, but the court would not allow of the question.³

The prisoner, in another case, was tried for attempting to discharge loaded arms at B. B. was cross-examined as to whether he had not used violent language towards his father. He admitted that he had done so. Nevertheless, it was considered that B. might be asked upon re-examination how his father had acted towards him before he used the language elicited by his cross-examination.⁴ A witness stated that he had been bail for a previous witness for keeping a gambling house. That witness was recalled, for the purpose of saying whether he had or not kept such a house.⁵ But where, in robbery, A. stated, on cross-examination, that the prosecutor had given her seven shillings, which he had denied, the counsel for the prosecution was not allowed to ask whether she had not said to B. that the prosecutor had not given her any money.⁶

How many witnesses.] Thus far as to the mode of examining witnesses. It will, however, naturally be asked how many witnesses are required, and whether any person, assuming that no incompetency is attached to his legal character,⁷ can demand to be allowed to give his testimony. With respect to the first point, except in high treason, whether the offence be a personal attack upon the King, or for counterfeiting the coin, the King's seals, or sign manual,⁸ one witness is sufficient. And this rule holds both in felony and misdemeanor, and also in those treasons where the attack has been made directly upon the sovereign, or where his coin

¹ R. v. Fletcher and others, 1 Lew. C. C. 68.

² R. v. Beezley, 4 C. & P. 220.

³ R. v. Barber, 1 Car. & K. 434.

⁴ R. v. St. George, 9 C. & P. 483.

⁵ R. v. Noel, 6 C. & P. 336.

⁶ R. v. Clayfield, 2 Russ. C. M. 943.

⁷ See the statutes 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85; 14 & Vict. c. 99, ss. 1, 2.

⁸ For in these cases there is no corruption of blood. R. v. Gahagan, Leach, 42. R. v. Anstruther, Id. 43; East, P. C. 129.

or signet has been counterfeited.¹ In high treason, misprision of treason, and perjury, the oaths of two witnesses are requisite.

Then as to the second point, it will occur to the reader that the names of some persons may be found on the back of the indictment, who, however, are not called for the prosecution, and the question is, whether the prisoner can insist upon their being brought forward. Upon this point the rule is, that of right the prisoner cannot demand their appearance, for, through some unforeseen accident, their presence might not be possible, and thus an unjust acquittal might ensue; but the judge will, nevertheless, in general, order them to be called up for cross-examination.² Yet the prisoner's counsel must not call witnesses to contradict the facts gained by the cross-examination of such a person.³ The prisoner, in fact, makes them his own witnesses.⁴ However, in such a case, the judge directed the deposition of the prisoner's mother before the coroner to be read, in order to show the contradiction between her statement there, and that made afterwards at the trial. The judges deemed this proceeding right, and Lord Ellenborough, and Mansfield, C. J., considered that the prosecutor had the same right.⁵ Depositions likewise may be referred to, for the purpose of explaining each other, though not to give them a force and evidence they would not otherwise have.⁶ Another case where a witness may be objected to is, where he has been ordered to leave the court, but either through wilfulness or inadvertence has disobeyed that order.⁶ And, at one time, it seems to have been understood, that a party could not, under any circumstances, be examined, even although he were the attorney in the case.⁷ Latterly, however, this strictness has been modified, and Littledale, J., in one case declared that an attorney was not within the rule, his assistance being absolutely necessary for the conduct of the matter at issue.⁸ And, upon an indictment for burglary, where a party who had retired, upon hearing the order to that effect, being afterwards called in to produce a plan, remained in court, it was held, that it depended on the circumstances of the case, whether such a witness should be examined, and the court resolved to admit this witness.⁹ And a

¹ 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 93.

² R. v. Simmonds, 1 C. & P. 84. And see R. v. Whitbread; R. v. Taylor, Id. n.; R. v. Woodhead, 2 Car. & K. 520; R. v. Barley, 2 Cox, 191; R. v. Cassidy, 1 Fost. & F. 79.

³ R. v. Bodle, 6 C. & P. 186.

⁴ Supra, R. v. Woodhead.

⁵ R. v. Oldroyd, Russ. & Ry. 88, i. e., where the prosecutor calls the witness. In this case the prisoner's mother was not called for the prosecution. This case was not recognized by Bolland, B., who refused to allow the deposition to be read. R. v. Tunnicliffe, 2 Russ. C. M. 897.

⁶ R. v. Hobson, 1 Lew. C. C. 66.

⁷ R. v. Webb, Best, J., Man. Dig. 324; Stark. on Ev. 1733.

⁸ Pomeroy v. Baddeley, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 430.

⁹ R. v. Colley and another, cor. Littledale, J., Moo. & Malk. 329. The witness, however, was not examined, the counsel for the prosecution deeming his case sufficient without.

case was cited from the northern circuit, where Bayley, J., recognized the same exception, observing at the same time, that the testimony would be open to such remarks as might be thought fit.¹ In the Exchequer, in revenue cases, the rule has been to refuse any witness remaining in court after an order to the contrary.² It is one thing to demand the absence of witnesses on either side, as of right, although Coleridge, J., seemed to think it might be so,³ and another for the judge to order that course, at his own discretion. In the latter case, there can be no doubt; in the former it is a question whether the rule is not limited to civil cases.⁴

¹ Ex. rel. Moody, Id. 329. R. v. Boyle, cor. Bayley, J., 1 Lew. C.C. 325; S. P. and probably S. C.; and Holroyd and Littledale, JJ., are said to have ruled the same.

² Att.-Gen. v. Bulpit, 9 Price, 4.

³ In R. v. Murphy, 8 C. & P. 307, where a point of law is to be argued on the evidence of the witness.

⁴ Taylor on Ev. 1128.

CHAPTER XVI.

OF THE NATURE OF THE EVIDENCE FOR THE CROWN AND FOR THE PRISONER OR DEFENDANT.

Nature of the evidence.] Having now gone through the practical part of the examination of witnesses, we will proceed to relate the nature of the evidence. The chief principle is, that witnesses are to make mention of what they have actually seen, or what they positively know to be the fact, and, on some occasions, an oath to the best of the witness's belief will be received, as where he is called upon to identify property.

Hearsay.] Hearsay is not in general admissible, although there certainly are exceptions to the rule, and indeed, we have already seen that dying declarations and other statements made by persons deceased may be admitted.¹ So we have seen that certain expressions used immediately after the happening of an accident may be received as part of the res gestæ.² So, immediately after a robbery, the complaint is evidence, but not the name of the person complained of.³ And a cry of a mob was admitted to show the nature of the transaction in a prosecution for high treason.⁴ So, likewise, the story which a patient relates to his surgeon as to his sufferings. Again, the fact of a speedy complaint by the prosecutrix to her mother or friend that she has been indecently assaulted;⁵ and a similar appeal by a child five years old, immediately after ill-treatment, has been held admissible in evidence.⁶ Other cases of hearsay are to be met with, and it is clear that the same rule which permits their introduction in civil suits will also sanction it in criminal cases. For examples of these we may mention hearsay evidence concerning public rights, surveys, &c., statements made by parties against their own interest, &c.

However, conversations in the absence of the prisoner are inadmissible. Although, where a master had given his servant certain instructions upon leaving home, Park, J., permitted them to be given in evidence, although the prisoner was absent at the time.⁷ The prisoner made a remark to a witness. The witness mentioned it to A. The period of the communication was material. A. was

¹ See ante, "Dying declarations;" St. Tr. 535; Taylor on Evidence, 488.

² Ante.

³ R. v. Wink, 6 C. & P. 397. See also R. v. Osborne, Car. & M. 622.

⁴ R. v. Lord George Gordon, 2 Russ. C. M. 750, citing 21 How.

⁵ R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 242.

⁶ R. v. Brazier, East, P. C. 444.

⁷ R. v. Jenkins and another, 1 Lew. C. C. 114. Doncaster Betting-room case.

allowed to give evidence of the fact, although the prisoner was absent when the remark was made.¹ So, conversations which explain a man's conduct were admissible notwithstanding the absence of the prisoner, as directions by the husband to the wife not to tell certain facts through fear.²

Privileged communications.] Another branch of knowledge which the court will not permit to be disclosed is a privileged communication. As, for instance, that which a party makes to his legal adviser, official statements, &c. And we have seen in a former page that evidence given before a grand jury cannot be mentioned again by one of the jurors.

Upon one occasion, Buller, J., admitted a confession made by a Papist to a Protestant clergyman, although Lord Kenyon said, in a subsequent case, that he should have paused before he had admitted such evidence, probably considering it in the light of a confidential communication.³ What is said, however, out of or after confession, is a different kind of communication, and is receivable.⁴ But the principal questions which have arisen upon the subject are those which relate to attorney and client. This rule is so strict that the attorney cannot be suffered to detail anything which has passed in a professional way between himself and a party who is not before the court. So that it was considered incompetent for the defendants to avail themselves of a conversation which passed between an attorney and the prosecutor and one B.; even as far as B.'s statement went, it was a professional consultation, and the fact of B. having spoken in the hearing of the prisoner was held to make no difference.⁵ Upon the same principle, an attorney, who had been consulted in order to sue the prisoner upon a note which turned out to be forged, and had also got possession of the note accordingly, was not suffered to produce it, although he was not concerned for the prisoner upon the trial.⁶ But Patteson, J., has impugned the authority of R. v. Dixon and R. v. Smith, and compelled an attorney to produce a forged will, which a pretended mortgagor had intrusted to him, as evidence against such mortgagor upon his trial for forgery,⁷ and his ruling has been sustained.⁸ An indictment was tried against several for forging and uttering the will of a person unknown, and one prisoner was convicted of uttering. The will was in the possession of an attorney. One

¹ R. v. Richardson and another, 1 Cox, 361.

² R. v. Gandfield and another, 2 Cox, 43.

³ R. v. Sparkes, cited, Peake, N. P. C. 78. And see now R. v. Gilham, 1 Moo. C. C. 186.

⁴ R. v. Hay, 2 Fost. & F. 2.

⁵ R. v. Withers and others, 2 Camp. 578.

⁶ 1 Phil. Ev. 171. R. v. Smith,

2 Russ. C. M. 907. R. v. Dixon,

3 Burr. 1687; 9 East, 485. R. v. Watkinson, S. P. in perjury, Str. 1122.

⁷ R. v. Avery, 8 C. & P. 596.

⁸ R. v. Farley and another, Den. 197. R. v. Jones and others, Den. C. C. 166. S. C. nom. R. v. Hayward, 2 Car. & K. 234.

of the prisoners had come to him with a paper (the forged will); she said she came to consult him as to that document, to enforce it. The attorney said: "She did not come to consult me as to what her rights were, but that I might enforce her rights under it." Coltman, J., was of opinion that the document had been submitted not as a confidential deposit, but to be exhibited in court to enforce rights, and he admitted the evidence subject to the opinion of the judges. Though the point, however, was not decided, the judges being evenly decided upon another point. But Patteson, J., took occasion to observe, that what he was reported to have said in *R. v. Smith*¹ was too strong, and that he would have reserved R. v. Avery,² had not the prisoner pleaded guilty to another indictment; and Parke, B., inclined to maintain the confidential position of the attorney.³ A barrister is also within the rule. And so are interpreters and agents. And upon one occasion a barrister's clerk was not allowed to prove his master's retainer.⁴ But if the attorney be not employed, the communication of course is not privileged. As where a prisoner, charged with forgery, wrote to a friend, to ask Mr. G. whether the punishment would be the same whether the names were real or fictitious. This was held not to be privileged, Mr. G. not being then, nor at any time afterwards, the prisoner's attorney.⁵ Nor is a statement made by a woman to her surgeon privileged.⁶ Nor where the prisoner makes use of a forged instrument in order to gain certain advantages, and makes certain statements to a professional man as his adviser. Especially where that adviser acts also as attorney for the party whom the prisoner intended to defraud. In such a case it was held that the attorney was bound to produce a will, and relate the nature of the prisoner's communication respecting a mortgage, for which the forged will was to stand as a security.⁷

The second kind of communication we have to notice as being privileged is of an official character, that is to say, such as are connected with state matters or public offices. Thus the attorney-general need not give his reasons for filing an ex-officio information.⁸ And agents of the government or of the police, or informers, whether their employment be for the public safety,⁹ or the

¹ Ante.

² 8 C. & P. 596.

³ R. v. Tylney and others, Den. 319. "The expression 'for the purpose of enforcing the document,' seems ambiguous. Suppose it was delivered to the attorney for the express purpose of showing that the tenant in possession might give up possession to the forger of the will? Supposing, on the other hand, a man gives his title-deeds to an attorney to enable him to bring an action of ejectment, he ought not, perhaps, to show them adversely to his client?"

Parke, B., Den. 324.

⁴ Foote v. Hayne, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 165.

⁵ R. v. Brewer, 6 C. & P. 363.

⁶ R. v. Gibbons, 1 C. & P. 97.

⁷ R. v. Avery, 8 C. & P. 596, ante.

⁸ R. v. Horne, 11 State Trials, 283, vol. 20 of Howell.

⁹ R. v. Hardy, cited, 2 Stark, 136. R. v. Stone, cited, Id. 137.

revenue, are equally protected. So, a clerk of the works in the ordnance department was not allowed to state whether a plan of the tower produced by the defendant was accurate. Proof might be given that prints of the tower might be purchased, but the officer could not be asked as to their correctness.¹ And the same rule applies to other matters connected with state policy.

Onus of proof when on defendant.] Another rule connected with evidence, which at least relieves the prosecutor from tendering certain proofs in support of the indictment, is where, from the nature of the case, it would be almost impossible to substantiate the charge, and yet where the accusation is justified upon public grounds, as under an Act of parliament, or otherwise. Thus, if the question be whether a party has obtained a certificate, it will be for the defendant to show his qualification, where the legislature has forbidden him from exercising certain employments without one.² So it is under the game laws,³ where the prosecutor need not prove a negative, and the licence for selling game must be produced by the defendant.⁴ So, under the Acts which forbid the taking of fish in the grounds of another, and stealing or damaging trees,⁵ it lies on the defendant to show that he has had the consent of the owner for so doing. So, under the old Acts concerning the coursing of deer and lopping of trees without the consent of the owner, the later opinion was that it lay on the defendant to prove consent.⁶ Indeed, the words "without the consent of the owner," were omitted in the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29. It may be added here also as a principle of law, that where a duty is required at the hands of a public officer, he shall, until the contrary appear, be presumed to have performed it, and so it was adjudged in the case of Lord Halifax.⁷

Offence need not be proved in extenso.] It is sufficient to prove the offence without going to the full extent mentioned in the indictment,⁸ and immaterial averments need not be proved.⁹

Character of prisoner.] With reference to the character of the prisoner, it is not competent for the counsel in support of the case

¹ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 148.

² Apothecaries Company v. Bentley, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 159.

³ See 22 & 23 Car. 2, c. 23, now repealed. R. v. Turner, 5 M. & S. 206. R. v. Stone, 1 East, 639, where the judges were equally divided.

⁴ 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 42. See R. v. Hanson, from Paley on Convictions, by Deacon, 176. R. v. Smith, 3 Burr. 1475. The Hawkers' Act.

⁵ 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, ss. 34—38; c. 30, s. 19; now 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 24, 33.

⁶ R. v. Allen. R. v. Argent. R. v. Chamberlain and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 154. R. v. Hazy and another, 2 C. & P. 458, overruling R. v. Rogers, con. Lawrence, J., 2 Camp. 654.

⁷ Bull. N. P. 298.

⁸ R. v. Hollingberry, 4 B. & C. 329.

⁹ R. v. Holt, Leach, 593.

to impeach the character in evidence, because a man of the best fame may commit an illegal act, and the worst person need not necessarily have perpetrated the particular deed which is the subject of the accusation.¹ However, should the prisoner call witnesses to his character, the prosecutor may then adduce contrary testimony, not as to particular facts, but in regard of the general reputation of the individual,² and the character of the prosecutor can only be attacked in the same general way. For the same reason the general disposition of the prisoner cannot be shown for an unfavourable purpose, and it was so held in a case where it was proposed to put in the admissions of the party that he had committed an unnatural crime at another time, and with another person, and that he always had a tendency to such practices.³

Evidence of one felony in general no proof of another.] Evidence of one felony cannot be produced in support of another, at least as a general principle. So that where on a charge of burglary it appeared that the prisoners must have entered the house after three in the afternoon, upon which the counsel, abandoning the charge of burglary, proposed to bring forward proof of a larceny committed on a prior day, the court refused to allow it, observing that this was quite a different transaction.⁴ So where there were two indictments, one for night poaching, and another for stealing the prosecutor's coat, it was not permitted to the prosecutor upon the indictment for poaching to show that the coat was found in the prisoner's house, unless the prosecutor would consent to an acquittal for the larceny.⁵ So in the case of an unlawful assembly, the defendants were not allowed to inquire concerning the conduct of those who dispersed the meeting, there being no foundation laid for such a question, by evidence on the part of the prosecution as to the conduct of the meeting.⁶ And depositions in respect of another felony are not admissible.⁷ As to show that certain persons charged in the indictment then on trial were in company with another person charged in the same indictment on a particular night, so as to identify them as the persons concerned with that other in a robbery committed on the night in question.⁸

Variances.] There is only one other subject which is connected with the failure of the prosecution by reason of defective evidence, and that is the doctrine of variances. There may be a tender of evidence wholly inadmissible, and there may be charges in an indictment, which, if unsupported, will not vitiate the proceeding, but there are cases in which certain averments must be proved,

¹ See 2 Russ. C. M. 784.

² Bull, N. P. 296.

³ R. v. Cole, 1 Phil. Ev. 508.

⁴ R. v. Vandercomb and another, Leach, 708.

⁵ R. v. Westwood, 4 C. & P. 547.

⁶ R. v. Hunt, 3 B. & Ald. 568.

⁷ R. v. Fletcher and another, 1 Lew. C. C. 68.

⁸ S. C.

and should the proof differ from the indictment in these last cases, the defendant will be acquitted. This is the doctrine of variance. Thus we have the case of inadmissible evidence, of evidence which need not be brought forward, and of evidence which must tally with the charge, or rather which, if it do not so agree, must be considered as irrelevant. Some instances of these inconsistencies with the record will now be given, but they must be regarded with great suspicion since the passing of the statutes of amendment.¹ The indictment was for a pretence that the defendant had paid a sum into the Bank of England. The proof was that the defendant had said that the money had been paid into the Bank of England.² There were two persons named Joshua Jennings, father and son. The indictment charged that a horse which was stolen belonged to Joshua Jennings. The evidence was that the horse belonged to the son. This was held sufficient. It did not follow that Joshua Jennings, without more, must have been the elder.³ So, in perjury when the indictment stated a suit as depending between W. P. and R. M., and the proof showed that R. M. the elder was the person concerned, it was held no variance.⁴ Secus, had it been the younger.⁵ An indictment stated that the defendant in perjury, had sworn she had been in a certain person's company from two to four. The proof was, that she had said she had so been from eleven to half-past four. It was deemed sufficient.⁶ We have already set out the clause of amendments.⁷ Under these clauses several amendments are permitted, so as in a great measure to lay aside the doctrine of variances. But it must not escape notice, that the making of these amendments is discretionary.⁸ And in matters of substance, or where the defendant may be prejudiced, the judge will not allow them. The prosecutor should ask for the amendment before he closes his case,⁹ for it must not be after the counsel for the defence has addressed the jury.¹⁰ The termini of a highway were held to be amendable, the defendant not being in any way prejudiced.¹¹

¹ Ante. See R. v. Beech, Leach, 133. R. v. Hart, Id. 145. R. v. Elliott, Id. 175. R. v. Crooke, Id. 706, (n.) R. v. Halloway, 1 C. & P. 127. R. v. Oldfield, 2 Russ. C. M. 376. R. v. Tanner and others, 1 Esp. 304. R. v. Moor, 1 Lew. C. C. 141. Anon, Id. 138. R. v. Birkett and another, Russ. & Ry. 251. Attorney-General v. Horton, 4 Price, 237. R. v. Wright and others, 1 Lew. C. C. 235. R. v. Fitzpatrick, Russ. & Ry. 512. "Forget" instead of "neglect" was deemed a variance. "Bad rulers" instead of "rulers" was immaterial. R. v. Fussell, 3 Cox, 291.

² R. v. Plestow, 1 Camp. 494.

³ R. v. Hodgson, 1 Lew. C. C. 236. R. v. Bland, Id. R. v. Peace, 3 B. & Ald. 579.

⁴ R. v. Bailey, 7 C. & P. 264.

⁵ Id.

⁶ Anon. 1 Lew. C. C. 237.

⁷ Ante. See 9 Geo. 4, c. 15; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1.

⁸ R. v. Frost, 24 L. J. M. C. 116.

⁹ R. v. Rymes, 3 Car. & K. 327.

¹⁰ S. C.

¹¹ R. v. Sturge, 23 L. J. M. C. 172.

Best evidence.] We come now to the evidence which may be admitted. And we have said that there is a rule requiring the best possible evidence. And in another that the actual observation of a witness is the chief of its kind. And upon the same principle, when written evidence is tendered, the best proof is necessary; so that the copy of an original cannot be offered, unless the instrument first executed be lost, withheld, or destroyed. And we have seen that a policy of insurance is the best proof of its kind, and where it could not be received for want of a stamp, the prisoner was acquitted. The books of the insurance office cannot supply the defect.¹ Records of a court are the principal evidence of their order, and consequently no secondary proof can be allowed where their existence is admitted.² When the original instrument is produced, it is like the ocular testimony of a witness, primary evidence; but when recourse is had to a copy, the evidence is then termed secondary. And it is a rule that the original deed in writing, notwithstanding the letting in of secondary evidence, must be shown to have been duly executed.³ Where there is a limit in point of time to a prosecution, the warrant of apprehension or of committal is the best evidence.⁴

Handwriting.] Handwriting is likewise often proved by secondary evidence, as where the signature of a magistrate to a deposition is required to be proved. Here a witness acquainted with the general character of the hand is sufficient without calling the magistrate himself. For, unless the justice had kept his handwriting under his own safe custody until the trial, his knowledge is acquired in a major degree certainly, but still only by the same means as the knowledge of other persons who may have seen the magistrate write. And the principle is, that in such cases there is no objection to the competency of the writer.⁵ But comparison of hands cannot be allowed. As that the writing of the drawer, acceptor, and indorser of a bill was that of the same person. Cresswell, J., rejected the evidence of an expert, who was called to prove this.⁶ However, it seems that where the judge of a county court made a party write his name in court in order to verify it with another signature, and impounded both signatures, the jury upon a trial for perjury might look at both the signatures.⁷ And although the witness has not seen the defendant write for twenty years, his evidence is admissible.⁸ But there

¹ R. v. Doran, 1 Esp. 127.

² See R. v. Hube and others, Peake, N. P. C. 132. R. v. Page, 6 Esp. 83.

³ R. v. Culpeper, Skin. 673.

⁴ See R. v. Phillips and another, Russ. & Ry. 369.

⁵ See 2 Phil. Ev. 302; 2 Russ. C. M. 734.

⁶ R. v. Coleman and others, 6 Cox, 163.

⁷ R. v. Taylor, Id. 58.

⁸ R. v. Tooke, 25 How. St. Tr. 71.

must be proof of actual knowledge.¹ A session clerk from Scotland was not allowed to look at a kirk-session book, to compare the writing of a clergyman with a certificate found amongst some papers.² Nor can the jury look at papers which are not in the case, in order to compare handwritings. Nor will a scientific inspector be allowed to do so.³ A policeman who had only seen the prosecutor write once, and then for the purpose of the prosecution, was not permitted to give evidence of the handwriting.⁴ And the FitzWalter peerage case was cited, where the distinction was taken by Lord Cottenham and Lord Brougham, between a course of business like that of a solicitor or steward, and the study of a signature for the express purpose of speaking to the identity of the writer.⁵

Presumptive evidence.] It cannot, however, be always expected that the most direct and certain evidence should be produced in support of a charge, and, therefore, circumstances are often admitted in proof, for the purpose of raising presumptions that the prisoner has in all moral probability committed the crime. Thus, where a bed and blankets, which were in a house, the firing of which was charged upon the prisoners, were afterwards discovered in the house of the prisoners adjoining, Buller, J., admitted the fact in evidence, to show their connection with the design.⁶ So, in order to identify the instrument used, it was held upon an indictment for stabbing B., that C., a party who had also been stabbed, and who had preferred another indictment against the prisoner, might be called for that purpose.⁷ So, where the effect of a lotion was part of the case in an indictment for manslaughter, the operation of the same lotion upon other patients was held admissible in evidence.⁸ So where other goods than those mentioned in the indictment, and which were upon the premises of the prosecutor, were found in the prisoner's possession, this fact is evidence, as it tends to show that the prisoner was near the prosecutor's house at the time of the robbery.⁹ So where a man was charged with robbing the prosecutor of a coat by means of threats of an unnatural nature, Holroyd, J., received evidence of another ineffectual attempt to obtain a £. note by similar menaces, and the judges sanctioned his decision.¹⁰ So where a man stole a shirt at one place and left it in another, and in fact committed a third burglary in one night, the court decided upon hearing the history of all these three burglaries, by reason of their close connection

¹ Taylor on Evidence, 1479, citing R. v. Murphy, 8 C. & P. 306, 307.

² R. v. Barber, 1 Car. & K. 434.

³ R. v. Shepherd, 1 Cox, 237. Case of a threatening letter.

⁴ R. v. Crouch, 4 Cox, 163.

⁵ Taylor on Evidence, 1223; 10 Cl. & Fin. 193.

⁶ R. v. Rickman, East, P. C. 1035.

⁷ R. v. Fursey, 6 C. & P. 81.

⁸ R. v. Long, 4 C. & P. 398.

⁹ 1 Phil. Ev. 170.

¹⁰ R. v. Egerton, Russ. & Ry.

375.

with each other.¹ So in the case of a threatening letter, a subsequent correspondence between the prisoner and the prosecutor was given in evidence.² And so it is, in the case of stealings which form one transaction, as where the shopman robbed the till of marked money at several different times.³ So it was permitted to show that the prisoner had a gun near the rick on the day before it was set on fire, and that the rick in fact was on fire on that day. It was charged against him that on the following day he fired off the gun close to the rick and set it on fire.⁴ And it is no objection that this is, in effect, part of another felony.⁵ The acts done form one transaction.⁶ But the lapse of some time, half an hour, for instance, may sever the felonies. And the rule does not apply in the case of documents which are independent of the cause at issue. As in the case of a threatening letter, where letters unconnected with the indictment were tendered against the prisoner, and after consideration rejected.⁷ Nor where there is another indictment in respect of the matters tendered in evidence, unless the prosecutor will consent to an acquittal upon that indictment.⁸ But the conduct of the prisoner at a meeting two days before the transaction in question, and which conduct bore immediately upon the case, was admitted.⁹ It was admitted as part of the whole quarrel between the masters and their workmen.

The story of the person who ran out of a room with a bloody sword, immediately after the commission of a murder, is well known. It was strong presumptive evidence. And it is a presumption of law that the fact of killing being proved to have been done by the prisoner, the act must be deemed wilful, and therefore it lies upon him to show that he did not do it out of malice. Upon a charge of burglary in A.'s house, proof was given that a crowbar was found in B.'s house. B.'s house had been broken into on the night of the burglary then upon trial, and B.'s house was near that of A. The crowbar had been seen in the possession of the prisoners, and a chest of drawers in A.'s house had been forced by such an instrument. This evidence was admitted.¹⁰ The comparison of footmarks is admitted by the following examination:—"Have you looked at the soles of the shoes, and did you examine them with the footmarks before you put the shoes on the

¹ Leach, 985, by Lord Ellenborough. The cases of forgery are very analogous. See post in this work, "Forgery" and "Coining."

² R. v. Robinson, East, P. C. 1110.

³ R. v. Ellis, 6 B. & C. 145.

⁴ R. v. Dossett, 2 Car. & K. 306.

⁵ R. v. Birdseye, 4 C. & P. 386.

⁶ S. C.

⁷ R. v. Morgan, 1 Moo. & Rob. 134, n. Bolland, B.

⁸ R. v. Westwood and others, 4 C. & P. 547. See R. v. Salisbury, 5 C. & P. 155. R. v. Davis and another, 6 C. & P. 177.

⁹ R. v. Atkinson, 1 Lew. C. C. 115. Frame-breaking, cor. Park, J. And see also R. v. Roberts, 1 Camp. 399.

¹⁰ R. v. Stonyer, 2 Russ. C. M. 728.

mark." In default of this care the evidence will be rejected.¹ And if there be no other evidence, footmarks will be insufficient.²

Opinions.] There are occasions, however, where the naked facts of the case are insufficient to enable the jury to form a right conclusion. The opinions of intelligent men are then admitted in evidence. As where upon a trial for murder, medical men were allowed to give their opinions for the prisoner, that the death did not arise from strangulation, in opposition to the evidence for the prosecution, although they had not seen the body, and could only form their judgment from the evidence in court.³ So where the question was whether the prisoner was insane when he took away the life of a fellow creature. Here the judges allowed a person of medical skill to state whether, in his opinion, certain appearances, which were deposed to by the witnesses, were symptoms of insanity.⁴ So where a case of religious fanaticism appeared upon a trial for cutting and maiming, a physician who had heard the trial was allowed to be asked whether the facts and appearances stated, showed symptoms of insanity.⁵ So it was held to be competent for a gentleman versed in the Scotch law to give his opinion as to the legal effect of certain facts in that country, of course, assuming the statements to be accurate.⁶ In this case of Wakefield, witnesses were examined on both sides, as to the validity of a marriage by the Scotch law. This, however, is not a usual line of defence, it being customary to expunge evidence which ought not to be admitted, instead of calling witnesses to exclude it.⁷

By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 5, the jury charged to try a treason or felony shall not be charged to inquire concerning his lands, tenements, or goods, nor whether he fled for such treason or felony.

Prior conviction.] There is one other evidence for the prosecution which is sometimes received after the main testimony has been gone through, and before the case is entirely closed. This is the proof of a former conviction.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 116, in any indictment for any offence punishable under this Act, and committed after a previous conviction or convictions for any felony, misdemeanor, or offence or offences punishable upon summary conviction, it shall be sufficient, after charging the subsequent offence, to state that the offender was at a certain time and place, or at certain times and places, convicted of felony, or of an indictable misdemeanor, or of an offence or offences punishable upon summary conviction (as the

¹ R. v. Shaw, 1 Lew. C. C. 116.
R. v. Heaton, Id.

² R. v. Britton, 1 Fost. & F. 354. 75.
Robbery.

³ R. v. Shaw, 2 Russ. C. M. 810.
925.

⁴ R. v. Wright, Russ. & Ry. 456.

⁵ R. v. Searle, 1 Moo. & Rob.

⁶ R. v. Wakefield, 2 Russ. C. & M.

⁷ Moo. & M. 197, n.

case may be), without otherwise describing the previous felony, misdemeanor, offence or offences; and a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction for the previous felony or misdemeanor, or a copy of any such summary conviction, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court or other officer having the custody of the records of the court where the offender was first convicted, or to which such summary conviction shall have been returned, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer (for which certificate or copy a fee of 5s. and no more shall be demanded or taken), shall, upon proof of the identity of the person of the offender, be sufficient evidence of such conviction, without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same; and the proceedings upon any indictment for committing any offence after a previous conviction or convictions shall be as follows; (that is to say,) the offender shall, in the first instance, be arraigned upon so much only of the indictment as charges the subsequent offence, and if he plead not guilty, or if the court order a plea of not guilty to be entered on his behalf, the jury shall be charged, in the first instance, to inquire concerning such subsequent offence only; and if they find him guilty, or if on arraignment he plead guilty, he shall then, and not before, be asked whether he had been previously convicted as alleged in the indictment, and if he answer that he had been so previously convicted, the court may proceed to sentence him accordingly; but if he deny that he had been so previously convicted, or stand mute of malice, or will not answer directly to such question, the jury shall then be charged to inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions, and in such case it shall not be necessary to swear the jury again, but the oath already taken by them shall for all purposes be deemed to extend to such last-mentioned inquiry: provided, that if upon the trial of any person for any such subsequent offence, such person shall give evidence of his good character, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor, in answer thereto, to give evidence of the conviction of such person for the previous offence or offences, before such verdict of guilty shall be returned, and the jury shall inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions at the same time that they inquire concerning such subsequent offence.

In setting out the record, where it was said, "it is duly considered and adjudged by the court there;" there does not necessarily mean the place last mentioned. That was St. Luke's, Chelsea, but the words obviously referred to the Central Criminal Court before mentioned in the earlier part.¹

The jury are not to be sworn, and consequently there can be no challenge.² The statute contains the words "previous offence

¹ R. v. Soper, 1 Cox, 288.

² R. v. Key, Den. & P. 347; 21 L. J. M. C. 35. Where the counsel intimated his intention of challenging all the jury, and of having a fresh pannel. R. v. Shuttleworth, Den. & P. 357; 24 L. J. M. C. 36.

or offences." Therefore more than one conviction can be brought forward against the prisoner after the verdict of guilty.¹ The identity of the prisoner as connected with felony, if he be so charged, must be proved, and so in misdemeanor. The mere notice of him by the porter of the gaol was held not to be sufficient in a case of felony. He might have been confined for misdemeanor.² It should, however, be shown that the prisoner was in custody for the particular felony.³ The certificate and identity will then suffice. It may be remarked, that the judges had, at one time, come to a resolution to allow both the inquiries to go on together: i. e. the indictment for the offence newly charged, and the prior conviction. But this was not deemed fair towards the prisoner, and the proceeding was altered by statute.⁴ An objection was made that proof of a conviction in 1838 could not be brought to bear against a character commencing in 1844. But the court would not entertain it. The prisoner gave evidence of good character, and it was clearly competent to rebut it.⁵ And if the prisoner's counsel should obtain evidence of character upon a cross-examination, the effect will be the same as if he had called witnesses, and the conviction may be read.⁶ The identity of the prisoner may be proved by showing that he underwent the sentence, and it need not be established by producing a person who was present at the former trial.⁷ Where the certificate of conviction and the warrant of commitment agreed, and the prisoner was received under that commitment, the proof was held sufficient.⁸ The certificate must state that judgment was given. It is a certificate alleging the fact. But the indictment is valid if it states that the prisoner was convicted of felony, and received judgment, without setting forth the judgment.⁹

Two indictments against the same person.] There may be two indictments against the same person for felony. In such a case the judge will not take the evidence upon the first trial, however applicable, when the second comes to trial, not even by consent. Yet the witnesses in the second case having been resworn, the evidence on the first trial may be read over to them from the judge's notes.¹⁰ There were two indictments against a prisoner, one for stealing a

¹ R. v. Clark, Dears. 198, 202; 22 L. J. M. C. 135.

² R. v. Lloyd, 1 Cox, 51.

³ R. v. Goodman, 2 Russ. C. M. 130.

⁴ 12 & 13 Vict. c. 11.; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 9, both repealed, and now 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 116.

⁵ R. v. Shrimpton, 21 L. J. M. C. 37; Den. & P. 319.

⁶ R. v. Gadbury, 8 C. & P. 676.

⁷ R. v. Croft, 9 C. & P. 219. R. v. Leng, 1 Fost. & F. 77.

⁸ R. v. Leng, ut supra, and R. v. Croft was cited.

⁹ R. v. Ackroyd, 1 Car. & K. 158. R. v. Stonnell, 1 Cox, 142. As to the punishment for larceny and other offences after a prior conviction, see post, "Larceny," 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 7, 8, 9, superseding 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 11, and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99, s. 12.

¹⁰ R. v. Foster, 7 C. & P. 495.

cow, the other for stealing a calf. He having pleaded to both indictments, the jury were charged with the first, but, by mistake, the evidence applicable to the second was given. While the prisoner's counsel was addressing the jury the mistake was discovered. It was held that the evidence applicable to the first indictment should then be given.¹ The court will wait if stolen property be at a neighbouring inn, and in the meantime another prisoner may be tried, the first prisoner remaining in a corner of the dock.² The indictment may state the prior conviction before or after the substantive charge, but in that case the fresh charge should first be laid before the jury, and then in the event of a verdict of guilty, the previous conviction.³

Evidence for the defence.] The evidence for the prosecution being finished, the defence for the prisoner commences, and having begun to address the jury, the counsel for the prisoner may object to fresh evidence on the part of the prosecution, although, strictly speaking, ex debito justitiæ, the court may order the fresh evidence to be given. It is, however, unusual to press such a course.

Whether the prisoners should be called upon in the order of their names in the indictment, is not settled.⁴

We have seen,⁵ that there is no rule against the allowance of a prisoner's defence of himself, although he has been defended by counsel. In preparing the evidence for the defence, it is of importance that the counsel for the prisoner should be in possession of the depositions. A copy of these may be had under the statutes which we have already referred to.⁶ Upon a former occasion, where there were two examinations, but no regular depositions, there being only some notes taken by the clerk, Park, J., directed that the clerk should be sworn to the fact, and then handed down the book to the prisoner's counsel as a matter of right.⁷ The statute above mentioned enables the prisoner to have copies of the depositions against him. They must, however, be the depositions taken up to the time when the committal for trial takes place; those taken when there is a remand for re-examination are not within the statute. The right to them only attaches after the final hearing.⁸ It is possible that there might not be any depositions, as if a prosecution were commenced without going before any magistrate, therefore there could be no depositions, and a prisoner who requested to be tried after certain other prisoners because he had no copies of depositions, was acquainted by the court that his

¹ R. v. Wardle, Car. & M. 144.

² R. v. Wenborn, 6 Jur. 267.

³ R. v. Hilton and another, Bell, 20; 28 L. J. M. C. 28.

⁴ R. v. Holman, neg. 3 Jur. (N. S.), 722. R. v. Meadows, aff. 2 Jur. (N. S.), 718.

⁵ Ante, where the cases are collected.

⁶ 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 3; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 27.

⁷ R. v. Doncaster Betting-room, 1 Lew. C. C. 71.

⁸ R. v. Lord Mayor of London, 5 Q. B. 555; Dav. & M. 484.

wish could not be complied with.¹ The reading of the prisoner's statement by the counsel for the prosecution does not make the depositions evidence. If the prisoner would have the whole or any part of the depositions read, he must read them as his evidence.² Again, the evidence of persons on the back of the indictment, but who have not been examined before the magistrate, cannot be given to the prisoner in the nature of a deposition, for here again, the rule obtains, that those depositions only which are taken before magistrates can be allowed him.³ Indeed, none other than those taken before public officers can properly be called depositions.

The depositions of a king's evidence will be shown to the prisoner. It was so held upon a charge for receiving stolen iron.⁴ And if depositions, which need not have been returned, as depositions by the coroner, should be sent to the Central Criminal Court, that court will, upon application, direct a copy to be furnished to the prisoner if they should think it material to the interests of justice.⁵ The next matter which the prisoner's counsel will take in hand is the indictment, with reference to its validity. Upon looking at the back of that document he will sometimes find the names of persons who have not been called as witnesses for the prosecution. He cannot, however, insist upon the calling of these persons as witnesses, although it is customary for the court to allow it. Nor can he have a list of the names and addresses of the witnesses who are to be called at the trial, not even although an affidavit be produced to the effect that the prisoner believes certain witnesses, whose names are on the back of the indictment, have been procured and suborned for the prosecution, and, moreover, that he is entirely unacquainted with them.⁶ So the court refused an application to give the names of witnesses in an indictment for misdemeanor. The application was made before the defendant had pleaded.⁷

The counsel now proceeds to address the jury. In so doing, he must confine himself to the evidence brought forward, and to that which he is himself about to adduce. He must not depart from the evidence in court. For example, he may not assume that a witness had not stated a certain fact in his deposition before the magistrate, on the ground of the witness having sworn to that fact before the court, whilst the deposition was silent as to it. If it were wished to prove that circumstance, the magistrate's clerk

¹ R. v. Simpson, Car. & M. 669. He had been committed for high treason, but the grand jury had found an independent bill against him for feloniously demolishing a house, as to which there were no depositions.

² R. v. Pearson, 7 C. & P. 671.

³ R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437.

⁴ R. v. Walford, 8 C. & P. 767.

⁵ R. v. Greenacre, 8 C. & P. 32.

⁶ R. v. Gordon, 2 Dowl. (N. S.), 417. Whether the prisoner may call witnesses to prove subornation of witnesses against him, qu.? It does not seem to be settled. The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & B. 310.

⁷ R. v. Nicholson, 8 D. P. C. 422. R. v. Lacey and others, 3 Cox, 517.

might be called to show the silence of the witness on the subject.¹ And he must not, in opening a case, allude to a material conversation, which may be afterwards rejected.² The prisoner may address the court in his own person. Witnesses are then called for the defence, if there be any. It may just be noticed here, nevertheless, that if the judge should neglect to call upon the prisoner for defence, it will be matter for reversing the judgment.³ A prisoner cannot call witnesses before he addresses the jury.⁴ But it is permitted sometimes to a party who conducts his own case to take precedence of the counsel for others, both in cross-examination and in the address to the jury.⁵ If the prisoner were allowed to call witnesses first, and then to address the jury, he might comment upon the evidence on his behalf, which is not suffered.

The witnesses either disprove directly the charge against the prisoner, or show that he was in another place at the time spoken to (which is an alibi), or otherwise give testimony to make out his innocence. Defences of course vary according to each particular case. Next to the fact of denial of the charge we may notice the plea of excuse, not that in point of strictness there can be any excuse for a crime, but there may exist facts, which, under this head, might operate to diminish the legal reprobation of the act, such, for example, as might reduce a charge of murder to manslaughter. Thus drunkenness is not admitted as a palliation by the law of England, but two judges expressed their opinion at Lancaster that the jury might be allowed to take into consideration the inebriated state of the prisoner in cases of stabbing, in order to determine whether he acted under bonâ fide apprehensions that his person or property was about to be attacked.⁶ So ignorance of a statute is not, in strict law, an excuse for crime, but where the prisoner was so far out at sea that he could not have been aware of the passing of the Act 39 Geo. 3, c. 37, against maliciously shooting, the judges directed that a pardon should be applied for on his behalf.⁷ But as to drunkenness, where the question was, whether a murder had been perpetrated premeditatedly, or whether the killing arose from sudden heat and impulse, although Holroyd, J., allowed the jury to take into consideration the prisoner's drunken state,⁸ it seems that the learned judge afterwards retracted his opinion, and Park and Littledale, JJ. held the contrary upon a subsequent occasion, expressing at the same time their disapproval of R. v. Grindley.⁹ Jervis, C. J., has held that a person in a state of drunkenness could not be convicted of an attempt to commit

¹ R. v. Standen, 4 Jur. 702.

² R. v. Creau, [Murder: Clonmel Assizes,] 8 Cox, 509.

³ R. v. Speke, 3 Salk. 358.

⁴ R. v. Perkins, 1 Lew. C. C. 273, cor. Holroyd, J.

⁵ R. v. Cooke and another, 1 C. & P. 321. See also Id. 322, n.

⁶ R. v. Marshall, 1 Lew. C. C.

76. R. v. Goodier, Id.

⁷ R. v. Bailey, Russ. & Ry. 1.

⁸ R. v. Grindley, 1 Russ. C. M. 8.

⁹ R. v. Carroll, 7 C. & P. 145.

See R. v. Meakin, Id. 297.

suicide.¹ Upon the above principle, the conduct of a prisoner is certainly not of itself sufficient to prove his innocence, but, upon an indictment for murder, expressions of goodwill and acts of kindness by the prisoner towards the deceased are most important testimony to show from his general disposition towards that person that he could not be guilty of the charge.² Herein lies the distinction. The jury may consider drunkenness with reference to the motive or intent of the crime.³

Again, in libel, one paragraph may be read to explain another, so as to create a favourable impression on the prisoner's behalf, however disjoined it may be from the passage charged as libellous, provided it be connected with the matter complained of.⁴ And as the conduct of a prisoner may occasionally be brought forward against him, so, on the other hand, his general demeanour at a meeting or otherwise may be produced on his behalf.⁵ So, questions may be asked for the prisoner, whether he had ever been heard to express disloyal opinions, or whether he had taken part in any particular movement, as the establishment of a convention.⁶ But it seems that such declarations should not be general, but connected with the facts alleged against the prisoner.⁷ Although such evidence was allowed in R. v. Horne Tooke, but Lord Ellenborough subsequently expressed his disapprobation of it. So the letters of one defendant to another have been admitted upon a charge of conspiracy, to show that the former was a dupe of the latter, and not a partner in the transaction.⁸ And it is well known that the character of the prisoner is evidence not with reference to particular acts, but generally, yet so as to be applicable to the particular charge.⁹ But the Court of Exchequer refused to hear witnesses to character in informations, as for keeping false weights.¹⁰ Therefore whilst it is incompetent to inquire into the conduct of the prisoner upon isolated occasions, it is equally so to offer his character in evidence where the nature of the accusation differs from the good disposition which is attributed to him. Consequently, upon a charge of stealing, his loyalty would be of no

¹ R. v. Moore, 16 Jur. 750. In this case the person was so drunk as not to know what he was about. But when the principle is considered, it makes no difference. It could be no excuse upon a charge of murder.

² Taylor on Ev. 323.

³ R. v. Gamlen, 1 Fost. & F. 90, Crowder, J.

⁴ R. v. Lambert and another, 2 Camp. 400.

⁵ 1 Phil. Ev. 516.

⁶ R. v. Walker, Id. citing 23 How. St. Tr. 1131. R. v. Hardy, Id. 518. But the exact words must not be put into the mouth of the witness. Taylor on Ev. citing 24 How. St. Tr. 659, 755.

⁷ 2 Camp. 400.

⁸ R. v. Whitehead, 1 C. & P. 67.

⁹ See 1 Phil. Ev. 515; Taylor, 323. The witnesses to character must be examined at the trial, and not after the verdict. Although, if the attorney-general does not object, they may be heard after verdict. R. v. Mullins, 3 Cox, 526.

¹⁰ Att.-Gen. v. Bowman, 2 Bos. & Pul. 532, n. If this evidence were admitted, "it would be necessary to try character in every charge of fraud upon the excise and custom-house laws." Eyre, C. B.

avail; upon a trial for treason, his honesty would be no answer; upon a charge of forgery, his humanity would in no way save him.¹ On the other hand, a statement made as to the possession of property before suspicion is very competent evidence for the prisoner upon a charge of burglary or stealing.²

It is, again, no excuse that the prisoner is a foreigner, although that circumstance may operate in mitigation.³ The circumstances which we have just related are such as raise presumptions in favour of the prisoner, so that there are not merely presumptions against, but also in favour of the accused.

Another mode of defence is by impeaching the credit of the witnesses for the prosecution, by proof that they have said or written something concerning the case which is at variance with the testimony given at the trial, or by evidence of other declarations made by them, or by showing that the character of a hostile witness is open to animadversion. As to the first and second points, it is usual to cross-examine the witness in the first instance as to matters which are relevant to the issue. And then should he deny any facts attributed to him, evidence is called to show that he has actually said upon a former occasion the words which he denies at the trial. And the same rule is applied where the witness declines to answer.

The mode of proceeding where it is proposed to contradict a written statement of the witness is in some measure the reverse of the above. In the latter case it is not competent to cross-examine him as to the contents of a paper, but the paper should be placed in his hand, and the question put to him whether it is not his handwriting. Upon his admission of its authenticity the paper becomes evidence for the party who has interrogated him, and should he deny the validity of the writing, evidence may then be called to substantiate it. But still it is observable that no cross-examination can take place upon that point. It does not seem to have been decided whether a witness may be asked whether he has not written a different account. A witness being asked to repeat what she had said, omitted part. The shorthand-writer's notes were admitted to verify her former statement.⁴ The defendant's counsel must not put the precise words to his witness as those used for the prosecution, in order to contradict the latter. He must ask his witness to make his statement, and then he may be examined as to particular expressions.⁵

*Insanity.*⁶ The defence of insanity is one likewise which is attempted on the behalf of prisoners, and the accused or his

¹ See 1 Phil. Ev. 515; Taylor, 324.

² R. v. Abraham, 2 Car. & K. 550. Burglary. Verdict, Guilty.

³ R. v. Esop, 7 C. & P. 456.

⁴ R. v. Slater, 6 C. & P. 334.

⁵ R. v. Fussell, 3 Cox, 291.

⁶ By 1 Vict. c. 14, repealing 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, if any person be discovered and apprehended under circumstances denoting a derangement of mind and a purpose

counsel must prove it. If the accused appears to be labouring under the effects of a diseased mind, so as to be unconscious that the act he committed was a crime, it is likely that his defence will be successful, as the judge will direct an acquittal upon that ground.¹ But it must be manifest that the prisoner did not know the effect of his actions.² The jury are the judges.³ And the fact must be made out to the satisfaction of the jury, for the question is, not whether he is insane, but whether they think him so.⁴ So it must be if he be proved to be in such a state as not to know right from wrong.⁵ The jury, however, should be instructed that every man is presumed to be sane, and responsible for his actions, till the contrary be shown.⁶ A sense of some wrong done to him, although it be a partial delusion, will not avail a prisoner, if he knew when he did the act that he was doing wrong.⁷ He must be regarded by the jury as if the facts were real instead of mistaken on his part, as if the wrong was actually committed. Here the questions would be whether he has transgressed the law, in redressing that wrong, whatever it may be, and, secondly, whether he knew right from wrong at the time.⁸ And his insanity should be shown affirmatively. If the matter be left in doubt, it is the duty of the jury to convict him upon proof of the offence.⁹ Hereditary insanity is an admissible proof if it be shown by proper medical testimony.¹⁰ However the jury may and must, if they so think, find that the prisoner is insane, and upon being acquitted on the ground of insanity, he will be detained during the Queen's pleasure.¹¹ of committing some crime punishable by indictment, two justices may call to their assistance a physician, surgeon, or apothecary, and upon view and examination of the person in custody, if they deem him insane, or a dangerous idiot, may send him to the county or other asylum or hospital. But the relations, upon entering into recognizances, may take the insane person into their own care. By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 54, s. 1, if such a person should be in prison, he may be examined before two justices by two physicians or surgeons, and upon a certificate of insanity he may be removed to a lunatic asylum by a warrant from the secretary of state. In case of a return to sanity, the proceedings may be taken afresh, or upon a certificate by two physicians or surgeons, the secretary may by warrant remit the person to his original confinement, in order to trial, or may discharge him if his term of imprisonment shall have expired.

¹ R. v. Hadfield, 1 Russ. C. M. 13. See R. v. Oxford, 9 C. & P. 525.

² R. v. Offord, 5 C. & P. 168.

³ R. v. Arnold, 1 Russ. C. M. 9. R. v. Richards, 1 Fost. & F. 87.

⁴ R. v. Layton, 4 Cox, 149. To ask the question whether the prisoner is capable of judging upon right and wrong is improper. S. C.

⁵ R. v. Arnold, 1 Russ. C. M. 9. R. v. Parker, Id. 10. R. v. Bowler, Id. 11. R. v. Bellingham, Id. R. v. Higginson, 1 Car. & K. 129. R. v. Haynes, 1 Fost. & F. 666.

⁶ R. v. M'Naghten, 10 Cl. & F. 200.

⁷ Id.

⁸ Id.

⁹ R. v. Stokes, 3 Car. & K. 185.

¹⁰ R. v. Tucket, 1 Cox, 103.

¹¹ Whether for treason, felony, or misdemeanor. 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, s. 1; 4 Vict. c. 54, s. 3.

Nevertheless, the prisoner may himself make suggestions, and call witnesses in answer to the defence of insanity set up in his behalf by his own counsel, and thus repudiate the case introduced for the defence.¹ Counsel will not be allowed to quote from books in favour of insanity, however high their authority.²

Infancy.] Infancy may also be suggested as a defence, but between the ages of seven and fourteen the judge will leave the case to the jury.³ The presumption of law, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is that such a child has not a guilty knowledge.⁴

Alibi.] An alibi is likewise a well-known feature of defence, and to this the prosecutor may rejoin by showing circumstances connecting the prisoner with the spot in question, even although such circumstances may involve the commission of another felony by the prisoner.⁵

Character.] Lastly, the prisoner sometimes relies upon the bad character of the witnesses against him as a matter of defence. And here, again, he must confine himself, as in the case of the prisoner's own character, to general evidence, and therefore cannot exhibit particular facts to impeach the credit of the parties.⁶ The character of the testimony against the accused may accordingly be attacked in any way which may tend to throw discredit upon it.

Should a witness declare that he would not believe A. upon his oath, it is not necessary, in order to give effect to this testimony, that the witness should ever have heard A. give evidence upon oath.⁷

Evidence in defence. Principal and accessory.] There is one other matter of defence, and it is an exception to the general rules of evidence. It is that an accessory may controvert the guilt of his principal, notwithstanding the record of his principal's conviction. And, therefore, vivâ voce testimony was allowed to dispute the propriety of a conviction in a case where it subsequently turned out that the prosecutor had intrusted his servants in such a way with his property as to part with the possession of it. The servants were the principals, and the prisoner, who was charged as accessory after the fact and receiver, was accordingly acquitted.⁸

The following objections to the record of a conviction of a prin-

¹ R. v. Pearce, 9 C. & P. 667.
In which case, however, the prisoner's own witnesses made the case of insanity more perfect than before. See also R. v. Harris, 2 Russ. C. M. 932, n.

² R. v. Crouch, 1 Cox, 94.

³ R. v. Owen, 4 C. & P. 236.

⁴ R. v. Owen, 4 C. & P. 236.

⁵ R. v. Briggs, 2 M. & Rob. 199.

⁶ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 149.

⁷ R. v. Bisham, 4 C. & P. 392.

⁸ R. v. Smith, Leach, 288. R. v. Prosser, Id. 290.

principal produced in evidence against a receiver were held unavailing. That the principal had been asked whether he was instead of is guilty. That the record did not state how issue was joined, nor how the jurors were returned, and that the only award against the principal was, that he be in mercy, &c.¹ So the record of a conviction is not evidence to disprove the fact of a witness having always given the same account of a transaction. The evidence upon oath of persons present at the examination must be produced. It was so held in a case where A. was examined before magistrates, and afterwards upon the trial of a matter touching a similar transaction; and it was held incompetent to show by the record the contrariety of the testimony.² Upon the trial of an information for penalties, the defendant (who had been held to bail) subpoenaed the officer from the Queen's Remembrancer's Office, to produce the affidavit, on which he had been held to bail, so as to give it in evidence to cross-examine the person who had made the affidavit, if called as a witness at the trial. He was so called, and the affidavit was offered by the counsel for the defendant. The court held, that the affidavit should be produced, and that the defendant might make use of it in this way, but that if the affidavit had been made by another person, a deponent, besides the witness, and related to other persons besides the defendant, the defendant could only use so much of the affidavit, as sworn by the witness, as related to the defendant himself.³

Evidence in answer to evidence for the defence.] The prosecutor may answer the witnesses who are called for the defence. It is not very common for a case to take this turn, but it occasionally happens that it becomes necessary to support the credit of a witness by proving his general good character in answer to the imputations cast upon it. But he cannot discredit his own witness by throwing blame upon the character of that person because the evidence does not turn out exactly in accordance with his wishes. Upon such an occasion his course is to establish his case by other witnesses. And should they speak differently from the first, the contradiction is unobjectionable.⁴ Perhaps, however, under particular circumstances, evidence might be admissible to show that a friendly witness had been mistaken as to a particular fact.⁵ But no evidence can be received which might have been brought forward in support of the original case.⁶ And it may be added,

¹ R. v. Baldwin, Russ. & Ry. 241; 3 Camp. 265.

² R. v. Howe, 1 Camp. 461.

³ Att.-Gen. v. Bond, 9 C. & P. 189.

⁴ See R. v. Ball, 8 C. & P. 745. R. v. Chapman, [a case of murder,] Id. 538. R. v. Farr, Id. 768. It is competent, but most undesirable, to call witnesses to disprove the prisoner's witnesses as to good character. R. v. Hughes, 1 Cox, 44. And certainly evidence of general bad character must not be given. R. v. Burt and others, 5 Cox, 284.

⁵ See 2 Russ. C. M. 919.

⁶ R. v. Hilditch and another, 5 C. & P. 299. R. v. Findon, 6 C. & P. 132.

that should a witness be called to disprove the defence of the prisoner, he cannot be asked as to anything which does not arise out of the testimony which he has given. Therefore where the prisoner's case was, that he had bought certain goods, it was held incompetent for the prosecutor's counsel to ask the witness whether he did not see the prisoner commit the theft itself.¹ Nor can a witness be contradicted whose name is on the back of the indictment, but who is not called by the prosecutor.² Whether the counsel for the prosecution, who, at the prisoner's instance, calls a witness, but does not ask him a question, can examine him after the prisoner's counsel has put questions to him, has been made the subject of discussion. Gaselee, J., seemed to be in favour of such an examination.³

So, if the character of a prosecutrix in an assault with intent to commit a rape be assailed, she may show that her character has been good for many years after the impeachment of it, which she would not deny.⁴ Evidence to show that the witness had repeated the same story before in another place is not admitted unless there be a charge of misrepresentation.⁵

The evidence being now closed on both sides, it may occur to the reader that something unforeseen might possibly happen to make the introduction of fresh evidence a measure of justice. This is certainly not a case of frequent occurrence, but, upon one occasion, after the jury had retired to consider their verdict, Bayley, J., called them back into court, in order to hear the examination of the prisoner's father, who had not come into court before.⁶

¹ R. v. Stimpson, 2 C. & P. 415.

² R. v. Bodle, 6 C. & P. 186.

³ R. v. Harris and another, 7 C. & P. 581.

⁴ R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark. 241.

⁵ See R. v. Parker, 3 Dougl. 244; Taylor on Ev. 1101.

⁶ R. v. Hughes, 1 Lew. C. C. 321.

CHAPTER XVII.

OF THE ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES, AND OTHER INCIDENTS
BEFORE VERDICT.

It is desirable to inquire how far witnesses may be compelled to attend and give testimony. Now it is imperative upon a witness, who is present, to give evidence, and where a demur has been made on the part of the witness until his expenses should be paid, the judges have found themselves under the necessity of disallowing the objection.¹ Mr. Serjeant Russell mentions R. v. Cousens also, where Wightman, J., ordered an officer of the ecclesiastical court to go before the grand jury, although he had been brought upon a subpœna, and his expenses had not been paid.² Probably, however, should the court discover that the witness had not the means of performing his journey, the process by attachment, should the witness not appear, would not be enforced, unless proof were given that the expenses had been tendered.³ This is quite different from the obligation under which the witness lies, to answer when he actually appears.

The mode of requiring the attendance of witnesses for the prosecution is either by recognizance or by subpœna. The recognizance is directed to be entered into before the magistrate, or, in cases of death, before the coroner. The subpœna may be issued out of the Crown Office, whether there be a proceeding in the King's Bench or not.⁴ It may also be had from the clerks of the peace, or of assize; and with respect to the general service of a subpœna throughout the kingdom, the statute, 45 Geo. 3, c. 92, s. 3, provides that the service of every writ of subpœna or other process in any one of the parts of the United Kingdom, requiring the appearance of such person to answer or give evidence in any criminal prosecution in any other part, shall be as good and effectual in law as if the same had been served where the person is required to appear; and in case such person so served shall not appear accordingly, the court out of which the same issued, upon proof of service to their satisfaction, may transmit a certificate of such default under the seal of the same court, or under the hand of one of the judges or justices of the same, to the Queen's Bench in England, or to the Court of Justiciary in Scotland, or to the Court of Queen's Bench in Ireland, as the case may be; and the said last-mentioned courts respectively shall and may thereupon proceed against and punish the person so having made default, in like manner as they might have done if such person had neglected or refused to appear

¹ R. v. Cooke, 1 C. & P. 321;
S. P. at York Sum. As. 1820,
2 Russ. C. M. 948.

² 2 Russ. C. M. 948.

³ See 2 Russ. C. M. 947.

⁴ R. v. Ring, 8 T. R. 585.

in obedience to a writ of subpœna or other process issued out of such last-mentioned courts respectively. Provided, by sect. 4, that, before punishment, it shall be made to appear to such court that a reasonable and sufficient sum of money to defray the expenses of coming and attending to give evidence, and of returning from giving such evidence, had been tendered to such person at the time when such writ of subpœna or other process was served upon such person.

But the Act has no reference to persons who are within the same realm as that wherein the trial is to be had, and therefore, unless the subpœna issues from the Crown Office, the proceedings against the defaulter may, indeed, be by fine at sessions, or by indictment for disobedience, but not by attachment.¹

By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 20, justices may bind by recognizance in felonies and misdemeanors. A minor cannot enter into a recognizance, nor can a married woman, but the magistrate may commit her upon her refusal to give evidence or find sureties for her appearance. And it may not be amiss to cite a case here, where upon proof that a woman's husband had been gone for four years and a half to Buenos Ayres, and had not been since heard of, the wife's recognizance was taken for the prisoner's coming up for judgment.²

The process by subpœna, to which we have already adverted, and which is the other mode of compelling attendance, may not only be had on the behalf of the prosecutor, but of the prisoner likewise,³ and in the former case it is obvious that it applies to persons who have either been out of the way when the examination took place before the justice, or whose testimony has subsequently been deemed necessary at the trial. There is also the subpœna duces tecum,⁴ in the case of deeds or writings, and the hab. corp. ad testificandum where the party is in custody, or under the command of an officer who refuses to permit his attendance. The rule for the hab. corp. ad tes. is nisi only in the first instance.⁵ For if the court suspect contrivance, they will refuse the writ, as when it was sought to send A., a convict for perjury, to swear against B. as a material witness, in respect of the oath for the breach of which he was himself convicted.⁶ In the case of a prisoner of war, an order from the secretary of state becomes necessary.⁷ It is said that the usual affidavit by the witness of readiness to attend applies only when the party is on board of a ship, and then not always.⁸ This affidavit, which states that the individual is a material witness, and which, when he is at a distance, should show

¹ R. v. Brownell, 1 Ad. & El. 598; and R. v. Ring was referred to.

² R. v. Simpson, 1 Lew. C. C. 295.

³ Since the statute, 1 Ann. st. 2, c. 9, s. 3, which enabled the prisoner to have his witnesses sworn.

⁴ R. v. Dixon, 3 Burr. 1687. It has been held that an attorney is not bound to obey this writ, so as to prove a forgery against his client.

⁵ R. v. Pilgrim, 4 D. P. C. 89.

⁶ R. v. Burbage, 3 Burr. 1440.

⁷ Furly v. Newnham, 2 Dougl. 419.

⁸ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 614.

how he is material, should be left with the sheriff or other person in whose custody or under whose dominion the witness remains.¹

Upon these two procedures, by recognizance and subpœna, alone, it is that the expenses of a prosecution can be awarded.² And it is quite clear that a prisoner's costs are not within the Act. The only kindness shown to a prisoner, where the prosecutor absents himself, is to permit him to go at large till the next assizes without sureties.³ On the other hand, where the prosecutor did not arrive at York till the grand jury were discharged, Hullock, B., ordered the expenses of the witnesses for him under the Act.⁴ So it was, in a case of manslaughter, where the accused did not appear.⁵ Where a witness became insane whilst attending under a recognizance, Patteson, J., allowed the costs of medical treatment and of removing him to another place.⁶ In this last case it had been explained to the learned judge that Park, J., had allowed charges of a similar nature, where a woman witness had been brought to bed.⁷ The expenses attending a prosecution of cheating at cards are within the Act.⁸

But there are cases in which these expenses will not be allowed, as where the grand jury requested their disallowance, there being no foundation for the charge.⁹ So where persons went for the purpose of identifying a horse, Hullock, B., refused to allow those expenses.¹⁰ So, in frivolous cases or otherwise, the court will exercise a discretion as to the allowance of expenses.¹¹ And where the indictment has been removed by certiorari, the statute does not apply.¹² So where an indictment for a riot was removed in like manner and tried at nisi prius, neither the prosecutors nor the witnesses were allowed any costs.¹³ So where a party was bound over to prosecute at the sessions in a case which was tried at the assizes, although the witnesses who received their subpœnas from the clerk of assize were held entitled to costs under the 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 23, it was considered doubtful whether the prosecutor was so entitled, and the court refused a mandamus to the treasurer of

¹ 2 Russ. C. M. 945, &c.

² R. v. Ley, 1 Lew. C. C. 133. In burglary. R. v. Paine, 7 C. & P. 135. In larceny. The bill being found under the term "prosecuted." Secus if no bill had been preferred. R. v. Robey, 5 C. & P. 552. In murder, where the township was small and poor, except the attendance of witness upon the coroner. R. v. Lewen, 2 Lew. C. C. 161. See R. v. Taylor, 5 C. & P. 301. R. v. Rees, Id. 302.

³ R. v. Cow, 1 Lew. C. C. 131.

⁴ Id. 129, Anon.

⁵ R. v. Flannery, Id. 133, S. P. by Gurney, B., on the authority of the last case at Newcastle, Sp. As. 1833.

⁶ In R. v. Mallison, 1 Lew. C. C. 132.

⁷ Id.

⁸ R. v. Gardner, 5 Cox, 140.

⁹ R. v. Laycock, 1 Lew. C. C. 132.

¹⁰ R. v. Millington, 1 C. & P. 83.

¹¹ R. v. Powell, Id. 96.

¹² R. v. Richards, 8 B. & C. 420.

¹³ R. v. Johnson, 1 Moo. C. C. 173. R. v. Oates, Id. 175. See R. v. Cooke and others, 1 C. & P. 322.

the town to pay costs under the clause, in obedience to the order of the judge of assize.¹ We have already stated, as far as the statute is concerned,² how the proceedings of recognizance and subpœna are to be enforced. As to the recognizance, the justice may commit the party refusing to be bound, and should he enter into the obligation, but neglect to fulfil it, the court will upon application, if they see fit, estreat the recognizance. A judge, however, has power to respite the recognizance, and he has power to do this in cases before the coroner as well as others.³ Secondly, as to the subpœna, the neglect to appear upon this latter requisition is punishable by an attachment,⁴ or, it may be, by an indictment where the default happens at sessions. The original subpœna must be shown to the witness in order to found an attachment, and at the time of serving it.⁵ And it must be moved for in the term succeeding the trial.⁶ It is the same whether it be a prosecutor's or a prisoner's subpœna.

A subpœna from the Crown Office commanding the defendant to attend the assizes in the country as a witness must be obeyed upon pain of attachment.⁷ But if not issued from the Crown Office it is of no avail, and so it was held in the case of a witness who was summoned to the quarter sessions.⁸ A witness is protected from arrest, eundo, morando, et redeundo.⁹

Calling back witnesses.] The next point we have is, that the judge has the right to call back any witness he may think proper for the purpose of re-examination. Thus upon an indictment for larceny, the judge was desirous of inquiring more particularly as to certain funds, out of which the notes which were the subjects of the prosecution had been received, but upon an objection made by the prisoner's counsel, the question was not pressed, and the prisoner was convicted upon the former evidence. A point of law arising, the judges took the case into consideration, and having decided it, they observed that it would have been both competent and proper for the judge to make any further inquiry concerning the notes which he might have thought fit.¹⁰ So in burglary, where there was no counsel for the crown, Taunton, J., recalled a witness, but allowed the prisoner's counsel to cross-examine;¹¹ but Gaselee, J., recalled a witness where there was a counsel for the crown.¹² Moreover a person present in court must give evidence if required, although not subpoenaed.¹³ However, the judge will not allow counsel to prove facts after the case has been closed. As at

¹ R. v. Jeyes, 3 Ad. & El. 416.

² Ante, 7 Geo. 4, c. 62, s. 31; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 32, s. 8.

³ R. v. Mead, 1 Lew. C. C. 294.

⁴ Archb. Cr. Pl. 156.

⁵ R. v. Wood, 1 D. P. C. 509. R. v. Sloman, Id. 618.

⁶ R. v. Stretch, 3 Ad. & El. 503.

⁷ R. v. Ring, 8 T. R. 585.

⁸ R. v. Brownell, 1 Ad. & El. 598.

⁹ 2 Russ. C. M. 956. With respect to mandamus to examine witnesses, see 4 T. R. 662. R. v. Holland.

¹⁰ R. v. Remnant, Russ. & Ry. 136.

¹¹ R. v. Watson, 6 C. & P. 653.

¹² At Salisbury, M. S.

¹³ R. v. Sadler and others, 4 C. & P. 218. The case of a way.

Stafford, where, in a case of burglary, it had been forgotten to prove that the house had been shut up on the night previous, here Park, J., refused the fresh evidence, and the prisoner was acquitted.¹ It is otherwise in civil cases, and Park, J., in the above case, admitted the distinction.² If a prisoner makes two different statements as to his possession of property, and he mentions persons who, as he says, can prove his innocence, it is better for the prosecutor to have those persons at the trial, if he can, but it is not incumbent on him to call them. The prisoner's counsel cannot then say that such persons could prove his innocence, but that he had not the means of procuring their attendance.³ Where it becomes necessary, for the purposes of justice, to indict the prisoners jointly, and the evidence is complicated, the judge, in summing up, will separate the evidence applicable to each prisoner.⁴

Bill of exceptions.] Whether a bill of exceptions will lie in criminal cases is a matter upon which there has been a difference of opinion.⁵ However, as the judge will almost invariably save a point, so as to respite, if not the sentence, at all events the execution of it, it does not appear to be felt as a grievance that no decision has been come to on that subject. Lord Hardwicke, however, said that he had known it allowed upon informations in the Court of Exchequer.⁶

Adjournment of trial.] The court, of their own authority, may adjourn when a case of necessity exists, as where the trial has continued so long as to exhaust those connected with the case,⁷ and although, on one occasion, the prisoner's consent was invited to such an adjournment,⁸ it was almost immediately afterwards held that the consent was not necessary.⁹ Upon any long trial the judge will adjourn till the next day (unless Sunday). The form of such adjournment, together with the oath administered to the bailiff who is to keep the jury, may be found in 6 T. R. 531.

View.] Sometimes it is permitted to the jury to have a view, but it will not be allowed if there be a prospect of their being misled.¹⁰ And where the question upon an information for the duties against the proprietors of a glass manufactory could be tried by the inspection of a model, the Court of Exchequer refused a view.¹¹ Gaselee, Serjt., allowed a view in a case of rape, although the prosecutor did not consent.¹²

¹ 1 C. & P. 120, cited. R. v. Haynes, 1 Fost. & F. 666.

² Brown v. Giles, Esq., 1 C. & P. 118.

³ R. v. Dibley, 2 Car. & K. 818.

⁴ Case of Mr. Powell's murderers, Leach, 508, Yates, J.

⁵ Kel. 15; 3 Jones & Lat. 568. R. v. Hayes, contra.

⁶ R. v. Preston (Inhabitants), Ca. Temp. Hardw. 249.

⁷ R. v. Stone, 6 T. R. 530.

⁸ R. v. Tooke, Id. n.

⁹ R. v. Thelwall, Id. n.

¹⁰ 2 Ch. Rep. 422, Anon.

¹¹ Att.-Gen. v. Green, 1 Price, 130.

¹² R. v. Whalley, 2 Car. & K. 376.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE VERDICT.

Verdict.] The judge having summed up the case to the jury, they either deliver their verdict in court, or retire for the purpose of considering it. Should they be unable to agree, it is competent for the judge to discharge them, and to have another jury summoned to try the issue.¹ It should, however, be of necessity. A sufficient necessity appeared where the jury had been locked up from 2 P. M. to 8 A. M. without any prospect of agreeing.² And the propriety of the discharge cannot be questioned upon a habeas corpus, at all events not until two assizes have elapsed.³ If the prisoner wishes to object at the next assizes to the propriety of the discharge, he should plead puis darrien continuance.⁴ Desperate illness will induce a discharge, and medicine may be given but not sustenance.⁵ The verdict may be either general or special, and in all cases the jury may find specially. This latter verdict sets forth the circumstances of the case, and concludes with praying the judgment of the court.⁶ And the court will exercise the province of a jury when they come to give judgment. They will even find the defendant guilty as to part, and acquit him of the rest.⁷ Nevertheless, the jury may find a general instead of a special verdict, and may thus raise a question of law.⁸ Some questions, however, have arisen with respect to the manner of delivering the verdict. Where the jury are together in the box, no difficulty can arise with respect to the verdict of one being that of all, for they must be unanimous, but upon one occasion when the verdict was given in court by the foreman (the jury box being occupied by another jury), three others only being present, the rest answering to their names from an inner room, so that it was doubtful whether all could have heard the verdict, the court granted a new trial, observing, however, that no affidavit could be received on the part of any of the jury, because consent must be inferred should the verdict be given within the hearing of all. Here it was uncertain whether all the jury did hear, and therefore, upon the motion of the attorney-general ex gratia, and with

¹ R. v. Cobbett, 3 Ch. Burn, 528.
R. v. Newton, [Murder,] 18 L. J.
 M. C. 201; 3 Car. & K. 85; 13 Q. B.
 716.

² R. v. Newton, ut supra.

³ S. C.

⁴ S. C.

⁵ S. C.

⁶ Steph. 313.

⁷ R. v. Hayes, 2 Str. 843.

⁸ R. v. Allday, 8 C. & P. 136.
 To the same effect, R. v. Harvey,
 St. Tr. 414. Conway and Lynch
v. The Queen, 1 Cox, 210. R. v.
Dawson, 8 Cox, 360.

the consent of the defendant, the new trial was granted.¹ So where one jurymen appeared to have answered for the rest upon a point which involved the legal consequence of an acquittal, upon which the verdict was recorded, it was held competent for the judge to direct them to retire again upon an understanding that several differed from the jurymen's answer, and the prisoner being then convicted, the judges held that the mistake in the verdict might be corrected.² So where one jurymen said "Not guilty," which was entered by the clerk of the peace on his minutes, but the rest of the jury interposed as the prisoner was being discharged from the dock, and said "Guilty." The judges held, that the mistake might be corrected, although they would not fix any time when it might not be so amended.³ But they must not express their disapprobation of a verdict, after they have duly discovered it. Therefore the judges censured the conduct of eight jurymen who had signed such a paper of disapprobation.⁴ And the affidavit of a jurymen with respect to a matter of law, cannot of course be received.⁵ The dispersion of a jury in a case of misdemeanor is not fatal to their verdict.⁶ Although privy verdicts⁷ are not to be countenanced. If a witness be found to have been unsworn after a verdict of guilty, the jury will reconsider their verdict, and lay that witness's evidence out of the question.⁸

Verdict, nature of it.] The next question is, as to the nature of the verdict.⁹ And here we may observe that where offences laid in the indictment are of the same species, the party may be found guilty of one only, and this is commonly the charge of the least magnitude, as, where the prisoner was charged with murder, and convicted of manslaughter, in which case, as the st. 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 9,¹⁰ did not create nor alter the nature of the offence of manslaughter, but merely increased the punishment, the judges held that transportation for life might be awarded, although the indictment did not conclude contra formam statuti.¹¹ So, where the charge was for murder, and the conviction was for concealing the

¹ R. v. Wooller, 2 Stark. 111.

² R. v. Parkins, 1 Moo. C. C. 45.

³ R. v. Vodden, 23 L. J. M. C. 7; Dears. 229. And Parke, B., said, "I infer from the case that the ancient form of calling on the jury to hearken to their verdict was abandoned, which is a great error." 23 L. J. M. C. 8.

⁴ R. v. Thirkell, 3 Burr. 1696.

⁵ R. v. Almon, 5 Burr. 2686. R. v. Wooller, ut supra. Lord Ellenborough denoted it as most dangerous.

⁶ R. v. Wooll, 1 Chit. Rep. 601.

⁷ See as to privy verdicts, Tho. Raym. 193. R. v. Ladsingham.

⁸ R. v. James, 6 Cox, 5.

⁹ A recommendation to mercy on the ground that the defendant did not know he was acting contrary to law will not affect the conviction. R. v. Crawshaw, 9 W. R. 38.

¹⁰ Now 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 5.

¹¹ R. v. Chatburn, 1 Moo. C. C. 403. R. v. Rushworth, Id. 404. R. v. Berry, 1 M. & Rob. 463.

birth of a child.¹ So in burglary, the prisoner may be found guilty of stealing in the dwelling house, or of simple larceny.² And the form would be "not guilty" of the breaking and entering in the night, but "guilty" of the "stealing."³ So upon an indictment for breaking a dwelling house and putting persons in fear, although the fear, the gist of the offence, be negatived, a conviction for larceny will be good.⁴ So where an indictment for horse-stealing was defective, the prisoner was held to be rightly convicted of a common larceny.⁵ So in libel, a party charged with composing, printing, and publishing, may be convicted upon the two latter charges only.⁶ So of the composing and publishing without the printing.⁷ So in riot, a person may be found guilty of assault.⁸ Unless, indeed, both be laid in one count, for then an acquittal upon one charge is a verdict of not guilty of both.⁹ Where two were charged with stealing in a dwelling house, and one was capitally convicted of stealing to the amount of 6*l.*, and the other was convicted of stealing to the amount of 10*s.*, the judges held that judgment could not be given against both the prisoners, but that a pardon being granted to the latter, or a nol. pros. entered as to him, judgment might go against the other.¹⁰ In the last case the judgments were quite distinct, but where three persons were indicted for burglary, one of whom pleaded guilty, and the two others were convicted of stealing in a dwelling house, seven judges¹¹ held that judgment might be entered against all, i. e. against the man who had pleaded guilty, for the burglary, and against the two, for the capital larceny. Hullock, B., however, agreed that if a nol. pros. were entered as to the person convicted of burglary, judgment might then go against all three for stealing in a dwelling house.¹² However, where the evidence against two was that they had broken and entered, and, against the third, that he had stolen a sack of flour, Park, J., said that the two first could not be convicted of burglary, and the other of larceny, and it was recommended that all three should be convicted of stealing the flour, especially as the latter was an afterthought on the part ¹ R. v. Cole, 3 Camp. 371, which is the only instance where a person may be convicted of misdemeanor upon a charge of felony. R. v. Burrow, 1 Lew. C. C. 134. York Summer Assizes, 1823, per Holroyd, J. See also R. v. Maynard, Russ. & Ry. 240.

² R. v. Withal and another, 1 Leach, 88.

³ R. v. Hungerford, 1 East, P. C. 518. And see R. v. Comer, Leach, 36; East, P. C. 516.

⁴ R. v. Etherington, 1 Leach, 671.

⁵ R. v. Beany, Russ. & Ry. 416.

⁶ R. v. Hunt, 2 Camp. 583.

⁷ R. v. Williams, Id. 646.

⁸ R. v. Hemings, 2 Show. 93.

⁹ R. v. Heaps, 2 Salk. 593.

¹⁰ R. v. Hempstead and another, Russ. & Ry. 344.

¹¹ Hullock, B., and Burrough, J., contra.

¹² R. v. Butterworth and others, Russ. & Ry. 520, overruling R. v. Turner, 1 Sid. 171; East, P. C. 519.

of the two.¹ If two be indicted jointly for making a corrupt contract, one alone may be convicted.² And where two were charged with an obstruction, and, upon the trial, no joint obstruction appeared, the judge directed the prosecutor to elect against whom he would proceed, and ordered the other to be acquitted.³ The word "misdemeanor" has been held to be nomen collectionem, and, therefore, where the jury found the defendant guilty of the misdemeanor and offence charged upon him in an indictment for assaulting with intent to commit a rape, and for a common assault, the judgment was affirmed by the Court of Queen's Bench upon a writ of error from the sessions.⁴ If the chairman at sessions upon a special finding, direct a verdict of guilty to be entered, when, in point of law, the finding amounted to an acquittal, the course for the prisoner is to apply for a pardon. The Court of King's Bench will not grant a mandamus to the justices to amend the verdict according to the finding.⁵ Nor will they grant that writ to alter the minutes of a verdict. As in a case of poisoning horses, "guilty of mischance" was the first verdict, and the second, "guilty" generally, with a recommendation to mercy on the ground of there being no malicious motive. The mandamus was refused.⁶ But they will grant a mandamus to make up a record in order to enable a party to plead auterfois convict.⁷

Certain defendants being charged with a conspiracy, three of them were found guilty generally, four were convicted of conspiring to effect some of the objects charged in the indictment, and were acquitted as to the rest. This was a finding that the three were guilty of conspiring generally with the others to effect all the objects of the conspiracy. And it appeared by the same finding that four of them were only partially guilty. The verdict was therefore wrong, bad in law, and repugnant.⁸ So, again, a count charged several defendants with conspiring to do several illegal acts. The jury found one of them guilty of conspiring with some of the defendants to do one illegal act, and with other defendants to do another illegal act. This finding was held bad, because here was a verdict averring two conspiracies, whereas only one was charged in the count. Therefore the jury cannot⁹ find a defendant guilty of more than one charge where there is but a single charge in the indictment.¹⁰ A good finding on a bad count and a bad finding on a good count, are equally nullities.¹¹ If a husband and wife be found guilty of receiving, and the wife's conviction be wrong, the judges will sever the verdict.¹² A verdict

¹ 1 Lew. C. C. 36, Anon.

² R. v. Taggart, 1 C. & P. 201.

³ R. v. Lyon and another, Id. 528.

⁴ R. v. Powell, 2 B. & Adol. 75.

⁵ R. v. Suffolk, JJ. 5 Nev. & M. 139.

⁶ R. v. Hewes, 3 Adol. & El. 725.

⁷ In re Bowman, 5 B. & Adol. 1113.

⁸ O'Connell v. Reg. (in error),

11 Cl. & Fin. 155.

⁹ S. C.

¹⁰ S. C.

¹¹ S. C., and see under the head of "Judgment," post.

¹² R. v. Mathews and ux., Den. 596.

of guilty in larceny, with a recommendation to mercy on the ground that the prisoner did not intend ultimately to defraud, is not inconsistent.¹

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9, if upon the trial of any person charged with any felony or misdemeanor it shall appear to the jury that the defendant did not complete the offence charged, but that he was guilty only of an attempt to commit the same, such person shall not therefore be acquitted, but the verdict may be that the defendant is not guilty of the felony or misdemeanor charged, but is guilty of the attempt; and such person shall be liable to be punished as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for attempting to commit the particular felony or misdemeanor charged in the said indictment; and no person so tried as herein lastly mentioned shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for an attempt to commit the felony or misdemeanor for which he was so tried.

By sect. 12, if upon the trial of any person for any misdemeanor it shall appear that the facts given in evidence amount in law to a felony, such person shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted of such misdemeanor; and no person tried for such misdemeanor shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for felony on the same facts, unless the court before which trial may be had shall think fit to discharge the jury from giving any verdict, and to direct such person to be indicted for felony, in which case such person may be dealt with in all respects as if he had not been put upon his trial for such misdemeanor. This clause will not apply in the case of a charge of misdemeanor for carnally knowing a girl between ten and twelve, whereas it turned out that the girl was under ten. The prisoner was acquitted, the case not being within the Act.²

The 1st count was for inflicting grievous bodily harm, the 2nd for assaulting and unlawfully wounding. Verdict, guilty of a common assault. The conviction on the 2nd count was good.³ Again, the 1st count was for inflicting grievous bodily harm, the 2nd for a common assault. Verdict, guilty of an aggravated assault without premeditation, and done under the influence of passion. The judge was held right in directing a verdict on the 1st count.⁴

¹ R. v. Trebilcock, 27 L. J. M. C. 103; Dears. & B. 453.

³ R. v. Oliver, 30 L. J. M. C. 12; Bell, 287.

² R. v. Shott, 3 Car. & K. 206. But the prisoner might, of course, be indicted for felony.

⁴ R. v. Sparrow, 30 L. J. M. C. 43; Bell, 298.

CHAPTER XIX.

OF REWARDS AND OTHER MATTERS.

Rewards.] The trial being ended, and the verdict given, it is usual to make application for the different rewards allowed by parliament where such are payable, as the sum of 20*l.* formerly given for apprehending persons who have returned from transportation.¹

By 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 28, where any person shall appear to any court of oyer and terminer, gaol delivery, or superior court of county palatine, to have been active in or towards the apprehension of any persons charged with murder, or with feloniously and maliciously shooting at or attempting to discharge any kind of loaded fire-arms at any other person, or with stabbing, cutting, wounding, or poisoning, or with administering anything to procure the miscarriage of any woman, or with rape, or with burglary, or felonious housebreaking, or with robbery, or with arson, or with horse-stealing, bullock-stealing, or sheep-stealing, or with being accessory before the fact to any of such offences, or with receiving any stolen property, knowing the same to have been stolen, every such court is hereby authorized and empowered to order the sheriff of the county in which the offence shall have been committed to pay to the person who shall appear to the court to have been active in or towards the apprehension of any person so charged such sum as to the court shall seem sufficient to compensate such person for his expenses, exertions, and loss of time in or towards such apprehension; and the like power is given to the sessions in the case of receivers. Provided that nothing herein contained shall prevent any of the said courts from also allowing to any such persons, if prosecutors or witnesses, such costs, expenses, and compensation as courts are by this Act empowered to allow to prosecutors and witnesses respectively. Detaining the burglar till help came was held to be within this clause.²

By sect. 29, every order for payment in respect of such apprehension shall be forthwith made out and delivered by the proper officer of the court unto such person, upon being paid for the same the sum of 5*s.* and no more; and the sheriff of the county for the time being is hereby authorized and required, upon sight of the order, forthwith to pay to such person, or to any one duly authorized on his behalf, the money in such order mentioned; and the sheriff may apply for repayment of the same to the treasury, who, upon inspecting such order, together with the acquittance of the person entitled to receive the money thereon, shall forthwith order repayment to the sheriff of the money so by him paid, without fee.

¹ 16 Geo. 2, c. 15; 8 Geo. 3, P. 166. R. v. Blake, Id. So in c. 15, both repealed by Geo. 4, c. 84, robbery, where great courage had s. 29. been displayed. R. v. Womersly, 2 Lew. C. C. 162.

² R. v. Dunning and another, 5 Cox, 142. R. v. Barnes, 7 C. &

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 8, when any person appears to any court of sessions of the peace to have been active in or towards the apprehension of any party charged with any offence which they have power to try, they shall have power to order compensation to be paid to such person in the same manner as other courts, but the compensation shall not exceed 5*l.*, and every order for payment shall be made out gratis, and delivered by the proper officer of the court unto such person.

And by 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 30, if any man shall happen to be killed in endeavouring to apprehend any person who shall be charged with any offence mentioned in that Act, the court before whom such person shall be tried may order the sheriff of the county to pay to the widow of the man so killed, in case he shall have been married, or to his child or children in case his wife shall be dead, or to his father or mother in case he shall have left neither wife nor child, such sum of money as to the court shall seem meet; and the order for payment of such money shall be made out and delivered by the proper officer of the court unto the party entitled to receive the same, or unto some one on his behalf to be named in such order by the direction of the court; and every such order shall be paid by and repaid to the sheriff in the manner directed by this Act.

In construing the old Act burglary has been held not to include sacrilege.¹ Stealing from the person was not included.² Lord Campbell upon one occasion required an affidavit as to the amount actually expended, and awarded it, but not as a recompense.³ Again, the expenses of apprehending a person in Scotland,⁴ or America,⁵ are not within the statute. Under 5 Geo. 4, c. 84, the court has power to order the reward to the prosecutor in a case of returning from transportation.⁶ And under the word "bullock," in an indictment, a reward was ordered, although the ¹ R. v. Robinson, 1 Lew. C. C. 129. Bolland, B., ruled the same upon the authority of the above case. Id. See R. v. Austen, 1 Dowl. & Ry. N. P. C. 24, under the old statute, 58 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 4, where the court refused compensation to a party who had apprehended horse-stealers, and had expended 17*l.* in so doing, but horse-stealing is now included.

² R. v. Thompson and others, 1 Cox, 43. R. v. Durkin was cited, (2 Lew. C. C. 163,) where Patteson, J., allowed these expenses upon an indictment for an attempt at child murder, but Maule, J., doubted of that case.

³ R. v. Haines [Horse-stealing,] 5 Cox, 114.

⁴ R. v. Seaton, 6 Cox, 78, (n.)

⁵ R. v. Barrett, Id. 78. The course is to apply to the secretary of state. Nor can the magistrate certify for such expenses.

⁶ R. v. Emmons, 2 Moo. & Rob. 279. See R. v. Ambury, 6 Cox, 79.

only words applicable in 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 25, were "cow and heifer."¹

Restitution of property.] Another application, which is occasionally made, seeks for the restitution of property. As to this the statute 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 100,² provides a remedy, which will be found under the head of Larceny.

Certificate—special jury.] The practice of asking for a certificate that the case was fit to be tried by a special jury does not apply to criminal cases.

We are now to consider how the verdict may be impeached.

¹ R. v. Gillbrass, 7 C. & P. 444. 431. The cases will be found in

² See R. v. Stanton, 7 C. & P. Part iii. "Of Larceny."

CHAPTER XX.

OF PROCEEDINGS TO STAY JUDGMENT.

Arrest of judgment.] The verdict may be impeached by a motion to arrest the judgment for defects upon the face of the record. This is matter of law, and is determined by the judge or judges, according to the particular case. Where the conviction takes place in the King's Bench, four days are allowed for this purpose, and the rule for a new trial is the same,¹ supposing that so many days of the term should remain, if not, then the longest time that can be had in the term.² Although, if the court should perceive that injustice has been done by the verdict, they will grant a new trial at any time before judgment.³ The judge is bound, ex officio, to take notice of any of these errors, and any one as amicus curiæ may point them out, provided the defendant be present.⁴ So that if a defendant should waive his objection to the judgment, the court will still give him the benefit of any errors on the record.⁵ And the right extends to any part of the record, not merely to errors upon the face of the indictment.⁶ Indeed, the court will allow a motion to arrest the judgment after a rule for entering a verdict for the crown has been argued and made absolute.⁷ When the defendant is convicted of felony he usually moves instanter to arrest the judgment, or delays till the next day with the sanction of the court. When the defendant is found guilty at the assizes in misdemeanor, he should give notice to the judge of his intention to object to the indictment or to the judge's direction, and then the judge will respite the judgment.⁸ It was so decided on 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 9, and if the indictment be defective, the court can amend the judgment by setting it aside, even after sentence has been pronounced at the assizes.⁹ But since the establishment of the court of criminal appeal, motions in arrest of judgment are much out of use.

A pardon may be pleaded in arrest of judgment.

¹ R. v. Dr. Newman, 22 L. J. Q. B. 156; 1 El. & Bl. 268; Dears. 85, 98. But as no general rule had been laid down, the court would not shut out Dr. Newman.

² 2 Curw. Hawk. 624.

³ R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436. R. v. Morris, 2 Burr. 1189.

⁴ R. v. Buckeridge, 2 Show. 297.

⁵ 1 East, 146.

⁶ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 662.

⁷ R. v. Barton (Inhabitants), 4 Jur. 431.

⁸ R. v. Nott, 7 Jur. 621; Dav. & M. 1.

⁹ R. v. Nott, 4 Q. B. 768.

By 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 21, no judgment after verdict shall be stayed or reversed for want of a similiter, nor by reason that the jury process has been awarded to the wrong officer upon an insufficient suggestion, nor for any misnomer or misdescription regarding such process, or of any of the jurors, nor because any person has served on the jury who has not been returned as a juror.

New trial.] Secondly, there may be a motion for a new trial, but this is not grantable in treason or felony, unless where a case is moved into the Court of Queen's Bench by certiorari.¹ In misdemeanor it is not of unusual occurrence. As, for surprise.² But not if the trial merely comes on sooner than was expected, after notice.³ When the defendant is so surprised that he cannot defend himself, the court will grant a new trial.⁴ The defendant must either be in custody, or be present in court.⁵ Various causes will of course operate to produce a new trial. Thus, if the prosecutor be fixed with having circulated papers relative to the case amongst the jury, the verdict will probably be set aside.⁶ So where the jury committed a contempt by taking papers with them without leave of the court, and found a verdict for the party who gave them the papers, the court deemed it a high contempt.⁷ So in any case where the jury have been tampered with.⁸ So where the judge reported that he was dissatisfied with the verdict, and the jury offered affidavits that the verdict was contrary to their meaning, a new trial was allowed.⁹ No affidavits can be admitted upon a motion of this nature to contradict the report of the judge.¹⁰ It is no ground for a new trial that two out of twelve special jurymen had not been summoned on the defendant's part. Although the defendant did not know the fact until after the trial.¹¹ Nor that one of the jury was a grand juror in the case, if when he proposed to leave the box, the defendant objected.¹² There will be a new trial if the defendant has failed to give notice of trial under 5 & 6 Wm. & M. c. 11.¹³

¹ R. v. Scaife and others, Den. & P. 281; 20 L. J. M. C. 229; 17 Q. B. 238.

² R. v. Whitehouse, Dears. 1. The costs were ordered to abide the event of the new trial. The case had been removed by certiorari.

³ R. v. Richardson, 4 Jur. 104. A cause expected to last the whole day was put off, and this, which was an indictment for libel, was next in order to be tried.

⁴ R. v. Pursell, 8 Mod. 289, in perjury. R. v. Leper, Andr. 209, cited. See, however, R. v. Mayors, Andr. 209.

⁵ R. v. Caudwell, Den. & P. 372; 21 L. J. M. C. 48.

⁶ R. v. Burdett, 1 Ld. Raym.

⁷ S. C.

⁸ R. v. Davis, 12 Mod. 9. A case of fraud. R. v. Melling, Id. 128.

⁹ R. v. Simmons, 1 Wils. 329; Say. Rep. 34.

¹⁰ R. v. Grant, 5 B. & Adol. 1082, 1086.

¹¹ R. v. Hunt, 4 B. & Ald. 430.

¹² R. v. Sullivan and others, 8 Ad. & El. 831.

¹³ R. v. Furser, Say. Rep. 90.

If the jury eat and drink at their own cost, the verdict is not avoided although they may be fined.¹ If evidence be rejected which was inadmissible for a particular purpose according to the view taken at the trial, but which would have been admitted had the case been presented in another point of view for another purpose, the court will not look upon the matter as if evidence had been improperly refused, and will not, therefore, upon that ground grant a new trial.² It is said, that after a trial at bar, the verdict will not be set aside because the jury have merely gone against evidence.³ Affidavits of new facts are not in general admissible upon a motion for a new trial. But affidavits of the death of a person may be received to account for his not having been examined as a witness at the trial.⁴ These cases apply to convictions. But new trials have been applied for in cases of acquittal, although the applications have been coldly received, and, as a general principle, have been rejected. Even although the acquittal has proceeded from the misdirection of the judge, the case is the same.⁵ Or where the verdict in a case of obstructing the highway was against the weight of evidence.⁶ Nevertheless, there have been circumstances where a judgment for the defendants in consequence of a verdict in their favour has been suspended. But the exception will be found to refer to public rights. As where the defendants were acquitted upon an indictment for not repairing a road, yet it was understood that a new indictment would be forthwith preferred. Here the court said that if judgment were entered, the prosecutors would go to the second trial with a millstone about their necks, the weight of which it would be impossible to resist, and although in fact the court admitted they were doing that indirectly which if done directly would be contrary to the established practice, they, notwithstanding, allowed a suspension of the judgment under the peculiar circumstances.⁷

However, the court refused the rule in a subsequent case where R. v. Wandsworth was referred to.⁸ And in one still more re-

¹ R. v. Burdett, 12 Mod. 111. R. v. Hardey, 19 L. J. Q. B. 196; 1 Stark. 517, n. Secus if the refreshment be at the cost of either of the parties.

² R. v. Grant, 5 B. & Adol. 1082.

³ R. v. Melling, 12 Mod. 128.

⁴ R. v. Bowdich, 2 Ch. Rep. 278. See also Lofft. 391, 425, 451. R. v. Davis, 1 Str. 104, cited, and other cases there.

⁵ R. v. Cohen and another, 1 Stark. 516. R. v. Silvertown Parish, 2 Wils. 298. R. v. Praed or Edwards, 4 Burr. 2259. R. v. Mann, 4 M. & S. 336. R. v. Russell, 23 L. J. M. C. 173; 3 El. & Bl. 942. See also R. v. Reason, 6 T. R. 375.

⁶ R. v. Johnson, 29 L. J. M. C. 133. "There was a case tried at Warwick (The Queen v. Pegg) not reported, in which it was said there might be a new trial in such a case." By Field arg^o. Id. 134.

⁷ R. v. Wandsworth (Inhabitants), 1 B. & Ald. 63. R. v. Middlesex (Inhabitants), S. P. Id. 64. And see R. v. Oxfordshire (Inhabitants), 16 East, 223. R. v. Reynell, Clerk, 6 East, 315. R. v. Sutton, 2 Nev. & M. 57. R. v. Challicombe, 6 Jur. 481.

⁸ R. v. Chigwell, 1 B. & Ald. 67.

cent, it would appear, that unless, perhaps in the event of a verdict against the weight of evidence, the court will not accede to a new trial. An indictment was preferred for obstructing the Menai Straits. The defendant was acquitted. It was urged that the judge had misdirected the jury, but the court would not allow the case to be tried again. But Coleridge, J., thought that as this proceeding was in the nature of a civil right, a misdirection of the judge ought to warrant a new trial.¹ Therefore R. v. Wandsworth must be looked upon as of doubtful authority.

A new trial may be had in favour of some defendants who may appear to have been improperly convicted, although refused with reference to others who may have been acquitted.² But if one defendant obtains a new trial upon a verdict of guilty of conspiracy, the other defendants, although rightly convicted, are entitled to a new trial also.³

A new trial is sometimes granted upon payment of costs, and the principle is the same in criminal as in civil cases.⁴ In penal actions it is not usual, under any circumstances, to grant a new trial.⁵ And it may be added, that inferior jurisdictions cannot grant a new trial except for irregularity.⁶

The next point is, that all the defendants must be present when the rule for a new trial is moved for. The reason given for this is, that the most criminal person might keep out of the way and take the opinion of the court, by putting forward one of the other convicted defendants.⁷ The rule is the same where a conviction is removed by certiorari, and the defendants are in custody.⁸ In R. v. Askew, Le Blanc, J., observed, after the above reason had been again given by Lord Ellenborough, that upon reading the report, if the court saw any reason to think that justice had not been obtained, it was open to them to grant a new trial, or to interfere in any other way for the furtherance of justice.⁹

The consent of counsel cannot dispense with this rule.¹⁰ The exceptions to the rule are not many. Circumstances of extreme poverty may induce the court to mitigate it.¹¹ And errors are not within the rule. They may be assigned by attorney with leave of the court.¹² And in order to preserve the rule, there must be a conviction. When a case was merely set down for argument,

¹ R. v. Russell, 23 L. J. M. C. 173.

² R. v. Mawbey and others, 6 T. R. 619.

³ R. v. Gompertz, 9 Q. B. 824; 16 L. J. Q. B. 121.

⁴ R. v. Ford, 1 Nev. & M. 776.

⁵ Jervois, q. t. v. Hall, 1 Wils. 17. Fonereau v. —, 3 Wils. 59.

⁶ R. v. Buckeridge, 2 Show. 297; Skin, 159.

⁷ R. v. Teal and others, 11 East,

307. R. v. Askew and others, 3 M. & S. 9. R. v. Lord Cochrane and others, Id. 10 (n.) R. v. Hol- lingberry and others, 4 B. & C. 329. See also R. v. Gibson, 7 Mod. 205; 2 Str. 968.

⁸ R. v. Spragg and another, 2 Burr. 930.

⁹ 3 M. & S. 10.

¹⁰ R. v. Fielder, 2 Dowl. & Ry. 46.

¹¹ R. v. Boltz, 6 Dowl. & Ry. 65.

¹² R. v. Stapleton, 1 Str. 443.

the indictment being removed into the King's Bench, the court held that the defendant need not appear, the proceeding being in the nature of a special verdict.¹

With reference to the time for moving for a new trial, there being no such motion in cases of felony, it has been settled that the application must be made within the four first days of the term, though the argument may be postponed till the defendant is brought up for judgment.²

Case reserved.] The third course which is pursued in order to correct the errors of a verdict, and the most common in cases of felony, is for the judge at the assizes or Central Criminal Court, or at the sessions of the peace, to reserve such points as he may see fit to be considered. And in the meantime to respite, either the judgment, where he is himself doubtful, or the sentence, either when he is pressed by the counsel for the prisoner, or generally, in favour of life or liberty, when a reasonable ground for consideration presents itself to his mind. Before the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, these questions could not be reserved at the sessions,³ and, before that statute, the result of the deliberations upon the case reserved were rarely delivered in public, but it was most common for the sentence to be carried into execution without comment, or for a pardon, conditional or absolute, to be recommended. When a majority of the judges decided in favour of the prisoner, a pardon was always recommended. On the other hand, when the conviction was affirmed, the dissenting judges were always bound by the opinion of the majority,⁴ and so it is still under this Act. The judges act upon a rule concerning evidence which should be mentioned here. Should the question turn upon the admissibility of certain testimony given at the trial, the judges will decide whether there was sufficient evidence to convict the prisoner without the objectionable proof, supposing they should be in favour of the objection. And if the evidence should be deemed ample without such proof, the conviction will be sustained. This point has been adjudged and adhered to in many

¹ R. v. Nicolls, 2 Str. 1227.

² R. v. Hetherington, 5 Jur. 529. Note.—Where the prosecutor, instead of taking down the old record again after a new trial obtained by the defendant in a case of perjury, prepared a new indictment, the court refused to stay proceedings till the costs of the former indictment were satisfied. R. v. Tremearne, 5 B. & C. 761. And, in misdemeanors, if the defendant should plead guilty upon the understanding that he is not to be brought up for judgment, no costs can be taxed for the prosecution in the absence of an arrangement made at the time of pleading. R. v. Rawson and others, 2 B. & C. 598. The court cannot compel a defendant to go before the master, nor award costs. R. v. Richardson, 6 Dowl. & Ry. 141.

³ R. v. Salop, JJ., 13 East, 95. Where such an attempt was made, but repelled firmly by Lord Ellenborough, Id. 97, 98.

⁴ See 2 Moo. C. C. 171, n., by Tindal, C. J., Parke, B., Williams, J.

cases.¹ It is, however, to be understood that the judges sit upon these occasions for the purpose of affording mutual assistance to each other, and certainly not as a court of appeal. They cannot, therefore, direct a venire de novo. Two indictments were preferred against certain persons for rapes. They were acquitted on the first indictment, and they pleaded aut. acq. to the second. A jury being impannelled, Bolland, B., held that it lay upon them to begin, and they put in the commitment and acquittal, which composed their evidence. The jury found in their favour, although the learned judge said he did not conceive the identity of the rape to have been proved. And the opinion of the judges was requested, a distinction being suggested between a collateral issue and an acquittal upon the merits. But the judges were unanimous that nothing could be done except to discharge the prisoners.² If after argument upon the case reserved it should appear that the prisoner has been guilty of another crime (a less offence, for instance) the court will remand him.³

Objections apparent on the face of the indictment are not usually allowed to be argued. The prisoner must have recourse to his writ of error in respect of these.⁴ In misdemeanor, if the objection be on the face of the indictment, the judges will leave the prisoner to his writ of error. The judges pursued this course in a case of conspiracy, charging the defendants with procuring the personation of voters upon the election of councillor for a borough.⁵

An important alteration upon this subject was made by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78.

By sect. 1, when any person shall have been convicted of any treason, felony, or misdemeanor before any court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, or court of quarter sessions, the judge or commissioner or justices of the peace before whom the case shall have been tried may reserve any question of law which shall have arisen on the trial for the consideration of the justices of either bench and barons of the Exchequer, and thereupon shall have authority to respite execution of the judgment on such conviction, or postpone the judgment until such question shall have been decided; and in either case the court, in its discretion, shall commit the person convicted to prison, or shall take a recognizance of bail, with one or two sufficient sureties, and in such sum as the court shall think fit, conditioned to appear at such time or times as the court shall direct, and receive judgment, and to render himself in execution, as the case may be.⁶

¹ R. v. Tinkler, Russ. & Ry. 133, n.; East, P. C. 354. R. v. Treble, Russ. & Ry. 164. R. v. Oldroyd, Id. 88. R. v. Ball, Id. 132; 1 Camp. 324.

² R. v. Lea and others, 2 Moo. C. C. 9. See Ld. Raym. 1584.

³ R. v. Francis and others, Ca. Temp. Hardw. 113.

⁴ R. v. Overton, Car. & M. 655.

⁵ R. v. Haslam and others, Den. C. C. 73.

⁶ This statute extends to special commissions. R. v. Bernard, 1 Fost. & F. 240.

By sect. 2, the judge or commissioner or court of quarter sessions shall thereupon state, in a case signed in the manner now usual, any question of law which shall have been so reserved, with the special circumstances, and such case shall be transmitted to the said justices and barons, who may reverse, affirm, or amend the judgment, or avoid such judgment, and order an entry to be made on the record, that the party convicted ought not to have been convicted, or arrest the judgment, or order judgment to be given thereon at some other session of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, or other sessions of the peace, if no judgment shall have been before that time given, or make such other order as justice may require; and such judgment and order, if any, shall be certified under the hand of the presiding chief justice or chief baron to the clerk of assize or his deputy, or to the clerk of the peace or his deputy, who shall enter the same on the original record; and a certificate of such entry, under the hand of the clerk of assize or his deputy, or the clerk of the peace or his deputy, as the case may be, in the form, as near as may be, or to the effect mentioned in the schedule to the Act,¹ with the necessary alterations to adapt it to the circumstances of the case, shall be delivered or transmitted by him to the sheriff or gaoler in whose custody the person convicted shall be; and the said certificate shall be a sufficient warrant to such sheriff or gaoler, and all other persons, for the execution of the judgment, as the same shall be so certified to have been affirmed or amended, and execution shall be thereupon

¹ The certificate mentioned in the last preceding section shall be in the following form, or to the same effect:—

Whereas at the session of the peace for the county of —, held on —, before — and others their fellows, [or at the session of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery held for the county of —, on —, before, among others, Sir A. B. Knight, one of the justices of the court of —, and —, here name the quorum commissioners, justices of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery,] A. B., late of —, labourer, having been found guilty of felony, and judgment thereupon given, that [state the substance], the court before whom he was tried reserved a certain question of law for the consideration of the justices of either bench and the barons of the Exchequer, and execution was thereupon respited in the meantime:

This is to certify, that the said justices and barons having met in the Exchequer Chamber at Westminster or Dublin, (as the case may be,) on the — day of —, it was considered by the said justices and barons there that the judgment aforesaid should be annulled, and an entry made on the record that the said A. B. ought not, in the judgment of the said justices and barons, to have been convicted of the felony aforesaid; and you are therefore hereby required forthwith to discharge the said A. B. from your custody.

(Signed) E. F.

Clerk of the peace for the county of —,
[or clerk of assize for —,
as the case may be].

To the gaoler of — and the sheriff of —, and others whom it may concern.

executed on such judgment, and for the discharge of the person convicted from further imprisonment, if the judgment shall be reversed, avoided, or arrested, and in that case such sheriff or gaoler shall forthwith discharge him, and also the next court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, or sessions of the peace, shall vacate the recognizance of bail, if any; and if the court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, or court of quarter sessions, shall be directed to give judgment, the said court shall proceed to give judgment at the next session.

By sect. 3, the jurisdiction and authorities by this Act given to the said justices of either bench and barons of the Exchequer shall and may be exercised by the said justices and barons, or five of them at the least, of whom the lord chief justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, the lord chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and the lord chief baron of the Court of Exchequer, or one of such chiefs at least, shall be part, being met in the Exchequer Chamber or other convenient place; and the judgment or judgments of the said justices and barons shall be delivered in open court, after hearing counsel or the parties, in case the prosecutor or the person convicted shall think it fit that the case shall be argued, in like manner as the judgments of the superior courts of common law at Westminster are now delivered.

But by sect. 4, the said justices and barons, when a case has been reserved for their opinion, shall have power, if they think fit, to cause the case or certificate to be sent back for amendment, and thereupon the same shall be amended accordingly, and judgment shall be delivered after it shall have been amended.

The judges expect that the case shall be rightly stated in the first instance, and they have refused to send a case of larceny back to be restated, in order that another ground for supporting the conviction might be presented.¹ And the case is not to be a lengthy narrative of the facts.² In the event of an omission occurring to counsel, the course is to communicate with the judge who reserved the case, and to suggest any amendment to him. For the court will not attend to a point not reserved, although fairly deducible from the case itself, nor will they go into the consideration of it, as evidence given at the trial, unless it be stated in the case.³ Although they will look at a copy of the indictment, notwithstanding that it does not appear in the case.⁴ And the court will not send back for amendment upon the mere application of counsel;⁵ nor upon an objection not incident to the merits.⁶ Under this statute it is clear that a recorder may reserve questions of law. The court required no argument

¹ R. v. Holloway, Den. 370; 18 L. J. M. C. 60.

² R. v. Stear, 13 Jur. 41.

³ R. v. Smith, 1 Temp. & M. 214.

⁴ R. v. Williams, Den. & P. 63; 20 L. J. M. C. 106.

⁵ R. v. Hilton and another, Bell, C. C. 20; 28 L. J. M. C. 28.

⁶ R. v. Brummitt, Leigh & Cave, 9.

on the point.¹ The jurisdiction is as plain as possible. A recorder is a justice of peace virtute officii.²

If a judge should die after he has reserved a case, the other judge of assize may sign and state the case, for the prisoner is in law tried before both judges.³

The judges have held that they are not competent under the Act to interfere with a judgment given for the crown upon demurrer. The remedy is by writ of error. Nor will they entertain a discussion of this nature at the instance of the prisoner, for, were that to be so, they might be called on by the attorney-general at a future day to decide such a question against the wish of the prisoner. The demurrer was then argued before three judges and overruled, and the prisoner was sentenced to transportation.⁴ At first, indeed, Parke, B., doubted whether the court could even take cognizance of defects upon the face of the record, but this doubt was speedily resolved in the affirmative.⁵ But a motion in arrest of judgment is a question arising at the trial within the Act, and therefore it is no objection that such matters appear on the record, and are moved in arrest of judgment.⁶ The court has jurisdiction after conviction over such matters only as take place at the trial.⁷ Conviction means conviction on verdict and trial; trial by a jury.⁸ The judgment of the court, moreover, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, deprives the party of his writ of error.⁹ Upon an argument in this court the counsel for the defendant begins.¹⁰ The court has power under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 22, to allow the costs of the prosecution upon argument.¹¹ Although Lord Campbell refused to interfere upon a subsequent occasion.¹²

¹ R. v. Masters, Den. 332;
² Car. & K. 130.

² Den. 334.

³ R. v. Featherstone, 23 L. J. M. C. 17; Dears. 369.

⁴ R. v. Faderman and others, Den. 565, 569; 19 L. J. M. C. 147.
R. v. Duffy, 4 Cox, 24, (Ireland,) was said to be overruled; Den. 570, n.

⁵ R. v. Webb, Den. 338, 341;
18 L. J. M. C. 39.

⁶ R. v. Martin, 18 L. J. M. C. 137; 2 Car. & K. 950.

⁷ R. v. Faderman, ut supra.

⁸ Id. ut sembl.

⁹ Id. ut sembl.

¹⁰ R. v. Gate, (Fulford, Inhabitants), Dears. & B. 74, 94.

¹¹ R. v. Cluderay, 3 Car. & K. 205.

¹² R. v. Dolan, Dears. 436; 24 L. J. M. C. 61, n.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF ACQUITTAL.

Acquittal.] The consequence of an acquittal is, that the prisoner stands absolved, in law, from the charge imputed to him, in the words of the particular indictment under which he has been tried. And with reference to the plea of aut. acq. which is nearly connected with this subject, we may refer the reader to a former page¹ where that subject has been discussed. As to the time of an acquittal where there is no case against a defendant, it does not follow that he must be immediately acquitted. Very frequently the judge will require that the evidence for the other defendants should be first gone through. But Lord Tenterden was of opinion that this matter lay very much in the discretion of the judges, who would select the most convenient season, and his lordship said that he had himself ordered an acquittal immediately after the opening speech for the defendant.² So, on the other hand, the direction of an acquittal in the progress of a case so as to enable the counsel for the prosecution to call the person acquitted in support of the charge, lies entirely in the discretion of the judge.³ The next question is, whether the prisoner, upon his acquittal, is entitled to his immediate discharge in the absence of a detainer against him; but upon one occasion Hullock, B., in a case of horse-stealing, doubted whether he had the power to do this, and declined to grant the discharge until the grand jury had ceased from their labours.⁴ Several learned judges, however, (and indeed it is the usual practice) direct the liberation of the party immediately after a favourable verdict. Mr. Baron Hullock, in another case, refused to discharge the recognizances of the prosecutor until the grand jury were discharged. The prisoner had openly and with force seized three sheep, which he claimed as his own, and the prosecutor, who had become convinced of the innocence of the prisoner, moved that his own recognizance might be discharged, but without success.⁵ And if there be another charge against the prisoner, he will be of course detained after his acquittal upon the first charge. However, where a person charged with maliciously shooting was acquitted, the judge refused to allow the prisoner to be detained whilst articles of the peace were being preferred against him.⁶ Where a prisoner was undergoing punishment for stealing a pig, Cresswell, J., advised, that no evidence should be given against him for stealing another pig at the same time, and he was acquitted.¹ The bail are discharged upon an acquittal. In a case of perjury the clerks of the Crown Office opposed the discharge of the recognizances of bail until the acquittal should be entered of record, and at first the judges were disposed to respite the recognizance until the next term, but Foster, J., being urgent to the contrary, the recognizances were discharged.² And by Wright and Dennison, JJ.,³ if any one is aggrieved, let him apply to the court next term if he think fit.⁴ Where the jury pronounce a verdict of acquittal in a case where there are grounds for believing that the prisoner is insane, it is the duty of the judge to ask them whether they acquit for that reason.⁵ If two be charged with felony, and one appear to be guilty and the other innocent, both must be acquitted if the prosecutor is unable to identify the guilty person.⁶ So upon a special verdict, where it appeared that a murder had been committed by one of five persons, but the party could not be identified, the court said that all must be discharged.⁷ So where one parted company with his brethren, who committed a robbery, all having been in the original design, for, it may be, he might have repented.⁸

¹ *Ante.*² Moo. & Malk. 198, (n.)³ R. v. Hutchinson, 1 Lew. C. 295.
C. 74; Anon, Id. 20, by Holroyd, J.⁴ R. v. Owen, 9 C. & P. 83.⁵ R. v. Garbutt, 1 Lew. C. C.⁶ R. v. Holt, 7 C. & P. 518.

Copy of indictment.] Should there be no reasonable ground for the prosecution, the person acquitted will be entitled, by order of the court, to a copy of the indictment, without which he cannot recover damages.⁹ At one time a very learned judge held the reverse of this doctrine. In a case where it was evident that the prosecution was malicious, Willes, C. J., refused an application for a copy, saying that there was an undoubted right to such a document, and that the officer would be punishable for refusing to make it out,¹⁰ and this opinion was expressed, notwithstanding the existence of some orders to the contrary.¹¹ The rule, however, only applies to cases of felony, for, as to misdemeanors, the copy may be demanded of right,¹² and if there should be a pro-

¹ R. v. Brettell, 2 Russ. C. M. 127. Wood, B., allowed an indictment to be preferred against a person who had been acquitted of uttering a forged note, for uttering another at the same time, Id.

² R. v. Spenser, 1 Wils. 315.

³ Lee, C. J., absent.

⁴ S. C.

⁵ R. v. Burrow, 1 Lew. C. C. 238.

⁶ R. v. Richardson and another, Leach, 387.

⁷ Ipswich murder case, Id. 388. R. v. Rees and ux. 6 C. & P. 606. Note, that although the grand jury throw out a bill against a person, yet he may, if in custody, be placed at the bar in order to be identified as having been in the company of the prisoners. R. v. Deering and another, 5 C. & P. 165.

⁸ R. v. Hyde and others, 1 Hale, P. C. 537.

⁹ 2 Russ. C. M. 812; and see note (d) there.

¹⁰ R. v. Brangan, 1 Leach, 27.

¹¹ 16 Car. 2; Kel. 3; May Sess. 1739; Leach, 28, (n.)

¹² Evans v. Phillips, Sel. N. P. 1063. Morison v. Kelly, 1 Sir Wm. Bl. 385. As to convictions, R. v. Midlam, 3 Burr. 1720. See Cuddy v. Barlow, 1 Man. & Ry. 275.

bable cause for the prosecution, no damages can, of course, be recovered.¹

It is also observable that, notwithstanding some former opinions to the contrary, the original record, or a copy of it, however obtained from the officer, is evidence per se, and cannot be impugned, although there be neither an order of the court, nor a fiat of the attorney-general.² Even where the prisoner and another having been acquitted of a forgery, and the copy being granted to the other only, Lee, C. J., refused to reject the copy which the plaintiff offered in evidence, although unaccompanied, as far as he was concerned, by any order of the court.³ It has been said, however, that the defendant might have had an action against the officer who gave the copy without authority, and such an act, moreover, seems to be a contempt on the part of the officer, who would not have been compelled to produce the document without authority.⁴ So where the attorney-general had granted his fiat for a copy in a case of concealment of bankrupt's effects, the court refused to interfere, although it was stated that the fiat had been obtained under a misrepresentation.⁵ But where two prisoners, after an acquittal for burglary, prayed a copy of their indictment in order to assist them in their plea of aut. acq., the court would not accede to the application, but directed that the indictment should be slowly and distinctly read over to them as a matter of right.⁶ And where the acquittal arose from the incompetency of a witness, the claim was rejected.⁷ Where a party had been tried at a court of quarter sessions which had lapsed for want of adjournment, he was held entitled to a record of the proceedings, although his object was to plead aut. conv. by means of that record.⁸

Discharge by proclamation.] In the event of there being no charge made at the end of the assizes or sessions, a prisoner, unless specially ordered to be detained, will be discharged by proclamation.⁹ So under special commissions,¹⁰ and without any fee to the gaoler.¹¹

It often happens that prisoners are continued over to the sessions which succeed the assizes, and that the witnesses are, in that case, bound over accordingly. Upon one occasion, Wood, B., considering that he was bound under the commission of general gaol delivery to order the discharge of prisoners so circumstanced, did so in pursuance of his opinion. But the majority of the judges

¹ 1 Ld. R. 253; Tidd, 617.

² Leggatt v. Tollervey, 14 East, 302.

³ Jordan v. Lewis, Str. 1122; 14 East, 305, (n.)

⁴ 14 East, ut supra.

⁵ Browne v. Cumming, 10 B. & C. 70.

⁶ R. v. Vandercomb and another, 2 Leach, 711.

⁷ R. v. Quick, cited, Leach, 28, n.

⁸ R. v. Middlesex, JJ., 3 Nev. & M. 110.

⁹ Leach, 170.

¹⁰ Id. The reporter makes a query, but at the special commission in 1830 it was so done.

¹¹ See 55 Geo. 3, c. 50.

thought that it was not imperative upon a commissioner of gaol delivery to discharge all the prisoners not indicted, it being in his discretion to continue their commitments.¹ So where indictments found at quarter sessions were sent to the assizes, but not removed by certiorari, Wood, B., ordered the prisoner against whom they were found to be discharged, conceiving that there ought to have been a new indictment, and also thinking that the justices ought not to impose an additional burden upon the judges, and, moreover, never having tried such an indictment unless previously removed by certiorari. But the judges were of opinion that the prisoner should have been tried at the assizes upon the indictment found at sessions, and that the discharge by proclamation was consequently wrong.² However, the judge refused to try an indictment for perjury at common law found at the sessions, because the sessions have no jurisdiction over that offence.³ An indictment was found at the assizes in 1840 against the defendant for keeping a gambling booth. In 1844 he was taken on a judge's warrant, and gave bail to appear and try at the next assizes. He appeared, but the prosecutor could not be found, according to affidavit, so as to have served him with notice of trial. It was held in this case that as no notice of trial had been proved, the defendant could not be acquitted; but the defendant surrendered himself to the governor of the gaol immediately before the end of the assizes, and, upon this, the judge directed that the prosecutor and witnesses should be called three times. They did not answer, and the defendant was then discharged by proclamation, and the court would not call upon him to enter into any fresh recognizance.⁴

Again, where a prisoner was committed to the sessions, the assizes intervening, and no indictment was preferred at such assizes, the judge discharged the prisoner upon his own recognizance.⁵ But the rule affects the county gaol alone. The judge has no authority over the House of Correction.⁶ However, if the attorney-general interferes, the court of gaol delivery cannot discharge the prisoner,⁷ nor can that court discharge a prisoner who has received sentence elsewhere, although the conviction is evidently wrong, and though the convict is in a gaol within their jurisdiction. The application must be made to the secretary of state.⁸ But, although there may not be a discharge by proclamation, the Court of King's Bench will, in cases of great delay on the part of the crown, permit the defendant, even in treason and felony, to bring on the trial, or in a case like that of Mr. Platt, they will bail the defendant.⁹

¹ Case, Russ. & Ry. 173.

² R. v. Wetherall, Russ. & Ry. 381.

³ R. v. Haynes, Ry. & M. N. P. C. 298.

⁴ R. v. Hibburd, 1 Car. & K. 461; cor. Atcherley, Serjt.

⁵ R. v. Arlett, 2 Car. & K. 596.

⁶ S. C.

⁷ R. v. Platt, Leach, 157.

⁸ Ex parte Palmer, 6 C. & P. 122.

⁹ See 2 Salk. 652.

Conviction.] The consequences of a conviction are, that in felony the prisoner stands committed as of course. In misdemeanor a capias is awarded against the defendant, if absent, in order to insure his appearance to receive judgment (which, in case of default, may be prosecuted to outlawry); or, he may, if present, be committed instanter, unless the prosecutor will consent to his liberation upon his recognizance to appear at a future day for the purpose of receiving judgment.¹ Likewise, in treason and felony, the personal property of the convict becomes forthwith forfeited to the crown, although, before conviction, he may lawfully sell his goods for the support of himself and his family.² A pardon before conviction will stay the forfeiture.

¹ R. v. Waddington, 1 East, 159. ² See Steph. 317, 320.

CHAPTER XXII.

OF JUDGMENT.

Judgment.] The consequence of an unfavourable verdict not set aside,¹ nor vitiated by any adverse determination upon a case reserved, is, that judgment must be passed upon the prisoner. Formerly,² in the case of a peer or peeress, if the offence were not capital, the party was entitled to be discharged upon pleading privilege of peerage.³ But by 4 Vict. c. 22, every peer of the realm shall plead to an indictment for felony, and, upon conviction, shall be punished in the same manner as any other subject of the crown. The prisoner must be present, and judgment cannot pass in his absence, not even upon outlawry,⁴ unless indeed by consent,⁵ age, or infirmity;⁶ or absence in Ireland.⁷ But the dispensation will not extend to cases of aggravation,⁸ as aggravated assaults,⁹ nor to any case where corporal punishment is to be inflicted,¹⁰ nor to a conviction for a nuisance on a navigable river.¹¹ But where the rule is relaxed the court will set a fine in the absence of the defendant,¹² And sometimes, as we have said, the conviction is followed by the sentence upon a case reserved, so that, in the latter event, execution alone remains.

We shall state the judgment applicable to each offence as we proceed with the other portions of this work, but there are some statutable provisions relating to the present subject which may not be improperly placed here. The 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 7, ordains that there shall be no judgment of death in cases of felony, unless for some felony which was excluded from clergy before, or on, the first day of the session of parliament then being,¹³ or which shall be so made punishable afterwards. By sect. 8, crimes under the penalty of death shall be punished according to the particular statutes affecting each, and in the absence of any specific direction for felony, the punishment shall be transportation for seven years,¹⁴

¹ It needs scarcely be mentioned, that a criminal judgment cannot be set aside upon payment of costs, pleading the general issue, and giving short notice of trial, as in civil suits. R. v. Hunter, 1 Wils. 163.

² 1 Ed. 6, c. 12, s. 13, for the first offence.

³ R. v. Duchess of Kingston, Leach, 146.

⁴ R. v. Harrison and another, 12 Mod. 156. See also R. v. Harwood, 2 Str. 1088; 2 Hawk. c. 48, s. 17. R. v. Hann and another, 3 Burr. 1786; Lofft. 28, 400.

⁵ Lofft. 252.

⁶ R. v. Constable, 7 D. & Ry. 663.

⁷ Lofft. ut supra.

⁸ Lofft. ut supra.

⁹ Id. 42.

¹⁰ R. v. Templeman, 1 Salk. 55. R. v. Harrison and another, 1 Ld. Raym. 267.

¹¹ For you may proceed to outlawry. R. v. Chichester, 17 Q. B. 504, n.; Den. & P. 458.

¹² 2 Curw. Hawk. 634. But see post, R. v. Buckeridge, 2 Show. 297; Skin. 159.

¹³ Id est, 14 Nov. 1826.

¹⁴ Now penal servitude not exceeding 3 years: 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2.

imprisonment not exceeding two years, and one, two, or three public or private whippings in addition to the imprisonment. By sect. 9, hard labour and solitary confinement likewise, at the will of the court, are added to the list of punishments, the latter to be for any portion of the time of imprisonment, or for the whole, as may be thought fit: Provided by 1 Vict. c. 90, s. 5,¹ that such solitary imprisonment do not exceed one month at a time, or three months in one year. By 56 Geo. 3, c. 138, which abolished the pillory, except in certain cases, fine and imprisonment, or either, at the discretion of the court, are substituted. And by 1 Vict. c. 23, which entirely annulled the punishment of the pillory, it is expressly provided that no other punishment, except the pillory, shall be in any way changed, altered, or affected by the Act.

With regard to the judgment, by 1 Ed. 6, c. 7, s. 5, in all cases of treason or felony for which judgment of death may ensue, where the prisoner shall be reprieved without judgment at that time given against him, those persons who at any time thereafter shall by the Queen's letters patent be assigned justices to deliver the gaol where such person found guilty shall remain, shall have full power and authority to give judgment of death against such person so found guilty, and reprieved, as such justices before whom such person was found guilty might have done if their commission of gaol delivery had remained and continued in full force. And by 11 Hen. 6, c. 6, justices of the peace under a new commission are to have the same powers as those under the old.

By 4 Geo. 4, c. 48, s. 1, whenever any person shall be convicted of any felony punishable by death, except murder, and the court before which such offender shall be convicted shall be of opinion that under the particular circumstances of the case such offender is a fit and proper subject to be recommended for the royal mercy, the court, if it shall think fit so to do, may direct the proper officer then being present in court to require and ask, whereupon such officer shall require and ask, if such offender has or knows anything to say why judgment of death should not be recorded; and in case such offender shall not allege any matter to arrest or bar such judgment, the court may abstain from pronouncing judgment of death upon such offender, and may order the same to be entered of record, and thereupon judgment of death shall be recorded.

By sect. 2, the record shall have the same effect as if the judgment had been pronounced.

By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 10, wherever sentence shall be passed for felony on a person already imprisoned under sentence for another crime, the court may award imprisonment for the subsequent offence, to commence at the expiration of the imprisonment to which such person shall have been previously sentenced; and where such person shall be already under sentence, either of imprisonment or of transportation, the court, if empowered to pass sentence of transportation, may award such sentence for the subsequent offence, to commence at the expiration of the imprisonment or transportation to which such person shall have been previously sentenced, although the aggregate term of imprisonment or transportation, respectively, may in the whole exceed the term for which either of those punishments could be otherwise awarded.¹

¹ The only section of the Act unrepealed. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95, schedule.

By 3 Geo. 4, c. 114, whenever any person shall be convicted of any one of the offences following; that is to say, any attempt to commit a felony; any riot; keeping a common gaming-house, a common bawdy-house, or a common ill-governed and disorderly house; and by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 29, any cheat or fraud punishable at common law; any conspiracy to cheat or defraud, or to extort money or goods, or falsely to accuse of any crime, or to obstruct, prevent, pervert, or defeat the course of public justice; any escape or rescue from lawful custody on a criminal charge; any public and indecent exposure of the person; any public selling, or exposing for public sale or to public view, of any obscene book, print, picture, or other indecent exhibition; the court may sentence the offender to imprisonment in the common gaol or house of correction for any term now warranted by law, and also to be kept to hard labour during the whole or any part of such term of imprisonment.

Lastly:—By 11 Geo. 4 and 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 9, upon all trials for treason, felony, or misdemeanor, upon any record of the Court of Queen's Bench, judgment may be pronounced during the sittings or assizes by the judge before whom the verdict shall be taken, as well upon the person who shall have suffered judgment by default or confession, upon the same record, as upon those who shall be tried and convicted, whether such persons be present or not in court, excepting only where the prosecution shall be by information filed by leave of the Court of Queen's Bench, or such cases of informations filed by Her Majesty's attorney-general, wherein the attorney-general shall pray that the judgment may be postponed; and the judgment so pronounced shall be indorsed upon the record of nisi prius, and afterwards entered upon the record in court, and shall be of the same force and effect as a judgment of the court, unless the court shall, within six days after the commencement of the ensuing term, grant a rule to show cause why a new trial should not be had or the judgment amended; and it shall be lawful for the judge before whom the trial shall be had either to issue an immediate order or warrant for committing the defendant in execution, or to respite the execution of the judgment, upon such terms as he shall think fit, until the sixth day of the ensuing term, and in case imprisonment shall be part of the sentence, to order the period of imprisonment to commence on the day on which the party shall be actually taken to and confined in prison.²

Every judgment pronounced should be entered of record. A judgment of death is not bad because it does not say "you and each of you."³ When a man lies under sentence of death he ¹ The words "penal servitude" must now be substituted for transportation.

² See 14 Hen. 4, c. 1. R. v. Lloyd, 4 B. & Adol. 135.

³ R. v. Tucker, 4 Mod. 162.

cannot be brought up to receive sentence for an offence which is subject to that penalty, although he was tried upon the other charge subsequently, and did not plead his prior attainder.¹

A woman sometimes pleads pregnancy in stay of execution, upon which a jury of matrons is sworn. Should a jury of matrons desire to have the evidence of a surgeon before they deliver their verdict, the surgeon should be examined in open court.²

The following entry upon the record was held sufficient to show that the prisoners were asked why the court should not proceed to pass judgment against them: "And thereupon this, it is forthwith demanded if they the said C. & H. have or know anything to say wherefore, &c., who nothing further say unless as they before said."³ Where a statute makes an offence larceny, and says that an offender shall be liable to be transported for any term not exceeding fourteen years, in the discretion of the court, &c., it is not imperative on the judge to transport. The milder sentence of imprisonment may be awarded as in ordinary cases of larceny; and the same rule will apply to penal servitude. For two distinct offences the judge will order the party to be transported, or sent to penal servitude, for two periods of seven years, the second to commence at the expiration of the first.⁴ And so it is in misdeameanor. A sentence may be pronounced to commence from the end of the term from which the defendant has received judgment in respect of another offence.⁵ And if a count be held bad in error, a judgment of imprisonment under a second count is not vacated. If the first count be rejected, the whole term of imprisonment is not thereby gone. Where the third count therefore was held bad, the term of two months' imprisonment awarded under the fourth count was adjudged to commence at the expiration of the term of imprisonment under the second count.⁶

The prosecutor upon one occasion was allowed to apply to the court for leave to amend, and he was allowed several amendments of the record.⁷

By 1 Geo. 4, c. 57, females shall not be whipped. In lieu thereof, imprisonment with hard labour for a term not exceeding

¹ Russ. & Ry. 268. Case from the recorder in 1814.

² R. v. Wycherley, 8 C. & P. 262.

³ Campbell v. Reg. 2 New. S. C. 297. 11 Q. B. 799.

⁴ R. v. Hudson, Russ. & Ry. 285, under 39 Geo. 3, c. 85 (repealed).

⁵ R. v. Bath, Leach, 441. See 30 Geo. 3, c. 47; 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 2. As to transportation, 1 Will. 4, c. 39.

⁶ Wilkes v. Reg. (in error), 4 Bro. P. C. 367. R. v. Carter, 9 Jur. 178; four counts for extortion; four counts for uttering forged licences; sentence of the same term of imprisonment was passed in respect of each count.

⁷ Gregory v. The Queen, 15 Q. B. 957. It was ordered, that the defendant be placed in the first division of the fourth class. This was a misprision, not a judgment, the court having no power to make such an order. The order was amended. Id. The amendments were by entering a separate imprisonment on each count, and striking out the above-mentioned order. Id.

six months nor less than one is substituted, together with solitary confinement, provided it do not exceed seven days at any one time. Judgment in a case of high misdemeanor cannot be given as for trespass and misdemeanor.¹

Fines.] Excessive fines are not to be imposed, nor are cruel and unusual punishments to be inflicted.² But it is common to aggravate or mitigate the fine³ according to the willingness of the defendant to make compensation for the costs of the prosecution, and the Court of King's Bench, with the king's privy seal for that purpose, may give the prosecutor one-third of the fine assessed on a criminal charge for any offence whatsoever. And it seems that the acceptance of taxed costs will not hinder the prosecutor from moving to aggravate the fine.⁴

The king's coroner may receive fines imposed upon persons convicted by indictment or information by the Court of King's Bench.⁵ But it cannot be done without the king's privy seal.⁶ Again, by the privy seal, the Court of Exchequer may discharge a fine imposed by statute, as well as one set by the judgment of the court.⁷ However, although the Court of King's Bench at Westminster should pronounce judgment for a fine, the city of London is entitled to such fine in respect of any offence committed within that city.⁸

When the defendant has received judgment to pay a fine, a writ of levari facias may immediately issue.⁹ He becomes the king's prisoner, and cannot surrender in discharge of his bail in a civil action without leave of the court.¹⁰ A fine may be amended if awarded contrary to a statute, but the court will not set aside the verdict and judgment.¹¹ A joint fine against several defendants is bad.¹²

Where the offence has been laid to have been done "feloniously," the court will reject the word "feloniously," and give judgment for the misdemeanor, should the matter so turn out.¹³ But if there are statements in an indictment for felony which cannot be rejected, the court then cannot give their judgment for the misdemeanor.¹⁴

Affidavits.] Affidavits in aggravation, entitled "In the King's ¹ R. v. Westbeer, Leach, 12; Str. 1133. R. v. Leaser, Cro. Jac. 497, and other cases.

² 1 Wm. & M. sess. 2, c. 2, No. 11.

³ In such a case the defendant must be present. R. v. Buckeridge, 2 Show. 297; Skin. 159.

⁴ 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 53. See R. v. Summers, 1 Salk. 55.

⁵ R. v. Shackell, M'Cl. & Y. 514.

⁶ R. v. ———, 2 Anstr. 523.

⁷ R. v. Dibbens, Parker, 165.

⁸ R. v. Mayor of London, 1 Cr. M. & R. 1.

⁹ R. v. Woolf, 2 B. & Ald. 609; 1 Ch. Rep. 583.

¹⁰ R. v. Bethel, 5 Mod. 19.

¹¹ R. v. Stevens, 3 Smith, 366.

¹² 2 Curw. Hawk. 635.

¹³ R. v. Scofield, East, P. C. 1028.

¹⁴ R. v. Turner, 1 Moo. C. C. 47. R. v. Burrow, 1 Lew. C. C. 134.

Bench," have been read after judgment by default.¹ Such are admissible although made by a witness who was examined at the trial.² And perhaps witnesses may be under the defendant's influence, so that the court, as in a case of assault where the witnesses refused to appear, could not know the circumstances without affidavits of aggravation. But the court will allow the defendant time to answer any new matter.³

Counsel.] After verdict, the rule is to hear the defendant's affidavits in the first instance, then those for the prosecution. The counsel for the defendant is then called upon, and lastly, the counsel for the crown. Still, after judgment by default, the rule is reversed with respect to the turn for hearing affidavits read and for the addresses of counsel. If there be no affidavits, the counsel for the defendant is first heard, and then counsel for the prosecution.⁴ Upon a more recent occasion it was determined that the counsel for the crown should be heard first, where the defendant had pleaded guilty, and the affidavits in aggravation should be read before those in mitigation. The counsel for the defendants was heard first. But it was said, that if a verdict of guilty were taken by consent, and without evidence, the case would be reversed as to the affidavits, and that the defendant's counsel should then be first heard, and his affidavits read in the first instance. If some defendants should be convicted by verdict and others suffer judgment by default, the rule is the same as though the last-mentioned defendants had pleaded guilty.⁵ So again where some defendants had been convicted by verdict, and some had suffered judgment by default, the counsel would be heard in mitigation for all in the first instance, and then the counsel for the crown.⁶ Affidavits in aggravation will not be permitted in felony.⁷ Under very special circumstances affidavits in mitigation might be received upon the trial of traverses, but it was neither usual nor desirable to entertain them on either side upon such occasions.⁸ So at the Central Criminal Court where a defendant had pleaded guilty to an indictment for libel, and there were affidavits both in mitigation and aggravation, the court would not hear counsel on either side,⁹ nor the defendant himself after that plea.¹⁰ Scandalous and irrelevant affidavits will be removed from the files of the court. It is a contempt to file them. If not filed, the opposite party may yet

¹ R. v. Morgan, 11 East, 457.

R. v. Sutton, 7 Ad. & El. 593,

² R. v. Sharpness, 1 T. R. 228.

594, n.

³ R. v. Archer, 2 T. R. 203, n.;

⁶ R. v. Despard, 2 M. & Ry.

R. v. Wilson and others, 4 T. R. 487.

⁷ In R. v. Ellis, 6 B. & C. 148.

⁴ R. v. Bunts and others, 2 T. R. 683. Reg. Gen.

⁸ R. v. Cox and others, 4 C. & P.

⁵ R. v. Dignam. R. v. Caistor.

538, by Patteson, J.

⁹ R. v. Gregory, 1 Car. & K. 228.

¹⁰ 1 Cox, 31.

be allowed to put in counter-affidavits to answer defamatory matter.¹

Unless there be some proof of an intention to abscond, the court will not require bail from a person convicted of a misdemeanor, as a security for his presence to receive judgment, nor even his own recognizance.² If a prosecutor intend to secure costs for himself upon the condition of not bringing up the defendant for judgment, he should take care to have a right understanding, and express himself clearly. Nothing having been said about costs under such circumstances, the court discharged a rule for taxing them.³

The conduct of a defendant subsequent to the time when he is found guilty may be taken into consideration, either by way of aggravation, or of mitigating the punishment. In general it is done for his benefit in order to extenuate the offence, but it is also done, if required, to aggravate.⁴ Care should be taken to pronounce judgment upon the right statute, though the particular statute need not be referred to in giving judgment.⁵

The statute 1 Geo. 4, c. 117, abolished the capital penalty for stealing privately in a shop, and substituted another punishment. The prisoner committed an offence against the old before the new statute passed, but was not tried till afterwards, and it was held that she could not be punished under either Act, but that she should only receive punishment as for a common larceny.⁶ The judgment for felony should allege by whom the indictment was presented, and on oath, &c. It is not enough to say that at the sessions of gaol delivery, &c., it was presented, &c.⁷

With respect to the time and place for pronouncing judgment, it is usual for the judge to pass sentence soon after the trial. But as this rule did not extend to records from the King's Bench, and as it was found, especially upon convictions for misdemeanor, very oppressive to require the presence of the defendant in London for the purpose of receiving judgment, the stat. 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 9, was passed to relieve such persons.⁸ For the purpose of amending the judgment by diminishing the punishment, some particular defect in the sentence should be pointed out, or some matter which could not have been brought forward at the assizes.⁹ However, cases of information filed by leave of the Court of King's Bench, or by the attorney-general where he

¹ R. v. Gregory, 1 Car. & K. 228.

⁶ R. v. Mackenzie, Russ. & Ry.

² R. v. Whitcomb, 1 C. & P. 429.
124.

⁷ R. v. Butterfield, 2 M. & Rob.

³ R. v. Rawson and others, 2 B. & C. 598.
522.

⁸ Ante.

⁴ R. v. Withers, by Lord Kenyon, 3 T. R. 432. S. P. R. v. Walter; R. v. Smollet, cited there.

⁵ Murray v. Reg. (in error), 9 Jur. 596.

⁹ King v. Reg. (in error), 9 Jur. 833; 7 Q. B. 782. The words "it is considered," should not be omitted from the postea on such an occasion. S. C. Sembl.

prays a postponement of the judgment, are excepted out of this statute. And the Court of King's Bench could always give judgment either upon indictments originating with them, or removed by certiorari from an inferior tribunal. And so it was held where an indictment for lighting fires on the coast was found at sessions, and tried at the Cornwall assizes, although it was objected that the judge at nisi prius ought to have passed the sentence.¹ The judge of nisi prius may, therefore, give judgment at the time, or return the postea with the offender into the court above.² But an inferior court may be compelled to give judgment by a writ of mandamus, and although even an erroneous judgment should be disclosed in the return, it will be allowed, for the remedy in that case is by writ of error.³ And an inferior court cannot set aside a verdict except for irregularity.⁴ In nuisance, a verdict for the crown was taken by consent subject to a reference. Upon this the defendant was deemed to be entitled to notice of a motion for judgment, and also to copies of the affidavits upon which the motion was founded. The verdict being undisturbed by the award, it lay upon the prosecutor to move for judgment pursuant to the verdict, or for an attachment against the defendant if he did not perform the award.⁵ It is dangerous in giving judgment to use the words "offences aforesaid," where there are good and bad counts, and bad findings on some of the good counts. For each count charges a separate offence, and the expression "offences aforesaid," extends to all the offences of which each defendant stands convicted. So, that when some counts were good and some bad, such a judgment was held invalid.⁶ Therefore a general judgment for the crown on an indictment containing several counts, one of which is bad, and where the punishment is not fixed by law, cannot be supported.⁷ But where the indictment contained nine counts, and a general judgment of transportation for fourteen years was passed, they were taken to be the same fourteen years upon each count, and the judgment was held valid.⁸ This, however, supposes each count to be good. A judgment that the defendant be imprisoned for six months for the offences charged in each and every count of the indictment would hardly stand if there were one bad count, for it is a general judgment of one imprisonment for six months.⁹ And it is no ground for reversal that the record contains no entry of acquittal on that part of the indictment upon which the defendants were found not guilty.¹⁰

¹ R. v. Cook, 4 M. & S. 17.

² 14 Hen. 6, c. 1; Steph. 319.

³ R. v. West Riding, JJ., 7 T. R. 467.

⁴ R. v. Peters, 1 Burr. 568.

⁵ R. v. Gore or Gower, 8 D. P. C. 102.

⁶ O'Connell v. Reg. (in error), 11 Cl. & Fin. 155.

⁷ See S. C. R. v. Middleditch, Den. 92, 98.

⁸ Holloway v. The Queen, Den. & P. 287; 17 Q. B. 317.

⁹ Gregory v. Reg. (in error), 15 Q. B. 957.

¹⁰ O'Connell v. Reg. ut supra. See another point there as to the

There appears to be no exclusively particular form for the commencement of a judgment in cases of misdemeanor.¹ However, if the attorney-general should enter a nol. pros. judgment will not pass. The nol. pros. can only issue at the instance of the attorney-general.²

Alteration of judgment.] It is not unusual for the court, both at the assizes and sessions, to make an alteration in the judgment, but this must be done during the continuance of the commission, or, at sessions, during the sitting of the magistrates.³ Unless, indeed, there be an adjournment. In law the time is considered but as one day. The same thing was done at the Old Bailey,⁴ and so again in the Court of King's Bench, provided the alteration take place in the same term.⁵ So at the assizes where that part of the sentence in murder which directed the dissection and anatomization of the body⁶ was omitted, the judges agreed, although differing as to the principal point, that the mistake might have been set right by having the prisoner brought up again.⁷ It seems that corporal punishment, as the pillory, (now abolished,) does not at any time form part of the original sentence. It is left to the discretion of the officer, or appointed by a particular rule of court.⁸ The rule above mentioned applies to fines which cannot be altered after the term, or expiration of the sitting of the court.⁹ Moreover, the judgment of a preceding term cannot be altered, even by consent, and although the record upon which the former judgment was given has been altered in the meantime by an order of justices of oyer and terminer.¹⁰ reversing or varying of the judgment with reference to the recognizances required, a query in S. C.

¹ In re King, 15 L. J. (N. S.) Q. B. 2.

² R. v. Dunn, 1 Car. & K. 730.

³ 2 Salk. 606.

⁴ Id. 607.

⁵ R. v. Fitzgerald and another, 1 Salk. 401, where the punishment was increased. R. v. Price, 6 East, 328.

⁶ These marks of infamy exist no longer. 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 75, s. 16. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 30, ss. 1, 2.

⁷ R. v. Fletcher, Russ. & Ry. 58. R. v. Wyatt, S. P. Id. 230. The omission in this last case was leaving out the day of execution, but the mistake was rectified on the next morning.

⁸ Atkinson v. Rex (in error), 3 Bro. P. C. 517.

⁹ 2 Hawk. c. 48, s. 20.

¹⁰ R. v. Carlile, 2 B. & Adol. 971.

CHAPTER XXIII.

OF ERROR.

Error.] A judgment may be reversed with or without writ of error. But the record cannot be removed after judgment without that writ.¹ When the error occurs dehors the record (as if the commission under which the prisoner has been tried were invalid), there needs not to be any writ.² The writ of error applies to mistakes upon the face of the record. As where a party was ordered to be transported for fourteen instead of seven years.³ So, where there was a judgment of transportation at sessions, in a capital case, the prisoners were ordered to be discharged.⁴ So, where there was a judgment against a servant for embezzlement without a specific charge.⁵ So, where a manifest omission appears upon the record.⁶ As in misdemeanor, where, instead of a capiatur, there was a misericordia.⁷ But it is not error that the verdict was not entered of record when it was given, because that is impossible.⁸ Nor that the copy of the caption on the record does not contain the names of the persons on whose oath the indictment was found.⁹ Nor is it competent to contradict the record. Nor can errors both of law and fact be assigned.¹⁰ Nor can there be error unless judgment has been

¹ R. v. Seton (Inhabitants), 7 T. R. 373.

² Steph. 331. A recorder may try prisoners although the judges of assize, oyer and terminer, and gaol delivery are also sitting. The Court of Queen's Bench, indeed, being the court of criminal appeal, would work a suspension. The same rule applies to justices of the peace, but it certainly would be highly inconvenient for them to hold these sessions during the assizes. Smith v. Reg. (in error), 18 L. J. M. C. 207; 13 Q. B. 738.

A court of quarter sessions may respite from one session to another, and, although the record stated, at the first session, "it was considered and adjudged that the defendant should enter into recognizances to appear," &c., the court held, that those words did not operate as a judgment so as to oust the sessions of their power to pronounce sentence at a subsequent sessions. Keen v. Reg. (in error), 10 Q. B. 928; 16 L. J. M. C. 180.

³ R. v. Ellis, 5 B. & C. 395.

⁴ R. v. Bourne and others, 7 Ad. & El. 58. See also R. v. Howes and another, Id. 60, n.

⁵ R. v. Flower, 5 B. & C. 736.

⁶ See R. v. Fletcher, Russ. & Ry. 58.

⁷ R. v. Holroy, 5 Mod. 341.

⁸ R. v. Carlile, 2 B. & Adol. 971.

⁹ R. v. Aylett, 6 Ad. & El. 247, n.

¹⁰ R. v. Carlile, 2 B. & Adol. 362.

pronounced. Where, after a verdict, the entry upon the record ran thus: "It is therefore ordered that the said L. K. be transported," &c., the Court of King's Bench, upon error, awarded a procedendo, for no judgment had been given. The prisoner was admitted to bail, and the court below were directed to pronounce sentence.¹ Two verdicts were set out upon a record, one of which had been considered invalid by the justices at sessions. There being no objection to the second, the judgment was affirmed. For Per cur. For if the first verdict were good, the second trial would have been coram non iudice; but then the second trial would apply here, as the first verdict was bad.² An indictment at the quarter sessions for the city and county of Chester contained two counts, one for stealing in a dwelling house, and the other for a common larceny. The jury process was to inquire of the felony in the indictment. The verdict was, guilty of the felony aforesaid. The judgment was fourteen years' transportation. The Court of Queen's Bench reversed the judgment, and awarded a venire de novo. Error was brought. The court of error said that the venire de novo had been well awarded for this misawarding of the jury process, that it was no objection that judgment had been given by the court of quarter sessions,³ and that the quarter sessions was not an inferior court in that sense of the term, but a continuing court of oyer and terminer. But the court of error intimated that they thought the word "felony" might have been construed to be nomen collectivum, and so no error; however, they affirmed the judgment of the Queen's Bench.⁴ Again, it is ground of error that a peremptory challenge has been refused. The prisoner was sentenced to transportation for life under 1 Vict. c. 85, for shooting maliciously, but it being shown that his challenge had been disallowed because it was on a capital charge, a venire de novo was awarded.⁵ Before the statute 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, should an erroneous judgment have been awarded by the court below, as where the quarter sessions sentenced a person by mistake to imprisonment and hard labour, the court upon reversing the judgment in error could not have rectified the blunder. In that case they declared they had no alternative but to discharge the prisoner.⁶ The court could neither send back the record to have the error corrected nor award the proper punishment.⁷ But this defect is cured by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 5. Thus ¹ R. v. Kenworthy, 1 B. & C. 711. But it seems, that upon the affirming of a summary conviction upon certiorari, the court may re-commit the defendant for the residue of his term of imprisonment, although he had been admitted to bail upon the issuing the writ. Ex parte Lord, 4 Dowl. & L. 405.

² R. v. Fowler and another, 4 B. & Ald. 273.

³ Gray v. Reg. was cited as in point upon this objection.

⁴ Campbell v. Reg. 17 L. J. M. C. 89; 11 Q. B. 799. Whether a venire de novo may issue in a case of felony for a defective verdict, qu.?

⁵ Gray v. Reg. 11 Cl. & Fin. 427.

⁶ Silversides v. Reg. 2 Gale & D. 617.

⁷ R. v. Bourne, 7 Ad. & El. 58.

upon the reversal of a judgment in any criminal case, the court of error may either pronounce the proper judgment or remit the record to the court below for that purpose. The Act, however, was not retrospective. The court makes an order or rule for the prisoner's discharge.¹ If there be no order in error after the service of a four-day rule upon the attorney-general and the prosecutor, the prisoner must be discharged.²

This writ is not grantable in felony as of course, but it is seldom denied, and in misdemeanor, the attorney-general must, it is said, grant his fiat, ex deb. justitiæ, where there is probable ground.³ Although the attorney-general is not compellable to do this, and the court has no power to interfere.⁴ So in a colony, as St. Helena, the same sanction must be obtained.⁵ It lies from inferior jurisdictions to the Court of King's Bench, and thence to the House of Lords.⁶

A judgment may also be reversed by Act of parliament.⁷ And outlawry may also be reversed by a court of error. As where the defendant dies abroad,⁸ or where it appears upon the writ of proclamation and return that he had a day in court after his outlawry.⁹ An affidavit that the defendant saw the person outlawed in his coffin will be sufficient.¹⁰ Where the defendant comes in a procedendo will be at once awarded.¹¹ It is to be observed, that whether the offence be treason or felony, the heir or executor may have the writ.¹² A judgment upon an indictment is within the statute 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 1.¹³ If a defendant bring error from the Queen's Bench to the Exchequer Chamber, he must pray oyer of the record and assign errors in writing, and the crown may orally join in error.¹⁴ The defendant should in general be present to move for oyer of the record of the indictment upon which he has been convicted, but the court dispensed with his attendance, upon affidavits showing him to be an aged and infirm person, living in New South Wales,¹⁵ where he had been for thirty years past; that he was subject to paralysis and could not come over without injury to ¹ Holt v. Reg. (in error), 2 Dowl. & L. 774. Query of King v. Reg. (in error), 14 L. J. Q. B. 86, whether the court has power to discharge?

² R. v. Howse, 3 Nev. & M. 462; 7 Ad. & El. 60, n.

³ Steph. 332.

⁴ R. v. Newton and another, 24 L. J. Q. B. 246; 4 El. & Bl. 869; 16 C. B. 97, where the attorney-general refused in a case of malicious wounding.

⁵ R. v. Lees, 27 L. J. Q. B. 403.

⁶ Steph. 331. See the form of the precipe and petition, with the secretary of state's fiat, Den. & P. 512, n.

⁷ 1 Ch. Cr. C. 750.

⁸ R. v. Buchanan, 1 Cr. & M. 195.

⁹ Barrington v. The King (in error), 3 T. R. 499.

¹⁰ 1 Cr. & M., ut supra.

¹¹ R. v. Perry, 5 T. R. 478; 6 T. R. 573; see also R. v. Yandell and others, 4 T. R. 521. R. v. Russell, cited, Id. 534.

¹² R. v. Marshe, 5 Rep. 111. R. v. Ayliffe and another, 1 Show. 15.

¹³ R. v. King, 7 Q. B. 782. Respecting judgments in Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and the Exchequer, see R. v. Wright (in error), 1 Ad. & El. 434.

¹⁴ Mansell v. Reg. (in error), Dears. & B. 375.

¹⁵ Murray v. Reg. 9 Jur. 410.

his health, and great pecuniary loss.¹ Should the plaintiff in error neglect to assign his errors in proper time the defendant in error will sign judgment of non. pros., and the defendant in error may then enter the proceedings and judgment of non. pros. upon the rolls of the court below.² The court will not notice a statement of the sentence in the manuscript of the record upon errors assigned, but will require the postea to be brought up with the sentence indorsed, and grant a certiorari for that purpose. It was so held, where the defendants had been convicted of a conspiracy, and error had been assigned on the sentence itself.³ Two were charged with misdemeanor, and one only brought error. He could not object that there was any discontinuance as to his co-defendant.⁴ There were several continuances on the record of ven. fac. jur. One was returnable on April 12th, on which day another was awarded. The record then set out the withdrawal of the pleas of not guilty, the conviction and day for judgment, the non-appearance of the defendant who had brought error, the outlawry and judgment. The outlawry was reversed. It was held in error that the 12th of April was part of Easter Term for the purpose of awarding process in continuation of former process, and, therefore, that there was no discontinuance of the jury process. But if so, the objection would not hold, because the defendant had confessed the indictment, and the validity of the judgment did not depend upon the regularity of the proceedings before trial.⁵ Again, whilst the outlawry lasted, the suit was suspended, and, consequently, it was idle to give either to him or to the coroner and attorney a day, so that entries of a dies datus were unnecessary.⁶ Again, the date of the term was a sufficient heading to the narrative of the proceedings which took place on the coming in of the defendant to traverse the outlawry. It was unnecessary to state that he was brought into court on the capias ut lagatum to reverse the outlawry. The outlawry having been reversed, it was held no ground of error that one of the writs of outlawry was made returnable and a subsequent writ awarded on a non dies juridicus.⁷

One defendant may assign error without the others.⁸

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 1, in every case of judgment for a misdemeanor where the defendant shall have obtained a writ of error to reverse such judgment, execution shall be stayed until such writ of error shall be determined; and if the defendant shall be ¹ S. C. 3 Dowl. & L. 100; 7 Q. B. 700. The prosecutor and his attorney being both dead, the court directed service of the rule to join in error to be made by sticking it up in the Crown Office, and serving a copy on the solicitor to the treasury. It was a case of bigamy.

² R. v. King, 9 Jur. 551.

³ R. v. King, 7 Q. B. 782.

⁴ Wright v. Reg. (in error), 14 Q. B. 148.

⁵ S. C.

⁶ S. C.

⁷ S. C.

⁸ Wright v. Reg. 2 Cox, 91; 14 Q. B. 148. And, upon error, one defendant cannot object to a discontinuance in process against the other. S. C.

imprisoned under such execution, or any fine shall have been levied, either in whole or in part, in pursuance of such judgment, the defendant shall be entitled to be discharged, and to receive back any money levied on account of such fine from the person in whose possession the same shall be until such final determination as aforesaid: Provided that, except where a writ of error shall be brought to reverse such judgment by Her Majesty's attorney-general, no execution on any such judgment shall be stayed, nor shall any defendant be discharged from imprisonment as to such execution, unless and until he shall become bound by recognizance, before one of the judges of Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench, or one of the commissioners appointed to take special bail in actions depending in the superior courts, with two sufficient sureties, to be approved of by such judge or commissioner, in such sum as such judge or commissioner shall direct, to prosecute the writ of error with effect.

By 16 Vict. c. 32, s. 1, in any case of error brought to reverse a judgment in misdemeanor, unless by the attorney-general, the defendant must likewise be bound personally to appear when judgment is given, and the bail must be bound to render the defendant in case the judgment shall be affirmed; and the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 1, goes on to enact that every such recognizance shall, after justification of bail, be filed of record in the said Court of Queen's Bench, in like manner, and upon payment of the like fees, as in the case of other recognizances filed in the Crown Office in that court; and the judge of the said Court of Queen's Bench, and the said commissioner, shall have the like powers in respect of the justifying such bail in error, and the examination of the sureties, and the like rules shall apply, as in respect of special bail in actions depending in such court: Provided always, that in the case of any defendant under legal disability it shall be sufficient if two persons, to be approved of by such judge or commissioner, shall become bound by recognizance on the behalf of such defendant, to be acknowledged and conditioned as aforesaid.

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 2, the clerk of the crown in the said Court of Queen's Bench shall for the purposes hereinafter mentioned make out and deliver to the defendant, or his lawful attorney, certificates in writing under his hand that such recognizance is duly filed of record in such court, upon payment of the like fee as for other certificates delivered at the Crown Office; and by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 24, s. 4, any such certificate, under the hand either of the said clerk of the crown or of the master or assistant master on the crown side of the said court, and sealed with the seal of the Crown Office in the said court, shall be a sufficient warrant to every gaoler or other person having custody of such defendant in execution of such judgment, to discharge him out of custody, and for the repayment of the fine; but by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 2, no person who shall have received any such money, and have paid it over to any other person, according to the course of the Exchequer, shall be liable to repay to the defendant any part of the money so paid over.

By 16 Vict. c. 32, s. 2, in every case in which a defendant shall make default in prosecuting such writ of error with effect, or in personally appearing in the court of error upon any proceeding to be had upon such writ of error as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the said court to order the said recognizance to be estreated into the Court of Exchequer, and without scire facias, and to order the said writ of error to be quashed without argument, and the defendant shall forthwith be liable to execution upon the judgment; and so it is enacted with regard to recognizances in general upon indictments or informations, by the 8th section of that Act.

By 16 Vict. c. 32, s. 3, whenever any writ of error shall be brought under the provisions of this Act, for reversing any judgment in misdemeanor, and error shall be assigned thereon, no judgment or reversal shall be entered, either for want of a joinder in error or otherwise, without the special order of the court in which such writ of error shall be pending, pronounced in open court; and upon a certificate signed by or on behalf of the attorney or solicitor general, that notice has been given to one of them of such intended application, and in the event of there being no joinder in error, such court of error may proceed to examine the record in error, and may give such judgment thereon as the court from which error is brought ought to have done, although no joinder in error may have been filed.

By sect. 4, where a defendant shall personally appear in court upon any proceeding had upon any such writ of error, and judgment thereupon shall be affirmed, or such writ of error shall be quashed, it shall be lawful for such court of error forthwith to commit the said defendant to the keeper of the Queen's prison, and to order the said keeper to deliver such defendant to the keeper of the gaol or prison in which he may have been adjudged to be imprisoned; and the said keeper of the Queen's prison shall thereupon deliver such defendant to the keeper of such gaol or prison, and the keeper of such last-mentioned gaol or prison shall thereupon cause such defendant to be kept in safe custody in such gaol or prison, in pursuance of and in execution of the said judgment.

And by sect. 5 of the last statute, whenever it shall be made to appear to any one of the judges of the superior courts of record at Westminster, either by affidavit or by certificate of the proper officer of the court of error, that the recognizance of a defendant, given under the provisions of this Act, has been ordered to be estreated, or that judgment upon the said writ has been affirmed, or that such writ of error has been quashed, and that default has been made by the space of four days in rendering the defendant to prison in execution of the judgment, it shall be lawful for such judge to issue his warrant under his hand and seal, and thereby to cause such defendant to be apprehended, and conveyed to the gaol or prison in which such defendant may have been adjudged to be imprisoned pursuant to and in execution of the judgment given against such defendant.

By sect. 6, in every case in which a defendant shall be committed by any court of error in execution of the judgment given against such defendant, and in every case in which a defendant shall, by virtue of any warrant, or in any other manner, be rendered to prison in execution of such judgment, the imprisonment of such defendant (if imprisonment shall not have commenced under such execution) shall be reckoned to begin from the day when such defendant shall be in actual custody in the gaol or prison in which he may have been adjudged to be imprisoned under such judgment; and if the defendant shall have been discharged from imprisonment on giving bail in error, as is hereinbefore mentioned, such defendant shall be imprisoned for such further period in the same prison as, with the time during which such defendant may already have been imprisoned under such execution, shall be equal to the period for which he was adjudged to be imprisoned as aforesaid.

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 4, when the judgment shall have been for payment of a fine, and imprisonment until such fine be paid, either with or without imprisonment for a certain time, and the defendant shall have paid the fine, or the same or any part thereof shall have been levied, and shall have been received back, under the provisions hereinbefore contained, and the judgment upon writ of error brought shall be affirmed, the defendant shall not be entitled by reason of such payment to be discharged from imprisonment, notwithstanding the expiration of any certain time of imprisonment for which the original judgment shall have been given, until the fine shall be again paid.

By 16 Vict. c. 32, s. 7, whenever default shall have been made in rendering a defendant to prison in execution of a judgment for misdemeanor, and a warrant shall have been issued against such defendant to enforce such render to prison, according to the provisions of this Act, such defendant shall be liable to pay the costs of such render; and if the prosecutor shall, before the expiration of the defendant's imprisonment, have caused the amount of such costs and charges to be ascertained by one of the masters or the assistant master of the crown side of the Court of Queen's Bench, and shall have left with the said defendant, and with the keeper of the prison or his deputy, a certificate under the hand of such master or assistant master of the amount of such costs so ascertained, then the defendant shall not be discharged out of custody until such costs and charges have been paid, or until an order has been made by the court for the relief of insolvent debtors or of bankruptcy for such discharge.

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 5, if the court in which any such writ of error shall be pending shall, upon motion in that behalf, decide that the defendant by whom it shall be brought has wilfully delayed or neglected to prosecute the same with effect, it shall be lawful for such court to order the writ to be quashed, and thereupon the defendant who brought such writ of error shall be liable to execution upon the judgment.

Lastly, by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 5, whenever any writ of error shall be brought upon any judgment or any indictment, information, presentment, or inquisition, in any criminal cases, and the court of error shall reverse the judgment, it shall be competent for such court of error either to pronounce the proper judgment, or to remit the record to the court below, in order that such court may pronounce the proper judgment upon such indictment, &c.

The defendants need not have been ruled to assign errors in order to afford a ground for quashing the writ.¹ The form of the affidavit runs thus: "No process or other proceeding has been had or taken by or on behalf of the said defendant to prosecute the same since the issuing and allowance of the writ of error." This was held to be a sufficient statement that no errors had been assigned, without stating that the defendant had not assigned, or had been ruled to assign errors.² Where the recognizance was to be dealt with as the Court of Exchequer should order, the court ordered fresh process. A discharge upon a recognizance so insufficient is contrary to the letter and spirit of the Act.³ A judge of the Queen's Bench made an order, in vacation, to discharge a defendant out of imprisonment where judgment had been reversed in error.⁴

The Court of Queen's Bench can set aside a writ of error founded upon a compromise under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 109, s. 39, and they will exercise that power. There was judgment against the defendants for conspiracy, &c. The indictment had been removed into the Queen's Bench by certiorari. The attorney-general's fiat having been obtained, the transcript of the record was carried into the Exchequer Chamber. Errors were assigned, but the prosecutor did not join, upon which there was a rule reversing the judgment below. A rule was then moved for to quash the writ of error by reason of the compromise. Upon this the defendants below obtained the attorney-general's fiat for the second time, and sued out a fresh writ of error on the old judgment. Amongst other errors it was assigned, that the Court of Queen's Bench ought not to have quashed the first writ of error. The plaintiff in error then demanded a joinder in error, or a plea in error. However, on the part of the prosecution two motions for rules were made. The one to strike out the judgment of the Exchequer Chamber on the writ of error; the other to set aside the assignment of errors on the second writ for irregularity, with costs. The first rule was made absolute. The first writ of error was improperly issued, and the Court of Queen's Bench had a right to quash it, as they have the right of quashing a writ which issued contrary to good faith, and the Court of Exchequer Chamber has no jurisdiction in the matter. The second rule was discharged, on striking out all the immaterial matter, leaving only the general assignment of errors.⁵

¹ R. v. Broome, 5 Dowl. & L. 607.

² S. C. So held upon an affidavit in support of a motion under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 5, to quash a writ of error for wilful delay.

³ Dugdale v. Reg. Dears. 254; 2 El. & Bl. 129.

⁴ Dears. 256.

⁵ Alleyne v. Reg. 24 L. J. Q. B. 282; Dears. 505; 4 El. & Bl. 186.

In fact, the Exchequer Chamber cannot examine into the sufficiency of the writ, and the rule had been improperly set out on the record. It ought not to have been put on the record at all.¹ The special assignment of errors was mere surplusage.²

*Paper books.*³] A defendant in error in a criminal case not having delivered paper books to two of the judges in pursuance of Rule 23 of the regulations in the Crown Office, and which rule concludes by saying, that judgment shall be given by the court against the party neglecting to deliver paper books to the judges, if the court shall so please. The court, nevertheless, directed the argument to proceed.

¹ 24 L. J. Q. B. 282.

² Id. 285.

³ Reg. Gen. Q. B. Easter Term, 16 Vict., 16th April, 1853; 1 El. & Bl. 693. "It is ordered that there be laid before the Court of Queen's Bench on the first crown-paper day in every term, a list of the several cases in which recogni-zances have been filed to prosecute writs of error in misdemeanor returnable in that court, together with the names of the several cases in which default has been made in prosecuting such writs of error, according to the course of practice of that court."

CHAPTER XXIV.

OF ATTAINDER AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.

Forfeiture.] Trover was brought for the goods of a felon. The particular day of the conviction was allowed to be shown for the claimant, and the record was no estoppel, the assizes being one day in law. The assizes were on March 19; the assignment took place on March 20, and Maule and Williams, JJ., held that the goods had passed to the assignee.¹ In another case so much of the stolen property as was shown to be the result of a robbery in a railway carriage was delivered to the company who had made the loss good, and the remainder was given over to the chief commissioner of police to abide future orders. And the rights of the sheriffs of London to retain possession of it was rejected, they not being custodians of the crown.² But this order of the court was brought up by certiorari in order to be quashed, and it was held to be invalid, as there is no power at common law, or by statute, for the court to dispose of the goods of felons.³ As, upon conviction, the goods and chattels become forfeited, without office found,⁴ so, upon attainder, the profits of the freehold fall to the crown during the life of the convict,⁵ and the copyhold escheats in like manner to the lord, according to the custom of the manor. If the conviction takes place before the admittance of a party who has purchased from the felon, and the custom of forfeiture should exist, the offender continues tenant for the purpose of forfeiture, and the purchaser cannot be admitted although the seller have surrendered to him in fee,⁶ and, therefore, where the person to be admitted was hanged before admittance, it was held that the attainder worked no change in the descent.⁷ So the felon is a good lessee in ejectment where no office has been found.⁸ Indeed the lessee of an estate under such circumstances has a good title against all save the king and the lord of whom the land is holden before office found. And this is not a continuing forfeiture, so that acceptance of rent after judgment will be a waiver of a power of re-entry in case the lessee or his heirs should become insolvent and unable to

¹ Whitaker v. Wisbey, 6 Cox, 109.

² R. v. Pierce and others, 27 L. J. M. C. 31; 7 Cox, 206.

³ R. v. Pierce and others, Bell, 235. The 21 Hen. 8, c. 11, and 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 57, repealed, were referred to. See S. C. post, "Larceny."

⁴ See R. v. Whitehead, 2 Moo. C. C. 181.

⁵ 54 Geo. 3, c. 145.

⁶ R. v. Mildmay, 5 B. & Adol. 254.

⁷ Roe d. Jeffereys v. Hicks, 2 Wils. 13.

⁸ 2 Nev. & M. 489.

go on with the management of the farm.¹ Again, where the lord did no act towards seizing a copyhold, and the copyholder, who was capitally convicted, suffered a commuted sentence of two years' imprisonment, it was held that his competency was restored, and that he might sue in ejectment.² A fortiori, where there has been no attainder.³ But the personal property and rights of action pertaining to the felon are vested in the crown without office found.⁴

In treason the consequences of an attainder are very penal. And murder as well as treason is excepted out of the 54 Geo. 3, c. 145. Before that statute the king had a fee simple in the offender's freehold for one year, during which he might commit any description of waste, and corruption of blood supervened; the result was that a complete forfeiture took place after the death of the owner, because the heir was incapacitated from deriving title. But that Act contenting the crown with a life forfeiture, prohibits the disherison of any heir save in treason and murder; and by another statute, the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 10, the descent of land may be traced through an attainted person, unless such land shall have escheated in consequence of the attainder before a certain date therein mentioned. However a pardon after attainder will enable the issue born after the attainder to inherit in all cases. And a pardon by Act of parliament will restore the blood as to all consequences whatsoever. We mention these last particulars more especially, because they apply to treason and murder, the crimes excepted out of the statute 54 Geo. 3, c. 145. There is also an incompetency to sue which affects the convict upon these occasions, although by leave of the court or a judge he may himself be sued.

However by 5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 26, a felon under sentence of transportation, who has received any remission of his punishment from the governor of the colony, may, whilst he resides in a lawful place, according to his sentence, maintain any suit either here or abroad. And this capacity becomes available even against the crown, and the attorney-general must pay costs if he fails.⁵ The legatee of a promissory note bequeathed by will is convicted of felony. He forfeits, of course, the interest in the note, but the executor may still sue the maker, and he becomes a trustee for the crown in respect of the proceeds.⁶ By 10 & 11 Vict. c. 82, (the Juvenile Offenders Act,) no conviction under the Act shall be attended with any forfeiture. And the subsequent statutes concerning small larcenies follow the same rule of exemption.⁷ By

¹ Doe d. Evans v. Pritchard, 2 Nev. & M. 489.

² Doe d. Evans v. Evans, 5 B. & C. 584.

³ R. v. Bridger, 1 Mees. & W. 144.

⁴ Bullock v. Dodds, 2 B. & Ald. 258.

⁵ Gough v. Davies, [the case of a legacy,] 25 L. J. Ch. 677.

⁶ Bishop v. Curtis, 18 Q. B. 878; 21 L. J. Q. B. 391.

⁷ 13 & 14 Vict. c. 37, s. 1; 18 & 19 Vict. c. 126, s. 10.

15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, s. 8,¹ if any one convicted of felony be solely or jointly possessed of lands or entitled to stock upon trust, the Court of Chancery may upon proof of conviction appoint a trustee in his room,² and make the necessary orders for giving to the new trustee the same rights with the convicted trustee. By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 113, s. 9, no child, being proved to have been convicted of felony, shall be deemed to be within the provisions of the Industrial Schools Act; and by the Scotch Industrial Schools Act, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 132, s. 9, no child shall be admitted who is found to have been sentenced to imprisonment for more than thirty days.

¹ The Trustees Extension Act.

convicted of felony, 3 & 4 Vict.

² See an Act for the care and education of infants who may be

c. 90.

CHAPTER XXV.

OF EXECUTION.

THE last circumstance which remains is that of execution. And here we do not speak merely of a capital execution, but of carrying into effect the judgment suitable to each case. In capital cases the prisoner is always asked what he has to say why execution should not be awarded. And it is said that a person so situated might make an oath that he is not the person who was sentenced (when the award of execution and the sentence happen at different times), i. e. in support of the plea, to that effect, which is a plea in bar. Upon this there would be a replication of identity, and an award of a venire, together with a day for the production of witnesses for or against the allegation. But where he will not make oath the trial is instanter, and no peremptory challenge is allowed.¹ Should the party absent himself after conviction or attainder, the process towards execution will be by outlawry.² But he may be taken and brought to the Court of King's Bench upon habeas corpus, when the attorney-general will prove the identity, if the prisoner should deny it, before a jury impannelled for that purpose. His identity being confirmed by the verdict of the jury, the court, upon the prayer of the counsel for the crown, will award execution instanter. The prisoner will be delivered to the sheriffs of the county named by the court, but the court will not fix the day of execution.³ In the case of a woman who is pregnant, or who alleges herself to be so, a plea of pregnancy must be put in.⁴ The sheriff shall then be commanded to take her into a private room, and to impanel a jury of matrons, to examine whether she be or not quick with child. If they find her quick, the execution shall be respited till the delivery. And "quick with child," means having conceived.⁵ But it is agreed that a woman cannot demand such respite of execution by reason of her being quick with child more than once.⁶

The sheriff is the officer whose duty it is to perform capital execution, but he may intrust his deputy with this matter. It is customary to allow two Sundays to intervene between the receipt of the calendar (which is, in fact, the warrant) and the execution.⁷

¹ 1 Steph. 338. See R. v. Rogers and others, 3 Burr. 1809.

² 2 Hawk. c. 48, s. 9.

³ R. v. Rogers and others, supra.

⁴ R. v. Hunt, 2 Cox, 261 ; 2 Hawk. c. 51, s. 9.

⁵ R. v. Wycherley, 8 C. & P.

262.

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 48, s. 10.

⁷ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 782.

In London, till the reign of Queen Victoria, the recorder issued a warrant to the sheriff in conformity with the orders he had received in council, commanding execution to be done upon the day and at the place assigned. But by 1 Vict. c. 77, s. 1, no report is to be made in council of any capital convict at the Central Criminal Court. By sect. 2, any judge of the superior courts might order execution upon an offender then already tried. By sect. 3, judgment of death may be recorded, and by sect. 4, entered of record. By sect. 5, judgment of death may be pronounced and execution ordered in like manner as at the assizes. Sect. 6 saves the prerogative of mercy. Sect. 7 saves the rights of the city of London, except so far as the Act expressly provides to the contrary.¹

The Court of King's Bench will either leave the execution to the sheriff, or will fix a time and place as they may see fit.² For, in general, the time forms no part of the sentence.³ Moreover, the Court of King's Bench may order the sheriff of any county, or the marshal of the court,⁴ to execute a sentence of death pronounced by a judge of gaol delivery. For which purpose the attorney-general may, as of course, have the writ of habeas corpus and a certiorari to bring up a prisoner and the record of his conviction.⁵ But not unless the record of attainder be in court.⁶

It has been held, that a sheriff is not bound to execute unless he has either the legal custody of the prisoner or the means of attaining it. Consequently, where the sheriff of the county received the signed calendar, but refused to execute because the judge had ordered the sheriffs of the city to do execution, he was considered not liable to an information. Not because the order had been given to the city sheriffs, for the signed calendar was a mere memorial, and he would have been bound to have executed without that, but because he had not the power of obtaining the custody of the persons ordered to die. There ought to have been an order to the constable of Chester Castle to deliver them to him, and a distinct order to him to receive and to execute.⁷ It was also held, that upon the trial of the information, an order of the court requiring the former sheriff to hang a criminal in chains,

¹ By sect. 8, the Act may be amended during the session; and by sect. 9, it is declared to be a public Act.

² For other particulars, see Steph. 339, 340.

³ Atkinson v. Rex (in error), 3 Bro. P. C. 517. R. v. Doyle and Valline, Leach, 67. Where the sheriffs doubted whether they could execute a warrant for hanging the prisoners at Bethnal Green, the recorder having sentenced them to die at the usual place of execution.

The judges held this warrant to be lawful.

⁴ R. v. Athos, father and son, Str. 553; 5 Burr. 2797. A conviction for murder in Wales had been removed from Herefordshire by certiorari. R. v. Rogers and others, 3 Burr. 1809.

⁵ R. v. Garside, 2 Ad. & El. 266.

⁶ R. v. Beal, 3 Mod. 124.

⁷ R. v. Antrobus, 2 Ad. & El. 788; 4 Nev. & M. 565. See 2 Hale, 31, 470, and an examined copy of the cravings of the sheriff, filed in the Exchequer, and in which he craved to be allowed his expenses, and which were allowed, were admissible in evidence for the crown.¹

Should the day appointed for the execution lapse without execution, it seems that another day may be appointed upon removing the record of attainder into the Court of King's Bench.² And if the punishment (whatever it may be) be not inflicted with accuracy, the officer is punishable for misdemeanor.³

Reprieve.] The judge, or the secretary of state, or, of course, the crown, can grant a reprieve. But there are reprieves of necessity. As where a woman is found to be with child, or where the convict is found by a jury to be insane, i. e., between judgment and the award of execution.⁴

*Penal servitude, &c., in lieu of transportation.*⁵] After many vicissitudes, transportation is, at length, exchanged for penal servitude. By 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2, after the commencement of this Act, no person shall be sentenced to transportation; and any person who, if this Act and the said Act had not been passed, might have been sentenced to transportation, shall, after the commencement of this Act, be liable to be sentenced to be kept in penal servitude for a term of the same duration as the term of transportation to which such person would have been liable if the said Act and this Act had not been passed; and in every case where, at the discretion of the court, one of any two or more terms of transportation might have been awarded, the court shall have the like discretion to award one of any two or more of the terms of penal servitude which are hereby authorized to be awarded instead of such terms of transportation: Provided always, that any person who might at the discretion of the court have been sentenced either to transportation for any term or to any period of imprisonment, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be sentenced either to penal ¹ S. C. But with reference to Chester, see now 5 Will. 4, c. 1, ss. 1, 2.

² R. v. Earl Ferrers, Fost. 138.

³ R. v. Beardmore, 2 Burr. 792.

⁴ See Steph. 333, 334. Where a pardon was granted on condition of transportation, the judge was bound to allow the benefit of the conditional pardon, and make an order for the transportation, upon notice from the secretaries of state. 5 Geo. 4, c. 84. See ss. 2—5, 13, 18; 6 & 7 Vict. c. 26. Jersey, 5 Geo. 4, c. 84, ss. 17, 19. See also 1 Will. 4, c. 39, s. 7; 9 & 10 Vict. c. 24, s. 1; 10 & 11 Vict. c. 67,

s. 2; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99. By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 121, s. 1, the provisions of 5 Geo. 4, c. 84, were extended to females.

⁵ The statutes 24 Geo. 3, sess. 1, c. 12, and 20 Geo. 3, c. 46, concerning transportation, were repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 101, and the reason of the repeal of 24 Geo. 3, c. 12, by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 101, was because the stat. 24 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. 56, s. 17, which repealed the 24 Geo. 3, sess. 1, c. 12, was itself repealed by 55 Geo. 3, c. 156. Therefore the first Act was set up again.

servitude for the same term or to the same period of imprisonment; and in any case in which before the passing of the said Act sentence of seven years' transportation might have been passed, it shall be lawful for the court in its discretion to pass a sentence of penal servitude of not less than three years.

By sect. 3, the provisions of the Act concerning offenders transported are to apply to offenders under sentence of penal servitude.

By sect. 4, the provisions of 5 Geo. 4, c. 84, are declared to be applicable to the sentence of penal servitude.

Sect. 5 empowers magistrates to commit to any convict prison convicts whose licences are revoked.

By sect. 6, the term "transportation," with reference to crime, is made convertible as to penal servitude.¹

Fees.] If a punishment be executed in another county than that where sentence was pronounced, no fee is due to the tipstaff, or other officer, on the part of the prosecutor.² No fee is due to the clerk of sessions at Newgate in respect of convicts sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour. The court granted a mandamus to ascertain whether any fee was payable in respect of convicts sentenced to transportation. And the fact of the non-payment of such fees from 1805 to 1829, when the clerk came into office, was held not to preclude the right. So that the clerk was considered to be entitled to the fees.³

¹ The Act 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99, and the Act 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, are to be read as one.

Note.—The 9 & 10 Vict. c. 26, concerning convict prisons abroad, is repealed by 22 Vict. c. 25. See post, tit. "Escapes."

² R. v. Cholsey, Cowp. 726, where the defendant was put into the pillory for perjury.

³ R. v. Baker, 7 Ad. & El. 502.

PART II.

Of Indictable Offences against the Queen and her Government.

CHAPTER I.

OF HIGH TREASON AND ITS INCIDENTS.

High treason.] High treason consists in acts of hostility against the sovereign, whether king or queen, or against the queen consort, or the eldest son and heir to the throne, by such as owe allegiance within the realm, or in certain outrages upon the queen, or the king's or queen's eldest daughter unmarried, or upon the wife of the eldest son and heir, or killing certain of the king's officers, or in attempting to disturb the Protestant succession. There was much uncertainty at common law upon the question of treasons,¹ and, at length, it became expedient to define, as clearly as might be, the offences which should be deemed to amount to that very penal crime. This circumstance gave birth to the celebrated statute, 25 Ed. 3, c. 2, an Act, which, after some fluctuations, was made "the only standard of treason ;"² and, although, since the days of Queen Mary, there have been some other enactments upon this subject, this Act of 25 Ed. 3 still continues to be the foundation upon which other Acts connected with treason are constructed. And this Act of 25 Ed. 3 was expressly saved in every respect by 11 Vict. c. 12, s. 6. The severe ordinances against the papists are, in a great measure, at an end, the apprehension of danger to the Protestant succession, on account of the Pretender, having been laid aside.

The hostile acts against the king, to which allusion has just been made, are,—compassing or imagining his death, levying war against him in his realm, or compassing for that purpose, adhering to his enemies, and attempting to interfere with his title by a violation of the Act of Settlement. And it cannot but be evident, in the first place, that the parties who are capable of committing this offence, are deserving of a separate consideration.

¹ 1 Hale, P. C. ch. 11.² 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 2.

Who bound to allegiance.] It would be a mistake to suppose that none can be guilty of treason except natural born subjects, or such as may be required to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy. One who dwells here, although a foreigner, must yield obedience to the monarch in whose realm he lives in return for the protection which is afforded him.¹ Even if the person be an alien enemy, yet if he be domiciled here, he receives the favour and indulgence of the law, and may be treated as a traitor, because he violates a local temporary allegiance.² A fortiori, a denizen, and a person naturalized by Act of parliament, are within the rules of allegiance. Whilst, on the other hand, aliens who invade the kingdom in a hostile manner, whether their sovereign be at peace with ours or not, and whether leagued with rebels here or not, cannot be punished as traitors, but can only be dealt with by martial law.³ It is said, that an ambassador committing a treason against the king's life shall be executed, although for other treasons he may be sent home.⁴ The same rule concerning allegiance extends to a queen consort, or the husband of a queen regnant.⁵ When the obligation is incurred, it is not any change of situation which will remove the effects of an allegiance. It is true that when an alien retires from the realm, his local allegiance is at end, unless he leave his family under the protection of the law. And it is also correct, that if a foreigner resides here for a time, and has children born while here, and then withdraw with his family, his children will be relieved from their temporary local allegiance. But as soon as the fealty attaches, it is not to be shaken off. A person born in England, and born a subject of the king, was sent abroad in his early infancy, and, subsequently, accepted a commission under the French king. Being taken prisoner in 1746, he urged his foreign employment as an excuse, but by Lee, C. J., the only fact for the jury to try was, whether the man were a native of Great Britain. Even the presumption of birth would be so far against the prisoner as that if he were to rely on evidence of his being born out of the kingdom, the proof would lie upon him, and he was found guilty.⁶ And the fact of the native of England being in the service and pay of a foreign monarch is but an aggravation, if alleged as a defence to the indictment.⁷ Again, on the other hand, if the sovereign be deprived of his rights, he is still king de jure, and it is no excuse to say, that some other power governed the kingdom at the time when the alleged offence was committed, and, therefore, Sir H. Vane

¹ R. v. Delamotte, East, P. C. 53.

² Foster, C. L. 186; East, P. C. 53.

³ 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 6; 3 Inst. 11; and see Kel. 38.

⁴ 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 5; 1 Hale, 97, 98; Fost. 187.

⁵ 1 Hale, P. C. 100.

⁶ R. v. Macdonald, Fost. 59. R. v. Dr. Storie, Dy. 300, pl. 38.

⁷ R. v. Townly, East, P. C. 51; Fost. 7. See R. v. Storie, ut supra.

endeavoured, without effect, to justify his proceedings under a parliament without a regnant monarch.¹

However, there is a case which will absolve the people from their allegiance. By 1 Wm. & M. sess. 2, c. 2, s. 9, every person who shall be reconciled to, or hold communion with the Church of Rome, or profess the popish religion, or marry a papist, shall be excluded, and be for ever incapable to inherit, possess, or enjoy the crown of this realm. The holding communion with the Romish Church may be understood to mean a conformity to her ordinances, and participation in her sacraments. A titular king, as the husband of the queen regnant, is not within this law.²

Compassing the king's death.] The offence of aiming directly at the life of the king is made treason by 25 Ed. 3, stat. 5, c. 2, and by 36 Geo. 3, c. 7. The statute of Edward has these words, "Compass or imagine the death of our lord the king, &c." The statute 36 Geo. 3, c. 7, s. 1,³ uses these expressions, "Compass, imagine, invent, devise, or intend death or destruction, or any bodily harm tending to death or destruction, maim or wounding, imprisonment or restraint of the person of the king, his heirs or successors." This compassing or imagining, &c., is manifested by various acts of the traitors, called overt acts, or to use the words of 36 Geo. 3, c. 7, s. 1, whoever by "such compassings, imaginings, inventions, &c., shall express, utter, or declare by publishing any printing or writing, or by any overt act or deed," shall be deemed a traitor. Indeed the printing and publishing of treasonable writings had been held long before this statute of George the Third to amount to the crime of high treason.⁴ And by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 1, all attempts upon the person of the queen, to injure her, shall be dealt with as cases of murder.⁵ By 1 Eliz. c. 1, s. 30, the third offence of affirming by printing, teaching, preaching, &c., that any foreign prince is pre-eminent in the realm, or of doing anything for the extolling of such jurisdiction, was made high treason. And by 3 Jac. 1, c. 4, s. 1, it is treason to absolve subjects from their allegiance, or to induce them to promise obedience to any foreign prince; and by sect. 23 of the same statute, the persons so absolved or promising obedience incur the same guilt, and all receivers, counsellors, &c. of such offences respectively come within the same dilemma.

The acts, therefore, of compassing and imagining under the 11 Vict. c. 12, expressed overtly, or by publications, or, as we shall see by and by, by open and advised speaking, are felonies and not treasons.

But the law stands as it did before with regard to the actual levying of war, and to the constructive treasons which such levy-

¹ Kel. 14. See 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 12.

² 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 21.

³ Made perpetual by 57 Geo. 3, c. 6, s. 1.

⁴ Amongst others, see R. v. Matthews, 9 St. Tr. 680. See East, P. C. 58.

⁵ Post.

ing substantiates. Therefore the doctrine laid down by Eyre, C. J., upon the trial of Tooke, that an attempt to subvert and alter the government and parliament without the consent of the legislature, was an attempt to depose the king, and a compassing of his death, because he would have been bound at all hazards to resist the usurpation,¹ is still good authority, if it be limited to the actual levying of war, and not to the mere compassing to levy war. So the gathering of men to compel the king to yield to certain demands, or remove ill counsellors, was held an overt act.² So again, any violent attempt to seize the king's person, and still more, an attempt to depose him, have long been recognized as overt acts of imagining his death, it being considered that, after the example of regicides, the temptation on the part of the traitors to take the life of a monarch in their power would be too strong to resist, and it is no defence to avow an absence of any intention to do a corporal hurt.³ So levying war is still treason.⁴ But it is not now treason, as formerly,⁵ merely to agree to bring in foreign forces, or to go abroad for that purpose,⁶ or prepare men and arms against the king's government, although to take such steps against the king himself would be a compassing of his death, and so treason. These, it is evident, must frequently be questions for the jury, and but for the humanity of the age, it would be very easy to overstep the bounds of felony and make a questionable act one of treason.⁷

Constructive treasons.] Treasons are substantive or 'constructive. To attempt the life of the sovereign directly, or to levy actual war upon him, are among the list of substantive treasons. To raise a general insurrection for the purpose of redressing an imaginary or a real grievance of a public nature, is an instance of constructive treason.

Now although a consultation to compass the king's death, &c., is treasonable,⁸ the nature of the evidence which goes to prove the consultation is rather to be considered in this place. Assent to the proposition is of itself a sufficient overt act,⁹ and if one, out of a number of conspirators, levy the forces, this is treason in all.¹⁰ And concealment, if united with circumstances which imply approbation of the proceeding, will raise an equal presumption.¹¹ It is, however, a question for the jury. An attendance at more than one meeting would, probably, be pregnant evidence of approval, whilst a casual visit at a house where such discussions were

¹ East, P. C. 60.

² R. v. The Earl of Essex, Kel. 21.

³ R. v. The Earls of Essex and Southampton, Mo. 620. R. v. Harding, 2 Vent. 315; East, P. C. 59.

⁴ R. v. Sir John Friend, 4 St. Tr. 606, vol. 13 of Howell.

⁵ R. v. Sir Wm. Parkyn, 4 St. Tr. 651; Treby, C. J.; Kel. 21.

⁶ R. v. Lord Preston, 4 St. Tr. 448, vol. 12 of Howell.

⁷ The prince regent was protected by 57 Geo. 3, c. 6.

⁸ R. v. Friend, Kel. 20; Holt, Ca. 681.

⁹ R. v. Somerville, 1 And. 104. See Id. 109; Kel. 21.

¹⁰ R. v. Throckmorton, Dy. 98.

¹¹ 1 Hawk. P. C. c. 20, s. 3; Kel. 21.

going on could by no means, independently of other circumstances, be connected with a guilty motive.¹ Although, in this latter case, it would become the duty of the individual to make an immediate discovery. Then, a fortiori, if the respective acts we have alluded to be treason, i.e., imagining the king's death, &c., the procuring of weapons, ammunition, or other instruments for effecting the traitorous purpose, will be within the 25 Ed. 3, c. 25, and 36 Geo. 3, c. 7.²

Meeting in a warlike manner, enlisting, marching, with many other such movements, may be overt acts of this species of treason. This would be levying war within the realm. And the realm comprehends the narrow seas and Wales. Treasons committed in Scotland are provided for by 4 Jac. 1, c. 1³ and 7 Jac. 1, c. 1, and in Ireland by 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67. The Isles of Man, Jersey, Guernsey, Sark, and Alderney, though parcel of the dominions of the crown, are not within the realm. And, therefore, enlisting men here to send over sea to assist the enemy was held not to be within the clauses as to levying war.⁴ The levying of war is, for the most part, a question of fact for the jury under the particular circumstances of each case.⁵ Where a person having a commission from the French king set out on a cruise, and surrounded a ship twice with guns and blunderbusses, it was considered to be strong evidence of a design to levy war, and so the jury found it.⁶ And it seems to be well understood, that there may be levying war without fighting.⁷ And, as we have seen in the case of compassing, it is no excuse to affirm that no harm was intended to the person of royalty,⁸ for the gravamen of the charge is the attack upon the office and authority of the sovereign. Moreover, this actual levying may be either offensive or defensive, for he who holds a place of strength against the king, or fortifies his own house with a similar intent, has evidently a will to act offensively as soon as he can, not to mention the positive resistance which he has prepared to make in case of an assault.⁹ Thus, Lord Essex, by fortifying his house and riding into London armed, and soliciting the citizens as he went, to join him, was guilty of two overt acts of treason.¹⁰ But it has been questioned whether barely detaining the king's castles or ships would be within the 25 Ed. 3. Lord Hale is of opinion, that this is not a levying of war,¹¹ and Foster, J., although he admits that such a detainer, if done in confederacy with enemies or rebels, would be treasonable, nevertheless does not deny Lord Hale's position. Although he adds, that if a fort be delivered up by treachery, and in combination with enemies, it is treason.¹² On the other hand, Sir Edward East

¹ East, P. C. 59.

² Id. 58; 1 Hawk. P. C. c. 17, s. 23.

³ Art. VIII.

⁴ R. v. Harding, 2 Vent. 315. See post, S. C.; 1 East, P. C. 76, 77.

⁵ East, P. C. 67.

⁶ R. v. Captain Vaughan, 5 St. Tr. 17, vol. 15 of Howell.

⁷ 1 Salk. 635.

⁸ 1 Hale, P. C. 145.

⁹ Id. 146.

¹⁰ Mo. 621.

¹¹ 1 Hale, P. C. 146.

¹² Fost. Cr. L. 219.

insists that the bare detainer is a holding against the king, "which is," he says, "as much an act of hostility and a throwing off of the allegiance due to him, as any of the ordinary preparations of war are admitted to fall within the description of levying war, though no act of force has been in fact exerted."¹ It is said, indeed, that "a conspiring to levy war in order to dethrone the king, which is the civil death of the king, is an overt act to prove the compassing the death of the king. But (that) a conspiring to levy war generally, is not an overt act to prove the compassing the death of the king, because there may be such a levying war as may be treasonable without any intention of deposing the king."² However, under the Act of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, the mere conspiring in such a case, not being a conspiracy to destroy the monarch, or to harm him, is, as we have seen, felony, and not treason.

Upon the trial of Frost, it was held that a mere demonstration to the magistracy of the strength of a particular party, in order to obtain the liberation of some prisoners, or to mitigate their sentence, was not treason. But, if added to that, other objects should appear, such as an attack upon the military, or the taking of a town, overt acts of treason would be manifest. That would be an insurrection accompanied by force; it would be of a general nature, which is a necessary ingredient in levying a war of a treasonable character, and an entry into a town under such circumstances would make the leader and his associates traitors.³ Again, to render aid to rebels, whether by active interference or private subsidy, is an act of treason. The proofs against Sir John Wedderburn were, that the Pretender's son appointed him collector of excise, and that he collected that impost for the use of the rebel army, and these were held sufficient.⁴ So, if arms and ammunition be forwarded to traitors, although such arms may be intercepted, the same rule will apply.⁵ So, again, sending intelligence to rebels is an overt act of levying war, and it is no answer to say that the treasonable communication never reached its destination.⁶

An idea, however, naturally occurs here, that an alliance with rebels may arise from necessity; for example, from a sense of personal danger, or from an apprehension of losing property, and it may be suggested, that the accused may not be privy to the traitorous designs. Yet with reference to the latter point, it seems, that the least signal of approval or of union with the rebels will go far to fix guilt on the parties present, and it will be for the jury particularly to decide on this point. Although, if there be a tumult in the street, which, in reality is the inception of an overt act of conspiracy, and persons, not privy to the plot, suddenly join, fling up their hats, and halloo,—these latter shall

¹ East, P. C. 69.

² R. v. Darrel, 10 Mod. 322.

³ R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 129.

⁴ Fost. Cr. L. 22.

⁵ East, P. C. 72.

⁶ R. v. Gregg, 10 St. Tr. App. 77.

receive a lenient consideration, and shall not be held answerable for more than a riot, unless they proceed to greater lengths.¹

As to personal fear: where the individual is menaced by death, or the dread of serious violence to himself, or perhaps to a near relative, he may rest his defence upon such a compulsion, as long as he remains under it. But he should be in a condition to show the continuance of the coercion, although Mr. Justice Foster adds, "I will not say that he is obliged to account for every day, week, or month."² And it will be a question for the jury whether he could at any time have conveniently effected his escape, or whether he was under so narrow a watch as to make his retreat dangerous. For it is not to be understood that the fear of present death must always operate in order to furnish an excuse; it is enough if, upon the whole, the party may be presumed to have remained amongst the rebels against his will.³ And supposing the accused to be an officer, a fact which raises a greater presumption against him than if he were a private man, the jury will be the proper judges of his willingness or reluctance to act upon the commission tendered him.⁴ The payment of contribution to traitors, in order to prevent the plunder of the country at large, is said to be excusable.⁵ Here, again, however, the apology has its limit, for no apprehension of damage to private property, nor of individual robbery, will serve as an answer to joining the rebel force, though such a circumstance may have its weight after the verdict. Several cases of this kind occurred during the rebellion of 1746. As where the threat was that houses should be burned, and the cattle of the tenants driven off, unless they would follow the rebel Duke of Perth, and the great power of the Scotch lords was earnestly urged. But by Lee, C. J., there is no tenure which obliges tenants to follow their lords into rebellion, and the prisoner was convicted.⁶ Sir Edward East observes also that even the compulsion or fear which operates to excuse will not apply to any other treason than that of joining with rebels or enemies.⁷ So that Axtell's plea of obedience to his superior officer, and so one of compulsion, availed him in nowise, because he was bound to disregard the command of a traitorous superior.⁸ And it is not an excuse upon a charge of murder to assert that if A., the accused, had not killed B., C. would not have immediately put A. to death.

However, besides the positive hostility demonstrated by the treason of levying war, there is an indirect or constructive levying of war. Whatever may have been the propriety of entertaining such a doctrine (and there have been able writers who have made it a matter of question), it is settled, that a general rising for the ¹ 1 Hawk. 91. See also 1 East, P. C. 66.

² Fost. Cr. L. 216.

³ R. v. The Accomplices of Sir John Oldcastle, Fost. Cr. L. 217; 1 Hale, P. C. 50.

⁴ R. v. Gordon, East, P. C. 71.

⁵ Id. 72.

⁶ R. v. M'Grouther, 1 Fost. Cr. L. 13.

⁷ East, P. C. 71.

⁸ Fost. 13.

purpose of redressing all grievances of a certain kind, or satisfying some private ill-will by a general vengeance, will amount to high treason.¹ Although it must be confessed, that the doctrine in question would be looked upon at the present day with coldness.

Consequently, a local or partial insurrection, however formidable, and even if attended with all the ensigns of military parade, will not create this serious offence if the purpose be merely limited to the destruction or removal of some one object of particular dislike. Even a general commotion (if it were possible) in order to suppress a particular market, or prostrate an inclosure, or abate a nuisance, would not be treasonable. Whilst, on the other hand, a rising, comparatively far less general, would suffice if the aims of the rioters were directed against measures of a public nature. Thus, where people in Yorkshire and Northumberland were determined to resist the militia law, and stirred up a riot for that purpose, they were convicted of treason, because their purpose was indirectly to weaken the power of the sovereign by disregarding his ordinances.² So where a rabble went to Lambeth to surprise Archbishop Laud, who was a privy councillor, because of some measures which the king had adopted, at the instigation, as it was supposed, of the archbishop, it was held to be treason, as being a violent attempt to depress the kingly authority in the person of his privy councillor.³ So to rescue a party imprisoned upon a charge of high treason, and à fortiori if convicted, is high treason.⁴ So an attempt by intimidation and violence to obtain the repeal of a law was deemed high treason before the passing of the 36 Geo. 3, c. 7, which made that act a substantive offence.⁵ And notwithstanding the 11 Vict. c. 12, a similar attempt attended with violence would be deemed an attempt against the person of the sovereign, and, consequently, treason. Again, although the riot be unconnected with matters relating to the government, yet if it should embrace in its alleged purpose a general abolition of certain property which has given dissatisfaction, the crime of constructive levying of war will have been committed. As where, in 1675, the weavers destroyed the engine looms which caused ribands to be made at a much cheaper rate, because one man could do as much in one day with, as twenty men could without them. Here it was held, by five judges, that as the object was the destruction of all the looms, and not in one county only, but in several, the prisoners were guilty of treason. Five judges, however, were of the contrary opinion.⁶ So where a

¹ Poph. 122.

² East, P. C. 73.

³ R. v. Benstead, Cro. Car. 583; East, P. C. 73.

⁴ 2 Hawk. 267.

⁵ R. v. Lord George Gordon, 2 Dougl. 591; East, P. C. 60. R. v. Hardy, Tooke, and others.

⁶ R. v. The Apprentices, 1 Hale, P. C. 143; absent, Windham and Atkins, JJ.; 2 And. 4; see Id. 66. The case of inclosures under the statute 13 Eliz., now expired, Poph. 122.

mob assembled in order to pull down all bawdy-houses, the same rule was adopted.¹ But two persons who were found by the special verdict not to have done any forcible act, but who were merely stated to have been present, were discharged.² So to set a price upon victuals,³ to conspire generally for the advance of wages,⁴ to rescue all soldiers from prison,⁵ together with other acts of a similar description, are treasonable deeds. So where there was a rising with the avowed intention of destroying all meeting houses, the same doctrine prevailed, for first, the offence was in defiance of the law, and so within the rule in Kelyng; and secondly, as Protestant dissenters were under the protection of the law since the Toleration Act, the insurrection was considered a public declaration of the rabble against the Act.⁶ And with respect to Purchase, all the judges except three, held, that although he was not concerned in the original rising, yet that his encouragement of the mob, his assaulting the commanding officer with his drawn sword, and striking several of the horses with the same weapon, were sufficient to warrant his conviction.⁷ The three dissenting judges⁸ considered him to be not guilty of treason, because it had not been expressly found that he was aiding and assisting or present at the demolition of any meeting house, though they agreed that when Purchase joined the mob, the acts of treason were in continuance.⁹ But where a mob at Norwich rose in consequence of the high price of provisions, and did many acts of damage, Wilmot, C. J., observed that they had not committed treason. There was, said the learned judge, no universality of purpose to destroy, a circumstance which distinguishes a rebellious from a common mob.¹⁰

Adhering to the king's enemies in his realm, and aiding them in the realm or elsewhere.] In R. v. Harding we have seen¹¹ that enlisting persons here to serve abroad is not within the clause of 25 Ed. 3 against levying war. But it was held that such conduct was adhering to the king's enemies, and an overt act of compassing the king's death, and the prisoner was executed; and Lord Preston, who was taken within the realm with treasonable papers, was charged upon the breach of the statute 25 Ed. 3, as well as with levying war, the traitorous correspondence being laid as an overt act of each species of treason.¹²

¹ R. v. Messenger and others, by eleven judges, diss. Hall, C. B. Kel. 70.

² Id. 79.

³ Poph. 122.

⁴ 1 Hale, P. C. 153.

⁵ 2 Ventr. 251, per Hale, C. J.

⁶ R. v. Damaree and Purchase, Fost. Cr. L. 213.

⁷ Id. 217.

⁸ Trevor, C. J., Powell, J., Price, B.

⁹ East, P. C. 75.

¹⁰ Drinkwater v. London Assurance, 2 Wils. 363.

¹¹ Ante, 2 Ventr. 315.

¹² Fost. Cr. L. 198. R. v. Gregg, 1 Burr. 640; by Lord Mansfield in R. v. Hensey.

The test of adherence is any aid or assistance given to the enemy, whether it be by surrendering a castle, or selling arms, or cruising for the purpose of destroying the king's subjects,¹ by carrying off or destroying the king's stores in conjunction with enemies, or giving intelligence to the enemy how to shape their defence or attacks:² all these are acts of treason, although it was once ingeniously urged that to advise a foreign enemy against an invasion by representing the improbability of success, could not be considered treasonable, but rather praiseworthy than otherwise. The court, however, directed the jury to form a judgment as to the intent, because notwithstanding that the intelligence might be beneficial, yet if it tended to assist the enemy, the act of treason would be accomplished.³ So if persons living abroad in time of peace were to assist the enemy in case of a rupture, they would come within the latter part of this clause, and if they should refuse to return home upon privy seal or proclamation, their neglect might be evidence of aid and comfort to the enemy.⁴ But a refusal to render assistance to the king is not like an active agency in opposition to him, and therefore, although a high misdemeanor, it is not within the clause of adhering.⁵

By 2 & 3 Ann. c. 20, s. 34, it is made treason for any officer or soldier out of England, or upon the sea, to hold correspondence with any rebel or enemy, by letters, messages, signs, tokens, or otherwise, or to enter into any condition with enemies without authority. It is, however, not an offence within the statutes of treason to give succour to a rebel qua rebel, and not enemy, out of the realm, for the law in this respect is construed strictly.⁶

Compassing the death of the queen or of her eldest son and heir.] Upon this clause Lord Hale observes, that the queen contemplated by the statute must be a queen consort.⁷ Therefore a divorce à mensâ et thoro will take the case out of the statute.⁸ So will a divorce à vinculo matrimonii causâ affinitatis; and Lord Hale adds, that the case of such a divorce causâ adulterii, need not be put, because in that case the queen herself would have committed high treason.⁹ And a queen dowager is not within the Act.¹⁰ As to the eldest son and heir, Sir Edward East, citing from Hale, lays it down that these words include "second born son after the death of the elder, and the like of the rest."¹¹ And if the king should marry again, so that the surviving son would be neither eldest in point of

¹ R. v. Vaughan, [cruising,] 1 Hawk. 91; 5 St. Tr. 37, vol. 15 of Howell. R. v. Evans, [cruising,] East, P. C. 80.

² R. v. Stone, 6 St. Tr. 27, vol. 25 of Howell.

³ Id.

⁴ East, P. C. 80, 81; and see 1 Hale, P. C. 165, 167.

⁵ See 1 Hawk. 149; East, P. C. 80.

⁶ 1 Hawk. 92.

⁷ 1 Hale, P. C. 124.

⁸ East, P. C. 64.

⁹ 1 Hale, P. C. 124.

¹⁰ Id.

¹¹ East, P. C. 64.

birth nor the son of the new queen, still he is the eldest son within the statute 25 Ed. 3.¹ And it would seem probable that the eldest son of the prince, after the death of his father, might be the king's eldest son within the Act.² And so again the eldest son of a queen regnant is certainly included.³ But not a collateral heir apparent,⁴ nor the eldest daughter, although there be no son, for a son may be after born,⁵ unless indeed there be a special provision for that purpose by an Act of parliament.⁶ With reference to the compassing, this distinction is taken. The king is above the coercion of the law, but the queen and prince are subjects of the crown, so that to compass the imprisonment of the queen or prince for a lawful purpose, is not treason.⁷ So that such an act must be where a man without due process of law expressly compasseth the wounding or death of these personages by force or poison.⁸

Violating the king's companion, or the king's eldest daughter unmarried, or the wife of the king's eldest son and heir.] As to the queen, it seems that these words do not extend to a queen dowager, nor to a princess dowager,⁹ nor to the eldest daughter, if a widow,¹⁰ nor to the princess consort after the coverture.¹¹ But an eldest surviving daughter is within the Act, though there be sons,¹² and the eldest son and daughter of a queen regnant are within the same provision.¹³

Killing the king's officers.] By 25 Ed. 3, st. 5, c. 2, if a man slay the chancellor, treasurer, or the king's justices of one bench or the other, justices in eyre, or justices of assize, and all other justices assigned to hear and determine, being in their places, doing their offices, he shall be guilty of high treason. The barons of the Exchequer are said to be virtually included here.¹⁴ And so the lord keeper of the great seal when there is no chancellor.¹⁵ And the lord commissioners of the great seal.¹⁶ But not justices of the peace.¹⁷ By 7 Ann. c. 21, s. 8, a similar protection is given to the lords of sessions or justiciary of Scotland during the exercise of their offices. It is to be remarked, that a mere striking or wounding is not within the Act.¹⁸ Although the offender is guilty of a

¹ 1 Hale, P. C. 125.

² 1 Hale, P. C. 125, 126, 129.

³ East, P. C. 64.

⁴ 1 Hale, 125.

⁵ Id. 126.

⁶ Id. 125; East, P. C. 64.

⁷ 1 Hale, P. C. 127.

⁸ Id. 128.

⁹ East, P. C. 65.

¹⁰ Id. Lord Hale makes a qu. ? P. C. 128, but concludes against the widow, 129.

¹¹ East, P. C. 65.

¹² 1 Hale, P. C. 129.

¹³ East, P. C. 65; and see 1 Hawk. 89.

¹⁴ East, P. C. 88; 4 Com. 84, contra. See 1 Hale, P. C. 231.

¹⁵ 1 Hale, P. C. 231.

¹⁶ See 1 Wm. & M. sess. 1, c. 21.

¹⁷ 1 Hale, P. C. 231.

¹⁸ 3 Inst. 18.

very great crime and would be punished, as in a case of wounding. And the violence must be done while the officers are in the execution of their duty, which, in the case of the chancellor, is construed to be whenever the seal is open, whether in the Court of Chancery or in his own house.¹ And the same rule would seem to apply to the judges sitting in chambers, but the opinions of the most eminent lawyers appear to unite in limiting this provision of the statute to courts. Thus, Lord Coke says, that this killing is treason, because sitting judicially in their places (that is, in the king's courts), these officers represent the king's person.² And Lord Hale doubts expressly whether the lord treasurer, sitting in his house for the dispatch of business, can be said to be in his place.³ Lastly, it is added by Coke, that the Act extends only to the persons particularly named,⁴ not even to the High Court of Parliament, nor to the Court of the Admiralty, nor to any other, indeed, than those described. It is "casus omissus" in all other instances.⁵ If several conspire to kill one of these officers, and one only of them slays, it is treason in all.⁶

Of the indictments under 25 Ed. 3, st. 5, c. 2.] The indictments under these sections are as follow :—That A., being a subject of our lady the queen, on, &c., and on divers other days and times, did, together with divers other persons, whose names are at present unknown to the jurors aforesaid, traitorously compass and imagine the death of our said lady the queen, and the said traitorous compassing, &c. did then traitorously express and declare by divers overt acts hereinafter mentioned, that is to say, in order to fulfil, &c. his said most wicked treason and treasonable compassing, &c., he, the said A. did, and the said several persons aforesaid traitorously did, meet and consult together [set out the overt acts], contrary to the duty of his allegiance, against the form, &c., and against the peace, &c.

Second count :—And the jurors, &c., that A. being a subject, &c. on, &c., together with, &c., did traitorously compass, imagine, invent, devise, and intend the death [imprisonment] of our said lady the queen, and the said traitorous compassing, &c. did then traitorously express, &c. by divers overt acts hereinafter mentioned, that is to say [state the overt acts], contrary, &c.

A count for levying war is similarly framed. It states, amongst other things, that the prisoner came with a multitude, armed and arrayed in a warlike manner, and levied war.⁷

An indictment for adhering to the king's enemies sets out, that an open and public war was carried out between his majesty and

¹ East, P. C. 88 ; 1 Hale, 232.

² 3 Inst. 18.

³ 1 Hale, P. C. 232.

⁴ Except where special provisions have included other officers, as we have just seen.

⁵ 1 Hale, P. C. 230.

⁶ Id.

⁷ Stark. Cr. Pl. 380 ; East, P. C. 116.

another monarch, and that the prisoner, being a subject, and withdrawing his allegiance, and intending to aid and assist the monarch aforesaid, being an enemy to the king, was maliciously and traitorously adhering to and aiding and comforting that monarch, and that in the prosecution of his treason he did (the overt acts set out in the indictment), contrary to the duty of his allegiance, &c.

Time and place.] The day laid is not material, provided the treason be proved to have been committed before the finding of the bill.¹ And as to the place, it is necessary to lay it within the county where the trial is had.² We have seen above that the overt acts should be carefully set out. It would not suffice to allege, generally, that the prisoner compassed the king's death, or levied war, &c. Such a charge would be too uncertain. It is to the overt acts that the prisoner must lend his attention, for they constitute the real charges against him.³ But where the indictment charged that P. and D., with a multitude of 500, to the jury unknown, armed and arrayed in a warlike manner, with clubs and staves, and other arms, offensive and defensive, levied war against the queen, it was held sufficient, because levying war is of itself an overt act of treason, and it did appear in the indictment, that war had actually been levied.⁴ So to state that certain parties met and proposed the king's death will be good, without particularizing the means.⁵ And further, one species of treason may be laid and proved as an overt act of another, as if upon a charge of compassing the king's death, the overt act were to express a levying of war, or adhering to enemies. It is therefore enough to add something explanatory of the general charge of treason, the more correct and safe course of doing which is by setting out overt acts, although, as in the case of Purchase, it may, under certain circumstances, be done otherwise.

So that it is not by any means necessary to enter into a full detail of the proofs intended to be offered. The statute of 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3, does not require the statement of any facts in addition to those necessary to the support of the charge before that Act passed, and, therefore, a reasonable certainty, so as to apprise the prisoner of the accusation against him, will satisfy the ends of justice.⁶ To illustrate this point, it may be added that where the treason consists in correspondence or in declarations, the substance and purport only of the letters or declarations need be mentioned.⁷ And, in charging a traitorous correspondence beyond the seas, it is proper to allege that the letters were sent from the place where

¹ R. v. Townley, Fost. 8. R. v. Lord Balmerino, Id. 9.

² East, P. C. 125.

³ East, P. C. 116.

⁴ R. v. Purchase, Id.

⁵ R. v. Rookwood, 4 St. Tr. 696, vol. 13 of Howell.

⁶ See East, P. C. 121.

⁷ Id. 123, citing R. v. Coleman, 2 St. Tr. 661. R. v. Lord Preston,

4 St. Tr. 411, vol. 12 of Howell.

R. v. Francia, 6 St. Tr. 93. R. v.

Laver, Id. 330, vol. 16 of Howell.

the venue is laid, in order that they should be delivered abroad to the enemy.¹

The treason itself should be laid to have been done traitorously, but it is not necessary to lay every overt act to have been so prosecuted.² But "seditiously" will not be good without "traitorously," and, indeed, the former word is inapplicable, And it is usual to conclude, "against the duty of his allegiance," although some have been of opinion that the omission of these words would not be fatal where the treason is declared by statute.³ And it is agreed that the general word "allegiance" is better than to use the expression "natural allegiance,"⁴ for it includes any kind of allegiance, and, in the case of an alien, the introduction of the word "natural" might embarrass the indictment.⁵ Sir Edward East considers that the word "natural" might be rejected as surplusage.⁶

It is competent for the court to allow the withdrawal of the plea of not guilty, and to suffer a plea of guilty to be recorded,⁷ and, by special mandate from the crown, the attorney-general may come and confess the truth of a plea of not guilty, upon which the prisoner will, probably, be discharged.⁸

Copy of indictment, &c.] A copy of the indictment and a list of the witnesses and jurors must be delivered to the prisoner.

By 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 1, and 7 Ann. c. 21, s. 11, every person who shall be accused and indicted for high treason causing corruption of blood, or for misprision of any such treason, shall have a true copy of the whole indictment, and of the jury, also a list of the witnesses that shall be produced on the trial (mentioning the names, profession, and place of abode of the said witnesses and jurors), delivered to him ten days at least before the trial, in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, whereby to enable him to advise with counsel thereupon, to plead and make his defence, paying a sum not exceeding 5s. for the copy; and every such person so accused and indicted, arraigned or tried, for any such treason or misprision, shall be received and admitted to make his full defence by counsel,⁹ and to make any proof that he can produce by lawful witness, who shall then be upon oath, for his defence; and in case any person so accused or indicted shall desire counsel, the court before whom such person shall be tried, or some judge of that court, shall and is hereby authorized and required, immediately upon his request,

¹ R. v. Dr. Hensey, 1 Burr. 646.

² East, P. C. 116.

³ See 1 Hawk. 86. R. v. Jackson, 4 Mod. 166; 12 Mod. 51; 1 Ld. Raym. 1.

⁴ Fost. Cr. L. 186.

⁵ R. v. Cranburn, Fost. Cr. L. 186; 1 Salk. 633.

⁶ East, P. C. 115.

⁷ R. v. Knightly, Holt's Ca. 398.

⁸ R. v. Lady Oglethorpe, 11 Mod. 114.

⁹ All of whom may address the jury. R. v. Collins, 5 C. & P. 305. R. v. Atkins, Id. 310. And R. v. Brunt was cited.

to assign to such person such and so many counsel, not exceeding two, as such person shall desire, to whom such counsel shall have free access at all seasonable hours.

And further, by 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 21, and 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 7, when any person is indicted for treason or misprision of treason, in any court other than the Court of Queen's Bench, a list of the petit jury, mentioning the names, profession, and place of abode of the jurors, shall be given at the same time that the copy of the indictment is delivered to the party indicted, which shall be ten days before the arraignment, and in the presence of two or more credible witnesses; and when any person is indicted for treason or misprision of treason in the Court of Queen's Bench, a copy of the indictment shall be delivered within the time and in the manner aforesaid; but the list of the petit jury, made out as aforesaid, may be delivered to the party indicted at any time after the arraignment, so as the same be delivered ten days before the day of trial.

The stat. 7 Ann. c. 21, s. 11, was extended to Ireland in consequence of the case of R. v. O'Brien, and the decision in the House of Lords.¹

Witnesses.] It is a rule founded upon various Acts of the legislature,² that there must be two witnesses in order to warrant a conviction, "or unless the party shall without violence confess the same."³ The statute of William requires these two witnesses in all cases of treason attended with corruption of blood, and misprision, and either or both may testify to the same overt act, or one of them to one, and the other of them to another overt act of the same treason.⁴ This law was laid down by the judges before the passing of the 7 Will. 3, c. 3.⁵ Assassination, or attempts against the life of the sovereign, are always excepted.⁶ But if two or more distinct species of treasons be alleged in the same indictment, one witness to prove one treason, and another to prove another, shall not be deemed to be two witnesses to the same treason within the Act.⁷ Still, according to the statute, two witnesses to the same overt act of the same treason will suffice.⁸ And the witnesses are not confined to overt acts done in the county where the trial is had, or, under a special commission, where the overt acts are laid. Certainly one overt act must be proved in such a county, because it is the foundation of the charge before the grand jury, but this

¹ 17 & 18 Vict. c. 26. O'Brien v. Reg. 2 H. L. Ca. 465; Taylor on Evidence, 1109.

² 1 Edw. 6, c. 12, s. 22; 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 11, s. 12; 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 2. This last rule, i. e., distributing the testimony, was insisted upon for the first time by Sir T. Widdington for the prosecution in R. v. Love, Fost. Cr. L. 235.

³ Statutes of Edw. 6, ut supra.

⁴ The exceptions are, confession, standing mute, or challenge beyond thirty-five. 7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 2.

⁵ East, P. C. 129.

⁶ 57 Geo. 3, c. 6, s. 4.

⁷ 7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 4.

⁸ East, P. C. 130.

being done, another witness may prove another overt act of the same species of treason in another county,¹ and this even if such overt act last mentioned be not laid in the indictment, provided it tend to the proof of the overt acts which were laid.² And any fact necessary to the support of the indictment, as that the party is a natural born subject, which is a collateral circumstance, and not an overt act, may be proved by one witness.³ It seems, that as under 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 93, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, the trial is to take place as in cases of murder, one witness only would be sufficient. But Sir Edward East remarks, that the right of two witnesses rests as well upon 1 Ed. 6, c. 12, and 5 & 6 Ed. 6, c. 11, as upon 7 Will. 3, c. 3, and that the statute 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 10, which ordained the trial of treasons according to the common law, did not repeal the Acts of Edward, but, on the contrary, went to restore the common-law trial in the proper county, together with the peremptory challenge of thirty-five.⁴ Whence he would infer, that the 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 93, by neglecting to exclude the statute of Ed. 6, had failed to accomplish the purpose intended, that is, to restrict the proof to one witness. However, the principal point in difference upon the statute of William above referred to relates to the confession. The words are, "Unless the prisoner shall, willingly and without violence, [in open court,] confess the same." It has occurred to those who from time to time have been intrusted with the defence of unfortunate men charged with treason, that a confession made out of court ought not to be received in court as in cases of felony, although two witnesses might be called to give evidence of such confession. In the case of Willis, who was acquitted, Ward, C. B., much inclined to the objection, observing, at the same time, that if the treason were proved by two witnesses aliunde, the confession should not be excluded.⁵ And Lord Hale says expressly, that the examination of a prisoner before a magistrate in a case of treason is not allowable in evidence, inasmuch as the statute requires two witnesses to be produced upon the arraignment.⁶ And upon another occasion, Foster, J., intimated considerable doubts as to the propriety of receiving a confession made out of court, whilst Willes, C. J., and Abney, J., considered that such a confession, deposed to by two witnesses, would be receivable.⁷ Whence it seems to follow that one witness to an overt act, and one to prove a confession to the same overt act, or of any other overt act, would not be sufficient

¹ R. v. Deacon, by Abney and Smith, East, P. C. 130; Fost. Foster, JJ., Fost. Cr. L. 10; East, Cr. L. 242.

² R. v. Deacon, Fost. 9, 10; and 1 Salk. 634. R. v. Garan, 2 St. Tr. 873. R. v. Jellias, East, P. C. 130. R. v. Layer, 6 State Trials, 314, vol. 16 of Howell. ⁴ East, P. C. 128. ⁵ 8 State Trials, 255, vol. 15 of Howell. R. v. Crossfield, 26 Howell's State Trials, 55; Taylor on Evidence, 714.

³ R. v. Vaughan, 5 State Trials, 38, vol. 15 of Howell. R. v. see Id. 240, 244. ⁶ 1 Hale, P. C. 306. ⁷ R. v. Berwick, Fost. 10 And to warrant a conviction. For the confession would, upon such an occasion, be like another species of treason, that is to say, it would be a matter so foreign to the ordinary mode of proving overt acts as to come within the same rule. Nevertheless, the judges had agreed in 1716 that this doctrine of admitting confessions made out of court was sound.¹ And in R. v. Gregg, a considerable majority had sanctioned a similar conclusion.² And the only difference which the case of Francia seems to have introduced was, that by the old ruling the confession ought to have been made before a justice, or some one in authority, whereas in that case it was decided that such a confession might be proved by two witnesses, even although it had been communicated to a private person. Therefore, we may conclude that confessions are now governed by the same rules in treason as in felony, provided that more than one witness is brought forward to substantiate them. And with respect to the confirmation of an accomplice, persons who give information upon repentance, or with an original design to detect the conspiracy, are not to be looked upon in that light, although their evidence may be viewed with some degree of disfavour.³ A promise of pardon will not disqualify a witness from giving his evidence in a case of high treason.⁴

Limitation of time.] By 7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 5, no person shall be prosecuted for treason, or misprision, unless the indictment be found by a grand jury within three years next after the treason done or committed. Unless by sect. 6, he be guilty of designing, endeavouring, or attempting any assassination on the body of the king by poison or otherwise. In 1715, after the nomination of the special commission in England, another special commission was sent into Scotland for the purpose of finding bills of indictment in the proper counties and stewartries, in order to arrest this period of limitation.⁵

Jurisdiction. Foreign treason.] The statutes of Hen. 8,⁶ provide that treasons committed out of the realm may be tried here in the Court of King's Bench, or before commissioners, as if such treasons had been committed in England. And the statute 5 & 6 Ed. 6, c. 11, s. 6, follows the same rule. Although repealed as to constructive treasons, the 26 Hen. 8, c. 13, survives as to the trial of foreign treasons.

Evidence.] The evidence to be produced in cases of treason, which must be confined to matters before the finding of the indict-

¹ R. v. Francia, East, P. C. 133. Trials, 489. Cited, Taylor on Ev.

² Id. 134, by Holt, C. J., and five judges. Lord Trevor, contra, Tracey, J., dub., three absent.

³ R. v. Despard, 28 How. State

⁴ R. v. Darrel, 10 Mod. 321.

⁵ East, P. C. 109.

⁶ 26 Hen. 8, c. 13, s. 4; 35 Hen. 8, c. 2, s. 1.

ment,¹ consists either of acts or words,² and the parties against whom it is to be offered are either chief conspirators or their accomplices. For, although it is true that all are principals in treason, we shall have presently to notice some distinctions between the adviser and counsellor of a traitorous act, and the party importuned to commit the treason, the principle being how far the acts of one conspirator will bind the rest. With respect to words, the proceedings which in ancient times were not uncommon upon this score, are now nearly obsolete, although if one were to declare that he would kill the sovereign, and were to make a movement apparently tending to that purpose, as coming to London, the journey would be laid as an overt act, and the words would be tendered in evidence as explanatory of the fact; and that was the rule in an old case where the words spoken, at Lisbon, were, "I will kill the King of England if I can come to him." The coming over was charged as an overt act.³ This doctrine seems still sound, but there has been a considerable difference of opinion as to bare words, and since the temper of moderate times would bear strongly against a severe construction of words referable to treason, perhaps it may be sufficient merely to refer to the text writers upon that point,⁴ although it had been long considered that words, unless they related to a treasonable act or design in agitation, amounted only to a misdemeanor.⁵

Still, words, a seditious speech, for example, although not set out as an overt act, may be admitted in evidence upon a charge of treason.⁶ If one overt act be well laid and proved it will be sufficient. It is no objection to say, that part of the allegations of the treason is ill-stated, if proof be had of the principal features of the transaction. In such a case the rest would be surplusage.⁷ And we have seen, that if an overt act be proved in the county where the prisoner is tried, it is competent to go into the investigation of similar acts in any other county.⁸ And the acts of one conspirator are evidence against all.⁹

By 7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 8, no evidence shall be given of any overt act not laid in the indictment. Not that a circumstance which is of itself an overt act must be excluded if it tend directly to prove an overt act well laid, but that an independent overt act, even although it relate to the same species of treason charged, shall not be brought forward unless it be laid in the indictment. Upon a charge of compassing the king's death it was deemed quite competent to give a list of names in evidence, the prisoner's name being at the head of the list as commander, although the fact did

¹ R. v. Charnock, Holt's Ca. 301. R. v. Alcocke, 1 Keb. 231.

² R. v. Perkins, Holt's Ca. 683.

³ R. v. Crohagan, Cro. Car. 332; Fost. Cr. L. 202.

⁴ 1 Hale, P. C. 111; 1 Hawk. 93; East, P. C. 117; 4 Com. 79.

⁵ R. v. Pine, Cro. Car. 117.

⁶ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 132.

⁷ East, P. C. 124.

⁸ Ante.

⁹ R. v. Stone, 6 T. R. 527. R. v. Hardy, cited, Id. 528. R. v. Tooke, cited, Id.

not appear in the indictment, because it was good proof of an overt act to provide forty men for the purpose of killing the king, which last-mentioned overt act was laid.¹ But an overt act of conspiring abroad to destroy the king, and not alleged, could not be offered to support an act of compassing here, if there were no union between the two events, although they both relate to the same species of treason. And where Captain Vaughan was accused of cruising against the king's subjects in a certain vessel, it was not permitted to be shown, that he had cut away the custom-house barge, which was another vessel, in order to go out cruising in that.² Where it was charged as an overt act that the prisoner discharged a pistol loaded with powder and a bullet at the sovereign, thereby compassing and attempting her life, the jury were directed that they need not limit themselves to the strict meaning of a bullet. Anything which might be classed with what is understood to be a bullet would satisfy the indictment. But they must be satisfied that there was something beyond powder and wadding, to make good the charge of firing a pistol loaded with powder, &c.³

The onus of proof, it will be remembered, lies on the crown. The prisoner need not explain or show the meaning of his acts, unless the crown has first laid the foundation by making these acts evidence of treason.⁴ It may be observed, that anything said or done by a conspirator in furtherance of the common object is evidence against the accused, another conspirator, whether he were present or absent.⁵

We now come to writings, and here it may be said, that there is a distinction in some cases between such as are published, and those which are found upon the parties, and especially where they have been found subsequently to the apprehension of the prisoner.⁶ Because the papers might not have been in existence at the time of the apprehension. But articles secreted, though found after the apprehension, are subject to a different rule, and the finding of such articles may be proved in evidence.⁷

If a paper unconnected with any treasonable design be discovered, although its contents may be dangerous to the throne, it will not, per se, be evidence to support an indictment for treason, much less will it avail as an overt act, whereas if it refer to some purpose in agitation it may actually be read against the prisoner, or be alleged as an overt act.⁸ Still, whether it may be so read only on the ground of its close connection with the conspiracy, may be a question. Seditious questions and answers, found in the possession of a conspirator but not published, were objected to as ¹ R. v. Rookwood, 4 State Trials, 662, vol. 13 of Howell. R. v. Lowick, Id. 718. R. v. Deacon, Fost. Cr. L. 9. R. v. Wedderburn, Id. 22.

² R. v. Vaughan, 5 State Trials, 22, vol. 15 of Howell.

³ R. v. Oxford, 9 C. & P. 525.

⁴ R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 129.

⁵ R. v. Brandreth, 32 How. State Trials, 857; Taylor on Ev. 488.

⁶ R. v. Tooke, Leach, 823, cited.

⁷ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 137.

⁸ See East, P. C. 119, citing several authorities, and R. v. Sidney.

evidence, and the attorney-general withdrew the paper, the court entertaining some doubt on the point. But they said that if any use had been designed to have been made of the paper in furtherance of the treason, there could have been no doubt.¹ And no proof of handwriting is requisite.² Where the prisoner took away twenty-five placards from a printer's, one of those remaining was allowed to be read without further proof, and without giving the prisoner notice to produce the twenty-five.³ But unpunishable as the possession of an improper writing may be in the closet, no sooner does it see the light than the very fact of publishing may be an overt act, or evidence of treason, according to circumstances. Thus if the tendency of the piece be the dethronement of the monarch, or the incitement of the people to accomplish his destruction, or to levy war against him, it is, ipso facto, a treasonable writing, and may be treated so and used as evidence. And so it was held when the prisoner had been active in distributing a book, containing, amongst other things, an address to the people urging them to take up arms against the king and his family.⁴ So again if the writing in question should have reference to some plot or traitorous design; here, as such a paper might be used if found unpublished, it may, à fortiori, be made a ground of accusation in its printed form.⁵ Thus pamphlets containing republican opinions, and distributed by the prisoner during the existence of a supposed conspiracy, were admitted in evidence.⁶ Whilst the prisoner, Horne Tooke, was permitted, on his part, to produce a book written by him and printed in 1782, which refuted the idea that every man was entitled to an equal share in the government of the country, and which was in commendation of the regal and aristocratic parts of the constitution.⁷ Although Lord Ellenborough once said, that he very much doubted whether he should, under similar circumstances, have admitted such evidence.⁸ And proof of one treasonable letter is sufficient to support an indictment for writing several such letters, in like manner as evidence of attending one traitorous consultation will satisfy a charge of assisting at more than one such.⁹ A witness may give evidence of the contents of part of a paper which he may have happened to see.¹⁰ It is not competent to require a crown witness, upon cross-examination, to state, either directly or indirectly, through what channel he made a disclosure to the government.¹¹

¹ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 141; and R. v. Sidney was mentioned as stronger in favour of such evidence.

² East, P. C. 119.

³ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 129.

⁴ R. v. Twyn, Kel. 22.

⁵ East, P. C. 119, 120.

⁶ R. v. Hardy and others, Id. 61.

⁷ R. v. Hardy and others, East, P. C. 61.

⁸ 2 Campb. 400.

⁹ See the observations of Lord Ellenborough, 2 Campb. 400.

¹⁰ Leach, 300. R. v. Laver, cited.

¹¹ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 135; and by Lord Ellenborough: "Lord Kenyon had decided the same in R. v. Stone," Id. 136.

Accomplices.] We will here advert for a moment to the law of treason as it respects accomplices. The principle is, that if it be shown satisfactorily that a treason has been committed, the act of one conspirator is evidence against all his fellows. And hence, upon such proof given, the procurer may be tried before the actor. But the union of purpose must be demonstrated. Where there had been an insurrection in the North, and another in the West Riding of Yorkshire, but each party was entirely ignorant of the purpose of the acts of the other, it was agreed that the former could not be implicated in the latter.¹ Yet it was settled at the same time that where several agree to levy war, all are guilty of treason, notwithstanding that all do not appear in arms.² In the case of the Corresponding Society, and the society for constitutional information, of which latter Horne Tooke was a member, letters addressed from similar societies in different parts of the country to the secretary of these two societies, together with the minutes of the societies last mentioned, were read as evidence of a general conspiracy. And other documentary proof of a similar nature was allowed, as well as the second part of the "Rights of Man," for which the Constitutional Society had tendered their thanks to the author—for the purpose of connecting the prisoner with the transactions of the societies.³ So, in order to connect the accused with one Jackson, a paper in the handwriting of one G., the prisoner's clerk, was permitted to be read, upon proof that it contained parts of certain papers which the prisoner had obtained from two gentlemen named Vaughan and Smith.⁴ Whilst the court rejected, on the other hand, a paper in the same handwriting, and found in the same possession, in the absence of the proof above given, for G. might have been called to show that he had written it by the direction of the prisoner.⁵ With regard to this latter paper, Sir Edward East observes, that if it had appeared to have related to the conspiracy in question, it must have undergone, in that stage of the trial, a different consideration.⁶

The prosecutor may either prove the conspiracy which makes the acts of conspirators evidence, or he may prove the acts of the parties separately, and thus elicit the conspiracy. Thus when it was shown that a party of persons had assembled, and that the prisoner joined the party on the following day, the counsel for the prosecution was allowed to ask what directions one of the party gave at the meeting, such as where they were to go, and for what purpose.⁷ An armed party having attacked an hotel, the prisoner called a witness to prove that the object of the attack was merely to obtain a surrender of certain prisoners, then in custody. Upon this the crown were allowed to call evidence in reply, to prove that

¹ East, P. C. 97.

² Id. 98.

³ Id. 98.

⁴ R. v. Stone, 6 T. R. 529. See

² Stark. 140. R. v. Watson, 5 Esp. 125.

⁵ R. v. Stone, 6 T. R. 529.

⁶ East, P. C. 100.

⁷ R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 149.

certain words, i. e. "surrender up your prisoners," were not spoken at the hotel gate.¹

Bearing in mind that a treason must be committed in order to involve one person in the guilt of another, it is impossible that the aider and abettor can be a principal unless he himself or his confederates have perpetrated some traitorous act. As if A. should solicit B. to adhere to the king's enemies, and B. do not follow the advice so given; here A. cannot be a principal in treason, because B. did not commit the proposed crime, and the suggestion is not treasonable in itself, without more. But if A. solicit B. to compass the king's death, or to levy war against him, although B. refuse to comply, A. is here a principal, inasmuch as he evidently shows, in his own person, an intent to destroy the king, which is a substantive treason, and his inciting B. is an overt act of that treason. And so if B. accede, A. may be tried before B., since the rule that in treason all are principals then applies.² But, moreover, the limitation of this maxim, i. e., that all are principals, as before mentioned, is still stronger in the case of comforters after the fact. Here two things must be proved,—the commission of the treason, and the guilty knowledge of the harbourer. Consequently, if one be charged with encouraging a traitor, it will be a good defence to allege, that the principal has not been convicted,³ and it is for the crown to prove that fact in the first instance by the record. Evidence must then be produced to bring home to the defendant a guilty cognizance of the transaction, or, if both be indicted together, the jury must first be directed to inquire of the guilt of the principal.⁴ For want of this caution, the attainder of Mrs. Lisle was reversed, because, according to the recital of the Act, she was indicted for concealing J. H. "though the said J. H. was not at the time of the trial attainted nor convicted of any crime."⁵

Trial.] In speaking of the trial we have to consider treasons committed in England and Wales—in Scotland—in Ireland, or the high seas—and abroad. As to the first, i. e. England, we have seen, that the inquiry should take place in the county where the offence was committed, subject to the rule that where one overt act is proved in that county, evidence of acts done in a foreign country may be received, and that subject to the especial provisions of temporary statutes, which have occasionally directed trials to be had elsewhere than in such foreign country.⁶ If the court

¹ R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 159.

² East, P. C. 100.

³ For as there can be no accessories in high treason, the statutes concerning accessories in felony do not apply. Every treason is felony, but every felony is not treason. And thus it was that the friends of the abolition of capital punishment had like to have made a mistake when they proposed to except the case of murder only. For some cases of treason may amount to murder, but "treason," per se, does not satisfy the word "murder."

⁴ 1 Hale, P. C. 238.

⁵ Fost. Cr. L. 346.

⁶ Ante.

should remove into a different county from that in which the indictment was found, the trial must still be by persons returned from the first county.¹

How the trial shall be had.] At common law the defendant in a case of treason could not make a full defence by counsel; he could not even have counsel to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, much less make an address to the jury. He could not examine his own witnesses upon oath, the principal indulgence allowed him being the privilege of having points of law argued by his counsel. So strictly was this rule of denying the aid of counsel adhered to, that in the cases of Charnock and Sir William Parkyns, the court declared that counsel could not be allowed them for matters of fact, although they urged that the statute 7 Will. 3, would come into operation immediately afterwards, indeed, in R. v. Parkyns, the very next day after his trial, and although they, consequently, insisted upon the equity of the Act.² Again, the prisoner could not at common law have a copy of the charge against him, nor of the pannel of the jury who were to try him, but when there was a question whether the prisoner were or not the party mentioned in a record of conviction or attainder, counsel were allowed to speak for him to the jury upon the point of identity, although a copy of the record was denied.³ And notwithstanding that R. v. Ratcliffe was cited after the statute of William, yet the practice referred to was agreeable to the rules of the common law, which permitted the full interference of advocates upon a collateral issue. Upon another occasion where the question was, whether the prisoner was out of the realm at the time when outlawry against him was pronounced, he had four counsel assigned him, three of whom were heard on the reply, and the jury found in favour of his plea.⁴ Otherwise, the court will not allow counsel upon outlawry. The court will be the prisoner's counsel. It is upon the pointing out of some particular error that counsel will be assigned in outlawry.⁵

As to treason on the high seas, Foster, J., has laid it down that it is clearly within the operation of the statutes above mentioned, and that the only ground for hesitation would be a doubt which had been entertained without justice, i. e., whether such a treason would work corruption of blood.⁶ And, lastly, as it can hardly be questioned that foreign treasons also work this disability, there seems to be a just right to conclude that persons in jeopardy on that account are likewise entitled to the same benefits.

Each prisoner has a right to two counsel, although indicted

¹ East, P. C. 103, 104. Case of the Kinloch's. See Fost. Cr. L. 15, 16. R. v. Hay, Id. 26.

² See 4 St. Tr. 563, 630.

³ R. v. Ratcliffe. See Fost. Cr. L. 40; 1 Wils. 150.

⁴ R. v. Johnson, Fost. Cr. L. 46.

⁵ R. v. Lord Griffin, 11 Mod. 168.

⁶ Fost. 226; and see East, P. C. 106.

jointly with others for the same treason.¹ The stat. 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3,² using the words "upon his or her request," Buller, J., doubted at the trial of Lord George Gordon, whether the prisoner himself, instead of counsel, should not have applied; but the attorney-general consented, and the motion of counsel that they might be assigned, was allowed.³ However, an application may be made to the clerk of the crown during an adjournment of the commission, between the finding of the indictment and the arraignment.⁴ Otherwise, the prisoner may apply when he comes to trial.⁵ There cannot be more than two counsel assigned. The court will not notice any assistant counsel.⁶ Nor, unless they be partners, can the prisoner have two attorneys.⁷ Speaking of counsel, it was held in a case where the subject of treason was much considered, that, before the fifteen judges, a counsel may be heard who was not assigned at the trial, because he is in the nature of amicus curiæ. But upon such occasions the court will not hear more than one counsel.⁸ Nevertheless upon an argument for the prisoners upon the same point, the judges will hear each case separately, unless, indeed, another arrangement be agreed upon by counsel.⁹ Upon a reply by the crown, the witness in reply was called before the second counsel for the prisoner addressed the jury, and the leading counsel for the prisoner commented upon the evidence in reply, also before the second counsel for the prisoner addressed the jury.¹⁰ Next with reference to the lists, the words, "at the same time" in 7 Ann. c. 21, s. 11, were much discussed under the following circumstances:—A bill of indictment was found by the grand jury on the 11th of December, 1839; a copy of the indictment, and a list of the jury pannel, were served on each of the prisoners personally on the 12th, in the presence of two witnesses. On the 17th of December the list of the witnesses was delivered. It was contended for the prisoner that the words, "at the same time," meant that the copy of the indictment and the two lists should be delivered simultaneously. The objection was taken after the plea of not guilty, and after the jury were sworn and charged. The first witness being called, the examination of him or of any other witness was resisted for want of the due delivery of the lists. The statutes of 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3, and 7 Ann.

¹ East, P. C. 111.

² Sect. 1.

³ 2 Dougl. 591, note 2.

⁴ R. v. Frost, 9 Car. & P. 132.

⁵ See S. C. Id.

⁶ S. C. Id. 135.

⁷ R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 132. The time for access of the attorney to the prisoner was, in this case, fixed by the court to be from the rising of the court till 10 P. M., and before the sitting of the court from 7 A. M., although the governor of the prison stated that the prison was not open for any other purpose till 7½ A. M. and was shut at 9 P. M. for the night upon other occasions. Id. 138; 2 Moo. C. C. 144. R. v. Williams.

⁸ 9 C. & P. 165; 2 Moo. C. C. 145.

⁹ 9 C. & P. S. C. Id.

¹⁰ 9 C. & P. 160, S. C.

c. 21, s. 11, were cited, and the Jury Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 21, which enacts, amongst other things, that in high treason a copy of the indictment and a list of the jurors shall be delivered at the same time, ten days before the arraignment, and in the presence of two or more credible witnesses. The crown answered that the service was a good service, and that, if not, the objection came too late. The point was reserved.¹ In the next case, however, the same objection was made before any of the jury were sworn, but the prisoner's counsel consented to the trial going on, being explicitly asked by the attorney-general whether he had any objection to that course. The objection was renewed upon the examination of the first witness, and a conversation was proved between the solicitor of the treasury and the solicitor for the prisoners, having for its object to show a kind of acquiescence on the part of the prisoners' solicitor in the separate delivery. This point was reserved.² But when the case came to be argued, the facts mentioned were not relied on as making any difference in the argument.³

The same point was raised and reserved in the case of Jones, the third prisoner.⁴ The discussion subsequently took place before all the judges. There were two questions: 1st, whether the statute of Anne had been complied with; 2ndly, whether the objection had been made in time. It was relied on for the prisoners that the words, "with such lists," which occur in a subsequent part of the Act 7 Ann. c. 21,⁵ made the time identical. It could not be sufficient to deliver the copy and lists ten days before the trial without mutilating the enactment. If with should be construed as and, there would be no requirement at all of the two witnesses to the delivery of the lists. R. v. Lord George Gordon was then cited⁶ and relied upon. The cases upon the statute of wills, where two witnesses must be present at the same time, was likewise mentioned, and the construction of statutes generally was made a point in favour of the prisoners, by reason of the strictness of such construction. The Scotch law was also introduced, but the judges did not favour its being imported into the argument before them. As to the second point, it was urged that, by the pleading, the prisoner waives any objection to the indictment by not objecting to the swearing of the jury, and he only waives the mistake as to the jury list, but that would not be a waiver to the non-delivery of the list of witnesses when the first witness should appear.⁷ The attorney-general insisted that the object of delaying the making the objection was, because had it been made earlier, the trial would have been postponed, and he observed that no pre-

¹ R. v. Frost and others, 2 Moo. C. C. 140; 9 C. & P. 163.

² 2 Moo. C. C. 140.

³ Id.

⁴ Id. 145.

⁵ Sect. 11.

⁶ 2 Dougl. 591. Several other cases were cited.

⁷ R. v. Frost and others, 2 Moo. C. C. 140, &c.

judice could have arisen to the prisoners, inasmuch as service had been made of the lists in sufficient time for them to have prepared for trial. He said that if the words of 7 Ann. c. 21, were to be taken quite literally, and the jury pannel were to be exhausted, so that the court must adjourn, the prisoner could never be tried upon the indictment then before the court. Then, secondly, an irregularity cannot be brought forward as a substantive defence at the trial. An objection to an irregularity not being taken at the earliest possible stage must be considered as waived. The crown might have been called on to prove the delivery when the prisoner was arraigned, and then the trial, before plea pleaded, might be postponed.¹

There was a considerable difference of opinion amongst the judges. Six thought the delivery of the list to the witnesses good.² Nine were of the contrary opinion.³ Six thought the objection taken in good time,⁴ but nine were of opinion that it was not so taken,⁵ and ALL thought that if it had been taken in time, the trial might have been postponed, in order to give an opportunity for a due delivery of the lists. The conviction was therefore affirmed.⁶ Previously however to this case, it had been decided that an objection to the description of a witness could not be made after the prisoner had begun to examine his witnesses. Indeed, the court said it ought to be made in the first instance, which would be when the witness was sworn for the crown, otherwise a party might take the chance of getting evidence which he liked, and if he disliked the testimony, he might then get rid of it on the ground of misdescription.⁷ The objection to the names or description being assumed to be in time, it may be observed that if a witness be designated as "lately abiding" at such a place, and it turns out upon the voir dire that he had a later place of residence, it is a misdescription. Lord Ellenborough said, that with reference to the time of delivering the list, the description must necessarily be as lately, unless the person delivering the list was actually in the place at the time, and, therefore, that the place described as the place of residence must be that which it had lately been; but that it would be proper to inquire as to the residence itself. The witness was then examined, but failing to show that he had resided lately at the place mentioned,—on the contrary, proving that his place of abode was

¹ R. v. Frost and others, 2 Moo. C. C. 159-169.

² Lord Denman, C. J.; Tindal, C. J.; Lord Abinger, C. B.; Bosanquet, J.; Gurney, B.; Maule, J.

³ Littledale, J.; Park, J.; Patteson, J.; Alderson, B.; Williams, J.; Coleridge, J.; Rolfe, B.; Coltman, J.; Erskine, J.

⁴ Littledale, J.; Parke, B.; Patteson, J.; Williams, J.; Coleridge, J.; Erskine, J.

⁵ Lord Denman, C. J.; Tindal, C. J.; Lord Abinger, C. B.; Bosanquet, J.; Alderson, B.; Gurney, B.; Coltman, J.; Maule, J.; Rolfe, B.

⁶ R. v. Frost and others, 2 Moo. C. C. 170, 171.

⁷ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 158. R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 183.

elsewhere,—he was withdrawn.¹ A witness was described as “of Cross y Cylog, in the parish of L.,” but it turned out that his dwelling was at “Cross y Clog.” There were two public-houses of that name: the witness’s house was between them, and was sixty yards from each. This was held insufficient.² So, “M. J., of P., in the parish of S. W., in the county of M., sometimes residing in the house of his son, J. J., in the parish of B., in the said county.” The proposed witness used to be at his son’s house, at P., about three days in every two months, and the court said, that he was rightly described as of P. so far, but his son’s house was not in B., but in M., and that misdescription vitiated the whole.³ Again, “S. S., of the parish of S. W., in the borough of N., in the county of M., labourer.” N. formed only part of the parish of S. W., which extended beyond N. This was held not to be too general, nor a misdescription.⁴

The ten days in 7 Ann. c. 21, s. 11, must be reckoned after the finding of the bill, and before the arraignment. They must be exclusive of the day of delivery, and of the arraignment, as to the copy of the indictment, and exclusive of the day of delivery and of trial, as to the copy of the pannel.⁵ And, moreover, the precedents have been in favour of life to except an intervening Sunday, not of necessity, but as an indulgence, if time will permit, Sunday not being a day usually devoted to advising with counsel, or preparing for defence.⁶ And if the copy of the pannel should happen to be delivered before the return of the precept, which is commonly made returnable before the day of trial, it will be sufficient, since it satisfies the words of the statute.⁷

Moreover, the prisoner ought to have the caption of the indictment delivered to him with the indictment, for, says Mr. J. Foster, “this, in many cases, is as necessary to enable him to conduct himself in pleading as the other.”⁸ And this, although the statute mentions only the copy of the indictment.⁹ In R. v. Hardy, Eyre, C. J., remarked, that care had been taken to prevent the prisoners from being harassed with reference to the practice of the court. So that where the bill was found, it was intimated from the bench, that counsel would be assigned, upon application to the judge, thus enabling the accused to apply for counsel in the first instance, instead of being brought up on purpose to hear that the grand jury had found the bill of indictment.¹⁰ And the difference between this mode of proceeding and that in 1746 was, that in the latter case the rebels were brought up and informed of the bills which had been found against them, and were also acquainted,

¹ R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 116.

² R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 150.

³ Id. 152.

⁴ R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 147.

⁵ East, P. C. 112; Fost. 2, 230; and see the observations of Foster, J., as to the policy of publishing the names of the jury and witnesses.

⁶ Fost. C. L. 2; East, P. C. 112.

⁷ Fost. C. L. 230.

⁸ Id. 229.

⁹ Id.

¹⁰ East, P. C. 114.

at the same time, that they should have copies.¹ Whereas, in R. v. Hardy, the delivery of the copy of the indictment was deemed sufficient notice of the finding, and the prisoners were the sooner enabled to resort to professional advice.² So, again, copies of the depositions against prisoners will be furnished to them under the provisions of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 3.³ But the prisoners will not be allowed copies of papers which have been taken from their houses, nor, indeed, will the court order such papers to be restored to them.⁴ It is not necessary to read the whole of the indictment at length to the jury. It is sufficient to state the subject of it.⁵ But if the prisoner or his counsel desire it, the court will order that it shall be slowly read.

Whilst, however, the advantages above mentioned have been secured and extended to prisoners, there has, in matters of practice, been some limit put to the indulgence, and certain facilities have also been given, by Act of parliament, to the prosecutor. Thus, with regard to the copy of the caption, where the prisoner had pleaded without demanding it, it was held that he had waived his privilege,⁶ and it would seem that his pleading admits his having a copy of the indictment itself, so that it would be no objection to allege the want of such a copy after plea, because the prisoner might not have thought it for his service to require it, and so might consider himself able to plead without it.⁷ And, by the same rule, it is then too late to object to it by reason of any defect.⁸ Upon another occasion the court refused, after conviction, to allow the venire to be read to the prisoner.⁹ The money taken from a prisoner charged with high treason was applied for, but the court declined to order its restoration, unless it were made clear that such money formed no part of the charge against him.¹⁰

We will now say some few words upon the subject of the juries and challenges. The challenge must be before the oath has commenced. As soon as the juror takes the book, the oath has begun, if the taking be under the direction of the officer of the court; and the same rule governs both the crown and the prisoner. Of course, if the juror should take the book without authority, the power of challenge remains.¹¹

Upon one occasion, the prisoner's counsel asked that the names of the jurors should be taken from the ballot box instead of being called over in the order in which they stood in the pannel, which was alphabetical. This application was granted by the court, but only upon the consent of the attorney-general, whose objection to it would have induced a contrary determination.¹²

¹ Fost. Cr. L. 1.

² See East, P. C. 114, 115.

³ R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 132.

⁴ Id. 133.

⁵ R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 138.

⁶ Fost. Cr. L. 230.

⁷ R. v. Cook, 2 Salk. 634.

⁸ Fost. Cr. L. 230.

⁹ R. v. Laver, 6 St. Tr. 323, vol. 16 of Howell.

¹⁰ R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 131.

¹¹ Id. 137, S. C.

¹² Id. 136, S. C.

There may be a challenge so extensive as to exhaust the pannel. Where this was the case, a new pannel was awarded by the court, ore tenus, and an adjournment was ordered, so that copies might be furnished according to the statute.¹ And so it was in 1746, at the trials at St. Margaret's Hill.² And although the counsel for Cook insisted that a habeas corpus, with a tales, should have been awarded, the court said, that there might be a distinction between commission of oyer and terminer and commission of gaol delivery; that in the first case a tales might possibly issue, but not so upon a commission of gaol delivery.³ Again, when the pannel returned was incorrect for want of stating the professions of the jurors, and in other respects, it was moved that the sheriff should have liberty to amend it by adding the professions, and making other corrections, and the judges assented.⁴ So where the description of a juryman's residence was "Grafton Street," without specifying which Grafton Street, it was held sufficient.⁵ So is the principle of idem sonans, as Longbotham instead of Longbothom.⁶

The challenge of jurors by the crown was not altered by the 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 29. The old law was merely re-enacted.⁷ By 7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 9, no indictment for treason or misprision, nor any process or return, shall be quashed on the motion of the prisoner or his counsel for miswriting, mis-spelling, false or improper Latin, unless the objection be made in court before any evidence given. Nor shall any such faults operate after conviction to stay or arrest the judgment. There is then a proviso that such judgment may, nevertheless, be reversed upon a writ of error in the same manner, and no other, as if the Act had not been made. However, notwithstanding the wording of this Act, the practice has been conformably to the common law, that the exception must be taken before plea pleaded, and several cases have happened where the court has refused to entertain any such objection after plea.⁸ And, moreover, as in cases of felony, the judges are not favourable to the quashing of indictments, even where the exceptions are made before plea, and where they are satisfied that part of the indictment is well laid, they will reject the insufficient part as surplusage.⁹

Lastly, we have already seen that the privileges of the Acts of William the Third and Queen Anne are not to be used by persons charged with attempting the king's life, or seeking to do any violence to his person.

Trial by peers.] Before the statute of William, the lord high steward was accustomed to summon a certain number of peers called peers' triers, and in number about twenty-three.¹⁰ A majority

¹ R. v. Cook, 4 St. Tr. 741, vol. 13 of Howell.

² Fost. Cr. L. 63.

³ 4 St. Tr. 742, vol. 13 of Howell.

⁴ R. v. Hardy and others, East, P. C. 113.

⁵ R. v. Stone, 6 T. R. 531.

⁶ R. v. Laver, 6 St. Tr. 246.

⁷ R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 136, 137.

⁸ East, P. C. 110.

⁹ Id.

¹⁰ 4 Com. 262, and see Mo. 622.

was necessary in order to warrant a conviction, and it was requisite that such majority should consist of twelve. But now by 7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 11, all peers shall be summoned twenty days at least before the trial of any treason or misprision, and upon taking certain oaths mentioned in that section, all such peers shall be entitled to vote.¹

At present, therefore, a conviction may take place by a majority of one vote. Nevertheless, by sect. 12, nothing in the Act shall be construed to extend to any impeachment or other proceedings in parliament, of any kind whatsoever, and these words are so general as to lead to the expectation that they would include the trial of all peers impeached of treason or misprision. On the contrary, however, where the proceedings were adopted in full parliament, and in the ordinary course of justice, the prisoners were not only entitled to the full attendance of peers, but also to the benefit of the Act generally, and the rebel lords in 1746 were informed of this privilege by the lord high steward upon their arraignment.² And even in cases of impeachment, it was provided, by 20 Geo. 2, c. 30, that in all treasons attended by corruption of blood, or misprision of such treasons, persons impeached shall have the same benefit in making their defence as upon indictments and other prosecutions, and, accordingly, that such persons shall have the benefit of two counsel for the purpose of making a full defence, to be assigned on the application of the parties impeached, at any time after the exhibition of the articles of impeachment by the commons.

Judgment.] Upon the conviction of an offender for high treason by the verdict of a jury, or in the event of his standing wilfully mute upon his arraignment, (in which case he is excepted out of the benefits of the stat. 7 Will. 3, c. 3,) or upon outlawry,³ and failure of surrender within one year, judgment of death is pronounced. "The punishment," says Mr. Justice Blackstone, "is very solemn and terrible."⁴ However in these more enlightened times, the execution of which the learned judge speaks,⁵ and which prevailed before the alteration of the law, cannot be

¹ Fost. Cr. L. 246.

² Fost. Cr. L. 247.

³ By 5 & 6 Ed. 6, c. 11, s. 7, process of outlawry is to be as effectual against persons out of the realm, or beyond seas, as though they were resident here; and by sect. 8, if a party outlawed shall render himself within a year to the chief justice of England, and offer to traverse his indictment, he shall be admitted to such traverse, and, if acquitted, shall be discharged of his outlawry. By 7 Will. 3,

c. 3, s. 3, whilst persons guilty of the treasons and misprisions mentioned therein may be outlawed, and attainted, they shall, nevertheless, have the benefit of the same statute if they come in and reverse the outlawry.

⁴ 4 Com. 92.

⁵ 4 Com. 92; and see East, P. C. 137, where the account of the ancient punishment will be found. But in later times the more disgusting part of the ceremony was remitted.

considered otherwise than barbarous and inhuman ; and now by 54 Geo. 3, c. 146, in all cases of high treason the sentence or judgment to be pronounced or awarded shall be that such person shall be drawn on a hurdle to the place of execution, and be there hanged by the neck until such person be dead, and that afterwards the head shall be severed from the body of such person, and the body, divided into four quarters, be disposed of as His Majesty and his successors shall think fit. By sect. 2, His Majesty or his successors may, after such sentence or judgment, by warrant under the sign manual, counter-signed by one of His Majesty's principal secretaries of state, declare it to be his or their will and pleasure, and may direct and order, that such person shall not be drawn, but shall be taken in such manner as in the said warrant shall be expressed to the place of execution, and that such person shall not be there hanged by the neck, but that instead thereof the head shall be there severed from the body of such person whilst alive, and in such warrant may direct and order how and in what manner the body, head, and quarters of such person shall be disposed of ; and it shall be lawful for the sheriff or other person to whom such warrant shall be addressed, and whom it shall concern, to carry the same into execution accordingly.

It seems thus to be part of the judgment that the offender should be drawn upon a hurdle, although formerly the omission of these words did not vitiate the sentence.¹

In a judgment against two, it was held sufficient to say " the bodies of them shall be divided," without " and the body of each of them."²

This punishment, however, applies only to males. By 30 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 1, female offenders convicted of high treason shall be drawn to the place of execution, and then hanged by the neck until dead.

Corruption of blood, and consequently the forfeiture of lands, goods, and chattels, are amongst the consequences of an attainder for high treason.³ The penal effect of this rule has, however, been relaxed in a slight degree. Indeed it was at one time attempted, and with success, to restrict the pains of forfeiture to the traitor himself for his life, (for his sentence might have been commuted,) and to prevent any disherison from affecting those who were innocent of their ancestor's transgression.⁴ Yet afterwards it was deemed right to repeal this law of indulgence, as far as attempts against the king's life were concerned, and the penalty remains, therefore, in that respect, with the exceptions we are about to mention, as in Lord Hale's time, and as indeed at common law.⁵

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 10, when the person from whom the descent of any land is to be traced shall have had any rela-

¹ R. v. Tucker, 4 Mod. 162.

² 4 Mod. ut sup.

³ 1 Hale, P. C. 354.

⁴ 7 Ann. c. 21, s. 10. To take effect after the death of the Pre-tender. 17 Geo. 2, c. 39, s. 3. After the death of the Pretender's sons.

⁵ 39 Geo. 3, c. 93.

tion, who, having been attainted, shall have died before such descent shall have taken place, then such attainder shall not prevent any person from inheriting such land who would have been capable of inheriting the same, by tracing his descent through such relation, if he had not been attainted, unless such land shall have escheated in consequence of such attainder before the 1st day of January, 1834. By sect. 11 the Act shall not extend to any descent which shall take place on the death of any person who shall die before the 1st day of January, 1834.

Moreover, by 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, s. 3, no land, chattels, or stock vested in any person upon any trust or by way of mortgage, or any profits thereof, shall escheat or be forfeited to His Majesty, his heirs or successors, or any corporation, lord of a manor, or other person, by reason of the attainder or conviction for any other offence of such trustee or mortgagee, but shall remain in such trustee or mortgagee, or survive to his co-trustees or descend or vest in his representatives, as if no such attainder or conviction had taken place.

And it seems that goods which a man attainted has, as executor, shall not be forfeited.¹ Another penalty, where the offender is a male, is the loss of dower to the female.² And tenant by the curtesy is subject to a similar forfeiture.³ But, if the wife be attainted, the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy.⁴ Likewise, the offender's copyhold estates become forfeited, upon attainder, to the lord of the manor.⁵

If the chief justice, as superior coroner, record the death of one slain in rebellion, and return the record into his own court, both lands and goods may be forfeited without attainder.⁶

The rescue of one who is apprehended for treason is an act of high treason.⁷ In this case the misdeed of the rescuer is higher than that of him who breaks prison, or escapes when under a charge of treason, because the latter is only guilty of felony. Indeed, whoever gives assistance or protection to a traitor after the fact in all cases, or permits or favours the escape of such a person from custody, becomes himself a principal traitor.⁸ The fact however of the principal's guilt must be established, and notice must appear to have been received of the treason by the rescuer.⁹ Although it would be a high misdemeanor to rescue one committed for high treason although he should afterwards turn out to be innocent.¹⁰

¹ Lonsdale, 1.

² Hale, P. C. 354.

³ Upon this subject of forfeiture, see 4 Com. 381; 26 Hen. 8, c. 13, s. 5; 33 Hen. 8, c. 20, s. 2; 5 & 6 Ed. 6, c. 11, ss. 9, 13; Lonsdale, 1.

⁴ 4 Com. 381.

⁵ Com. Dig. Copyhold (M. 1); and see Lonsdale, 1.

⁶ East, P. C. 138.

⁷ 2 Hawk. c. 21, s. 7.

⁸ East, P. C. 96, 101.

⁹ Id. 101.

¹⁰ Id. See, generally, on high treason, 1 Hale, P. C. 58—377, ch. 10 to 28 inclusive; 1 Hawk. c. 17; Burn's Justice, tit. "Treason;" East, P. C. 37—144; Foster's Discourse on High Treason, 183—251

CHAPTER II.

OF TREASONABLE LIBELS AND SLANDER.

By 6 Ann. c. 7, s. 1, if any person shall maliciously, advisedly, and directly, by writing or printing, maintain and affirm that our sovereign lady the queen is not the lawful and rightful queen of these realms, or that any other person has any right or title to the same otherwise than according to the Act passed in the second session of the first year of King William and Queen Mary, chapter two, intituled "An Act declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, and settling the Succession to the Crown," and one other Act made in England, in the twelfth year of the reign of King William the Third, intituled "An Act for the further Limitation of the Crown, and better securing the Rights and Liberties of the Subject," and the Acts made in England and Scotland mutually for the union of the two kingdoms, or that the kings or queens of this realm, with and by the authority of parliament, are not able to make laws and statutes of sufficient force and validity to limit and bind the crown, and the descent, limitation, inheritance, and government thereof, he shall be guilty of high treason, and being convicted shall be adjudged a traitor, and suffer death and forfeiture.

By sect. 2, if any person shall maliciously and directly, by preaching, teaching, or advised speaking, declare, maintain and affirm, as in the last preceding section mentioned, he shall incur the danger and penalty of præmunire mentioned in 16 Ric. 2, c. 5.

CHAPTER III.

OF TREASONS RELATING TO THE SUCCESSION AND REGENCY.

By the Act of Settlement, 12 & 13 Will. 3, c. 2, the crown of England was limited to the Protestant successors of Sophia, daughter of King James the First, after the deaths of King William and Queen Anne.

By the Bill of Rights, 1 Wm. & M. sess. 2, c. 2, s. 9, whoever shall be reconciled to the see of Rome, &c., or shall marry a papist, shall lose his title to the crown, which shall thenceforth descend to the next heir, being Protestant. And there is a provision in the Act of Settlement which declares that the incapacity mentioned in the Bill of Rights shall affect any person inheriting the crown by virtue of that Act, who, amongst other things, shall marry a papist.

By 1 Ann. st. 2, c. 17, s. 3, if any person shall endeavour to deprive or hinder any person who shall be the next in succession to the crown for the time being, according to the limitations in the two Acts of 1 Wm. & M. sess. 2, c. 2, and 12 & 13 Will. 3, c. 2, from succeeding to the imperial crown of this realm, and the dominions and territories thereunto belonging, according to the limitations in the before-mentioned Acts, and the same maliciously, advisedly, and directly shall attempt by an overt act or deed, every such offence shall be adjudged high treason. All danger as to the sons or grandsons of James the Second seems to have passed away, but the Act of Settlement still remains the law of the land.¹

By 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 37, nothing in that Act contained shall affect or alter any Act, so far as it relates to the crime of high treason.

Similar provisions will be found in the 3rd section of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 123, an Act for prohibiting any dealing with securities issued during the war between Russia and England.

Regency.] By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 52, s. 4, it shall not be lawful for the king or queen of this realm, for whom a regent is thereby appointed, to intermarry, before his or her age of eighteen years, without the consent in writing of the regent, and the assent of both houses of parliament. Every marriage without such consent and assent shall be null and void, and every person who shall be acting, abetting, or concerned in obtaining, procuring, or bringing about any such marriage, and the person who shall be so married to such king or queen under the age of eighteen years, shall be guilty of high treason, and suffer and forfeit as in cases of high treason.¹

¹ With regard to offences against the Royal Marriage Act, see post.

CHAPTER IV.

OF MISPRISION OF TREASON.

Misprision.] By 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 10, s. 8, the concealment or keeping secret of any treason is only misprision, and the offender shall only suffer the pains of misprision. Misprision is said to be "where a person knows of a treason, though no party or consentor to it, yet conceals it, and doth not reveal it in convenient time."¹ It is negative or positive, i. e., where a knowledge or concealment without assent exists; or where certain misdemeanors are expressly declared to be misprisions by particular statutes.² As soon as it appears that a concurrence or approbation has taken place, that which might have been misprision becomes treason.³ And we have seen that to harbour a traitor wilfully is high treason.⁴

It may be added that there must be a full discovery, and to a competent authority, in order to avoid the misprision. Therefore, intelligence of a rising communicated to a private person will not be a sufficient disclosure.⁵ Nor will a partial mention of the circumstances to a magistrate be full enough, as if one should relate an intention to levy war, but persist in suppressing the names of the conspirators.⁶ But still there must be some knowledge, either of design or of persons. If A. be informed of a rising, without any communication as to the plot or the traitors, he will not be guilty of misprision by concealing the intelligence. But if he should know the names of the parties, without being let into the secret of the conspiracy, he will be liable to be indicted. And so again, if he be made cognizant of the particulars of an intended treason, although the names of persons may have been kept from him.⁷

The onus of proof likewise lies on the defendant. Strictly speaking, he should negative the avowment of concealment by offering, on his part, proof of discovery.⁸ There cannot be a misprision of a treason which is not contained either positively or virtually in Acts of parliament. But where a new treason is created by statute, it follows that a concealment of it will be a misprision.⁹ By 13 El. c. 2, s. 5, it is a misprision of treason to conceal an offer of absolution or reconciliation, or any bull, &c., unless the matter be disclosed within six weeks to the privy council.

¹ 1 Hale, P. C. 371; 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 10, s. 8, not repealed.

² 1 Hawk. c. 20, ss. 2, 7.

³ Id. s. 3.

⁴ Ante.

⁵ 1 Hawk. c. 20, s. 5; Kel. 22.

⁶ 1 Hawk. c. 20, s. 5.

⁷ See Kel. 22.

⁸ R. v. Thistlewood, 38 How. St. Tr. 691. Charge of Abbott, C. J.

⁹ East, P. C. 140.

Trial.] With respect to the trial of misprision, Lord Hale observes, that although the statute 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 10, has repealed the 33 Hen. 8, c. 23, as to the trial of treasons, yet he says it did not repeal that Act touching murder and misprision of treason. Consequently, a misprision committed in one county might be tried in another.¹ And the king, if he please, may waive the treason, and indict for misprision, for all treason includes misprision.² And when the proceeding is against a peer he shall be tried by his peers upon an indictment by a common grand inquest.³ And in all cases, whether of peers or commoners, there must be a free confession, or two witnesses to prove misprision.⁴ The prisoner may likewise be convicted if he stands mute, or refuses to plead.⁵

Judgment.] The punishment for misprision of treason is loss of the profits of land during life, forfeiture of goods, and imprisonment for life.⁶

¹ 1 Hale, P. C. 374.

² 1 Hale, 374.

³ Id. 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 11.

⁴ 1 Ed. 6, c. 12, s. 22; 7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 2.

⁵ 7 Will. 3, c. 3, s. 2.

⁶ 1 Hale, 374; 4 Com. 120.

CHAPTER V.

OF OFFENCES IN THE NATURE OF TREASON, WITH REFERENCE TO PERSONS OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC RELIGION.

MOST, if not all, of the treasons formerly attributed to Roman Catholics, and for which they were punishable, have now been removed from the statute book. But there are two sources of punishment which have not been entirely abolished, although the exercise of them has not been frequent. The first is præmunire. *Præmunire*¹ is, doubtless, obsolete, but the statute, 16 Ric. 2, c. 5, concerning the purchase of bulls or other instruments from Rome, is not repealed, and this offence incurs a præmunire.

Again, the treasons of early statutes have been abolished in modern times, but there is a saving clause which leaves the offence a misdemeanor at common law. As under 1 Eliz. c. 1, and 13 Eliz. c. 2; these Acts, as far as the treasons therein contained, are repealed, but it is expressly declared by the statute, 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59, (the repealing statute,) that nothing in the enactment shall authorize or render it lawful for any person to affirm, &c., or defend any foreign power, nor extend further than to repeal the particular penalties of the Act.² And again, "nor to import, bring in, or put into execution any such bulls, writings or instruments." The law is to remain the same, save the penalties and punishments. Therefore it is open to the crown to prosecute for misdemeanor at common law.³

¹ It involves being out of the king's protection, forfeiture of lands and tenements, goods and chattels, and imprisonment during pleasure. Co. Litt. 130 (a).

² 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59, s. 1.

³ 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59, s. 1; see 16 Ric. 2, c. 5; 1 Eliz. c. 1, s. 29; 5 Eliz. c. 1, s. 2; 13 Eliz. c. 2, s. 4; 1 Jac. 1, c. 4; 3 Jac. 1, c. 4, &c.; 10 Geo. 4, c. 7, s. 23; 7 & 8 Vict. c. 102; (Roman Catholic Penal Acts repealed;) Lonsdale's Statute Criminal Law of England, 12—22.

CHAPTER VI.

OF FELONIES AND MISDEMEANORS AGAINST HER MAJESTY
THE QUEEN.

Felonies.] In order to prevent the evils of constructive treason, or of any imperfections which might exist in rightly interpreting the statute of Edward the Third, it was determined to reduce certain disloyal acts to the grade of felony, yet without depriving them of the rank of treasonable offences. So that a provision follows that should treasonable matter appear in evidence, the prisoner shall not be therefore acquitted of the felony, but he shall not be liable to be prosecuted a second time upon the same facts for treason.

By 11 Vict. c. 12, s. 3, if any person shall, within the United Kingdom or without, compass, imagine, invent, devise, or intend to deprive or depose the Queen, her heirs or successors, from the style, honour, or royal name of the imperial crown of the United Kingdom or of any other of Her Majesty's dominions and countries, or to levy war against Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, within any part of the United Kingdom, in order by force or constraint to compel her or them to change her or their measures or counsels, or in order to put any force or constraint upon or in order to intimidate or overawe both houses or either house of parliament, or to move or stir any foreigner or stranger with force to invade the United Kingdom or any other Her Majesty's dominions or countries, her heirs or successors, and such compassings, &c., shall express, utter, or declare by publishing any printing or writing, or by any overt act or deed, he shall be guilty of felony, and liable to transportation for life,¹ or not less than seven years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour: Provided, by sect. 6, that nothing in this section contained shall affect the Act 25 Ed. 3, c. 2. Provided also, by sect. 7, that if the facts alleged in an indictment for any felony under this Act shall amount in law to treason, such indictment shall not by reason thereof be deemed void, erroneous, or defective; and if the facts proved on the trial shall amount to treason, such person shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted of such felony; but no person tried for such felony shall be afterwards prosecuted for treason upon the same facts.

And by sect. 5, it shall be lawful, in any indictment for any felony under this section, to charge against the offender any number of the matters, acts, or deeds by which such compassings, &c., shall have been expressed, uttered, or declared.

But by sect. 10, it shall not be lawful for any court before which any person shall be prosecuted or tried for any felony under this Act, to order payment to the prosecutor or the witnesses of any costs which shall be incurred in preferring or prosecuting any such indictment.

¹ Now penal servitude: 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2.

By sect. 4, the time for prosecution, in the case of "open or advised speaking,"¹ is limited to two years, and there must be two witnesses, or a confession in open court.

Indictment.] The indictment states that A. on, &c., and on divers other days and times, did, together with divers other persons who are to the jurors aforesaid unknown, feloniously compass, &c. to depose our most gracious Lady Queen Victoria from the style, honour, and royal name of the imperial crown of the United Kingdom, and the said compassing, &c., did then feloniously express, &c., [by—state the overt acts,] against the form, &c.

In order to satisfy this section, no actual conflict is necessary. Any attempt by force or intimidation is a levying of war. To substitute any form of government in the room of that established, or to dismember the United Kingdom, is sufficient to sustain a count for attempting to depose the Queen. Where several join in the same conspiracy, some with one intent, and some with another, all are guilty of each act of sedition. And as to the witness, a person who betrays conspirators, having entered into their society for that purpose, does not require confirmation, although, undoubtedly, the jury may view his testimony and conduct with suspicion. He is not a co-conspirator, and therefore he is a good witness for the crown.² Upon another trial for these offences, no copy of the indictment was allowed. No list of the names and the addresses of the witnesses was permitted to be furnished, but the prisoners were allowed to inspect the back of the indictment, and, by permission of the crown, they might have the jury pannel read over. No challenge was allowed till a full jury had appeared. A witness was asked whether he had acted as a special constable. This was not allowed. But he might be asked whether he had not expressed an opinion as to the guilt of the prisoners. There was proof of a meeting, but none of the prisoners were present.

The passport to a second meeting was a leaf of a book. Upon production of that leaf the party was admitted. The prisoners were not present even then, not having joined the conspiracy. But evidence of what passed at that second meeting was received, and also what was said upon giving the leaf.

There was another meeting at a public-house. Not one of the people there was connected with the prisoners, nor with any party to the conspiracy; yet what was done and found there was evidence for the crown.³

¹ Sect. 9 relates to bail and trial in Scotland.

² R. v. Dowling, 3 Cox, 509. See R. v. Mullins, Id. 526.

³ R. v. Lacey and others. Verdict, Guilty. 3 Cox, 517.

Assaults, &c.] Assaults upon the Queen, with intent to injure or alarm her.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 2, if any person shall wilfully discharge or attempt to discharge, or point, aim, or present, at or near to the person of the Queen, any gun, pistol, or any other description of fire-arms, or of other arms whatsoever, whether the same shall or shall not contain any explosive or destructive material,—or shall discharge or cause to be discharged, or attempt to discharge or cause to be discharged, any explosive substance or material near to the person of the Queen,—or shall wilfully strike or strike at, or attempt to strike or to strike at, the person of the Queen, with any offensive weapon, or in any other manner whatsoever,—or shall wilfully throw or attempt to throw any substance, matter, or thing whatsoever at or upon the person of the Queen, with intent in any of the cases aforesaid to injure the person of the Queen, or to break or endanger the public peace, or to alarm Her Majesty,—or shall, near to the person of the Queen, wilfully produce or have any gun, pistol, or any other description of fire-arms or other arms whatsoever, or any explosive, destructive, or dangerous matter or thing whatsoever, with intent to use the same to injure the person of the Queen, or to alarm Her Majesty,—shall be guilty of a high misdemeanor, and liable to be transported for seven years,¹ to penal servitude for four years, or to imprisonment not exceeding three years, with or without hard labour, and public or private whipping during the imprisonment not exceeding thrice. Provided, by sect. 3, that nothing shall be deemed to alter in any respect the punishment which by law may now be inflicted upon persons guilty of treason or misprision of treason.

Indictment.] That A. &c., did unlawfully and wilfully [state the offence], near to the person of the Queen, with intent thereby then to injure the person of her said Majesty. Against the form, &c.

¹ Now penal servitude, not exceeding three years: 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2.

CHAPTER VII.

OF SEDITION AND OFFENCES OF THAT NATURE.

1. *Unlawful Oaths.*2. Unlawful Societies.

1. Unlawful oaths.] By 52 Geo. 3, c. 104, s. 1, and 1 Vict. c. 91, s. 1, every person who shall, in any manner or form whatsoever, administer or cause to be administered, or be aiding or assisting at the administering of any oath or engagement purporting or intending to bind the person taking the same to commit any treason or murder, or any felony punishable by law with death, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to be transported for life or not less than fifteen years,¹ or imprisonment not exceeding three years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement;² and whosoever shall take any such oath, &c., not being compelled thereto, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to transportation for life,³ or for such term as the court may adjudge.

By 37 Geo. 3, c. 123, s. 1, whosoever shall, in any manner or form whatsoever, administer or cause to be administered, or be aiding or assisting at or present at and consenting to the administering or taking of any oath or engagement purporting or intended to bind the person taking the same to engage in any mutinous or seditious purpose; or to disturb the public peace; or to be of any association, society, or confederacy formed for any such purpose; or to obey the orders or commands of any committee or body of men not lawfully constituted; or of any leader or commander or other person not having authority by law for that purpose; or not to inform or give evidence against any associate, confederate, or other person; or not to reveal or discover any unlawful combination or confederacy; or not to reveal or discover any illegal act done or to be done; or not to reveal or discover any illegal

¹ Now penal servitude: 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2.

² 1 Vict. c. 91, s. 2; see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 4. So the aiding and assisting (52 Geo. 3, c. 104, s. 4) is made punishable in like manner. 1 Vict. c. 91, ut supra. By 52 Geo. 3, c. 104, s. 8, persons acquitted for offences under the Act shall not be tried for high treason or misprision, nor shall persons guilty of an offence against the Act, but not tried under it, be released from being charged with high treason or misprision.

³ Now penal servitude.

oath or engagement which may have been administered or tendered to or taken by such person, or to or by any other person, or the import of any such oath or engagement,—shall be guilty of felony, and may be transported for seven years;¹ and whosoever shall take any such oath or engagement as last aforesaid, not being compelled thereto, shall be guilty of felony, and be liable to the same punishment.

By sect. 2, compulsion shall not justify or excuse any person taking any such oath or engagement, unless he shall, within four days after the taking, if not prevented by actual force or sickness, and then within four days after the hindrance produced by such force or sickness shall cease, declare the same, together with the whole of his knowledge touching the same, and the person or persons by whom, and in whose presence, and when and where such oath or engagement was administered or taken, by information on oath before one of Her Majesty's justices of the peace, or one of Her Majesty's principal secretaries of state, or Her Majesty's privy council; or, in case the person taking such oath or engagement shall be in actual service in Her Majesty's forces by sea or land, then by such information on oath as aforesaid, or by information to his commanding officer.

By sect. 3, persons aiding, &c. are to be deemed principals.

By sect. 5, provided, that any engagement or obligation whatsoever in the nature of an oath shall be deemed an oath within the intent and meaning of the Act, in whatever form or manner the same shall be administered or taken, and whether the same shall be actually administered by any person to any other person, or taken by any person without any administration thereof by any other person.

By sect. 4, it shall not be necessary, in any indictment for any offence in the last preceding section mentioned, to set forth the words of such oath or engagement; and it shall be sufficient to set forth the purport of such oath or engagement, or some material part thereof.

The trial of these offences committed on the seas may be tried in any county of England, under 37 Geo. 3, c. 123, s. 6, and 52 Geo. 3, c. 104, s. 7. It is manifest that the main scope of the 37 Geo. 3 was to discourage mutiny and sedition. But it has been determined that these are not the only mischiefs which the statute can reach. Some journeymen shearmen in Wiltshire entered into a conspiracy to raise their wages, and, in the prosecution of their attempt, they entered into an engagement in these terms: "You shall be true to every journeyman shearman, and not to hurt any of them, and you shall not divulge any of their secrets. So help," &c. This was held to be an unlawful oath within the Act, upon an application to bail the defendants, who were brought up by habeas corpus.¹ And Lord Ellenborough observed, that the provisions which bore upon the defendants were those which forbade the revealing or discovering of any unlawful combination or conspiracy, or any illegal act done or to be done.² And the same doctrine was recognized upon a more recent occasion.³ Again, an indictment charged the defendants with having administered an oath intended to bind the party taking it not to inform or give evidence against any member of a society formed for the disturbance of the public peace, for any act or expression of his or theirs done or made, collectively or individually. It was objected, that the oath should have been more particularly set out, in order that the prisoners might know what they were to defend themselves against, and that, in fact, neither an oath, nor the purport of one, as required by the Act, was stated. But the judges were of opinion that the count was good, and the conviction was affirmed. It was decided, that although the oath did not purport, on the face of it, to be for a seditious purpose, evidence was admissible to show that the brotherhood referred to in the oath was a seditious society.⁴

¹ Now penal servitude not exceeding three years: 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2.

Indictment.] The indictment states, that A., on, &c. feloniously did administer [cause, &c.] to one B., a certain oath then accordingly taken by the said B., which oath was then intended to bind the said B. so then taking the same [state the nature of the oath], against the form, &c.

2. Unlawful assemblies.] Secondly, as to unlawful assemblies.

By 39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 2, all societies the members whereof shall, according to the rules or to any provision or agreement for that purpose, be required or admitted to take any oath or engagement which shall be an unlawful oath or engagement within 37 Geo. 3, c. 123, or to take any oath not required by law, and every society the members whereof shall take or in any manner bind themselves by any such oath, &c. on becoming or in consequence of being members of such society,—and every society the members whereof shall take, subscribe, or assent to any test or declaration not required by law, nor authorized,—and every society of which the names of any of the members shall be kept secret from the society at large, or which shall have any committee or select body so chosen or appointed that the members constituting the same shall not be known by the society at large to be members of such committee or select body, or which shall have any president, treasurer, secretary, delegate, or other officer so chosen or appointed that the election or appointment of such person to such office shall not be known to the society at large,

¹ R. v. Marks and others, 3 Moo. & Rob. 349; 6 C. & P. 496, East, 157.

² Id. 162.

³ R. v. Lovelass and others, 1 East, 419 (n) 421.

⁴ R. v. Moors and others, 6 or of which the names of all the members, and of all committees or select bodies of members, and of all presidents, treasurers, secretaries, delegates, and other officers, shall not be entered in a book or books to be kept for that purpose, and to be open to the inspection of all the members of such society,—and every society which shall be composed of different divisions or branches, or of different parts acting in any manner separately or distinct from each other, or of which any part shall have any separate or distinct president, secretary, treasurer, delegate, or other officer elected or appointed by or for such part, or to act as an officer for such part,—shall be deemed and taken to be unlawful combinations and confederacies; and every person who, from and after the passing of the Act, shall become a member of any such society, or who, being a member of any such society at the passing of this Act, shall afterwards act as a member thereof, and who, after the passing of this Act, shall directly or indirectly maintain correspondence or intercourse with any such society, or with any division, branch, committee, or other select body, president, treasurer, secretary, delegate, representative, or other officer or member thereof, as such, or who shall, by contribution of money or otherwise, aid, abet, or support such society, or any member or officer thereof, as such, shall be guilty of an unlawful combination and confederacy.¹

The stat. 57 Geo. 3, c. 19, s. 25, includes the provisions of 52 Geo. 3, c. 104, and extends the law to clubs. And it embraces every manner or form of taking the oath, either by words, signs, or otherwise. And likewise representatives and missionaries.²

By 39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 8, persons guilty of any unlawful combinations and confederacies, whether under that Act or under 57 Geo. 3, c. 19, may be proceeded against for such offences either in a summary way before one or more justices of the peace, or by indictment; and, if convicted upon an indictment, may be transported for seven years, or imprisoned not exceeding two years.³

By 39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 13, and 57 Geo. 3, c. 19, s. 28, if any person shall knowingly permit any meeting of any society or club thereby declared to be an unlawful combination and confederacy, or of any division, branch, or committee of such society, to be held in any house or apartment, building, or other place belonging to him, shall for the first offence forfeit 5*l.* and for every such offence committed after the date of such conviction shall be guilty of an unlawful combination and confederacy in breach of this Act.

¹ Sect. 3, declarations before two justices, but these are now done away with. Sect. 4, former members not liable. Sect. 5, exempts freemasons. See ante.

² Directed against the Spencean Philanthropists.

³ Now penal servitude not exceeding three years, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2. But by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 33, proceedings under these two Acts shall not be commenced without the sanction of the law officers of the crown.

The mutual promises and engagements must be such as are clearly prohibited. And it lies upon the persons objecting to the lawfulness of them to prove their statement. A proposition to hold a convention,—a national convention, for example,—is clearly illegal, for it is not possible to anticipate with certainty the peaceable result of such a design. And, therefore, where a meeting was called for the purpose of adopting preparatory measures for holding such a convention, it was held to be unlawful, and it was no good defence to allege, that the proclamation had not been read.² This was in fact, an unlawful assembly with an original intention to do a wrongful act.³

¹ R. v. Rouse and others, 4 Cox, C. C. 7.

² R. v. Fursey, 6 C. & P. 81.

³ All persons assembled to sow sedition, and bring into contempt the constitution, are in an unlawful assembly. All persons assembled in furtherance of this object are unlawfully assembled too. By Bayley, J., in R. v. Hunt, cited, 3 Stark. 103; by Holroyd, J., in Redford v. Birley and others. See 1 Ld. Kenyon, 108, R. v. Hunt, all persons countenancing a riot are liable to an information.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF TUMULTUOUS PETITIONING.

Tumultuous petitioning.] By 13 Car. 2, c. 5, s. 2, no person whatsoever shall solicit, labour, or procure the getting of hands or other consent of any persons above the number of twenty to any petition, complaint, remonstrance, declaration, or other address to the king, or both or either of the houses of parliament, for alteration of matters established by law in church or state, unless the matter thereof have been first consented unto and ordered by three or more justices of the county, or by the major part of the grand jury of the county or division of the county where the same matter shall arise, at their public assizes or general quarter sessions, or, if arising in London, by the lord mayor, aldermen, and commons in common council assembled; and no person whatsoever shall repair to His Majesty, or both or either of the houses of parliament, upon pretence of presenting or delivering any petition, accompanied with excessive number of people, nor at any one time with above the number of ten persons, upon pain of incurring a penalty not exceeding the sum of 100*l.* in money and three months' imprisonment for every offence, without bail or mainprise; such offence to be prosecuted in the Court of King's Bench, or at the assizes or general quarter sessions, within six months after the offence committed, and proved by two or more credible witnesses: Provided, by sect. 3, that this Act shall not be construed to extend to debar or hinder any person or persons, not exceeding the number of twenty aforesaid, to present any public or private grievance or complaint to any member of parliament after his election and during the continuance of the parliament, or to the king's Majesty, for any remedy to be thereupon had, nor to extend to any address whatsoever to His Majesty by all or any of the members of both or either of the houses of parliament, during the sitting of parliament, but that they may enjoy their freedom of access to His Majesty as heretofore hath been used.

This Act, although not repealed by the Bill of Rights,¹ is in some measure qualified by the declaration which recognizes the right of subjects to petition the king, and ordains that all commitments, &c. for such petitioning shall be illegal. Nevertheless the petition must be offered in a peaceable and orderly manner, and the two Acts may then stand well together.

¹ Nor by any other Act. Dougl. 593, Lord Mansfield. See also 1 Hawk. c. 65, s. 9; 5 C. & P. 154.

CHAPTER IX.

OF UNLAWFUL TRAINING.

Unlawful training.] By 60 Geo. 3, c. 1, s. 1, all meetings and assemblies of persons for the purpose of training or drilling themselves, or of being trained or drilled to the use of arms, or for the purpose of practising military exercise, movements, or evolutions, without any lawful authority from Her Majesty, or the lieutenant or two justices of the county or riding, or of any stewartry, by commission or otherwise, for so doing, shall be and the same are hereby prohibited, as dangerous to the peace and security of Her Majesty's liege subjects and of her government; and whosoever shall be present at or attend any such meeting or assembly, for the purpose of training and drilling any other person to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements, or evolutions, or shall train or drill any other person to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements, or evolutions, or shall aid or assist therein, shall be liable to be transported for seven years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years; and every person who shall attend or be present at any such meeting or assembly for the purpose of being, or shall at any such meeting or assembly be trained or drilled to the use of arms or the practice of military exercise, movements, or evolutions, shall be liable to fine and imprisonment not exceeding two years: provided that no person shall be prosecuted unless within six months after the offence committed.

A formidable public meeting in military array, and with seditious ensigns, especially if the parties be armed with clubs and other weapons, is an unlawful assembly.¹ So to advance upon a town with an imposing force, in order to make a demonstration to procure the liberation of certain persons convicted of political offences, is an aggravated misdemeanor.² And a previous concert to disturb the peace in this manner may be charged as a conspiracy.³ In order to connect Henry Hunt with an illegal assemblage, and to verify his intentions, resolutions passed a short time since at a former meeting where he presided, and which meeting was called avowedly to forward the gathering mentioned in the indictment, were admitted in evidence, although those resolutions were passed at Smithfield in London, and the proposed meeting was to take place at Manchester.¹ Again, in order to prove the general character of the meeting, evidence was likewise introduced to the effect that a number of persons had been seen in the neighbourhood practising the marching step before daybreak two days before the meeting, and that this body of men illtreated a person who saw them, compelling him, at the same time, to take an unlawful oath.² All these matters were evidence not only to show the nature of the congregating at that time, but also as matters of aggravation, and, which is still more material, as proof in support of those counts which charge a conspiracy.³ For such an assemblage as may be calculated to inspire terror into the minds of individuals at large is of itself, and without any further overt act, a misdemeanor.

¹ R. v. Hunt and others, 3 B. Tindal, C. J.; Parke, B.; Williams, J. & Ald. 566.

² R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 129; ³ R. v. Hunt and others, 3 B. & Ald. 566.

So, again, Alderson, B., in the case of Vincent, desired the jury to consider the way in which the meetings in question were held, the hour of the day when the parties met, and the language used by the persons assembled, and by those who addressed them. "I quite agree," said the learned judge, "that the alarm must not be merely such as would frighten any foolish or timid persons, but must be such as would alarm persons of reasonable firmness and courage."⁴

And meetings for the purpose of military exercise are prohibited under a severe penalty. The appearance of bodies of men marching along the road, and expressions used by them as to the drill, are evidence to show that they were proceeding to a given spot in order to learn the military exercise.⁵ So, where a witness was called to prove that he was asked by a party of men to join them, as well as declarations on the part of some of these persons, Holroyd, J., held that he might give evidence to that effect, because the character of the transaction would appear from such conduct.⁶

¹ R. v. Hunt and others, 3 B. & Ald. 566; S. P. 3 Stark. 93, in Redford v. Birley and others. And a copy of the resolutions delivered to the witness by Henry Hunt at the first meeting as and for the resolutions intended to be proposed, and corresponding with those which the witness heard read from a written paper, was admitted without producing the original. 3 B. & Ald. 566. And, in the same case, parole evidence of inscriptions upon banners displayed at the meeting was likewise permitted without producing the banners. S. P. 3 Stark. 96, n.

² 3 B. & Ald. 566. Drillings which excite the alarm of an individual witnessing them are evidence to show the general character of a confederacy. 3 Stark. 87.

³ There was also a count for a riot.

⁴ R. v. Vincent and others, 9 C. & P. 91, 109. Persons who have really been alarmed need not be called. The evidence of a constable or other person is sufficient to show this. Id. 275, R. v. Vincent and others; see also Id. 431, R. v. Neale and others.

⁵ 3 Stark. 85, in Redford v. Birley and others.

⁶ Id. 87. The rulings of Holroyd, J., on these points of evidence, were subsequently confirmed by the Court of King's Bench. 3 Stark. 112, note, et seq.

Yet, a man may "drill for a mere innocent purpose, as children at schools are taught, instead of being with a dancing master to learn to walk; yet if the object is to overawe the government, that object is high treason."¹ And, as in the case of the man who hired a boat with the intention of embarking in order to assist Louis XIV. in his attempt to dethrone William III., a bare intent to commit a treason is a high misdemeanor against the public safety.² "Any preparation to assist the king's enemies is a prejudice to the public, and an offence at common law."³

¹ 3 Stark. 105, by Holroyd, J. and committed till paid. S. C. Skin.

² R. v. Cowper, 5 Mod. 207. 637.

The defendant was fined 100 marks, ³ Id. 208. Per cur.

CHAPTER X.

OF AIDING FOREIGN POWERS WITHOUT LICENCE
FROM THE CROWN.

Foreign enlistment.] The subject of foreign enlistment may be mentioned here, since it might be inconvenient for an unrestricted enlistment to take place in foreign service, although the provisions of the statutes may not have been rigidly enforced.

By 59 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 2, if any natural-born subject of His Majesty, without the leave or licence of His Majesty under the sign manual, or signified by order in council, or by proclamation of His Majesty, shall take or accept, or agree to take or accept, any military commission, or shall otherwise enter into the military service as a commissioned or non-commissioned officer, or shall enlist or enter himself to enlist, or shall agree to enlist or to enter himself to serve as a soldier, or to be employed or shall serve in any warlike or military operation, in the service of or for or under or in aid of any foreign prince, state, potentate, colony, province, or part of any province or people, or of any person exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in or over any foreign country, colony, province, or part of any province or people, either as an officer or soldier, or in any other military capacity ;—or if any natural-born subject of His Majesty shall without such leave and licence accept, or agree to take or accept, any commission, warrant, or appointment, as an officer, or shall enlist or enter himself, or shall agree to enlist or enter himself, to serve as a sailor or marine, or to be employed or engaged, or shall serve in and on board any ship or vessel of war, or in and on board any ship or vessel used or fitted out, or equipped or intended to be used for any warlike purpose, in the service of or for or under or in aid of any foreign power, &c., or of any person exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in or over any foreign country, &c.;—or if any natural-born subject of His Majesty shall, without such leave and licence, engage, contract, or agree to go or shall go to any foreign state, &c., or to any place beyond the seas, with an intent or in order to enlist or enter himself to serve or with intent to serve in any warlike or military operation whatever, whether by land or by sea, in the service of or for or under or in aid of any foreign prince, &c., or in the service of or for or under or in aid of any person exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in or over any foreign country, &c., either as an officer or a soldier, or in any other military capacity, or as an officer or sailor or marine, in any ship or vessel, although no enlisting money or pay or reward shall have been or shall be in any or either of the cases aforesaid actually paid to or received by him, or by any person to or for his use or benefit;—or if any person whatever within the United Kingdom, or in any part of His Majesty's dominions elsewhere, or in any country, colony, settlement, island, or place belonging to or subject to His Majesty, shall hire, retain, engage, or procure, or shall attempt or endeavour to hire, &c., any person to enlist, or to enter or engage to enlist, or to serve or to be employed in any such service or employment as an officer, soldier, sailor, or marine, either in land or sea service, for or under or in aid of any foreign prince, &c., or for or under or in aid of any person exercising or assuming to exercise any powers of government as aforesaid, or to go or to agree to go or embark from any part of His Majesty's dominions, for the purpose or with the intent to be so enlisted, &c., whether any enlisting money, pay, or reward shall have been or shall be actually given or received or not, in any or either of such cases every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and punishable by fine and imprisonment.

Then with regard to fitting out vessels of war for foreign states.

By 59 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 7, if any person, within any part of the United Kingdom, or in any part of His Majesty's dominions beyond the seas, shall, without the leave and licence of His Majesty for that purpose first had and obtained, equip, furnish, fit out, or arm, or attempt or endeavour to equip, &c., or shall knowingly aid, assist, or be concerned in the equipping, &c. of any ship or vessel, with intent or in order that such ship or vessel shall be employed in the service of any foreign prince, state, or potentate, or of any foreign colony, province, or part of any province or people, or of any person exercising or assuming to exercise any powers of government in or over any foreign state, &c., as a transport or store ship, or with intent to cruise or commit hostilities against any prince, state, or potentate, or against the subjects or citizens of any prince, &c., or against the person exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in any colony, &c., or against the inhabitants of any foreign colony, &c. with whom His Majesty shall not then be at war,—or shall, within the United Kingdom, or any part of His Majesty's dominions elsewhere, or in any settlement, colony, territory, island, or place belonging to or subject to His Majesty, issue or deliver any commission for any ship or vessel to the intent that such ship or vessel shall be employed as aforesaid,—shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and punishable by fine and imprisonment or either of them; and every such ship or vessel, with the tackle, apparel, and furniture, together with all the materials, arms, ammunition, and stores, which may belong to or be on board of any such ship or vessel, shall be forfeited; and it shall be lawful for any officer of His Majesty's customs or excise, or any officer of His Majesty's navy, who is by law empowered to make seizures for any forfeitures incurred under any of the laws of customs or excise, or the laws of trade and navigation, to seize such ship or vessel, and in such place and in such manner in which the officers of His Majesty's customs or excise and the officers of His Majesty's navy are empowered respectively to make seizures under the laws of customs and excise, or under the laws of trade and navigation; and every such ship or vessel, with the tackle, apparel, and furniture, together with all the materials, arms, ammunition, and stores which may belong to or be on board of such ship or vessel, may be prosecuted and condemned in the like manner and in such courts as ships or vessels may be prosecuted and condemned for any breach of the laws made for the protection of the revenues of customs and excise, or of the laws of trade and navigation.

To assist in the warlike equipment of vessels of foreign states without licence, is provided against by the 8th section.

If any person, in any part of the United Kingdom, or in any part of His Majesty's dominions beyond the seas, without the leave and licence of His Majesty, shall, by adding to the number of guns or by changing the guns, &c., increase, or procure to be increased, or shall be knowingly concerned in increasing the warlike force of any ship or vessel of war, or cruiser, or other armed vessel, which at the time of her arrival in any part of the United Kingdom, or of Her Majesty's dominions, was a ship of war, cruiser, or armed vessel in the service of any foreign prince, state, or potentate, or of any person exercising or assuming to exercise any powers of government in or over any colony, province, or part of any province or people, belonging to the subjects of any such prince, &c., under the control of any person so exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punishable by fine and imprisonment either upon information or indictment.

And by sect. 9, offences made punishable by the provisions of the Act, committed out of the United Kingdom, may be prosecuted and tried in Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench at Westminster, and the venue in such case laid at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex.

CHAPTER XI.

OF AIDING PRISONERS OF WAR TO ESCAPE.

By 52 Geo. 3, c. 156, s. 1, any person who shall knowingly and wilfully aid or assist any alien enemy of His Majesty, being a prisoner of war in His Majesty's dominions, whether such prisoner shall be confined as a prisoner of war in any prison or other place of confinement, or shall be suffered to be at large in His Majesty's dominions or any part thereof on his parole, to escape from such prison or other place of confinement, or from His Majesty's dominions, if at large upon parole, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to be transported for life or for fourteen or seven years.¹

Provided, by sect. 2, that every person who shall knowingly and wilfully aid or assist any such prisoner at large on parole in quitting any part of His Majesty's dominions where he may be on his parole, although he shall not aid or assist such person in quitting the coast of any part of His Majesty's dominions, shall be guilty of aiding the escape of such person under the provisions of the Act.

And by sect. 3, if any person owing allegiance to His Majesty, after any such prisoner has quitted the coast or any part of His Majesty's dominions in such his escape, shall knowingly and wilfully, upon the sea, aid or assist such prisoner in his escape to or towards any other dominions or place, he shall be guilty of felony, and liable to be transported as aforesaid, and the trial may be within any court.²

In a case which occurred before this offence was made felony, it was held, that where there was a plan to detect the defendant in facilitating the escape of French prisoners, upon which occasion the party whose escape was intended by the defendant acted as a lure, the conviction could not be supported, for there was neither an escape, nor an intent to escape.³

¹ Now penal servitude for fourteen or not less than three years: 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2.

² Note 1.

³ R. v. Martin, Russ. & Ry. 196.

PART III.

Of Larceny and offences of that nature.

"THE LARCENY ACT, 1861."

CHAPTER I.

OF SIMPLE LARCENY¹ AND OF BAILEES.

Larceny.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 2, every larceny, whatever be the value of the property stolen, shall be deemed to be of the same nature, and shall be subject to the same incidents in all

¹ The respective judgments for simple larceny under the Act of 1861 will follow the titles "Indictment" and "Trial."

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 1, the term "document of title to goods" shall include any bill of lading, India warrant, dock warrant, warehouse keeper's certificate, warrant or order for the delivery or transfer of any goods or valuable thing, bought and sold note, or any other document used in the ordinary course of business as proof of the possession or control of goods, or authorizing or purporting to authorize, either by indorsement or by delivery, the possessor of such document to transfer or receive any goods thereby represented or therein mentioned or referred to:

The term "document of title to lands" shall include any deed, map, paper, or parchment, written or printed, or partly written and partly printed, being or containing evidence of the title, or any part of the title, to any real estate, or to any interest in or out of any real estate:

The term "trustee" shall mean a trustee on some express trust created by some deed, will, or instrument in writing, and shall include the heir, or personal representative, of any such trustee, and any other person upon or to whom the duty of such trust shall have devolved or come, and also an executor and administrator, and an official manager, assignee, liquidator, or other like officer acting under any present or future Act relating to joint-stock companies, bankruptcy, or insolvency:

The term "valuable security" shall include any order, exchequer acquittance, or other security whatsoever entitling or evidencing the title of any person or body corporate to any share or interest in any public stock or fund, whether of the United Kingdom, or of Great Britain or of Ireland, or of any foreign state, or in any fund of any body corporate, company, or society, respects as grand larceny was before the 21st day of June, 1827.¹

Larceny, or, more properly, Larciny, has been variously defined. We refer to the books which supply the numerous descriptions of the act of larceny,² being content with saying, that the elements and requisites necessary to complete it will furnish as good a guide as a definition which sometimes is not accurate, and is seldom satisfactory. In commencing this comprehensive subject we can hardly do better than follow the exordium of Sir Edward East, who speaks first of a taking, and then of a carrying away,³ or asportation. Now it is manifest that there must be a taking, either by the hand of the party, or by procuration,⁴ and it may be openly, or clandestinely, or by fraud.⁵ Force would constitute a higher species of larceny. And there must be a severance from the possession of the owner.

But, secondly, it will not be sufficient to lay hands on the property unless it be likewise entirely removed from its original position. This is the asportation. As, where the thief took plate out of a trunk, and laid it on the floor, but, being surprised, left it there.⁶ So where the guest took articles out of his room, and placed them in the hall; this was a carrying away.⁷ So, moving a parcel from one end of a waggon to the other.⁸ A leathern bag was placed in the front boot. The prisoner was on the box of the coach, took hold of the upper end of the bag, and lifted it up from the bottom of the boot. Then he and a confederate tried to whether within the United Kingdom or in any foreign state or country, or to any deposit in any bank, and shall also include any debenture, deed, bond, bill, note, warrant, order, or other security whatsoever for money or for payment of money, whether of the United Kingdom, or of Great Britain, or of Ireland, or of any foreign state, and any document of title to lands or goods as hereinbefore defined :

The term "property" shall include every description of real and personal property, money, debts, and legacies, and all deeds and instruments relating to or evidencing the title or right to any property, or giving a right to recover or receive any money or goods, and shall also include, not only such property as shall have been originally in the possession or under the control of any party, but also any property into or for which the same may have been converted or exchanged, and anything acquired by such conversion or exchange, whether immediately or otherwise :

For the purposes of this Act, the night shall be deemed to commence at nine of the clock in the evening of each day, and to conclude at six of the clock in the morning of the next succeeding day.

¹ The day on which the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, received the royal assent.

² East, P. C. 553, citing Lord Coke, Hawkins, Hale, Foster, and Staundforde ; 4 Com. 229, "Larciny." East, 553. R. v. Pear, Leach, 1089, Eyre, B. R. v. Hammond, 2 Russ. C. M. 2, Grose, J. ; Bract. lib. 3, c. 32. R. v. Thurborn, Den. 388, Parke, B.

³ East, P. C. 553.

⁴ 1 Hawk. c. 33, East, 555.

⁵ East, 554.

⁶ Kel. 31.

⁷ 27 Ass. 39.

⁸ R. v. Coslet, Leach, 236.

pull it quite out of the boot, but they were stopped in the attempt by the guard. The judges held this to have been a complete asportation.¹ So where the prisoner bored a hole in a porter cask, by which the porter ran into a can on the ground while the prisoner was present. This was an asportavit.² "By the same rule, drawing a sword partly out of the scabbard will constitute a complete asportation."³ But where the purse was seized, and would have been captured but for a bunch of keys tied to the strings of the purse, the asportation was not finished, for it remained fastened to the place where it was before, although in the hand of the thief.⁴

In Cherry's case, Eyre, B., mentioned a case before him, where goods in a shop were tied to a string fastened by one end to the bottom of the counter. A thief took the goods, and carried them towards the door as far as the string would permit, and was then stopped. He held this no severance.⁵ So where the prisoner drew the end of a piece of lace through a hole in a window, and shook the card on which the remainder of the piece of lace was wrapped, but not so as to remove it from its place, it was held not to be "larceny."⁶

A poacher took a gun from the gamekeeper lest it should be used against him, and afterwards declared that he would sell it. In fact, the gun was not recovered, but the question of intent was entirely for the jury, and as soon as the jury negatived the intent, the judge directed an acquittal.⁷ So where poachers left a gamekeeper senseless on the ground, and one returned to steal his money: this one was only guilty of larceny.⁸ So where a person pretended to be a confederate, in order to obtain the reward for apprehension, the judges held that this evidence negatived the felonious intention.⁹ The prisoner took some timber at sea, defaced the marks, and gave notice on the next day to the receiver-general of the droits of admiralty. Cresswell, J., left it to the jury to say whether the prisoner took the timber for his own use, or with a view

¹ R. v. Walsh, 1 Moo. C. C. 14.

² R. v. Wallis, 3 Cox, 67.

³ 2 Russ. C. M. 6. This doctrine must be supported upon the fact of there being a total change of position, and that the sword and scabbard are not on the person of the owner.

⁴ R. v. Wilkinson, 1 Hale, 508; East, P. C. 556. And if the indictment had contained a charge of stealing a purse and a bunch of keys, the removal from one side of the pocket to the other would not have helped, because of the possession of the owner. So the case of the girdle. B. tried to rob A., but the girdle broke, and his purse dropped.

B. had not touched it, nor did he pick it up. 1 Hale, 533.

⁵ East, P. C. 556.

⁶ R. v. Newman, 2 Russ. C. M. 6, note (u), citing Talf. Dick. Q. S., 216.

The cases as to robbery will be found under "Robbery," as R. v. Lapier, &c.

⁷ R. v. Holloway, 5 C. & P. 524.

⁸ R. v. Hawkins, 3 C. & P. 392.

⁹ R. v. Dannelly and Vaughan, Russ. & Ry. 310. This was the case of Vaughan the Bow Street officer, who persuaded Dannelly, a desperate thief, under a promise of the reward, to betray his confederates in committing a burglary.

of getting salvage.¹ On the other hand, the person who endeavours to tamper, as with a servant, is guilty of larceny if he take the property. As where A. tried to get B. to join in robbing B.'s master. B. told the master, and by concert some marked money was placed on the counter by connivance. A. took it and was guilty of felony.²

Questions of mistake or carelessness must be left to the jury. As if A. should drive one of B.'s sheep with his own flock, and shear it.³ It would be against him, if he should have marked the animal with his own mark.⁴ So where the prisoner took up a deed in the presence of a clerk, and went away it. According to the verdict there was no mistake. This was a larceny. Had the clerk given up the deed, the case would have been different.⁵

It is common to prove a loss of some property. But where no loss was proved, the judge was held to be justified in leaving the case to the jury upon proof of this remark and answer,—“I think there is something wrong about you;” answer, “I hope you will not be too hard with me.”⁶ But there was nothing for the jury when a lad charged with stealing a doll said that “the doll was his own,” for the speech might have been that of an honest boy.⁷

Finding.] It is a dangerous defence to allege a finding or delivery by a person unknown, simply because it is rarely correct. The evidence in favour of it would be that the prisoner made no secret of the acquisition, or that he used every exertion to discover the owner.⁸ It is not an excuse that the property was deposited in an unusual place, as where the master hid his purse in a corn mow, and that the servant found it, if there be circumstances to denote a felonious taking.⁹ Although so unusual a depository would have its weight in the prisoner's favour.¹⁰ A fortiori if the place be an ordinary depository, the prisoner's case is much weakened.¹¹ The question of knowledge is a considerable ingredient in these cases, either as to the owner or the place,¹² as where the servant picked up notes in the passage of her master's house.¹³ But, if a man picks up a purse in the turnpike road, he cannot know whose it is, and he is not guilty of larceny in appropriating it,¹⁴ unless, indeed, there were some obvious mark upon it, or it were claimed on the instant.¹⁵ So likewise in the case of the ballast heavers who brought up a box of plate from the river, for they could not reasonably tell whose was the property.¹⁶ Although this case comes very near to the boundary; for, if the heavers

¹ R. v. Watts, 1 Cox, 349.

² R. v. Egginton, Leach, 913; East, P. C. 666. R. v. Williams, 1 Car. & K. 195.

³ 1 Hale, 507.

⁴ Id.

⁵ R. v. Lawrance, 4 Cox, 438.

⁶ R. v. Burton, 6 Cox, 293.

⁷ R. v. Dredge, 1 Cox, 235.

⁸ East, P. C. 665.

⁹ 1 Hale, 507; East, 664.

¹⁰ 1 Hale, ut supra.

¹¹ East, P. C. 664, Anon. 2 Russ. C. M. 13, Lawrence, J.

¹² R. v. Pope, 6 C. & P. 346.

¹³ R. v. Kerr, 8 C. & P. 176.

¹⁴ R. v. Mole, 1 Car. & K. 417.

¹⁵ S. C. as to the mark.

¹⁶ R. v. Scully, 1 Cox, 189.

knew that plate had been lost at that place, and that the box contained plate, and they immediately converted it to their own use, without making any inquiries, the jury might well be instructed to consider whether the animus furandi did not come upon them at the moment of their finding. Thus, when an actor dropped a 50*l.* note upon the stage, which the prompter picked up, and appropriated, making no effort to discover the owner, he was held guilty of larceny, for there was every reason to suppose that the owner might be speedily found, and that the prisoner not doing more than converting the note to his own use, had the animus furandi upon him as soon as he looked at the note.¹ Indeed the only excuses are where the owner has abandoned his property, or where he cannot be found.² A person bought a bureau at a sale, and a purse containing money was found in it, which the buyer possessed himself of. Here it was held, that the finder would have been guilty of larceny, if he had express notice that the bureau was sold alone without the contents (for then he could have had no difficulty in searching for the owner) or if the buyer believed at the time that nothing inside the bureau was sold. Still, if he had reasonable ground for believing that he had bought the bureau with its contents, he was not guilty.³ Again, where an ignorant person found a 5*l.* note and used it, the court put it to the jury whether she did not believe that the note was hers by right of finding, and directed, that if they thought such to be her belief, they should acquit her.⁴ The stealing must be traced to the finding. For where the jury found a verdict "not guilty of stealing, but guilty of keeping possession in hope of reward, from the time he found the watch," the judges held, that there was no original stealing, and that the verdict should not have been recorded.⁵

It seems now to be the better opinion that to detain a chattel, with the hope of receiving a reward, where there are good grounds for believing that the owner may be found, is larceny. And a restoration upon the advertisement of a reward will not purge the misconduct. Although it has certainly been made a question whether it is larceny to keep back an article under such circumstances till the day after the finding, with the view of getting a present.⁶ And it seems settled, that if there be evidence to show that the prisoner knowing, or having reason to know the owner at the time of the finding, would not have returned the property without a reward, he must be taken to have had the animus furandi, and to be guilty accordingly of larceny.⁷ And it was said in the last case, that an intent to return the goods absolutely, if the prisoner waited for the chance of a reward,⁸ would not

¹ R. v. Coffin, 2 Cox, 44, and R. v. Mole was cited, ante, 1 Car. & K. 417. & K. 841; 18 L. J. M. C. 38. The court cannot amend the verdict: Pollock, Q. B.

² 1 Car. & K. 245.

³ Merry v. Green, 7 Mees. & W. 623.

⁴ R. v. Reed, Car. & M. 306.

⁵ R. v. York, Den. 335; 2 Car.

⁶ R. v. Peters, 1 Car. & K.

245.

⁷ R. v. Spurgeon, 2 Cox, 102.

⁸ Id. But the recorder, if necessary, would have saved this point.

have varied the case; but this dictum may well be doubted, for such evidence clearly evinces that the animus was to get the reward, not to steal the property.

The whole of this law underwent the fullest consideration in R. v. Thurborn, which is now express authority. Thurborn found a note accidentally dropt on the high road. There was neither name nor mark on it, nor could the owner at the time be ascertained. The jury found that the prisoner meant to take it for his own use when he picked it up. However, on the next day, he was made acquainted with the name of the owner, but he changed it, and appropriated the money, and the jury found the appropriation to have been made under the belief that the note was another's. Parke, B., and Maule, J., thought the taking not felonious, and that when the note was changed, there was still no felonious taking. The points were not argued before the judges, but there was considerable dissension amongst them, and the conviction was held wrong.¹ They said, that when a man finds lost property, and appropriates it under the idea that the owner cannot be found, it is not larceny to take it. But if the taker entertains the idea at the time that the owner may be found, then the animus furandi attaches.² Here the original taking was not larceny, because not only was the note lost, but there was no clue whatsoever to the ownership, and no evidence to rebut the presumption that the prisoner must have believed that the owner could not be found.³ The judges, however, had considerable doubt upon the second point as to the subsequent dealing with the note after notice of the ownership.⁴ Upon another occasion, the doctrine was still reduced to a still more simple limit. The prisoner was not the original finder, but he had got possession of a 50*l.* note. He made some suspicious and evasive statements, and ultimately appropriated it. The recorder of Birmingham entertained an idea that the prisoner might not have intended originally to steal the chattel, but that the dishonest feeling might have arisen subsequently, and he directed the jury to consider at what time the felonious thought (if any) took place. But the judges held the direction wrong, for, when was the taking? A thought in the mind could not be a taking. There could not be an ex post facto taking. The inquiries which the prisoner made concerning the property might have been strong evidence for the jury that the original taking was animo furandi, and the name on the note might have proved that the prisoner had the means of knowing the owner. But here were no facts inconsistent with an honest intention in the first instance. The animus furandi, and the means of knowing the owner, should have been presented to the jury

¹ R. v. Thurborn, Den. 387; 2 J., Rolfe, B., Coltman, J., Parke, Car. & K. 831; 18 L. J. M. C. 140; B.
² Den. 396.
³ New. S. C. 581; S. C. nom. R. v. Wood. Per Pollock, C. B., Cresswell, J., Patteson, J.; v. Williams,
⁴ Id. 397.
⁴ Id.

in order to convict.¹ So, where A. found a note and brought it to his master. If the master had reason to know that the owner could be found without difficulty, the animus furandi might be presumed at the time of receiving the note from A., and if he did not know, nor had reasonable means of knowing the owner, still if the jury found that the master afterwards knew who the owner was, and that he meant to appropriate the note under any circumstances at the time of the taking, he is guilty of larceny.²

1. There must be a felonious intention at the time of finding.
2. The means of knowing the owner immediately.³

A man found some notes, and passed one of them, and offered another; he made no inquiry, but there were no patent means of learning who the owner was. The jury, however, found that the owner might have been traced, and that the prisoner believed he might have been traced. But the judge said that the prisoner was not bound to trace the owner. Here was no felonious taking.⁴

The following are cases with different issues. The prisoner drove a lamb by mistake in company with his own lambs out of a field. This act the judges held to be a trespass. But he discovered his error, sold the lamb, denied the fact, and appropriated the proceeds. Here the trespass became felonious as soon as the mistake was discovered, for the animus furandi then took place, and the original taking was not lawful. That was the distinction.⁵ If a person finds an animal straying, and takes with intent to convert it, he is guilty of larceny, and the question in one case for the jury was, whether he so took the animals, or whether, being mixed with the sheep he was driving, he took them by mistake.⁶ A man left his purse on a stall. The owner of the stall, a woman, being questioned, said it was hers, and put it into her pocket. She then concealed it, and, when the man re-appeared, disowned all knowledge of it. The court said this was not lost property, and, therefore, the question of due diligence to find the owner did not apply. And they held a clear distinction between property lost and this purse put down and left. The conviction was affirmed.⁷ Hackney coachmen and per-

¹ R. v. Preston, Den. & P. 353; 21 L. J. M. C. 41.

² R. v. Moore, 30 L. J. M. C. 77. R. v. Gifford (not reported) cited, 30 L. J. M. C. 78; Leigh & Cave, 1.

³ 8 Cox, 95, Hill, J.

⁴ R. v. Dixon, 25 L. J. M. C. 39. R. v. Christopher, 28 L. J. M. C. 35; Bell, C.C. 27; 8 Cox, 91.

⁵ R. v. Riley, Dears. 149. The chairman at sessions ruled that the sale of the lamb constituted the taking. This seems to be better law than to embarrass the case with the points of trespass, and a subsequent animus furandi. The lamb was removed from the field, or rather followed, by mistake. There was, therefore, hardly any taking at all. The error, however, being pointed out, and the sale then being made, a felonious asportation accrued.

⁶ R. v. Cook, 2 Russ. C. M. 12, Cresswell, J.; Dears. 154, cited, 1 Hale, 507.

⁷ R. v. West, Dears. 402; 24 L. J. M. C. 4.

sons of that class are indictable upon a different principle. The driver very frequently can know the abode of the person who hired him, had taken him up, or set him down at a particular house. So that when evidence of knowledge of the house was given, the prisoner was convicted of stealing a trunk left in his coach.¹ So where the prisoner, a coachman, opened a box and destroyed part of the contents, the evidence was deemed sufficient to warrant his conviction.² And now it is the duty of all hackney coachmen or cab-drivers, &c., to carry property found in their vehicles to the office. In default of their so doing the animus furandi may be presumed, and the property, at all events, laid to be that of a person unknown. So, the servant of a railway company who takes property from a railway carriage is not within the rule as to finding. He is liable in almost every case, and is guilty of larceny.³ Concealment, likewise, is a dangerous ingredient upon all these occasions. The prisoners endeavoured to negotiate a bill of exchange, and in so doing attempted to conceal it. Here, Gibbs, C. J., said, that concealment was strong evidence of larceny.⁴

Nevertheless, as soon as a fair account of the possession has been rendered, the prosecutor must answer the evidence. As where a piece of wood had been found in the prisoner's possession five days after it had been lost. The prisoner, when charged, said he had bought it of N., who lived at a short distance from him. It was held that this allegation should be answered.⁵ But if the account be improbable or unreasonable, the case is altered, and the prisoner must prove his questionable statement.⁶ Sometimes the shortness of time after the finding has turned out favourably for the prisoner, but the majority of instances are the other way. A coat was found upon A. It had been left on the road side. Bayley, J., intimated that the prisoner might have intended to restore it.⁷ So, in a case of horse-stealing.⁸ After a lapse of sixteen months after the loss and the finding, Bayley, J., refused to call on the prisoner for his defence.⁹ And where only three months had elapsed, Park, J., pursued the same course, being of opinion that some other evidence than mere possession ought to have been brought forward.¹⁰ But, on a charge for stealing sheets, found on the prisoner's bed, after three calendar months, Wightman, J., left the matter to the jury. He would not lay down any

¹ R. v. Lamb, East, P. C. 664.

⁶ R. v. Harmer, 2 Cox, 487.

² R. v. Wynne, Leach, 413. R. v. Austin, East, P. C. 664, cited, R. v. Sears, Leach, 415, note (b).

R. v. Wilson, Dears. & B. 157; 26 L. J. M. C. 45.

³ R. v. Pierce and others, 6 Cox, 117.

⁷ R. v. Milbourne, 1 Lew. C. C. 251.

⁴ R. v. James and Walters, 2 Russ. C. M. 14. Cartwright v. Green, Leach, 952.

⁸ R. v. Yend and another, 6 C. & P. 176.

⁹ Anon. 2 C. & P. 459.

⁵ R. v. Crowhurst, 1 Car. & K. 370.

¹⁰ R. v. Adams, 3 C. & P. 600.

definite time. There was some, though very slight, evidence in the case before him.¹ So, where six months had elapsed between the theft and the finding of a shovel in the prisoner's house, the prisoner not being at home when the shovel was found, the court would not call on him for his defence.² So, where a horse was given to a servant to turn out, and was missed on the next morning, the servant was not called. Upon the trial of the prisoner, who was found with the horse in the morning, non constat, but that the servant might have delivered it to the prisoner.³ So, where a sheep was lost in September, and found in the prisoner's flock in March.⁴ So, where a mare was lost on December 17, and found on June 20 following, in the prisoner's possession.⁵ The evidence against the prisoner consisted of proof of recent possession, and that he sold the property in a public-house, and that when taken, he stated that C. D. brought the things to his house, and that W., who was at his house, would vouch for the truth. All these persons might have been produced for the prosecution, but were not called before conviction. The Court of Criminal Appeal was asked whether, as those witnesses had not been called, the conviction could stand. Pollock, C. B., said he should be sorry to have had a conviction before him under such evidence, and Cresswell, J., said, there certainly was evidence for the jury, but he could not say more. But the conviction was affirmed.⁶ Where a person was apparently the instrument of others for the purpose of disposing of the property found upon him, the presumption of larceny, which would of course have attached, arising from the recent possession of the property, was considered to have been rebutted.⁷ And this kind of recent possession is not like that of a man coming out of a barn, and being found with corn upon him (which is a highly unfavourable fact) resembling that in the barn.⁸ So, where persons were taken with sugar and other articles of the same description as those just stolen from ships and wharves, the same rule has obtained.⁹ Where two ends of woollen cloth of twenty yards each, in an unfinished state, were found upon the prisoner in the same state, two months after the theft, the possession was deemed sufficiently recent to call upon him for his defence, by reason of the nature of the property.¹⁰ Yet, however long the time may have been since the theft, as fifteen months, yet if the prisoner claim an article found on him, and say he has bought it, and further disputes the identity of the thing

¹ R. v. Hewlett, 2 Russ. C. M. 278. R. v. Adams was cited. guilt. R. v. Cockin, 2 Lew. 235, Coleridge, J.

² R. v. Cruttenden, 6 Jur. 267.

³ R. v. Fellows, 2 Russ. C. M. 123.

⁴ R. v. Harris, 8 Cox, 333.

⁵ R. v. Cooper, 16 Jur. 78; 3 Car. & K. 318. Even one month would weaken the presumption of ⁶ R. v. Wilson, Dears. & B. 157, 160.

⁷ R. v. Collier, 4 Jur. 703.

⁸ East, P. C. 657.

⁹ Id.

¹⁰ R. v. Partridge, 7 C. & P. 551.

supposed to have been lost with that found upon him, he must then account for the possession.¹ He is not, however, obliged to render an account, so that when no loss was proved, his refusal to give any explanation was held not to be evidence against him.² And, if he should give an account, and refer to some known person, before the magistrate, the magistrate ought to call that person before him, for his evidence might either exonerate the prisoner, or show that the prisoner had given a false account.³ A servant came out of a place where brass was kept. There was nothing more, and no possession. This was deemed to be not a scintilla of evidence.⁴

We have already intimated, that as in the case of finding, the accused might have thought he was acting under an idea, however mistaken, of right.⁵ Some Acts of the legislature sanction this excuse. A colourable pretext will be insufficient. As the allegation of a supposed right to glean, in the absence of a local custom.⁶ Or the gaining of booty by some legal device, as a false replevin, false affidavits, &c.⁷ Or a false pretence of any other nature.⁸ The prisoner, by making use of a false name, obtained some teas, which belonged to another person, from a carrier's servant who had no authority to deliver them to any one except the right owner; here it was held that the conviction for larceny was right.⁹ Some wheat consigned to the prosecutors was placed with E., a servant, in one of their storehouses. It was to be delivered to the prosecutors, or to their order, or to their managing clerk. The prisoner, who was in their employ, got the key from E., and upon a false pretence got some of the wheat. This was held to be larceny.¹⁰ So again, the prisoners got the prosecutrix to open her hand and to let them have some money. Having obtained it, they refused to give up a dress they had promised on that condition. This was held to be larceny.¹¹ So where the gipsy woman by tricks and menace got possession of property, the offence was held to be larceny, there being no intention to return any part of the values, the possession, but not the property, having been severed.¹² But where the postman delivered a letter to J. B. under the idea that he was the only person of that name, which letter came into the

¹ R. v. Evans, 2 Cox, 270.

² Hale, P. C. 590.

³ R. v. Smith, 2 Car. & K. 207, Lord Denman, C. J.

⁴ R. v. Walker and another, Dears. 280. See another case as to evidence, R. v. Samways and another, Id. 371.

⁵ East, P. C. 659; 1 Hale, P. C. 513.

⁶ 2 Russ. C. M. 11. The cases will be found in a future page.

⁷ 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 12. R. v. Parr, 2 Ventr. 94.

⁸ A false pretence which causes the owners to part with the ownership of goods or money is a misdemeanor. But one which succeeds in divesting him of the possession may be a larceny.

⁹ R. v. Longstreeth, 1 Moo. C. C. 137.

¹⁰ R. v. Robins, Dears. 318.

¹¹ R. v. Morgan and another, Dears. 395.

¹² R. v. Bunce, 1 Fost. & F. 523.

hands of his son, the prisoner, who appropriated a draft inclosed, the judges held his conviction wrong, because there did not appear to be any animus furandi when he received the letter, although the jury were satisfied that he was afterwards well aware that both the letter and the draft were designed for another.¹ Erle, J., was ruling otherwise when his attention was called to R. v. Mucklow, upon which he reserved the point, and the conviction was held wrong.² In another case it appeared that the prisoner was the master of a Prussian vessel, which was captured by the British, and after the seizure, he broke open the place where some of the goods were, and took them away. It was determined by the judges, that this convict should be recommended for a free pardon, because there was no evidence to show that he meant to convert the property to his own use. He might have broken the place for the benefit of the owners. There was, in fact, no proof of a felonious intention.³

It is a dangerous course to take property and pledge it, although there be an intent to restore it. The court will look coldly at such a defence, yet it will not be wholly rejected. For if the jury should be of opinion that the prisoner took the property with a view to raise money for a temporary purpose, and that he had a reasonable ground for believing that he would shortly be in a condition to restore it, they ought to acquit him.⁴ So it was where a servant pawned his master's plate.⁵ This is a very different act from taking a railway ticket in order to use it, although it was intended to return the ticket at the end of the journey.⁶ Each case depends on the view which the jury take of it. If the intention be obviously to restore, and there be reasonable grounds for supposing that the intent can be easily realized, Phetheon's case may be good law, and Wright's likewise. The felony is negatived if the intent to steal be negatived. But, although there may exist a desire, and even an intent to redeem when it can be done, i. e., generally, the larcenious conversion then attaches to the taking, because the intent must be positive, not conditional. So that, although the prisoner had redeemed some articles from pawn, the partial redemption was held to be no defence, and the case was left to the jury.⁷ The next question is, how far an intent to commit another offence will purge an act done in order to effect that secondary intent. As where the prisoner took some female apparel for the purpose of inducing a girl to go to a hay mow to seek after her property, so that he might have connection with her, but not against her will. The jury found, that the prisoner had no wish to deprive her of her things, and a pardon was

¹ R. v. Mucklow, 1 Moo. C. C. 160.

² R. v. Davis and another, 25 L. J. M. C. 91.

³ R. v. Van Mayen, Russ. & Ry. 118.

⁴ R. v. Phetheon, 9 C. & P. 552.

⁵ R. v. Wright, Burn's Just. by Chitty, 640. Tit. "Larceny." Citing Car. Cr. L. 278, post.

⁶ R. v. Beecham, 5 Cox, 181.

⁷ R. v. Medland, 5 Cox, 292.

recommended.¹ It was the law in ancient times,² and it is still the same, that a taking, although induced by the pressure of hunger or want, is felonious.

The property must be taken from the possession of the owner. Two persons went to receive money. They bought a stamp, and one of them signed the receipt. But neither had possession of the receipt after it was signed. Upon the pretence, however, of fetching the cheque book, C., who was deputed by his father to pay the money, took away the receipt. It was held that this act was not larceny.³

Against the will of the owner or possessor.] There is an ingredient in a felonious taking, which occupies a considerable portion of the space devoted by text writers to larceny. It is the absence of consent on the part of the owner or master of the goods to the taking. And this, at first sight, might seem to be of course; yet, as two facts must be ascertained,—first, the animus furandi, and next, the dissent of the proprietor,—we must not be supposed unreasonable if it should become necessary for us to dwell upon the point for a short time. If A. lend a horse to B., upon condition of B. returning it the next day, and B. forthwith sell it, here A. had never parted with the property, and B. had done all in his power to show that he never intended to return it; it is probable that a jury would convict B. of larceny, and such a conviction would be sustained. So if A. deliver a parcel to B. to keep or carry for him, and B. run away with it, a jury will probably entertain a strong suspicion that B. intended to convert the parcel feloniously to his own use, when he received it. So if A. sell goods to B. upon condition of immediate payment, and whilst A.'s back is turned, or while he is lulled by some pretence, B. carries off the goods, A. shall not be said to have parted with the property, and the taking is felonious, invito domino. But if it be discovered that A. sold his horse, upon condition of prompt payment, and that he suffered the purchaser to ride away with it, or sold his goods, so as to give the buyer credit, although A. never meant to agree to the loss of his property, yet, by yielding up both ownership and possession, although still cheated, he could not be said to be feloniously plundered. And, on the other hand, if it should appear that the prisoner's dishonest conversion was an afterthought, he will be acquitted. It is then a principle that when the owner of goods surrenders up his property to the taker, the latter is not guilty of larceny, however he may be of a misdemeanor, or may be under the obligation of a debt. As where the bargain and sale were completed, and the prisoner having mounted the horse (the subject of the sale), rode off, saying

¹ R. v. Dickinson, Russ. & Ry. 420.

³ R. v. Frampton, 2 Car. & K. 47.

² 1 Hale, P. C. 565.

he would return and pay immediately, to which the prosecutor assented.¹ So where the clerk paid the prisoner for goods which the latter was instructed to buy, but, instead of doing so, the prisoner produced a false ticket, and deceived the clerk. This, although a false pretence, was not larceny.² The prisoner borrowed a horse, under the pretence of carrying a child to a surgeon. Whether he did or not carry the child did not appear, but, on the day following, when the purpose of the borrowing must have been over, he sold the horse upon a request made to him. The jury found, that when he borrowed the animal, he had no felonious intent, and the judges decided, that the conviction could not be supported.³ And they said, that although, at one time, there was a notion that a felonious act might be done at the expiration of the contract, yet they repudiated that doctrine, and the authorities upholding it.⁴ And as the prisoner was found by the jury to be free from the felonious taking at first, they would not recognize a new felonious taking upon withholding and disposing of the animal.⁵ Again, the prisoner bought goods, and had a bill of parcels for them as goods sold, with a debit in the day book, which was, in due course, transferred to the journal and ledger, and, in return, he gave fabricated bills to the prosecutor's servant, which the servant accepted as payment: the jury found that there was an intent to defraud throughout, and the tradesman evidently did not mean to give credit, but the judges said that a sale and delivery had taken place, although the bills were of no value.⁶ So where a servant who had a general authority to manage the business of his master, a pawnbroker, delivered up a pledge to the prisoner, who was the pawner, upon receiving a parcel which he supposed to be diamonds, it was unanimously held that this was not larceny, for property, ownership, and possession were entirely abandoned. This taking was not invito domino.⁷ So, in loans. A woman came from a neighbour's house, saying, that the neighbour requested the loan of half a guinea's worth of silver, and would send the half guinea presently. The money was lent, but the case was said not to amount to larceny, for this was a loan of the silver.⁸ So again, the obtaining of bank notes by writing a counterfeit letter, was held to come under the same rules.⁹ So

¹ R. v. Harvey, Leach, 467.

² R. v. Barnes, 5 Cox, 112.

³ R. v. Banks, Russ. & Ry. 441.

⁴ R. v. Charlewood, East, P. C. 689. R. v. Tunnard, Id. 694. See also R. v. Leigh, East, P. C. 694; Leach, 411, n. R. v. Box, 9 C. & P. 126. R. v. Jones, Car. & M. 611. R. v. Evans, Id. 632.

⁵ R. v. Banks, ut supra.

⁶ R. v. Parkes, Leach, 614.

⁷ R. v. Jackson, 1 Moo. C. C. 119. R. v. Meilham.

⁸ R. v. Coleman, East, P. C. 672; Leach, 302, n. R. v. Bromley, 2 Russ. C. M. 298. But an indictment for a false pretence would succeed if the pretence were shown to be false. See R. v. Atkinson, Leach, ut supra. R. v. Walsh, Id. 1054; 4 Taunt. 258; Russ. & Ry. 215.

⁹ R. v. Atkinson, East, P. C. 673. R. v. Adams and another, [on a forged order,] Den. 38.

where, through falsehood, the prisoner contrived to get another person's hat from the maker, who had observed that he could not let the prisoner have a hat without paying for it, but nevertheless delivered up the property freely to a boy, under the impression that he had been duly sent, the same doctrine prevailed.¹ So where a hat maker was persuaded by the prisoner to let him have a hat to show to a customer, it was the same, i. e., fraud, not felony.² So it was where the prosecutor put down a sovereign, and asked for change, the prisoner took it, and pretended he would go and get change; the prosecutor objected, but afterwards allowed the prisoner to go. The prisoner did not return. Here the prosecutor divested himself of the coin, for he could not have expected to have received the specific piece of money again.³ Had the prisoner gone away with the sovereign against the will of the other, the act would have been felonious. So in gambling transactions, although fraud and collusion be manifest and be found by the jury; for the prosecutor freely parts with his money. As in a hiding under the hat, where the prosecutor laid down the stake, intending to take it up if he won, and to pay if he lost.⁴ Although there be a decoy and the jury find fraud, ab initio, it makes no difference.⁵ So in ring-dropping, where the prosecutor parted with 7*l.*, manifestly with no intention of regaining possession of it.⁶ So where the prisoner obtained 2*l.* by means of a false entry, the same principle applied.⁷ The prisoner obtained from his employers, managers of a savings bank, a cheque for 50*l.*, under the pretence of its being wanted by a depositor to that amount. This was a false pretence. For the prisoner acted, not as an agent of the managers, but of the depositor.⁸

But a very slight circumstance will change the characters of all these transactions. A horse was hired for a day by the prisoner, but on that same day it was sold by the prisoner, and the jury found that the prisoner had contemplated the conversion and disposal of the horse at the time of the hiring. The judges, after much consideration, held this taking to be felony.⁹ So where the prisoner ordered a horse of the prosecutor upon the pretence that his father, whom the prosecutor knew, had sent him, and did not return the horse at the time appointed, he was held guilty of larceny.¹⁰ But the mere offer to sell, in the absence of other proof, would not be sufficient evidence of the conversion, being

¹ R. v. Adams, Russ. & Ry. 225.

² R. v. Cookwaine, Leach, 498.

³ R. v. Thomas, 9 C. & P. 741.
R. v. Reynolds, 2 Cox, 170.

⁴ R. v. Nicholson and others, Leach, 610.

⁵ R. v. Riley, 1 Cox, 98. R. v. Campbell, 1 Moo. C. C., 179, was cited.

⁶ R. v. Wilson and another, 8 C. & P. 111.

⁷ R. v. Green, Dears. 323.

⁸ R. v. Essex, 27 L. J. M. C. 20; Dears. & B. 371.

⁹ R. v. Pear, East, P. C. 685; Leach, 212. R. v. Armstrong, 1 Lew. 195. R. v. Spence, 1 Lew. 197.

¹⁰ R. v. Vicar, 1 Lew. 199.

incomplete under such circumstances.¹ It is said, in the absence of other proof, for if that proof be supplied, the guilt of larceny attaches. As where the prisoner hired a horse and gig to go to Sheffield, but he went in the contrary direction, and then he offered them for sale. Coleridge, J., and Parke, B., held this to be a larceny.² Brooks's case is untouched by this decision, because of the plain distinction. Here the possession only, not the property, was surrendered. The master expected to get his horse again. So it was where the prisoner, by means of a lie, got possession of a horse, which the prosecutor had expressly directed a livery-stable keeper not to part with.³ The owner never, for an instant, abandoned his property. So where the prisoner was sent to deliver a horse, and the person to whom it was delivered asked him to sell a pony for 5*l.* The prisoner sold the pony for 3*l.* and absconded. The court held him to have been a servant, not a bailee, and guilty of larceny, for neither the property nor the possession (being that of the servant) had left the master.⁴

There is a distinction in ring-dropping between cases where the owner does or does not expect to see his property again. If there be an arrangement that he may naturally look for the return, however he may have given up possession, the distinction obtains, and the sharpers are guilty of larceny.⁵ In Moore's case it was considered, by the majority, that the money had been delivered, not as a loan, but as a pledge, and that the prosecutor clearly understood that, so far from parting with his property, he was to have it again the next day in specie.⁶ So where several conspired to cheat another by a fraudulent bet, and after inducing him to deposit his stake in the hands of a confederate, duped him out of his money, the judges held it a felonious taking, because the prosecutor never intended to pay unless the wager had been really won, and, by merely depositing his notes, he only parted with the possession of them.⁷ And there is a distinction between this case and R. v. Nicholson,⁸ for, in the latter case, the prosecutor staked his money down and assented to its being taken up,

¹ R. v. Brooks, 8 C. & P. 295, Tindal, C. J.

² R. v. Janson, 4 Cox, 82. The question is, "Had the prisoner the intention of stealing the horse when he hired it?" R. v. Cole, 2 Cox, 340. In the last case the prisoner said he wanted to go to Bradford, but he went elsewhere, and then sold the horse.

³ R. v. Steer, 2 Car. & K. 988.

⁴ R. v. Stanbury, 2 Cox, 272.

⁵ R. v. Patch, Leach, 238; East, P. C. 678. R. v. Anderson, Leach, 239, n. R. v. Moore, Id. 314; East, P. C. 679. R. v.

Marsh, Leach, 345. R. v. Watson, Id. 640. And see R. v. Owen, Id. 572.

⁶ R. v. Moore, East, P. C. 679. But Lord Loughborough and Skynner, C. B., considered the advance of the money as a loan upon the security of the ring, and that the prosecutor had parted with his property, because he did not expect to receive the identical money back again.

⁷ R. v. Robson and others, Russ. & Ry. 413.

⁸ Ante.

considering that he had lost, whereas in Robson's case, it was the will of the prosecutor to have received back his deposit, or to have directed the payment of it, in case he had been satisfied of his having lost, and he never parted with the control over his money. And it is observable, that those who were present assisting in the fraud upon these occasions were deemed equally guilty with the principal players.¹ The prosecutor was induced to draw a cheque, by two persons who conspired to cheat him. He went to the bank to see the cheque cashed by one of the prisoners, who had possession of it, and the money was paid by desire of the prosecutor. The prisoner made an excuse and decamped with the money. The prosecutor never intended to part with his money. He was merely the victim of a fraudulent trick. The judges held, that he had maintained a control over this money, that the possession remained in him, that this taking was invito domino, and that the prisoners were rightly convicted of stealing the notes and money, given in exchange for the cheque.² So, in the case of goods, if a man show plainly that he does not intend to give credit, nor to authorize his servant to do so, and he becomes a victim to the prisoner's artifice, he can only be said to part with the temporary possession of his goods, and against his will.³ Chissers came to a shop and asked for certain articles, and upon their being delivered into his hand, offered a less price than was asked, and ran away with them. This was larceny.⁴ A fortiori, where the goods were not delivered. The prisoners induced a tradesman to bring goods to a house, where one of them pretended to make a bargain, and under pretence of wanting some other articles, persuaded the prosecutor to leave his goods for a time, whilst he went home to fetch the rest. In his absence, the prisoners decamped with the property. This was held to be larceny, for the tradesman never intended to give up his property without the money, although the possession might be gone during his absence.⁵ So where a woman went with one of the prisoners in order to get the money for some coats he had bought of her, leaving the coats in the hands of the prisoner's companion, an accomplice, who immediately absconded, it was held that felony had been committed.⁶ So where the London Dock Company parted, by mistake, with some casks to a carrier, who broke bulk, it was held, that the carrier and his confederate, having been thereby guilty of larceny, the property was rightly laid in the company.⁷ So where a master sent his servant with ¹ R. v. Standley, Russ. & Ry. 305. R. v. Homer, Leach, 270. See Leach, 239; Russ. & Ry. 414.

² R. v. Johnson and another, Den. & P. 310; 21 L. J. M. C. 32.

³ R. v. Sheppard, 9 C. & P. 121. The case of a horse.

⁴ R. v. Chisser, Tho. Raym. 275.

⁵ R. v. Sharpless and another, Leach, 92.

⁶ R. v. County, 2 Russ. C. M. 50.

⁷ R. v. Vincent and another, 21 L. J. M. C. 109; Den. & P. 464.

some silver ewers in order that the prisoner might make a choice, the same rule prevailed. The circumstance of the election clearly proved that the master's possession remained with the servant, for, until the prisoner had elected, the contract could not have commenced, and the contract of the servant could not extend to an unqualified delivery when the choice was made.¹ So where the prisoner bought goods, but upon the express condition that they should be paid for before he took them out of his cart, upon which he received the delivery order, and converted the goods to his own use without payment, (having likewise deceived the clerks of the warehouse, who went for payment to the place affixed by him,) this was held to be larceny, for the property had never been, for an instant, surrendered.² Even where the owner consented to place the goods in the hands of a third person, not a confederate, there was the same ruling. The prisoner contrived to induce a tradesman to leave a large package with a book-keeper, and then made an appointment with him to receive the money. He broke his promise, and getting the goods from the book-keeper, made off with them. The judges had no doubt upon the subject.³ The distinction may be thus illustrated. The prisoner bought a hat upon condition that he should not have it without payment. But he found out that another person had bought a hat at the same shop. Upon this he sent a boy, and told him to go to the shop for the other person's hat, upon the pretence that the other person had sent for it. It was then not difficult to get the hat from the boy. Here both property and possession were parted with. This was not larceny.⁴ So where the prisoner bought some oxen, declining to clip them, (which was usual, but which, nevertheless, would make no difference,) but agreeing to pay for them at dinner time, yet, so far from fulfilling his undertaking, watched his opportunity, and sold them to persons in the fair, the judges held him guilty of larceny, since the jury found that he had no intention of paying for them, and the prosecutor's bailiff had sworn that he would not have delivered them without the money.⁵ So where the prisoner had hired a chaise for an indefinite time, he was held rightly convicted, there being no return of it within a reasonable time, for his subsequent conduct tended to satisfy the jury that the original taking was felonious.⁶ So where a chest of tea was obtained through the fraudulent use of a request note and permit, it was felony, for the servant at the India House had no authority to deliver the tea to any except the right owner.⁷ So where the prisoner obtained some cheese, by

¹ R. v. Davenport, 1 Archb. Peel's Acts, 5.

² R. v. Pratt, 1 Moo. C. C. 250.

³ R. v. Campbell, 1 Moo. C. C. 179. So was Lyons v. De Pass, [stealing slippers,] 11 Ad. & El. 326; 3 Per. & D. 177.

⁴ R. v. Adams, 2 Russ. C. M. 28.

⁵ R. v. Gilbert, 1 Moo. C. C. 185.

⁶ R. v. Semple, Leach, 420.

⁷ R. v. Hench, Russ. & Ry. 163. R. v. Longstreeth, ante, 1 Moo. C. C. 137.

the payment of a counterfeit crown, and the master swore he had given no authority to part with it without payment, the case amounted to felony, there being grounds for believing in the prisoner's guilty knowledge.¹ So where some deer horns were put into a cart, it was held, that the possession of the master enured at the delivery to the servant.² The servant cannot yield up the ownership, although he nominally abandons the possession. The master sent goods to H. by his servant: the prisoner meeting the servant, persuaded him to deliver up the goods, saying that he was H. This was deemed felony, for the wrongful taking would not alter the property, nor the possession.³ So where a watchmaker sent a watch, by post, addressed to his customer, being deceived by the prisoner's letter, and the prisoner received it from the postmaster, the offence was larceny, for the postmaster was the servant of the true owner, and the special property of the watchmaker, if any, ceased when he put the watch into the post. The possession was that of the owner.⁴ In one case the judges seem to have considered that the possession of the owner continued where the prisoner, qua servant, rescued some goods from a fire.⁵ Upon this occasion the prisoner had saved some muslin, in the presence of the prosecutor, and under his direction, but not by his desire. The owner afterwards applied to the prisoner, who denied having the property, but it was found artfully concealed in her house. The jury said, in their verdict, that they thought she had no original intention of stealing, but that the intention came upon her afterwards. The conviction was, of course, held wrong upon the latter ground.⁶ The mere custody of goods to show to a customer is not sufficient to divest the possession from the owner, although the person employed was not a servant of the owner.⁷ So it is in the case of taking bills or money fraudulently. The landlady of a house requested the prisoner, her lodger, to give her change for a bank note. He said he could not, but that he would go and get change; she delivered

¹ R. v. Small, 8 C. & P. 46. R. v. Stewart, 1 Cox, 174. The case of a valueless cheque. R. v. Webb, 5 Cox, 154. Where the prisoner gave the prosecutor an order for some boots. The servant took them with an order not to part with them without the money. The prisoner met the servant and said, that the goods were for him, and gave two counterfeit half-crowns for them. He was considered to have been rightly convicted of larceny, and his having previously pleaded guilty to the charge of uttering made no difference.

² R. v. Norval and another, 1 Cox, 95.

³ R. v. Wilkins, East, P. C. 673; Leach, 520. Whereas in R. v. Parkes, East, P. C. 674, ante, the servant was intrusted with the power of disposing of the goods.

⁴ R. v. Kay, 26 L. J. M. C. 119; Dears. & B. 231.

⁵ 2 Russ. C. M. 57. Note (d), in R. v. Leigh.

⁶ R. v. Leigh, East, P. C. 694; Leach, 411, n.

⁷ R. v. Harvey, 9 C. & P. 353. R. v. Jones, Car. & M. 611. A fortiori, if a servant. R. v. Roberts and another, 3 Cox, 74. This point has been repeatedly settled.

the note into his hands, and thus gave up the possession, but not the property, and therefore, as the prisoner did not return, he was guilty of a felony.¹ And in another case of exchange of bank notes for gold and silver, Wood, B., observed, that both the prosecutor and the prisoner must assent in order to effect a legal surrender of the property.² The prisoner went into a shop, and bought tobacco of the value of 1*½*d., and he tendered 2*s.* 6*d.* The shopman put down 2*s.* and whilst he was counting out the change, the prisoner took up the 2*s.* as if to throw them into the till, but threw in one only, and then asked for four sixpences, and received 1*s.* and two sixpences. This was not larceny.³ So, where the prisoner offered to discount a bill for 100*l.*, and contrived to get it into his hands upon the promise of going immediately for the money, upon which the clerk of the prosecutor was ordered to attend him, and not to lose sight of him till he, the clerk, had received the amount,—it was held, that a fraudulent evasion of the clerk by the prisoner gave the transaction the character of a felonious act, and that as the jury had found a preconcerted design to steal the bill, he had been legally convicted.⁴ If a person steal a bank note from A. and offer it to A. for change, it seems that it is larceny,⁵ for, although the possession might be gone, the ownership remains. A servant hid some fat belonging to his master, having taken it from its proper place. He then proposed to sell this fat to his master, but as the master had marked it, a discovery took place. It was argued for the prisoner that the entire possession of the fat was never intended to be taken, so as to deprive the owner of his property, but the judges affirmed the conviction.⁶ And the case differs entirely from that, where a workman took some skins from one part of a warehouse and placed them in another, with intent, not to sell them, but to bring them back as though he had himself dressed them, and thus to get paid for them as his own work. Here the skins were to be returned to the master without change of ownership. It was an attempt to commit a misdemeanor by a false pretence, but not larceny.⁷ So, in the case of the ore, where the miners took ore from the heaps of other miners, in order to increase their wages, which were paid according to the quantity produced. This was not larceny, for the ore was never taken out of the possession of the owner.⁸ A fortiori, where watches had been delivered to a watchmaker, who disposed of them, the jury not having found any animus furandi when they

¹ R. v. Campbell, Leach, 564.

² R. v. Oliver, 4 Taunt. 274, cited, Leach, 1072. See R. v. Williams, 6 C. & P. 390.

³ R. v. Williams, 7 Cox, 355; and R. v. Oliver was cited.

⁴ R. v. Aichles, Leach, 294.

⁵ See Den. 383, Alderson, B.

⁶ R. v. Hall, Den. 381; 18 L.J.

M. C. 62; 2 Car. & K. 947. R. v.

Manning and another, 22 L. J.

M. C. 21; Dears. 21; and R. v.

Hall was cited as in point.

⁷ R. v. Holloway, Den. 370; 2 Car. & K. 942.

⁸ R. v. Webb and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 431.

were received, the convictions were held wrong.¹ The prisoners broke open their master's store-room and took some finished gloves from it, and placed them on a table with other finished gloves. They were glove finishers, and pretended that these gloves were liable to payment according to the rule, which was, to pay for the number put upon the table. This was not larceny, and Holloway's case was deemed conclusive.² So, where the prisoner, not being a servant, was intrusted with a parcel of notes to take to a coach office, he was held to be guilty of felony for abstracting them.³ A landlord went to his tenant with a receipt written and signed. The tenant, who had removed his goods, asked to look at the receipt, giving the landlord at the same time 2*l.* He refused, however, to return the receipt, or to pay the remainder of the rent. He was then charged with stealing the receipt, and the landlord proved that when he gave up that paper he expected to receive the rent; that he would not have parted with it without payment, but that he did not expect to get back his receipt, because he looked for his rent. This was held to be larceny, and the payment of 2*l.* was considered to make no difference.⁴ Collins and Coker were charged with stealing two waistcoats. They had a gig, and had been bargaining with the prosecutor for some clothes, which were to be sent to N., but which address was fictitious. Coker then settled with the prosecutor to buy the waistcoats for 12*s.* Collins was in the gig. Coker took the waistcoats and drove off. The question was, whether the verdict of the jury, that the waistcoats were parted with conditionally, meant that the prosecutor should be paid for them at some time or other, for, if so, it was a debt. But the court held the conviction of Coker right. This was an express finding by the jury that the prosecutor only parted with the possession of the goods.⁵

Again, another case of artifice was where the prisoner got a load of "soft coal," and by a trick got it weighed as "slack," having covered the top of the cart with "slack." Here the property was not parted with, and the court held that he had committed larceny.⁶ Whereas, where a broker obtained delivery orders for some tallow, and tendered a crossed cheque upon the bank, which was accepted, but which produced no assets, and then got fresh warrants, he was acquitted, because by receiving the cheques the prosecutors parted with the property, as well as the possession of the delivery orders, by giving credit.⁷

¹ R. v. Thistle, 19 L. J. M. C. 66; Den. 502; 2 Car. & K. 842. R. v. Levy, 4 C. & P. 241.

² R. v. Poole, 27 L. J. M. C. 53; Dears. & B. 345. Whether they were indictable for a false pretence, qu.?

³ R. v. Jenkins, 9 C. & P. 38. R. v. Smith, 1 Car. & K. 428. Where the money was given to pay a coal bill, and the person employed brought back a forged receipt, this was a larceny of the money, although the prisoner was not legally a servant.

⁴ R. v. Rodway, 9 C. & P. 784.

⁵ R. v. Cohen and another, Den. & P. 249.

⁶ R. v. Bramley, 8 Cox, 468.

⁷ R. v. North, 8 Cox, 433. The jury, however, said that they gave this verdict under the direction of the judge.

Whether the subject be a horse, or goods, or any chattel, the contract endures till the engagement is satisfied or ended.¹ In some of these cases the possession is said to remain with the owner.² The prisoner was convicted of stealing a horse intrusted to him for agistment. There was no proof that the contract had been determined, so his conviction was held wrong, for the owner had parted with the possession.³ A person had the care of a horse, but, on being required, voluntarily gave it up. He then regained possession of it by a false pretence. Having sold it, according to his instructions under the original bailment, it was contended for him that the possession still remained constructively in him. But the judges held his conviction right. They said he was a trespasser upon his gaining possession by a false story, and, therefore, that he had committed larceny.⁴ Had the countermand been unaccompanied by a resumption of possession, there would have been no larceny.⁵ So, where the prisoner went to a pound-keeper and paid the dues for a horse, alleging that he had been sent by the owner, he was held guilty of larceny, and the possession of the horse was deemed to remain in the pound-keeper, being servant of the owner.⁶ A. pawns for B., A. then proposes to B. to redeem, which is agreed to, but A. takes away the property. This is larceny, for B. never gave up the ownership.⁷ A miller has corn to grind, he abstracts a part; by this act he violates the contract and commits felony.⁸ So, where a warehouseman received a bag of wheat to keep for the prosecutor, but took all the wheat with a felonious intention, he was guilty of larceny, and the judges said it mattered not whether he took the whole or a part.⁹ So, where a woman trusted the prisoner, a porter, with her bundle, and went with him, but he ran away with it, this act was felony in him. He determined the privity of contract, or perhaps the possession was never out of the woman, as she went with him; or perhaps he had an original felonious intention when he took the bundle.¹⁰

Carriers and bailees, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96.] With reference to carriers and bailees, it was enacted by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 3, whosoever, being a bailee of any chattel, money, or valuable security,¹¹ shall fraudulently take or convert the same to his own use or the use of any person other than the owner thereof, although he shall not break bulk or otherwise determine the bailment, shall be guilty of larceny, and may be convicted thereof upon an indictment for larceny; but this section shall not extend to any offence punishable on summary conviction.

There used to be a notable distinction in the case of carriers. Where such persons took the whole package committed to their

¹ Kel. 35, 82; Leach, 252, n.

² 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 10.

³ R. v. Smith, 1 Moo. C. C. 473.

⁴ R. v. Stears, Den. 349; 18 L. J. M. C. 30.

⁵ Den. 355, Parke, B., in S. C.

⁶ R. v. Simpson, 2 Cox, 235.

⁷ R. v. Sparrow, 2 Cox, 287.

⁸ East, P. C. 698.

⁹ R. v. Brazier, Russ. & Ry.

337. R. v. Howell, 7 C. & P. 325.

¹⁰ R. v. Jones, East, P. C. 697; see Id. 698.

¹¹ See sect. 1.

charge, the act was not larceny, but otherwise, if the package were opened and a portion taken.¹ A carrier was convicted, however, under 20 & 21 Vict.c. 54, as a bailee, for misappropriating money with which he was intrusted to pay for goods.² However, as soon as the carrier has delivered his charge, the privity of contract is no more, so that if he should bring goods to the appointed place, and then take them away, he will be guilty of felony.³ So, if a quantity of goods were committed to the care of A., and he appropriated any article thereof, the bailment was determined, and the appropriation of the residue was larceny. If there were a separate bailment of each article it was not.⁴

From a review of these cases of larceny it appears,—1st, that a felonious intention must have existed in the mind of the taker ab initio; 2ndly, that in most instances the jury are the proper judges of the intention; 3rdly, that the property remains with the owner, although he may part with the possession, unless he does some act to make his assent to the taking evident; and 4thly, that in some cases, the possession continues with the owner as well as the property, although another person has the custody of it with a felonious intention. It has, moreover, been held, that where the owner combined with his servant for the detection of thieves, and permitted them to carry away part of his goods, he was not precluded from prosecuting them for the larceny, for he never intended that they should escape with the property. He gave them a greater facility to commit the offence, but he offered no original inducement to them, nor employed his servant to suggest the perpetration of the theft, which might have made a difference.⁵

It was, at one time, a common practice for servants to take corn clandestinely in order to feed their master's horses, and different opinions appear to have prevailed as to this conduct on their part.⁶ Where the prisoners opened the granary door by a false key, and took out beans, which the jury found they meant to give to the horses, eight judges held that they had committed larceny. Some of the judges thought, that as the man's labour had been lessened by giving the additional quantity of beans, the taking might be considered as being lucri causâ.⁷ This point has been once more ¹ Kel. 83. See the old cases, East, P. C. 696. But the reporter and text writer marvelled at this law. Leach, 33. R. v. Madox, Russ. & Ry. 92. Casks of butter. R. v. Fletcher and another, 4 C. & P. 545. R. v. Pratley, [a truss of hay,] 5 C. & P. 533. R. v. Cornish, Dears. C. C. 425, [cartloads of coal.] R. v. Seward, [canvas,] 5 Cox, 295.

² R. v. Wells, 1 Fost. & F. 109.

³ Kel. 83.

⁴ R. v. Poyser, 20 L. J. M. C. 191.

⁵ R. v. Egginton and others, Leach, 913; 2 Bos. & P. 508. He gave up the possession, not the property. See Fost. 129; Russ. & Ry. 310; also R. v. Williams, 1 Car. & K. 195.

⁶ Russ. & Ry. 307, 308.

⁷ R. v. Morfit and another, Russ. & Ry. 307. Diss. Graham and Wood; Barons, and Dallas, J. R. v. Usborne or Osborne, 5 Jur. 200, Parke, B. R. v. Cole, Id. n. Contra, Lord Abinger, C. B. R. v. Smith, 1 Cox, 10, Rolfe, B.

seriously considered, and the result has been that the convictions were sustained. The prisoners were tried before Erle, J., for stealing their master's oats. They were the carter and the carter's boy, and they took the oats for the horses, but they were not answerable for the condition of the horses. The jury found the fact of taking to give to the horses, but negatived any intention of private benefit. The majority of the judges held this act to be larceny, for the prisoners took the oats knowingly, and against the will of the owner, and without title or authority, with intent not to take temporary possession, and then abandon the oats (which would not be larceny), but to take the entire dominion over them, and it made no difference that this was not done lucri causâ, or even that the mode of applying the oats might be beneficial to the owner. And all the majority held themselves bound by the previous decisions, though several doubted whether, had the matter been res integra, they should have so decided. Erle, J., and Platt, B., thought that those judges, who had decided in favour of the conviction upon a former occasion, had proceeded on the ground that the prisoner would have gained, which was here negatived; and they also thought the taking not felonious, because the object was not to deprive the owner of his property, but to apply it for his benefit.¹ So it was where malt was given to horses.² So in the case of taking corn for the same purposes.³ So though a servant pawn his master's plate for the purpose of raising money upon it, this would not (in the opinion of Hullock, B.,) be larceny, yet if the intent were to steal it, it would be otherwise. The question is for the jury.⁴ Nevertheless, if a servant takes property, it is no defence that he has given it away.⁵

Gleaners.] The right to glean is not known to the law.⁶ Especially if the farmer swear a felony against the parties for stealing.⁷ The act is not simply a trespass, but a felony.⁸

Again, on the subject of lucri causâ. The prisoner opened a stable door, and having taken out the prosecutor's horse, backed it down a coalpit, whereby the horse was killed. This was done in ¹ R. v. Privett and another, Den. 193; 2 Car. & K. 114. Acc. Lord Denman, C. J.; Tindal, C. J.; Parke, B.; Patteson, J.; Williams, J.; Coltman, J.; Rolfe, B.; Wightman, J.; Cresswell, J.

² R. v. Careswell, 5 Jur. 251. And it does not seem necessary to show upon every occasion that the motive of the servant was to diminish his own labour.

³ R. v. Handley, Car. & M. 547. And the judge would not save the point.

⁴ R. v. Wright, Burn's Just. by Chitty, 640, Tit. "Larceny," citing Car. Cr. L. 278. See also R. v.

Guernsey. Taking papers from the Colonial Office. Verdict, Not guilty. 1 Fost. & F. 394.

⁵ R. v. White, 9 C. & P. 344.

⁶ 4 Burr. 1927, Hewitt, J. Steel v. Houghton and another, 1 Hen. Bl. 51.

⁷ They had been taking the corn before it had been carried, and even when some was standing. R. v. Price, Esq. 4 Burr. 1925. Rule for an information against a magistrate for committing them discharged with costs.

⁸ Woodf. Land. & Ten. ed. 1814, cited, 2 Russ. C. M. 11, O. B. cor. Rooke, J.

order to prevent the animal from being sworn to upon a trial for feloniously stealing it. Six judges held this act to be a felony. They said that the taking need not be lucri causá, that the object being to deprive the owner of his property, showed a felonious intention. Five judges were of a contrary opinion, and some of the six thought that the purpose in question might be deemed a benefit or lucri causá.¹ Although where the prisoner, out of revenge, threw some furniture into a river, having no intention of converting it to his own use, an acquittal was directed.² The prisoner had supplied to him a quantity of pig iron. He was to put this into a furnace to be melted, and was to be paid according to the weight of the metal which ran out of the furnace, and became bars. The prisoner put in the iron, and with it an iron axle belonging to his employers, of the value of 7s. This axle was not pig iron, and the prisoner gained 1*d.* by adding the axle, because the quantity of iron which ran from the furnace was increased. Upon this, it was held, that the prisoner was guilty of larceny, if he put the axle into the furnace with intent to convert it for his own benefit.³ A person was charged with larceny for opening and detaining a letter through curiosity, and an intent to injure was insinuated, but the judges directed an acquittal.⁴ However, where a servant got a letter from the post office addressed to B., and destroyed it for fear of its containing information unfavourable to her character, the judges, after argument, held that she had committed larceny, for here was a sufficient lucrum, even supposing that the principle of lucri causá, which they would not admit, should be recognized.⁵ So where a person was intrusted with a letter containing money for the purpose of putting it in the post. It was objected, that the prisoner was a bailee, but the court held that he had been guilty of larceny. The property was not parted with.⁶

Felonious taking, in what character.] Although we shall have occasion hereafter to point out more fully the principles which govern the more serious offences of larceny, provided for by the legislature against particular persons, as servants, clerks, &c., we will yet take the general principles of a felonious taking by particular persons in this place. and treat them as larcenies. As where the prisoner ran away with his master's cart.⁷ So where a clerk took a bill of exchange from a letter, which he had been ordered to put into the post.⁸ So where the clerk discounted a bill taken from his master's box, and absconded.⁹ So where the banker's

¹ R. v. Cabbage, Russ. & Ry. Coleridge, Maule, and Wightman, 92. See Den. 368. Parke, B., JJ., abs. in R. v. Wynn.

² R. v. Blyton, Dick. Q. S. 4th ed. p. 202, cited Den. 191.

³ R. v. Richards, 1 Car. & K. 532, Tindal, C. J.

⁴ R. v. Godfrey, 8 C. & P. 563.

⁵ R. v. Eliz. Jones, Den. 188; 2 Car. & K. 236. Platt, B., dub.;

⁶ R. v. Jones, 7 C. & P. 151.

⁷ R. v. Robinson, East, P. C. 565.

⁸ R. v. Paradise, Id.; Leach, 523, cited.

⁹ R. v. Chipchase, Leach, 699.

R. v. Metcalf, 1 Moo. C. C. 433.

R. v. Heath, 2 Moo. C. C. 33.

clerk pretended to a customer that he had paid money to the customer's account, and asking for a loan of it, got a cheque from him upon his master, with whom the customer kept cash, and then, in order to retard detection, made false entries in the books, he was held guilty of larceny. Every part of the definition of larceny was said to apply to the case.¹ So where a banker's clerk took money out of a strong room, where the cash was kept, having gone thither for a special purpose, he was held guilty of felony.² So it was, where the servant appropriated the goods with which his master had intrusted him for a customer.³ So where the master had given money to his servant, in order that he might carry it to another person.⁴ So where goods were delivered to the servant of the prosecutors' carman, having been weighed in the presence of their clerk, and the servant allowed other persons to steal the property, being himself a participator in the spoil, it was considered that this was not a breach of trust merely, but a larceny.⁵ A servant was intrusted with money to buy coals; he bought less than his orders, and had a balance, which of course belonged to the coal merchant, had he obeyed his master. His appropriation of this balance was larceny.⁶ So it was where the servant received monies specifically to pay tonnage dues. He only took the barge intrusted to his care sixteen miles, less than the prescribed distance, and appropriated a sovereign which should have covered the dues of the distance left untravelled. He was held to be guilty of larceny.⁷ The prisoner was intrusted with a parcel of clothes to sell; he was to bring back the money and the remainder of the unsold clothes, and he was to have 3s. in the pound for his trouble. But on one occasion he pawned some of the clothes for his own benefit, and appropriated the rest. This was held to be larceny. The court regarded the delivery of the parcel as one bailment of all the articles in it.⁸ A shopman sold clothes at a less price than that at which they were marked, and embezzled the proceeds; this act was not larceny but embezzlement.⁹

The prisoner was hired to drive sheep from Bristol to Bradford Fair, but he did not go to Bradford, and when taken he had sold ten of the sheep. The jury having found the original intention to steal, the judges held his conviction right.¹⁰ Upon another occasion, where a general drover, hired by the day, stole some sheep, and the jury found that the intention to steal did not arise until after the employment, it was held that he was guilty of larceny,

¹ R. v. Hammon, Leach, 1083;
4 Taunt. 304; Russ. & Ry. 221.

² R. v. Murray, Leach, 344.

³ R. v. Bass, East, P. C. 566;
Leach, 251, 524, cited. R. v. Mead,
3 Ch. Cr. L. 891.

⁴ R. v. Lavender, East, P. C.
566, overruling R. v. Watson, Id.
562. R. v. Atkinson, Leach, 302,
n. See R. v. Butler, 2 Car. & K.
340.

⁵ R. v. Harding, Russ. & Ry.
125. See R. v. M'Carthy, 2 Car.
& K. 379.

⁶ R. v. Beaman, Car. & M. 595.

⁷ R. v. Goode, Car. & M. 582.

⁸ R. v. Poyser, Den. & P. 233;
20 L. J. M. C. 191.

⁹ R. v. Brackett, 4 Cox, 274.

¹⁰ R. v. Stock, 1 Moo. C. C.
87.

for the possession remained.¹ But this case was clearly against principle, and it was eventually overruled in R. v. Hey, to which we shall come immediately. The hiring for a job makes no difference, for the possession of the driver is but that of a servant.² The prosecutors were pig jobbers at Newcastle, and they engaged the prisoner to drive some pigs to Leeds, and to bring back such monies as should be given him. He had no authority to sell, but only to deliver them, and should the person at Leeds refuse to accept them, no further instructions were given. The pigs were not accepted, and the prisoner sold the pigs, and absconded. The prisoner had never been employed by the prosecutor as a drover. Nothing was said about the right of the prisoner to drive cattle for any other person, but by the usage of the trade he might have done so. The question was, whether he was a servant, and the judges held that he was not. And it was not found that there was any original intention to steal the pigs when they were delivered to him. To be sure the prisoner was paid for his expenses, and it was found, that the customary mode of payment was by the day. On the other hand, he was a drover by trade, and seemed to have had the liberty of driving any other person's cattle. On the whole, therefore, the judges held that he was a bailee, and so his conviction was held wrong.³ A., the prisoner, left a pig on the road, under the pretence of its being tired, with B. He told his employer, who desired him to request B. to keep the pig, on condition of paying for the keep. Here the possession left the prisoner and reverted. The prisoner sold the pig to B., and kept the money. He was held not guilty of larceny, for he had no possession.⁴ The prisoner, a carrier, carried unsewed gloves to the sewers, and deducted his charges from the money received. He, however, instead of paying over the money, appropriated it, denying the receipt. He was held not to be the servant of the person defrauded, but only a bailee, and his conviction was deemed wrong.⁵ Thus, if there be no original intention to steal, and the person be not a servant, there cannot be a conviction for larceny. As where A. was a drover, and had only been employed once or twice by the prosecutor. He had eight oxen to drive to London, with leave to sell them on the road, otherwise he was to take them to a particular place in London. He sold two on the road, but appropriated the proceeds, and instead of delivering the remainder, according to his orders, sold them

¹ R. v. M'Namee, 1 Moo. C. C. 368. But see R. v. Hey, Den. 602.

² R. v. Jackson, 2 Moo. C. C. 32.

³ R. v. Hey, Den. C. C. 602; 2 Car. & K. 983. Now he would be guilty of larceny. See Quarman v. Burnett, 6 Mees. & W. 499. A carriage hired from a job-master, and there was a particular servant and livery hired for the occasion. The job-master was not liable as master.

⁴ R. v. Charles Jones, 2 Russ. C. M. 158; Car. & M. 611.

⁵ R. v. Gibbs, Dears. 445; 24 L. J. M. C. 62. Now the Act 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, would reach him.

likewise, and kept the money.¹ Again, a letter carrier was employed to carry letters from W. to C. A. sent two 5*l.* notes from C. to W., but the prisoner had received them at C., took out the notes before he arrived at W., and delivered the envelopes only. The verdict was guilty, but that there was no intention to steal the notes when they were delivered to the prisoner at C. The judges were unanimous that the conviction was wrong.² A surveyor got some gravel and stone by virtue of his office, and appropriated it. He was not guilty of larceny unless it could be proved that in the first instance he never intended to pay for it.³ But he is guilty of a misdemeanor at common law.⁴ Likewise, a servant was held guilty of stealing the money of B., although the indictment charged him with stealing the money of A. as A's servant, for the money was in the possession of A. as B.'s agent.⁵

Sheriffs' officers.] A sheriff's officer is guilty of a higher crime than a breach of trust when he takes goods wrongfully, by virtue of a writ. For his act does not alter the legal possession, and so it was held, the judges saying, that he had the bare custody of the property.⁶

Larceny by the owner himself.] Even the proprietor of goods may himself be convicted of stealing that which would seem to be his own. As, if he make a bailment to B., and then take away the things bailed in order to make B. answerable, for B. had a special property, which A. invaded, invito domino.⁷ So where goods were intrusted to M. & Co., who gave a bond conditioned for their exportation, and thus were special bailees. A., the owner, colluding with the prisoners, contrived to unpack the goods for home consumption, but without any intention to defraud M. & Co. It was held, that the prisoners were guilty of larceny, inasmuch as their object was to defraud the crown, and the jury having found the general property to be in A., the principle, that the owner might steal his own property from his own bailee, was recognized.⁸ The prisoner was in the habit of contributing

¹ R. v. Goodbody, 8 C. & P. 665.

² R. v. Glass, Den. 215; 2 Car. & K. 395.

³ R. v. Richardson, 1 Fost. & F. 488. Nor was it a false pretence.

⁴ R. v. Anderson, 3 Chit. Burn. 104. The act should be laid to be done by colour of his office, and in dereliction of his duty as surveyor.

⁵ R. v. Jennings, Dears. & B. 447.

⁶ R. v. Eastall, 2 Russ. C. M. 92, 153.

⁷ 1 Hale, P. C. 513. See East, P. C. 558; Leach, 871.

⁸ R. v. Wilkinson and another, Russ. & Ry. 470. Some of the judges thought likewise that if M. & Co. had not been open to an action on the bond, at the suit of the crown, and consequently, that the crown only could have been defrauded, the prisoners would still have been guilty.

to a benefit society, and on one night she took away the box where the funds were kept. No order for excluding her in consequence of her neglect to pay for four weeks had been made, but she was held to be guilty of larceny, for the landlord of the house where the box was kept was the special bailee, and was answerable for it to the society.¹

Joint tenant.] A joint tenant cannot be said to take property from his co-tenant feloniously, for, as Lord Hale observes, "Although he might so act animo furandi, yet being tenant in common he doth but what he may do."²

Baron and feme.] It is a general principle that the wife cannot commit larceny of her husband's goods.³ As where the wife broke open a box belonging to a friendly society, and which was kept locked by the stewards, but was under her husband's control.⁴ Not even though she deliver the goods over to another person than her husband; nor is that person guilty of receiving the goods by the wife's delivery.⁵ In such a case the court thought that the property had been taken with the consent and privity of the woman,⁶ and then the husband's consent would be presumed, because of the identity of property. But if the woman were living in adultery, the man as well as the woman would, probably, be punished for larceny, for then the identity would be rebutted, and there would be an original stealing.⁷ Where the finding was, that the wife and the prisoner stole the property jointly, living in adultery, the judges considered the taking to have been invito domino, and they affirmed the conviction against the prisoner, the adulterer.⁸ And it is no defence to allege the absence of adultery if the wife and the prisoner have evidently taken the goods with an intention to live together. Nor does it matter that the goods taken are the wife's clothing. Although if they turn out to be her necessary wearing apparel, the case is altered, and a conviction obtained under such circumstances was quashed.⁹ But if the jury be satisfied that the intention was not ¹ R. v. Bramley, Russ. & Ry. 478. In one count the property was laid in the landlord, in the other, in the stewardesses.

² 1 Hale, P. C. 513.

³ 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 32.

⁴ R. v. Willis, 1 Moo. C. C. 375.

⁵ 1 Hale, P. C. 514.

⁶ R. v. Harrison, Leach, 47.

⁷ 1 Hale, P. C. 514, note (a).

⁸ R. v. Tolfree, 1 Moo. C. C. 243, overruling R. v. Clarke, Id. 376, n. (as it should seem.)

R. v. Tollett, Car. & M. 112. R. v. Thompson, Den. 549. R. v. Featherstone, 23 L. J. M. C. 127, where the wife delivered thirty-five sovereigns to the adulterer, he knowing that she had taken them. R. v. Glassie and another, 7 Cox, 1. The wife was acquitted, but the paramour was convicted, upon the husband's testimony, of stealing his goods, which were found in the trunk of the adulterer. ⁹ R. v. Fitch, 26 L. J. M. C. 169; Dearsl. & B. 187. The pricriminal, as if the prisoner's object was merely to get the wife away from her husband, with a friendly view, they ought to acquit.¹ A woman brought goods belonging to her husband to the lodgings of the adulterer, and placed them in a room where the adultery was committed. This was not sufficient evidence of the prisoner's possession. It was no more than the finding of the goods, as against him, in the same room.² The question is, whether when the prisoner and the wife leave the husband's house with the husband's goods, they have for their object that of adulterous intercourse, for if so, and the adultery be committed, the prisoner ought to be convicted.³ On the contrary, where there is no such intention, but a mere assistance by a stranger in carrying off the goods, the verdict of guilty will be set aside.⁴ Whether, in this case, the stranger had the animus furandi was not left to the jury. And Cockburn, C. J., said, that there were some old authorities which exonerated the taker even if he had the animus. But the court would not meddle with that point.⁵

Taking of chattels, personal or real.] Thirdly, the felonious taking must be of some property either personal, at common law or by statute, or of real chattels under the provisions of Acts of parliament. Therefore, at common law, it is a mere trespass to steal corn, or grass growing, or apples on a tree, or lead on a church or house.⁶ But the offender is punishable upon summary conviction. Neither are dogs, cats, bears, &c., chattels capable of being the subjects of theft at common law, being, as it were, of a base nature.⁷ But dogs are now protected by statute,⁸ although it is not felony to steal them. At common law, hares, conies, animals feræ naturæ, and fish were equally free to all,⁹ but if they are in a state of confinement, i. e. tame, or reclaimed, or if dead, and good for food, they are the subjects of larceny at common law.¹⁰ Neither did the common law extend its protection to writings which savoured of the realty, nor to records of a like nature, nor to choses in action, nor bills, bonds, &c.,¹¹ nor to an soner and the wife left the husband's house, he first, and she followed. The husband was there likewise. The agreement between the prisoner and the wife was to live together. They were found on the road, the prisoner carrying a bandbox containing the wife's apparel. The charge was for stealing wearing apparel from the husband. The point was reserved by Erle, J. But by Cockburn, C. J., "We all agree that this conviction cannot be sustained."

¹ R. v. Tollett, Car. & M. 112.

² R. v. Rosenberg, 1 Car. & K. 233.

³ R. v. Berry, Bell, 95; 28 L. J. M. C. 70. Conviction affirmed.

⁴ R. v. Avery, 28 L. J. M. C. 185; Bell, 150.

⁵ S. C.

⁶ 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 34.

⁷ Id. s. 36.

⁸ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 18, 19, 20.

⁹ 1 Hawk. c. 33, ss. 39, 40.

¹⁰ East, P. C. 607.

¹¹ 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 35.

unstamped agreement.¹ But if the parchment writings were independent of the freehold, the case would be different. And the taking of domestic beasts, as horses, &c., ducks, hens, and such like, was always deemed felony.² And as soon as the apples, corn, or grass become severed from the freehold, it was larceny to take them at common law.³ As if a man should come in the daytime, and shake apples from a tree, and then return in the night and take them away, or if a tree be cut down, and then taken from the orchard at another time, it is the same.⁴ So if a man cut corn and lay it on one side, and fetch it away on the next day, it is felony, but not if the cutting and carrying away be one continuous act. So of a copper.⁵ It may likewise be added, that where it was felony at common law⁶ to steal the beasts themselves, it was likewise felony to steal the produce of them, as the milk of the cow,⁷ or the wool from the sheep's back.⁸ So the stealing of gas is larceny. There may easily be a sufficient severance to constitute an asportavit.⁹ The stealing of a pawnbroker's duplicate is likewise larceny. It is an assurance for the delivery of goods, and may be so called in an indictment. It may also be said to be a piece of paper, or a pawnbroker's ticket.¹⁰

Indictment for simple larceny.] The indictment for simple larceny states, that A., on, &c., feloniously did steal, take, and carry away [the property] of the goods and chattels of B., against the peace, &c. Indeed, before the stat. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 16, the charges must have been single, and now by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 5, it shall be lawful to insert several counts in the same indictment against the same person for any number of distinct acts of stealing, not exceeding three, which may have been committed by him against the same person within the space of six months from the first

¹ R. v. Watts, Dears. 326. Parke, B., diss., who thought that the indictment was good. The indictment was for stealing a piece of paper. Maule, J., said, that the piece of paper was an agreement, and was evidence of a right, and, as a right, could not be the subject of larceny, nor the paper which was evidence of it. And, consequently, it was enacted by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 83, s. 27, that every instrument liable to stamp duty shall be admitted in evidence in any criminal proceedings, although it may not have the stamp required by law impressed thereon, or affixed thereto.

² 1 Hawk. ut supra; East, P. C. 607.

³ 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 34.

⁴ Say. Rep. 204, Ryder, C. J.

⁵ 1 Taunt. 791, Gibbs, C. J.

⁶ 1 Mod. 89, Hale, C. J.

⁷ East, P. C. 617. Case from the Oxford circuit.

⁸ R. v. Martin, Dal. 21; Leach, 171.

⁹ R. v. White, 22 L. J. M. C. 123; Dears. 203.

¹⁰ R. v. Morrison, 28 L. J. M. C. 210; Bell, 158. Cockburn, C. J., said, they could not hold this to be otherwise than a chattel without overruling R. v. Boulton, a decision binding upon them. Den. 508.

to the last of such acts, and to proceed thereon for all or any of them. By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 18, in every indictment in which it shall be necessary to mention or make any averment as to any money or any note of the bank of England or any other bank, it shall be sufficient to describe such money or bank note simply as money, without specifying any particular coin or bank note; and such allegation, so far as regards the description of the property, shall be sustained by proof of any amount of coin or of any bank note, although the particular species of coin of which such amount was composed, or the particular nature of the bank note, shall not be proved, and in cases of embezzlement and obtaining money or bank notes by false pretences, by proof that the offender embezzled or obtained any piece of coin or any bank note, or any portion of the value thereof, although such piece of coin or bank note may have been delivered to him in order that some part of the value thereof should be returned to the party delivering the same, or to some other person, and such part shall have been returned accordingly.¹

Here are, 1, the proper mention of the goods, and the description of the ownership. The goods should be so mentioned as to satisfy the legal definition of property, and disclose to the prisoner with sufficient accuracy the charge he is to meet. Thus, in the case of taking hares, it must be alleged that they were in a reclaimed state, tame, for otherwise they would be deemed to be feræ naturæ.² So, of other animals. So, in the case of a pheasant.³ So, if the animal be dead, it should be so stated, if there be any additional punishment by statute for stealing it. But as most of the cases of simple larceny do not bring any such additional punishment,⁴ it is in general sufficient to say one turkey, one fowl, &c. Although the rule was formerly to the contrary.⁵ The creature will be intended to be alive unless the contrary be shown.⁶ But "one ham" is a sufficient designation. The court will presume it to be the subject of larceny.⁷ In the case of receiving, it is immaterial whether the animal be dead or ¹ See R. v. Fry and another, Russ. & Ry. 482. R. v. Radley, Den. 450; 18 L. J. M. C. 184. R. v. Bond, Den. 517; 19 L. J. M. C. 138.

² R. v. Tate, 1 Lew. C. C. 234.

³ R. v. Rough, East, P. C. 607.

⁴ See 1 Moo. C. C. 242, where the judges said they could not reject the word "live" as surplusage; and R. v. Edwards and another, Russ. & Ry. 497, post.

⁵ R. v. Holloway, 1 Car. & P. 128, Hullock, B. R. v. Harding and another, Sarum Lent As. 1832, M. S. Park, J.

⁶ Archb. Crim. Pl. 355.

⁷ R. v. Gallears, 19 L. J. M. C. 13; Den. 501. And Pollock, C. B., intimated a doubt as to the correctness of the ruling in R. v. Cox, infra. But, notwithstanding variances, if an article improperly described as "ham" instead of "pork," be traced to the prisoner's house, the fact may be offered to the jury as evidence of the theft of something else. The taking of one article may be presumed from the possession of another, though there be no other evidence. R. v. Purcell, 1 Cox, 107, Alderson, B.

alive.¹ Where the charge was for stealing eggs, the indictment was held bad, because it did not describe the species of eggs. They might not have been the subject of larceny.² Again, the property must be correctly set forth. Not as "a great quantity of goods."³ Nor, "one parcel of the value of one shilling."⁴ Nor, "20 sheep and lambs."⁵ A charge of stealing 1 bushel of oats, 1 bushel of chaff, and 1 bushel of beans, was held insufficient by Bayley, J., who thought that the proper expression would have been "a certain mixture consisting of one bushel of," &c.⁶ But Alderson, B., doubted of this in subsequent cases, and alleged a distinction between mechanical and chemical mixtures. For, unlike a mechanical, a chemical mixture would make a distinction in each article.⁷ Where a set of handkerchiefs in a piece was described as so many handkerchiefs, and it appeared that the custom of the trade was to call the goods a piece of silk handkerchiefs, and, moreover, that the usual mode of drawing indictments at the Old Bailey was in a similar form, the judges affirmed the conviction, although Hullock, B., at the trial inclined towards the objection.⁸ Ingots of tin may be described as so many pounds weight of tin, and a bar of iron as so many pounds weight of iron.⁹ The indictment charged the stealing of ten pounds of copper, but the articles were copper nails, and Erle, J., inclined towards the objection.¹⁰ So, pieces of a brass furnace broken up will not satisfy the words "brass furnace,"¹¹ and a "spade" is not represented by the "flat or iron part of the spade," the handle being gone.¹²

As to the ownership. The goods of a married woman should be laid in the husband. A wife was sent to sell sheep by her father. She was plundered of 5*l.* before she paid the money to her father. The note taken was rightly laid in the husband.¹³ In the case of innkeeper and guest, the goods may be laid in either.¹⁴ But the goods of a lodger in ready-furnished lodgings must be laid in the lodger, for the owner is not entitled to the possession.¹⁵ So the linen delivered to a washerwoman may be laid in her.¹⁶ So, the cattle delivered to an agister may be laid in him, for he has the possession,

¹ R. v. Puckering, 1 Moo. C. C. 242.

² R. v. Cox, 1 Car. & K. 487, Tindal, C. J.

³ R. v. Foster, 1 Ld. Raym. 475.

⁴ R. v. Bonner, 7 Cox, 13. The indictment was quashed.

⁵ 2 Hale, P. C. 182.

⁶ R. v. Kettle, 3 Ch. Cr. L. 947.

⁷ Den. 521, in R. v. Bond.

⁸ R. v. Nibbs and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 25.

⁹ R. v. Mansfield, Car. & M. 140.

¹⁰ R. v. Christance and another, 1 Cox, 143.

¹¹ R. v. Holloway, 1 C. & P. 127.

¹² R. v. Stiles, 2 Russ. C. M. 109.

¹³ R. v. Roberts, 7 C. & P. 485, R. v. Sallows and another, 2 Cox, 63.

¹⁴ R. v. Todd, Leach, 357, n.

¹⁵ R. v. Belstead, Russ. & Ry. 411. R. v. Brunswick, 1 Moo. C. C. 26.

¹⁶ R. v. Packer, East, P. C. 653; Leach, 357, n.

and may maintain trespass.¹ And a parcel may be laid in the driver of a stage coach.² So may goods be laid in the carrier.³ And a coach glass may be laid in the coach-master, although the carriage should belong to another person.⁴ But the son's clothes should be laid as the property of the father, if they are supplied by the father to the son under indenture of apprenticeship, otherwise they should be laid in the son.⁵ Yet where the father bought and paid for cloth for trowsers for his son, seventeen years of age, the trowsers were considered to have been rightly laid in the father, although the better course would have been to have laid them in the son.⁶ Even if a child have a chattel, as a gold chain, it may be laid in him as well as in the father.⁷ A father left some boots at a stall in the charge of his son, a lad of fourteen, whom he supported. The prisoner stole them, and the indictment laid the property in the son. The court directed an acquittal, and the prisoner, upon a subsequent indictment, having pleaded in vain autrefois acquit, was convicted, and the court held that the son was not a bailee, and sustained the finding.⁸ Property may be laid in the owner, although he never had the possession of it, otherwise than through his agent, for the rule as to servants does not apply to takings by a third person.⁹ On the other hand, where the goods are in the owner's possession, an objection that they might have been described as the goods of another, will not avail. A. and B. were partners, and on B.'s death, without a will, his widow acted as partner with A. Upon an indictment the goods were laid in A. and the widow. It was held that the description was right, although it was objected that the children entitled under the statute of distributions should have been named in conjunction with the others, or that they should have been laid in the ordinary and the surviving partners.¹⁰ The dead body of A. lay in the road in the diocese of W. A knife was stolen from A.'s pocket. A.'s last abode was in the diocese of G. But his father deposed that, to his belief, A. had left that place of abode to come and live with him, but whether he had actually given up his old lodgings the father did not know. This was held sufficient evidence to warrant a count for larceny, laying the property in the bishop of the diocese of W.¹¹ In the case of the sheriff's officer, who was convicted of stealing goods taken under a fi. fa.,¹² it was held right to lay the property in J. S.

¹ R. v. Woodward, East, P. C. 653.

² R. v. Deakin and another, Id.

³ R. v. Trollop, Kel. 39.

⁴ R. v. Taylor, Leach, 356. R. v. Statham, Id. 357.

⁵ R. v. Forsgate, Leach, 463. The indictment was defective.

⁶ R. v. Hughes, Car. & M. 593.

⁷ Leach, 464, n.; East, P. C. 654.

⁸ R. v. Green, Dears. & B. 113; 26 L. J. M. C. 17.

⁹ R. v. Remnant, Russ. & Ry. 136. For the property should be laid in the servant where the master never had possession. R. v. Rudick and others, 8 C. & P. 237.

¹⁰ R. v. Gaby, Russ. & Ry. 178. See Id. 13.

¹¹ R. v. Tippin, Car. & M. 545.

¹² R. v. Eastall, ante.

whose goods were seized, for the loss would fall upon J. S. in the event of the non-application of the money arising from the sale towards the liquidation of his debt. It was urged that the goods should have been laid in the sheriff.¹ If A. should steal B.'s horse, and C. should steal it from A., the possession in law remaining with B., the property may be laid in him.² Lead fixed to a church is properly laid in the vicar,³ but it may be laid in the churchwardens.⁴ The property in iron found in a canal may be alleged to belong to a company of proprietors of the navigation, although had the owner been found, the iron would have been returned to him. The prisoner, however, was not their servant, but a stranger.⁵

In the case of a dissenting chapel, the property should be laid in the trustees, or in the minister. Where such property was alleged to be in a servant, who took care of the chapel, and had the only key belonging to it, except the minister's key, it was held that the conviction could not be supported.⁶ It was otherwise where A., in whom, with others, the property in a book stolen from the chapel was laid, stated himself to be a trustee.⁷ A shroud stolen from the corpse should be laid in the executor or other persons who buried the deceased.⁸ And leaden coffins may be laid in the executors,⁹ or in persons unknown, should the latter be the case.¹⁰ Although upon the charge of stealing from a person unknown, proof must be given of the loss of some property, in order that the taking might be presumed to have been invito domino. It would not be enough that the prisoner could not give an account of the property taken,¹¹ otherwise a man might be charged upon presumption. If the owner be known, there must be an acquittal on that count. But the leaden coffin must not be laid in the churchwardens. After sixty years, Buller, J., held, that such a coffin might be laid in a person unknown, although the same family remained on the spot, and no particular diligence had been used in making inquiries.¹² No larceny, however, can be committed of the corpse itself, although taking it from its grave is a misdemeanor.¹³ If the executor refuse to act, the property may be laid in the ordinary. An administrator had taken out his letters of administration since the offence, but before the indictment. The property being laid in him, the court directed an acquittal.¹⁴ If search be made for a will, and it be not found, it may be pre-

¹ S. C. 2 Russ. C. M. 153.

² 1 Hale, P. C. 507.

³ R. v. Miles and another, 1 Cox, 351.

⁴ R. v. Garlick and others, 1 Cox, 52.

⁵ R. v. Rowe, Bell, 93.

⁶ R. v. Hutchinson and another, Russ. & Ry. 412.

⁷ R. v. Boulton, 5 C. & P. 537.

⁸ R. v. Haynes, 12 Rep. 113; East, P. C. 652.

⁹ East, P. C. 652.

¹⁰ Id.

¹¹ East, P. C. 651, 657; 2 Hale, P. C. 290. Anon. 8 Mod. 248, Gilbert, C. B.

¹² East, P. C. 652.

¹³ East, P. C. 652; 2 T. R. 733.

¹⁴ R. v. Smith and another, 7 C. & P. 147.

sumed that there is not one. And the property stolen may be laid in the ordinary. And if some of the stolen property turn out to have been taken after the decease, it is sufficient, although some might have been taken before.¹ The goods of a felon may be described as the goods of the queen.² The property of a benefit society may be laid in the treasurer by his proper name, without further description. A trustee was held rightly convicted upon an indictment so framed. The argument for the prisoner that he was the person in whom the property vested was not entertained by the judges, for the treasurer was the officer substantially intended by the Act.³ R. v. Cain was cited in vain against a man who was a trustee of a friendly society, and in pursuance of a resolution at a lodge meeting, received and carried away 40*l.* belonging to the deceased R. C. The money in R. v. Cain was vested in the treasurer, but here in the trustees. The prisoner was a trustee, and specially appointed by the meeting to carry it to a bank. He was guilty of a breach of trust, but not of stealing the monies of R. C.⁴ We have seen, that in the case of partnership, the property may be laid as that of one partner, by name, and of others.⁵

Yet, if the indictment should mention A. and others, and there should be but one partner, the variance will be fatal,⁶ unless the judge should amend. One partner resided in Belgium, the other here. The home partner had the sole management. Notes and money stolen were held to have been rightly laid in him alone.⁷ In the case of the West Indian Dock Company, the indictment laid the property stolen as the goods and chattels of that company, and it was considered not necessary to add, that they had been taken feloniously, "from the said company."⁸ The property of counties, ridings, and divisions, has been already noticed.⁹

If the name of the person robbed should not be known,¹⁰ the question arises, whether the word "unknown" is to be taken generally, or limited to the "grand jury." "To the said grand jurors unknown." Certainly, where the principal felon appeared before the grand jury in support of an indictment against the accessory, a count, stating that a certain person, to the jurors unknown, stole, &c., was rejected, and an acquittal took place.¹¹ And, where the 1st count stated a name in particular, and the 3rd laid the property in persons unknown, it was clearly right to resort to the 2nd count, for the 1st had failed, and the 3rd was bad on the face of it.¹² But if the

¹ R. v. Johnson, 27 L. J. M. C. 52; Dears. & B. 340.

² R. v. Whitehead, 2 Moo. C. C. 181.

³ R. v. Cain, 2 Moo. C. C. 204; Car. & M. 309.

⁴ R. v. Loose, 29 L. J. M. C. 132.

⁵ Ante.

⁶ R. v. Hampton, 3 Ch. Burn. 428.

⁷ R. v. Cole, 4 Cox, 280.

⁸ R. v. Stokes, 8 C. & P. 151; R. v. Wright, 1 Lew. 268. Post, "Forgery."

⁹ Ante, p. 91; and see R. v. Went, Russ. & Ry. 359.

¹⁰ Ante.

¹¹ R. v. Walker, 3 Campb. 264. Anon. 2 Russ. C. M. 242, Dallas, J.

¹² R. v. Deakin, Leach, 862; R. v. Robinson, Holt, N. P. C. 595.

thief, or the owner of the property, were not known to the grand jury, but upon an indictment with these words, "to the jurors unknown," either charging an unknown thief, or mentioning an unknown owner, the name should appear at the trial, it might be said that the prisoner should be convicted. In R. v. Cordy, where it was argued that the prisoner should be acquitted under such circumstances,¹ Littledale, J., said he should doubt the correctness of such a holding, although such a decision had been arrived at, and the judge seemed disposed to limit the knowledge to the grand jury.² The issue does not appear.

It is usual to mention that the goods stolen were the chattels of A. or B. If these words were altogether omitted, and there should be nothing to connect the property stolen with A. or B., the indictment would probably be bad.³ It is common to state some value in the indictment, and if in evidence it should turn out that the thing stolen was worth the lowest English coin, a farthing, yet the charge will be sustained, being of some value.⁴

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 6, if upon the trial of any indictment for larceny it shall appear that the property alleged in such indictment to have been stolen at one time was taken at different times, the prosecutor shall not be required to elect upon which taking he will proceed, unless it shall appear that there were more than three takings, or that more than the space of six months elapsed between the first and the last of such takings; and in either of such last-mentioned cases the prosecutor shall be required to elect to proceed for such number of takings, not exceeding three, as appear to have taken place within the period of six months from the first to the last of such takings.

Trial.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 2, every court whose power as to the trial of larceny was before that time limited to petty larceny shall have power to try every case of larceny, the punishment of which cannot exceed the punishment hereinafter mentioned for simple larceny, and also to try all accessories to such larceny.⁵ The prisoner should be tried in the county where the offence was committed, but the possession of the goods is held to be a continuing offence in every county where he is found with

¹ 2 Russ. C. M. 98, n.

² Id. Mr. Greaves thinks that in the case of total ignorance before the grand jury, the prisoner might, nevertheless, contradict the finding, by showing that the party was known, although not to the grand jury. If so, the question as to acquittal would be fairly raised, and the point might be decided. See Id., and R. v. Thomas, East, P. C.

781. R. v. Woolford, 1 Moo. & Rob. 384.

R. v. Long, Cro. El. 490; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 71.

⁴ R. v. Morris, 9 C. & P. 349. See further, concerning the indictment for larceny, East, P. C. 777.

⁵ The venue in proceedings against persons acting under the Act. Notice of action. General issue. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 113.

them after the larceny.¹ And by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 114, if any person shall have in his possession in any one part of the United Kingdom any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, which he shall have stolen or otherwise feloniously taken in any other part of the United Kingdom, he may be dealt with, &c. for larceny or theft in that part where he shall so have such property, as if he had actually stolen or taken it there, and if any person in any one part of the United Kingdom shall receive or have any chattel, &c. which shall have been stolen or otherwise feloniously taken in any other part, such person knowing such property to have been stolen or otherwise feloniously taken, he may be dealt with, &c., in that part of the United Kingdom where he shall so receive or have such property, in the same manner as if it had been originally stolen or taken in that part.²

In a joint prosecution against two, it is no defence that one of the prisoners took the goods into a second county, if it be proved that the other offender joined him, and concurred in the act which he had been before aiding and abetting in the first county.³ But where a felony was committed in Gloucestershire by four persons, who subsequently made a division of the stolen property, in the same county, Holroyd, J., ruled, that they could not be convicted of a joint larceny in Worcestershire, where the goods were found upon them, and he put the prosecutor to his election, who accordingly proceeded against one only.⁴ And although a person cannot be convicted of a compound larceny in another county than that in which the deed was done, it would not avail him upon an indictment for simple larceny, in a second county, where the plunder was found upon him, if it were to appear that he had committed a felonious act, connected with such goods elsewhere.⁵ It was once the subject of discussion whether the Island of Jersey could be considered as part of the United Kingdom within the old Act, and the judges held unanimously that a conviction in Dorsetshire of a larceny in Jersey was wrong.⁶ The fact of a long interval having elapsed between the theft in one county and the finding on the prisoners in another, makes no difference, either at common law or by statute.⁷ Again, where the character of the property changed in the second county, it was held that the trial could not be had there. As where live turkeys were stolen in Cambridgeshire, and they were found dead in the pri-

¹ R. v. Bulwer, 7 Rep. 1; East, P. C. 771.

² East, P. C. 772.

³ R. v. County, 2 Russ. C. M. 118. R. v. M'Donagh and another, Carr. Supp. 23.

⁴ R. v. Barnett and others, 2 Russ. C. M. 118. The prisoner was convicted, and the other three pleaded guilty to separate indictments. See R. v. Thomson, Id. 116.

⁵ 2 Hale, P. C. 163.

⁶ R. v. Prowes, 1 Moo. C. C. 349. R. v. Anderson and others, (no longer applicable,) 2 East, P. C. 772, was cited.

⁷ R. v. Parkin, 1 Moo. C. C. 45.

soner's possession in Hertfordshire.¹ So where the prisoner was charged with stealing a brass furnace in Herefordshire, and it turned out that he had taken the furnace in Radnorshire, and had taken it to pieces before it had reached Herefordshire, or 500 yards from the boundary of that county, the same doctrine prevailed.²

Felonies committed upon persons or property in any carriages upon a journey, or on board of any vessel upon any navigable river, canal, or inland navigation, have been treated of elsewhere.³ Certain railway carmen driving a waggon from the station in Middlesex to a place in Kent, took some oats, which had been put into the horse-bags, and sold them in Kent, for their own use. It was objected, that the trial ought to have been in Kent, and not in Middlesex, for this could not be said to be a journey. But the court said, that the Act could not be restricted to the case of carriers, and the conviction was affirmed.⁴ An offence was committed in Holwell, Somerset, which is surrounded by the county of Dorset. A Dorsetshire grand jury found the bill. The venue was Dorset. Fitzherbert, referring to several statutes, contended, that the word "try" did not include the finding of a bill by the grand jury; but Rolfe, B., overruled the objection at once.⁵ Where an English ship lay in the Wampa, in China, twenty or thirty miles from the sea, it was, nevertheless, considered that a conviction at the Central Criminal Court, for a larceny committed by a sailor in that river, was proper, since it was a place where great ships went.⁶ We have already referred to the section by which every court whose power as to the trial of larceny was before that Act limited to petty larceny, shall have power to try every case of larceny, and all accessories thereto, provided that the punishment do not exceed that for simple larceny. This statute, however, does not warrant the trial in England of a person who is found here in possession of goods which he has stolen in France.⁷

Admiralty.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 115, all indictable offences mentioned in this Act which shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England or Ireland shall be deemed to be offences of the same nature, and liable to the same punishments, as if they had been committed upon the land in England or Ireland, and may be dealt with, &c., in any county or place in which the offender shall be apprehended or be in custody;

¹ R. v. Edwards and another, 122. See Mr. Greaves's note on Russ. & Ry. 497. Talf. Dick. Q. S. 188. See 7 Geo. 4, ² R. v. Holloway, 1 C. & P. 127. c. 64, s. 12.

³ Ante.

⁴ R. v. Sharpe and others, 24 1 Moo. C. C. 494. L. J. M. C. 40; Dears. 415.

⁵ R. v. Loader, 2 Russ. C. M.

⁶ R. v. Allan, 7 C. & P. 664;

⁷ R. v. Madge, 9 C. & P. 29.

and in any indictment for any such offence, or for being an accessory to any such offence, the venue in the margin shall be the same as if the offence had been committed in such county or place, and the offence itself shall be averred to have been committed "on the high seas;" provided, that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect any of the laws relating to the government of Her Majesty's land or naval forces.

Judgment.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 4, whosoever shall be convicted of simple larceny, or of any felony hereby made punishable like simple larceny, shall (except in the cases hereinafter otherwise provided for) be liable to penal servitude for three years, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.

By sect. 7, whosoever shall commit simple larceny after a previous conviction for felony, whether such conviction shall have taken place upon an indictment, or under the provisions of the Act 18 & 19 Vict. c. 126, shall be liable to penal servitude not exceeding ten years and not less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.

Then by sect. 8, whosoever shall commit simple larceny, or any offence hereby made punishable like simple larceny, after having been previously convicted of any indictable misdemeanor punishable under this Act, shall be liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven years nor less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.¹

And by sect. 117, whenever any person shall be convicted of any indictable misdemeanor punishable under this Act, the court may, if it shall think fit, in addition to or in lieu of any of the punishments by this Act authorized, fine the offender, and require him to enter into his own recognizances and to find sureties, both or

¹ By sect. 9, whosoever shall commit simple larceny, or any offence hereby made punishable like simple larceny, after having been twice summarily convicted of any of the offences punishable upon summary conviction, under the Acts following, i. e., 7 & 8 Geo. 4, cc. 29, 30; 9 Geo. 4, cc. 55, 56; 10 & 11 Vict. c. 82; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 59; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 92; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (whether each of the convictions shall have been in respect of an offence of the same description or not, and whether such convictions or either of them shall have been or shall be before or after the passing of this Act,) shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven years and not less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.

either, for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour; and in case of any felony punishable under this Act the court may, if it shall think fit, require the offender to enter into his own recognizances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace, in addition to any punishment by this Act authorized: provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this clause for not finding sureties for any period exceeding one year.

By sect. 118, whenever imprisonment, with or without hard labour, may be awarded for any indictable offence under this Act, the court may sentence the offender to be imprisoned, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction.

By sect. 119, whenever solitary confinement may be awarded for any indictable offence under this Act, the court may direct the offender to be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of his imprisonment, or of his imprisonment with hard labour, not exceeding one month at any one time, and not exceeding three months in any one year; and whenever whipping may be awarded for any indictable offence under this Act, the court may sentence the offender to be once privately whipped, and the number of strokes and the instrument with which they shall be inflicted shall be specified by the court in the sentence.

By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 126, s. 1, larceny of property not exceeding 5s., and attempts to commit larceny from the person, or simple larceny, is punishable upon summary conviction, before two or more justices, with imprisonment not exceeding three calendar months, with or without hard labour. But an option is given to the prisoner to decline the jurisdiction, in which case he will be committed to the assizes or sessions. By sect. 3, where the property stolen exceeds 5s., or where the larceny is from the person, or the prisoner be a clerk or servant, and the prisoner pleads guilty, he may be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding six calendar months.

Costs in misdemeanors under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 121, the court before which any indictable misdemeanor against this Act shall be prosecuted or tried may allow the costs of the prosecution in the same manner as in cases of felony; and every order for the payment of such costs shall be made out, and the sum of money mentioned therein paid and repaid, upon the same terms and in the same manner in all respects as in cases of felony.

Restitution.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 100, if any person guilty of any felony or misdemeanor provided for by the Act against larceny and similar offences, in stealing, taking, obtaining, extorting, embezzling, converting, or disposing of, or in knowingly receiving, any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, shall be indicted for such offence, by or on the behalf of the owner of the property, or his executor or administrator, and convicted, in such case the property shall be restored to the owner or his representative; and in every case in this section the court before whom any person shall be so tried shall have power to award from time to time writs of restitution for the said property, or to order the restitution thereof in a summary manner. Provided, that if it shall appear before any award or order made that any valuable security shall have been bonâ fide paid or discharged by some person or body corporate liable to the payment thereof, or being a negotiable instrument shall have been bonâ fide taken or received by transfer or delivery, by some person or body corporate, for a just and valuable consideration, without any notice or without any reasonable cause to suspect that the same had by any felony or misdemeanor been stolen, taken, obtained, extorted, embezzled, converted, or disposed of, in such case the court shall not award or order the restitution of such security. Provided also, that nothing in this section contained shall apply to the case of any prosecution of any trustee, banker, merchant, attorney, factor, broker, or other agent intrusted with the possession of goods or documents of title to goods for any misdemeanor against this Act.

Formerly, the restitution was restricted to felonious takings, but the new Act extends to misdemeanor.¹ And it is worthy of remark, that the restitution works only after conviction, because if persons in possession of goods were compellable to deliver them up before conviction, the incitement of the prosecutor to convict the felon would be much abated, and this point is sometimes brought forward in actions of trover.² The defendant bought some cattle in market overt. They turned out to have been stolen. The defendant kept the cattle, and the thief was convicted. The court held, that upon conviction, the cattle became revested in the original owner, the plaintiff, and he, accordingly, recovered in trover. The words of the Act, "the property shall be restored," does not mean, that there must be a formal order of restitution by the court, but that the party may have back the thing stolen, or, at all events, may have the right to it.³ However, it is said, that the owner may, in cases where he is entitled to restitution, take his goods everywhere without a writ, provided he do not break the peace, and even should the goods have been sold to a purchaser in market overt.⁴ A. stole some money, and bought a horse with it, which he left in B.'s care. As he must have bought the animal with the stolen money, the court held that the horse might be delivered to the prosecutor.⁵ Certain property stolen from a railway company was ordered by the Central Criminal Court to be given up.⁶ And they went further, directing that all the property found on the prisoners should be yielded. This latter order was resisted, and although it was urged that all the property

¹ R. v. De Veaux and others, Leach, 585.

² Horwood v. Smith, Leach, 586, (n.); 2 T. R. 750.

³ Scattergood v. Sylvester, 19 L. J. Q. B. 447.

⁴ 1 Ch. Cr. L. 319.

⁵ R. v. Powell, 7 C. & P. 640. See Scattergood v. Sylvester, supra.

⁶ R. v. Pierce, 7 Cox, 206.

was mixed up, so that what belonged to the railway could hardly be separated, this decision was reversed by the Court of Queen's Bench.¹ But there are cases where the court has heard counsel, and ordered restitution in the ordinary way, or where they have made a special distribution.² A prisoner pleaded guilty, and the depositions disclosed a clear case of felony. Several pawn-brokers claimed the goods, and alleged that the prisoner was only an agent. But Alderson, B., ordered restitution, and he would not grant a writ, saying, that the only instance of a writ was in Burgess v. Coney, 1 Trem. P. C.³

There was a case of stealing plush. The property, after conviction, reverted in the owner, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39. The court ordered restitution, and, their order being disobeyed, granted an attachment.⁴

Bailees.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 3, whosoever, being a bailee of any chattel, money, or valuable security,⁵ shall fraudulently take or convert the same to his own use or the use of any person other than the owner thereof, although he shall not break bulk or otherwise determine the bailment, shall be guilty of larceny, and may be convicted thereof upon an indictment for larceny; but this section shall not extend to any offence punishable on summary conviction.

The bailee is the temporary guardian of a specific article, whether it be a deed, or a bank note, or goods of any description. And this chattel or property he must return as soon as the owner determines the bailment. Therefore, if it should appear that the property and possession of a valuable thing are parted with, although, in justice and honesty, the representation of the bailment, as money, should be surrendered, yet the bailee is not bound to pay over specific coin.

The treasurer of a charity misapplied the funds committed to his charge, and he was indicted under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 54. But the objection was raised, that the statute applied where the same and not different property was to be returned, and it prevailed.⁶ Unless the money is to be specifically handed back, the person receiving it is not liable under the Act as bailee.⁷ Again, the monies belonging to a friendly society were vested in the trustees. It was resolved at a meeting that 40*l.* should be sent to a bank, and that the prisoner should take it. He misappropriated the sum and was indicted as bailee, and, upon the common count, for larceny. His conviction, however, was quashed. He could not be said to have stolen the money, for he was a part owner. Nor was he guilty of a breach of trust in respect of the

¹ Bell, 235; El. Bl. & El. 509.

² R. v. Macklin, 5 Cox, 216.

³ Id.

⁴ R. v. Woller and Bliss, in re Hart, 8 Cox, 337.

⁵ See sect. 1.

⁶ R. v. Garratt, 8 Cox, 368; 2 Fost. & F. 14.

⁷ R. v. Hoare, 1 Fost. & F. 647.

owner of the 40*l.*, because he was not to return the monies delivered to him.¹ In R. v. Cain,² the money of the society was laid in the indictment to belong to the treasurer, and the prisoner obtained 10*l.* from him upon a false pretence, and with an intention to steal.

Upon the false pretence of paying 135*l.* for a pair of carriage horses, the prisoner obtained that sum from the prosecutor. The indictment, however, did not contain that material averment, and the charge so far failed. But then it was said that the prisoner might be convicted of larceny, as bailee, not being entitled, according to the statute, to an acquittal, because the other charge was not sustained. But here it was plain that both property and possession had been surrendered, for the money was never to be returned, and the recorder directed a verdict of not guilty.³ Again, the treasurer of a club received small weekly payments from the members, and might lend the club money. There was a distribution in each year of the monies belonging to the club. The prisoner pretended that his house had been broken open, but he subsequently admitted his guilt. Upon a verdict of guilty, the same ruling prevailed as in the prior cases, and the conviction was quashed.⁴ "Unless a man is intrusted with a specific thing to be returned, how can he steal it?"⁵ "A bailment relates to something in the hands of the bailee, which is to be returned in specie."⁶

On the other hand, where the particular article must be restored, the rule alters. A man may even be a bailor, without, according to the opinion of Mr. Justice Crowder, taking any active step at all. As where the prosecutor lay, rather tipsy, and partly asleep, on the ground, and saw the prisoner take his watch out of his pocket, but did not offer any resistance. Here the judge looked upon him in the light of a bailor. For if the prisoner was acting from friendly motives, still, by converting the watch, he violated the bailment, for the specific property was to be restored.⁷ So in the case of the carrier, who received money to buy goods, and obtained and delivered them, but retained the money for his own use. This was a bailment specifically of the money which ought to have been handed to the seller, and under the direction of Erle, J., he was convicted upon the statute, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 4.⁸ And, besides, he was the servant of the buyer, in this instance, and the possession of the servant is that of the master, who never parted with it.

This is the converse of what was said, according to Willes, J., by Lord Wensleydale: "I have heard Lord Wensleydale say, more than once, that a servant was bound to hand over to his master the particular money he received on his account."⁹

¹ R. v. Loose, 29 L. J. 132.

² 2 Moo. C. C. 204.

³ R. v. Hunt, 8 Cox, 495.

⁴ R. v. Hassall, 8 Cox, 491; Leigh & Cave, 58; 30 L. J. M. C. 109. 175.

⁵ Willes, J., Id. 493.

⁶ Cockburn, C. J., Id. 494.

⁷ R. v. Reeves, 5 Jur. 716.

⁸ R. v. Wells, 1 Fost. & F.

⁹ 8 Cox, 493.

A husband and wife were indicted as bailees of clothing. Both went to the prosecutrix, and offered to take care of her clothes. The bailment was made, but when a demand was made for the return of the articles, some were found to have been pawned, and some sold by the female prisoner alone. By Martin, B., "the prisoners were husband and wife. A wife could not be a bailee, and the husband was not proved to have taken any part in the alleged conversion."¹

¹ R. v. Denmour and wife, 8 Cox, 440.

CHAPTER II.

OF TAKING AND ADVERTISING REWARDS FOR THE RECOVERY OF STOLEN PROPERTY.

Taking a reward.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 101, whosoever shall corruptly take any money or reward, directly or indirectly, under pretence or upon account of helping any person to any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever which shall by any felony or misdemeanor have been stolen, taken, obtained, extorted, embezzled, converted, or disposed of, as in this Act before mentioned, shall (unless he shall have used all due diligence to cause the offender to be brought to trial for the same) be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven years and not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement, and, if a male under the age of eighteen years, with or without whipping.

In a case upon the old Act, 9 Geo. 1, c. 11, it was objected for the prisoner that he was entitled to his acquittal, first, because he had no acquaintance with the felon, and, secondly, because the goods were never recovered, and the prisoner had no power over them. And it further appeared at the trial that the prisoner had no power to apprehend the principal felon, nor had he any evidence to give against that person. But the judges held the conviction right.¹ Again, the finding of the jury was, that the prisoner knew the thieves, and assisted in endeavouring to purchase stolen property from them, not meaning to bring them to justice. The prosecutrix had been robbed of some cheeses, and the prisoner took 3*l.* from her in order to recover the property, with her sanction and at her request. The judges held that this finding established all the facts necessary to constitute the offence described in the statute.² If the principal felon should die, it seems that the case cannot be made out, because the act of God works no injury to any man, and by the death of the principal, the stipulated conditions became impossible to be performed without any default of the defendant.³

Indictment.] The indictment states, that on, &c., a certain person, to the jurors unknown, one gold watch of the value of 10*l.* of the goods and chattels of one B., feloniously did steal, &c., [describe the particular robbery,] and that A. afterwards, to wit, on, &c., notwithstanding he the said A. did not apprehend and cause, &c., the felon who stole the said watch as aforesaid, and cause the said felon to be brought to his trial for the same, and give evidence against him, under the pretence and upon account of helping the said B. to his said watch so feloniously stolen as aforesaid, did then wilfully, unlawfully, corruptly, and feloniously take of and from the said B. a certain sum of money, to wit, £— of lawful money of Great Britain, and did then deliver the same watch, so as aforesaid feloniously stolen, to him, the said B., against the form of the statute, &c. But the offence is complete although the goods be not recovered.¹ It is proper to aver in the indictment that the principal felon has not been apprehended, because that neglect is part of the description of the offence.² It was objected that the words "not then having caused the offenders, &c., to be apprehended," were insufficient for want of specifying the time where the apprehension ought to have taken place. But Erle, J., overruled this objection.³

¹ R. v. Leadbitter, 1 Moo. C. C. 76.

² R. v. Pascoe, Den. 456; 18 L. J. M. C. 186.

³ East, P. C. 770.

Advertising a reward, &c.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 102, whosoever shall publicly advertise a reward for the return of any property stolen or lost, and shall in such advertisement use any words purporting that no questions will be asked, or shall make use of any words in any public advertisement purporting that a reward will be given or paid for any property which shall have been stolen or lost, without seizing or making any inquiry after the person producing such property, or shall promise or offer in any such public advertisement to return to any pawnbroker or other person who may have bought or advanced money by way of loan upon any property stolen or lost the money so paid or advanced, or any other sum of money or reward for the return of such property, or shall print or publish any such advertisement, shall forfeit 50*l.* for every such offence to any person who will sue for the same by action of debt, to be recovered, with full costs of suit.

¹ Ante.

² East, P. C. 771. See R. v. Drinkwater, Leach, 15; East, P. C.

769; and see 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 19, repealed.

³ R. v. Hicks, 1 Cox, 145.

CHAPTER III.

LARCENY OF CATTLE AND OTHER ANIMALS.

Larceny of cattle, &c.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 10, whosoever shall steal any horse, mare, gelding, colt, or filly, or any bull, cow, ox, heifer, or calf, or any ram, ewe, sheep, or lamb, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen years and not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement.

By sect. 11, whosoever shall wilfully kill any animal, with intent to steal the carcass, skin, or any part of the animal so killed, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to the same punishment as if he had been convicted of feloniously stealing the same, provided the offence of stealing the animal so killed would have amounted to felony.

Here, as in other cases, the felonious intention has been occasionally the subject of discussion. A man stole several articles, and then took a horse for the purpose of getting away. He was acquitted of stealing the horse, it being left to the jury to say what the intent really was. For, had he intended to include the horse in the theft, the jury would, of course, have pronounced him guilty.¹ But if a person were to take a stray horse from the highway, and a particular intent should appear, it is possible that the jury would return a verdict of guilty.² And where the prisoner went into an inn yard, and directed the ostler to bring out the prosecutor's horse, which but for the noise of some music he would have mounted, it was considered a sufficient asportation when the ostler had brought the horse, although the jury acquitted the man on the ground of a drunken frolic.³ So where four lambs were taken and their skins sold by the prisoner, and the carcasses were found on the premises where the lambs were kept, the conviction for sheep-stealing was held right, though there was no count for killing with intent to steal the carcasses, for the lambs had been removed from the fold.⁴ But this case of Rawlins is not law. A sheep was taken alive, and was removed to a distance for the purpose of killing it with intent to steal the whole or part of the carcass: here it became a question whether there was a sufficient asportation to support a count for sheep-stealing, and it was held

¹ R. v. Crump, 1 C. & P. 658.

² R. v. Hutchinson, 1 Lew. C. C. 195, Hullock, B.

³ R. v. Pitman, 2 C. & P. 423,

Gurney, B.

⁴ R. v. Rawlins, East, P. C. 617.

not, for the intention was to steal, not the sheep, but the carcass.¹ Unless the sheep were removed from the spot where it was, there clearly could not be such an asportation, as if a man should kill it there with a felonious intent, but should not remove it in a live state with a view to steal it alive.² It was also held in R. v. Williams, by nine judges, that upon a count for killing with intent to steal the whole of the carcass, the prisoner might be convicted upon proof of an intent to steal a part only.³ Again, where the prisoner cut off the leg of a live sheep, so that death must of necessity have ensued, it was held, that he might be convicted upon an indictment for killing with intent to steal a part of the carcass, for the death-wound was given before the theft.⁴ So where the prisoner wounded an ewe, and was interrupted by the prosecutor, the judges held that he had been rightly convicted of killing with intent to steal the carcass, the ewe dying two days afterwards, and the jury having expressly found the intent.⁵ Upon an indictment for stealing cattle, the mere fact of the carcass being found in the house of the prisoner is not sufficient to warrant his being called on for his defence, although if indicted for receiving, it might be different.⁶

Pigs are the subjects of larceny at common law.

Indictment.] The indictment for cattle-stealing states, that A., on, &c., feloniously did steal, take, and lead away one [describe the cattle], of the goods and chattels of B. The indictment for killing, with intent to steal the carcass, states, that A., on, &c., wilfully and feloniously did kill, [the cattle,] with intent then feloniously to steal, take, and carry away the carcass or part of the said [cattle] so killed as aforesaid.

An indictment for stealing a filly was not supported by proof of stealing an animal of the horse kind more than three years old, because it had then become a mare.⁷ Whatever might have been the rule formerly,⁸ it is now held, that an indictment which describes a thing by its generic term is supported by proof of a species clearly comprehended within its description.⁹ The prisoner was charged with killing a sheep with intent to steal the carcass. The evidence, although it proved a felony of an animal of that species, failed to describe the sex. It was then said for the prosecutor, that sheep would include

¹ R. v. Williams, 1 Moo. C. C. 107.

² Id. 107, 111.

³ 1 Moo. C. C. 107, S. P. on the authority of R. v. Williams. R. v. Marley, 2 Russ. C. M. 137.

⁴ R. v. Clay, Russ. & Ry. 387.

⁵ R. v. Sutton, 2 Moo. C. C. 29; 8 C. & P. 291.

⁶ R. v. Arundel and another, 1 Lew. C. C. 115.

⁷ R. v. Jones, 2 Russ. C. M. 140.

⁸ Cow in indictment, heifer in proof. R. v. Cook, East, P. C. 616; Leach, 105. Sheep in indictment, lambs in proof. R. v. Loom and others, 1 Moo. C. C. 160. Sheep in indictment, ewes in proof. R. v. Puddifoot, 1 Moo. C. C. 247. A teg under a year old. R. v. Birket, 4 C. & P. 216. R. v. Puddifoot was cited. Ewe in indictment, ewe teg in proof. R. v. Jewett, 2 Cox, 227. See R. v. Gillbrass, 7 C. & P. 444.

⁹ Den. C. C. 83, (n.)

either sex, ewe or ram, and it was sought to throw the onus on the prisoner of proving this for his defence. But Patteson, J., would not entertain this, but left the question to the jury, who found that the distinctive appellation is used at any time after weaning. They convicted the prisoner, and the judges held, that the word "sheep," included ram, ewe, and wether, and that the two former words might be rejected. So the conviction was affirmed.¹ The next case went still further. The indictment described the animal stolen as a sheep. The evidence, however, rendered it doubtful whether it was a lamb or sheep, it being between nine and twelve months old. The jury thought it would be called a lamb. The prisoner being convicted, six judges held the indictment good, and five were of the contrary opinion. The conviction was, therefore, affirmed.² Again, upon a charge of stealing a horse, it turned out that the animal was half cut, or a ridgit, and this was held sufficient.³ The prisoner was charged with stealing a lamb. It turned out that the lamb had been killed before the prisoner had it. Upon this, it occurred to Littledale, J., that where the larceny of an animal was a capital offence (as in the case before him), there might be a difference, so that an animal mentioned in capital indictments might be said to mean a live animal only. But the judges held the conviction right, the offence and the punishment for it being the same, whether the lamb stolen were alive or dead at the time of the felonious receipt.⁴ Still, with reference to R. v. Cook,⁵ it may be remarked, that if the indictment should speak of a cow, and the evidence, instead of a female heifer, prove that a male heifer has been stolen, the charge will, probably, be deemed insufficient.

Indictment. Sheep.] The indictment usually states, that A., on, &c., feloniously did steal, take, and lead away one sheep, of the goods and chattels of B., &c. Or wilfully and feloniously did kill one ewe, of the goods and chattels of B., with intent then feloniously to steal, take, and carry away the carcass of the said ewe so killed as aforesaid, &c. The mode of laying the property is similar to the cases of simple larceny. A father and son were in partnership as farmers, and, after the death of the son, intestate, the father continued the business for the joint benefit of himself and the next of kin. At this time some of the sheep belonging to the concern were stolen, and the indictment laid the sheep to be the joint property of the father and the grandchildren, the son's widow having died shortly after her husband's death. No division of the stock had been made, but the grandfather kept a regular account, as one moiety, in his books. And the judges held, that the property had been rightly laid, being of opinion, that the strict legal property need not appear upon such an occasion.¹ Since the abolition of the distinction between grand and petty larceny, the value of the theft is immaterial.²

¹ R. v. M'Culley, 2 Moo. C. C. 34. Diss.: Parke, B.; Vaughan, J.; Coleridge, J. Absent: Gurney, B. See Mr. Greaves's note, 2 Russ. C. M. 139. C. B.; Patteson, J.; Williams, J.; Wightman, J.; Cresswell, J. Absent: Parke, B.; Maule, J.; Coleridge, J.; Platt, B.

² R. v. Spicer, Den. C. C. 82. Acc.: Lord Denman, C. J.; Tindal, C. J.; Alderson, B.; Coltman, J.; Rolfe, B.; Erle, J. Diss.: Pollock, ³ R. v. Aldridge, 4 Cox, 143. R. v. Spicer was cited. ⁴ R. v. Puckering, 1 Moo. C. C. 243. ⁵ Ante.

Trial.] The trial, as in ordinary cases of larceny, may be either where the cattle are found upon the prisoner, or where the theft has taken place. And a possession of the stolen animal three days after the robbery in one county will justify a charge of stealing in the county where the loss happened. As, where the prisoner was found at Kirkcudbright with a horse which had been stolen in Cumberland, it was held, that the stealing in Cumberland had been made out.³ So again, where the horse had been stolen in Durham, and was seen in the possession of the prisoner in Cumberland, and was found with him in Scotland, a continuing possession for the purpose of larceny was recognized.⁴ But it should seem, that as soon as the prisoner is apprehended, the continuance of the felony is at an end, so that where the thief was taken in Surrey, with two horses, and then having made an excuse to go into Kent with the constable, contrived to escape, it was held, that no evidence of stealing in Kent could have been properly presented to the jury. The prisoner was, therefore, sent back to Surrey, and no judgment was given upon the conviction.⁵ A sheep was feloniously killed in the county of A. The carcass was taken into the county of B. The indictment was held good for stealing, taking, and driving the sheep into B. But there was no killing with intent to steal the carcass in B.⁶

¹ R. v. Scott, Russ. & Ry. 13; East, P. C. 655.

⁴ R. v. Moses, 1 Lew. C. C. 196.

⁵ R. v. Simmonds, 1 Moo. C. C.

² See R. v. Peel, Russ. & Ry. 408.

407. R. v. Pearles, East, P. C. 741.

⁶ R. v. Newland, 2 Cox, 283.

³ R. v. Clement, 1 Lew. C. C. 113.

R. v. Miller was cited, ante.

CHAPTER IV.

OF DEER AND FISH; CREATURES FERÆ NATURÆ; AND OF DOG-STEALING.

Deer.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 12, whosoever shall unlawfully and wilfully course, hunt, snare, or carry away, or kill or wound, or attempt to kill or wound, any deer kept or being in the uninclosed part of any forest, chase, or purlieu, shall, on conviction before a justice,¹ forfeit a sum not exceeding 50*l.*; and whosoever having been previously convicted of any offence relating to deer, for which a pecuniary penalty shall have been imposed by this or by any former Act, shall afterwards commit any of the above offences, whether such second offence be of the same description as the first or not, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.

By sect. 13, if the offences in sect. 12 be committed in the inclosed part of any forest, chase, or purlieu, or in any inclosed land where deer shall be usually kept, the offender shall be guilty of felony, and liable to the punishments awarded by the 12th section.

Then by sect. 14, if any deer, or the head, skin, or other part thereof, or any snare or engine for the taking of deer, shall be found in the possession of any person or on the premises of any person with his knowledge, and such person being taken or summoned before a justice, shall not satisfy the justice that he came lawfully by such deer, or the head, &c., or had a lawful occasion for such snare or engine, and that he did not keep the same for any unlawful purpose, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding 20*l.*; and if any such person shall not under the said provisions be liable to conviction, then, for the discovery of the party who actually killed or stole such deer, the justice, as the evidence given and the circumstances of the case shall require, upon payment, or remission, or after punishment, to be a bar to future proceedings, sect. 109. The appeal is given by sect. 110. By sect. 111 the certiorari is taken away, and an invalid warrant is cured if there be a good conviction. By sect. 112 the convictions are to be returned to the quarter sessions.

¹ By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 120, summary proceedings in England are to be regulated by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, and in Ireland by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 93. Mode of compelling appearance, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 105; application of forfeitures and penalties, sect. 106; commitment for nonpayment, sect. 107; discharge, first offence, sect. 108; summary conviction;

may summon before him every person through whose hands such deer, or the head, &c., shall appear to have passed; and if the person from whom the same shall have been first received, or who shall have had possession thereof, shall not satisfy the justice that he came lawfully by the same, he shall be liable to the payment of such sum of money as is hereinbefore last mentioned.

And by sect. 15, whosoever shall unlawfully and wilfully set or use any snare or engine whatsoever, for the purpose of taking or killing deer, in any part of any forest, chase, or purlieu, whether such part be inclosed or not, or in any fence or bank dividing the same from any land adjoining, or in any inclosed land where deer shall be usually kept, or shall unlawfully and wilfully destroy any part of the fence of any land where any deer shall be then kept, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding 20*l*.

And also by sect. 16, if any person shall enter into any forest, chase, or purlieu, whether inclosed or not, or into any inclosed land where deer shall be usually kept, with intent unlawfully to hunt, course, wound, kill, snare, or carry away any deer, every person intrusted with the care of such deer, and any of his assistants, whether in his presence or not, may demand from every such offender any gun, fire-arms, snare, or engine in his possession, and any dog there brought for hunting, coursing, or killing deer, and in case such offender shall not immediately deliver up the same, may seize and take the same from him in any of those respective places, or, upon pursuit made, in any other place to which he may have escaped therefrom, for the use of the owner of the deer; and if any such offender shall unlawfully beat or wound any person intrusted with the care of the deer, or any of his assistants, in the execution of any of the powers given by this Act, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and liable to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.

Upon an indictment for a second offence under the above circumstances, it is competent to raise objections to the first conviction. And, therefore, where it appeared that the conviction before the justice had taken place at Edmonton, for an offence committed in Essex, the judges held the conviction for the second offence wrong.¹ It was also submitted that the indictment was wrong in stating the conviction to have been of W. A., instead of W. A. and others jointly, (which was the fact,) and also because it omitted to allege that W. A. had been duly convicted; but the reporter conceives that the objection as to the county was that which weighed with the judges.² But this objection is cured by this statute. It is, however, no objection to say that the conviction, when put in, appears to have taken place before two justices, nor that it failed to mention the place where the offence was committed, for the omission was supplied, if not by the marginal venue, yet, at all events, by that part of the document which adjudicated the penalty, the award of the penalty being "to the overseers of D. in the said county where the said offence was committed."¹ Proof of taking a fawn will support a count for stealing deer.² Deer pass to executors as personal property.³

¹ R. v. Allen, Russ. & Ry. 513.
R. v. Warren, Id. 514, n.

² R. v. Allen, ut supra.

Indictments.] The indictment under sect. 13 states that A., on, &c., in certain inclosed land of B., situate, &c., wherein deer had been and then were usually kept, unlawfully, wilfully, and feloniously did course, kill, take, and carry away one fallow deer, the property of the said B. in the said inclosed land then kept and being, against the form, &c.

In the case of a second offence, the prior conviction should be set out, and then the felonious coursing, &c., in the uninclosed place.

Hares and conies.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 17, whosoever shall unlawfully and wilfully, between the expiration of the first hour after sunset and the beginning of the last hour before sunrise, take or kill any hare or rabbit in any warren or ground lawfully used for the breeding or keeping of hares or rabbits, whether the same be inclosed or not, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; provided that nothing in this section contained shall affect any person taking or killing in the daytime any rabbits on any sea bank or river bank in the county of Lincoln, so far as the tide shall extend, or within one furlong of such bank.⁴

The wildness of the animal is so important that where rabbits were kept in a rick-yard, and were at liberty to run about, the charge failed.⁵ A rabbit was caught in a net; the prisoner, who had set the wire, was surprised by the warrener as he was taking up the wire; the rabbit was not dead. The question was whether this was a "taking," and the judges were in favour of the affirmative.⁶ It need not be shown for the prosecution that the prisoner had no leave to be on the land. The jury may infer that from the circumstances.⁷

¹ R. v. Weale, 5 C. & P. 135.

² R. v. Strange, 1 Cox, 58. With reference to summary convictions for the offences mentioned here, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 64, et seq. As to appeal, see R. v. JJ. of Oxfordshire, 4 Q. B. 177; 3 Gale & D. 348.

³ Morgan v. Earl of Aberga-venny, 8 C. B. 768.

⁴ Between the beginning of the last hour before sunrise and the expiration of the first hour after sunset, there may be a summary conviction before a justice, with a forfeiture not exceeding 5*l.* See sect. 107, as to the proceeding in case of nonpayment.

⁵ R. v. Garratt, 6 C. & P. 369.

⁶ R. v. Glover, Russ. & Ry. 269. Le Blanc. J., thought that there must be an asportavit, as in larceny.

⁷ R. v. Wood, 25 L. J. M. C. 96, notwithstanding a decision of Martin, B., in R. v. Edge, then cited, Dears. & B. 1.

Indictment.] The indictment states, that A., on, &c. in the night-time, to wit, about the hour of eleven of the night of the same day, in a certain warren and ground of B., situate, &c., then lawfully used for the breeding and keeping of hares and rabbits, unlawfully and wilfully did take and kill hares, against the form, &c.

*Other animals feræ naturæ.*¹] If an animal be reclaimed or confined, so as to be fit for food,² and so reduced, as it were, into possession, it was always the subject of larceny. As, for example, fish in a trunk or net, pheasants or partridges in a mew, swans marked and pinioned, peacocks, and other such naturally wild creatures.³ And pigeons which come home every night, to roost in wooden boxes hung on the outside of the house, are the subjects of larceny.⁴ So, the stealing of a stock of bees is felony.⁵ But ferrets are enumerated amongst animals of a base nature, and, although valuable, they are unfit for food, and larceny cannot be committed of them.⁶ And, it is said, on the authority of East, P. C. 614, that ferrets, however tame and saleable, are not the subjects of this offence.⁷ And it is observable, that in an indictment the reclaimed animals must be stated to have been dead, tame, or confined, and that it is not sufficient to mention them as goods and chattels.⁸ The qualification to kill or keep game was held upon one occasion to have no reference to the question of stealing reclaimed pheasants, and it is reasonable to say, that the present revenue provisions (the old qualification being abolished) have no greater force in that respect. The prisoner was charged with stealing five pheasants, and upon proof that the prosecutor was not a qualified person, it was objected that he had not a possession sufficiently legal to support the indictment, but the court thought otherwise, and a conviction took place.⁹

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 21, whosoever shall steal any bird,

¹ It has been thought fit to withdraw the game clauses which in several bills stood next to "Hares and Conies." We have, therefore, placed "game," under a separate head. The taking of game can hardly be called stealing, much less larceny, therefore there may be a ground on the part of the legislature for leaving it to the operation of other Acts.

² 1 Hale, P. C. 512, as to hawks. As to rooks, Hannam v. Mockett, 2 B. & C. 934.

³ As to pheasants, 1 Hale, 510, 511; East, P. C. 607. R. v. Head, 1 Fost. & F. 350.

⁴ R. v. Brooks, 4 C. & P. 131. R. v. Cheafor, Den. & P. 361; 21 L. J. M. C. 43. R. v. Howell, Den. & P. 363, cited. R. v. Luke, 2 Russ. C. M. 83, citing Rosc. Crim. Ev. 577, Parke, B. And if the case of killing, wounding, or taking any house dove or pigeon does not amount to larceny at common law, a penalty of 2*l.*, over and above the value of the bird, attaches. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 23.

⁵ Tho. Raym. 33.

⁶ 1 Hale, P. C. 512.

⁷ R. v. Searing, Russ. & Ry. 350. Nevertheless the taking of these and other such wild animals is punishable upon summary conviction.

⁸ R. v. Rough, East, P. C. 607.

⁹ R. v. Jones, 2 Russ. C. M. 85.

beast, or other animal ordinarily kept in a state of confinement or for any domestic purpose, not being the subject of larceny at common law, or shall wilfully kill any such bird, &c., with intent to steal the same, or any part thereof, shall, on conviction before a justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour not exceeding six months, or else shall forfeit over and above the value of the bird, &c., a sum not exceeding 20*l.*; and whosoever, having been convicted of any such offence, either against this or any former Act, shall afterwards commit any offence in this section before mentioned, and shall be convicted thereof in like manner, shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for such term not exceeding twelve months as the convicting justice shall think fit.

By sect. 22, if any such bird, or any of the plumage thereof, or any dog, or any such beast, or the skin thereof, or any such animal, or any part thereof, shall be found in the possession or on the premises of any person, any justice may restore the same respectively to the owner; and any person in whose possession or on whose premises such bird, &c. shall be so found, (such person knowing that the bird, beast, or animal has been stolen, or that the plumage is the plumage of a stolen bird, or that the skin is the skin of a stolen beast, or that the part is a part of a stolen animal,) shall on conviction before a justice, be liable for the first offence to such forfeiture, and for every subsequent offence to such punishment, as any person convicted of stealing any beast or bird is made liable to by the last preceding section.

Fish.] We have above intimated¹ that fish kept in a trunk, net, or stew are the subjects of larceny at common law, and it may be added, that the better opinion is, that if the fish are in a pond,² the law will be the same, although at one time there was considerable doubt as to the pond.³ And the more especially if the pond be private inclosed property, the fish being restrained from their natural liberty so as to be taken at any time, at the pleasure of the owner.⁴ It seems that, in an indictment, the sort of pond should be described, that it may appear upon the face of the indictment that the taking of fish out of such a pond would be felony.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 24, whosoever shall unlawfully and wilfully take or destroy any fish in any water which shall run through or be in any land adjoining or belonging to the dwelling house of any person being the owner of such water, or having a right of fishery therein, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; and whosoever shall unlawfully and wilfully take or destroy, or attempt to take or destroy, any fish in any water not being such as hereinbefore

¹ Ante, p. 414.

² 3 Inst. 110; East, P. C. 610. R. v. Hanson and another, cited.

³ See Greye v. Batholomew, Ow. 20; Gouldsb. 127.

⁴ R. v. Hunsdon, East, P. C.

611. See Id. 610; 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 41. R. v. Walford, 5 Esp.

62.

mentioned, but which shall be private property, or in which there shall be any private right of fishery, shall, on conviction before a justice, forfeit and pay, over and above the value of the fish taken or destroyed (if any), a sum not exceeding 5*l*. Provided, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall extend to any person angling between the beginning of the last hour before sunrise and the expiration of the first hour after sunset; but whosoever shall by angling between the beginning of the last hour before sunrise and the expiration of the first hour after sunset unlawfully and wilfully take or destroy, or attempt to take or destroy, any fish in any such water as first mentioned, shall, on conviction before a justice, forfeit a sum not exceeding 5*l*., and if in any such water as last mentioned, he shall, on the like conviction, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding 2*l*.; and if the boundary of any parish, township, or vill shall happen to be in or by the side of any such water as is in this section before mentioned, it shall be sufficient to prove that the offence was committed either in the parish, township, or vill named in the indictment or information, or in any parish, township, or vill adjoining thereto.

By sect. 25, if any person shall at any time be found fishing against the provisions of this Act, the owner of the ground, water, or fishery where such offender shall be so found, his servant, or any person authorized by him, may demand from such offender any rod, line, hook, net, or other implement for taking or destroying fish which shall then be in his possession, and in case such offender shall not immediately deliver up the same, may seize and take the same from him for the use of such owner. Provided, that any person angling against the provisions of this Act, between the beginning of the last hour before sunrise and the expiration of the first hour after sunset, from whom any implement used by anglers shall be taken or by whom the same shall be so delivered up, shall by the taking or delivering thereof be exempted from the payment of any damages or penalty for such angling.

Indictment]. The indictment states that A. on, &c., unlawfully and wilfully did take [destroy] ten fish called —, in certain water running through certain land in the parish of —, in the county of —, adjoining to the dwelling of B., there situate, of which water the said B. was then and still is the owner [or had a right of fishery], against the form, &c.

In a case under 5 Geo. 3, c. 14 [repealed], where the prisoner was indicted for unlawfully entering a garden and stealing fish “of the goods and chattels of the said J. T.,” it was held, that these words were mere surplusage, and that the introduction of them would not vitiate the count.¹ In this case, it was admitted, that the defendant might be indicted for felony at common law, or for a misdemeanor upon the statute, at the election of the prosecutor.¹ The mode adopted by the defendant in order to take the fish, need not be stated. It was so held, where the old statute had the words "steal, take, &c., by any way, means, or device whatsoever."² A fortiori, this allegation needs not to be introduced under a clause which omits all mention of the method.

¹ R. v. Hunsdon, East, P. C. But the court would not quash the indictment upon motion. 611. R. v. Steer, (contra), 6 Mod. 183; 3 Salk. 189. See 3 Mod. 97.

Oysters.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 26, whosoever shall steal any oysters or oyster brood from any oyster bed, laying, or fishery, being the property of any other person, and sufficiently marked out or known as such, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable to be punished as in the case of simple larceny; and whosoever shall unlawfully and wilfully use any dredge, or any net, instrument, or engine whatsoever, within the limits of any oyster bed, laying, or fishery, being the property of any other person, and sufficiently marked out or known as such, for the purpose of taking oysters or oyster brood, although none shall be actually taken, or shall unlawfully and wilfully with any net, instrument, or engine, drag upon the ground or soil of any such fishery, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three months, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement; and it shall be sufficient in any indictment to describe either by name or otherwise the bed, laying, or fishery in which any of the said offences shall have been committed, without stating the same to be in any particular parish, township, or vill: Provided, that nothing in this section contained shall prevent any person from catching or fishing for any floating fish within the limits of any oyster fishery, with any net, instrument, or engine adapted for taking floating fish only.

Indictment]. The indictment states that A. on, &c., feloniously did steal [100 oysters] from a certain oyster bed, the property of B., sufficiently known and marked out as the property of B., against the form, &c.

Dogs.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 18, whosoever shall steal any dog shall, on conviction before two justices, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, with imprisonment, or imprisonment and hard labour, not exceeding six months, or shall forfeit and pay, over and above the value of the said dog, a sum not exceeding 20*l.*, and whosoever, having been convicted of the same, either against this or any former Act, shall afterwards steal any dog, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding eighteen months, with or without hard labour.

¹ R. v. Hunsdon, ut sup.

² R. v. Carradice, Russ. & Ry. 205.

By sect. 19, whosoever shall unlawfully have in his possession or on his premises any stolen dog, or the skin of any stolen dog, knowing such dog to have been stolen or such skin to be the skin of a stolen dog, shall, on conviction before two justices, be liable to pay a sum not exceeding 20*l.*; and whosoever, having been convicted of any such offence, either against this or any former Act, shall afterwards be guilty of any such offence as in this section before mentioned, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable to imprisonment not exceeding eighteen months, with or without hard labour.

And by sect. 20, whosoever shall corruptly take any money or reward, directly or indirectly, under pretence or upon account of aiding any person to recover any dog which shall have been stolen, or which shall be in the possession of any person not being the owner thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to imprisonment not exceeding eighteen months, with or without hard labour.

Indictments]. The first indictment states the former conviction whenever it happened, and that A. on, &c., unlawfully did steal a certain dog, the property of B. It does not seem necessary to mention the kind of dog. The second indictment also alleges the former conviction, and goes on to say that A. on, &c., had unlawfully a certain dog in his possession, the property of B., or the skin of a stolen dog belonging to B., or, that by virtue of a certain search warrant the dog or skin was found on the premises of A., the said B. well knowing that the dog (or skin) had been stolen. The third indictment alleges that A., under pretence of aiding B. in recovering a dog belonging to B., then before stolen, or in the possession of C., C. not being the owner thereof, unlawfully and corruptly did take a certain sum of money, that is to say, the sum of £—, upon the pretence (or upon account of) and for the purpose aforesaid.

CHAPTER V.

LARCENY OF VALUABLE SECURITIES.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 1, the term "valuable security" shall include any order, exchequer acquittance, or other security whatsoever entitling or evidencing the title of any person or body corporate to any share or interest in any public stock or fund, whether of the United Kingdom, or of Great Britain, or of Ireland, or of any foreign state, or in any fund of any body corporate, company, or society, whether within the United Kingdom or in any foreign state or country, or to any deposit in any bank, and shall also include any debenture, deed, bond, bill, note, warrant, order, or other security whatsoever for money or for payment of money, whether of the United Kingdom, or of Great Britain, or of Ireland, or of any foreign state, and any document of title to lands or goods as defined in this Act.

Bonds, bills, notes, &c.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 27, whosoever shall steal, or shall for any fraudulent purpose destroy, cancel, or obliterate, the whole or any part of any valuable security, other than a document of title to lands, shall be guilty of felony, of the same nature and in the same degree punishable in the same manner as if he had stolen any chattel of like value with the share, interest, or deposit to which the security so stolen may relate, or with the money due on the security so stolen, or secured thereby and remaining unsatisfied, or with the value of the goods or other valuable thing represented, mentioned, or referred to in or by the security. In other words, he would be guilty of larceny, and punishable under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 4.

In considering this clause, it is evident that the instrument in question must be valuable. So that where a note was obtained by duress, and withdrawn from the prosecutor as soon as he had signed, it was held, that this act was not a felony under 2 Geo. 2, c. 25, s. 2.¹ So it was where exchequer bills were signed without legal authority.² But upon another indictment they were held to be securities and effects within 15 Geo. 2, c. 13.³ So in the case of bankers' notes completely executed, but not put into circulation, no felony was committed, for there was no money due upon them.⁴ But they might, probably, be deemed valuable

¹ Now repealed. R. v. Phipoe, Leach, 673. See also Russ. & Ry. 219, 488.

² R. v. Aslett, Leach, 954.

³ R. v. Aslett, Id. 958; Russ. & Ry. 67; 1 New Rep. 1.

⁴ Anon. Leach, 1061, citing 4 Com. by Christian, 234.

property, and the subjects of larceny at common law.¹ So in the case of a cheque written on unstamped paper, and not made payable to bearer.² But an indictment for stealing a piece of paper is good at common law. A person was charged with stealing a cheque, and it became doubtful whether the document was not void for want of being stamped conformably to 55 Geo. 3, c. 184. There was, however, a count for stealing a piece of paper, value one penny, and upon this fact being ascertained by the court, the conviction was held right.³ It was held to be no good objection that the prosecutor had not indorsed a promissory note delivered to him.⁴ Nor, on the other hand, that a name appeared on the note when it was produced in evidence, in addition to the names of the indorsers, who had been mentioned without the third, in the indictment.⁵ And a cheque in the hands of drawers was held to be the subject of larceny in a case where the clerk appropriated it to his own use.⁶ And although the drawers were not stated to be bankers, it was held, that this made no difference.⁷ So, in accordance with the opinion of Russell, Serjt., where notes reissuable, but not reissued, had been stolen in the interval between the payment and fresh circulation of them, a conviction for stealing the paper and stamp was held right.⁸ So again, such notes, although not valuable securities, might yet be described as goods and chattels.⁹ And, notwithstanding the doubts in Vyse's case, the prisoner was held guilty of larceny for stealing notes, not in circulation, yet for value, and which had been paid in at one branch of a bank for transmission to another branch, whence, they might, or not, have been reissued.¹⁰ So the halves of notes sent in a letter have been deemed goods and chattels, and the subjects of larceny and embezzlement.¹¹ The prisoner offered to produce 5,000*l.* for the prosecutor, and took from his pocket book ten stamps of 6*s.*, across each of which the prosecutor wrote "accepted, payable at P. & Co., London." The prisoner took up the stamps and nothing more was said about them. Bills for 500*l.* were subsequently drawn upon these stamps, and negotiated by the prisoner, upon which he was indicted for larceny. But it was held, that these ¹ R. v. Ranson, Russ. & Ry. 232. R. v. West, 26 L. J. M. C. 6; Dears. & B. 109.

² R. v. Yates, 1 Moo. C. C. 170, decided on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 5.

³ R. v. Perry, Den. 69; 1 Car. & K. 725.

⁴ East, P. C. 598.

⁵ R. v. Austin and another, Id. 602.

⁶ R. v. Metcalf, 1 Moo. C. C. 433. Littledale, J., dub. R. v. Heath, 2 Moo. C. C. 33, by the judges unanimously.

⁷ S. C.

⁸ R. v. Clarke, Russ. & Ry. 181; Leach, 1036.

⁹ R. v. Vyse, 1 Moo. C. C. 218, so held on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 5. In this case, the prisoner's counsel endeavoured, in vain, to make a distinction between this case and R. v. Clarke, on the ground, that in the latter case, the notes were called property, but in the present, goods and chattels. Id. 222.

¹⁰ R. v. West, ante, 7 Cox, 183.

¹¹ R. v. Mead, 4 C. & P. 535.

stamped acceptances were not "bills of exchange," nor "orders for the payment of money," nor "securities for money," and that, in this case, no larceny of the stamps nor of the paper could be charged.¹ So in the case of a receipt produced and taken away by the prisoner, Parke, B., referred to Hart's case as an authority against a conviction.² The following were held to be valuable securities. In the first count, three deeds, being a security for money, to wit, 20*l*. In the second, three deeds, being a security for payment of money. In the third, a lease and release from A. to B. and a mortgage by a demise of the real estate. The same from B. and C., and held by the prosecutor as executor of C.³ The scrip certificates of a foreign railway are within the Act, although the words "or of any foreign states" are omitted.⁴

Indictment.] The indictment for stealing these securities is in the ordinary form for larceny, but by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 18, coin and bank notes may be described "simply as money."⁵ In the case of bills, &c. it should be stated that the instrument was due and unsatisfied. Still, as good a correspondence as possible between the security in question and the statute should be maintained. Under the old law, where a stolen note was described as a note, commonly called a bank note, the count was held ill.⁶ But on charging the theft of a promissory note, it was deemed sufficient to call it "a promissory note for the payment of one guinea," without setting forth the note.⁷ And in Craven's case,⁸ where the indictment stated that the note had been signed by A. H. for the governor and company, &c., the judges held, that some proof of A. H.'s signature was necessary.⁹

¹ R. v. Hart, 6 C. & P. 106.

² R. v. Smith, 21 L. J. M. C. 111; Den. & P. 449.

³ R. v. Williams, 6 Cox, 49.

⁴ R. v. Smith, 25 L. J. M. C. 31. Parke, B., Crompton, J., dub.; Wightman, J., Willes, J., acc.

⁵ The old cases, therefore, are obsolete, as R. v. Fry, Russ. &

Ry. 482. R. v. Wenman, 2 Russ. C. M. 110.

⁶ R. v. Craven, East, P. C. 601; Russ. & Ry. 14. See also R. v. Chard, Russ. & Ry. 488. But the objection will not apply now.

⁷ R. v. Milne, East, P. C. 602.

⁸ Supra.

⁹ Russ. & Ry. 16.

CHAPTER VI.

LARCENY OF DEEDS RELATING TO REAL ESTATE; WILLS;
AND RECORDS, &c.

Deeds relating to real estate.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 28, whosoever shall steal, or shall for any fraudulent purpose destroy, cancel, obliterate, or conceal, the whole or any part of any document of title to lands, shall be guilty of felony, and shall be liable to penal servitude for three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement; and in any indictment for any such offence relating to any document of title to land, it shall be sufficient to allege such document to be or to contain evidence of the title or of part of the title of the person or of some one of the persons having an interest, whether vested or contingent, legal or equitable, in the real estate to which the same relates, and to mention such real estate or some part thereof.

Indictment.] The form is, that A., on, &c., feloniously did steal, take, and carry away a certain deed of [grant], the property of B., the said deed being then evidence of [part of] the title of the said B. to a certain real estate called —, in which real estate the said C. D. then had, and still hath, a present interest, against the form, &c.¹

Wills, codicils, &c.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 29, whosoever shall, either during the life of the testator or after his death, steal, or for any fraudulent purpose destroy, cancel, obliterate, or conceal, the whole or any part of any will, codicil, or other testamentary instrument, whether the same shall relate to real or personal estate, or to both, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life or not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement; and it shall not in any indictment for such offence be necessary to allege that such will, &c., is the property of any person. Provided, that nothing in this or the last preceding section mentioned, nor any proceeding, conviction, or judgment to be had or taken thereupon, shall prevent, lessen, or impeach any present or future remedy at law or in equity, but no conviction of any such offender shall be received in evidence against him; and no person shall be liable to be convicted of any of the felonies in this and the last preceding section mentioned, by any evidence whatever in respect of any act done by him, if he shall at any time previously to his being charged with such offence have first disclosed such act, on oath, in consequence of any compulsory process of any court of law or equity in any action, suit, or proceeding which shall have been bonâ fide instituted by any party aggrieved, or if he shall have first disclosed the same in any compulsory examination or deposition before any court upon the hearing of any matter in bankruptcy or insolvency.

¹ Or did fraudulently and feloniously destroy [cancel], &c.

The defendant concealed a will, and paid money to the husband of the next of kin, which, under the will, should have gone to A. and B. The husband was a creditor of the defendant. This was held to be a fraudulent purpose.¹

Indictment]. The indictment states that A. on, &c., in the lifetime of one B. [or after the death of one B.], feloniously did steal, take, and carry away a certain will of the said B., or fraudulently and feloniously did destroy, or conceal, &c.

It would be unwise to draw an indictment for destroying or concealing.² The purpose which prompted the concealment ought to be stated.³ It is made a question, however, whether the objection is available otherwise than upon demurrer.⁴

Records, &c.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 30, whosoever shall steal, or shall for any fraudulent purpose take from its place of deposit for the time being, or from any person having the lawful custody thereof, or shall unlawfully and maliciously cancel, obliterate, injure, or destroy the whole or any part of any record, writ, return, pannel, process, interrogatory, deposition, affidavit, rule, order, or warrant of attorney, or of any original document whatsoever of or belonging to any court of record, or relating to any matter, civil or criminal, begun, depending, or terminated in any such court, or of any bill, petition, answer, interrogatory, deposition, affidavit, order, or decree, or of any original document whatsoever of or belonging to any court of equity, or relating to any cause or matter begun, depending, or terminated in any such court, or of any original document in anywise relating to the business of any office or employment under Her Majesty, and being or remaining in any office appertaining to any court of justice, or in any of Her Majesty's castles, palaces, or houses, or in any government or public office, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement; and it shall not in any indictment for such offence be necessary to allege that the article in respect of which the offence is committed is the property of any person.

¹ R. v. Morris, 9 C. & P. 89.

² R. v. Spencer, Willmore, 418.

³ R. v. Morris, 9 C. & P. 89.

⁴ 9 C. & P. 90. See as to the old law, R. v. Westbeer, Leach, 12, note (a).

It is to be observed, that the stealing of records is now felony.¹

Indictment.] The indictment sets forth that A. on, &c., feloniously did steal, take, and carry away a certain record [state it], [or for a fraudulent purpose feloniously and fraudulently did take from its place of deposit] a certain record, &c., against the form, &c.

If the article be a record, it should not be described as parchment, being a record, but if it should have lost that character, it may then be called parchment.²

In the case of cancelling, injuring, &c., unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did cancel, [injure,] &c., a certain record, &c.³

¹ R. v. John, 7 C. & P. 324, Patteson, J., no longer applies. As to the venue, see sect. 114.

² R. v. Walker, 1 Moo. C. C. 155.

³ See ante, R. v. Spencer; R. v. Morris.

CHAPTER VII.

OF LARCENY OF THINGS ATTACHED TO, OR GROWING ON LAND.¹

Metal, glass, wood, &c., fixed to house or land.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 31, whosoever shall steal, or shall rip, cut, sever, or break with intent to steal, any glass or wood-work belonging to any building whatsoever, or any lead, iron, copper, brass, or other metal, or any utensil or fixture, whether made of metal or other material or of both, respectively fixed in or to any building whatsoever, or anything made of metal fixed in any land being private property, or for a fence to any dwelling house, garden, or area, or in any square or street, or in any place dedicated to public use or ornament, or in any burial ground, shall be guilty of felony, and shall be punished as in the case of simple larceny;² and in the case of any such thing fixed in any such square, street, or place as aforesaid, it shall not be necessary to allege the same to be the property of any person.

If the indictment be properly framed, a casement will be within the words of the statute.³ And it is presumed, that glazed sashes, although only fastened in by laths nailed across the frames to prevent their falling out, are likewise within it.⁴ It has likewise been held upon a similar section, that an unfurnished building, intended for a cart-shed, with a door and lock, and having the frame of a roof with loose gorse thrown over it, because of its not being yet thatched, was within the same provisions.⁵ A plank was used as a seat. There were a wall and pillars at the end of it. The plank was laid in mortar at the top of the wall and pillars, and there was no roof. Park, J., held, that this was not a building within the Act.⁶ Brass fixed to tombstones in a churchyard, is also within the protection of the Act.⁷ So it is in the case of a copper sun-dial attached by screws to the top of a wooden post fixed in a churchyard.⁸ So stealing lead fixed to a wharf was held to be within such a statute, for the wharf was a building. But as there was no other evidence of stealing the lead than that which went to show the lead to have been a fixture, the convic-

¹ The 21 Geo. 3, c. 68, as to the punishment of stealers of copper, brass, &c., is repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 101.

² Sect. 4 of this Act. And see sects. 5, 6.

³ 2 Russ. C. M. 64. See R. v. Senior, Leach, 496.

⁴ R. v. Hedges, Leach, 201.

⁵ R. v. Worrall, 7 C. & P. 516.

⁶ R. v. Reece, 2 Russ. C. M. 65.

⁷ R. v. Blick, 4 C. & P. 377, Bosanquet, J.

⁸ R. v. Jones and Jones, 27 L. J. M. C. 171; Dears. & B. 555.

tion on the second count for simple larceny could not be sustained.¹ So, likewise, where the prisoner was indicted for stealing lead affixed to a building, and the jury found that he had stolen the lead when lying severed, thus negating the stealing it fixed, Tindal, C. J., directed a verdict of not guilty to be entered.² A room was attached to a shire hall, and used as a ball and concert room. There was a chandelier there which had been used as a fixture, but was not then used for any other purpose. The hall-keeper was charged with stealing this chandelier, and it was held, that he might be deemed guilty of larceny within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 15. He was not the bailee nor the servant of the inhabitants. The statute makes the inhabitants a quasi corporation.³

Indictment.] The indictment states that A. on, &c., feloniously did steal, &c., — pounds of lead, &c., the property of B., and then fixed to a certain dwelling house of the said B., situate, &c. Or, on, &c., feloniously did rip and break — pounds of lead, &c., with intent feloniously to steal, take, and carry away the same.

The indictment must state carefully the ownership of the dwelling house, and lay the chattel or fixture correctly. The prisoner was charged with stealing a copper pipe fixed to the dwelling house of E. D. and S. H. But it turned out, that these two persons were separate tenants in the same house, and, for this reason, the judges held the conviction wrong.⁴ If lead be stolen from a church, it may be better to follow the rule laid down by the judges in an old case, and to state that the lead or other metal had been fixed to a certain building called the parish church.⁵ The receipt of rents is prima facie evidence of a seisin in fee.⁶ Therefore, the ownership of a house being laid in W., who resided at Patras, the evidence was, that B. managed the property for him, let his house and received the rent. This proof was held to disclose sufficient ownership in W.⁷

Venue.] Lead was stolen from the roof of a church in Bucks. The prisoner was traced with it into Middlesex, and an indictment was preferred against him at the Central Criminal Court as for simple larceny. But the court held that he could not be convicted there for want of jurisdiction, inasmuch as the original taking was, although a statutable felony, yet no taking at common law, and the subsequent possession did not make the offence such a larceny.⁸

¹ R. v. Rice and others, 28 L. J. M. C. 64.

² R. v. Good and another, 8 C. & P. 293. R. v. Millar, 7 C. & P. 665. See Lyde v. Russell, post, 1 B. & Adol. 394.

³ R. v. Winbow, 5 Cox, 346.

⁴ R. v. Finch, 1 Moo. C. C. 418.

⁵ R. v. Hickman and another,

Leach, 318. See R. v. Isley, Id. 320, n.

⁶ R. v. Brummitt, 8 Cox, 413.

⁷ R. v. Brummitt, Leigh & Cave, 9. A case of stealing lead fixed. The court of criminal appeal will not send back a case upon an objection not incident to the merits.

⁸ R. v. Millar, 7 C. & P. 665.

Trees in pleasure grounds.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 32, whosoever shall steal, or shall cut, break, root up, or otherwise destroy or damage with intent to steal, the whole or any part of any tree, sapling, or shrub, or any underwood, respectively growing in any park, pleasure ground, garden, orchard, or avenue, or in any ground adjoining or belonging to any dwelling house, shall (in case the value of the article or articles stolen, or the amount of the injury done, shall exceed the sum of 1*l.*.) be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable to be punished as in the case of simple larceny;² and whosoever shall steal, &c. the whole or any part of any tree, &c., or any underwood, respectively growing elsewhere than in any of the situations in this section before mentioned, shall (in case the value of the article or articles stolen, or the amount of the injury done, shall exceed the sum of 5*l.*.) be guilty of felony, and shall be punished as in the case of simple larceny.³

By sect. 33, whosoever shall steal, or shall cut, break, root up, or otherwise destroy or damage with intent to steal, the whole or any part of any tree, sapling, or shrub, or any underwood where-soever the same may be respectively growing, the stealing of such article or articles, or the injury done, being to the amount of 1*s.* at the least, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice, forfeit over and above the value of the article or articles stolen, or the amount of the injury done, a sum not exceeding 5*l.*; and whosoever having been convicted of any such offence, either against this or any former Act of parliament, shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, and shall be convicted thereof in like manner, shall, for such second offence be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for such term not exceeding twelve months as the convicting justice shall think fit; and whosoever, having been twice convicted of any such offence (whether both or either of such convictions shall have taken place before or after the passing of this Act), shall afterwards commit any of the offences in this section before mentioned, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be punished in the same manner as in the case of simple larceny.⁴

Fences ; gates.] By sect. 34, whosoever shall steal, or shall cut, break, or throw down with intent to steal, any part of any live or dead fence, or any wooden post, pale, wire, or rail set up or used as a fence, or any stile or gate, or any part thereof respectively, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice, forfeit, over and above the value of the article or articles so stolen, or the amount of the injury done, a sum not exceeding 5*l.*; and whosoever, having been

¹ The author is aware that these offences concerning trees, &c., are punishable, as in the case of simple larceny, and, therefore, are not larcenies; but he has not thought it worth while to disturb the title for the sake of a mere technicality.

² Sect. 4 of this Act. See sects. 5, 6.

³ Id.

⁴ Sect. 4 of this Act. See sects. 5, 6.

convicted of any such offence, either against this or any former Act of parliament, shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, and shall be convicted thereof in like manner, shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour, for such term not exceeding twelve months as the convicting justice shall think fit.

Unlawful possession.] Again, by sect. 35, if the whole or any part of any tree, sapling, or shrub, or any underwood, or any part of any live or dead fence, or any post, pale, wire, rail, stile, or gate, or any part thereof, being of the value of 1s. at the least, shall be found in the possession of any person, or on the premises of any person, with his knowledge, and such person, being taken or summoned before a justice, shall not satisfy the justice that he came lawfully by the same, he shall on conviction by the justice forfeit and pay, over and above the value of the article or articles so found, any sum not exceeding 2*l*.

Fruits, vegetable productions, &c.] By sect. 36, whosoever shall steal, or shall destroy or damage with intent to steal, any plant, root, fruit, or vegetable production growing in any garden, orchard, pleasure ground, nursery ground, hothouse, greenhouse, or conservatory, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, for any term not exceeding six months, or else shall forfeit over and above the value of the article or articles so stolen, or the amount of the injury done, a sum not exceeding 20*l*.; and whosoever, having been convicted of any such offence, either against this or any former Act of parliament, shall afterwards commit any of the offences in this section before mentioned, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as in the case of simple larceny.¹

Vegetables in fields.] By sect. 37, whosoever shall steal, or shall destroy or damage with intent to steal, any cultivated root or plant, used for the food of man or beast, or for medicine, or for distilling, or for dyeing, or for or in the course of any manufacture, and growing in any land, open or inclosed, not being a garden, orchard, pleasure ground, or nursery ground, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, for any term not exceeding one month, or else shall forfeit, over and above the value of the article or articles so stolen, or the amount of the injury done, a sum not exceeding 20*s*., as to the justice shall seem meet, and in default of payment thereof, together with the costs (if ordered), shall be committed as aforesaid for any term not exceeding one month, unless payment be sooner made; and whosoever, having been convicted of any such offence either against this or any former Act of parliament, shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, and shall be convicted thereof in like manner, shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour, for such term not exceeding six months as the convicting justice shall think fit.

¹ Sect. 4 of this Act. See sects. 5, 6.

Under sect. 36, whether the ground mentioned in the indictment be a garden or a nursery, is a question for the jury.¹ Ground separated from the house by a narrow walk and paling cannot be said to be ground adjoining or belonging to the dwelling house.²

Indictments.] The indictments upon these sections state, that A., on, &c., in a certain park, &c., of B., situate, &c., feloniously did cut and root up, &c., &c., one tree, the property of the said D., in the said park then growing, with intent the said tree then feloniously to steal, &c., the said tree being then and there above the value of 1*l*. Or did steal, take, and carry away one tree, &c., thereby doing injury to the said B. to an amount exceeding the sum of 1*l*. If it be thought fit, there may be two counts. And in the last case the prisoner's conviction should be set out, and afterwards, the subsequent offence. The word "plant" cannot be said to denote a young fruit tree.³ Under the old Act clover was considered to be a plant for the food of beasts, so as to warrant the apprehension of an offender under it by a constable, the owner, or his servant.⁴

The indictment in this case sets forth prisoner's conviction, and goes on to mention the felonious act done by him, whether by stealing, destroying, or damaging, with intent to steal, with a local venue.

¹ R. v. Hodges, Moo. & Malk. 341.

² Id.

³ R. v. Hodges, Moo. & Malk. 341.

⁴ R. v. Brumby, 3 Car. & K. 315. The clauses relating to summary conviction are ss. 105, et seq.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF LARCENY FROM MINES.

Larceny in mines.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 38, whosoever shall steal, or sever with intent to steal, the ore of any metal, or any lapis calaminaris, manganese or mundick, or any wad, black cawke, or black lead, or any coal or cannel coal, from any mine, bed, or vein thereof respectively, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement.¹

And by sect. 39, whosoever, being employed in or about any mine, shall take, remove, or conceal any ore of any metal, or any lapis calaminaris, manganese, mundick, or other mineral found or being in such mine, with intent to defraud any proprietor of or any adventurer in such mine, or any workman or miner employed therein, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to the punishments of the 38th section.

The prisoner took heaps of ore from one pit, and put them upon another, in order to get more wages from adventurers. This act was not larceny, because, although the adventurers might be cheated, yet both pits would ultimately come into their hands, and so there could not be a stealing of the ore.²

Indictment.] The indictment states, that A., on, &c., in a certain coal mine of B., in the parish of —, in the county of —, feloniously did sever one ton-weight of coal, the property of the said B., in the said mine there being, with intent the said coal feloniously to steal, take, and carry away. In a second count, that A., on, &c., in a certain coal mine of B., in the parish of —, and in the county of —, feloniously did steal, &c., from the said mine one ton of ore, the property of the said B.³ It was alleged in an indictment that the prisoner being employed in a mine at the parish of —, in the county of Cornwall, on, &c., at, &c., did steal certain ore, the property, &c., then and there being found. This statement was considered insufficient to show that the ore was in the mine when stolen.⁴

¹ The stat. 56 Geo. 3, c. 73, Moo. C. C. 431. And see R. v. [Stealing from mines,] repealed by Holloway, Den. 370.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 101.

³ See Archb. Cr. Pl. 415.

² R. v. Webb and another, 1

⁴ R. v. Trevenner, 2 Moo. & Rob. 476.

CHAPTER IX.

OF SIMPLE ROBBERY.

STEALING FROM THE PERSON. ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO ROB.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 40, whosoever shall rob any person, or steal any chattel, money, or valuable security¹ from the person of another, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen years and not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement.

By sect. 41, if upon the trial of any person upon any indictment for robbery, it shall appear to the jury that the defendant did not commit the crime of robbery, but that he did commit an assault with intent to rob, the defendant shall not be acquitted thereupon, but the jury may return as their verdict that the defendant is guilty of an assault with intent to rob; and such defendant shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for feloniously assaulting with intent to rob;² and no person so tried as is herein lastly mentioned shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for an assault with intent to commit the robbery for which he was so tried.

And by sect. 42, whosoever shall assault any person with intent to rob shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall (save and except in the cases where a greater punishment is provided by this Act) be liable to penal servitude for three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement.

Robbery.] The distinction between robbery and stealing from the person is this. When the attack is such as to create an impression of fear, or to incapacitate the individual by reason of surprise from any reflection, it may be without actual personal violence, the theft taking place contemporaneously, the offence will amount to simple robbery. But the force or fear must not come after the taking. A asked B. to open a gap for him; whilst B. was engaged in doing so, A. took a purse from B.'s pocket; B. turning round, saw his purse in the hand of A. and demanded it, upon which A. used violent threats and went away with the purse. This was a taking by stealth, because the menace was used after the theft.³ Thieves

¹ See sect. 1.

² Under sect. 42.

³ R. v. Harman, 2 Ro. Rep.

154. R. v. Smith and another,
1 Lew. C. C. 301.

struck money out of a man's hand, and then drove the owner away by threats : this was not robbery, for the menace took place afterwards.¹ So where the prosecutor's watch chain was jerked out of his pocket with considerable force, and a scuffle ensued, Garrow, B., held that the force occurred after the robbery.² The value of the thing taken is immaterial. A slip of paper containing a memorandum is sufficient, for the prosecutor by keeping it in his pocket showed that it was of some value to him.³

There must be an asportation. The robber had the purse in his hand, but could not entirely detach it from the owner's pocket, by reason of some keys, with which it was entangled : this was no robbery, for the purse had not quitted the pocket.⁴ So where the prosecutor had laid down a feather bed through fear, and the prisoner was apprehended before he had removed it.⁵ Had the purse fallen to the ground, or had the prisoner picked up the bed, the case would have been robbery.⁶ The thief detached a lady's earring, but lost it in the curls of her hair : this was an asportation, for there was a momentary possession.⁷ It is no defence to say that the prosecutor threw away his property, if the thief afterwards picked it up.⁸ Nor that the robber should return the purse, requesting the delivery of the money within it.⁹ Again, this offence must be committed in the presence of the injured party. As where thieves struck money out of the owner's hands and drove him away with threats ; they took it up, but the special verdict was silent as to the presence of the prosecutor at the time of the taking up. The court would not intend that he was present.¹⁰ Again, the property must be taken from the prosecutor. One of two prisoners snatched up a bundle belonging to the prosecutor, which B., who was carrying it, had thrown down upon being assaulted by the prisoner. The bundle was not taken from the prosecutor, and the prisoners were guilty of simple larceny only.¹¹ A. being disappointed by not finding B.'s money, threw B.'s bridle into the road : this was not robbery.¹² However, it has been said that if a man-servant be robbed, in sight of his master, of his master's goods, the robbery is a robbery of the master,¹³ because of the possession, that of the servant being that of the master. Further, the attack and

¹ R. v. Francis and others, 2 Str. 1015. R. v. Grey and others, East, P. C. 708.

² R. v. Gnosil, 1 Car. & P. 304.

³ R. v. Bingley and another, 5 C. & P. 602, Gurney, B.

⁴ R. v. Wilkinson, 1 Hale, P. C. 508 ; Leach, 321, n. So in stealing from the person. R. v. Thompson, 1 Moo. C. C. 78.

⁵ 1 Hale, P. C. 533.

⁶ Id. R. v. Farrell, Leach, 322, n.

⁷ R. v. Lapier, Leach, 320.

Rather, there had been an asportation from its original place.

⁸ R. v. Wright, Str. 156 ; Leach, 726, cited.

⁹ R. v. Peat, Leach, 228.

¹⁰ R. v. Francis and others, 2 Str. 1015 ; Com. Rep. 478 ; Ca. Temp. Hardw. 113, ante. R. v. Grey and others, East, P. C. 708. And see Id. 707.

¹¹ R. v. Fallows and another, 5 C. & P. 508.

¹² Anon. East, P. C. 662. No felonious intent was found.

¹³ R. v. Wright, Sty. 156.

loss must be invito domino. It was concerted amongst certain bad characters that an attack should be made upon one of themselves, by one of the gang, who was to find two strangers to assist, in order that they might apprehend the strangers, and get the reward for apprehending robbers: it was held upon a special verdict, that the indictment against the strangers for aiding and abetting could not be supported. The person supposed to be robbed had parted with his property willingly.¹ But where a man hearing that one of the early stages was robbed frequently near London, put some money into his pocket, and threw himself in the way of the highwayman, and having succeeded in meeting that person, gave him, upon demand, the money, and then, with help, apprehended him, it was held that a case of robbery had been made out,² inasmuch as there was actual violence on the part of the highwayman.³ For, says Foster, J., it was quite uncertain whether the thief would come, and equally so whether he would be alone, neither was there any concert between the prosecutor and the robber.⁴

If the original intent be rape, the prisoner cannot set up that intent to excuse a robbery. The woman offered some money to redeem her chastity. The prisoner put it into his pocket, but continued to persevere in his violence until he was interrupted. He was held guilty of robbery. He had derived the advantage of plunder by his felonious conduct.⁵ A poacher demanded his wires with threats from the gamekeeper who had seized them. The jury negatived any felonious intention, and it was held that no robbery had been committed.⁶

There must be some personal violence, sufficient at least to create alarm in a mind of ordinary firmness, or to distinguish the case from stealing from the person. An actual touch is not necessary if the external circumstances are of such a nature as to warrant fear.⁷ A violent push, or running up against a person in order to divert his attention, would be evidence of the offence.⁸ Surrounding a person with intent to prevent his escaping or resisting would, by reason of the company, be sufficient to constitute the offence.⁹ A person tried to retain his sword, upon which the prisoner had laid hold, but was unsuccessful in his attempt to keep it: this was robbery.¹⁰ So was the snatching of the ear-ring,¹¹ and of a dia-

¹ R. v. M^cDaniel and others, Fost. 121.

² R. v. Norden, Fost. 129.

³ Leach, 619.

⁴ Fost. 129.

⁵ R. v. Blackham, East, P. C. 711.

⁶ R. v. Hall, 3 C. & P. 409. Simple robbery is the taking of money or goods, of any value, from the person of another or in his presence, against his will, and by putting him in fear. See East, P. C. 702. R. v. Horner, Id.

703. And as to accessories, East, P. C. 700. But accessories are now punishable as principals.

⁷ The old law required actual violence. R. v. Macauley, Leach, 287. R. v. Baker, Id. 290. R. v. Steward, East, P. C. 702.

⁸ Anon. 1 Lew. C. C. 300.

⁹ R. v. Hughes and another, Id. 301. See R. v. Gnosil, 1 C. & P. 304.

¹⁰ R. v. Davies, East, P. C. 709.

¹¹ R. v. Lapier, ante.

mond pin, so forcibly as to tear away the hair.¹ So where a pulling and two or three jerks were used in order to detach the watch from the fob.² Snatching is different from continued force, as where the prosecutor was telling the hour at the prisoner's request, and the latter snatched the watch, Patteson, J., held it to be a stealing from the person, not robbery.³ Indeed, force supplies the place of fear, as where a person was knocked down and rendered senseless, and whilst thus injured, was stripped by the prisoner: this was robbery.⁴ And R. v. Lapier illustrates the same doctrine.⁵

Again, there may be a continuing violence, as when thieves compelled A. to bring them a sum of money at a particular time by menacing him with death. He brought the money, and the act was held to be robbery, because the fear of the menace still continued upon him when he delivered the money.⁶

Again, fraud will constitute robbery. Gascoigne, under pretence of conveying a woman to gaol for an offence, kicked her into a coach, and then took money from her. This was held to be robbery.⁷ Another case is, where money has been obtained during riots; and the fear under the statute extends not only to loss of life, or personal injury, but also to the loss of property. Taplin, the captain of a mob in 1780, accompanied the mob on horseback. The prosecutor, on being appealed to, gave the prisoner half a crown, upon demand, instead of a shilling which he had intended to give. This act was held to be robbery.⁸ Upon another occasion, evidence of other demands by the same mob, the prisoners being present, were held admissible as to the character of the transaction.⁹ Again, during these riots of 1780, the prosecutor was told that, if he desired to keep his blood within his mouth, he must give the shilling demanded: the same law prevailed.¹⁰ The same rule applies if a mob succeed in possessing themselves of provisions at a lower rate than their value, although they pay the reduced price.¹¹ In this last case the fear of death was held out; but, in another case, followed by execution, the threat was that the mob would take away the property, if it were not delivered up, upon which the prosecutor complied.¹² So where the threat was to tear down a mow of corn and level the house.¹³ So where the threat was to bring a mob from Birmingham and burn the house, if the prosecutor did not give money. He

¹ R. v. Moore, Leach, 335.

² R. v. Mason, Russ. & Ry. 419.

³ R. v. Walls and another, 2 Car. & K. 214. There was not sufficient force to put in fear, or create extraordinary surprise. The punishments are now the same.

⁴ East, P. C. 711.

⁵ Ante.

⁶ 1 Hale, P. C. 532; East, P. C. 714. See 1 Hawk. c. 34, s. 1.

⁷ R. v. Gascoigne, Leach, 280; East, P. C. 709.

⁸ R. v. Taplin, East, P. C. 712.

⁹ R. v. Winkworth and others, 4 C. & P. 444.

¹⁰ R. v. Brown, East, P. C. 731.

¹¹ R. v. Simons, Id. 712.

¹² R. v. Spencer, East, P. C. 712.

¹³ R. v. Simons, Id. 731.

did not apprehend danger to his life or person, but feared that his house would be pulled down. The jury having found these facts, the crime was held to be robbery.¹ So where rioters seized a cart of cheeses, under pretence of the want of a permit, and frightened the owner into an agreement to go before a magistrate; but, as soon as the owner was gone, they carried off the cheeses.² The judges seem to have made a difference between the case of rioters using urgency and violence, and that of an ordinary demand. As where a woman was inveigled into a mock auction room, and was afterwards threatened that if she did not pay a shilling, she should be taken before a magistrate for not paying the price of a lot pretended to have been bought by her, the judges held, that the payment thus enforced was not robbery. The woman had a choice of difficulties; she chose to pay the shilling rather than go before the magistrate.³ It must be confessed, that the distinction is rather nice. Lastly, it may be remarked, that a successful threatening letter for the extortion of money or goods, will amount to robbery. If, indeed, the mandate be not complied with, the offence becomes the subject of another enactment;⁴ but if the threat be yielded to by the person intimidated, it is simple robbery.

Indictment.] The indictment for simple robbery states that A., on, &c., in and upon one B. feloniously did make an assault, and did then put the said B. in danger and fear [of his life], and then did feloniously and violently steal, take, and carry away from the person, and against the will of the said B., certain money, &c., that is to say, belonging to the said B., against the form, &c. Nevertheless, the putting in bodily fear is no necessary part of the indictment, however usual, for the felonious assault and robbery are the principal characters of the offence;⁵ and the assault needs not to be alleged to have been done violently.⁶ No parish need to be mentioned.⁷

Verdict.] The right of a jury to convict of an assault with intent to rob, upon an indictment for robbery, has already been mentioned.⁸

Stealing from the person.] In the case of stealing from the person, proof of an asportation is necessary, that is to say, a complete removal of the property. Thus where the prosecutor's

¹ R. v. Astley, Id. 729.

² Merriman v. Hundred of Chippenham, Id. 709.

³ R. v. Knewland and another, Leach, 721; East, P. C. 732. R. v. Newton, Car. Cr. L. 285.

⁴ See R. v. Pelfryman and another, Leach, 563.

⁵ See R. v. Donally, East, P. C.

⁶ R. v. Smith, Id.

⁷ See East, P. C. 784-786, as to the old law.

⁸ Ante.

pocket-book was drawn partly from his pocket, but not totally from his person, it was held by six judges against four, that although there was an asportation sufficient to warrant a judgment for simple larceny, the count for the compound larceny was wrong, and a pardon upon condition of transportation for seven years was recommended.¹ This case may be compared with one more recent. A watch was drawn out of the prosecutor's pocket; the chain and key were drawn from the button hole forcibly, but the point of the key caught upon a button, and the prisoner's hand being seized, the watch remained suspended. This was held to be a severance.² Jervis, C. J., said, he considered the minority of the judges in Thompson's case to have been right. Alderson, B., said, that there must be a removal of the property from the person; a hair's breadth would do.³ Thompson's case seems to be untouched, notwithstanding the remark of Jervis, C. J., for there was not a complete severance; and Lapier's case was relied on in Simpson's case, for the ear-ring fell amongst the curls, and thus there was, at all events, a momentary severance. It has been decided that the existence of force and fear is no answer to the charge of stealing from the person, or, in other words, that evidence of the greater offence would not, in this instance, warrant an acquittal for the less; therefore, if proof of a highway robbery be given, the prisoner may be yet convicted of stealing from the person.⁴ And Wood, B., was doubtful, whether, if he directed an acquittal, the prisoners might not have pleaded aut. acq. to the robbery.⁵ A man went to bed with a prostitute, and left his watch in a hat on the table. She stole it while he was asleep. This was a larceny in the dwelling house, not from the person.⁶ But where the prosecutor was assaulted in his house by A., whilst B. went to the cupboard and stole the cash-box, it was left to the jury to say whether the cash-box was under the protection of the prosecutor's person, and they found a verdict of guilty.⁷

Indictment.] The indictment states that A., on, &c. [state the property] of the goods and chattels of B., from the person of the said B. feloniously did steal, take, and carry away, against the form, &c.

Assault with intent to rob.] An actual blow does not seem necessary in order to constitute an assault with intent to rob. The words "stand and deliver," with a club uplifted,⁸ would, unquestionably, amount to such an assault. Should the force come short of an assault, it is still punishable under another section.⁹

¹ R. v. Thompson, 1 Moo. C. C. 78.

² R. v. Simpson, Dears. 424; 24 L. J. M. C. 7.

³ Dears. C. C. 424.

⁴ R. v. Robinson and another, Russ. & Ry. 321. R. v. Pearce, Id. 174; Leach, 1046.

⁵ R. v. Robinson, supra.

⁶ R. v. Hamilton, 8 C. & P. 49.

⁷ R. v. Selway and another, 8 Cox, 235; and 1 Hale, P. C. 533, was cited.

⁸ R. v. Pegge, East, P. C. 420.

⁹ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 45.

So if a pistol be presented, it is an assault with intent to rob.¹ A fortiori, if the prosecutor was ordered to stop.² So it is if the prisoner, with a companion, should lay hands upon the prosecutor, saying, "Not a word, or I will blow your brains out."³ So an assault upon, and threatening to accuse the prosecutor of an infamous crime, is an assault with intent to rob.⁴ And, in that case, the judges thought, that Henry's case was not rightly decided. There one Taunton was convicted of being the principal in the second degree in a robbery, accompanied by threats of an abominable nature. Taunton committed no violence, but was present. Henry used actual force, and there was no question as to him, but, as to Taunton, the judges held the conviction wrong.⁵ The assault must be with intent to rob the prosecutor of something valuable. So that where a person was compelled to sign a note of hand under the fear of death, a knife having been placed at his throat, it was held, that felony had not been committed, because the note was of no value in the prosecutor's hands, and he was not, therefore, dispossessed of anything valuable.⁶ So where a person was decoyed into a house, and was induced under duress, being chained down, to write an order for the payment of money, and for the delivery of some deeds, and an indictment was preferred for an assault with intent to rob, the same law prevailed.⁷ But an assault was committed in both cases, and Mrs. Phipoe was convicted upon another indictment for the misdemeanor. Nor were the cases within the section respecting the demand of chattels, money, or valuable securities, with menaces, because admitting that the mere piece of paper belonged to the prosecutor, yet the demand would not be of that small chattel, but of the order to be written on it. But the 48th section of the statute 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, has provided sufficiently for the offence by inflicting a very severe punishment.⁸ A fortiori, if there be a semblance of right, there is no assault with intent to rob. The prisoner, finding that several sovereigns given to the prosecutor for the purpose of buying a horse, were fraudulently retained by him, on the next day seeing him receive some sovereigns, knocked him down, and tried to take the money. This was not a felonious assault.⁹ And in a case where an assault took place after an alleged assault to rob had ceased, a separate indictment should have been preferred, Wightman, J., being of opinion that he could not connect the two assaults, so as to warrant a conviction for a common assault under 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 11.¹⁰

¹ East, P. C. 417.

² R. v. Trusty and another, Id. 418, overruling R. v. Parfait, Leach, 19.

³ R. v. Jacobs and another, Leach, 267. However, if a companion be present, the robbery is more serious.

⁴ R. v. Stringer and others, 2 Moo. C. C. 261; 1 Car. & K. 188.

⁵ R. v. Henry and Taunton, 2 Moo. C. C. 118.

⁶ R. v. Phipoe, Leach, 673.

⁷ R. v. Edwards, 6 C. & P. 515.

⁸ Post.

⁹ R. v. Boden, 1 Car. & K. 305.

¹⁰ Now repealed. R. v. Sandys and another, 1 Cox, 8.

Indictment.] The indictment states, that A., on, &c., in and upon B., feloniously did make an assault with intent then to rob the said B., and feloniously and violently to steal, take, and carry away the money, &c., of the said B., against the will of the said B. The indictment should state, with accuracy, the party intended to be robbed. A. stopped a postboy, and presented a pistol, making use of some violent oaths; but seeing that he was pursued, immediately rode away. B. was in the carriage which the postboy was driving, and the prisoner was charged with an assault with intent to rob B.; but the court directed an acquittal, for the prisoner did not assault B., but the postboy. The prisoner was then tried for assaulting the postboy with intent to rob him, but the court said, that the indictment could not be sustained, for the prisoner had no intention of robbing the postboy, since he had made no demand in that direction.¹ The intent to rob must likewise appear in the indictment. It will not suffice to charge the intent to have been feloniously to steal, take, and carry away.² But where the elements of robbery appear in the indictment, the word "rob" is not indispensable, although it is not wise to omit it. The indictment charged that A., in and upon B., feloniously did make an assault, with intent, the monies, goods, and chattels of the said B., from the person and against the will of the said B., then and there feloniously and violently to steal, take, and carry away, &c. This count was held good.³

¹ R. v. Thomas, East, P. C. 417. Hawk. c. 55, s. 6. R. v. Monteith,

² R. v. Remnant, 5 T. R. 169. Leach, 702.

Semb. overruling R. v. Rook, 2 ³ R. v. Huxley, Car. & M. 596.

CHAPTER X.

OF AGGRAVATED ROBBERIES.

Robbery, or assault with intent to rob, being armed with any offensive weapon.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 43, whosoever shall, being armed with any offensive weapon or instrument, rob, or assault with intent to rob, any person, or shall, together with one or more other person or persons, rob, or assault with intent to rob, any person, or shall rob any person, and at the time of or immediately before or immediately after such robbery shall wound, beat, strike, or use any other personal violence to any person, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life, or not less than three years, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement. The punishment of death therefore under 1 Vict. c. 87, s. 2, exists no longer.

The decisions as to an offensive weapon under the Act of 7 Geo. 2, c. 21, seem to be worthy of attention. Thus a staff was held to be an offensive weapon, for it would produce blows and bruises, and would satisfy an indictment for murder.¹ So a stick although of no great thickness, but about a yard long, and like a common walking stick, was held to be within the statute 7 Geo. 2.² So a crutch used by a lame person was considered to be within 9 Geo. 4, c. 69, s. 2, although it was left to the jury to say with what intent the weapon was used.³ So under this Act of 9 Geo. 4, large stones were deemed offensive weapons.⁴ And it seems that "offensive" has a greater latitude than "dangerous," a term used in some of the statutes against smuggling.⁵ A bludgeon was considered to be offensive.⁶ But a common horse-whip was negatived as such a weapon.⁷

A question arose under a Smuggling Act whether one who seized a hatchet during an affray should be deemed guilty of using such a weapon, and the court thought not.⁸ But that Act spoke of an assembling with offensive weapons, whereas if it were shown that a robber took up a stick in order to complete the robbery, there is little doubt but that he would come within this clause.

Indictment.] After stating the robbery,⁹ add, and that the said A., at the time he so committed the said robbery, was armed with

¹ R. v. Sharwin, East, P. C. 421.

² R. v. Johnson, Russ. & Ry. 492. The words "other offensive weapon whatsoever," are alluded to.

³ R. v. Palmer, 1 Moo. & Rob. 70.

⁴ R. v. Grice, 7 C. & P. 803.

⁵ See R. v. Ince, Leach, 342, n. R. v. Cosans, Id.

⁶ Id.

⁷ R. v. Fletcher, Leach, 23.

⁸ R. v. Rose, Id. 343, n.

⁹ Ante, p. 435.

a certain offensive weapon, to wit, —— [or at the time he so committed the said assault with intent to rob B.], was armed, &c., against the form, &c.¹ If, having mentioned the weapon in the indictment, the evidence were to show a different instrument, there will be no variance, at all events, if the instrument be likely to produce the same kind of injury. As a club instead of a stick, a stone instead of a staff, &c., for blows and bruises would be the result in both cases. And it was so held by the judges in Sharwin's case.²

Together with one or more person or persons.] If a robber should casually meet with help from a confederate, after he has completed the asportation, and abstain from violence, the offence cannot be said to have been committed with another person. But persons within reach, and so in a condition to aid and abet the robber, would be persons in company within the clause. As if A. and B. were to set upon C., and after a short time A. were, in B.'s absence, or out of his sight, to rob C. Here B. would not be the less a principal robber.³ Whilst, on the other hand, where poachers beat a gamekeeper till he became senseless, and then one returned and took his money, it was held that he only who went back was guilty of robbery.⁴

Indictment.] The indictment is of course the same in form as in simple robbery, with this exception, that two persons at least must be charged with the crime. It needs not to be averred that they were in company. But if one be indicted alone, who committed the act with others, it is proper that it should be so averred.⁵ As that, A., together with one ——, or with one other person to the jurors unknown, on, &c.

Violence immediately before or after the robbery.] The indictments for violent robberies state, that A., on, &c., in and upon B. did make an assault, and him the said B. did then feloniously put in fear and danger of his life, and did then feloniously and violently steal from the person and against the will of the said B., certain [money] of the said B. And that the said A. at the time immediately [before, or immediately after,] he so committed the robbery as aforesaid, feloniously did [beat and strike,] [stab, cut, and wound] the said B. This must not be an accidental wound, it must be intentional and during the robbery.⁶ The words, "at the time," were considered not to have been sustained by evidence of wounding immediately before. Although Alderson, B., thought,

¹ See R. v. Jackson and another, Leach, 267.

² East, P. C. 421.

³ 1 And. 116.

⁴ R. v. Hawkins and others, 3 C. & P. 392.

⁵ R. v. Raffaty, 2 Lew. C. C.

271, Patteson, J., and R. v. Ramsden and another, 1 Cox, 37, where Maule, J., hesitated concerning the dictum of Patteson, J., in R. v. Raffaty.

⁶ R. v. Edwards, 1 Cox, 32.

that but for the express words of the legislature, the words, "at the time," should have included the whole time, before and after.¹

Trial.] Robbery being compound larceny, must be tried in the county where it happened. Although a conviction for simple larceny may take place in a second county upon an indictment for robbery. This point, at one time, was not settled.² But the rule is now established, although Eyre, C. J., once held it to be discretionary in the judge to look into the facts, where the trial took place in the county where the simple larceny only was proved, in order that he might oust the prisoner of his clergy or not as he should see fit.³ This opinion, however, was not approved, and where a prisoner was tried in Middlesex for robbing the mail in Wilts or Berks, the judges held, that he could not be capitally convicted out of the county where the mail was robbed.⁴

Verdict.] The words in sect. 41 are, "any indictment for robbery." Therefore if the jury find an aggravated assault with intent to rob upon an indictment for robbery, the offender may be punished with penal servitude, if of a simple assault, with the like intent, with imprisonment. The verdict was that three prisoners had together committed the felonious assault, and the court held, that the assault followed the nature of the robbery, and that the sentence of transportation was right. And this, notwithstanding other sections where imprisonment only is awarded for assaults with intent to rob.⁵

For some time a prisoner might have been convicted of an assault under 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 11. Robbery and assaults against the person were included. But this clause was repealed, many complicated questions of law having arisen upon it.⁶

¹ R. v. Hammond, 1 Cox, 123. Where two persons together were robbed at the same time of different kinds of property, with violence, Littledale, J., allowed evidence to be given of the finding of a watch upon one of the prisoners, although there were two indictments for robbing these persons respectively, and the watch belonged to the second case. But the learned judge would not permit a proof of violence in the second case to be offered in support of the first. See R. v. Rooney, 7 C. & P. 517. See R. v. Giddins, Car. & M. 634.

² See, the cases collected, East, P. C. 776.

³ R. v. Butler, Id. 776, 777.

⁴ R. v. Thomson, 2 Russ. C. M. 116. R. v. Evans, East, P. C. 776.

⁵ R. v. Mitchell and others, Den. & P. 468; 3 Car. & K. 181.

⁶ See, on this subject, R. v. Ellis, 8 C. & P. 654. R. v. Boden, 1 Car. & K. 395. R. v. Birch and another, Den. 185; 2 Car. & K. 193. R. v. Greenwood, 2 Car. & K. 339. R. v. Barnet, Car. & K. 594.

CHAPTER XI.

OF DEMANDS WITH MENACES.

Demands with menaces.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 44, whosoever shall send, deliver, or utter, or directly or indirectly cause to be received, knowing the contents thereof, any letter or writing demanding of any person with menaces, and without any reasonable or probable cause, any property, chattel, money, valuable security, or other valuable thing, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life, or for any term not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.

By sect. 45, whosoever shall with menaces or by force demand any property, chattel, money, valuable security, or other valuable thing of any person, with intent to steal the same, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement.

By sect. 46, whosoever shall send, deliver, or utter, or directly or indirectly cause to be received, knowing the contents thereof, any letter or writing accusing or threatening to accuse any other person of any crime punishable by law with death or penal servitude for not less than seven years, or of any assault with intent to commit any rape, or of any attempt or endeavour to commit any rape, or of any infamous crime as hereinafter defined, with a view or intent in any of such cases to extort or gain by means of such letter or writing any property, chattel, money, valuable security, or other valuable thing, from any person, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life, or not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping; and the abominable crime of buggery, committed either with mankind or with beast, and every assault with intent to commit the said abominable crime, and every attempt or endeavour to commit the said abominable crime, and every solicitation, persuasion, promise, or threat offered or made to any person whereby to move or induce such person to commit or permit the said abominable crime, shall be deemed to be an infamous crime within the meaning of this Act.¹

¹ The stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 19, on this subject, was repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 101.

By sect. 47, whosoever shall accuse or threaten to accuse, either the person to whom such accusation or threat shall be made, or any other person, of any of the infamous or other crimes lastly hereinbefore mentioned, with the view or intent, in any of the cases last aforesaid, to extort or gain from such person so accused or threatened to be accused, or from any other person, any property, chattel, money, valuable security, or other valuable thing, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to the punishments of the 46th section.

By sect. 48, whosoever, with intent to defraud or injure any other person, shall, by any unlawful violence to or restraint of, or threat of violence to or restraint of, the person of another, or by accusing or threatening to accuse any person of any treason, felony, or infamous crime as hereinbefore defined, compel or induce any person to execute, make, accept, indorse, alter, or destroy the whole or any part of any valuable security, or to write, impress, or affix his name, or the name of any other person, or of any company, firm, or co-partnership, or the seal of any body corporate, company, or society, upon or to any paper or parchment, in order that the same may be afterwards made or converted into, or used or dealt with as, a valuable security, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life, or not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement.

And by sect. 49, it shall be immaterial whether the menaces or threats be of violence, injury, or accusation to be caused or made by the offender or by any other person.

A demand of 1s., and on refusal, a threat to burn up the prosecutor, who had declined to give the prisoner work, was within 1 Vict. c. 87, s. 7.¹

Indictment.] The indictment for sending a threatening letter of the character above mentioned, states that A., on, &c., knowingly and feloniously did send to B. a certain letter directed to the said B., by the name and description of —, demanding [the chattel, &c.] of and from the said B. with menaces, and without any reasonable and probable cause, and which letter is as follows, that is to say, [set it out,] against the form, &c.

With reference to the demand with menaces, it does not seem to be necessary that the same force which is requisite to constitute robbery need be employed. But the chattel demanded must be something of value, not a mere order for payment, which was was never valuable in the hands of the prosecutor.² And if the money be actually obtained under circumstances amounting to robbery, the count cannot be sustained,³ but there may be a new indictment.

¹ R. v. Taylor, 1 Fost. & F. 513.

² R. v. Edwards, ante.

³ R. v. Norton, 8 C. & P. 671. But judgment was pronounced upon another count free from objection.

The indictment for demanding with menaces states that A., on, &c., with menaces, did feloniously demand of one B., [the chattel, &c.,] the property of the said B., with intent then to steal, take, and carry away the same.

The next sections relate to letters threatening to kill or murder, or to burn property, and to accusations, or threats, with intent to extort.

First, as to threatening letters. It is of no moment whether the writer conceals his name or not.¹ Or whether he puts his initials, or a full name.² It has been held, that dropping a letter near the prosecutor, with intent that it might reach him, was a sending of the letter.³ So, fixing a letter on a gate is an act fit to be left to the jury, with reference to the prisoner's intent that the letter should reach the prosecutor.⁴

A. wrote a threatening letter to B., containing a menace that he would burn the house of one of B.'s tenants. A. left the letter at a gate near B.'s house. It was found, and was taken to B.'s steward, who read it, and gave it to a constable. The constable showed it to B., and to the tenant afterwards. It was held, that if the prisoner meant, when he left the letter, that it should reach the tenant as well as B., it was a sending of the letter.⁵ So, where a letter was put in a place where it was likely to be seen and read, and where it was found, the act was held to be an uttering within 10 & 11 Vict. c. 66. The prisoner had put it under a table-cloth, so that his fellow servant, whom he threatened, could not fail to see it.⁶ The guilty knowledge of the contents must be left to the jury. A wife may write a letter and send it by her husband, and yet the husband may be ignorant of it.⁷ Had the husband sent the letter by the wife, it might be presumed that the wife had acted under his direction, but the converse will not hold. However, the bare delivery of a letter, though sealed, is evidence for the jury to say whether the party delivering it knew its contents.⁸ The jury are the judges of the intent. A count charged that the threat was to put A. to death. Another, that it was to burn two houses, &c. The jury negatived the first, but affirmed the second count. The conviction was held good after verdict.⁹ The prosecutor may be asked whether he understood the words conveyed to him to mean what the record imputed, i. e., a threat to burn

¹ At one time this circumstance made a difference. R. v. Heming, Leach, 445, n. East, P. C. 1116. R. v. Wagstaff, Russ. & Ry. 398.

² R. v. Robinson, Leach, 749; East, P. C. 1010.

³ R. v. Wagstaff, Russ. & Ry. 398. R. v. Lloyd, East, P. C. 1122.

⁴ R. v. Williams, 1 Cox, 16. See R. v. Grimwade, Id. 85. R. v. Braynell, 4 Cox, 402.

⁵ R. v. Grimwade, Den. 30;

1 Car. & K. 592. See also R. v. Jepson and another, East, P. C. 1115.

⁶ R. v. Jones, 5 Cox, 226.

⁷ R. v. Hammond and ux., Leach, 444. The wife was acquitted because there was no proof of her having sent it, although the husband delivered it.

⁸ R. v. Girdwood, Leach, 142.

⁹ R. v. Tyler and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 428. R. v. Carruthers, 1 Cox, 138.

his houses. The letter was as follows,—“Sir, this is to inform you that you had better not let your farm to any of your family; if you do, you will suffer as before. You know how you felt the other day.” “A caution friend.”¹ The words “chattel, money, or valuable security,” probably include every species of personal property, so that all the old objections are at an end.² Formerly, likewise, the prosecutor ought to have been in possession of the property threatened. As, where A. had parted with his mill three years before the threat to burn it, this threat was held insufficient, and the threat to do all the public injury they could to his farms, did not imply a threat to burn, so that the conviction was held wrong.³ So the threat to burn the house of an owner occupied by a tenant was held not to be within the statute.⁴ The words “without any reasonable or probable cause,” apply, not to the accusation, but, to the money demanded,⁵ although the reasonableness or probability is a question for the jury.⁶ The following was considered to be a threatening letter—the prisoner was desirous of obtaining 250 sovereigns, and he proposed that they should be left in a particular spot, upon which he declared he would avert a calamity by fire, from the house. The letter went on to say, “Let the money be lodged tomorrow by half-past eleven, but not a minute sooner, and all shall be well with you, but if I am at all deceived in any way, it must fall upon yourselves.” This was a demand.⁷ And the judges expressly recognized Pickford's case as law. There the anonymous letter stated that if the prosecutor would leave thirty sovereigns in a particular spot, the writer would give information of an injury by fire intended to be done. *In that case there was no demand.*⁸

Formerly, if a letter was sent from B. to C., in order that C. might deliver it to A., the crime was not complete until C. delivered it to A.⁹ But this fault is now remedied.¹⁰

With reference to infamous crimes, it was formerly no offence by statute to accuse a person of a solicitation to commit them.¹¹ And,

¹ R. v. Hendy, 4 Cox, 243.

² See R. v. Robinson, Leach, 749. R. v. Major, Id. 772; East, P. C. 1118.

³ R. v. Jepson and another, East, P. C. 1115.

⁴ R. v. Burridge, 2 Moo. & Rob. 296. See also R. v. Jones, Den. 218.

⁵ R. v. Hamilton, 1 Car. & K. 212.

⁶ R. v. Miard, 1 Cox, 22.

⁷ R. v. Smith, Den. 510; 19 L. J. M. C. 80; 2 Car. & K. 882.

⁸ 4 C. & P. 227. The words, “agricultural produce” include standing corn. R. v. Hill, 5 Cox, 233.

⁹ See R. v. Williams, 1 Cox, 16. R. v. Grimwade, Den. 30; 1 Car. & K. 592. R. v. Braynell, 4 Cox, 402. R. v. Paddle, Russ. & Ry. 484. R. v. Jones, Den. 218; 2 Car. & K. 398. R. v. Jepson and another, East, P. C. 1115.

¹⁰ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 44, “utter to any other person.” 10 & 11 Vict. c. 66, s. 1, “utter, or directly or indirectly cause to be received.”

¹¹ R. v. Hickman, 1 Moo. C. C. 34.

even now, a threat to procure witnesses to appear in support of a charge already made is not within the statutes.¹ But it was a misdemeanor at common law. It might overcome a firm and prudent mind.²

At one time the opinion was strongly maintained, that an accusation of sodomy was sufficient to constitute robbery, without any personal violence.³ But after the statute 1 Vict. c. 87, s. 4, which made the bare accusation felony, without any actual extortion, the judges thought, that that Act superseded the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 7, which affirmed the old law, and they held a conviction wrong, where no violence was committed by one prisoner at the time of the accusation, and where he was not privy to the robbery by the other, and might not even have seen it, although he made the charge in company with the other.⁴ Although it was afterwards said that if money were obtained by threats, independently of those mentioned in the statute of Victoria, the offence might, without personal violence, amount to robbery.⁵ Nevertheless, the law, in R. v. Henry and Taunton was doubted as to Taunton, who, being absent, committed no actual violence. The prisoners were charged with assaulting and threatening to charge the prosecutor with an infamous crime, but no money was taken, and the judges held that they were rightly convicted of an assault with intent to rob.⁶ However, it seems, that some FEAR must be present in order to create the crime of robbery. It was not robbery where the prosecutor parted with his money with the view of bringing the offender to justice.⁷ Still, if the fear exists contemporaneously with the idea of prosecuting, the case is different. As, where sometime elapsed between the charge and the payment, so as to give the prosecutor the opportunity of consulting a friend, and yet the prosecutor was evidently scared when he gave his money.⁸

Again, there was a verdict of not guilty on the special count, but on the counts for robbery and demanding money with menaces,

¹ R. v. Gill, 1 Lew. C. C. 305.

² R. v. Woodward, 11 Mod. 137; 6 East, 140.

³ R. v. Donally, Leach, 193; East, P. C. 715. No violence used. R. v. Brown. R. v. Jones. R. v. Harrold. Leach, 199, cited. Some violence used, but the judges said that the circumstance made no material distinction. R. v. Elmstead, 2 Russ. C. M. 894. R. v. Hickman, Leach, 278. R. v. Cannon, Russ. & Ry. 146. Five judges thought some force essential. Five were of the contrary opinion. But all agreed that calling a coach, and compelling the prosecutor to get into it, under the threat of taking him before a magistrate, was a sufficient force. R. v. Egerton, 6 Russ. & Ry. 375.

⁴ R. v. Henry and Taunton, 2 Moo. C. C. 118.

⁵ R. v. Norton, 8 C. & P. 871, 874, n.

⁶ R. v. Stringer and another, 2 Moo. C. C. 261; 1 Car. & K. 188.

⁷ R. v. Reane, East, P. C. 734, 735; Leach, 616. R. v. Fuller, Russ. & Ry. 408.

⁸ R. v. Jackson and another, East, P. C. Add. xxi. See 8 C. & P. 675.

guilty. Judgment of transportation was entered on the count for robbery. And the threat need not be to accuse before a judicial tribunal; before a third person will suffice.¹ It has been held not to be robbery to extort money from a wife under pretence of accusing the husband of an infamous crime.²

It is no defence to show a commitment, or an attempt at commitment of the crime.³

The jury need not confine themselves to the expressions used when the money was given; if the expressions are equivocal, the jury may connect them with any observations made by the prisoner when taken into custody.⁴ Although it must not be asked whether the accusation had not been made two years before, where the extortionate intent in the actual case admits of no doubt.⁵ But it was permitted to show that the prisoner had said he had got money before from a gentleman upon a similar charge. The jury are to consider the words used with reference to their meaning.⁶ The defendant, with another, was charged with a conspiracy to extort money upon false pretences. The false pretences were not proved, and so much of the count as related to them was rejected as surplusage. They were also charged with unlawfully offering to prevent the publishing of a libel against the prosecutor, and with threatening to publish it against him. The evidence was that an information would be laid against the prosecutor for an offence against the posthorse duties, and that they, the defendants, could prevent it, and would do so upon payment of so much money. This proof was held insufficient to warrant a conviction.⁷

Indictment.] The indictment for sending a threatening letter sets forth, that A., on, &c., knowingly, unlawfully, and feloniously did send a certain letter [or writing], signed —, that is to say, with the name of —, directed to B. —, by the name and description of —, threatening to accuse him, the said B., of a certain crime, punishable by law with penal servitude, to wit —, with the view and intent then, by means of the said threatening letter, to extort and gain from the said B. [money], and which letter is as follows [set it out], against the form, &c. The indictment must, in any case, set out the letter. For want of this, a conviction at Hereford, many years since, was holden improper.⁸ And, upon application by the prisoner, the court will order the letter to be deposited with the officer, in order that the prisoner's witnesses may inspect it.⁹ Although it must appear

¹ R. v. Robinson, 2 Moo. & Rob. 14.

² R. v. Edwards, 1 Moo. & Rob. 257; 5 C. & P. 518.

³ R. v. Gardner, 1 C. & P. 479.

⁴ R. v. Kain, 8 C. & P. 187.

⁵ R. v. M'Donnell, 5 Cox, 153.

⁶ R. v. Cooper, 3 Cox, 547. "Guilty."

⁷ R. v. Yates and another, 6 Cox, 441.

⁸ R. v. Lloyd, East, P. C. 1122.

⁹ R. v. Harrie, 6 C. & P. 105.

that the prisoner sent the letter to the prosecutor, yet if there be an allegation that the prisoner sent a certain letter to B., and it should turn out that the letter was sent to A. in order that he should deliver it to B., this is a sending to B.¹ And, moreover, the indictment need not set out the particular crime charged, nor explain the threat otherwise than by setting out the letter. Thus, a letter said, "That the party should not live the week out, if he had his deserts," and ended, "Don't make light of this, or I'll make light of you and yours; I am your cut-throat." This was held to be a letter threatening to kill and murder without any inuendo.² Comparison of hands cannot be admitted. However, unconnected with the charge, and however unquestionable the authenticity of the document tendered, as being in the handwriting of the prisoner, the jury cannot, on any consideration, be let into the comparison of hands.³ Nor can a scientific inspector be called for that purpose.⁴

The indictment needs not to specify the crime, inasmuch as the charge might have been kept intentionally in the dark; but, in such a case, the judges were of opinion, that parole evidence was properly received for the purpose of explaining parts of the letter, although the prisoner himself had furnished the information. The conviction was held right upon a general indictment, with a view to extort money;⁵ yet, although the prisoner may be the author of evidence against himself, it is not every word that he says which will establish his guilt. Thus, where the sole evidence was his own declaration, that he should never have written the letter but for a certain person, naming him, it was held insufficient.⁶ It needs not to be averred in the indictment to whom the valuable thing belonged, for instance, an I.O.U.⁷

But the indictment must disclose the person threatened; therefore, where the prisoner was convicted upon a count which stated that A. and others did threaten to accuse B., and so on, it was held ill for want of saying that A. and others did threaten B. to accuse him, &c.⁸ An indictment, under the old Act, 4 Geo. 4, c. 54, stated, that the prisoners charged and accused J. N., and did feloniously threaten and menace to prosecute him for the offence. Garrow, B., held the count insufficient, for the indictment wandered from the terms of the statute. Had it been proved that the prisoners threatened to prosecute under an indict-

¹ R. v. Paddle, Russ. & Ry. 484. R. v. Lloyd, ut supra. The letter was delivered, and under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 66, this would make no difference.

² R. v. Boucher, 4 C. & P. 562.

³ R. v. Morgan, 1 Moo. & Rob. 134. R. v. Shepherd, 1 Cox, 237.

⁴ S. C.

⁵ R. v. Tucker, 1 Moo. C. C. 134. But see R. v. Middleditch, Den. 92; 2 Cox, 313.

⁶ R. v. Howe, 7 C. & P. 268.

⁷ R. v. Tiddeman and others, 4 Cox, 387.

⁸ R. v. Dunkley and others, 1 Moo. C. C. 90.

ment properly framed, it might have been left to the jury to say whether that was not a threatening to accuse.¹

Indictment for accusing.] The indictment for accusing states that A., on, &c., feloniously did threaten B. to accuse him of a certain crime, punishable with penal servitude, to wit, with—, with the view and intent then and thereby to extort and gain money from B.

Trial.] It is usual to indict in the county where the threatening letter has been received. It has, indeed, been argued, that the offence ought to be inquired of in the county, where the sending originated, but this objection has been overruled.² And it has also been intimated, that if the sending be the gravamen, the trial would properly be had in any county through which the letter might pass;³ but the ordinary course is to adopt the county where the receipt has taken place.⁴ Indeed, in point of law, the sending is reckoned to have taken place in the county where the letter is directed; so that where the letter was dated from Maidstone and directed into Middlesex, Lord Mansfield said, that this was a sending in Middlesex, for the whole was to be considered as the act of the defendant up to the time of delivery in that county.⁵

¹ R. v. Abgood and others, 2 C. & P. 436.

² R. v. Esser, East, P. C. 1125.

³ Id.

⁴ R. v. Girdwood, Leach, 142. R. v. Hickman, 1 Moo. C. C. 34.

⁵ R. v. Esser, East, P. C. 1125.

CHAPTER XII.

OF BURGLARY.

Burglary.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 50, whosoever shall break and enter any church, chapel, meeting house, or other place of divine worship, and commit any felony therein, or being in any church, chapel, meeting house, or other place of divine worship shall commit any felony therein and break out of the same, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life, or not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

By sect. 51, whosoever shall enter the dwelling house of another with intent to commit any felony therein, or being in such dwelling house shall commit any felony therein, and shall in either case break out of the said dwelling house in the night, shall be deemed guilty of burglary.

By sect. 52, whosoever shall be convicted of the crime of burglary shall be liable to penal servitude for life, or not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.¹

By sect. 53, no building, although within the same curtilage with any dwelling house, and occupied therewith, shall be deemed to be part of such dwelling house for any of the purposes of this Act, unless there shall be a communication between such building and dwelling house, either immediate, or by means of a covered and inclosed passage leading from the one to the other.

The following section (54) does not embrace the crime of burglary, but as it related to an offence nearly connected with that crime, and is besides a new enactment, we have thought it expedient to include it in this chapter.

By sect. 54, whosoever shall enter any dwelling house in the night, with intent to commit any felony therein, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven years and not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

Burglary, like some species of treasons, may be constructive as well as positive; so that if a door be opened through intimidation or artifice, it is no defence to affirm that there was no actual breaking, since the felonious entry evidently took place against the will of the owner of the house. But the most frequent instances of the crime are accompanied by a forcible breach of the

¹ It is obvious that the punishment of death for assaulting with intent to murder, or stabbing, cutting, or wounding, beating or striking, during a burglary, has not been renewed. The statute 1 Vict. c. 86, s. 2, which contained that severe penalty, was not acted upon, and is now repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95.

dwelling, and a taking of property. A burglar is said to be one who breaks and enters a mansion house in the night with intent to kill, or to commit some felony, whether his intention be executed or not.¹

Sacrilege.] The term "sacrilege" is barely acknowledged at present. The act of breaking into a place of worship belonging to the Church of England and stealing therein, or committing any felony there, whether by day or night, is felony. And the term "sacrilegiously" has long been disused in indictments. Still the preamble of the section concerning sacrilege is, "As to sacrilege," &c.

A dissenting chapel is not within the clause,² although it is protected by the statutes against arson. Fixtures are not mentioned in the clause; but where it was averred that certain fixtures, naming them, were stolen, the prisoner was liable to be convicted of stealing them under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 44.³ And the violation of the sanctity of the place being the chief thing to be guarded against, things not used for divine service are within the Act. It was so held under the old law.⁴

With respect to the place itself, all such parts, at all events, as have an internal communication with the body of the building, are within the statute; as where it appeared that certain canonical vestments had been stolen from a box kept in the church tower. The tower was higher than the church, and had a separate roof, but there was no outer door, the only way of reaching the tower being through the body of the church, from which the tower was not separated by any partition. Park, J., held this tower to be parcel of the church.⁵ A vestry had been formed out of what had originally been the church porch. It had a door opening into the churchyard, which could only be unlocked from the outside. It was held part of the church for the purpose of a conviction for this offence.⁶

Indictment.] The indictment states that A., on, &c., feloniously and burglariously did break and enter the church of —, situate, &c., and then in the said church feloniously did steal, &c. [the property] of the chattels of B. and C., churchwardens of the said parish, against the form, &c. The 2nd count may allege a breaking out. The word "sacrilegiously" is no longer necessary.⁷ The bells, books, &c., may however be laid to be the goods of the parishioners, and the goods of a chapel in those persons who have the custody of them.⁸ A box, with the inscription

¹ 1 Hale, P. C. 549; East, P. C. 485.

² R. v. Warren, 6 C. & P. 335. R. v. Richardson, Id. R. v. Nixon and another, 7 C. & P. 442.

³ R. v. Baker, 3 Cox, 581. See post, R. v. Wortley. Now the Act 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 31.

⁴ R. v. Rourke, Russ. & Ry. 386.

⁵ R. v. Wheeler and others, 3 C. & P. 585.

⁶ R. v. Evans, Car. & M. 298.

⁷ R. v. Hickman and another, Leach, 318.

⁸ East, P. C. 651; 2 Stark. Cr. Pl. 472.

"Remember the poor," was fixed by screws to the outside of a pew in the centre aisle of the church. The pew belonged to an hospital. The prisoners were found guilty of stealing only, and it was objected that the box was not the property of the parish; but Tindal, C. J., observed, that the box was in the aisle, and that the aisle was parish property. It was said that the 1st count should have laid the property in the churchwardens, and not in C. T., and another. And as there was no count laying it in the rector, whose freehold the place was, the indictment was impugned on that point likewise. But the 2nd count laid the property in T. N. (who was the vicar) and others, and the judges were unanimous for a conviction on this count.¹

Night, with reference to burglary, commencing at 9 P. M. and concluding at 6 A. M., the old difficulties of "inter crepuscula," and the sufficiency of light to see a man's countenance, are done away with.²

The breaking and entry must combine, but, in the case of breaking out, the entry precedes the breaking. Nevertheless, both need not to happen in the same night. The prisoner broke the glass of a side door on Friday night, and entered on Sunday night through the aperture. The jury found the breaking and entry felonious, and by night, and the judges held the conviction right.³ But it has been said that such a breaking in the daytime, with an intent to enter on the same or a subsequent night, would not be burglary.⁴ But, says Sir Edward East, "The resolution there only was, that if thieves enter in by night at a hole in the wall which was there before, it is not burglary; but it does not appear who made the hole, much less that it was made by the thieves themselves, with intent to enter more securely at night."⁵ At the present day, however, the opinion of Lord Hale would probably prevail, that both breaking and entry must be in the night, without any constructive offence.

It is clear that the entry may be lawful and yet the breaking out burglary. Though both must unite both need not be felonious. As in the case of the lodger, who, having committed a larceny, unbolted the back door and went away.⁶ But the constructive ruling obtains when the question of accessory comes into view. Two assisted a third in breaking and entering. They did not enter, but they helped to screen the housebreaker. They were convicted, although not near when the entry was effected.⁷ The object of the burglary must be felonious, as

¹ R. v. Wortley, Den. 162; 2 Car. & K. 283; Canon 84; Burn's Eccl. Law, tit. "Church."

² East, P. C. 508.

³ R. v. Smith, Russ. & Ry. 417. Lord Hale says of such a case, "It shall be supposed that they broke and entered in the night when they entered, for the breaking makes not the burglary till the entry." Hale, 551, 555; East, P. C. 508.

⁴ Hale, ut supra, citing from Crompton, 8 Ed. 2; East, 509.

⁵ East, 509.

⁶ R. v. Wheeldon, 8 C. & P. 747.

⁷ R. v. Jordan and others, 7 C. & P. 432.

rape.¹ And the circumstance of another criminal transaction being attempted at the same time makes no difference. A servant sold goods for his master, received 160 guineas, and either being discharged from the service, or decamping suddenly,² took all, excepting ten, which he had in his bedroom. He then broke open the house, and took away the ten guineas. This was not burglary, because though this was in right the master's money, it was the servant's in possession, and the first original act was no felony, the taking of the 160 guineas.³ The prisoner broke open a house for the purpose of recovering some tea which had been seized by an excise officer, and the jury found the intent to have been to deliver the tea to the supposed owner: this was held to be no breaking in order to steal. Had the indictment laid the intent to have been to rescue uncustomed goods, and evidence brought to show the contraband dealing, the case might have been different.⁴ The prisoner entered a stable and killed a horse, in order to prevent its running. This was not burglary, because the intent was to commit a trespass, although the prisoner had committed a substantive felony by killing the horse. He was afterwards convicted of the latter offence.⁵ Two poachers went to the house of a gamekeeper in quest of their dog. They broke open his doors, believing him absent. This was held not to be burglary.⁶ Nevertheless, if the intent be doubtful, the commission of a felony is the strongest proof of the intent to do that act, and the prisoner's assertion that he entered with a view not felonious, will be of little avail.⁷ The onus of proof lies on the prisoner if he asserts an innocent intent.⁸ Whether the felony be one at common law or by statute is immaterial (although this was once doubted), since whenever a statute makes an offence felony, it incidentally gives it all the properties of a felony at common law.⁹

Breaking and entry.] We now come to the breaking and entry. The former of these acts created the larger share of discussion. There may, as we have observed, be a constructive as well as an actual breach. As where the maid servant being thrown off her guard by a false pretence, opened the door to thieves; this was burglary on the part of the thieves.¹⁰ So, where an entrance was effected under the cloak of religious union.¹¹ So, under the shield

¹ R. v. Locost and another, Kel. 30. R. v. Gray, Str. 481.

² R. v. Meeres, 1 Show. 53. Nothing said of the discharges. Leach, 840, both mentioned. The decamping is the more probable.

³ 1 Show. 53, cited; East, P. C. 510. (East. Sessions, 1687.) R. v. Dingley, Leach, 840, cited. Now, however, he would have been guilty of felony.

⁴ R. v. Knight and another, East, P. C. 510. See also R. v.

Dobbs, Id. 513. R. v. Dannelly and another, Russ. & Ry. 319. R. v. Jones, Car. & M. 218.

⁵ R. v. Dobbs, East, P. C. 513.

⁶ Anon. Matth. Cr. Dig. 48.

⁷ 1 East, P. C. 509. The intent may thus be inferred.

⁸ Anon. 1 Lew. C. C. 37.

⁹ East, P. C. 511.

¹⁰ R. v. Le Mott, Kel. 42.

¹¹ R. v. Cassy and another, Id. 62.

of a pretended legal authority.¹ It is not necessary to advance every instance of fraud in proof of this position.² But it was settled, after some doubt and a special finding, that the connivance of a servant by opening the door is a constructive breaking and entry by both, although the servant does not leave the house with the thief. And the servant was executed.³ Again, it seems that if a noise be made adjoining to a dwelling, upon which the door is opened and the thief rushes in, it is likewise a burglarious act.⁴

So, where breaking of windows and firing of guns induced the family to open the door, the jury were directed to convict if they thought that the entrance had been effected by intimidation.⁵ Should the inmate, when alarmed, as above mentioned, advance upon the robbers without, for the purpose of repelling their attack, it will be burglary in them to enter.⁶ The stealing, however, must be in the dwelling house, so that if the owner fling his goods or purse into the street, or elsewhere, to the thieves, they may, indeed, be guilty of robbery, but not of burglary.⁷ Thus much of a constructive breaking, although the descent by a chimney into the house is viewed much in the same light. The prisoner was found concealed in the chimney, just above the mantel-piece. Here the getting in was deemed to be a breaking, and the lowering of the body in the chimney an entry, and the conviction was held right.⁸ For the chimney is said to be inclosed as much as the nature of the thing will admit of.⁹ Hence, it follows, that opening a window,¹⁰ unlocking or forcing open a door or window,¹¹ whether there be outside shutters or not,¹² or whether they be put to or not,¹³ pushing in broken or cut glass,¹⁴ breaking

¹ R. v. Farre, Id. 43; 1 Hale, P. C. 552; Leach, 284; per cur.

² See R. v. Hawkins, East, P. C. 485. R. v. Branton, Id.

³ R. v. Cornwall, Str. 881.

⁴ 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 7.

⁵ R. v. Swallow and others, 2 Russ. C. M. 793 (executed).

⁶ 1 Hale, P. C. 553.

⁷ 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 3.

⁸ R. v. Brice, Russ. & Ry. 450. By ten judges.] Holroyd and Burrough, JJ., would have held the same had the prisoner descended below the chimney-piece before he was taken.

⁹ 1 Hale, P. C. 552, by Manwood, C. B.; East, P. C. 485. Hale, C. J., doubted of this law, but it is now settled.

¹⁰ R. v. Haines and another, Russ. & Ry. 451, the upper sash was pulled down. R. v. Hyams, 7 C. & P. 441, where there was a hasp which might have been fastened had the inmates been careful. R. v. Robinson and Bacon, 1 Moo. C. C. 327, where the prisoners broke out a pane already broken in part, and unfastened a sash. R. v. Foster, 1 Lew. C. C. 33.

¹¹ R. v. Hall, Russ. & Ry. 355. Where the window was fastened by two nails which acted as wedges, but the nails would open by pushing, see R. v. Brown, East, P. C. 487.

¹² R. v. Roberts, East, P. C. 487; see Russ. & Ry. 341.

¹³ R. v. Haines and another, ut supra. See R. v. Russell, post.

¹⁴ R. v. Bird, 9 C. & P. 44.

a hole in the wall, using a false key, lifting up the latch of a door, where there is no other fastening,¹ or unloosing any fastening, will be burglaries if an entry be gained.² The prisoner got into a house by raising up the flap door of a cellar usually kept down by its own weight, and sometimes nailed, and he was held to be guilty of burglary, although the jury found that on the particular night the door was not nailed.³ But in a case where the fastenings had not been put on, it was held that burglary had not been committed by merely lifting up a trap door, although opening a hall door and running away were considered in the same case to be a breaking out.⁴ And where there were interior fastenings to a cellar, the trap door of which shut down by its own weight, six judges held that the prisoner had not been guilty of burglary by breaking out through the cellar trap. Six were in favour of a conviction,⁵ but this case has been shaken, if not overturned, by R. v. Russell.⁶ A shutter box, close to a house, but unconnected with it internally, is not the subject of burglary.⁷

The commission of burglary is not limited to the outer door of the house. Certainly, if the outer door be open, and the thief enter, he has not as yet committed the offence, but as soon as he unlatches an inner door, or turns the key of a door which is locked, the crime is complete.⁸ And so it is if having entered at an open door, the prisoner unbolts the street door on the inside, in order to go out.⁹ A servant drew the latch of a door at the foot of the stairs, in order to gain his master's apartment, for the purpose of murder, and the act was ruled to be burglary.¹⁰ So it is if a guest at an inn open the door of another guest with a felonious intent.¹¹ But Lord Hale has doubted whether it would be burglary for a guest at an inn to open his own chamber door with a like intent, because of the special interest which the guest might have in the chamber.¹²

It is admitted, that the breaking of a chest or box by one who had gained an entrance through an open window is not burglary.¹³ And, in 1690, the judges were equally divided on the ¹ R. v. Owen, 1 Lew. C. C. 35.

R. v. Wheeldon, 8 C. & P. 747.
[a breaking out].

² 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 6.

³ R. v. Russell, 1 Moo. C. C. 377, overruling R. v. Callan, ut semble, Russ. & Ry. 157.

⁴ R. v. Lawrence and another,
4 C. & P. 231.

⁵ R. v. Callan, Russ. & Ry. 157.
It did not appear that the flap had been bolted on the night in question.

⁶ Supra.

⁷ R. v. Paine and another, 7
C. & P. 135.

⁸ 1 Hale, P. C. 524, 553. R. v.
Johnson and others, Kel. 58.

⁹ R. v. Johnson, East, P. C.
488.

¹⁰ R. v. Edwards, Hutt. 20.
R. v. Gray, Str. 481, where the attempt was to commit a rape. See also R. v. Binglose, cited, East,
P. C. 488.

¹¹ 1 Hale, P. C. 554.

¹² 1 Hale, P. C. 554; East, P. C.
488.

¹³ 1 Hale, P. C. 524.

point whether the breaking open of a cupboard, let into the wall and fixed to the freehold, was such an offence.¹ If the accused should have come into the house by an open window, without more, it is certain that he must be acquitted of burglary.² And if the prisoner steal goods by putting his hand through an aperture, it is the same, for there is no breaking.³ Nor is it burglary if the prisoner finding a sash partly open, push it higher so as to admit him.⁴ And where a hole had been left in a house at the top, in order to admit the light, the same rule prevailed, notwithstanding the case of the chimney.⁵

Entry.] Secondly, there must be an entry. The least intrusion of hand or foot will suffice.⁶ The fore part of the finger was put on the shop side of a pane of glass just broken by the prisoner. This was an entry.⁷ So is cutting a hole through the window-shutters, and abstracting watches from the shop.⁸ So, if the hand be introduced through a broken pane, although there be inside shutters fastened, and the thief be taken before he has done more than cut a hole in the shutter with his centre-bit.⁹ So, breaking a pane, and inserting a knife to push back the shutter, is burglary.¹⁰ At one time it was no answer to say, that the instrument, as a pistol, or knife, might have been within the house, but not the hand which held it, although the purpose must have been that of taking property or committing some other felony.¹¹ It is now, however, ruled, that if the hand, or some part of it, be not actually within the house, burglary has not been committed. A hole was bored through a door with a centre-bit. Some pieces of the broken pannel were found within the door on the threshold, but no other entry was made. It was contended, that no case had gone the length of determining that the introduction of an instrument in the act of breaking would satisfy both the essentials of burglary, and the court being of that opinion, the prisoners were acquitted.¹² So where the window was thrown up, and a crowbar introduced to force the shutters, but it did not, nor could it appear whether any part of the hand had been within the window, although the aperture was large enough to admit the hand, it was held not to be burglary.¹³ But, of course,

¹ Fost. 108. And see the observations of Foster, J., Id. 108, 109.

² 1 Hale, P. C. 551, overruling the opinion of Sir Nicholas Hyde.

³ Id. 551, 552.

⁴ R. v. Smith, 1 Moo. C. C. 178.

⁵ R. v. Spriggs, 1 Moo. & Rob. 57. R. v. W. and J. Lewis, 2 C. & P. 628.

⁶ East, P. C. 490.

⁷ R. v. Davis, Russ. & Ry. 499.

R. v. Perkes, 1 C. & P. 300. See 1 Moo. C. C. 183, infra.

⁸ R. v. Gibbons, Fost. 107.

⁹ R. v. Bailey and another, Russ. & Ry. 341.

¹⁰ R. v. Tucker, 1 Cox, 73.

¹¹ East, P. C. 490.

¹² R. v. Hughes and others, Leach, 406. R. v. O'Brien, 4 Cox, 398.

¹³ R. v. Rust and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 183.

there may be a conviction for the attempt.¹ A lodger opened a shutter, and handed out some bacon to a confederate outside. The lodger, probably, did not go out of the house, and the confederate did not come in. This was held not to be burglary.²

The prisoner made a pass with his sword at some persons in the entry, and in so doing intruded his hand over the threshold: this was a burglarious entry. The owner of the house had opened the door to drive away the thieves.³ And it would once have been so if the sword alone, without the hand, had passed the threshold.⁴ It is even said that to discharge a loaded gun into a house would be an act of entry,⁵ and if the case were, that the owner being alarmed, opened his door, there can be no doubt; but it is far more difficult to conceive that both a breaking and entry could be effected by such a discharge. Lord Hale would not sanction such a doctrine.⁶ Yet if a hole be made in a house in order to shoot or fire, it will be burglary.⁷ Nevertheless, Lord Ellenborough ruled on the circuit once, that a man, who from the outside of a field discharged a gun into it, so that the shot must have struck the soil, was guilty of breaking and entering it.⁸ But this was in trespass.

Place.] Thirdly, we come to the consideration of the place where burglary may be committed. It is called a mansion house, i. e. a dwelling house, where there is a continuance of residence. Therefore, where A. leaves his house, and there is no evidence of the animus revertendi, burglary cannot be committed there. As where the owner of a house disfurnished it, and rather inclined against any idea of returning.⁹ So, where a person abandoned his house for six months.¹⁰ Nevertheless, the placing of furniture in a house is not conclusive evidence of an intent to inhabit, whatever opinions might at one time have obtained.¹¹ It was considered by the judges that a house in that condition must be considered as quite uninhabited.¹² A fortiori, where there is a determination not to inhabit.¹³ Nor does it make any difference that workmen sleep in the house,¹⁴ for until possession be actually

¹ R. v. Davis, 6 Cox, 369.

² R. v. Burr, 3 Burn's J. by D'Oyly & W. 93.

³ 1 Hale, P. C. 553.

⁴ Supra.

⁵ 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 11.

⁶ 1 Hale, 555, although he adds a query. 1 And. 115; Sav. 59, where an act of that nature was held not to be burglary.

⁷ 1 And. 115; Sav. 59.

⁸ 4 Camp. 220.

⁹ R. v. Nutbrown, Fost. 76. R. v. Mott and another, Crown C. C.

by Ryland, 103; and see Russ. & Ry. 187.

¹⁰ R. v. Hamilton, 1 Lew. C. C. 77.

¹¹ 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 18.

¹² R. v. Lyons, Leach, 185. R. v. Holland, East, P. C. 498. R. v. Thompson, Id. R. v. Davis, Id. 499, and post.

¹³ R. v. Davis, Leach, 876; East, P. C. 499.

¹⁴ R. v. Fuller, Leach, 186, n. R. v. Harris, East, P. C. 498. R. v. Barton, Crown C. C. by Ryland, 103.

taken by the master, or his domestic servants, there is no mansion to be broken.¹ On the other hand, no sooner do they arrive than the case is altered, and, of course, a temporary absence works no change. As where one went into Cornwall and returned in two months with his family, having left the house empty, and the key with a friend in order that he might look after it, but with a full intention to return.² Again, A. died: his executors put servants into the house at board wages, but never lodged there; it was made a question whether burglary could have been committed, but the evidence as to the breaking failed.³

The inhabitancy must include sleeping, i. e., not during a temporary absence, but in general. A. had a house where he entertained his friends, and where he intended to have lived, but he slept two doors off at his mother's: here burglary could not be committed.⁴ The following case was one of constructive inhabitancy: A. placed a servant in a shop, part of his house, in order to prevent the house from being robbed, and he let out the house to lodgers; but he had quitted the house with his family with a determination not to return. The judges held, that a conviction for burglary was proper. The house had been inhabited by the prosecutor.⁵ Whereas, where a servant is put into an inhabited house to watch thieves, or to look after goods, the case is the reverse for want of inhabitancy.⁶ Formerly the protection of the dwelling house was extended to the outhouses, if they were parcel of the messuage, though not under the same roof. This doctrine gave rise to several difficult questions, as to the nature of the fence which ought to have inclosed the buildings.⁷ But the modern statutes concerning the curtilage have settled these questions,⁸ although the judges have still disagreed as to a room in a dwelling house having no internal communication. The prosecutor had such a room which he used as a wash-house. The door of this wash-house opened into a back-yard, but there was no access to the other part of the house. The prisoner was in the act of breaking the partition when he was detected. Seven judges

¹ R. v. Murry and another, East, P. C. 496. R. v. Kirkham, 2 Stark. Ev. 279. See Poph. 42, 152.

² R. v. Murry and another, supra.

³ R. v. Jones and another, East, P. C. 499. The court were inclined to hold it burglary because the servants lived there.

⁴ R. v. Martin and another, Russ. & Ry. 108.

⁵ R. v. Gibbons and another, Russ. & Ry. 442.

⁶ R. v. Brown, East, P. C. 497. R. v. Smith, Id. 497.

⁷ See R. v. Castle, 1 Hale,

P. C. 558; Hutt. 33. R. v. Garland, East, P. C. 493. R. v. Brown, Id. R. v. Egginton and others, Id. 494; Leach, 913; 2 B. & P. 508. R. v. Gibson and another, Leach, 357. R. v. Hancock and others, Id. 170. R. v. Bennett and others, Russ. & Ry. 289. R. v. Davis and another, Id. 322. R. v. Chalking and another, Id. 343. R. v. Lithgo, Id. 357. R. v. Clayburn and another, Id. 360. R. v. Walters and others, 1 Moo. C. C. 13.

⁸ 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 13. Rep. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 53.

held, that the wash-house was parcel of the dwelling house, and the conviction for burglary was affirmed.¹ Five judges were of a contrary opinion, probably being unable to overcome the impression which the strong words of the statute respecting the necessity of an internal communication had created in their minds. But where there was a kiln, one end of which was supported by the end wall of the dwelling house, and there was a dairy adjoining the kiln, one end of the dairy being supported by the end wall of the kiln, and there was no internal communication between the dwelling house and the dairy, it was held, that the dairy was not the subject of burglary. The roofs of the dwelling house, kiln, and dairy were also of different heights.² In another case there was a pantry behind the dwelling house. In order to reach the pantry, the kitchen must be passed through into a passage; at the end of the passage there was a door, and outside the door, on the left hand, was the door of the pantry. When the passage door was shut, the pantry was excluded, and was open to the yard; but the roof or covering of the passage projected beyond the door of the passage, and reached as far as the pantry door. There was no door communicating directly between the pantry and the house, and the two were not under the same roof. The roof of the pantry was "tea-fall," and leant against the wall of an inner pantry, in which there was a latchet window, common to both, and which opened betwixt them, but there was no door of communication between them: the inside pantry was under the same roof as the dwelling house. The prisoners entered the outer pantry by a window which looked towards the yard, having first cut away the hair cloth which was nailed to the window frame. Taunton, J., said, that the pantry was not a part of the dwelling house, not being under the same roof, nor included within the passage by which it was approached, and that no burglary had been committed.³ It is evident, that the judges either considered these buildings as outhouses, and so not parcel of the dwelling house, or that they were affected by the opinions of the minority of five in the case of the wash-house. The seven judges viewed the room as any place but an outhouse. It was the definition of "outhouse" which caused the statutory regulation as to the curtilage.

A building may be so constructed as to form a separate mansion. A room was separated from a dwelling house by a public road. There was a connection with the house by an awning which reached across; but a servant boy slept in this room,

¹ R. v. Burrowes, 1 Moo. C. C. 274. The house consisted of two long rooms, of another room used as a cellar and wash-house on the ground floor; and of three bedrooms upstairs; one of them over the wash-house. The bedroom over the house place communicated with the bedroom over the wash-house; but there was no other internal communication between the wash-house or any of the other rooms. The whole building was under the same roof.

² R. v. Higgs, 2 Car. & K. 322.

³ R. v. Somerville, 2 Lew. C. C. 113.

whereupon the judges deemed it to be a distinct mansion, and it having been laid as the mansion house of the prosecutor, the conviction was affirmed.¹ This case, therefore, still applies. So lofts, where the coachmen sleep, are distinct domiciles, although not immediately connected with the messuage.² A booth at Weyhill Fair, where a man and his wife slept, was broken into: the man rented it during the fair week. Park, J., after consulting with Littledale, J., held it to be a sufficient dwelling house for the purpose of burglary.³ Here the dwelling house and the inhabitancy were united.

Fourthly, the ownership of the house must be properly set out in the indictment. It must not be called the house of the landlord, when it should be charged as that of the tenant, nor vice versa, nor the abode of the inmate when the owner's name ought to appear. The house may be laid in general in the occupier, or his servant, or in a lodger, if neither the owner nor his servant inhabit; or, each apartment may, in that case, be laid as the dwelling of the lodgers respectively.⁴ So it is if the lodgers enter by separate outer doors, although the owner himself may abide in the house.⁵ It made no difference in that case that the rooms were let from year to year under a rent.⁶ Nor does the case vary if the owner reserve any part of the premises, unless he himself dwell, or his servant. So that where the owner kept back a cellar, but let C. a shop and parlour, where the burglary happened, it was held, that the premises were properly laid in C.⁷ So chambers, in the inns of court, where, in term time, at all events, there is a residence, are the mansions of the several occupiers.⁸ Hence, unless there be a separate occupation, the owner cannot commit burglary by breaking open the doors of his lodgers.⁹ In the case of a public company, if the house be assigned to the servant of such a company, the judges, probably, will not object to an indictment laying this offence to have been committed in the dwelling house of either master or servant,¹⁰ for the salary might be abated in consideration of freedom from rent; and thus for the purpose of burglary, a constructive tenancy might be presumed. But, in such a case, it is more common to use the name of the agent or servant.¹¹ It follows, that when the dwelling house is considered in the ordinary light of a holding by service, the possession being in the master, the building must be laid in the company.¹² Again, the wages of a workman were less on ac-

¹ R. v. Westwood, Russ. & Ry. 495. Diss., Graham, B., who thought that the room was parcel of the dwelling house across the road. Diss., generally, Park, J.

² R. v. Turner, Leach, 305; East, P. C. 492.

³ R. v. Smith, 1 Moo. & Rob. 256.

⁴ East, P. C. 505.

⁵ Id. See Kel. 84.

⁶ East, P. C. 505.

⁷ R. v. Rogers, Leach, 89.

⁸ R. v. Evans and another, 1 Hale, P. C. 588; Cro. Car. 473.

⁹ East, P. C. 506.

¹⁰ See 1 Moo. C. C. 250.

¹¹ R. v. Margetts and another, Leach, 930; and see Id. 931, n., citing another case to the same effect.

¹² R. v. Picket, East, P. C. 501.

count of his excused rent. A burglary having been committed in his dwelling house, the indictment laid the house in one count, as the property of the master, and in another as that of the workman. The judges held, that here was no more than a licence to the workman to lodge in the cottage, and not a letting of it to him. The count therefore, which laid the cottage in the master, was correct.¹ In another case there appeared to have been no abatement of wages, but an agreement that the prosecutor should live in a cottage free of rent and taxes. Some of the workmen had this privilege, some not. It was objected, upon the authority of the cases above, that the indictment should have laid the cottage in the master. But Holroyd, J., said, that although the occupation of the cottage was by reason of G. being, as workman, the servant of Mr. B., and co-extensive only with the hiring, yet that the inhabitancy was not, as in the cases cited, merely as servant, nor was it either as to the whole or any part of the dwelling as Mr. B.'s occupation, or for his use, or business, or that of the colliery, but wholly for the use of G. and his family, in like manner as if he had paid rent and taxes for it either out of higher wages or otherwise. The judges upheld this opinion, and the conviction was held right.² Several judges in Brown's case inclined to think, that had there been a demise of the cottage to the servant, the barn, which was part of it, and where the burglary happened, would still have remained exclusively in the master;³ but this latter dictum seems to be shaken by the case before Mr. J. Holroyd. A person, although only permitted to dwell in a cottage for a season, may be considered as a tenant at will, and thus entitled to have the dwelling house laid in him.⁴ So is the case of the gardener who had the entire control of his house and kept the key.⁵ So, where a person kept a house till it was let, but not as a servant.⁶ So in the case of the toll collector, who occupied a house, rent-free, but was paid for his labour by the week, and remitted the tolls monthly to his master. Nothing was said as to a notice to quit. The master was the lessee of the trustees, and did not have any interest in the house. This was held to be a tenancy at will.⁷ The incidents of salary and tenancy being withdrawn, the indictment must be confined to the owner.⁸ It makes no difference that the master carries on Inhabitancy of servants. R. v. Maynard, Id. R. v. Hawkins, Id., where the indictment failed through laying the property in the servant. R. v. Williams and others, 1 Hale, P. C. 522, for the burglary at Sir H. Hungate's, at Whitehall. R. v. Burgess, Kel. 27; and see East, P. C. 500; Leach, 324.

¹ R. v. Brown, East, P. C. 501.

² R. v. Jobling, Russ. & Ry. 525.

³ East, P. C. 502.

⁴ R. v. Collett and others, Russ. & Ry. 498.

⁵ R. v. Rees, 7 C. & P. 568.

⁶ R. v. James, 1 Russ. C. M. 815.

⁷ R. v. Camfield and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 42.

⁸ R. v. Stock and another, Leach, 1015; 2 Taunt. 339. R. v. Rawlins, 7 C. & P. 150. See also R. v. Smith, cited there. R. v. Bird, 9 C. & P. 44.

his business in a part of the dwelling house, not sleeping there, the servant having free access to the whole, for the gravamen is the burglary; but the house might likewise, it was thought, have been laid as that of the master.¹ And the payment of rent is decisive, though the master carries on his business in the house, and the servant has it on account of his service.² And it signified nothing to the contrary (in Witt's case) that the burglary happened in the master's part of the premises.³ A., the servant of B., lived close to B.'s place of business. B. did not live in the house, but he paid the rent and taxes, and did not pay anything for occupation. Part of the house, however, was used as a storeroom for B.'s goods. The house was described as the dwelling house of the servant in an indictment for housebreaking, and Witt's case was cited. But the court said, that here the dwelling house was that of the master; the house was partly under the master's dominion, and the possession of the servant was that of the master.⁴ So it is, in the case of a governor of a workhouse where the masters reserve a part of the dwelling for themselves, though not for a residence. The prisoner was wrongly convicted upon an indictment laying the house in the governor.⁵

Again, there may be a severance of occupation in the same mansion, as we have already intimated in the instance of the inns of court. Two persons rented different parts of a house, one paying all the taxes, and the burglary was committed in a shop which was divided between the two renters by a partition. It appeared that the doors of each partition were locked at night by each of these parties; but, beyond the doors, there was a common passage which led to a common staircase, and there was no other material severance, except that each had his separate kitchen, &c. Nevertheless, the house was held to be rightly described as the separate property of him whose house was broken open.⁶ Again, two houses were made out of one, and there was no communication except through the outer door into the street. They were inhabited by partners who paid the rent and taxes jointly; but it was held incorrect to lay a joint property in this case, one of the dwellings having been broken open, because the mansions were distinct.⁷ So, where one of two partners paid all the rent and taxes, but received a contribution from the other, and also a sum for board and lodging, it was held right to lay the property in the former, who was the sole lessee of the premises.⁸ On the

¹ R. v. Witt, 1 Moo. C. C. 248.

² R. v. Jarvis and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 7. Here, although there were two counts, yet, as the burglary happened in the master's part of the building, which was disconnected from the other, the conviction was held wrong.

³ R. v. Witt, ut supra; the servant lived free from rent and taxes.

⁴ R. v. Courtenay, 5 Cox, 218.

⁵ R. v. Wilson, Russ. & Ry. 115. Mansfield, C. J., Heath and Grose, JJ., seemed to dissent. R. v. Ballard and another, 1 Russ. C. M. 814. R. v. Frowen and others, 4 Cox, 266.

⁶ R. v. Bailey, 1 Moo. C. C. 23. R. v. Jones, Leach, 537. And see 2 Salk. 532.

⁸ Leach, 537, n.

contrary, where there was a joint demise of a warehouse to two brothers, and a separate demise of the dwelling house, under the same roof, to one only, it was held wrong to lay the property of the warehouse that was broken into in the latter only, because he occupied the warehouse under the joint demise.¹ Nor would it have been competent to lay it in both, because a warehouse not slept in is not, of itself, a dwelling house. Had there been a joint demise of the dwelling house, although one only of the brothers resided, the property might then have been alleged jointly, notwithstanding the absence of the other.² This was a severance by lease. But where a father let part of his house to his son, it was held, upon a case of burglary in the shop annexed, that the house was well described as the property of the father, by reason of its being under the same roof, and communicating internally; but the judges thought it a case of much nicety.³ In the case of the innkeeper, the property must be laid in him.⁴ One under pretence of having been robbed, forced the chamber door of a guest in the night, and committed a felony. It was held, that the indictment should not have stated that the burglary had taken place in the dwelling house of the guest.⁵ Where a box was stolen from a benefit society, it was held right to lay the property in the landlord, although two of the stewards had keys to the box, as, according to the rules, the landlord ought to have had a key, although at the time of the offence, he happened not to have one.⁶

Again, the common rule that the house of the wife is that of the husband, is very strictly adhered to in burglary. The husband refused to have anything to do with the lease of a house where his wife lived apart from him, and yet an indictment laying the property in him was held right.⁷ It was attempted to depart from this rule in a case where the wife lived apart upon a separate income vested in trustees for her separate use; but the judges were clear that the house should have been laid as that of the husband.⁸ And it was held to make no difference that the wife was living in adultery, that her paramour paid the expenses of her housekeeping, and that the improper connection was with the cognizance of the husband.⁹ But if the wife were to have the exclusive property as well as the exclusive possession, the mansion would then be properly laid as her dwelling.¹⁰

¹ R. v. Jenkins and another, Russ. & Ry. 244.

² See 1 Moo. C. C. 329, to the same effect. 1 Hale, P. C. 557, 558.

³ R. v. Sefton, Russ. & Ry. 202. Graham, B., dub. Thompson, B., and Chambre, J., (who tried the case), doubted at first. See R. v. North Collingham, 1 B. & C. 578.

⁴ East, P. C. 502.

⁵ R. v. Prosser, East, P. C. 502.

⁶ R. v. Wymer, 4 C. & P. 391.

⁷ R. v. Farre, Kel. 43. R. v. Smyth, 5 C. & P. 201.

⁸ R. v. French, Russ. & Ry. 491.

⁹ R. v. Wilford and another, Russ. & Ry. 517.

¹⁰ East, P. C. 504.

Thus we have endeavoured to discuss the question as to whose house the burglar shall be said to have invaded. A case under the section, which punished striking during burglary with death, may be mentioned here, although the capital penalty under the repealed statute has not been renewed. The attack having been successfully made upon the dwelling house, one of the confederates escaped from the house. An assault then took place upon the person broken in upon. Any one of the burglars then present would be guilty of the more serious charge, but the associate who had escaped was, under Lord Denman's direction, convicted of simple burglary only.¹

Indictment.] The indictment for simple burglary sets forth that A., on, &c., about the hour of [between nine and six], the dwelling house of B., situate, &c.,² feloniously and burglariously did break and enter, with intent the goods and chattels of the said B.,³ in the said dwelling house, then and there being in the said dwelling house, feloniously and burglariously to steal, &c., against the form, &c. If there has been a stealing, state it; and if of the value of 5*l.*, state it, in order, that if acquitted of burglary, the prisoner may be convicted of stealing in the dwelling house. If a breaking out be charged after a burglary within, add: and the said A. having so entered the said dwelling house with the intent aforesaid, afterwards, on, &c., about the hour of, &c., feloniously and burglariously did break the said dwelling house of the said B., in order thereby to get out of the same, and then in the night, as aforesaid, feloniously and burglariously did break out of the same, against the form, &c. If a larceny has been committed, another count is added. An indictment charging a breaking out had two counts, one alleged that the prisoner did break to get out, the other that he did break and got out. Both counts were held bad.⁴ A house was partly situate in two parishes; the room where the burglary was committed was situated in the same way. The breaking took place in the parish of A., and the indictment so alleged it. The stealing was alleged to have been "then and there;" but there was property in the parish of A., although the

¹ R. v. Harvey and another, 1 Cox, 21.

² See R. v. Napper, 1 Moo. C. C. 44. The omission of "there situate," is not fatal. R. v. Brown, Moo. & M. 163. Therefore it is left out in modern indictments. In a case where it was said "The dwelling house of A., &c., of the union, there situate." "There situate" was referred to the parish, not to the union. R. v. Frowen and others, 4 Cox, 266.

³ But the indictment is good, without stating whose goods the prisoner meant to steal, so that, upon an attempt to commit sacrilege, the words "with intent then and there the goods and chattels therein feloniously and sacrilegiously to steal," were holden sufficient. R. v. Nicholas and another, 1 Cox, 218.

⁴ R. v. Compton, 7 C. & P. 139. Because the statute merely uses the words "break out."

articles taken were in that part of the room which was in the parish of B. The verdict was guilty of burglary in the parish in the indictment mentioned; not guilty of stealing. The recorder consulted two learned judges, and they held the conviction good.¹ It is always better to allege the intent to steal, because, if these words should be omitted, and the prosecutor should fail to prove a larceny, the prisoner will be acquitted.² But proof of a larceny will cure the omission of the intent to steal.³ On the other hand, if the intent be stated, as to commit a rape, and the charge of felony be left out, yet proof of an actual rape will be sufficient to satisfy the indictment.⁴ But an allegation of an intent to commit one sort of felony will not be sustained by proof of an intent to commit another,⁵ although several distinct intents may be laid in the same indictment.⁶ An indictment was framed as to the intent, thus: "With intent the goods and chattels in the same dwelling house then and there being feloniously and burglariously to steal, &c., and then the indictment charged a larceny of the goods of E. B. It was shown, that the burglary happened in the dwelling house of E. B., and two others. The court held, that proof of any intent to steal the goods of any person in particular was not required, the necessary proof being of an intent to steal the goods of E. B. generally.⁷ Some hour must be stated,⁸ but the statute defines the hours within which a burglary may be committed. And the words, "about the hour of 11 in the night," were deemed sufficient by Patteson, J., who added, that "burglariously" would satisfy the law, without saying "in the night;" but still the hour should be mentioned.

Having stated the hour, a larceny before that hour cannot be admitted in evidence under the same indictment, should that proof be attempted upon the failure of the charge for burglary.⁹ It might as well be sought to charge the prisoners with a burglary committed in the same place seven years before.¹⁰ The larceny must, of course, be of the subjects of larceny, not of mortgage deeds, because they are choses in action.¹¹ With reference to the place, where the house was laid in the wrong township, the parish having two townships, the prisoner was acquitted.¹² So when the indictment charged a burglary in a warehouse, in the parish of

¹ R. v. Howell and others, 1 Cox, 190.

² R. v. Vandercomb and another, East, P. C. 514.

³ R. v. Furnival, Russ. & Ry. 445.

⁴ R. v. Locost and another, Kel. 30.

⁵ East, P. C. 514.

⁶ R. v. Thompson, Id. 515.

⁷ R. v. Clarke, 1 Car. & K. 421. As to goods, see R. v. Whitehead, 9 C. & P. 429.

⁸ R. v. Waddington, East, P. C. 513.

⁹ R. v. Thompson and another, 2 Cox, 377.

¹⁰ R. v. Vandercomb and another, Leach, 711.

¹¹ R. v. Powell, Den. & P. 403; 21 L. J. M. C. 78. Jervis, C. J., cited, 8 Rep. 33 (a). R. v. Caley, 3 Inst. 109. And Chand v. Rowbotham, Yel. 68.

¹² R. v. Wood, 1 Lew. C. C. 36.

St. Peter the Great, in the county of W., and it turned out that only part of that parish was in the county of W., the indictment was held invalid as to the burglary. The words should have been "in that part of the parish of St. Peter the Great which lies within the county of W."¹ So where the prisoner, "late of the parish of St. Catherine, in the county of Gloucester," was charged with stealing in the dwelling house of A., "theresituate," but the proof was partly in that county, and partly in the county of the city. Cresswell, J., permitted a conviction for simple larceny only.² But it is not necessary to mention the name of a parish or village at all as a parish. Merely to mention the place, as "Norton juxta Kempsey," is sufficient.³ The name of the person intended to be robbed must not be carelessly treated. A count stating the burglary to have been committed in the house of one Richard —, not mentioning the surname, but leaving a blank, was doubted of; but the reporter (Moor) says it was holden good.⁴ Where the charge was of burglary with intent to steal the goods of W., in the dwelling house of D., whereas the name of W. was inserted in the indictment by mistake for that of D., it was held, that the words, "and of the said Joseph W.," could not be rejected as surplusage, and that the conviction was wrong.⁵ So, again, a burglary was charged in the house of S. W., and D. James was alleged to have been feloniously struck. It turned out that D. Jones and not D. James was the person struck. Upon this, the more serious part of the indictment was abandoned, and the charge of simple burglary was proceeded with.⁶ The name of the owner of the dwelling house should be mentioned, otherwise the prisoner can neither be convicted of burglary, nor of stealing in the dwelling house.⁷

The indictment need not conclude "against the form of the statute." For the alteration of the hours in burglary does not change the offence, and the diminution of the punishment does not make the conclusion necessary.⁸

In cases of burglary with violence, it is necessary to set out all the aggravating circumstances with accuracy. The burglary and the striking must be particularly charged.⁹ Before the passing of 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 11, (now repealed,) the prisoner could not be convicted of an assault upon an indictment for burglary with intent to ravish.¹⁰ And it made no difference, that a beating and wounding in the dwelling house were alleged.¹¹

¹ R. v. Brookes, Car. & M. 543.

² R. v. Jackson, 2 Russ. C. M. 801. On the authority of R. v. Brookes.

³ R. v. Brookes, Car. & M. 544.

⁴ R. v. Cole, Mo. 466. East, P. C. 513.

⁵ R. v. Jenks, Leach, 774; East, P. C. 514.

⁶ R. v. Perfit, 8 C. & P. 288.

⁷ R. v. White, Leach, 252. R. v. Woodward, cited, Id 253, n.

⁸ R. v. Polly, 1 Car. & K. 77.

⁹ R. v. Perfit, 8 C. & P. 288.

¹⁰ R. v. Watkins, 2 Moo. C. C. 217; Car. & M. 264.

¹¹ S. C.

Trial.] With reference to the trial, it must be in the county where the house is broken, although if the prisoner be found with the stolen property in another county, he may be charged there with the larceny; and under 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 12, a concurrent jurisdiction of 500 yards is given to adjoining counties. The words dealt with, apply to justices; the words "inquired of," to the grand jury; and "determined and punished" to the sessions or assizes.¹

Sacrilege in the statute concerning rewards,² is not comprehended in the word burglary.³ Acts of personal courage have been recognized by the judges as deserving of reward; and diligence in the apprehension of an offender is also included. A substantive effect is thus given to the word "exertions."⁴

¹ R. v. Ruck, 1 Russ. C. M. 827. the authority of the above, Bolland, B., ruled the same.

² 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 28.

³ R. v. Robinson, 1 Lew. C. C. 129, Hullock, B. And, also, upon ⁴ See R. v. Barnes, 7 C. & P. 166. R. v. Blake, Id. cited there. And Coleridge, J., mentioned the special commission at Bristol.

CHAPTER XIII.

OF BREAKING AND ENTRY INTO BUILDINGS WITHIN THE CURTILAGE, BUT NOT BEING PART OF DWELLING HOUSE, WITH INTENT TO COMMIT FELONY.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 55, whosoever shall break and enter any building, and commit any felony therein, such building being within the curtilage of a dwelling house, and occupied therewith, but not being part thereof, according to the provision hereinbefore mentioned, or being in any such building shall commit any felony therein, and break out of the same, shall be guilty of felony, and be liable, at the discretion of the court, to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years,—or imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

A curtilage is a court-yard, backside, or piece of ground lying near and belonging to a dwelling house. If there be a communication between a building and the dwelling house, either immediate, or by means of a covered and inclosed passage leading from the one to the other, that is a curtilage, the breaking of which amounts to burglary. But if there be no such communication, nor passage, the breaking of the separated curtilage and stealing in any building within it, and occupied with the dwelling house, any chattel, money, or valuable security, is felony, and the punishments are penal servitude not exceeding eight nor less than four years, or imprisonment not exceeding three years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

All the incidents of a dwelling house must be present in order to warrant a conviction for breaking within the curtilage. And it is observable, that possibly, many of those buildings which were deemed to be parcel of the dwelling house under the old law of burglary, may not be thought even now to be included within the curtilage, at least for that purpose. The circumstance of their being situated within a common inclosure appears to have been treated as a material ingredient.¹ Upon an indictment for this crime, it appeared, that the building was in the fold-yard of the prosecutor's farm. To get from his dwelling house to the fold-yard, the prosecutor passed through a yard called the pump-yard, into which the back door of the dwelling house opened. This yard was separated from the fold-yard by a wall four feet high. In the wall was a gate, the fold-yard having another gate leading to fields on one side, and a hedge, with a field leading to the high road, on another. The other sides of the fold-yard were bounded by the farm buildings and a continuous wall from the dwelling house. It was held, that the building in question was within the curtilage.¹ A count for breaking the curtilage may be joined with counts for burglary, housebreaking, and stealing in the dwelling house.²

¹ See ante, R. v. Clapham, 1 Lew. C. C. 200.

Indictment.] The indictment states that A., on, &c., feloniously did break and enter a certain building of B., situate, &c., the said building being then within the curtilage of the dwelling house of the said B. there situate, and then occupied therewith by the said B., and there being then no communication between the said building and the said dwelling house, either immediate or by means of any covered and inclosed passage leading from the one to the other, and that the said A. then in the said building feloniously did steal [the property] of the goods and chattels of the said B., &c., then and there being, against the form, &c.

¹ R. v. Gilbert, 1 Car. & K. 84.

² See 7 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 6.

CHAPTER XIV.

OF BREAKING INTO DWELLING HOUSES, SHOPS, &c.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 56, whosoever shall break and enter any dwelling house, schoolhouse, shop, warehouse, or counting-house, and commit any felony therein, or, being in any dwelling house, &c., shall commit any felony therein, and break out of the same, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen years and not less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

By sect. 57, whosoever shall break and enter any dwelling house, church, chapel, meeting house, or other place of divine worship, or any building within the curtilage, schoolhouse, shop, warehouse, or counting-house, with intent to commit any felony therein, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven years and not less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

By sect. 58, whosoever shall be found by night armed with any dangerous or offensive weapon or instrument whatsoever, with intent to break or enter into any dwelling house or other building whatsoever, and to commit any felony therein, or shall be found by night having in his possession, without lawful excuse (the proof of which excuse shall lie on such person), any picklock key, crow, jack, bit, or other implement of housebreaking, or shall be found by night,¹ having his face blackened or otherwise disguised with intent to commit any felony, or shall be found by night in any dwelling house or other building whatsoever with intent to commit any felony therein, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to be kept in penal servitude for three years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour.

And by sect. 59, whosoever shall be convicted of any such misdemeanor as in the last preceding section mentioned, committed after a previous conviction, either for felony or such misdemeanor, shall on such subsequent conviction be liable to penal servitude not exceeding ten years and not less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour.

The rules respecting the dwelling house which have been com-

¹ Night is to be reckoned as in s. 13, and sect. 1 of this Act, the burglary, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, last clause.

mented upon in the remarks concerning burglary, apply to this charge. But the offence here is confined to the stealing, consequently, housebreaking in the daytime with whatsoever intention, yet unaccompanied by larceny, will not fall within the clause. Another principle is, that where the breaking happens between 9 P. M. and 6 A. M., the indictment may assume the shape of a charge for burglary.¹ For although upon a count for burglary the prisoner may be convicted of housebreaking, or of stealing in a dwelling house to the value of 5*l.*,² yet upon an indictment for housebreaking, he could not be convicted of burglary. The least asportation, as in larceny, will suffice.³ The breaking out is not noticed in this place. Therefore, if there be an entrance, not felonious, the breaking out is only a trespass. But an attempt to commit felony, which is a misdemeanor, may be involved in the act. There was a charge for housebreaking and stealing chattels. The felonious conduct and attempt were manifest. But all the chattels laid turned out to have been stolen previously by other persons, before the entry, and that fact was found by the jury. The case being reserved, it was contended for the prosecution that the stat. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9, had provided for this event. It was like an attempt to steal a note, by putting a hand into a person's pocket, when, in fact, no note was there, and under that Act, the attempt need not be mentioned in the indictment. But the court said, that they must not confound attempt and intent. The articles were gone, so that the attempt could never have succeeded. They were clearly against the conviction.⁴ Willes, J., said that the prisoner might have been convicted of an attempt to steal the articles which were then in the house, that is, upon another indictment.⁵ And by Bramwell, B. : the prisoner is still amenable for what he actually did.⁶

Indictment.] The indictment, omitting the hour, as in burglary, and the mention, as formerly, of the daytime, charges, that A. on, &c. feloniously did break and enter the dwelling house of B., situate, &c., and then in the said dwelling house feloniously did steal, &c., [the property] of the goods and chattels of the said B. then and there being, against the form, &c. An indictment alleged the breaking and entry, and that the prisoner then and there feloniously did steal, &c. It was held not necessary to add, "in the same dwelling house," the words, "then and there being found" having been previously inserted.⁷ An indictment omitted to state whose goods the prisoner meant to steal, but the words "with intent the goods and chattels in the said dwelling house then and there being found, then and there feloniously to steal," were deemed sufficient.⁸ But

¹ See Whitehead v. Reg. ante. ⁵ 26 L. J. 135.
² R. v. Compton, 3 C. & P. 418, Gaselee, J. ⁶ Id.
³ R. v. Amier, 6 C. & P. 344. ⁷ R. v. Andrews, Car. & M. 121. See R. v. Smith, post.
⁴ R. v. M'Pherson, 26 L. J. M. C. 134; Dears. & B. 197. ⁸ R. v. Lawes, 1 Car. & K. 62.

an omission to say that the prisoner feloniously did steal, was held fatal in arrest of judgment after verdict. The indictment was for breaking with intent to steal.¹ Where the owner of the house had been attainted of felony, the prisoner was acquitted of house-breaking, although his wife had possession of the house and goods, and he could not be convicted of larceny for stealing the wife's goods, although they had remained in her possession since the husband's conviction. But a count laying the property in Her Majesty was held sufficient to support a conviction for larceny without office found.²

The trial is regulated as in burglary.

Shops.] Goods must be sold to make the place broken a shop. A mere workshop is not enough.³ But, where goods are sold, it is no defence to say that the place is a workshop, as a blacksmith's. The work done there does not neutralize the sale of goods in it.⁴ So if goods are deposited, bonâ fide, for removal and sale in a place, it is a warehouse within this Act of parliament.⁵ A house was stated in the indictment to be a counting-house. It was a machine house. Here all goods were weighed prior to their being sent out, and a book was kept for entries. The account of the men's time was taken there, and the wages were paid likewise there, and the books were kept there. This was abundant evidence of a counting-house.⁶ If the shop or other building be parcel of the dwelling house, it will be considered in the same light. The Act interposes its protection in the absence of an internal communication between the shop and the mansion.

Indictment.] The indictment states, that A. on, &c., feloniously did break and enter the shop, [&c.] of B., situate, &c., and then in the said shop feloniously did steal, &c., [the property] of the goods and chattels of the said B. in the said shop then and there being, against the form, &c. It is prudent to allege that the goods were taken in the shop. For want of this averment, a case once failed.⁷ But upon a subsequent occasion, Coleridge and Patteson, JJ., expressed their opinion that this point was not rightly decided in R. v. Smith.⁸ The prisoner was charged with stealing goods in the house of K. His brother-in-law carried on a trade in the house, which belonged to K., for K.'s benefit. He had neither a share in the profit, nor a salary. He had authority to sell any part of the stock, and he

¹ R. v. Wenmouth, 8 Cox, 348.

² R. v. Whitehead, 9 C. & P. 429. A nol. pros. was entered as to the breaking. See also Whitehead v. Reg. (in error), 7 Q. B. 582. R. v. Ellis, 8 Dowl. & Ry. 173.

³ R. v. Sanders, 9 C. & P. 79.

⁴ R. v. Carter, 1 Car. & K. 173.

⁵ R. v. Hill, 2 Moo. & Rob. 458; 1 Car. & K. 168.

⁶ R. v. Potter, 20 L. J. M. C. 170; Den. & P. 235.

⁷ R. v. Smith, 2 Moo. & Rob. 115.

⁸ In R. v. Andrews, ante.

might take money from the till, but he would in that case acquaint K. with it. He, as well as K., bought goods for the shop. Upon this proof the court held that the brother-in-law was a bailee, and that the goods in the shop were rightly laid in him.¹

*Housebreaking with intent to commit any felony, or, being armed, with intent to break and enter.*²] The arming must be with some dangerous or offensive weapon or instrument.³

Indictment.] The indictment states, that A. on, &c., was found by night, to wit, at the hour of —, in the night of the same day [describe the offence], in the dwelling house of B., situate, &c., with intent to commit a felony there.

¹ R. v. Bird, 9 C. & P. 44.

² Sects. 57, 58.

³ As to the offensive weapon, see ante.

CHAPTER XV.

OF STEALING IN A DWELLING HOUSE TO THE AMOUNT OF 5*l*.

THIS offence is provided against by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 60, which enacts, that whosoever shall steal in any dwelling house any chattel, money, or valuable security,¹ to the value in the whole of 5*l*. or more, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

And by sect. 61, whosoever shall steal any chattel, money, or valuable security in any dwelling house, and shall by any menace or threat put any one being therein in bodily fear, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

The chief questions of law in this matter are, as to the mode of laying the property of the house in the indictment; but it may be noticed as a principle, that the property stolen must be, as it were, under the protection of the house. So, that if the thing be taken under the eye of the owner, but without force, although amounting to 5*l*., the prisoner will only be guilty of simple larceny.² Thus, ring-dropping in a dwelling house was held not to be within 12 Ann. st. 1, c. 7.³ However, if a person goes to bed and places his clothes and money by the bedside, they are under the protection of the dwelling house.⁴ Whereas, where the money was taken from behind a pillow where the person was sleeping, Chambre, J., held, that the house did not protect it, but only the person.⁵ Bayley, J., nevertheless, allowed a conviction under similar circumstances; but this last was the case of a guest at an inn, and there might have been a difference in laying the ownership of the dwelling house.⁶ The intention of inhabitation on the part of the owner is a material feature in considering this offence. Where the master placed a person in a house to protect some furniture till he could get a tenant, and the person accordingly slept there, it was held, that the prisoner could not be convicted of stealing in the dwelling house.⁷ So where the prosecutor left his premises without any intention of returning,

¹ See sect. 1.

² R. v. Campbell, Leach, 564.

³ R. v. Owen, Id. 572.

⁴ R. v. Thomas, Car. Cr. L. 295.
R. v. Hamilton, 8 C. & P. 49.

⁵ Anon. Stark. Cr. Pl. 467, n.
R. v. Challenor, Dickinson, Q. S. 245.

⁶ Stark. Cr. Pl., ut supra.

⁷ R. v. Davis, East, P. C. 499.

meaning to use them as a warehouse only, it was held, that the place could not be considered as his dwelling house, although he had people to guard the property, who, however, were not members of his family.¹ One of the members of a club was charged with robbing the club of some plate. The house steward had the charge of the plate, and slept in the house; but he was accustomed to deliver it every night to another servant. The indictment described the plate as the goods of the house steward, and the dwelling house as his dwelling house; and the court held, that the charge could not be sustained, for the steward was but the servant of the club, and the other servant was not his servant, but a servant likewise of the club.²

Formerly, it was not an offence of this nature for the owner of the dwelling house to steal another's goods in the dwelling house;³ but the judges have held that a conviction might take place under the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 12,⁴ and that the punishment for compound larceny might, under such circumstances, be inflicted.⁵ And, before that statute, it was held, that where a lodger invited a guest to his room, and then stole his goods, he should be punished for this offence, although a doubt was certainly entertained, whether the prisoner must not have been considered, with reference to the prosecutor, as the owner of the house.⁶ In this last case, the property seems to have been considered as under the protection of the dwelling house. And so, again, where two boxes were left at a house by mistake, and were delivered to the occupier under the idea that they belonged to some one living there, the judges held the conviction proper, the goods being under the protection of the dwelling house.⁷ It makes no difference, that the thief and a servant act in concert. As where the servant admitted a person into the house and left him there, in order to rob it at a future day. The prisoner broke into the bedroom of the master, and stole his cash-box, and his conviction was held right.⁸ So where the servant only pretended to concur in the robbery, and whilst he admitted the prisoner, admitted the police likewise; the charge was sustained for stealing in the dwelling house, the prisoner being detected with a basket of plate in his hand.⁹ It seems, that property to the amount of 5*l.* should be taken at one time, although if several persons were robbed simultaneously, the amount of their aggregate loss would, of course, be added together.¹⁰ The question as to the amount is for the jury.¹¹ As where the prisoner was

¹ R. v. Flannagan, Russ. & Ry. 187. See R. v. Hamilton, 1 Lew. C. C. 77.

² R. v. Ashley, 1 Car. & K. 198.

³ R. v. Thompson and another, Leach, 338. R. v. Gould, Id. 217, 339, n.

⁴ Succeeded by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 60.

⁵ R. v. Bowden, 2 Moo. C. C. 285.

⁶ R. v. Taylor, Russ. & Ry. 418. By seven judges, three diss.

⁷ R. v. Carroll, 1 Moo. C. C. 89.

⁸ R. v. Tuckwell, Car. & M. 215.

⁹ R. v. Jones, Car. & M. 218.

¹⁰ See R. v. Petrie, Leach, 294. R. v. Farley, East, P. C. 740.

¹¹ See R. v. Hamilton, Leach, 348. R. v. Jones, 4 C. & P. 217.

charged with stealing 68 yards of lace, and it turned out that he could have taken the whole quantity of a piece at a time, although no one piece was, by itself, worth 5*l*.¹

Indictment.] The indictment is, that A., on, &c., in the dwelling house of B., in the parish of —, feloniously did steal, &c., [the property] of the goods and chattels of the said B., to the value in the whole of 5*l*. and more, in the said dwelling house then and there being, against the form, &c.

Many of the cases as to laying the property have been already referred to, under the head of burglary,² and the rules which govern them are, for the most part, the same. Thus, public buildings should be laid in the sovereign, or in the various companies to which they belong.³ Upon an indictment under the old Act of Anne, it appeared, that M. and G. were partners, that M. was lessee of the premises, paying rent and taxes, that G. had an apartment in the house, and allowed M. a certain sum for board and lodging, and likewise a certain proportion of the rent and taxes for the shop and warehouse. The felony was committed in the shop, and it was contended, that the premises should have been laid jointly in G. and M.; but the judges held, that the indictment had correctly laid the property in M.⁴ Again, the charge was for stealing in the dwelling house of G. B., the monies of R. J. B. R. J. B. was secretary to the Norwich Union Life Company, with a salary, and he occupied the dwelling in question with his servant, but the rent and taxes were paid by the company. The judges held, that the house might well be laid in him, although they would not say, but that it might also have been laid in the house of the company.⁵ And where one partner only resided in a house which was the joint property of all the partners, it was held, that an indictment for stealing in the dwelling house of the firm was right, and that it needed not to have been laid as the mansion of the resident partner.⁶ An indictment charged a stealing in the dwelling house of W. T., and omitted "there situate." But it averred that the act was done at Liverpool, and it was held, that the local situation should be referred to the venue, and the conviction was affirmed.⁷ Again, although the ownership of the goods be omitted, it seems that the indictment for the higher offence is good.⁸ But if the name of the owner be mentioned, and the proof does not meet the name, it is probable, that the conviction would stand good for the larceny only. And where each article, by itself, as it is most common, is

¹ R. v. Jones, ut supra. See R. v. Stonehouse and another, 1 Cox, 69.

² See R. v. Turner, 6 C. & P. 329. 407. And R. v. Ashley, sup.

³ R. v. Peyton, Leach, 324.

⁴ R. v. Parminter, Leach, 537, n.

⁵ R. v. Witt, 1 Moo. C. C. 248.

⁶ R. v. Athea, 1 Moo. C. C.

⁷ R. v. Napper, 1 Moo. C. C.

44.

⁸ R. v. Lawes, ante, p. 471.

under 5*l.* in value, but the aggregate amount exceeds that amount, and it is so laid, it is not necessary that there should be a separate allegation that the theft came up to 5*l.*¹

Judgment.] The following is an example of a bad judgment. There were two counts. One charged a stealing in the dwelling house to the amount of 5*l.* The other was for simple larceny. There was a general verdict of guilty. The judgment was, that the party be transported for ten years for the felony aforesaid. If the indictment alleged one felony in two counts, and the verdict did not specify the offence, being general, it was bad for uncertainty, and the court could not apply it to the first count only. If it alleged a separate felony on each count, the judgment was bad, because the jury had found but one offence.²

Stealing in a dwelling house with menaces and threats.] The requisites of a dwelling house must be abided by in this case,³ although the value taken is immaterial. Some menace or threat by which the party was terrified, or might have been terrified at the time of the stealing, must be proved, and we are not now obliged to collect from the circumstances whether the threat used was calculated to inspire fear, nor, as we shall see, whether it did cause fear.⁴ Hence, it is of course, that if the prosecutor makes oath that he was put in bodily fear by the menace, and if he appears to have been of a reasonably sound mind, the proof is sufficient. Indeed, no evidence of actual fear is necessary in order to constitute the crime.⁵ Persons were placed with their faces against a wall, and yet, although the evidence showed that they were not alarmed, the charge was considered to be proved, for such conduct was likely to have disturbed a reasonably firm mind.⁶ It is also to be remarked, that the property need not be taken, as in robbery, in the owner's presence. Therefore, if one were to succeed in alarming the inmates below, and thus were to rifle the dwelling house above, it would be an act within the clause. Neither need all the prisoners be in the house in order to convict. So that a threat made by one outside and taken advantage of by those within, will be sufficient to complete the offence against the latter, although the person without will of course be acquitted.⁷

Indictment.] The indictment charges, that A. on, &c., in the dwelling house of B., in the parish, &c., feloniously did steal, &c.,

¹ R. v. Stonehouse and another, 1 Cox, 69.

² Campbell v. Reg. (in error), 11 Q. B. 799. It would also have been bad for duplicity, if it had clearly appeared in the indictment that both counts related to one offence.

³ Ante.

⁴ R. v. Little, 1 Lew. C. C. 201.

⁵ Supra.

⁶ R. v. Murphy, 6 Cox, 340.

⁷ R. v. Murphy, supra.

[the property] of the goods and chattels of B., in the said dwelling house then and there being, and did then feloniously in the said dwelling house, by certain menaces and threats, put the said B. in the said dwelling house then being, in bodily fear, against the form, &c. It seems necessary to allege, that the person robbed was put in fear by the prisoner. For want of this statement, it was held under the old law that judgment could only be given for simple larceny.¹

¹ R. v. Etherington and another, Leach, 671; East, P. C. 635. R. v. Anderson, Leach, 673, n.

CHAPTER XVI.

OF STEALING GOODS IN PROCESS OF MANUFACTURE.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 62, whosoever shall steal, to the value of 10s., any woollen, linen, hempen, or cotton yarn, or any goods or article of silk, woollen, linen, cotton, alpaca, or mohair, or of any one or more of those materials mixed with each other, or mixed with any other material, whilst laid, placed, or exposed, during any stage, process, or progress of manufacture, in any building, field, or other place, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

The words, “during any stage, &c.,” would seem to avoid the difficulties which once arose as to the particular state or condition in which the goods were at the time of the theft.¹ In another case, yarn was left upon the ground unnecessarily, having previously been spread properly, and then thrown into heaps for the purpose of being carried into the house. Thomson, B., seemed to consider that the Act upon which the indictment was framed did not protect goods unless due care were taken of them during their manufacture.² As soon, however, as the goods become fit for sale, they lose this protection. But not until then; so that although the texture be completed, yet if the articles want something to be done to make them saleable, the statute still applies.³

Indictment.] The indictment states, that A. on, &c., in a certain building of B., situate, &c., feloniously did steal, &c.[the property stolen], of the value of 10s. and more, of the goods and chattels of the said B., the said goods and chattels then being laid, placed, and exposed in the said building, in a certain stage, process, and progress of manufacture.

¹ See 18 Geo. 2, c. 27. R. v. Dixon and others, Russ. & Ry. 53. The present general words seem to overcome the difficulty in R. v. Dixon, where it was held necessary to show that the building in question had been used for printing or drying calicoes.

² R. v. Hugill, 4 Com. 240, by Christian, (n. 13.)

³ R. v. Woodhead, 1 Moo. & Rob. 549.

CHAPTER XVII.

OF STEALING FROM SHIPS, DOCKS, &c., AND FROM WRECKS.

Larceny from ships, &c.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 63, whosoever shall steal any goods or merchandise in any vessel, barge, or boat of any description whatsoever in any haven, or in any port of entry or discharge, or upon any navigable river or canal, or in any creek¹ or basin belonging to or communicating with any such haven, port, river, or canal, or shall steal any goods or merchandise from any dock, wharf, or quay adjacent to any such haven, port, river, canal, creek, or basin, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

By sect. 64, whosoever shall plunder or steal any part of any ship or vessel which shall be in distress, or wrecked, stranded, or cast on shore, or any goods, merchandise, or articles of any kind belonging to such ship or vessel, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement; and the offender may be indicted and tried either in the county or place in which the offence shall have been committed, or in any county or place next adjoining.

By sect. 65, if any goods, merchandise, or articles of any kind belonging to any ship or vessel in distress, or wrecked, stranded, or cast on shore, shall be found in the possession of any person, or on the premises of any person with his knowledge, and such person, being taken or summoned before a justice, shall not satisfy the justice that he came lawfully by the same, then the same shall, by order of the justice, be forthwith delivered over to or for the use of the rightful owner thereof; and the offender shall, on conviction of such offence before the justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, for any term not exceeding six months, or else shall forfeit over and above the value of the goods, merchandise, or articles, a sum not exceeding 20*l*.

Lastly, by sect. 66, if any person shall offer or expose for sale any goods, merchandise, or articles whatsoever, which shall have been unlawfully taken, or shall be reasonably suspected so to have been taken, from any ship or vessel in distress, or wrecked, stranded, or cast on shore, in every such case any person to whom the same shall be offered for sale, or any officer of the customs or excise, or peace officer, may lawfully seize the same, and shall with all convenient speed carry the same, or give notice of such seizure, to some justice, and if the person who shall have offered or exposed the same for sale, being summoned by such justice, shall not appear and satisfy the justice that he came lawfully by such goods, merchandise, or articles, then the same shall, by order of the justice, be forthwith delivered over to or for the use of the rightful owner thereof, upon payment of a reasonable reward (to be ascertained by the justice) to the person who seized the same; and the offender shall, on conviction of such offence by the justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, for any term not exceeding six months, or else shall forfeit, over and above the value of the goods, merchandise, or articles, a sum not exceeding 20*l*.

¹ See R. v. Pike, Leach, 317; East, P. C. 647.

Where the master of a vessel was charged under the old statute with appropriating to his own use goods committed to his care, it was held, that even had the offence been larceny, it would not have been a theft upon a river under 24 Geo. 2, c. 45. There was no breaking bulk as by opening a package, and taking anything out of it.¹ Under the same Act it was held, that Portugal money not made current by proclamation, but commonly current, was not within its provisions.² The luggage of a steam-boat passenger has been considered to come within the clause of the repealed Act, 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29.³

Receiving ships' stores from seamen.] By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 26, every person who, within the metropolitan police district, shall knowingly take in exchange from any seaman or other person, not being the owner or master of any vessel, anything belonging to any vessel on the Thames, or in any of the adjacent docks or creeks, or any part of the cargo, or any stores or articles in charge of the owner or master, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Indictment under sect. 63.] This indictment states, that A. on, &c., feloniously did steal, take, and carry away [the goods] of the goods and merchandise of B., in a certain ship or vessel, upon a certain navigable river called —, then being, against the form, &c.

Wrecks, sect. 64.] This indictment states, that on, &c., a certain ship or vessel, the property of some person to the jurors aforesaid unknown, was stranded and cast on shore, and that A. afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, feloniously did plunder and steal, take, and carry away [the tackle, &c.], being part of the said ship or vessel, and certain goods [the goods], being goods and merchandise and articles belonging to the said ship or vessel so stranded,

¹ R. v. Madox, Russ. & Ry. 92. But now such a person would be guilty under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 3.

² R. v. Grimes, East, P. C. 647. R. v. Leigh, Leach, 52.

³ Sect. 17. R. v. Wright, 7 C. & P. 159.

&c., of the goods and chattels of some person to the jurors aforesaid unknown.

By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 479, if any person takes into any foreign port or place any ship stranded, derelict, or otherwise in distress, on or near the shore of the sea, or any tidal water situate within the limits of the United Kingdom, or any part of the cargo or apparel thereof, or anything belonging thereto, or any wreck found within such limits as aforesaid, and there sells the same, he shall be guilty of felony, and be subject to penal servitude for a term not exceeding four years.¹

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF LARCENY BY CLERKS AND SERVANTS.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 67, whosoever, being a clerk or servant, or being employed for the purpose or in the capacity of a clerk or servant, shall steal any chattel, money, or valuable security belonging to or in the possession or power of his master or employer, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.²

The words of the modern statutes are extensive, inasmuch as all such property as may be the subject of larceny, and which may be in the possession or power of the master, is placed under its provisions. Nevertheless, the possession of the servant was always, at common law, considered to be that of the master, and

¹ See 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99, ss. 6, 7. And "offences in respect of wreck," 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, ss. 477, 478. Supposing that a man, dog, or cat escape alive from a ship, in which case the ship cannot be adjudged a wreck, it is a misdemeanor not to deliver the goods to persons in the neighbouring town, so that the owner may have restoration of them if he sue within a year and a day. And by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 27, whosoever shall unlawfully cut, damage, or destroy any rope, cable, cordage, tackle, head-fasts, or other furniture belonging to any ship, boat, or vessel, lying in the river Thames, or in any of the docks or creeks adjacent thereto, with intent to steal or otherwise unlawfully obtain the same, or any part thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

² See, under the old law, R. v. Bass, Leach, 870. R. v. Watson, East, P. C. 562. R. v. Lavender, Id. 566. The statutes 39 Geo. 3, c. 85, and 3 Geo. 4, c. 38, were repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 101.

as soon as satisfactory proof had been given that the goods had reached that possession, the case for larceny was considered to have been made out. As where the servant was sent by his master with his barge to receive oats in bulk. As soon as the oats were delivered to the servant, he became forthwith invested with the same possession as the master, and having taken some of the property, he was held as much guilty of larceny as if he had stolen it from the granary.¹ So where the master had bought some corn, and sent his servant to bring it home, the like doctrine prevailed.² The master had a right to the exclusive possession of the corn as against all the world except the owner of the vessel.³ So where A. had agreed to buy straw of B. and sent his servant to fetch it, the servant put down the straw at A.'s stable door, and then, having asked for the key of the loft, deposited part of the straw there, and sold the remainder; this, if done feloniously, was held to be larceny, for the delivery to A. of the straw was complete when it was put down at the stable door.⁴ So where the prisoner receives a sum of money, in order to pay an account, and converts it to his own use, he seems to be guilty of larceny, for the possession of the master goes with the money until it is transferred to its destination.⁵ So it was where a clerk, instead of putting a bill of exchange into the post, appropriated it.⁶ So where the prisoner, being sent for some coals, which he was to bring to his master's house, sold some to a third person without licence, he was held rightly convicted of larceny. And Lord Campbell said, that *Spears's case*⁷ could not be distinguished.⁸ Again, the prisoner was in possession of some goods which he had assigned to trustees for his creditors. He removed the goods. The jury found him guilty of larceny, and that the goods were not in his custody as the agent of the trustees. The conviction was thereupon quashed, for the trustees were not his masters.⁹ The prisoner A. was indicted for embezzlement in his character of clerk and servant to the prosecutor. The prisoner B. was charged as accessory. A.'s business was to go about and take orders from customers, and enter them in the books, and he received the money for the goods, but he had no authority to meddle with the delivery of the goods. A customer ordered two articles of A., but A. entered one only in the order

¹ R. v. Spears, East, P. C. 586; Leach, 825. See 4 Taunt. 276, Heath, J.

² R. v. Abrahams, East, P. C. 569; Leach, 824.

³ East, P. C. 570.

⁴ R. v. Hayward, 1 Car. & K. 518.

⁵ R. v. Peck, 2 Russ. C. M. 180.

⁶ R. v. Paradise, East, P. C. 565.

⁷ Ante.

⁸ R. v. Reed, Dears. 257; 23

L. J. M. C. 25. This case was very fully argued, and at first there appeared to be a difference of opinion, but the case of Spears having been found in the Black Book, Parke, B., one of the dissenting judges, was satisfied, and although had it been res nova, he would have held otherwise, yet he held himself bound by that case. In Spears's case the master himself had purchased the cargo of corn.

⁹ R. v. Pratt, Dears. 360.

book, whilst B., the carman of the prosecutor, delivered both articles to the customer. The prosecutor made out the bill of parcels for the article entered, and B., the carman, made an entry of the other. The prisoner A. then received the money for both from the customer, but only accounted for one. This was held to be larceny, not embezzlement.¹ But as soon as the actual chattel departs from the possession, the case is altered, and thus where a 5*l.* note was sent by the hands of a servant for change, and the servant embezzled the change, he was held to have been improperly convicted of larceny.² The driver of a glass coach is not the servant of the hirer, and, therefore if he steal property in the coach, he is not guilty of the more serious offence, although of larceny.³ The prisoner was charged with stealing twenty stones weight of sharps from J. B. These were sold by the prisoner, the foreman of J. B., to a customer, who bought them as from the master, and paid for them. But the foreman concealed the whole transaction, and converted the money, without entering the sale in the books, or accounting for the receipt. In reality this was a valid sale as between the buyer and the master, for the prisoner had authority to sell, and did sell on his master's account. He was guilty of embezzlement, but not of stealing. The verdict having been "guilty of larceny," the conviction was quashed.⁴ So where in order to get a sum of 2*l.* from the master, the servant falsified the entries in the account book, he was held to have been wrongly convicted of larceny.⁵ Formerly, if the property appeared to be in the master's possession, the charge for embezzlement was at an end. If it was impossible to prove that the master ever had possession, the count for larceny could not be sustained, but now, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 72, the verdict may be either way.

¹ R. v. Wilson, 9 C. & P. 27 ; i. e., larceny of the goods, not of the money. See 1 Moo. C. C. 276.

² R. v. Sullen, 1 Moo. C. C. 129.

³ R. v. Haydon and another, 7 C. & P. 445.

⁴ R. v. Betts, 28 L. J. M. C. 69; Bell, 90. So was the case of buying and selling for employers, and then making a false entry, purporting that certain corn had cost more than it did, upon which the prisoner got the full money from the master, but retained the difference. Here the money, as between the prisoner and the corn salesman, was never in the master's possession. It might have been embezzlement. R. v. Lyon, 1 Fost. & F. 54.

⁵ R. v. Green, Dears. 323. R. v. Chapman was cited.

CHAPTER XIX.

OF EMBEZZLEMENT.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68, whosoever, being a clerk or servant, or being employed for the purpose or in the capacity of a clerk or servant, shall fraudulently embezzle any chattel, money, or valuable security, which shall be delivered to or received or taken into possession by him for or in the name or on the account of his master or employer, or any part thereof, shall be deemed to have feloniously stolen the same from his master or employer, although such chattel, money, or security was not received into the possession of such master or employer otherwise than by the actual possession of his clerk, servant, or other person so employed, and shall be liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.

Embezzlement is from imbecile (verb), to waste, to lessen a fortune privately by the misapplication of a trust. There seem to be three principal questions upon the subject:—First, as to the clerk, or servant, or other person. Second, as to the employment, or exact character under which the party acted at the time of the supposed offence. Third, as to the manner of the embezzlement. For there may be a dishonest receiver of money intrusted, and yet he may be neither clerk nor servant. There may be a clerk or servant and an illegal conversion of the goods, and yet the act may not be done by virtue of the employment. And, thirdly, although both clerk and servant, and acting in his proper place, the person, however faithless, may, upon some occasions, be legally guiltless of embezzlement. It was, beyond doubt, intended that the omission of the words, “by virtue of his employment,” in this Act, should abolish the need of showing the nature of the employment in its strict sense. Probably this view will be successful. But as the words “master or employer” have been used in the new statute, it seems hardly safe in the young state of the consolidated law to lay aside the “virtue of the employment” altogether. The words “master or employer” might be read “master and employer,” or, at all events, “employer,” borrowed from the Irish Act, might embarrass the case. And, under no circumstances, is it safe to omit cases and forms until the fresh law shall have acquired consistency. We have, therefore, unhesitatingly preserved the decisions under the repealed Acts, and also the form in the indictment, “by virtue,” &c. The former must shed some light upon the subject; the latter, if needless, is but surplusage.

Who a clerk or servant.] Clerk and servant are synonymous within the statute. Both are under the control of a master, and receive remuneration for their services. These principles of control and employment will materially help us in our inquiry. The prisoner was the schoolmaster of a day school, the funds of which were confided to a committee, who had their own collector of contributions. The treasurer being confined to his room, left a written direction for the prisoner to receive 15*l.*, being one of the subscriptions, and which the treasurer had used to call for in person. The prisoner, who was to have no remuneration for this, and was only thus employed in this particular instance, embezzled the subscription. The judges held that he did not stand in the relation of a servant, neither to the treasurer nor to the committee, and that his conviction was wrong.¹ Indeed, he might have refused to obey either the request of the treasurer, or of the committee.² A person was sworn in, at a court leet, as chamberlain of certain common lands. He had no remuneration, but his duty was to collect the money due from the commoners, to account for it to two aldermen, and hand over the balance to his successor. It appeared to Bayley, B., that a verbal imputation of fraudulent embezzlement against such a person would not be actionable, the situation being without emolument, and not known to the law as a public office.³ Again, the prisoner was clerk of a chapelry, and he collected the sacrament money as part of his employment. Upon one occasion he purloined two half-crowns, and the question was, whether he could be convicted of embezzlement. The property embezzled was laid in the perpetual curate, in the churchwardens, and in the poor. The judges recommended a pardon, for it had been objected at the trial that the prisoner was not the servant of any one of these persons.⁴ So it was where a labourer and roundsman absconded with the cash which he had received in payment of a cheque given him by a person who had no control over him as master at the time of the offence.⁵ And in the case of a collector of debts without remuneration, who was awaiting a promise from the prosecutor, his late master, to set him up in Australia. The service was at an end.⁶ And an assistant overseer under 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 7, was held not to be a clerk or servant.⁷

The prosecutors were manure manufacturers. The prisoner was employed to get orders for them, and supply the manure. The prisoner was to collect and pay money at once; he was to send weekly accounts, and to be paid by commission. He kept a refreshment room at B., and in this matter of the manure he was called agent for B. district. The stores were subsequently placed under the prisoner's control, and he supplied the customers. At length, a guarantee society insured the prosecutors as to their connection with the prisoner. The latter signed the printed form, which stated the salary to be 1*l.* a year, besides commissions estimated at 6*l.* The prisoner got into arrear, and was considered a debtor of the prosecutors. He, however, was charged with fraudulently returning the names of three persons as having had the manure without paying for it; in fact, he had received the sums due. The court held that the prisoner and the prosecutors stood in the light of principal and agent, and that he was not their servant.⁸

¹ R. v. Nettleton, 1 Moo. C. C. 259.

² Id. 262, by the recorder.

³ Williams v. Stott, 1 Cr. & M. 675. See also a case cited there by Bolland, B.

⁴ R. v. Burton, 1 Moo. C. C. 237.

⁵ R. v. Freeman, 5 C. & P. 534.

⁶ R. v. Hoare, 1 Fost. & F. 647.

⁷ R. v. Sampson, 1 Cox, 355.

⁸ R. v. Walker, Dears. & B. 600; 27 L. J. M. C. 207.

So it was, again, where the prisoner made an assignment of his book debts, and the trustees gave him a salary, upon which he collected debts. He received two sums, but did not account for them. He was considered not to be clerk nor servant, and it was also held that debts, being choses in action, could not be legally assigned, and, therefore, that he had only received his own at law, though not in equity.¹ Again, the prisoner was employed to obtain orders for the sale of iron, and to have a commission, and account for any money he might receive. He received money and appropriated it, but it was not expressly found that it was his duty to receive money. The conviction was quashed.² But where a commercial traveller was at liberty to obtain orders for others besides the prosecutor, he was not the less a servant to the latter.³ On the contrary, where the principles of control and emolument are admitted, or control and benefit, the character of clerk or servant attaches. For if a servant had no wages, he would, probably, be gratified by some advantage or equivalent, and, at all events, the control would exist. The captain of a coal barge was allowed two-thirds of the price at which he sold the coals above the charge made at the colliery. He embezzled the money intrusted to him, and was considered to be rightly convicted as the servant.⁴ The prisoner was a traveller for orders and a collector of debts, receiving a commission upon the whole account, a deduction being proportionably made for bad debts. The profit, therefore, depended on payment by the customer. The prisoner did not live with his employers, nor act in their counting-houses. The judges held, that he was a clerk within the statute, being under the control of the respective employers.⁵ So an accountant employed by the owners of a township as their treasurer and money clerk, who made all the payments, and took all the receipts, was deemed to be a servant.⁶ And again, the clerk of a savings bank,⁷ a collector of poor rates,⁸ an extra collector of poor rates,⁹ a servant to a board of guardians, although no time was fixed for the payment of his balances,¹⁰ a solicitor, land agent, and manager of assessments and rating for the Eastern Counties Railway,¹¹ the secretary of a friendly

¹ R. v. Barnes, 8 Cox, 129.

² R. v. May, 30 L. J. M. C. 81; Leigh & Cave, 13.

³ R. v. Tite, 8 Cox, 458. R. v. May was relied on. Leigh & Cave, 29; 30 L. J. M. C. 141.

⁴ R. v. Hartley, Russ. & Ry. 129. To the same effect R. v. Holme, 2 Lew. 256. Anon. Id.

⁵ R. v. Carr, Russ. & Ry. 198. See, concerning this case, 8 C. & P. 667, note (a); see post, R. v. Walker.

⁶ R. v. Squire, Russ. & Ry. 349; 2 Stark. N. P. C. 349.

⁷ R. v. Jenson, 1 Moo. C. C. 434.

⁸ R. v. Townsend, Den. 167; 2 Car. & K. 168.

⁹ R. v. Ward, Gow. 168.

¹⁰ R. v. Welch, Den. 199; 2 Car. & K. 296. The prisoner's admission on his bond, and the Act which specified his duties, were held sufficient evidence of his appointment.

¹¹ R. v. Gibson, 8 Cox, 436.

society, although a member also.¹ It is not a good objection that the society had not been conducted conformably to the statute, provided it be ostensibly a friendly society. As where the articles were not enrolled.² In one case, it appeared that the rules and orders of the society were not kept in a book as the statute requires, but this was held to make no difference.³ Again, a defence that the servant of a corporation had not been duly appointed was held insufficient, i.e., not under the common seal.⁴ The prisoner being elected clerk by the managers of a savings bank, could not object that he could not be the clerk of the trustees.⁵ Nor a collector of poor rates described in the indictment as a servant to the committee of management of the parish of St. Paul's, that he was elected by the vestrymen.⁶ However, if the assistant overseer be the servant, not of the overseers, but of the guardians, and he receives the money from the overseers and embezzles it, he does not come within the Act. The money is that of the overseers, not of the guardians, nor received for them, nor on their account. The prisoner did not account to the guardians, and he was only liable on his bond for the balance.⁷ So where the trustees of a friendly society appointed the prisoner to receive money on their behalf, which he appropriated, he should have been indicted as the bailee of the trustees, and not of the treasurer, for the property was vested in the trustees.⁸ So in the case of a collector, who could only be dismissed by the poor-law commissioners. The bond only opens a civil liability.⁹ The prisoner was tried for embezzling, as servant, 6*l.*, the property of his master, the agent of the Great Northern Railway Company. The prisoner's duty was to receive parcels from a clerk, to deliver them, and collect the money for carriage, according to a book furnished by the clerk, and to account to the clerk. The prisoner having collected some monies for carriage, gave receipts in the name of the company, but neither ¹ R. v. Hall, 1 Moo. C. C. 474. But Maule, J., seems to have held the contrary, saying, that a man could not embezzle his own money. R. v. Taff, 4 Cox, 169. And Coleridge, J., had held the same. R. v. Waite, 2 Cox, 245. However, R. v. Hall was subsequently recognized as law by Patteson, J., although this particular point was not presented to his notice. R. v. Woolley, 4 Cox, 255. And a part owner, although clerk to the trustees, was held entitled to be discharged, when he embezzled the funds, upon the pretence that he could make more of the money elsewhere. 2 Cox, 245, supra.

² R. v. Hall, ut supra.

³ R. v. Miller, 2 Moo. C. C. 249.

⁴ R. v. Beacall, 1 Moo. C. C. 15; 1 C. & P. 457. R. v. Wellings, Id. 454.

⁵ R. v. Jenson, supra.

⁶ R. v. Callahan, 8 C. & P. 154.

⁷ R. v. Adey, 19 L. J. M. C. 149; Den. 571; 3 Car. & K. 339. In this case the collector was employed for two overseers, but there were two churchwardens as well, who were not named in the indictment. It was objected, but in vain, that the landlord, whose name was not on the rate book, paid the rate for the tenant, nor was it necessary to lay the monies in the churchwardens and overseers jointly.

⁸ R. v. Loose, 29 L. J. M. C. 132; Bell, 259.

⁹ R. v. Truman, 2 Cox, 306.

accounted to the clerk, nor to his master, but appropriated the sums received. It was objected, that although he was the agent's servant, he did not receive the money on account of his master, but in the name of the company. The court, however, were clear to the contrary, thinking that this money was received on the master's account.¹ Although the statute 21 Hen. 8, c. 7, did not apply to apprentices nor to servants under eighteen,² it was held that the statute 39 Geo. 3, c. 85 (and the present Act follows that Act) had no such limitation, so that an apprentice under eighteen came within its provisions.³ A coachman was employed by one proprietor of a firm to drive part of a journey. The money received was to be handed over to the proprietor. The prisoner embezzled certain monies, and it was objected, that these monies were received for the use of all the partners, and that the prisoner was the servant of all. But Patteson, J., thought that as between the prisoner and the proprietor the monies were received to the use of the latter, and that he was servant of that person. It was also objected, that there was no embezzlement, because the debt appeared against the prisoner in the books, at the end of the journey, and on the way-bill. But the judge thought that as the entries were made by the book-keeper, and not by the prisoner, it made no difference.⁴ A journeyman miller was within the Act.⁵ All the judges agreed that a female servant was not excepted.⁶ A clerk in a public office is punishable under special statutes, but he is not within the ordinary section respecting embezzlement.⁷ A society which administered unlawful oaths was not within the protection of the Act. The embezzlement of their joint property is not a statutable offence. Upon such an occasion R. v. Hall was cited, but the facts were considered to be quite different.⁸

By virtue of the employment.] Secondly, although the party may be under due control, and reap a profit, so as to make him a servant, he may not have acted by virtue of his employment. It was urged for a clerk, whose business it was to receive money at home every evening from porters, but who went upon one occasion directly to the customers, and embezzled the receipts, that he was not within the Act, but the judges connected the employment at home with the customers, otherwise the prisoner would have taken advantage of his own wrong.⁹ So, where the servant received money from regular customers, his master never having authorized

¹ R. v. Thorpe, 27 L. J. M. C. 264; Dears. & B. 562.

² 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 12.

³ R. v. Mellish, Russ. & Ry. 80.

⁴ R. v. White, 2 Moo. C. C. 91; 8 C. & P. 742.

⁵ R. v. Barker, 1 Dowl. & Ry. N. P. C. 19.

⁶ R. v. Smith, Russ. & Ry. 267. Where it was apparently held, that if a master gives a servant money to pay rates, &c., she is not guilty of embezzlement if she retains it; and so was R. v. Peck, 2 Russ. C. M. 180. But these cases may be simple larceny.

⁷ R. v. Lovell, 2 Moo. & Rob. 236.

⁸ R. v. Hunt, 8 C. & P. 642.

⁹ R. v. Beechey, Russ. & Ry. 319.

him to do so, yet because he was a servant in employment at the place, his conviction was held good.¹ It has been attempted, however, with more show of success to impeach the terms, "by virtue of his employment," where the prisoner received monies in one single instance only. A toll-gate keeper, whose business was usually confined to the collection of tolls, was employed by his master to receive a sum of money due to him from another toll-gate keeper. He embezzled this money, and three learned judges² deemed the matter to be so far out of his employment as not to place him within the statute. But five others³ held, that as the turnpike man had submitted in his character of servant to the employment pointed out to him, the conviction was right.⁴ Nevertheless, Parke, B., said subsequently, that he had never approved of the decision in R. v. Smith, and upon a similar occasion he directed an acquittal.⁵ And when the prisoner was ordered to take 30s. but not less than 20s. for leading a stallion to cover, and took 6s. for one covering, but did not account for it, Park and Littledale, JJ., held that this was not a receiving by virtue of the employment.⁶ So, where a miller who had the care of the Worcestershire gaol mill, ground the corn of strangers, and took the earnings, it was not by virtue of his employment as miller of the gaol. In this particular transaction he had no master; he intended no doubt to make an improper use of the machine, but he was not guilty of embezzlement.⁷ So, a person occasionally employed in the absence of the governor of a gaol, to receive money, does not act by virtue of his employment, it being no part of his regular duty to receive money. In such a case the prisoner might, however, have had an independent employment by the justices, but the chairman failed to ask the jury this question, which, if answered in the affirmative, would have led to another question, whether he had received the money by virtue of that employment.⁸ A person usually employed as a letter carrier was sent from an office where post-office orders were not granted, with some money and envelopes, to procure post-office orders and envelopes in exchange from the next town. To say nothing of the fact that the animus furandi was found to have arisen after the conversion of the money and papers, the prisoner was deemed to have received them as a bailee, and not by virtue of his employment.⁹ It was the duty of a drayman, not usually so employed, to sell porter, at 9s. 6d. a dozen. He sold some at 6s. He did not, however, at first receive the money. The customer told the prisoner's employer of the delivery, and the latter requested the customer to pay the dray-

¹ R. v. Williams, 6 C. & P. 626.

² Abbott, C. J.; Holroyd, J.; Garrow, B.

³ Park, Best, Burrough, Bayley, JJ. and Hullock, B.

⁴ R. v. Smith, Russ. & Ry. 516; 1 Lew. C. C. 86.

⁵ R. v. Crow, 1 Lew. C. C. 88.

⁶ R. v. Snowley, 4 C. & P. 390.

⁷ R. v. Harris, 23 L. J. M. C. 110; Dears. 344.

⁸ R. v. Arman, 1 Jur. 1115, probably the same case as R. v. Ornan, post.

⁹ R. v. Glaspe, 2 Cox, 236.

man, who then received, but failed to account for the money. This was held to be embezzlement, and the decision in R. v. Snowley was doubted.¹ The distinction, if any, seems to consist in occasional or single employment, for where the employment is quite independent, there seems to be no doubt. Thus, the prisoner was an occasional servant, and, although employed upon the particular occasion in one instance only, was yet liable to be called upon in various ways. A. agreed to carry parcels and messages when out of employ, being paid at discretion, and he embezzled 2*l*. The judges held the conviction right. The principle of servitude was present.² So, where a collector of notes was paid by commission.³ So, where a butty collier was allowed to sell coals for his employer, and received a poundage when he paid over the money which it was his duty to account for. The sale of the coal, not being compulsory, made no difference.⁴ So where the prisoner received as a club secretary a note indorsed to him under the authority of the club, and sued upon it and recovered, but appropriated the money, he was held rightly convicted, although that was the only occasion in which he had been so employed.⁵ So, an occasional drover, who embezzled the money arising from the sale of cattle, was held rightly convicted.⁶ And the servant of a market gardener employed to do a day's work.⁷ So, where a person was employed in two capacities, as a railway clerk and also to sell coals and lime separately for B., for which he received 10*s*. a week extra, and likewise to sell coals for C., he was held rightly convicted for embezzling B.'s money.⁸

A storekeeper of a gaol had certain duties assigned to him, but the receipt of money was not one. Nevertheless, he received

¹ R. v. Aston, 2 Cox, 234; 2 Car. & K. 413.

² R. v. Spencer, Russ. & Ry. 299.

³ R. v. Hughes, 2 Cox, 104.

⁴ R. v. Thomas, 6 Cox, 403.

⁵ R. v. Tongue, 30 L. J. M. C. 49. The cases of Spencer and Hughes were cited. Bell, 289.

⁶ R. v. Hughes, 1 Moo. C. C. 370. R. v. Jones, 2 Russ. C. M. 174, a case of selling bark. The prisoner had never been employed to receive money before, but he had often been employed by the prosecutor. Littledale, J., distinguished this case from R. v. Nettleton, because there the prisoner was not a servant at all. See R. v. Wellings, 1 C. & P. 315, 454. In this case it occurred to the recorder (Mr. Knowlys) that R. v. Nettleton was in the prisoner's favour, because the drover had no extra reward for receiving the money beyond his charge for driving and delivering the cattle. It is, however, to be observed, that the schoolmaster in R. v. Nettleton had never been before employed in any matter connected with money, and that he was invited to do so upon that single occasion only, whereas the drover had been occasionally employed to deliver cattle, an employment easily connected with his receipts of the proceeds for them, and in this instance he had submitted to a control which would raise the relation of master and servant,—a circumstance not applicable to the schoolmaster's case.

⁷ R. v. Winnall, 5 Cox, 316.

⁸ R. v. Batty, 2 Moo. C. C. 257.

money in the absence of the governor, to the knowledge of the justices. He was held to be guilty of embezzlement by virtue of his office.¹ The prisoner was charged with embezzlement under the Constables' Act, 2 & 3 Vict. c. 93. It was the duty of the constable to pay weekly to the superintendent all monies received by him. The superintendent sent to the constable an account, for the superintendent paid weekly wages to the constable, and one amount was set off against the other. On one occasion the constable accounted for 2*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*, but the superintendent omitted it in the account, and denied its receipt. Patteson, J., said, that there was a constructive receipt of this sum, so as to amount to embezzlement; and it was also held, that the superintendent was the clerk or servant of the chief constable, the money received being on his account, and that he was not the clerk or servant of the treasurer of the liberty.² Of course, if there be no authority to sell, the prosecution fails. An apprentice was employed to go daily for orders, but he had never been authorized to receive money; his conviction was held wrong, for he could not be said to have acted by virtue of his employment.³ So where a debtor paid the creditor's servant a sum of money by mistake, supposing that the latter had authority to receive it, it was held, that there could not be a conviction, neither for embezzlement nor for larceny.⁴ This is, probably, the same case as that reported by Moody under a different name, where the prisoner was standing at a desk with some books near him, upon which the debtor paid him 8*l.* 4*s.* 10*d.*, and the prisoner then gave him a receipt in his own name, and the judges held the conviction wrong.⁵ If there be a privity between the prosecutor and the persons ultimately entitled to the money, such money would be received on behalf of those persons, and the count would be wrong in calling the money that of the prosecutor. Thus, the prosecutor was a contractor for the delivery of coals. The prisoner was his carman. The Great Northern Railway Company was entitled to the proceeds of the coals. The money embezzled was laid in the contractor, but the conviction was held wrong.⁶ The Great Western and three other railway companies have a common station at Chester. A station committee have the management, composed of directors of each company. The committee superintend all the servants at the station, and the delivery clerks. The prisoner, a delivery clerk, delivered a parcel, and received 5*s.*, but altered the figure to 3, and accounted for 3*s.*, keeping back 2*s.* It was held, that he might be described as the servant of the four companies, or of the committee, and the conviction was held right.⁷

¹ R. v. Ornan, 1 Jur. (N. S.), 1115.

² R. v. Baxter, 5 Cox, 302.

³ R. v. Mellish, Russ. & Ry. 80.
R. v. Crawley, 7 C. & P. 281.
Cited by Alderson, B.

⁴ R. v. Hawkins, 7 C. & P. 281.

⁵ R. v. Thorley, 1 Moo. C. C. 343. See Id. 21.

⁶ R. v. Beaumont, Dears. 270; 23 L. J. M. C. 54.

⁷ R. v. Bayley, Dears. & B. 121; 26 L. J. M. C. 4.

What embezzlement shall be said to be.] Thirdly, the dishonest servant may be engaged in his employment, and yet be not guilty of embezzlement. However, it should be premised, that an attempt to try the honesty of the servant by sending purchasers to him with marked money, will not vary the character of the prisoner's act. This principle was affirmed upon a trial for larceny. The money had been embezzled, but never having been put into the till, it did not come into the master's possession, so that the indictment for larceny failed.¹ R. v. Hedge was sustained by the more recent decision in R. v. Gill. The prosecutor gave to a third person a piece of marked money to pay over to his servant, who embezzled it, and the conviction for embezzlement was held proper.² But if the property be actually or constructively in the possession of the master, the case will not be within the statute. As, where one clerk gave some money to another clerk, for the purpose of inserting an advertisement in the Gazette, but the latter fraudulently kept back 10s., it was held, that the master had had the possession of the money by the hands of the other clerk, and that the conviction was wrong.³ But the prisoner might have been indicted for larceny.⁴ So that where a clerk abstracted a cheque with an unlawful intent from its place of deposit amongst the paid cheques, it was held, that as the paid cheque was the property of the master, it had been taken out of his possession, and the conviction for stealing a piece of paper belonging to his employer was right.⁵ In these cases the servant was in the exercise of his employment, and yet not guilty of embezzlement. This question of possession has a natural influence upon decisions. The master sent a servant with a note to get changed, and the servant embezzled the change. Here the offence was embezzlement, for the master never had possession, and the conviction for larceny was held wrong.⁶ So, where a banker's clerk embezzled money and notes at the shop's counter, before he placed them in the till, he was considered to be guilty of embezzlement.⁷ So where a clerk received money on account of his master from another clerk, in due course of business, his offence in appropriating it was embezzlement, and *R. v. Murray*⁸ was considered to be clearly distinguishable, inasmuch as there the master had had possession of the money. Here the money never reached the master, it was ¹ R. v. Bull, cited, Leach, 841. And R. v. Waite, Id. 28, was relied on. S. P. R. v. Hedge, Russ. & Ry. 160, decided upon the strength of R. v. Bull, Leach, 1033. The charge was for embezzlement, and the conviction was held right. S. P. R. v. Whittingham, Leach, 912.

² R. v. Gill, Dears. 289; 23 L. J. M. C. 50.

³ R. v. Murray, 5 C. & P. 145.

⁴ See R. v. Smith, Russ. & Ry.

267, where the indictment ought, as it should seem, to have been for larceny, had it been possible to have supported any charge. See also R. v. Savage, 5 C. & P. 143. R. v. Wilson, 8 C. & P. 27.

⁵ R. v. Watts, 19 L. J. M. C. 192; Den. & P. 14. He was convicted as a servant.

⁶ R. v. Sullen, 1 Moo. C. C. 129.

⁷ R. v. Bazeley, Leach, 835.

⁸ 5 C. & P. 145. Supra.

stopped in its way to him.¹ So, again, where a servant was intrusted by his master with a quantity of clothes, and 10*l.* in silver, to enable him to give change to customers, with which he absconded, it was held, that he had committed larceny, and that the conviction for embezzlement was wrong, for the goods were received direct from the master, and were in his possession.² It was the duty of the prisoner to receive remittances from customers to a journal. He entered them in a cash book, and entered the whole on the credit side of a banker's deposit account. He was also to pay the amount into the banker's. Then it was his duty to post the respective accounts in a ledger. He received a remittance and appropriated it. He made an entry of this remittance in the ledger to the debit of the customer, but made no other entry of its receipt. It was contended, that the entry in the ledger saved him. But the conviction was held right by the court of appeal, and if he had entered the receipt in all the books, with intent to deceive, it would, probably, have made no difference.³

It is no objection that the prisoner is to receive a proportion of the price for making certain articles, as a recompense for his labour.⁴ Nor, that the prisoner happens to have paid over every identical piece of money which he received at the time of the embezzlement, if he contrives to lend the money thus taken, with other money received during the day. As where he received 18*l.*, and made a false entry of 12*l.* In the course of the day he received 10*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* more; in the evening he paid to his employer 11*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.* So that, in reality, he might have paid over the 6*l.* of deficiency which he had created in the morning of his false entry in the identical bank notes. Bayley, J., held, that having represented to his master that he had only received 12*l.* at first, and thus had led the master to suppose that the subsequent monies had been received from other customers, he was guilty of embezzlement; and when the question was stated for the opinion of the judges, Bayley, J., added this question:—Suppose, instead of paying over the six notes to Messrs. H. & Co. (his employers), as for money received from other customers, he had paid it to them for a debt he owed them, would it not have been an embezzlement?⁵ The conviction was held right, the offence being complete

¹ R. v. Master, cor. M. D. Hill, Recorder of Birmingham, Den. C. C. 332; 18 L. J. M. C. 2; 2 Car. & K. 930. See R. v. Hawkins, Den. C. C. 584.

² R. v. Hawkins, Den. ut sup.; 4 Cox, 224. For the conviction a dictum in R. v. Whittingham, Leach, 912, was referred to. If the servant receives the money either from the master, or from a third person, on his master's account, it is sufficient. But Wilde, C. J., said, that this dictum must have been associated with some facts which did not appear in the report of the case. Den. C. C. 588.

³ R. v. Lister, Dears. & B. 118.

⁴ R. v. Hoggins, Russ. & Ry. 145.

⁵ If a person owes a master 5*l.* and the clerk sets against it a sum of 1*l.* 4*s.* due from himself to the person, and receives the balance, and debits himself in the master's books with the balance only, whether embezzlement? 7 C. & P. 833.

when the false entry was made.¹ Setting aside the point of the identical notes, the case of embezzlement was clear.²

The next point is, whether it is necessary to show the embezzlement of a specific sum. There was a general deficiency of monies, and the prisoner threw himself upon the mercy of his employer. The question raised was, whether proof should not have been given of a defalcation of a specific sum. Eight judges³ were of opinion that the indictment for embezzlement could not be supported under such circumstances.⁴ Seven held the contrary opinion.⁵ Nevertheless, Alderson, B., one of the dissenting judges in Grove's case, declared that that case must be taken with reference to its peculiar facts, and he required proof of a specific sum;⁶ and Williams, J. (one of the majority), required such proof under the following circumstances:—A clerk was to receive money for his employer, and to pay wages out of it; he was to enter all receipts and payments in a book, and the weekly total of receipts and payments were to be entered in another book; the balances paid to his employer were paid according to the balances stated in this second book. The clerk made entries of weekly payments in the first book, amounting to 25*l.*, but in the second, he entered the sum as 35*l.*; the balance being 10*l.*, he paid over to his employer a sum short that deduction. Here the embezzlement of a particular sum was required in proof, and proof also that the prisoner had converted the whole or part of it to his own use.⁷ The prisoner was employed by a banking company to conduct a branch bank; in the office was an iron safe, provided by the bank, and it was the prisoner's duty to put money, not wanted in the day, into the safe. The manager kept one key, and the prisoner another, and weekly accounts were rendered. There was some neglect in examining these accounts after the lapse of a few years, and at length the prisoner handed over the manager 755*l.* 10*s.* out of 3,000*l.*, and he took the money from a drawer in the counter, and not from the safe. He then admitted before the magistrates that he had taken the money found deficient.

¹ R. v. Hall, Russ. & Ry. Bosanquet, Williams, JJ.; Vaughan, 463. Wood, B., dub., Abbott, C. J., Gurney, BB.

diss. Because the point as to the identical notes had not been left to the jury. 3 Stark. N. P. C. 67. R. v. Tyers, acc., as to this point, Russ. & Ry. 402. In this case of R. v. Hall, a receipt from the debtor upon unstamped paper was tendered in evidence, but Bayley, J., rejected it, and other evidence was then resorted to. 3 Stark. 68.

² R. v. Patinson, Leach, 850, n. ³ Lord Denman, C. J.; Tindal, C. J.; Lord Abinger, C. B.; Park, 119; 1 Cox, 47. See R. v. Green, ante.

⁴ R. v. Grove, 1 Moo. C. C. 447. Williams, J., tried the case. See also R. v. Lloyd Jones, 8 C. & P. 288; 2 Russ. C. M. 184; and R. v. Moah, 7 Cox, 60.

⁵ Littledale, Gaselee, Patteson, Coleridge, JJ.; Parke, Bolland, Alderson, BB. ⁶ R. v. Fry, Dears. 449; 27 L. J. M. C. 68. S. P. R. v. Lambert, 2 Cox, 309.

⁷ R. v. Chapman, 1 Car. & K. 119; 1 Cox, 47. See R. v. Green, ante.

The jury, under the direction of Crompton, J., found the prisoner guilty of larceny (the indictment was for embezzlement), as a clerk, in having stolen some money received from customers, which before such stealing had been made the subject of a weekly account. It was held, that the evidence was sufficient, and that the finding of a theft of some money was likewise certain enough, and that it was not necessary to prove that any specific amount was stolen on any particular day.¹

There is another principle in embezzlement. There must be some concealment or omission by the prisoner. A wilful omission is equivalent to a denial of the receipt of the money. If the clerk's book does not show the entry of the receipt, a denial of the receipt will be important, otherwise something of a nature likely to connect the prisoner with the dishonesty charged against him should be brought forward.² It made no difference that the denial took place at a time not usually fixed for the settlement of accounts, as where the prisoner's denial was on the 4th of October in respect of a valuation made at Michaelmas.³ A servant was accustomed to account every evening to his employer for money received during the day, and to pay over the amount. On three several days he received three several sums, but neither accounted for them, nor paid them over. On the other hand, he did not deny having received them, nor did he offer any written account in which they were omitted. It was held that the wilful neglect to account and pay over these sums was embezzlement, and equal to a denial of the receipt of them.⁴ As soon as the prisoner admits the receipt of the monies, he becomes entitled to an acquittal for embezzlement. Mere omission is not embezzlement.⁵ The collector of a water company intrusted the turncock with certain receipts, subsequently he asked the turncock if he had received the money; the turncock said he had, and that he would pay it over on Monday. Instead of doing so, he absconded. This was not embezzlement. Had the turncock given an account, and omitted the receipt, he would have been guilty of the offence,⁶ for that would have been a wilful, not a mere omission. It makes no difference that the prisoner pretends to have a right to the money, or sets up a frivolous excuse, if he admits the receipt, or even the appropriation.⁷ The prisoner, a clerk, was charged with embezzlement; he had received sums of money at different times to buy skins; he got the skins, but appropriated the money, but he debited the prosecutor in his day cash book with several sums as having been paid for the skins. The verdict was "not guilty of embezzlement, but guilty of larceny," and the conviction was held

¹ R. v. Wright, Dears. & B. 431; 27 L. J. M. C. 65.

² R. v. Jones, 7 C. & P. 833.

³ R. v. Wortley, Den. & P. 333; 21 L. J. M. C. 44.

⁴ R. v. Jackson, 1 Car. & K. 384.

⁵ R. v. Hodgson, 3 C. & P. 422.

⁶ R. v. Creed, 1 Car. & K. 63.

⁷ R. v. Norman, Car. & M. 501. In R. v. White, ante, the entries were made not by the prisoner, but by the book-keeper.

wrong.¹ A letter carrier charged treble, instead of double postage. Upon being called upon to account for the overcharge, he refused to do so, and it was held, that the person to whom the letter had been thus charged was enabled to demand the difference, and that the neglect of the postman was evidence of embezzlement.² Where there was a written instrument, Patteson, J., refused to admit parole evidence of the employment, and said, that there were two or three unreported cases tried at Warwick, before Coleridge, J., to the same effect.³ However, if the money were appropriated, and the receipts obtained on the faith of previous payment, as in the case of an assistant overseer, no subsequent debit to the prosecutor's account will absolve the prisoner from the original fraud.⁴

Indictment.] The indictment for embezzlement usually states that A., on, &c., was clerk or servant to B., and that A., by virtue of his employment as such clerk or servant, and whilst he was so employed, received for and on account of his master the property in question, and that A. on, &c., fraudulently and feloniously did embezzle the same, and so did feloniously steal the property. With reference to the mode of stating the day, it has been held, that the words "on the same day, and in the year aforesaid," might be rejected. The indictment charged, that A. on, &c., being the servant of B., on the same day and year aforesaid, one gold ring, &c. feloniously did steal. Here it sufficiently appeared that A. was servant of B. at the time of the larceny, and consequently, that the conviction was right.⁵ With regard to the word "feloniously," it may be observed, that where the indictment stated that the prisoner did fraudulently embezzle, and so did feloniously steal, the judges held the conviction right, although the felonious embezzling had not been stated in direct terms.⁶ It is necessary to state the name of the person who has been defrauded, or whose property the thing embezzled was,⁷ although it seems that the name of the party from whom the subject matter of the indictment was received need not be mentioned.⁸ In charging a prisoner it has been deemed sufficient to call him clerk to the trustees of a savings bank, although the managers had elected him.⁹ Again, clerk and servant to the trustees of a friendly society, although there had been no enrolment of the rules.¹⁰ In

¹ R. v. Goodenough, Dears. 210. See R. v. Gorbett, post.

² R. v. Borrett, 6 C. & P. 124.

³ R. v. Clapton, 3 Cox, 126, 134.

⁴ R. v. Guelder, 30 L. J. M. C. 34; Bell, 284. With respect to pilloined or embezzled materials, under 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 10, which was made a misdemeanor, but not an indictable misdemeanor, &c, see R. v. Edmundson, 28 L. J. M. C. 213. Part of this statute is repealed, but not sect. 10.

⁵ R. v. Somerton, 7 B. & C. 463.

⁶ R. v. Crighton, Russ. & Ry. 62.

⁷ R. v. Sherrington and Bulkeley, Leach, 513. R. v. M'Gregor, Russ. & Ry. 23; Leach, 932; 3 Bos. & P. 106.

⁸ R. v. Beacall, 1 Moo. C. C. 15.

⁹ R. v. Jenson, 1 Moo. C. C. 434.

¹⁰ R. v. Hall, 1 Moo. C. C. 474.

charging the shareholder of a joint-stock banking company, he may be described as the clerk of one J. T., one of the public officers of the C. and L. banking company.¹ Where a traveller is employed by several houses to receive money, he may be described as the individual servant of each.² And if the private money of one partner be embezzled by one who is the servant of both, it is no objection to say that the prisoner should have been described as the joint instead of the separate servant.³ It was never considered necessary to set out the particulars of each note embezzled, as one bank note of the value of 1*l.*, &c. Therefore, the general description, "nine bank notes for the payment of divers sums of money, amounting in the whole to a certain sum of money, to wit, the sum of 9*l.*,"⁴ &c., was deemed sufficient.

But now by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 71, for preventing difficulties in the prosecution of offenders in any case of embezzlement, fraudulent application or disposition, it shall be lawful to charge in the indictment and proceed against the offender for any number of distinct acts of embezzlement, or of fraudulent application or disposition, not exceeding three, which may have been committed by him against Her Majesty, or against the same master or employer, within the space of six months from the first to the last of such acts; and in every such indictment where the offence shall relate to any money or any valuable security, it shall be sufficient to allege the embezzlement, or fraudulent application or disposition, to be of money, without specifying any particular coin or valuable security;⁵ and such allegation, so far as regards the description of the property, shall be sustained if the offender shall be proved to have embezzled or fraudulently applied or disposed of any amount,⁶ although the particular species of coin or valuable security of which such amount was composed shall not be proved; or if he shall be proved to have embezzled or fraudulently applied or disposed of any piece of coin or any valuable security, or any portion of the value thereof, although such piece of coin or valuable security may have been delivered to him in order that some part of the value thereof should be returned to the party delivering the same, or to some other person, and such part shall have been returned accordingly. It is not sufficient to state that monies have been received within six months, unless it be also stated that they were embezzled within six months. In an indictment for embezzlement there were three counts; in the second and third the allegation above mentioned was omitted. There was a general allegation of embezzlement on the day and year afore-

¹ R. v. Atkinson, 2 Moo. C. C. 278. By five judges against four. See 1 & 2 Vict. c. 85; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 111. See also R. v. Townsend, ante, pp. 487, 488.

² R. v. Adey, ante, 3 Stark. N. P. C. 71; Bayley, J.

³ R. v. Leech, Id. 70.

⁴ R. v. Johnson, 3 M. & S. 539; Leach, 1003.

⁵ R. v. Furneaux, Russ. & Ry. 335. R. v. Tyers, Id. 402. R. v. Hall, Id. 463.

⁶ R. v. Carson, Russ. & Ry. 303.

said, but Cresswell, J., said, that this expression was not certain to a common intent as to the day. For the time in the second count might be within six months before the day in the first count, and the time in the third count might be six months after that day, so as to cover twelve months, which is not allowed by the statute. The prosecutor was confined to the first count, which contained both allegations, and a verdict of guilty was returned.¹ The first count against a prisoner charged him with embezzling the property of A., the second, of B. It was held, that the words connecting the first with the second count should be rejected as surplusage, so as to leave the second count independent, for the statute requires that the embezzlement should be of money belonging to the same master.² And where three sums were severally alleged to have been embezzled, Williams, J., allowed evidence of the embezzlement of sums not mentioned in the indictment, so that a defence founded upon mistakes in book-keeping would not have an undue weight.³ But where one sum only was charged in the indictment as the subject of embezzlement on a particular day, and there was only one count, and the proof was, that the money had been received in different sums, on different days, the prosecutor was required to confine himself to that sum and one day.⁴ Again, under a similar section, there was only one count. It charged that the prisoner received three sums within three calendar months, and a day was laid for the receipt of each. The count then stated that in the several days aforesaid the prisoner embezzled these sums, and consequently, it did not appear on the record that the sums in question were embezzled within six months of each other. This statement was held bad, and the objection was held properly available upon demurrer. In embezzlement it was likewise said, that if the demurrer be decided against the prisoner, he may still plead over.⁵ As it is not necessary to name in the indictment the person from whom the money or other thing embezzled has been received, recourse is had to a judge's order, that the prisoner may know the specific acts of embezzlement of which he is accused. And, upon a motion supported by proper affidavits, the judge will postpone the trial, or order that such a particular may be applied for.⁶ But the application should be made to the judge at the assizes or sessions, unless the case is removed by certiorari.⁷ No copy or fac-simile of an instrument charged to have been embezzled needs to be set forth in the indictment⁸ in any averment respecting it.

¹ R. v. Noakes, 2 Car. & K. 620.

² R. v. Woolley, 4 Cox, 251.

³ R. v. Richardson, 8 Cox, 448.

⁴ R. v. Williams, 6 C. & P. 626.

⁵ R. v. Purchase, Car. & M. 617;

2 Russ. C. M. 188; citing also, R. v. Jeyes, note (m). Whether three acts of embezzlement can be charged in one count, qu.? It is better to put each act into a separate count.

⁶ R. v. Hodgson, 3 C. & P. 422. R. v. Bootyman, 5 C. & P. 360.

⁷ R. v. Haslam, 1 Jur. (N. S.), 1139.

⁸ 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 7.

Verdict.] By 24 & 25 Vict. s. 72, if upon the trial of any person indicted for embezzlement, or fraudulent application or disposition, it shall be proved that he took the property in question in any such manner as to amount in law to larceny, he shall not be acquitted, but the verdict may be not guilty of embezzlement, or fraudulent application or disposition, but guilty of simple larceny, or of larceny as a clerk, servant, or person employed for the purpose or in the capacity of a clerk or servant, or as a person employed in the public service, or in the police, as the case may be; and thereupon such person shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for such larceny; and vice versâ, not guilty of larceny, but guilty of embezzlement or fraudulent application or disposition; and thereupon such person shall be punished as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for such embezzlement, fraudulent application or disposition; but no person so tried for embezzlement, fraudulent application or disposition, or larceny as aforesaid, shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for larceny, fraudulent application or disposition, or embezzlement, upon the same facts.

Nevertheless, if a person be charged with stealing, and there be abundant evidence of embezzlement, but not any of stealing, however correct a verdict of guilty of embezzlement might be, a conviction for larceny is wrong, and will be quashed.¹ To interpret the Act aright, it must be understood, that a prisoner cannot be convicted of stealing unless there is some evidence of stealing, nor of embezzlement unless there is some evidence of embezzlement, and therefore, instead of the general verdict of guilty, the jury should say "guilty of embezzlement, but not of larceny." The prisoner was indicted for stealing sovereigns and half-sovereigns, but the jury could not specify which he had taken, although asked to do so, and some coin undoubtedly had been taken. There was a general verdict of guilty. It was holden insufficient.² It may be right for the legislature to interfere, and to liken the case to indictments for embezzlement, but the law is, that some definite crime must be charged in the indictment, and proved.³

Trial.] It seems that the trial for this offence may take place in any county where an act of embezzlement can be proved. Thus, where the party was accused in Middlesex with having received money in Surrey, upon which he denied the receipt of the money, it was held that he was properly indicted in Middlesex; and the more so, because there was no evidence in Surrey of the intent to embezzle, and the offence was not completed until the prisoner had denied the receipt of the money. And the judges said, that if there had been evidence of embezzlement in Surrey, the trial would not have been necessarily confined to that county.¹

¹ R. v. Gorbutt, 26 L. J. M. C. 47; Dears. & B. 166.

² R. v. Bond, 19 L. J. M. C. 138.

³ 19 L. J. M. C. 143; Alderson, B.

Again, the prisoner was proved to have received money in Salop, and he denied its receipt in Staffordshire. He also did some acts afterwards at Shrewsbury calculated to strengthen the denial. It was submitted, first, whether an indictment might not be found and tried where the money or goods were received, although there was no other evidence of any other fact arising within the same county. Secondly, if further local proof were necessary, whether the subsequent conduct of the prisoner at Shrewsbury had not destroyed the objection as being acts done in furtherance of the secreting or embezzling. The judges held, that the indictment might be in either county, and indeed, in any county where he might have carried the property, as well as that in which he embezzled it by denying the receipt of it.²

The prisoner, a travelling salesman, went into Derbyshire on Mondays, and returned to Nottingham on Saturdays. His duty was to sell goods and receive the money. On one occasion he received two sums in Derbyshire, but did not return to account. Two months afterwards his master met him in Nottingham, and asked him what he had done with the money, upon which he admitted the embezzlement. He was convicted in Nottingham. Parke, B., seemed to think that the facts of not returning and not accounting were alone sufficient proof of embezzlement; but the other judges considered that the non-accounting upon demand was evidence of the offence in Nottingham.³

¹ R. v. Taylor, Russ. & Ry. 65; 3 Bos. & P. 596.

² R. v. Hobson, Russ. & Ry. 56; Leach, 975, cited. Lawrence, J., Le Blanc, J., diss.

³ R. v. Murdock, 21 L. J. M. C. 22; Den. & P. 298. Taylor's case was mentioned by Parke, B., and Hobson's case was referred to by counsel arguendo.

CHAPTER XX.

OF LARCENY AND EMBEZZLEMENT BY PERSONS IN THE QUEEN'S SERVICE, OR BY THE POLICE.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 69, whosoever being employed in the public service of Her Majesty, or being a constable or other person employed in the police of any county, city, borough, district, or place whatsoever,¹ shall steal any chattel, money, or valuable security belonging to or in the possession or power of Her Majesty, or intrusted to or received or taken into possession by him by virtue of his employment, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen years and not less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement.

The indictment will follow the ordinary precedent, only stating the conviction of the person embezzling and the particular trust. The prisoner was charged with embezzlement. He was an officer of inland revenue. The surveyor-general reminded him that there was an excise balance in his hands of 300*l.*; he took out 28*l.*, and said that was all the money he had in the world; he said he had spent the rest in an unfortunate speculation. It was held that this was evidence of his having fraudulently applied part of the 300*l.* to his own use, and that the conviction was right, and Pollock, C.B., said that he might have been charged simply with stealing the money.²

By sect. 70, whosoever, being employed in the public service of Her Majesty, or being a constable or other person employed in the police of any county, city, borough, district, or place whatsoever,³ and intrusted by virtue of such employment with the receipt, custody, management, or control of any chattel, money, or valuable security, shall embezzle any chattel, money, or valuable security which shall be intrusted to or received or taken into possession by him by virtue of his employment, or any part thereof, or in any manner fraudulently apply or dispose of the same or any part thereof to his own use or benefit, or for any purpose whatsoever except for the public service, shall be deemed to have feloniously stolen the same from Her Majesty, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard

¹ "Liberty" is omitted; "place" will not satisfy the omission.

² R. v. Moah, 25 L. J. M. C. 66; 7 Cox, 60.

³ "Liberty" is omitted.

¹ As to embezzlements connected with the public revenue, see "Indictable Offences against the Public Revenue."

¹ As to embezzlements connected with the public revenue, see "Indictable Offences against the Public Revenue."

CHAPTER XXI.

OF EMBEZZLEMENT BY OFFICERS OF THE BANK OF ENGLAND AND IRELAND.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 73, whosoever, being an officer or servant of the governor and company of the Bank of England or of the Bank of Ireland, and being intrusted with any bond, deed, note, bill, dividend warrant, or warrant for payment of any annuity or interest, or money, or with any security, money, or other effects of or belonging to the said governor and company, or having any bond, &c. of any other person, body politic or corporate, lodged or deposited with the said governor and company, or with him as an officer or servant of the said governor and company, shall secrete, embezzle, or run away with any such bond, &c., or any part thereof, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life or not less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement.

Formerly it seems that it was not competent to convict an officer of the bank for embezzling the property of his employers, and a statute was passed in the interval between a serious robbery of this kind committed by one of the cashiers and his trial for the offence. The cashier was acquitted under the direction of the court, the India bonds which he stole not having been deposited by him in the usual place, so that it appeared to the judges who tried the prisoner that the bank could not be said to have possession of them.¹ In another case of embezzlement by an officer of the bank, we have seen that although bills issued by government, as exchequer bills, are not valid bills unless properly signed, they were, nevertheless, effects under 15 Geo. 2, c. 13, s. 12.² Still the trust must have been on the prisoner. A bank clerk whose business it was to post in the ledger and read from the cash book bank notes from 100*l.* to 1000*l.*, took from a pile of paid notes, to which other clerks had access, a paid note for 50*l.* The judges held, that he ought not to have been convicted of embezzlement under 15 Geo. 2, c. 13; for although he had access to the cancelled notes, he could not be said to have been intrusted with it.³

¹ R. v. Waite, East, P. C. 570; Leach, 28.

² R. v. Aslett, ante. Bakewell's case, infra, was decided upon another point. See Leach, 962, by Le Blanc, J.

³ R. v. Bakewell, Russ. & Ry. 35; Leach, 943. It was surmised at one time that the stat. 39 Geo. 3, c. 85, concerning embezzlement, had superseded the capital punishment, but in R. v. Aslett, the judges, after hearing an argument, were unanimous that no such repeal had taken place; Leach, 970; but if the second statute relates to the same subject matter, if it should itself inflict a milder penalty, it will operate to repeal the more severe punishment. R. v. Davis, Leach, 971. See also R. v. Cator, 4 Burr. 20, 26; R. v. Heath, Leach, 274, n. The two statutes must stand consistently with each other in order to create the repeal. A general Embezzlement Act, therefore, will not destroy a provision which applies to particular servants. Nor will Acts passed in the same session, although in pari materia, be so far inconsistent as that the milder penalty must operate. As in the case of destroying shrubs and trees. R. v. Howe, Leach, 481. But should such Acts pass in separate sessions, the case will be different. Id. 483, n. Buller, J.

The indictment for these two offences may be framed in a similar manner to the ordinary form, only mentioning that the prisoner was a clerk in the employment of the bank or of the South Sea Company.

S. P. R. v. Brady, Leach, 274, n. A fortiori is it, where the statutes are entirely distinct, as in the case of an illegal demand of money, and of an act which falls short of a demand, both offences being made punishable by separate statutes. R. v. Robinson, Leach, 767. And in continuing an act through the medium of another, no particular form of words need be used. R. v. Longmead, Leach, 694. Where a statute abolished the punishment of death as to persons convicted of certain felonies, not using the words "who shall be convicted," it was held, that the mitigated sentence was applicable to convicts, who although they had been tried before the passing of the new Act, had not been brought up for sentence until afterwards. R. v. Lewis, 1 Moo. C. C. 372. See R. v. Mackenzie, Russ. & Ry. 429.

CHAPTER XXII.

OF EMBEZZLEMENT—MUTINY ACTS AND PUBLIC REVENUE.

Embezzlement under Mutiny Acts.] Embezzlements of money, provisions, forage, &c., under the Mutiny Acts, are punishable with penal servitude for not less than four years, or with fine and imprisonment, dismissal from the service, reduction to the ranks if a warrant or non-commissioned officer, and incapacity to serve Her Majesty in any civil or military office. The loss or damage moreover may be recovered from the offender, or if he remain in the service, he may be put under stoppages not exceeding one-half of his pay and allowances.¹

Embezzlement—First fruits.] By 26 Hen. 8, c. 3, s. 4, confirmed by 1 Eliz. c. 4, s. 24, if any person or persons to whom any deputation shall be made by commission, to compound and agree for the payment of first fruits, their heirs, executors, or administrators, shall conceal or embezzle any specialties or bonds, taken for the payment of the said first fruits, and do not deliver them according to the tenor of the Act, he shall forfeit that office of deputation, and, over that, make fine and ransom at the king's own pleasure and will.

Embezzlement of public stores.] Under the provisions of several Acts,² embezzling any stores of war, or naval, ordnance, or victualling stores, marked according to particular statutable regulations, or concealing them, or any cordage belonging to His Majesty,³ or any public stores whatsoever under the care, superintendence, or control of any officer or person in His Majesty's service, or employed in any public department or office, is made punishable by transportation for fourteen years,⁴ or by public whipping, fine, or imprisonment, one or all of them, at the discretion of the court. And for a second offence of the kinds mentioned above, the sentence of transportation⁵ for fourteen years is to pass at all events.⁶

¹ 24 Vict. c. 7, s. 17; and the Marine Mutiny Act, 24 Vict. c. 8, s. 22.

² 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 41; 9 Geo. 1, c. 8; 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 89, ss. 1, 7, extended to Ireland as far as they relate to the naval, ordnance, and victualling stores, by 52 Geo. 3, c. 12, but no summary proceeding before justices is to be taken without the consent in writing of the naval storekeeper for the time being, at any port in Ireland. 56 Geo. 3, c. 138, s. 2.

³ 54 Geo. 3, c. 60.

⁴ Penal servitude.

⁵ Id.

⁶ See 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 41; 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 89, ss. 5, 7; 56 Geo. 3, c. 138, s. 2.

By 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 25, ss. 1, 3, the commissioners of the navy may cause search to be made for embezzled goods, as justices of peace may do in cases of felony, and may, in cases where the property embezzled does not exceed 20s., fine the offender 20s., and imprison him for one week, and may cause the goods to be brought back. In the case of nonpayment the offender may be imprisoned, with hard labour, for two months.

By sect. 4, the treasurer and other officers of the navy may also punish by fine or imprisonment at their discretion, where the embezzlement does not exceed 20s.¹

Embezzlement—Warehoused goods, customs of excise.] By 4 Geo. 4, c. 24, s. 72, if through any wilful misconduct of any officer or officers of customs or excise, any embezzlement, waste, spoil, or destruction, should be made of or in any goods or merchandise warehoused in warehouses under the authority of 4 Geo. 4, c. 24, (an Act which requires payment of duty upon the first entry of such goods,) such officer or officers shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.²

Post Office—Embezzlement of printed papers.] By 1 Vict. c. 36, s. 32, for the protection of printed votes and proceedings in parliament, and printed newspapers sent by the post, it is enacted, that every person employed in the post office who shall steal, or shall for any purpose embezzle, secrete, or destroy, any printed votes or proceedings in parliament, or any printed newspaper, or any other printed paper whatever, sent by the post without covers, or in covers open at the sides, shall, in England and Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland, of a crime and offence, and being convicted thereof, shall suffer such punishment by fine or imprisonment, or by both, as to the court shall seem meet.³

¹ Under sect. 3, if the offence be of a higher nature, the commissioners may commit the offender till he enters into recognizances to appear in the exchequer, to answer any prosecution against him within one year afterwards.

² And punishable by fine and imprisonment, or both.

³ With or without hard labour and solitary confinement (sect. 42).

CHAPTER XXIII.

OF LARCENY BY TENANTS AND LODGERS.¹

Larceny by tenants and lodgers.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 74, whosoever shall steal any chattel or fixture let to be used by him or her in or with any house or lodging, whether the contract shall have been entered into by him or her or by her husband, or by any person on behalf of him or her or her husband, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping, and in case the value of such chattel or fixture shall exceed the value of 5*l.*, shall be liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven years and not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping; and in every case of stealing any chattel in this section mentioned, it shall be lawful to prefer an indictment in the common form as for larceny, and in every case of stealing any fixture in this section mentioned, to prefer an indictment in the same form as if the offender were not a tenant or lodger, and in either case to lay the property in the owner or person letting to hire.

Where a person got possession of a house under a written agreement between him and the landlord, and then stole the lead fixed to the freehold, the jury having found the original intention felonious, the judges held, that he had been properly convicted under the old statute of 4 Geo. 2.²

Indictment.] The indictment is in general the same as for ordinary larceny, but if fixtures be stolen, the form for stealing such should be adopted. It is not now necessary to state, nor to prove the letting. Where A. had a concurrent use of the lodging, and the indictment stated an exclusive letting to the prisoner, the conviction was held wrong.³ And two persons cannot be convicted on the same indictment, unless a joint contract be stated.⁴ But it should be remarked, that when property of this kind is taken by another person than the tenant or lodger, it must be laid in the lodger, because the owner cannot maintain trespass.⁵

¹ R. v. Munday, Leach, 850.

² See R. v. Pope, Leach, 336.

³ R. v. Bew, Russ. & Ry. 480.

⁴ R. v. Goddard and another, Leach, 545. As to the old law, see R. v. Healey, 1 Moo. C. C. 1. R. v.

Burnel, Leach, 588; East, P. C.

587. R. v. Hurrell, Ry. & Moo. N. P. C. 296.

⁵ R. v. Belstead, Russ. & Ry. 411.

CHAPTER XXIV.

OF FRAUDS AND EMBEZZLEMENTS BY BANKERS, &C., FACTORS, AND AGENTS.

Frauds by agents, bankers, or factors.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 75, whosoever, having been intrusted, either solely, or jointly with any other person, as a banker, merchant, broker, attorney, or other agent, with any money or security for the payment of money, with any direction in writing to apply, pay, or deliver such money or security or any part thereof respectively, or the proceeds or any part of the proceeds of such security, for any purpose, or to any person specified in such direction, shall, in violation of good faith, and contrary to the terms of such direction, in anywise convert to his own use or benefit, or the use or benefit of any person other than the person by whom he shall have been so intrusted, such money, security, or proceeds, or any part thereof respectively; and whosoever, having been intrusted, either solely, or jointly with any other person, as a banker, &c., with any chattel or valuable security, or any power of attorney for the sale or transfer of any share or interest in any public stock or fund, whether of the United Kingdom, or any part thereof, or of any foreign state, or in any stock or fund of any body corporate, company, or society, for safe custody or for any special purpose, without any authority to sell, negotiate, transfer, or pledge, shall, in violation of good faith, and contrary to the object or purpose for which such chattel, security, or power of attorney shall have been intrusted to him, sell, negotiate, transfer, pledge, or in any manner convert to his own use or benefit, or the use or benefit of any person other than the person by whom he shall have been so intrusted, such chattel or security, or the proceeds of the same, or any part thereof, or the share or interest in the stock or fund to which such power of attorney shall relate, or any part thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement; but nothing in this section contained relating to agents shall affect any trustee in or under any instrument whatsoever, or any mortgagee of any property, real or personal, in respect of any act done by such trustee or mortgagee in relation to the property comprised in or affected by any such trust or mortgage; nor shall restrain any banker, merchant, broker, attorney, or other agent from receiving any money which shall be or become actually due and payable upon or by virtue of any valuable security, according to the tenor and effect thereof, in such manner as he might have done if this Act had not been passed; nor from selling, transferring, or otherwise disposing of any securities or effects in his possession upon which he shall have any lien, claim, or demand entitling him by law so to do, unless such sale, transfer, or other disposal shall extend to a greater number or part of such securities or effects than shall be requisite for satisfying such lien, claim, or demand.

A direction in writing was necessary under the old Act to the person employed, (a broker, for instance,) as to the application of the proceeds.¹ It affords no defence to say that an order to sell the chattel had been given, if the order was subsequently countermanded.²

Indictment.] The indictment charges, that A., before and at the time of committing the offence hereinafter mentioned, to wit, on, &c., was (agent)³ to B., and that, whilst the said A. was such (agent) to the said B., to wit, on, &c., the said B. did intrust to the said A. as such (agent), certain monies, to wit, — [or a certain valuable security, to wit, —], with a direction in writing from the said A., and with his signature, to apply such monies [or security] to [state the purpose], and that the said A. being such (agent) well knowing the premises, did, as such (agent) take the said monies [or security] into his possession, from the said B., for the purpose aforesaid, and whilst he was such (agent) to the said B. as aforesaid, afterwards, to wit, on, &c., in violation of good faith, and contrary to the purpose specified in the said written direction, unlawfully did convert to his own use the said monies, [or security,] against the form, &c.

The second indictment charges, that A., before and at the time of committing the offence hereinafter mentioned, to wit, on, &c., was an (agent) to one B., and whilst the said A. was such (agent) to the said B., to wit, on, &c., the said B. did intrust to the said A. as such (agent) for safe custody, [or for a special purpose, to wit,] [state the chattel,] without any authority to sell, negotiate, transfer, or pledge the same, and which the said [chattel] the said A., so being such (agent) as aforesaid, well knowing the premises, did then as such (agent) receive and take into his possession for safe custody as aforesaid [or, for the purpose aforesaid,] from the said B., and that the said A. afterwards and whilst he was such (agent) to the said B., to wit, on, &c., in violation of good faith, and contrary to the object and purpose for which the said [chattel] was so intrusted to him as aforesaid, unlawfully did sell, &c., and convert to his own use and benefit the said [chattel], (or the proceeds or part thereof,) against the form, &c.

The special purpose, if there be one, must be set out correctly.⁴ An indictment was preferred under this statute in the ordinary form, and it concluded contra formam statuti. It was objected,

¹ R. v. Golde, 2 Moo. & Rob.
⁴ 5.

² R. v. Gomme, 3 Cox, 64.

³ As the case may be — banker, broker, &c.

⁴ R. v. Prince, Moo. & Malk. 21; 2 C. & P. 517.

that the sections should have been specially set forth, but the count was deemed sufficient.¹

On the other hand, it was alleged that the defendant had received 10*l.* 8*s.* for safe custody as an agent. The defendant was the proprietor of a weekly savings bank. The prosecutor paid in subscriptions to that amount. Park, J., held that there was no keeping for safe custody within the statutes.²

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 76, whosoever, being a banker, merchant, broker, attorney, or agent, and being intrusted, either solely or jointly with any other person, with the property of any other person for safe custody, shall, with intent to defraud, sell, negotiate, transfer, pledge, or in any manner convert or appropriate the same or any part thereof to or for his own use or benefit, or the use or benefit of any person other than the person by whom he was so intrusted, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to any of the punishments awarded by the 75th section.

By sect. 77, whosoever, being intrusted, either solely, or jointly with any other person, with any power of attorney for the sale or transfer of any property, shall fraudulently sell or transfer or otherwise convert the same, or any part thereof, to his own use or benefit, or the use or benefit of any person other than the person by whom he was so intrusted, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to any of the punishments awarded by the 75th section.

By sect. 78, whosoever, being a factor or agent intrusted, either solely, or jointly with any other person, for the purpose of sale or otherwise, with the possession of any goods, or of any document of title to goods,³ shall, contrary to or without the authority of his principal in that behalf, for his own use or benefit, or the use or benefit of any person other than the person by whom he was so intrusted, and in violation of good faith, make any consignment, deposit, transfer, or delivery of any goods or document of title so intrusted to him as in this section before mentioned, as and by way of a pledge, lien, or security for any money or valuable security borrowed or received by such factor or agent at or before the time of making such consignment, deposit, transfer, or delivery, or intended to be thereafter borrowed or received, or shall, contrary to or without such authority, for his own use or benefit, or the use or benefit of any person other than the person by whom he was so intrusted, and in violation of good faith, accept any advance of any money or valuable security on the faith of any contract or agreement to consign, deposit, transfer, or deliver any such goods or document of title, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to any of the punishments awarded by the 75th section; and every clerk or other person who shall knowingly and wilfully act and

¹ R. v. Haigh, 7 Cox, 403.

² R. v. Mason, Dowl. & Ry. N. P. C. 22. There was another point fatal to the case. Each member paid in weekly 2*s.* 1*d.*, and this was correct. But the indictment averred that the defendant had received 10*l.* 8*s.* from the prosecutrix, whereas the evidence showed that she had not received at one time more than 2*s.* 1*d.*

³ See sect. 1.

assist in making any such consignment, &c., or in accepting or procuring such advance as aforesaid, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to any of the same punishments. Provided, that no such factor or agent shall be liable to any prosecution for consigning, depositing, transferring, or delivering any such goods or documents of title, in case the same shall not be made a security for or subject to the payment of any greater sum of money than the amount which at the time of such consignment, &c., was justly due and owing to such agent from his principal, together with the amount of any bill of exchange drawn by or on account of such principal, and accepted by such factor or agent.¹

By sect. 79, any factor or agent intrusted as aforesaid, and possessed of any such document of title, whether derived immediately from the owner of such goods, or obtained by reason of such factor or agent having been intrusted with the possession of the goods, or of any other document of title thereto, shall be deemed to have been intrusted with the possession of the goods represented by such document of title; and every contract pledging or giving a lien upon such document of title as aforesaid shall be deemed to be a pledge of and lien upon the goods to which the same relates; and such factor or agent shall be deemed to be possessed of such goods or document, whether the same shall be in his actual custody, or shall be held by any other person subject to his control, or for him or on his behalf; and where any loan or advance shall be bonâ fide made to any factor or agent intrusted with and in possession of any such goods or document of title, on the faith of any contract or agreement in writing to consign, deposit, transfer, or deliver such goods or documents of title, and such goods or document of title shall actually be received by the person making such loan or advance, without notice that such factor or agent was not authorized to make such pledge or security, every such loan or advance shall be deemed to be a loan or advance on the security of such goods or document of title within the meaning of the last preceding section, though such goods or document of title shall not actually be received by the person making such loan or advance till the period subsequent thereto; and any contract or agreement, whether made direct with such factor or agent, or with any clerk or other person on his behalf, shall be deemed a contract or agreement with such factor or agent; and any payment made, whether by money or bill of exchange or other negotiable security, shall be deemed to be an advance within the meaning of the last preceding section; and a factor or agent in possession as aforesaid of such goods or document shall be taken, for the purposes of the last preceding section, to have been intrusted therewith by the owner thereof, unless the contrary be shown in evidence.

¹ The proviso in the repealed section of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, s. 6, as to disclosure upon compulsory process at law or in equity, is omitted. See R. v. Skeen, 28 L. J. M. C. 91.

The Act is strictly limited to the agents or depositaries which it mentions. And it is also confined to such persons when they are exercising their functions or business. Consequently, where a deposit was made with a private friend, and in that capacity, it was held, that the case did not come within the Act.¹ And if the deposit be made of money, the proceeds of certain securities, for the purpose of being invested in the funds, with a written direction to that effect, in case any accident should happen to a particular individual, and no accident happening, the defendant should convert the money to his own use, it seems that it would not be an offence under the statute, because the contingency did not take place which would have involved the defendant in a violation of the written direction given to him.² But if the defendant had had the securities themselves in his custody committed to him for safety, or for some special purpose, and had sold them, the case would have been different, and such an offender would be punished under the statute for embezzling the securities. The defendant had established a savings bank, each member of which paid a certain subscription, and the defendant received as a recompense for his trouble an odd penny, which formed part of the subscription. The funds were disposed of once a week by lottery. The defendant absconded after having received 10*l.* 8*s.* from an individual who had received no benefit from his subscription. It was held, that the defendant was not indictable under 52 Geo. 3, c. 63, either as an agent, or as a person having the safe custody of money in his possession.³

Indictment.] The indictment states, that A., on, &c., being then a factor and agent, was intrusted as such factor and agent by B. with the possession of certain goods and chattels of B., that is to say, &c., and the said A., well knowing the premises, afterwards, to wit, on, &c., without any authority from the said B., his principal, did, for his own benefit, and in violation of good faith, deposit the same with one C. by way of pledge, lien, and security, against the form, &c.

Another indictment may be that A. did accept an advance of certain money on the faith of an agreement to transfer or deliver the same to C.

¹ R. v. Prince, 2 C. & P. 517.
Moo. & Malk. 21, under 52 Geo. 3,
c. 63.

² R. v. White, 4 C. & P. 46;
under 52 Geo. 3, c. 63, repealed.

³ R. v. Mason, Dowl. & Ry. N.
P. C. 22.

CHAPTER XXV.

OF FRAUDS BY TRUSTEES AND DIRECTORS.

We now come to offences by trustees and directors.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 80, whosoever, being a trustee of any property for the use or benefit, either wholly or partially, of some other person, or for any public or charitable purpose, shall, with intent to defraud, convert or appropriate the same or any part thereof to or for his own use or benefit, or the use or benefit of any person other than such person as aforesaid, or for any purpose other than such public or charitable purpose as aforesaid, or otherwise dispose of or destroy such property or any part thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to any of the punishments under the 75th section. Provided, that no proceeding or prosecution for any offence included in this section shall be commenced without the sanction of Her Majesty's attorney-general, or, in case that office be vacant, of Her Majesty's solicitor-general. Provided also, that where any civil proceeding shall have been taken against any person to whom the provisions of this section may apply, no person who shall have taken such civil proceeding shall commence any prosecution under this section without the sanction of the court or judge before whom such civil proceeding shall have been had or shall be pending.

By sect. 81, whosoever, being a director, member, or public officer of any body corporate or public company, shall fraudulently take or apply for his own use or benefit, or for any use or purposes other than the use or purposes of such body corporate or public company, any of the property of such body corporate or public company, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to the punishments awarded by sect. 75.

By sect. 82, whosoever, being a director, public officer, or manager of any body corporate or public company, shall as such receive or possess himself of any of the property of such body corporate or public company otherwise than in payment of a just debt or demand, and shall, with intent to defraud, omit to make or to cause or direct to be made a full and true entry thereof in the books and accounts of such body corporate or public company, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to the punishments of sect. 75.

By sect. 83, whosoever, being a director, manager, public officer, or member of any body corporate or public company, shall, with intent to defraud, destroy, alter, mutilate, or falsify any book, paper, writing, or valuable security belonging to the body corporate or public company, or make or concur in the making of any false entry, or omit or concur in omitting any material particular, in any book of account or other document, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and punishable under the 75th section.

By sect. 84, whosoever, being a director, manager, or public officer of any body corporate or public company, shall make, circulate, or publish, or concur in making, circulating, or publishing, any written statement or account which he shall know to be false in any material particular, with intent to deceive or defraud any member, shareholder, or creditor of such body corporate or public company, or with intent to induce any person to become a shareholder or partner therein, or to intrust or advance any property to such body corporate or public company, or to enter into any security for the benefit thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and punishable as above.

By sect. 85, nothing in any of the last ten preceding sections of this Act contained shall enable or entitle any person to refuse to make a full and complete discovery by answer to any bill in equity, or to answer any question or interrogatory in any civil proceeding in any court, or upon the hearing of any matter in bankruptcy or insolvency; and no person shall be liable to be convicted of any of the misdemeanors in any of the said sections mentioned by any evidence whatever in respect of any act done by him, if he shall at any time previously to his being charged with such offence have first disclosed such act on oath, in consequence of any compulsory process of any court of law or equity, in any action, suit, or proceeding which shall have been bonâ fide instituted by any party aggrieved, or if he shall have first disclosed the same in any compulsory examination or deposition before any court upon the hearing of any matter in bankruptcy or insolvency. This disclosure must be bonâ fide, not of facts known before.¹

By sect. 86, nothing in any of the last eleven preceding sections of this Act contained, nor any proceeding, conviction, or judgment to be had or taken thereon against any person under any of the said sections, shall prevent, lessen, or impeach any remedy, at law or in equity, which any party aggrieved by any offence against any of the said sections might have had if this Act had not been passed; but no conviction of any such offender shall be received in evidence in any action at law or suit in equity against him; and nothing in the said sections contained shall affect or prejudice any agreement entered into or security given by any trustee, having for its object the restoration or repayment of any trust property misappropriated.

Lastly, by sect. 87, no misdemeanor against any of the last twelve² preceding sections of this Act shall be prosecuted or tried at any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace.

¹ R. v. Sheen and another, Bell, 97; 28 L. J. M. C. 91. R. v. Strahan, 7 Cox, 75; and post, "Frauds by Bankrupts."
² Id est, beginning at "frauds by agents, bankers, or factors." sect. 75.

CHAPTER XXVI.

OF OBTAINING MONEY, &c. BY FALSE PRETENCES.

Obtaining money, &c. by false pretences.] The common law requires a certain degree of caution from individuals, in order that they may not be the dupes of ordinary frauds; but it was discovered, that the proportion of those who possessed this necessary vigilance was not so great but that numerous and gross cheats were constantly put in action to the prejudice of the less wary, and the legislature, therefore, interfered to protect a class which have been called "the weaker part of mankind."¹

Still, if the pretence be absurd or irrational upon the face of it, or such as the party has, at the very time, the means at hand of detecting,² it has been deemed proper to exclude his case from the operation of the enactments.³ Such pretences as are calculated to throw those off their guard who, through defect of education or of natural quickness, are not so shrewd as some of their neighbours, are the offences which the statutes have proposed to punish. In the first instance, by the 33 Hen. 8, c. 1,⁴ privy tokens and counterfeit letters in other men's names were made the subjects of attention, as a key, a ring, or something denoting a real visible mark.⁵ And writings generally, if made in the names of third persons, seem to have been within the purview of the statute.⁶ One Munoes persuaded a woman to let him have a note for 500*l.* upon the false pretence of finding a person in the next room who would discount it.⁷ This was not a case within the statute of Hen. 8. But where a woman, in haste, gave change of a 5*l.* note for a 1*l.* note, believing the allegation of its being a 5*l.* note, the pretence was deemed sufficient under the statute of Geo. 4.⁸ The next Act was the 30 Geo. 2, c. 24.⁹ The third Act was the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53.

And now by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88, whosoever shall by any false pretence obtain from any other person any chattel, money, or valuable security,¹⁰ with intent to defraud, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to be kept in penal servitude for the term

¹ 3 T. R. 105, by Ashhurst, J.

² East, P. C. 828.

³ See post in this section.

⁴ Now repealed.

⁵ R. v. Gratland, East, P. C. 826; 7 Mod. 315; S. P. Id. 316, 8 Ann. cited.

⁶ East, P. C. 827.

⁷ R. v. Munoes, 7 Mod. 315; Str. 1127.

⁸ R. v. Jessop, 29 L. J. M. C. 70; Dears. & B. 442.

⁹ Repealed. As to the old statutes, see R. v. Pear, East, P. C. 689, 832.

¹⁰ See sect. 1.

of three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement. Provided, that if upon the trial of any person indicted for such misdemeanor, it shall be proved that he obtained the property in question in any such manner as to amount in law to larceny, he shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted of such misdemeanor; and no person tried for such misdemeanor shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for larceny upon the same facts. Provided also, that it shall be sufficient in any indictment for obtaining or attempting to obtain any such property by false pretences, to allege that the party accused did the act with intent to defraud, without alleging an intent to defraud any particular person, and without alleging any ownership of the chattel, money, or valuable security; and on the trial of any such indictment it shall not be necessary to prove an intent to defraud any particular person, but it shall be sufficient to prove that the party accused did the act charged with an intent to defraud.

By sect. 89, whosoever shall by any false pretence cause or procure any money to be paid, or any chattel or valuable security to be delivered to any other person, for the use or benefit, or on account of the person making such false pretence, or of any other person, with intent to defraud, shall be deemed to have obtained such money, chattel, or valuable security within the meaning of the last preceding section.

By sect. 90, whosoever, with intent to defraud or injure any other person, shall by any false pretence fraudulently cause or induce any other person to execute, make, accept, indorse, or destroy the whole or any part of any valuable security, or to write, impress, or affix his name, or the name of any other person, or of any company, firm, or co-partnership, or the seal of any body corporate, company, or society, upon any paper or parchment, in order that the same may be afterwards made or converted into or used or dealt with as a valuable security, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to penal servitude for three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

However, if the case turn out to be a misdemeanor, the prisoner must be acquitted of the larceny. Whilst, on the other hand, the statute goes no further than larceny, and, therefore, where a letter was produced in evidence with this request,—“Please to let the bearer (A. B.) have, for (C. D.), four yards of linen”—signed, (C. D.)—it was held, that the indictment could not stand, for this proof disclosed the heavier crime of forgery under 1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 10.¹

This statute is very general in its operation. Two men bought some goods of a jeweller at Cheltenham, and tendered their own cheque upon some London bankers, which was accepted. It was proved, however, that they kept no cash with the bankers, nor had any account with them. For the defendants, R. v. Lara, 6 T. R.

¹ R. v. Evans, 5 C. & P. 553.

565, was cited, but Bayley, J., said, that the point had lately been before the judges,¹ and overruled the objection.² In that case, Freeth had uttered a counterfeit note for 10s. 6d., for which he obtained change, but without saying that the note was genuine, or making any representation respecting it, and the judges held, that he had been properly convicted under 30 Geo. 2, c. 24.³ So where the defendant availed himself of a post-dated cheque, drawn by himself, to obtain a watch and chain, accompanying the cheat by false representations, the judges were of opinion, that the conviction was proper.⁴ The prisoner accepted a bill, which the drawer negotiated, and then under pretence of being prepared to pay the residue, the prisoner borrowed money from the drawer in order to pay a part of the bill. It was in evidence that the prisoner was not so prepared, and did not intend to apply the money to the service of the bill. Patteson, J., held this to be an offence within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53.⁵ But where the prisoner got possession of 30*l.* under the pretence of having completed two houses, and so seemed to escape a forfeiture for the non-performance of a contract, the pretence was not made out.⁶

We come now to mention the false pretences which the Act contemplates. The words being "chattel, money, or valuable security;" obtaining a lodging is not within the Act. The prisoner took a lodging on November 17th, on pretence of being a naval officer. On the 25th he became a boarder. This was too remote. The prisoner made use of no false pretence when he came to board.⁷ A surveyor of highways ordered gravel, having authority, but applied it to his own use. He was held to be free from any charge of false pretence. But, if at first, he meant to steal it, he might have been guilty of larceny.⁸ If A. come to B., and pretend that he has been sent by C. to receive a debt due from B. to C., and receive it, however secure A. may be from an indictment for a fraud at common law, he is guilty of a false pretence within the Act.⁹ So, if a tradesman be imposed upon by a defendant under a pretence that the defendant was sent by a customer to order goods, it is a false pretence, if the goods be obtained.¹⁰ So, where ¹ See 1 Moo. C. C. 229, where R. v. Freeth, Russ. & Ry. 127, is mentioned as the case in question.

² R. v. Jackson and another, 3 Camp. 370. The defendants were sentenced to be transported for seven years. See also 1 Moo. C. C. 228.

³ R. v. Freeth, Russ. & Ry. 127.

⁴ R. v. Parker, 2 Moo. C. C. 1; 7 C. & P. 825, although it was contended, that the pretence did not refer to any existing fact, but to a future event. The conviction was held good on a count which charged simply the pretence of the post-dated cheque, and the result, namely, the obtaining the watch and chain. Eight judges to six.

⁵ R. v. Crossley, 2 Moo. & Rob. 17.

⁶ R. v. Stone, 1 Fost. & F. 311.

⁷ R. v. Gardner, 25 L. J. M. C. 100; Dears. & B. 40. Whether it was not a question for the jury as to a continuing pretence, qu.? Coleridge, J., 25 L. J. 101.

⁸ R. v. Richardson, 1 Fost. & F. 488.

⁹ R. v. Hannon, 6 Mod. 311.

¹⁰ R. v. Cockwaine, Leach, 498. R. v. Adams, Russ. & Ry. 225.

the prisoner went to a tradesman, as from a neighbour, requesting a loan of some silver, which was granted, the court held, that it was not a felonious taking, but a false pretence.¹ So again, where the prisoner wrote a letter in another's name, to a third person, in order to borrow money, in which he succeeded, it was held to be a misdemeanor, and not felony.² Here the name and credit of a third person were employed. So, where Young and others contrived to get from the prosecutor the sum of twenty guineas under a pretence of a bet with a colonel in the army, the defendants having made themselves the depositaries of the supposed stakes, the Court of King's Bench were clear, after much argument, that the indictment for false pretences had been well preferred, and that the conviction was right.³ So, again, Count Villeneuve was convicted, and sentenced to hard labour on the Thames, for obtaining money from Sir T. Broughton, upon the plea of the count having been intrusted by the Duke de Lauzun to take some horses from Ireland to London, that he had been detained by contrary winds, and had spent his money.⁴ So, where the owner of goods had intrusted them to a carrier in order that they should be delivered to the consignee, and the carrier, instead of delivering them, went to the consignor and demanded 16s. for the carriage, pretending that he had lost or mislaid the receipt, the carrier was held, upon error brought, to have been rightly convicted.⁵ And so it was, where an attorney persuaded a person to make up a matter punishable upon summary conviction, upon condition of receiving some money which, was never paid, but the attorney obtained money from the prosecutor by reason of the composition.⁶ A fortiori, where the false token is produced, the offence comes within the Act. As in the case of Witchell, who was employed by certain clothiers to keep the account of shearmen's work, which he delivered in to a clerk weekly, and received the amount. He was not authorized to draw from the clerk for money generally on account, but only for so much as the shearmen actually earned. On the occasion which gave rise to the charge, he gave in a note to the clerk for 44*l.* 10*s.*, the general account of the week's wages, and received it. But, it appeared from a book, in which he kept the items of account, that he had charged not only for men who had not been employed at all, but likewise for more work than those who had been working had really earned, and he was found guilty. And the judges said, that as the defendant would not have obtained the credit but for the false account he had delivered in, the false pretence had created the credit, and they affirmed the conviction, one of the judges observing, that the defendant was not to have any sum that he thought fit on account, but only so

¹ R. v. Coleman, East, P. C. 672; S. C. cited, Leach, 303, note.

² R. v. Atkinson, East, P. C. 673.

³ Young and others v. The King (in error), 3 T. R. 98.

⁴ R. v. Count Villeneuve, Id. 104, cited by Buller, J., with approbation, as having been tried at Chester before himself and Moreton, C. J., of Chester.

⁵ R. v. Airey, East, P. C. 831.

⁶ R. v. Asterley, 7 C. & P. 191.

much as was worked out.¹ The prosecutors, grocers, bought kitchen stuff, and the prisoner, who was on their premises, bought it for them, and, upon producing a ticket, was entitled to receive the money from the chief clerk. He produced a false ticket, with the seller's name, and received the money. This was a false pretence, not larceny, because the clerk, when he paid the money, parted with both property and possession.² So, the porter, who delivered a false ticket with a basket of fish, was held clearly to be within the old Act of 30 Geo. 2.³ The prisoner pretended that the prosecutors owed money to a lodge, and produced a paper purporting to be a summons; this was deemed a false pretence.⁴ The prisoner pretended that a society had a sum of money in a bank in order to induce persons to enter into the society. This was a false pretence.⁵ The prisoner was to make some teeth, but not to have any money till the work was done. In order to this he brought a letter of recommendation from G., and obtained 30s. This was false. He was also charged with having obtained 13s. under pretence of obtaining a gold palate in exchange. It was held, that the bonâ fide conduct of the prisoner with regard to the gold palate should be left to the jury, although the falsehood of the specific fact could not be proved by positive testimony.⁶ Again, a railway ticket, although to be delivered up at the end of the journey, is a "chattel" belonging to the company, and within the Act. The prisoner had obtained it by false pretences in order to get a free passage.⁷ And a begging letter impostor is clearly within the Act.⁸

We have now shown, that whether the pretence be put forward under a colourable deceit connected with a third person or not, the defendant comes equally within the provisions of the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29.

The trick may be carried on without words. The production of a false token is, therefore, sufficient, without a representation of its truth.⁹ The prisoner went to the postmistress at Nottingham, and asked for letters addressed for John Story, which was his name. He got by mistake a letter with a post-office order for

¹ R. v. Witchell, East, P. C. 830.

² R. v. Barnes, 20 L. J. M. C. 34; Den. & P. 59.

³ R. v. Douglass, 1 Camp. 312. In this case it was contended, that the Act 39 Geo. 3, c. lviii. for regulating the rates of portage in London and Westminster, and other places, had provided for the offence; and so, in this instance, had superseded the 30 Geo. 2. But Lord Ellenborough held, that the remedy given by the stat. 39 Geo. 3 was cumulative, and the objection was overruled. 1 Camp. 214.

To collect subscriptions for a public company, under colour of being their secretary, was said by Lord Ellenborough to come so near obtaining money by false pretences, that if a man were indicted for so doing, he could not be considered as prosecuted without any reasonable or probable cause. 1 Camp. 549, note.

⁴ R. v. Woolley, 19 L. J. M. C. 165.

⁵ R. v. Milman, 22 L. J. M. C. 118.

⁶ R. v. Jones, 4 Cox, 467. Verdict, guilty generally.

⁷ R. v. Boulton, 19 L. J. M. C. 67; Den. 508; 2 Car. & K. 917.

⁸ R. v. Jones, 19 L. J. M. C. 162; Den. 551.

⁹ As in R. v. Freeth, ante.

"John Storer;" he wrote his real name on the order, and got 1*l*. The prisoner then begged the woman to look again, and she would find another letter for him, which turned out to be the case. The order was in favour of John Storer. It was objected, that as no untrue declaration nor assertion had been made, the case was not within the statute, but the learned judge allowed a conviction to take place, reserving the point in question, as well as a question whether this was not a forgery of a receipt for money. The judges considered the case, and were of opinion, that as the prisoner had signed his real name, it could not be a forgery; but they held, that as he had represented himself to be the person mentioned in the money order by presenting it for payment, he had been properly convicted of obtaining the 1*l*. by a false pretence.¹

The prisoner pretended he was Mr. — —, who had cured the eye of the prosecutor's child by a bottle of liquid. On this, the prosecutor bought a bottle, and gave the prisoner 5*s*. The indictment was sustained.² The prisoner produced eleven thimbles to a pawnbroker and said he wanted 5*s*. on them. Being asked, he said they were silver. This was an attempt to commit a statutable misdemeanor. Had he obtained the money he would have been guilty of the statutable false pretence.³ The imitation of authentic goods needs not to be precise. As in the case of labels denoting "Everett's Premier Blacking."⁴ It is likewise no defence that the money was obtained through a contract which the prosecutor was induced to enter into.⁵ And, upon the authority of this case, it was held to be a false pretence to allege that certain "cheese-tasters" corresponded with the cheese out of which they were taken, whereas they were taken from superior, and inserted in inferior cheeses.⁶ A collier placed certain tallies in a tub which, in the ordinary course of business, would have been hung on the tally board, and he would have received payment for having raised so many tubs of coal as the tallies represented. This was a complete false pretence.⁷

"Bolton United Burial Society, No. 23.

"Bolton, Sept. 1, 1853.

"Mr. A. Entwistle, Treasurer,—Please to pay the bearer 2*l*. 10*s*., Greenhalgh, and charge the same to the above society.

"Robert Lord. Benjamin Beswick, President."

This was deemed as a valuable security within the statute.⁸ Again, the prosecutor was induced to trust the defendant with goods under the assurance that he wanted them for a person of opulence, whereas there was no such person. This was a false

¹ R. v. Story, Russ. & Ry. 81. & K. 630. Sustained by R. v. Goss, ² R. v. Bloomfield, Car. & M. 537. Bell, 208. S. P.

³ R. v. Ball, Id. 249.

⁷ R. v. Rigby, 7 Cox, 507.

⁴ R. v. Dundas, 6 Cox, 380.

⁸ R. v. Greenhalgh, Dears. 267.

⁵ R. v. Kendrick, 5 Q. B. 49; Dav. & M. 208.

R. v. Dark, Den. 276. R. v. Garlick, Id. R. v. Goss, Bell, 208; 29

⁶ R. v. Abbott, Den. 273; 2 Car. L. J. M. C. 87.

pretence.¹ The prosecutor parted with a cheque for 80*l.* upon the deposit of a lease, but the lease had been mortgaged. The judges said, they would be governed by the authorities, and they affirmed the conviction.² So it was where a woman left a box of stones as a pledge for 10*s.*, saying she had a shop on Northumberland Heath.³ A false representation of profits so as to induce a partnership is different.⁴ Taking a reward for the recovery of stolen goods falls under an independent enactment; but still there may be an indictment for a false pretence with reference to this unlawful transaction, and the evidence needs not to show any connection with the previous felony. It is sufficient to have a corrupt and improper design, and that the defendant did not bonâ fide attempt to detect and punish the thief.⁵ The prisoner represented that there were 15 cwt. of coal in a cart, but owing to a particular mode of building the coal called "tunnelling," there were not more than 8 or at the most 10 cwt. This was a false pretence.⁶ So where the prisoner delivered coal which he knew to weigh only 14 cwt. as and for 18 cwt., producing a ticket at the same time, and obtaining payment for 18 cwt., his conviction was held right.⁷ The prisoner pretended to be a provision dealer; here was an existing fact holding out the means of paying and the readiness and willingness to pay. Had there been an intention to do a future act, he might have escaped.⁸ So where a person obtained goods by the cheat of wearing a commoner's gown and cap at Oxford, he was held to have committed an offence within the Act, although nothing passed in words.⁹ In the case of the skins, the prisoner obtained a loan upon the pretence of having bought some skins of A., and the promise of selling them to the prosecutrix. His conviction was affirmed, and Fry's case was cited as governing the matter before the court.¹⁰ So in the case of a false return of fees to the commissioners of the treasury.¹¹

Yet there are several instances where defendants have obtained verdicts of acquittal upon these charges. It never was the intention of the legislature to dispense with the most ordinary caution in dealings between man and man. The prisoner came to Thomas

¹ R. v. Archer, Dears. 449. So was R. v. Burnside, Bell, 282.

² R. v. Burgon, 25 L. J. M. C. 105; Dears. & B. 11. R. v. Cordrington was referred to.

³ R. v. Fry, Dears. & B. 449; 27 L. J. M. C. 68.

⁴ R. v. Watson, 4 Jur. 14.

⁵ R. v. King, 1 Cox, 36. R. v. Hart, 2 Law Times, 248.

⁶ R. v. Ragg, Bell, 214; 29 L. J. M. C. 88.

⁷ R. v. Sherwood, Dears. & B. 251; 26 L. J. M. C. 81. This case overruled R. v. Reed, 7 C. & P. 848, and Lord Denman declared, that R. v. Reed had never been before the judges. There the defendant pretended to sell 16 cwt. of coals by a delivery of 8 cwt., and produced a weight of 28 lbs., pretending that it was one of 56 lbs., whereby he got a sovereign instead of 10*s.* And the officer of the court mentioned a case to the same effect at Shrewsbury.

⁸ R. v. Bates, 3 Cox, 201.

⁹ R. v. Barnard, 7 C. & P. 784.

¹⁰ R. v. West, 27 L. J. M. C. 227; Dears. & B. 575.

¹¹ R. v. Cooke, 1 Fost. & F. 64.

Perks's shop to buy meat, and being told that he could not have it upon trust, he promised if the meat were sent, to remit the money by the bearer. The butcher's servant took the meat, and informed the prisoner, that it must go back again if payment were not made. "Aye, sure," said the prisoner, and wrote a note as follows:—"Mr. Perks,—Sir, I have a bill of Wallsall bank, which is a very good one, if you will send me the change, or I'll see you on Wednesday certain. Yours, M. G." The prisoner obtained the meat, and the jury found that he intended to cheat Perks. The judges, however, held the conviction wrong, for the prisoner's behaviour and note merely amounted to a promise for future conduct, and common prudence and caution would have prevented any injury arising from the breach of it.¹ The prosecutor lost some horses, and the prisoner, a horse-dealer, pretended to be a police officer, said he knew where the animals were, and would tell him upon the receipt of a sovereign. After much hesitation and reluctance, the prosecutor gave two half-sovereigns to the defendant, who took them and then refused to tell. Here the statement of knowledge as to an important fact, which might lie exclusively within the defendant's means of information, formed a very sufficient ground for throwing a vigilant man off his guard. But when the judges came to examine the indictment they found that the pretence laid was that the prisoner pretended he would tell where the horses were, and not, as it ought to have been stated, that he pretended he knew, &c., and the conviction was held improper,² for here was but a bare affirmation and lie.

A pretence was made to A. that the defendant was sent by B. for an order to go to C. for a pair of shoes. He got the shoes. Another count charged, that the defendant pretended to A. that B. had said that A. was to give him an order to go to C. for shoes, and that he got them in A.'s name from C. Both the counts were held bad in arrest of judgment, because neither charged a sufficient false pretence.³ Again, a count stated that under pretence of hiring a house, the prisoner obtained 22*l.* from the prosecutrix. Here the money having been got before the house was hired, it was doubted whether the conviction could be sustained. A second count stated that the prisoner obtained 4*l.* from the prosecutrix under pretence of paying for a wedding suit, there being a promise of marriage. The conviction was holden bad.⁴ The false pretence cannot be after the credit is gained.⁵ It was different where the prisoner was a married man and paid his addresses to the prosecutrix, and threatened her, moreover, with an action for breach of promise unless she gave him money, with which she complied under the force of the statement and menaces.⁶ Then, as to work; for

¹ R. v. Goodhall, Russ. & Ry. 461.

² R. v. Douglas, 1 Moo. C.C. 46.

³ R. v. Fully, 9 C. & P. 227.

⁴ R. v. Johnston, 2 Moo. C. C. 254.

⁵ R. v. Brooks, 1 Fost. & F. 502.

⁶ R. v. Copeland, Car. & M. 516.

Per Lord Denman as to the first pretence. By Maule, J., as to both.

instance pretending to have done more work than is the fact, it is to be observed, that a mere overcharge will not sustain the indictment.¹ The fact charged was insufficient. Every overcharge might come under such a rule. Again, wages were due to J. B. The prisoner said, to a boy, "I will give you a penny if you will go and get J. B.'s money." He got it by these means. This count was not sustainable on any of the following grounds:—1. On the charge of obtaining the money on the pretence of an authority from J. B. to receive his money. 2. Of obtaining it from the treasurer of a company and the boy on the pretence of such authority. 3. Of obtaining it from the boy on the like false pretence to the boy. The charge should have been, falsely pretending to the treasurer that the boy had authority from J. B. to receive the amount.² Again, the prisoner pretended that he had never been in the army nor the militia, and answered questions accordingly. Here was no false pretence under the statute nor under the Mutiny Act, for the questions were not in the schedule of that Act.³ The prisoner had insured her house and furniture, and a fire took place. Upon this she delivered a sham inventory. Some of the goods were discovered, and a prosecution ensued. It was argued for the prisoner that no existing contract was shown, that it was not alleged how the inventory was untrue, that although a claim was set forth in the indictment, no claim beyond that of delivering the inventory was proved. This was in arrest of judgment, and Platt, B., said he would consult the judges.⁴

The question as to the future pretence has been much canvassed, but it does not appear to have been settled. It might have arisen in the following case. A parcel (a case) was tendered to go to Brighton. The carriage was 11s. 9d. The defendant gave the card to the clerk, who sent it to the manager, and he sent the carman to fetch the case, and pay 11s. 9d. The case was full of rubbish. The person from whom the money was obtained did not see the box at all. It was considered, that "11s. 9d. to pay" did not show that the box was necessarily of value, for the money might be payable nevertheless. And if the money were to be payable at Brighton, the pretence would be future.⁵ However, in R. v. Christance, it seems that if money be obtained upon a promise to do a future thing, it is (the intent being fraudulent) an offence cognizable by law.⁶ The principle was also recognized in R. v. Fry, where the prosecutrix was to have her money back if she would go home with the prisoner.⁷ And in R. v. West, where the prisoner promised to sell some skins which he falsely alleged

¹ R. v. Oates, Dears. 459; 24 L. J. M. C. 123.

² R. v. Butcher, 28 L. J. M. C. 14; Bell, 6.

³ R. v. Jessup, 25 L. J. M. C. 54. R. v. Jussup, Dears. 619, S. C.

⁴ R. v. Wakley, 2 Cox, 484. But nothing appears to have been done.

⁵ R. v. Partridge, 6 Cox, 182.

⁶ 1 Cox, C. C. 1. This was a false sight entry in the customs. The duty due was 42l., and the duty paid was 31l. 8s. 2d.

⁷ R. v. Fry, ante, p. 522.

he had bought, if the prosecutrix would let him have a loan of money.¹

It may likewise be a question how far the tender of notes, illegal, useless, or absurd on the face of them, can be called an offence within this Act. Certainly, where the instrument is rightly executed, although it be such as a plaintiff could not sue upon, or one in respect of which a penalty might accrue, it is a false pretence to utter and obtain money upon the faith of it.² The defendant was apprehended for offering notes of the Oundle bank, that bank having failed some years since. The prosecutor parted with a horse upon the faith of the prisoner's assurance that the notes were good, but he did not present them at Oundle, nor in London, where they were made payable. The notes had been exhibited under a commission of bankrupt against the firm; the words importing the memorandum of exhibit had been attempted to be obliterated, but the names of the commissioners remained on each of the notes. The jury found the notes to be of no value, and that the prisoner meant to cheat the prosecutor of his horse. But the judges held, that sufficient evidence had not been given of the badness of the notes, and the conviction was set aside. Upon the point, whether the offence had been indictable had the evidence been sufficient, they gave no opinion.³ The prisoner knowingly tendered a note as a good note belonging to a bank which had stopped. It turned out that the firm of the bank consisted of three persons, and that two only had become bankrupts, upon which Gaselee, J., directed an acquittal, because the third partner might pay the amount of the note on application.⁴

After the stoppage of a bank the prisoner stated, that the note he offered was good. The bank had stopped six years since. Martin, B., directed an acquittal. The note might by possibility become of value.⁵ Charlotte Evans tendered a 5*l.* note of a bank which had failed, and which she must have known to have been the note of an insolvent firm. But the chairman, instead of leaving the question of knowledge to the jury, said he thought there was some evidence from which the jury might infer that the note was of no value. The court could not consider that there was such evidence in the case. The note "might be of some value." Therefore the conviction was quashed.⁶ Again, a defendant was charged with attempting to obtain money under false pretences, under colour of a promissory note, which was as follows:—

"£100.

Worcester, July 23rd, 1805.

"Three months after date pay to Mr. Thomas Darrell, Esq., or ¹ R. v. West, ante, p. 522.

² R. v. Freeth, ante, p. 518.

³ R. v. Flint, 2 Russ. & Ry. 460.

The bank might have resumed its payments, and its notes, if presented, might have been paid.

⁴ R. v. Spencer, 3 C. & P. 420.

R. v. Clark, 2 Russ. C. M. 296.

⁵ R. v. Evans, Bell, 187.

⁶ Id.

order, the sum of one hundred pounds, value received of Mrs. Mary May.

"And your obedient servant,

"JOSEPH ELLIS,

"No. 11, Stewart Street, Spitalfields,
"London.

"Indorsed, Thomas Darrell.

"Mr. Philip Gresly, Esq., Salworth."

The trick was discovered before any money was paid. And it being deemed impossible to support a charge for forgery or uttering upon an instrument so imperfect, either as a draft or bill of exchange,¹ the prisoner was convicted upon an indictment for a false pretence. But the judges took notice, that the indictment stated the note to purport to be an order for money, which was not the case, and they held the conviction wrong.² It was deemed no defence to urge that a bill was due on the day after the date, which allegation had been made by the prisoner, in order to obtain money upon it the more easily.³ But an unstamped order for the payment of money is not a valuable security within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, the obtaining of which would make a person liable to an indictment under that statute, inasmuch as the banker, who was the drawee, would have rendered himself liable to a penalty of 50*l.* by paying it.⁴ The distinction is quite evident between an apparently good note which deceives an ordinary eye, and an instrument which must satisfy the word "valuable" in an Act of parliament. As in the instance of the flash note of the bank of elegance. The prosecutor could scarcely read, and was unable to make out the note in court. This was a false pretence.⁵ The same rule prevails as to goods. A man offered a chain as gold, which was only metal, and worth 10*s.* This act was included within the cases of false pretence, from respect to the authorities.⁶ The pretence was, "Eight ounces each, ingots of silver at 4*s.* an ounce, same as before." The prosecutor did not test them, but advanced money. The same law prevailed.⁷ The distinction is, where the quality is ¹ A note was made upon the case by Le Blanc, J., whether this paper, if presented to a banker with whom the person appearing as the drawer kept cash, for the purpose of getting payment of it as a draft, would not have fallen within the description of a bill of exchange, or order for the payment of money, so as to subject the utterer to a capital conviction. Russ. & Ry. 107, note (b).

² R. v. Cartwright, Russ. & Ry. 106. See R. v. Inder, Den. 325. Independently of this question, there was another which was not decided, and which, indeed, was the principal question intended for the judges—whether an attempt to commit a statutable misdemeanor were punishable as an attempt to commit a common law misdemeanor. See post, R. v. Roderick.

³ R. v. Hughes, 1 Fost. & F. 355.

⁴ R. v. Yates, 1 Moo. C. C. 170.

⁵ R. v. Coulson and another, 19 L. J. M. C. 182; Den. 592. R. v. Matthews, Dears. & B. 236, cited. R. v. Wells, Id. R. v. Pinder, Id.

⁶ R. v. Roebuck, 25 L. J. M. C. 101; Dears. & B. 24.

⁷ R. v. Stevens, 1 Cox, 83.

inferior, but the article belongs to the same species. As in the case of "Elkington's A." The prisoner got an advance on the faith of some spoons being of that stamp, and so defrauded the lender. The judges quashed the conviction.¹ A mattress was to be stuffed with wool. There were in it when delivered 20 lbs. of wool and 70 lbs. of flock, an inferior material. Martin, B., doubted whether this was more than a breach of warranty.² So as to the profits of a business. A false representation would be insufficient, especially where the prosecutor and prisoner became partners in a concern, although the prisoner admitted that he had duped his partner.³ And it is observable, that it is no offence to obtain by false pretences that which is not larceny at common law. Therefore, a dog is not within the Act.⁴

A diversity has been established between a false pretence and a mere excuse to avoid trouble or work of any kind. As, where a pauper informed the overseer, who bade him go to work to maintain his family, that he had no shoes, when, in fact, he had two new pairs, and thus induced the overseer to give him a pair. The judges held, that this was rather a false excuse for not working, than a false pretence to obtain goods, and they set aside the conviction.⁵ If there be two pretences, by virtue of which property has been obtained, they must be taken together. As, where the defendant represented himself as being a captain, and as holding a valuable security for 21*l*. There was no proof that the defendant knew this note to be of no value, or, indeed, that it was not his own promissory note; so that the false pretence in that respect was not proved. And, although it was shown that he was not a captain, yet, as the pretences ought to have been taken in concert, the judgment against him was reversed upon error.⁶ Lord Denman, however, in this case arraigned the idea that the fraud must be such an artful device as to impose upon a man of ordinary caution, and when *R. v. Jones*⁷ was mentioned, he said, "The ¹ R. v. Bryan, Dears. & B. 265; 26 L. J. M. C. 84. The representation was of a gold chain. It was composed of brass, silver, and gold, but the gold minute in quantity. This was not a pretence within the Act. R. v. Lee, 8 Cox, 233. Willes, J., diss.; Bramwell, B. dub. In R. v. Roebuck; R. v. Tabram, cor. Adams, Serjt. was cited. Dears. & B. 31. But it was overruled by R. v. Ball, Car. & M. 249. In R. v. Tabram, there was a representation that the article produced was ribbon gold or gold shuff. If so, it was worth 3*l*. 18*s*. the ounce, but that offered was worth only 18*s*. Still, it was of the same nature, whereas in R. v. Ball the thimbles were not silver at all.

² R. v. Pratt, 8 Cox, 334. Verdict, Not guilty, else the point would have been reserved.

³ R. v. Watson, 27 L. J. M. C. 18; Dears. & B. 348.

⁴ R. v. Robinson, 28 L. J. M. C. 58; Bell, 34.

⁵ R. v. Wakeling, Russ. & Ry. 504.

⁶ Wickham v. The Queen (in error), 2 Per. & D. 333; 10 Ad. & El. 34. The indictment should have shown how the note was of no value, and should have described the note.

⁷ 2 Ld. Raym. 1013. A. pre-point is sometimes put as if a lie was something laudable. Who is to give the measure?"

One or two principles remain to be mentioned. An attempt must be made to gain something, whether money, goods, or a valuable security. Credit in account will not do. The prisoner overdrew his bankers, with their consent, pretending that he had good bills which would exceed the debt. He actually sent one good bill to them, but another bill was not accepted, and as the bankers suspected that the prisoner knew he had no title to draw upon the party mentioned in this last bill, they prosecuted him for the supposed fraud, after paying his cheques upon the faith of the bill so dishonoured. The jury found him guilty. But by Lord Tenterden, "He only obtains credit in account, somebody else receives the money." The judges were of opinion, that the prisoner could not be said to have obtained any specific sum on the bill; all that was obtained was credit in account, and they held the conviction wrong.¹ Again, the prisoner had a circular note of credit for 210*l.* from a bank at New York, authorizing him to draw for that sum on the Union Bank of London, in favour of certain named correspondents in foreign countries. The prisoner went to St. Petersburg, and there altered 210*l.* to 5,210*l.*, presented it so altered to W. & Co., of St. Petersburg (one of the specified correspondents), and drew in their favour on the Union Bank a cheque for 1,200*l.* W. & Co. cashed the cheque, and sent it to London, but the fraud was then discovered, and payment refused. The conviction was quashed. For if W. & Co. had obtained payment, it would not have been in pursuance of the prisoner's wish. They would have obtained the money for their own, not for the prisoner's use, and, therefore, there would not have been any obtaining of money by him.²

Another principle equally plain is, that the property must be surrendered under the influence of the false pretence. So, that where a man, professing to sell an interest in an estate, received the purchase money, and gave the usual covenant for title, having previously sold his interest to a third person, it was held, that as the purchaser had accepted the covenant for his security, the false pretence was gone. Had the prosecutor advanced his money upon the defendant's verbal pretence alone, the case would have been different.³ And so it was where the defendant sold to A., and then sold the same property conditionally to B., and did not return B.'s tended that he was sent by B. to receive 20*l.* By Holt, C. J., "It is no crime unless he came with false tokens. Shall we indict one man for making a fool of another? Let him bring his action."

¹ R. v. Wavell, 1 Moo. C. C. 224. R. v. Crosby, 1 Cox, 20. "Working by thirds." Sum allowed in account, but no money received. Maule, J.

² R. v. Garrett, Dears. 232; 23 L. J. M. C. 20.

³ R. v. Codrington, 1 C. & P. 661. There was ground for a civil action, but the act was not a misdemeanor. See R. v. Dale, 7 C. & P. 352.

money, it was held not to be a false pretence.¹ It is true, that it seems to have been held in Ady's case, that it was no answer to an indictment for the misdemeanor to say that the prosecutor had laid a trap to ensnare the defendant into the commission of the offence.² But, as it is well observed in a note to a publication of some value, the prosecutor could hardly be said to have parted with his money through the inducement of the false pretence,³ and the Act is express that the property shall be so obtained.⁴ Such a trap was laid, and the prosecutor paid money, knowing of the fraud. The court quashed the conviction.⁵

The last principle we have to mention is, that there must be an intent to defraud. A. owed B. some money. C., the servant, obtained a sack of malt from A. under a pretence that B. had bought it. There being no intent to defraud, but rather to get an equivalent for the debt, this was held not to be a false pretence within the statute.⁶

However, notwithstanding the statute of Geo. 4, the law remained very imperfect. For one Danger went to the prosecutor, and falsely represented to him that C. was baling up for him, the prisoner, a quantity of leather, which the prisoner expected on that afternoon. On this the prosecutor agreed to buy the leather, and to accept a bill for the purchase money. The prisoner produced a bill duly stamped, signed by himself as drawer, addressed to the prosecutor, and made payable to the prisoner's own order. The prosecutor accepted the bill, and returned it to the prisoner, and the latter indorsed and negotiated it, and appropriated the proceeds. His conviction for false pretences was quashed, for the bill in the hands of the prosecutor was of no value to him, nor to any one else, except the prisoner. The prosecutor never had any property in the bill, nor in the paper on which it was written.⁷ The prisoner was guilty of a gross fraud, but not one contemplated by the Act.⁸ Whereupon the Act 21 & 22 Vict. c. 47, was passed to remedy the grievance, and, being repealed,⁹ was much extended by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 90.

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 17, every person who shall, by any fraud or unlawful device or ill practice, in playing at or with cards, dice tables, or other game, or in bearing a part in the stakes, wagers, or adventures, or in betting on the sides or hands of them that do

¹ Anon. Lofft. 271.

² R. v. Ady, 7 C. & P. 140.

³ Law Magazine, v. xv. p. 423.

⁴ In R. v. Dannelly and Vaughan, Russ. & Ry. 310, the knowledge on the part of the prosecutor that he was to be plundered on that night, did not lessen the offence, nor make his loss attributable to any other circumstance than the robbery. And in R. v. Norden, East, P. C. 666, the person who went out to meet the robber did not intend to part with his money if he could help it. But in R. v. Ady the money was obtained with the knowledge that the pretence was false, and, consequently, could hardly be said to have been given up through the influence of it.

⁵ R. v. Mills, Dears. & B. 205; 26 L. J. M. C. 79.

⁶ R. v. Williams, 7 C. & P. 354.

⁷ R. v. Danger, Dears. & B. 307.

⁸ Lord Campbell, Id. 324. As to fraudulent confessions of desertion, whereby money shall have been obtained, and false representations by a recruit before a justice, whereby money is gained, see the Mutiny Acts, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 7, ss. 37, 48; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 8, ss. 54, 66.

⁹ By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95.

play, or in wagering on the event of any game, sport, pastime, or exercise, win from any other person to himself, or any other, any sum of money or valuable thing, shall be deemed guilty of obtaining such money, &c., by a false pretence, with intent to cheat or defraud such person of the same. Whatever may be the rule upon other indictments, and however necessary it may sometimes be, that more should be stated in the indictment than is found in the statute, it has been determined upon this clause, that it is not incumbent to state that the money won was the property of any person.¹

Indictment.] The indictment states that A. unlawfully, knowingly, and designedly, did falsely pretend to B. that he was A. B., [and then describe the fraud committed in the character of A. B.,] or that he had certain property to dispose of, &c., by which false pretence² A. then unlawfully did obtain from the said B. the goods or money or valuable security,³ which respectively may be the subject of the indictment, with intent to defraud B., &c. Whereas, in fact, [negative the pretences] as the said A. did then falsely pretend, and the said A. at the time he so falsely pretended to B., knew the said pretence to be false. By mistake after "unlawfully, knowingly, and designedly," the words "did feloniously pretend," crept in upon one occasion, and were held to vitiate the charge.⁴ But the words "knowingly and designedly did obtain," are the chief terms. Where, by accident, the indictment ran thus: "knowingly and designedly did pretend," and "knowingly and designedly did obtain," it was held that the gist of the expressions lay in the allegation of a guilty acquisition.⁵ And by Best, J., "All that was necessary was to show the false pretences used, and that by means of those false pretences, the defendant knowingly and designedly obtained the goods in question, negating also the pretences."⁶ It had been, indeed, previously determined, that the omission of the word "falsely," where it was said that the defendant pretended, &c., was not material, there being averments that the pretences were false.⁷ Upon one occasion the words "unlawfully and fraudulently did falsely pretend" were held insufficient for want of

¹ R. v. Moss, 26 L. J. M. C. 9; Dears. & B. 104.

² This averment is important. R. v. Hunt, 8 Cox, 495.

³ This is the proper way of stating the pretence. It would be dangerous to allege that A. "would" or "could" do such an act. Very recently, there were three false representations:—1. That the prisoner was an unmarried man, and would marry her. 2. That he would furnish a house with the sum of 8*l.* which she was to give him for the purpose. 3. That he would return and marry her. The prisoner obtained the money and never returned. This conviction was held right. The statement that he was unmarried was the essential false fact, and it mattered not that it was united with false promises which could not sustain the indictment. R. v. Jennison, 6 L. T. (N. S.), 256; 10 W. R. 488.

⁴ R. v. Walker, 6 C. & P. 657.

⁵ R. v. Howarth, 3 Stark. 26.

⁶ Id. 27. See also to the same effect, R. v. Tomkins, 8 East, 180.

⁷ East, P. C. 838; R. v. Airey, S. C. 2 East, 30, where the case is reported at length, and some of the judges were inclined to think, that an allegation of the falsehood of the pretences would suffice without the expressions "falsely," or obtaining by "false pretences." See 2 East, 35. And see Matthews v. Biddulph, 4 Sc. 54; 1 Dowl. (N. S.), 216.

“knowingly,” or an expression to that effect.¹ But the authority of this case is shaken. At all events, it can apply only when the objection is taken on demurrer. After verdict, it is immaterial.² [“From the said B.”] The prisoner presented a certificate to A., the secretary of a lodge, and then went to B., the treasurer, who paid the money. It was held, that the money was, nevertheless, obtained from A.³ The necessity for setting out the pretences is so clear, that the indictment is absolutely defective without it. Therefore, where the charge was, that Thomas Mason obtained from Robert Schofield two guineas, by false pretences, with intent then and there to cheat and defraud Schofield, the court reversed the judgment, upon error brought, and Buller, J., observed, that the precedents were quite the other way.⁴ The court must see what the pretences are, in order to judge whether they come within the statute.⁵ And there must be a complete statement.⁶ Yet, it might be demurrable to charge in the same indictment the obtaining of money from different persons and under different pretences, although under several counts.⁷ The instrument used as the false pretence need not be set out, unless it is material for the court to see whether it is, in legal construction, one of the character alleged. A flash note, as “Bank of Elegance,” need not be so set out.⁸ Where the prisoner, through a false pretence, obtained money from a benefit society (not enrolled), it was held, that the indictment might lay the pretence as having been made to A., and the money obtained as having been the property of B. and others, B. and the others having access to the money by a key common to all.⁹ Again, the indictment need not show that the false pretence was made in order to obtain a particular security, ex. gr. an order for the payment of 500*l.* An indictment stated, that A. did falsely pretend that — then was a captain in the guards, &c. The word “then” was deemed to refer to the time of making the pretence.¹⁰ The indictment called the security “a certain valuable security, to wit, an order for the payment of 500*l.*, of the value of 500*l.*” This was held a sufficient statement that the security was of value, at least after verdict, by virtue of 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 21.¹¹

¹ R. v. Henderson, 2 Moo. C. C. 192.

² R. v. Bowen, 19 L. J. M. C. 65.

³ R. v. Rouse, 4 Cox, 7. So is R. v. Brown, 2 Cox, 348.

⁴ R. v. Mason, 2 T. R. 581, 586; Leach, 487; on 30 Geo. 2, c. 24. S. P. by Lord Ellenborough, 1 Campb. 496. See 1 Campb. 213, 495, and post, “Evidence.” So, under 33 Hen. 8, in R. v. Munoz, Str. 1127, and 7 Mod. 315, the same holding prevailed where the false tokens were not set forth. R. v. Eddy, East, P. C. 837.

⁵ By Grose, J., in R. v. Fuller, East, P. C. 837. See also R. v. Fully, 9 C. & P. 227.

⁶ Matthews v. Biddulph, 4 Sc. N. R. 54; 1 Dowl. (N. S.), 216.

⁷ R. v. Bassett, 1 Cox, 51. R. v. Brown and others, 2 Cox, 348.

⁸ R. v. Coulson, 19 L. J. M. C. 182; Den. 592.

⁹ R. v. Dent, 1 Car. & K. 249.

¹⁰ By Patteson, J., 1 Cox, 244.

¹¹ R. v. Hamilton, Hamilton v. Reg. (in error), 16 L. J. M. C. 9. 9 Q. B. 271.

And, again, the objection was cured after verdict by the same section, because the indictment pursued the words of the statute.¹ Where money was obtained from the prosecutor by means of a false summons, it was held unnecessary to set out the summons in the indictment.² A master gave his servant a cheque, according to account, to pay his workmen. This account, which amounted to 14*l.* was false as to 7*s.* The servant kept the 7*s.*, and the indictment stated the intent to have been to defraud the prosecutor of the cheque. But it was objected, that the intent was only to defraud him of a part. The judges, however, held the conviction right.³ But it does not appear necessary to describe the pretence more particularly than it was shown or described to the party at the time, and in consequence of which he was imposed upon.⁴ And, although it is usual to allege the pretences to be false, yet, it seems, that if the thing, or expression, or matter be alleged to be false, it would be sufficient without any further statement of its falsehood.⁵ Some care must be shown in setting out the property obtained. "Divers sums of money,—that is to say, the sum of two guineas,"—would probably be deemed too uncertain, and, perhaps, repugnant.⁶

[Of the monies of B. Of the goods and chattels of B.]

If the charge be for defrauding a particular individual of goods, the indictment must not only state from whom the goods were obtained, but likewise whose property they were, and the defect has been held fatal, even after verdict.⁷ And this allegation is deemed to be the more indispensable under the Act 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, because the offence being made larceny by the proviso, the indictment must contain the requisites of a count for larceny, and an acquittal could not be pleaded in bar to a subsequent indictment for larceny, if the statement in question be omitted.⁸ The words "of the monies of B.," as in the case of a cheque, show that the cheque was B.'s property.⁹ The ownership of the property should be set forth.¹⁰ So as to bills of exchange. And the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 5, did not help the mistake.¹¹ And

¹ By Patteson, J.

² R. v. Woolley, 19 L. J. M. C. 165; Den. 559.

³ R. v. Leonard, Den. 304; 2 Car. & K. 514. There were four counts. The judges held the first proved, and, as there was a general verdict, they recommended a separate sentence on the other counts. See R. v. Bullock, 25 L. J. M. C. 92.

⁴ East, P. C. 837. Therefore, in a case upon a false wager with a colonel at Bath, it was held unnecessary to specify the name of the colonel. "Perhaps his name was not mentioned." Young v. The King (in error), 3 T. R. 98, 100, 102.

⁵ R. v. Terrey, Cro. Car. 564.

⁶ See R. v. Mason, 2 T. R. 581; Id. 586, Buller, J.

⁷ Martin v. Regina (in error), 3 Nev. & P. 472; 8 Ad. & El. 481. R. v. Norton, 8 C. & P. 196.

⁸ R. v. Norton, 8 C. & P. 196. R. v. Scott, cited, 2 Moo. C. C. 7.

⁹ R. v. Godfrey, 27 L. J. M. C. 151; Dears. & B. 426.

¹⁰ R. v. Kendrick, Dav. & M. 200; 5 Q. B. 49.

¹¹ Sill v. Reg., Dears. & B. 132; 22 L. J. M. C. 41; 1 El. & Bl. 553.

the following count was sustained: That A. &c., by divers false and fraudulent pretences, unlawfully, knowingly, and designedly, did attempt and endeavour feloniously to steal, &c., of and from B., a large sum of money, to wit, &c., of the monies of the said B.¹ But where the indictment stated, that the prisoner did "unlawfully attempt and endeavour fraudulently, falsely, and unlawfully, to obtain from the A. C. Insurance Company, a large sum of money, to wit, &c., with intent thereby then and there to cheat and defraud the said company," the judges yielded to both the objections which were made. 1. The nature of the attempt was not sufficiently specified. 2. The averment of the attempt to obtain did not lay the money as the property of any one.²

It has been said that it was immaterial to affirm the falsely pretending, provided the obtaining by the false pretence was stated, and the truth of the pretence negatived. The latter proposition must not be overlooked. An indictment charged the defendant with obtaining 6*l.* from Eliza Bullen, under the pretext of his having sufficient interest with the lords of the admiralty to secure her husband from impressment by means of a protection, and he was convicted, but error was assigned for want of some averment to falsify the matters of the several pretences, or one of them. And the court held, that the judgment must be reversed by reason of this omission. And they likened the prosecution in this respect to a charge of perjury, where it is essentially required that proper averments should be introduced to falsify the matters sworn to. And it was in vain endeavoured by the counsel for the crown to distinguish the case of perjury. The defendant was not apprized sufficiently of the accusation intended to be preferred against him, and as the word "falsely" would not impute that the whole of the allegation was untrue, it should have been pointed out what was untrue.³ Thus, if the pretence is that A. was possessed of so much money, there should be an averment that the defendant knew it to be untrue.⁴ So, that the defendant knew the note in question to be a false note.⁵

["With intent to defraud B."] A representation to one partner is, probably, a representation to all. So, that a person who pretended to A. only, must not be acquitted because the indictment contains the words "A. and others." At all events, "and others" is surplusage.⁶

Joinder.] In Young v. The King (in error),⁷ it was held, that several persons might be joined in the same indictment for the same cheat. If the evidence be complicated, it may be separated

¹ R. v. Bullock, 25 L. J. M. C. 92. There was a general verdict, but separate sentences.

² R. v. Marsh, Den. 505; 19 L. J. M. C. 12. And R. v. Martin, and R. v. Morton were cited.

³ R. v. Perrott, 2 M. & S. 379.

⁴ R. v. Henderson, ut supra, Car. & M. 328.

⁵ R. v. Philpotts, 1 Car. & K. 112. R. v. Gruby, 1 Cox, 249.

⁶ R. v. Kealey, Den. & P. 68; 20 L. J. M. C. 57.

⁷ 3 T. R. 98.

for each particular defendant.¹ And by Buller, J., "This is not like the case of a conspiracy, where the whole story must be taken up in detached pieces at different times to charge the different actors. If, however," continued the learned judge, "any authority were necessary, a case happened about a year ago, which is stronger than the present. Three persons were indicted on the Black Act for shooting at the prosecutor; they were all charged with the single act, and the indictment was held by all the judges of England to be sufficient."² And in the same case, a joinder of different cheats in the same indictment was likewise held to be proper. And by Grose, J., "It is no objection in the case of felonies, still less is it so in misdemeanors."³

Evidence.] The evidence chiefly applicable to an indictment for false pretences is:—1st, that the prisoner made a pretence; 2ndly, that in consequence of such pretence he obtained the property mentioned in the indictment. Mr. Justice Taunton appears to have laid down the law in a case at Hereford, which, correct as it may be, savours much of an encouragement to dishonesty. The prisoner pretended he had been sent by his master to B. for 2*l.* or 3*l.* to pay for wheat. B. said he had no small money, but he would let him have a 10*l.* note. Taunton, J.: "The prisoner asks for one thing and obtains another. He did not obtain the 10*l.* note by means of the pretence,⁴ but through the imprudence of the prosecutor. I think that is not sufficient."⁵ And 3rdly. That the pretence so put forth was false.

If part only of the pretences be proved, such part being the cause of the successful deceit, it will suffice. This point was determined by the judges in a case where several pretences were laid in different counts, and some were satisfactorily brought before the jury, whilst others failed in proof. This alternation took place in a majority of the counts respectively, of which there were six, and there was a general verdict of guilty. The conviction was affirmed.⁶ The same doctrine has likewise been maintained in a more recent case.⁷ The defendant pretended that a certain vessel was in Penarth, H., master, B., mate, and that 3*l.* were wanted to pay pilotage. This evidence was deemed sufficient.⁸ The defendant came to a grocer, and said he had received an order for his quarter's salary. He then showed a kind of receipt, and asked for 15*l.*, which he obtained, and gave a receipt affirming the payment of the salary. It was said, that as the indictment only charged the receipt of an order, it was insufficient, as other pretences had been proved. It was left to the jury,—1st, whether the pretence laid was used by the defendant; 2nd, whether the money was paid

¹ 3 T. R. 103, by Lord Kenyon.

² Id. 105.

³ Id. 107.

⁴ Query, "If the pretence had not been used, the prisoner would not have obtained the note." Id.

⁵ R. v. G. Smith, 2 Russ. C. M. 312.

⁶ R. v. Hill, Russ. & Ry. 190.

⁷ R. v. Dale, 7 C. & P. 352.

⁸ R. v. Barvisse, 5 Cox, 55.

on the strength of it; 3rd, whether false; 4th, and with intent to defraud. The court held the direction right, and that there was no variance.¹ A second attempt to receive a sum of money upon a false pretence of authority was held insufficient to prove a false pretence of a previous kind charged in the indictment.² But although it thus appears unnecessary to show all the pretences specifically as laid, it is absolutely requisite to be correct in such as are relied upon. Thus the defendant was charged with defrauding M. B. of 106*l.*, by means of a pretence, that he, the defendant, had paid a certain sum of money into the Bank of England. The prosecutor, however, when called, proved that the defendant said to him, "the money has been paid at the bank," not that the defendant had paid it. And Lord Ellenborough directed an acquittal, upon the ground of the variance.³ So, if a statute mention a particular thing, as a basket, and the indictment describe it as a parcel, the variance will be fatal in an indictment upon that statute.⁴ The defendant was charged with having defrauded the countess of Ilchester under the pretence of a counterfeit ticket for the carriage and portage of a certain parcel. The servant of the countess paid the sum said to have been fraudulently obtained, and it was objected, that the servant, and not the countess, had been cheated, for although the countess had subsequently repaid her servant, yet at the time of the fraud this money was the sole property of the servant. However, the servant swore that he had upwards of 9*s.* 10*d.*, the sum demanded, at that time in his possession on account of his mistress, and Lord Ellenborough then said, that the averment was sustained. The defendant was convicted.⁵ So where part of the pretence was that a family lived at Stratford-on-Avon, whereas they lived two miles from it. This was a variance.⁶ Evidence that cash could not be obtained for certain notes alleged to be good is sufficient. Bankruptcy need not be proved. It is enough to show the stoppage of the bank, and the scienter.⁷ Where P. pretended to a benefit society, that his wife was dead, and then upon demand of the stewards, produced a false certificate,—it was held, that the real pretence was the death, and that the objection, that the pretence was not charged to be by the false certificate, was invalid.⁸ Evidence of having obtained another sum of money than that charged within a week from the time of the offence, was held not admissible.⁹

Parole evidence may be given of a lost letter which contained the false pretence in question.¹⁰ And parole evidence may be given of the false pretences, although the prosecutor makes use of a deed as part of the case. As, where the prosecutor advanced 200*l.* upon

¹ R. v. Hewgill, Dears. 315.

² R. v. Holt, 30 L. J. M. C. 11; Bell, 280.

³ R. v. Plestow, 1 Campb. 494.

⁴ R. v. Douglass, Id. 212.

⁵ R. v. Douglass, Id. 213.

⁶ R. v. Henry and another, 1 Cox, 101.

⁷ R. v. Smith, 6 Cox, 314.

⁸ R. v. Dent, 1 Cox, 15; 1 Car. & K. 249.

⁹ R. v. Holt, 30 L. J. M. C. 11; Bell, 280.

¹⁰ R. v. Chadwick, 6 C. & P.

181.

the faith of receiving certain annual proceeds from an office, but there was, moreover, a deed of partnership, the consideration for which between the prosecutor and the prisoner was stated to be 200*l.*, to be paid by the prosecutor, and which deed was adduced in evidence. It was objected, that as the deed was silent with regard to the pretences charged, but, on the contrary, that it represented the 200*l.* as to be given in consideration of a general partnership, the parole evidence must be rejected, and an acquittal directed. The recorder, however, proceeded, and the conviction was held right.¹ Two conversations at separate times may be connected so as to constitute a charge of false pretence. The jury are to decide.² A plea of infancy is not receivable against a minor who pretended that he was of full age. The plea might have been put in without his knowledge.³

Trial.] It will be observed, that the Act makes the receiving by virtue of the false pretence the substantive crime, and therefore, where the pretence was set on foot in Herefordshire, but the cheat took effect in Monmouthshire, it was held, that the trial ought not to have been in Herefordshire.⁴ A post-office order was, at the prisoner's request, posted in Middlesex. The prisoner received it in Kent. He had, however, constituted the postmaster in Middlesex his agent, and, therefore, he was rightly convicted in Middlesex. Perhaps, he might have been tried in Kent likewise.⁵ So, where the false pretence was made in the borough, by the delivery of a letter written in the county, it was held that the prisoner might be tried in the borough, under 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 12, for the postmaster was his agent.⁶ It is necessary to state in a case reserved, what the direction to the jury was, otherwise it may be that the only point upon which a conviction could be sustained, was not submitted to their notice.⁷

Restitution.] There was no restitution in the case of a conviction for a fraudulent taking as the law formerly stood. But the statute 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 100, permits restitution in cases of any felony or misdemeanor under that Act, in stealing, &c., any chattel, money, &c., unless any valuable security shall have been paid or discharged bonâ fide, or, being a negotiable instrument, shall have been bonâ fide taken or received by transfer or delivery for a just and valuable consideration, without notice, or reasonable cause to suspect that it had been improperly obtained. Prosecutions against bankers, trustees, &c., intrusted with the possession of goods or documents of title to goods, are excepted.

¹ R. v. Adamson, 2 Moo. C. C. 286; 1 Car. & K. 192.

² R. v. Welman, 21 L. J. M. C. 118; Dears. 188.

³ R. v. Walker, 1 Cox, 99. Whether the statement made by him be admissible, qu.? R. v. Simmonds, 4 Cox, 277.

⁴ R. v. Buttery, cited, 4 B. & A. 179.

⁵ R. v. Jones, Den. 551; 19 L. J. M. C. 162; 3 Car. & K. 346.

⁶ R. v. Leech, 25 L. J. M. C. 77.

⁷ R. v. Keighley, Dears. & B. 145.

CHAPTER XXVII.

OF FELONIES RELATING TO THE RECEIPT OF STOLEN GOODS.

OUR inquiries in this place, with respect to receivers of stolen goods, will be principally directed to offences of that nature which are made felonies by statute, inasmuch as the receiver, although an offender at common law, is only liable to be prosecuted in that respect for a misdemeanor; and, we may add, that he is only triable for a misdemeanor under some provisions even of the statute law. The principal enactment,¹ with reference to the general receiver of stolen goods, was the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 54; and now, by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 91, whosoever shall receive any chattel, money, valuable security,² or other property,³ the stealing, taking, extorting, obtaining, embezzling, or otherwise disposing whereof shall amount to a felony, either at common law or by virtue of this Act, knowing the same to have been feloniously stolen, &c., shall be guilty of felony, and may be indicted and convicted either as an accessory after the fact or for a substantive felony, and in the latter case, whether the principal felon shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice; and every such receiver, howsoever convicted, shall be liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping. Provided, that no person, howsoever tried for receiving as aforesaid, shall be liable to be prosecuted a second time for the same offence.

And by sect. 95, whosoever shall receive any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, the stealing, taking, obtaining, converting, or disposing whereof is made a misdemeanor by this Act, knowing the same to have been unlawfully stolen, taken, obtained, converted, or disposed of, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and may be indicted and convicted thereof, whether the person guilty of the principal misdemeanor shall or shall not have been previously convicted thereof, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice; and every such receiver shall be liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven nor less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.

¹ The following Acts were repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 101: 21 Geo. 3, c. 69 [receivers of stolen pewter]; 22 Geo. 3, c. 58 [buyers and receivers of stolen goods].

² See sect. 1. R. v. Gill, Russ. & Ry. 384.

³ See R. v. Davison, 6 C. & P. 177. No matter whether for profit, or merely to aid the principal, Gurney, B.

There may be three modes of proceeding against a receiver. 1st,—as a substantive felon, whether the principal has or has not been convicted, or is amenable to justice. 2nd,—as an accessory after the fact when the principal felon has been previously convicted, or been amenable to justice. 3rd,—jointly with the principal in the same indictment. There was formerly considerable difficulty in determining whether the offence of the receiver amounted to felony or misdemeanor, where there had been no conviction of the principal, the majority of the judges having, upon one occasion, been of opinion that it was only a misdemeanor;¹ but upon another, by nine to six, that it was a felony.² There were three counts. Two charged A. and B. with stealing, the third, B. with receiving; A. was acquitted, and appeared against B. His evidence showed B. to have been both accessory before the fact and receiver. There was a general verdict of guilty against B., and the conviction was affirmed. Since 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 1,³ the accessory before the fact is a substantive felon, and there was no inconsistency in the general verdict against B. as accessory and receiver.⁴

Summary conviction.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 97, (which succeeds 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 60,) where the stealing or taking of any property whatsoever is by this Act punishable on summary conviction, either for every offence, or for the first and second offence only, or for the first offence only, any person who shall receive any such property, knowing the same to be unlawfully come by, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice, be liable, for every first, second, or subsequent offence of receiving, to the same forfeiture and punishment to which a person guilty of a first, second, or subsequent offence of stealing or taking such property is by this Act made liable.

An instance of summary conviction is when a dealer in old metals is found in possession, without lawful excuse, of stolen property. But, in this case, the dealer may be indicted for a felonious receipt, notwithstanding the Act, provided that he be not proceeded against in both ways.⁵

Who a receiver.] It has been said that the distinction between a principal and an accomplice is sometimes so nice as to be scarcely distinguishable; and, in the case of receivers, the line has occa-

¹ R. v. Cale, 1 Moo. C. C. 11.

² R. v. Solomon, 1 Moo. C. C. 292, overruling R. v. Cale. And see 3 Wm. & M. c. 9, s. 4; 10 Geo. 3, c. 48; 3 Geo. 4, c. 24; all which are, however, repealed; and, for the cases under the old law, see 1 Ch. Burn. 36.

³ Now 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 2.

⁴ R. v. Hughes, Bell, 242; 8 Cox, 278.

⁵ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 110, s. 4.

sionally been drawn with some difficulty. The rule seems to be that, if there be one continuing transaction, all parties are principals. The master of a boat was employed for the purpose of bringing barilla on shore. Some of his servants, without his privity, removed a part of this barilla, and concealed it in another part of the boat; but the master afterwards helped in removing this parcel of the barilla from the boat for the purpose of carrying it off. Here the master was held to be a principal, according to the charge against him in the indictment, and not a receiver nor an accessory.¹ It was determined to steal the remainder of this barilla, and, accordingly, certain persons, who had agreed to purchase it, assisted in removing it from the warehouse, where it had arrived from the boat, for the purpose of theft. These persons were held to be principals also, on the ground of the whole being one continuing transaction.² And so it was where a lodger threw out the goods from a window to an accomplice waiting outside, for there was no break in the transaction, and, accordingly, the conviction of the accomplice as a receiver was held wrong.³ Nevertheless, as soon as the asportation is complete, the larceny is at an end. Therefore, where certain butter and cheese were stolen, and put into the street, and then the prisoner was fetched, who helped to carry them away, the judges held that he could not be considered as a principal, and that the conviction was wrong.⁴ So where a waggoner handed his master's hay to the ostler, the ostler was held rightly charged as a receiver, because the asportation of the hay was complete as soon as it had been removed from the waggon by the waggoner.⁵ But where A. went into the warehouse and fetched a piece of pork, which he gave to the prisoner outside, and who could not see A. when he took the pork, but might have rendered him aid, the court said he was a principal in the second degree, and could not be convicted as a receiver.⁶

Goods received.] The receiving must be of the same property which was stolen. Therefore, when the prisoner was charged with receiving six notes for 100*l.* each, and it turned out that the thief had changed these notes into notes of 20*l.*, some of which the prisoner received, the learned judge directed an acquittal as to him. The indictment charged the prisoner with receiving the said promissory notes.⁷ But if the common description of the property stolen should be altered between the larceny and the receiving, the usual description will suffice, and the offence is complete. As where C. was charged with stealing a sheep, and ¹ R. v. Dyer and another, East, P. C. 767. in the case of some horses. And R. v. King was relied on.

² R. v. Atwell and others, East, P. C. 768. ⁵ R. v. Gruncell, 9 C. & P. 365.

³ R. v. Owen, 1 Moo. C. C. 96. ⁶ R. v. Perkins, Den. & P. 459;

⁴ R. v. King, Russ. & Ry. 332. S. P. R. v. Makin and another, Id. 333, n. R. v. Kelly, Id. 421, 21 L. J. M. C. 152. There was no count against the prisoner for stealing.

⁷ R. v. Walkley, 4 C. & P. 132.

G. with receiving 20lbs. of mutton. The judges held the conviction proper.¹ Again, the first count of an indictment charged the killing of a sheep with intent to steal, the second charged the receiving of mutton so stolen as aforesaid, the third charged the receiving of mutton from an evil-disposed person with a guilty knowledge. And after some consideration, the prisoners were convicted upon this indictment and sentenced.² So where it was alleged, that a certain evil-disposed person stole a quantity of gold dust and that the prisoners feloniously received the same, the conviction was holden good against the receivers, after much debate and consideration.³

What a receiving.] An act of collusion between the party robbed and the thief in order to implicate a receiver was held in one case sufficient to convict the latter. As where a lad, being connected with the prisoner, a receiver, stole a brass weight from his master. The brass weight was taken from the lad in the presence of his master, but returned to him with the consent of the master in order that it might be sold by the lad to the prisoner. The weight was sold, and the man being indicted for receiving it from an evil-disposed person, well knowing it to have been stolen, was convicted and sentenced.⁴ But this case was overruled upon a similar occasion, for the master had resumed possession of the goods, and the seller was his agent, and the bargain valid.⁵ Whether this receiving may be against the will of the original taker remains to be decided. One W. stole a watch. He was taken with the prisoner. Whilst these persons were in custody, W. gave information to the prisoner as to where the watch was. The prisoner was discharged, and he immediately went to the place pointed out, and took the watch, and sent his wife to pawn it. Being indicted for receiving, it was held, that if the prisoner took the watch in consequence of W.'s information, he might be convicted, but on the contrary, if the taking was against W.'s will, it might be a question whether the charge for receiving could be maintained.⁶ It is not, however, necessary that a person should be indicted for receiving, because he happens to show the spoil which another has taken in his absence, if he himself be privy to and engaged in the dishonest transaction. As where two persons combined to rob the prosecutor. One took some oats, and hid them with the knowledge of the other; the other person immediately came up, and removed the oats from the hiding place, his confident being a few yards off. Both were held to be principals in the larceny. There was no receiving.⁷ But there must, of course, be a guilty knowledge.

¹ R. v. Cowell and another, East, P. C. 617. See R. v. Hartall and others, 7 C. & P. 475.

² R. v. Wheeler and others, 7 C. & P. 170.

³ R. v. Caspar and others, 2 Moo. C. C. 101; 9 C. & P. 289.

⁴ R. v. Lyons, Car. & M. 217.

⁵ R. v. Dolan, Dears. 436; 24 L. J. M. C. 59.

⁶ R. v. Wade, 1 Car. & K. 739.

⁷ R. v. M'Carthy, 2 Car. & K. 379.

As where the receiver was charged with a fraudulent knowledge that certain goods had been obtained under false pretences: here the jury were not satisfied as to the knowledge.¹ So, in larceny, a general knowledge of the circumstances without some proof of knowledge of the stealing will scarcely suffice.² Belief, without actual knowledge, is said to be sufficient.³ There must also be a receipt. A. the wife of B. was apprehended in the act of claiming a hamper of stolen goods, but she did not get possession of them. The conviction was wrong.⁴ It was once endeavoured to be argued, that recent possession might be evidence of receiving, but Little-dale, J., laid it down as a rule, that the property must be shown to have been in the hands of some one else before it came to the prisoner.⁵ This point came afterwards to be much considered in a case where the idea of manual possession was chiefly in question in contradistinction to a receipt malo animo. Eight judges thought that there must be, not perhaps a manual possession in so receiving stolen property, but a dominion over the property. Four relied upon the simple fact of malus animus. Two men stole fowls, put them into a sack, and brought them into the house of the prisoner's father, in order to sell them to the prisoner. All three went into the stable, the thieves carrying the sack, and the prisoner the candle. But the prisoner had no hold of the sack, nor did he touch the fowls. The door of the stable was shut, and the men were bargaining for the fowls when the police came in. The conviction was held bad as to the receiver.⁶ Accordingly, where the prisoner appeared to have a dominion over the property stolen, and the jury found that the watch, the article taken, was under the prisoner's control, though not in his manual possession, the conviction was sustained.⁷ But it is not necessary that the prisoner should have had any interest or profit with respect to the property charged to have been feloniously received. It is sufficient if the receiving be for concealment or to assist the thief.⁸

Principals and accessories.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 98, in case of every felony punishable under this Act, every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this Act punishable; and every accessory after the fact to any felony punishable under this Act (except only a receiver of

¹ R. v. Rymes, 3 Car. & K. 327.

² R. v. Adams, 1 Fost. & F. 86. Or it may be said of some illegal taking, for the prisoner, surely, needs not to have all the incidents of larceny in his mind.

³ R. v. White, 1 Fost. & F. 665.

⁴ R. v. Hill and others, Den. 453. Whether the feme covert ought not to have been acquitted by reason of the coercion, the stolen goods having been sent to her by her husband, qu.? See Id. 456; 18 L. J. M. C. 199; 2 Car. & K. 978.

⁵ R. v. Cordy, 2 Russ. C. M. 248. R. v. Densley, 6 C. & P. 399, Patteson, J.

⁶ R. v. Wiley, 20 L. J. M. C. 4; Den. & P. 37.

⁷ R. v. Smith, 24 L. J. M. C. 135; Dears. 494.

⁸ R. v. Richardson, 6 C. & P. 335. R. v. Davis, 6 C. & P. 177.

stolen property) shall be liable to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement; and every person who shall aid, abet, counsel, or procure the commission of any misdemeanor punishable under this Act shall be liable to be indicted and punished as a principal offender.¹

And by sect. 99, whosoever shall aid, abet, counsel, or procure the commission of any offence which is by this Act punishable on summary conviction, either for every time of its commission, or for the first and second time only, or for the first time only, shall, on conviction before a justice, be liable for every first, second, or subsequent offence of aiding, abetting, counselling, or procuring, to the same forfeiture and punishment to which a person guilty of a first, second, or subsequent offence as a principal offender is by this Act made liable.

The counts for receiving are not restricted. There may be as many as for stealing.²

Indictment.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 92, in any indictment containing a charge of feloniously stealing any property it shall be lawful to add a count or several counts for feloniously receiving the same, or any part or parts thereof, knowing the same to have been stolen, and in any indictment for feloniously receiving any property knowing it to have been stolen, it shall be lawful to add a count for feloniously stealing the same; and where any such indictment shall have been preferred and found against any person, the prosecutor shall not be put to his election, but it shall be lawful for the jury who shall try the same to find a verdict of guilty, either of stealing the property, or of receiving the same, or any part or parts thereof, knowing the same to have been stolen; and if such indictment shall have been preferred and found against two or more persons, it shall be lawful for the jury who shall try the same to find all or any of the said persons guilty, either of stealing the property or of receiving the same, or any part or parts thereof, knowing the same to have been stolen, or to find one or more of the said persons guilty of stealing the property, and the other or others of them guilty of receiving the same, or any part or parts thereof, knowing the same to have been stolen.

By sect. 93, whenever any property whatsoever shall have been stolen, taken, extorted, obtained, embezzled, or otherwise disposed of in such a manner as to amount to a felony, either at common law or by virtue of this Act, any number of receivers at different times of such property, or of any part or parts thereof, may be charged with substantive felonies in the same indictment, and may be tried together, notwithstanding that the principal felon shall not be included in the same indictment, or shall not be in custody or amenable to justice.

¹ See 24 & c. 25 Vict. 94, as to accessories, passim. This clause has the words "principal in the first degree," otherwise the two Acts seem much the same.

² R. v. Beeton, Den. 414. Per cur. without argument; 18 L. J. M. C. 117; 2 Car. & K. 960.

By sect. 94, if upon the trial of any two or more persons indicted for jointly receiving any property, it shall be proved that one or more of such persons separately received any part or parts of such property, it shall be lawful for the jury to convict, upon such indictment, such of the said persons as shall be proved to have received any part or parts of such property.

The indictment states, that one A., on, &c., feloniously did steal, &c. [the property] of the goods and chattels of one B., and that C., on, &c., did feloniously receive the goods [the chattels above mentioned] so as aforesaid feloniously stolen, against the form, &c. This indictment is against the principal and the receiver. Here it is worthy of remark, that in order to make a conviction sensible, the words "so as aforesaid feloniously stolen" may be rejected. As where A. was indicted for stealing in one count, and in another for receiving the goods "so as aforesaid," &c. The jury acquitted A. of stealing, but found him guilty of receiving. It became necessary to reject the "so as aforesaid," &c., by reason of the acquittal for stealing.¹ The indictment for simple receiving states, that A. feloniously did receive [the property] of the goods and chattels of B., then lately before stolen by a certain evil-disposed person, the said A. then well knowing the said goods and chattels to have been feloniously stolen, against the form, &c. There may also be a joint indictment for stealing and receiving. The indictment under sect. 95 charges, that A. unlawfully did receive [the property] of the goods and chattels of B. by one C., or by a certain evil-disposed person then lately before [state the misdemeanor], the said A. well knowing, &c., against the form, &c.

If a receiver be indicted in one count as an accessory, and in another as a substantive felon, it is no longer in the discretion of the judge to quash the indictment. And, before this, where there appeared to be but one offence, and, consequently, there could be no prejudice to the prisoner, the judge would not entertain the objection, and the defect, if any, must be taken advantage of, upon demurrer; nor can it afford a ground, as of right, for quashing the indictment.² The substantive offence might have been always joined with a count for merely receiving. And where two were charged with separate and distinct acts of receiving, it was held to be too late to object after verdict.³ Three were charged with larceny, and two others as receivers, for receiving separately. Two counts charged the receivers with substantive felonies separately. The principal being acquitted, it was held that the receivers might be convicted upon the last two counts.⁴ A person knew that certain goods had been stolen. He directed his servant to take ¹ R. v. Huntley, 29 L. J. M. C. 170, Bell, 238; R. v. Craddock, 4 Cox, 409. In R. v. Craddock, the charge was for receiving goods as aforesaid so feloniously stolen as aforesaid. It was urged that "so as aforesaid," meant "so as aforesaid stolen" by the prisoner; but the court affirmed the conviction.

² R. v. Austin, 7 C. & P. 796.

³ R. v. Hayes, 2 Moo. & Rob. 156.

⁴ R. v. Pulham, 9 C. & P. 280.

them into his (A.'s) premises. The servant did so, but in A.'s absence. It was held, that both might be jointly indicted as receivers.¹ B., C.'s servant, delivered stolen goods to A. with A.'s knowledge. It was held, that there might be an indictment against both for larceny.² Again, we have adverted in a former page³ to some cases, where the words "to the jurors unknown," in indictments, have been found deserving of consideration. This point applies occasionally to receivers, because the theft may have been accomplished by an unknown individual, and yet the felonious act may be clearly traced to the receiver. And it was accordingly deemed right so to allege the felony where the principal was unknown.⁴ But if the party should happen to be known to one of the witnesses, upon an indictment containing the words "to the jurors unknown," so that such persons might have gone before the grand jury, a new indictment will be necessary;⁵ and, on the other hand, if the charge fail as to the party named, it will be no defence to a fresh indictment, alleging a stealing by a person unknown, that an acquittal has taken place upon the other. The indictment may allege, either that the property was taken by a person unknown, or by some other than the party originally named.⁶ On the other hand, where the receipt was charged upon A. as having received from a person unknown, and the proof was that the thief handed the property to B., and that B. gave it to A., the judge said that the proof should have been of the receipt from the person who actually stole it, and he stopped the case.⁷ And it is no objection that the same grand jury, who have found a bill charging a felony by some person "to the said jurors unknown," have also found another bill which imputes the crime to a person by name. Upon such an occasion,⁸ the judges were of opinion that the record, stating the felon to be unknown, was not negatived by the other record. Nevertheless, the modern doctrine is that, to allege the stealing to have been done by an evil-disposed person is sufficient, and that it needs not to be mentioned that the principal felon is unknown; and likewise that his name, known, need not be given.⁹ Time and place need not be stated in the allegation of the principal offence. It is sufficient to mention it in charging the receiver.¹⁰ But the nature of the offence itself should appear; and, consequently, an indictment which stated that the prisoner received certain goods, knowing the same to have been "unlawfully obtained, taken, and carried away," was held insufficient, for want of adding that the goods had been obtained by false pretences, that being the charge intended.¹¹ The indict-

¹ R. v. Parr, 2 Moo. & Rob. 46.

² R. v. Hornby, 1 Car. & K. 305.

³ Ante.

⁴ R. v. Thomas, East, P. C. 781.

⁵ See East, P. C. 651.

⁶ R. v. Woolford, 1 Moo. & Rob. 384.

⁷ R. v. Elsworthy, 1 Lew. 117; 20 L. J. M. C. 32.

⁸ R. v. Bush, Russ. & Ry. 372.

⁹ R. v. Stott, East, P. C. 780.

¹⁰ R. v. Jervis, 6 C. & P. 156.

¹¹ R. v. Wilson, 2 Moo. C. C. 52.

ment for a substantive felony is now the most safe and expedient mode of proceeding. There needs no averment that the principal has not been convicted,¹ because the offence is the same, whether such conviction shall have taken place or not. But if the indictment be framed against the prisoner, as an accessory after the fact, and the principal has been convicted, the record of that conviction should be set out and proved. And as an erroneous attainder, unreversed, stands good against an accessory, it is no objection to say that the record of conviction is full of errors. As that the prisoner was amerced; that no issue appeared to have been joined, &c.² It is sufficient to state that the principal was duly convicted, without adding that judgment was passed upon him.³ The word "been" was once, oddly enough, left out in the sentence, "knowing the same to have [been] feloniously stolen," so that the words stood, "to have feloniously stolen." The judges thought that, as the guilty knowledge was the gist of the offence, the mistake was fatal; but afterwards they took time to consider.⁴

Witness.] It has already been noticed that the principal felon may be a witness against the receiver, and likewise that a receiver may controvert the guilt of his principal. With regard to the evidence of a joint receiving, it should be remarked that the combination should be accurately borne out in proof. Two prisoners, mother and son, were charged with receiving pork; but it turned out upon their voluntary statement, that the receiving did not take place at the same time. The mother, in fact, took possession of the pork, which was found in her house, and which she declared to be her son's meat. The question was, whether she had been rightly convicted:—1st. Because the offence was complete when the woman received the pork; 2ndly. Because, if there was a receipt at all, it was from her son. The indictment, therefore, would be wrong in saying she had received it from a person unknown. And, as to her, the judges held, that it was necessary to have proved a joint receipt upon the joint charge; that, in this case, the receipt was separate, and so, that, as to the mother, the conviction was wrong.⁵

Judgment should be passed upon him who appears to have committed the first felony in point of time, and a verdict of acquittal should be taken for the other.

There was a search warrant against a prisoner in respect of some ¹ See R. v. Baxter, Leach, 578; 5 T. R. 83. R. v. Pollard, Leach, 580, cited from 2 Ld. Raym. 1370; 8 Mod. 264.

² R. v. Baldwin, 3 Camp. 265; Russ. & Ry. 241.

³ R. v. Hyman, Leach, 925.

⁴ R. v. Kernon, 2 Russ. C. M. 251.

⁵ R. v. M. and J. Massingham,

1 Moo. C. C. 257. R. v. Dovey and another, 20 L. J. M. C. 105; Den. & P. 86. The reporter adds a qu. ? whether upon a charge of receiving from T.S., the receiving from T.S. must be proved, the statute making it criminal to receive without regard to the person from whom received. 1 Moo. C. C. ut supra.

stolen iron. He was indicted for receiving 25lbs. weight of tin ; but there was a separate indictment for stealing the iron.¹ It was held, that evidence of his conduct and declaration upon the occasion of the search warrant, and likewise with reference to some brass found upon the premises at the same time, were admissible against him, the whole being one entire transaction. There was a third indictment against him for receiving the brass. Yet his endeavour to conceal the brass was allowed in evidence against him upon the trial of the indictment for receiving the tin ; and his wife's behaviour in carrying away some tin under her cloak from a warehouse on the premises after the husband's removal in custody, was likewise received.² Where persons were charged as principals, and there was a doubt whether one of them had not been the receiver, the matter was considered proper for the consideration of the jury.³ The court will not sanction evidence of the prisoner's having had goods in possession belonging to another person than the prosecutor, and that those goods were stolen. The rule respecting uttering notes has gone far enough. Under such circumstances a conviction was quashed.⁴ And Alderson, B. cited a case to the same effect tried before Talfourd, J., and himself at Liverpool, when they rejected similar evidence, of which Lord Campbell approved in the case before him.⁵

At one time the principal had been authorized to sell goods to the prisoner. It should be proved that the prisoner had knowledge that the authority to sell had been withdrawn, and, in the absence of such proof, he ought to be acquitted.⁶

Trial.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 96, whosoever shall receive any chattel, money, valuable security,⁷ or other property whatsoever, knowing the same to have been feloniously or unlawfully stolen, taken, obtained, converted, or disposed of, may, whether charged as an accessory after the fact to the felony, or with a substantive felony, or with a misdemeanor only, be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished in any county or place in which he shall have had any such property in his possession, or in any county or place in which the party guilty of the principal felony or misdemeanor may by law be tried, in the same manner as such receiver may be dealt with, &c., in the county or place where he actually received such property.

The trial, therefore, may be had—1st. Where the receipt took place. 2nd. Where the stolen property is found on the receiver ;

¹ R. v. Dovey, ut supra.

² R. v. Mansfield, Car. & M. 140 ; 5 Jur. 661.

³ R. v. Butteris, 6 C. & P. 147.

⁴ R. v. Oddy, 20 L. J. M. C. 198. See R. v. Nicholl, 1 Fost. & F. 51. But the judges still adhere to the rule in utterings. R. v. Green, 3 Car. & K. 209.

⁵ That case was R. v. Sirrell, cited, Den. & P. 267, 273. See a case of evidence sufficient to go to the jury, R. v. Robson, Dears. 400.

⁶ R. v. Wood, 1 Fost. & F. 497.

⁷ See sect. 1.

3rd. Where the principal himself may be tried. If the larceny be in the county of A. and the goods be received in B., yet the trial as to both may be in A., and the indictment may allege the respective offences of stealing and receiving to have been in the county of A.¹ The prisoner received a bank note out of Wilts, knowing it to have been stolen, and sent it to bankers in Wilts requesting them to cash it. The post-office authorities were, in this case, agents for the prisoner, and he was held to have been rightly convicted in Wilts.²

Verdict.] A verdict of acquittal on two counts for larceny will not vitiate a verdict of guilty on the third count for receiving, although the third count contains the words "so as aforesaid feloniously stolen." It was urged for the prisoner that the verdict negatived his having stolen the goods, and that the words should have been "before then feloniously stolen." But the court were of another opinion; and, by Pollock, C.B., some of the court think that the words "so as aforesaid," do not import into that count the words "stolen by Henry Craddock." The others held, that supposing these words to have been imported, the finding on that count was, nevertheless, perfectly valid.³ A. was found guilty of embezzlement and B. of receiving. B.'s conviction was right, for, by 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 47, every person guilty of embezzlement shall be deemed to have stolen the property in question.⁴ The prisoner may appear to have been a principal in the second degree in the stealing, and yet may be found guilty upon a count for receiving.⁵

¹ R. v. Hinley, 2 Moo. & Rob. 524. for the prisoner, but distinguished by the court. 20 L. J. M. C. 32.

² R. v. Cryer, 26 L. J. M. C. 192; Dears. & B. 324. See R. v. Frampton, 27 L. J. M. C. 229; 8 Cox, 16.

³ R. v. Craddock, 20 L. J. M. C. 31; Den. & P. 31. R. v. Wool- ⁴ R. v. Frampton, ut supra.

ford, 1 Moo. & Rob. 384, was cited ⁵ R. v. Hilton and another, Bell, 20; 28 L. J. M. C. 28.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

OF PIRACY.

Piracy.] Piracy is a marine robbery.¹ But at common law it was not a felony, being an offence of a special nature, for which the criminal was responsible, upon the principle that one who was considered to be hostis humani generis ought to be liable for such acts of depredation on the high seas, as if committed on land, for they would be felonious there. However, the statutes which were passed for the purpose of repressing piratical outrages created the offences felonies which came within their purview. As the 11 & 12 Will. 3, c. 7, s. 8,² with respect to piracy and robbery committed by a subject or denizen, because it is not piracy for one enemy to plunder another. The motive of laying hands upon a captain and carrying away the ship is well explained by the conduct of the crew afterwards. And evidence that the prisoner only desired a redress of grievances will not alter the character of the offence. The indictment against two persons for piracy charged them with betraying their trust by attempting to corrupt another person to run away with the ship, and with making a revolt, and endeavouring so to do. They were convicted upon the two latter counts. But as there was some evidence of ill usage, although there was also proof of an ulterior object, it occurred to the prisoners' counsel, that in order to satisfy the law, the object must have been to run away with the ship, or to enable the crew to commit an act of piracy, and that a disturbance for the sake of redressing grievances could not be within the Act, 11 & 12 Will. 3. But the judges affirmed the conviction.³ Great stress is laid upon the fact of the object being to deprive the captain of his command. This was making a revolt under the above statute, and no allegation of grievances can alter

¹ 1 Hawk. c. 37, s. 4. Making no lawful impediment, &c. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 251. R. v. Swan, 4 Cox, 108.

² Which repealed in this respect the stat. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122. Acts done against this latter statute would now be prosecuted under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106. But there is an exception of the recovery and application of penalties arising from summary proceedings. The repeal of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, revived 5 Geo. 4, c. 98. But the schedule of repeal in 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, destroyed the 5 Geo. 4, c. 98.

³ R. v. Hastings and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 82.

the case.¹ Unreasonable and vexatious conduct on the part of the captain, or unjust orders, are not ground of defence, but proof that the crew would have been in danger of their lives had they not imprisoned him, was an answer to the charge under 11 & 12 Will. 3, c. 7, s. 9.²

The words, "to be tried as pirates," under 18 Geo. 2, c. 30,³ meant that the parties should substantially be deemed pirates. They were charged with adhering to the king's enemies, and cruising in a hostile manner, and they might have been tried for high treason, under sect. 3 of that Act.⁴ An attempt to defraud underwriters, although a criminal offence, has never been considered piracy. As where the master of a vessel ran certain goods on shore in England, and having burned the ship, protested both ship and cargo, with a dishonest intent. This was held to be a breach of trust, but no felony, and an acquittal was directed.⁵ It could not be piracy to convert the goods in a fraudulent manner, until the determination of the special trust.⁶ Subsequent statutes, however, have made these acts felonies, though not piracies. It is presumed that the 32 Geo. 2, c. 25, concerning the illegal ransom of neutral vessels made prizes, was superseded by subsequent statutes. Indeed, all such acts are said to have expired with the French war, which was at that time in progress.⁷

The carrying away of slaves is not confined to places within the British dominions.⁸ Nor needs it to be proved that the ship chartered with goods on the outward voyage, but intended for slave dealing, was engaged to bring back slaves in return. The existence of a slave adventure and the fact of being engaged in it is sufficient.⁹ The reader is referred to the case of R. v. Serva and others,¹⁰ for further information upon the law of piracy. The questions of piracy jure gentium, and piracy under treaties, and piracy under municipal laws, are there discussed in some degree. This case will be found at large in a future page, where the subject of slave dealing is considered.

By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 2, no seaman is to be taken to sea without a written agreement, which must be read over and explained to him. A seaman being charged with piracy under 11 & 12 Will. 3, c. 7, was held not to be within that Act, because ¹ R. v. M'Gregor, 1 Car. & K. 429.

² R. v. Rose, 2 Cox, 329.

³ Repealed as to piracy.

⁴ R. v. Evans, East, P. C. 798.

⁵ R. v. Mason, 8 Mod. 74; East, P. C. 796.

⁶ East, P. C. 797.

⁷ Id. 801, note (a).

⁸ R. v. Zulueta, 1 Car. & K. 215.

⁹ Id. In this case it was likewise held that the slave-trading papers found upon such a chartered vessel, but not traced in any way to the knowledge of the prisoner, was not admissible in evidence against him.

¹⁰ Den. C. C. 104—157.

he had not signed nor made any written agreement under the Act of Victoria.¹

Indictment.] The indictment for piracy sets out, that A. upon the high seas, on board of a certain ship called —, in and upon B. piratically and feloniously did make an assault, and him the said B. did then piratically and feloniously put in fear and danger of his life, and did piratically, feloniously, and violently steal from the said B. [the property] of the goods and chattels of certain subjects of our Lady the Queen [to the jurors, &c. aforesaid, unknown] and then being in the custody and possession of the said B.

The words "piratically and feloniously" are usual, although "piratically" might, probably, include "feloniously," because piracy is declared to be felony. But an indictment at common law, should such a charge be again preferred, would omit the words "feloniously," inasmuch as piracy is not felony at common law.

The stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 2, s. 1 (to which reference has been made in a former part of the work) gave power to the judges of assize and gaol delivery to try all offences committed upon the high seas, and other places within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England.

And by sect. 2, the venue was to be the same as though the offence had been committed in the county where the trial was had, but all material facts were to be averred to have been done upon the high seas. There was an indictment for larceny, subsequent to the passing of this Act, containing two counts, but neither of them stated that the offence had happened within the jurisdiction of the admiralty. The objection being taken, Rolfe, B., inclined in its favour, but the judgment was respited, and the witnesses were bound over to prosecute at the next assizes. The judges, however, held the conviction right.²

Trial.] By 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 22, the Central Criminal Court is empowered to try offences within the jurisdiction of the admiralty. And costs may be allowed under the direction of three of the justices and judges appointed as commissioners under that Act. The statutes 28 Hen. 8, c. 15, and 32 Geo. 2, c. 25, s. 20, which fixed the time for holding the admiralty sessions, are thus, with regard to the trial, superseded.³

By 7 Vict. c. 2, s. 3, offenders against the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England shall be tried as if the offence had been

¹ R. v. Smith and others, 3 Cox, 443.

² R. v. Jones and another, Den. 101. Absent:—Parke, B.; Patteson, J.; Coleridge, J.; Cresswell, J.; Platt, B.

³ As to the trial of piracy in any of Her Majesty's islands, plantations, &c., which is to be according to the course of the common law. See 11 & 12 Vict. c. 7, s. 1, rep.; 6 Geo. 1, c. 19; 46 Geo. 3, c. 54, rep.; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 96.

committed on land within England, and all due authority shall be exercised by justices, and all proceedings had in accordance therewith, as if the offences had been committed within the county, &c. where the court is holden.¹ Hence it is important to ascertain whether the offence has happened within the admiralty jurisdiction, because, if beyond, it is not a piracy. And if the word "piratically" be found in the indictment, it cannot be rejected as surplusage.² With reference to the jurisdiction of the admiralty, as distinguished from the common law, it is not, after the new statutes, of very great importance in criminal cases. There is an alternate jurisdiction upon the opposite shore between high and low water mark. When the sea is full, the admiral has jurisdiction as long as the sea flows.³ But there has sometimes been a difficulty in determining how the dominion should be ascribed in harbours, or below the bridges in great rivers. Where the arm of the sea is not so broad but that a man may see from one side to the other,⁴ or "reasonably discern between shore and shore,"⁵ or, according to other authorities, when a person standing on one side of the land may see what is done on the other,⁶ the common-law jurisdiction is preferable, although the admiralty may even in some of these cases have a concurrent power, especially at the mouth of great rivers, or near to the sea. And as soon as we descend below the fauces terræ, and the great bridges, into the sea itself, where, however, there is still such an enclosure as to circumscribe the place within the body of a county, the jurisdiction is concurrent, and so it was decided in R. v. Bruce for murder.⁷ And Lord Coke's narrower construction of the limits of the body of a county,⁸ was, in this case, deemed erroneous by the judges.⁹ It appeared to them that the 28 Hen. 8, c. 15, "applied to all great waters frequented by ships, that in such waters the admiral in the time of Henry the 8th pretended jurisdiction, that by havens, &c., havens in England were meant to be included, though they are all within the body of some county, and the mischief from the witnesses being all seafaring men, was likely to apply to all places frequented by ships."¹⁰ It has been said, that if a larceny be committed below the bridges or in harbours, and yet within the body of a county, the admiralty has no jurisdiction.¹¹ Whilst, on the other hand, where goods were taken at sea within the body of a county, and were then carried upon the shore, the common law had no jurisdiction, because the original taking was not within its cognizance.¹² These difficulties were not helped by

¹ See 7 Geo. 4, c. 38.

² East, P. C. 805.

³ 3 Inst. 113.

⁴ See 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 14.

⁵ East, P. C. 804, citing Hale, "De Jure Maris."

⁶ 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 14.

⁷ Russ. & Ry. 243; Leach, 1093. See R. v. Jemet, Cr. Circ. Companion, by Ryland. R. v. Soleguard and another, Andr. 231.

⁸ 3 Inst. 113. ⁴ Inst. 134, 135.

⁹ Russ. & Ry. 243, (note b.)

¹⁰ 1 Russ. C. M. 100, 101, citing M. S., Bayley, J.

¹¹ East, P. C. 805.

¹² Id.

the statute 39 Geo. 3, c. 37, which extended the admiralty jurisdiction to offences generally, because it speaks only of offences committed on the high seas, and out of the body of any county. But later statutes have amended the first of these faults where the jurisdiction is concurrent, because they ordain, that where the offences within their purviews shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty, they may be tried in like manner as any other felony within that jurisdiction.¹ Consequently, if the admiralty has jurisdiction within the body of a county,² as where there is much sea room, the later Acts apply. And now since the Central Criminal Court Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, and the statute 7 Vict. c. 2 above mentioned, the difficulties, if not altogether removed, seem to have been shaken in a considerable degree. It is likewise material to refer again to the decision of the judges in R. v. Jones and another,³ because it was there held, that it is not necessary in an indictment to allege that the offence has been committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty.

Punishment.] By 7 Will. 4 and 1 Vict. c. 88, s. 1, the Acts relating to the punishment of piracy are, in that respect, repealed.⁴

By sect. 2, whosoever, with intent to commit or at the time of or immediately before or immediately after committing the crime of piracy in respect of any ship or vessel, shall assault, with intent to murder any person being on board of or belonging to such ship or vessel, or shall stab, cut, or wound any such person, or unlawfully do any act by which the life of such person may be endangered, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall suffer death as a felon.

By sect. 3, whosoever shall be convicted of any offence which by any of the Acts hereinbefore referred to amounts to the crime of piracy, and is thereby made punishable with death, shall be liable to be transported beyond the seas for the term of the natural life of such offender, or for any term not less than fifteen years,⁵ or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years.

By sect. 4, in the case of every felony punishable under this Act every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable with death or otherwise in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this Act punishable; and every accessory after the fact

¹ See 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 10; c. 86, s. 10., &c.

² See R. v. Curling and others, Russ. & Ry. 123. R. v. Bruce, Id. 243.

³ Den. 101, ante, p. 550.

⁴ 28 Hen. 8, c. 15; 11 & 12 Will. 3, c. 7; 4 Geo. 1, c. 11, s. 7; 8 Geo. 1, c. 24; 18 Geo. 2, c. 30.

⁵ Penal servitude: 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2.

to any felony punishable under this Act shall, on conviction, be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years.

By sect. 5, where any person shall be convicted of any offence punishable under this Act for which imprisonment may be awarded, it shall be lawful for the court to sentence the offender to be imprisoned, or imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, and also to direct that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of such imprisonment, or of such imprisonment with hard labour, not exceeding one month at any one time, and not exceeding three months in any one year, as to the court in its discretion shall seem meet.

By sect. 6, that nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to extend to the alteration or repeal of any of the powers, provisions, or regulations of 5 & 6 Will. 4, or 4 Geo. 4, c. 64.¹

¹ The Act to commence Oct. 1, 1857, sect. 7.

PART IV.

*Of Malicious Injuries to Property.*¹

CHAPTER I.

OF ARSON AND MALICIOUS BURNING.

Arson.] It may be observed, upon introducing this subject, that arson is a fruitful source of the mischief with which we have to deal. Arson, at common law, means the "malicious and voluntary burning of the house of another."² It may likewise be remarked that a prisoner shall not be allowed to plead as a defence that he had the original intention of committing another crime than that charged in the indictment, if he has been guilty of the latter also. Therefore, when the accused person was proved to have set fire to a stack which communicated with a barn, and the barn also, the subject of the indictment, was burned in consequence, it was held, that although the intent might have been to burn the stack, the charge for firing the barn was fully sustained.³ So, again, Parke, J., left it to the jury to say, upon one occasion, whether by firing some haulm the prisoner intended to fire a building; for if so, a count for firing the building would in his opinion, be supported. This direction was approved of by the judges.⁴ So, likewise, if in an attempt to burn the house of B. that of C. should be set on fire, the offence is complete, whether it be that of principal or procurer;⁵ and, as in the case of R. v. Smithers, if life should be sacrificed through the act of the incendiary, he is not the less amenable to a charge of murder because his design had been to commit arson. Again, it had been held for law before the passing of 1 Vict. c. 89, on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, that malice against the owner of the property was not necessary to be proved to sustain a charge of this nature under the old statutes.⁶

¹ As to the venue in proceedings against persons acting under this Act, sect. 71. The admiralty, sect. 72. Not to extend to Scotland, sect. 78. To commence Nov. 1, 1861, sect. 79.

² East, P. C. 1015.

³ R. v. Cooper and another, 5 C.

& P. 535. See also R. v. Haughton, Id. 559.

⁴ R. v. Turner and another, 1 Lew. C. C. 9; 1 Moo. C. C. 241.

⁵ 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 18; see sect. 21.

⁶ R. v. Salmon, Russ. & Ry. 26. R. v. Farrington, Id. 207.

No excuse will avail, except actual insanity, or utter unconsciousness of the injurious effect.¹ So where the object was to claim a reward for giving notice of a fire, the prisoner was held to be rightly convicted of the offence.²

We now come to the statute 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, which supersedes the old Acts relating to arson.³

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 1, whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any church, chapel, meeting house, or other place of divine worship, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life or not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male of sixteen years, with or without whipping.

By sect. 2, whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any dwelling house, any person being therein, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life or not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.

It will be at once observed that the capital felony is abolished. This may be the more easily understood when it is considered that if death ensues from such a fire, the offence becomes murder. Execution has followed under such circumstances.

By sect. 3, the like punishments are awarded against such as shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any house, stable, coach-house, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, malthouse, hop-oast, barn, storehouse, granary, hovel, shed, or fold, or to any farm building, or to any building or erection used in farming land, or in carrying on any trade or manufacture or any branch thereof, whether the same shall then be in the possession of the offender or in the possession of any other person, with intent thereby to injure or defraud any person.

So it is, again, by sect. 4: whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any station, engine house, warehouse, or other building belonging or appertaining to any railway, port, dock, or harbour, or to any canal or other navigation, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to the same punishments, excepting solitary confinement.

And under sect. 5, for unlawfully and maliciously setting fire to any building other than such as are in this Act before mentioned, belonging to the Queen, or to any county, riding, division, city, borough, poor law union, parish, or place, or belonging to any university or college, or hall of any university, or to any inn of court, or devoted or dedicated to public use or ornament, or erected or maintained by public subscription or contribution, the same punishments are enacted, excepting solitary confinement.

By sect. 6, whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire

¹ R. v. Davies, 1 Fost. & F. 69. Geo. 4, c. 30. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 62; 9

² R. v. Regan, 4 Cox, 335. & 10 Vict. c. 25, to which the

³ 1 Vict. c. 89, which repealed stat. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 8, may some of the provisions of 7 & 8 be added.

to any building other than such as are in this Act before mentioned, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.¹

By sect. 7, whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any matter or thing, being in, against, or under any building, under such circumstances that if the building were thereby set fire to the offence would amount to felony, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.²

And by sect. 8, whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously by any overt act attempt to set fire to any building, or any matter or thing in the last preceding section mentioned, under such circumstances that if the same were thereby set fire to the offender would be guilty of felony, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.

At common law there must have been an actual burning, whereas the subsequent statutes used the words “set fire to,” and the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, mentioned the mere attempt, although the buildings, &c., were not ignited. The act, therefore, of applying fire with a felonious intent so as to produce combustion, completed the offence under 1 Vict. c. 89, and the attempt to fire brought the offender within 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, although no combustion ensued. Even the old cases went the length of showing that any appearance of having caught fire was enough, such as smoke, sparks, and burnt ashes, without flame.³ So blowing coals with bellows, which produced ignition.⁴ Although if there had been really no setting fire, the case could not have been sustained under 1 Vict. c. 89.⁵

The chief questions which occur under these sections are, 1st, the nature of the mischief; 2nd, the buildings which are the subjects of their protection; 3rdly, the possession which should be alleged in the indictment in respect of them. The prisoner may be convicted of the arson, or of the attempt, upon the same indictment. It may be inquired, therefore, what is a setting fire so as to incur the higher penalty? Smoke was seen to issue from the bottom of the roof of an outhouse; there was a good deal of smoke in this straw roof; there were sparks in the straw when pulled out and put on the ground, but no sparks were seen in the straw upon the roof. No flame was seen, but smoke and sparks were visible in a linen ball which was also pulled out, and the ball

¹ No solitary confinement.

² Id.

³ R. v. Stallion, 1 Moo. C. C. P. C. 1020.

⁴ R. v. Salmon, Russ. & Ry. 26.

⁵ R. v. Taylor, Leach, 49; East, was burnt right through on one side. This was held to be a setting on fire.¹ Again, the floor near a hearth was scorched; it had been at a red heat, but never in a blaze; it was a little charred. This was held to be a burning.² On the other hand, when a small faggot was set on fire on a boarded floor, which caused the floor to be scorched black but not to be burnt, and no part of the wooden floor was consumed, it was held an insufficient burning to constitute arson;³ but here the 8th section would apply to the case. Secondly, with reference to the buildings, the words "dwelling house, any person living therein," are worthy of attention. Many of the decisions in burglary respecting inhabitancy apply to the case of arson, although not universally; because a party may be convicted of burglary in a house which the owner has quitted for a time with the full intention of returning, whereas in order to come within the 1 Vict. c. 89, the prisoner must have set fire to a house actually inhabited at the time of the arson,⁴ and arson may be committed by night or by day, which is not so in burglary. Still many of the points in burglary, with reference to the house, will not be found inadmissible. Those cases which decided that although a building might not be parcel of the dwelling house for the purpose of burglary, it might be considered a distinct mansion if slept in, are deserving of attention. As where the coachman had certain lofts as his separate domicile, but which were not attached to the messuage.⁵ And the authorities in burglary which govern the question of inhabitancy may be consulted.⁶ So that a mere occupation for a particular purpose, as for watching thieves, &c., would not suffice. Nor could an unfinished house, although intended to be a dwelling house, assume that character in its incomplete state so as to be the subject of arson. And so it was held in a case where the plaintiff sued the hundred for damage occasioned by a felonious setting fire to his premises.⁷ Whilst, however temporary the dwelling might be, like the booth at Weyhill Fair, made of brick and mud,⁸ if it were used bonâ fide as a sleeping place, it would be included within this section of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97. But a shed merely used by workmen as an eating place, and not slept in, is not within that protection, because the shed is an outhouse.⁹ We shall likewise see presently that the cases which relate to the correct laying of the property of dwelling houses in indictments for burglary, are not undeserving of notice when it becomes necessary to advert to that point in trying

¹ R. v. Stallion, 1 Moo. C.C. 398.

² R. v. Parker, 9 C. & P. 45.

³ R. v. Russell, Car. & M. 541.

⁴ R. v. Allison, 1 Cox, 24. "Suppose a man lives in No. 1 and seised in fee of Nos. 2, 3, 4, &c., could Nos. 2, 3, 4, &c., be properly described as the dwelling house of the landlord?" Mortgagees out of possession. Prisoner acquitted.

⁵ R. v. Turner, Leach, 305; East, P. C. 492.

⁶ R. v. Gibbons and another, Russ. & Ry. 442.

⁷ Elsmore v. The Hundred of St. Briavell's, 8 B. & C. 461.

⁸ R. v. Smith, 1 Moo. & Rob. 256.

⁹ R. v. England and another, 1 Cox, C. C. 79.

cases of arson. But here it may be inquired how far the curtilage of a dwelling house¹ affects the question of arson under the 2nd section of this Act? Should such a question arise, there seems to be no reason why the decisions under the old statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 13, should not apply. Thus, when the prisoner was taken in the fact of breaking a wash-house which did not communicate internally with the mansion, but was under the same roof, seven judges against five were of opinion that burglary had been committed, and that the case did not come within the 13th section of the statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, respecting the curtilage.² Hence a felonious firing of such a place would be arson within sect. 2.

One North was charged with firing an outhouse. The building in question stood about four or five yards from the dwelling house, but was not joined to it. It was, however, within the curtilage, and it was objected that this could not be an outhouse within 9 Geo. 1, because it was parcel of the dwelling house, and so the subject of arson at common law. But the judges held that although for some purposes, this might be part of the dwelling house, yet it was still, in fact, an outhouse, and the conviction was affirmed.³ And, upon another occasion, an open shed in a farm-yard, adjoining other buildings, and within the same curtilage as the dwelling house, was held to be an outhouse within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 2.⁴ From hence it is probably right to conclude that, as the 3rd section of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, has the word "outhouse," and more especially as there seems to be a difficulty in holding that a building much detached from the dwelling house is an outhouse;⁵ the better way of satisfying the word in the section is, at all events, to include within it all buildings which answer its description within the curtilage of the dwelling house, and which cannot be included within the dwelling house itself; and, therefore, it will follow that the word "dwelling house," in the 2nd section may be expounded according to the law of inhabitancy recognized in burglary, except that some person must be in the habit of sleeping in the house at the time of the offence; and, likewise, according to the rule which would treat all buildings as outhouses, unless they communicate internally with the dwelling house, or be under the same roof with it.

Nature of the buildings under sects. 2, 3.] We come now to the buildings under the 2nd and 3rd sections. It should be noticed that the dwelling house is separately mentioned under sect. 2, and the "house" under sect. 3; as "house" includes "dwelling house," although not eo nomine; and as the punishments are the same, it seems almost idle to proceed upon the 2nd section, as the 3rd embraces the whole corpus delicti of the 2nd. For if

¹ See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 55.

² R. v. Burrowes, 1 Moo. C. C. 274.

³ R. v. North, East, P. C. 1021.

⁴ R. v. Stallion, 1 Moo. C. C. 398.

⁵ R. v. Ellison and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 336. R. v. Haughton, 5 C. & P. 558; R. v. Parrot, 6 C. & P. 402. See also 3 East, 460.

it should turn out upon an indictment for burning a house, that some person was therein, the prisoner could not be acquitted, so the "house," for that purpose, would be "dwelling house."

It seems that a cellar under a cottage, hired as a lock-up house, and quite independent of the cottage, being six or seven feet below the surface of the ground, would come within the compass of this word "house." Such a place, however, was held, upon one occasion, neither to be the dwelling house of the constable who hired it, nor an outhouse, parcel of the cottage;¹ and, indeed, in the old indictments, it was considered sufficient to say domum—that is, a barn, malt-house, or the like, without adding "mansionalem."² James Donnavan was charged, under 9 Geo. 1, with burning a gaol. There were four counts, and all described the prison as a house; and the question was, whether it could be considered as such. The judges held that the case was within the meaning of the Act, that the dwelling house must be considered as part of the property, and the prison as the house of the Corporation of Liverpool, where the offence was committed.³

The word "house," in sect. 3, includes an uninhabited building, one intended for domestic purposes, but which is not yet finished, and, therefore, such a house, in which the owner might have deposited stores or agricultural implements.⁴ A tenant took away his goods from a dwelling house and removed his furniture, but only for the purpose of repair. This was considered to be not the less a dwelling house, and Elsmore v. The Hundred of St. Briavells was mentioned; but the indictment failed, upon two counts, because the house was laid to be that of the landlord, whereas it was the tenant's. The third count laid the house in the tenant. Crompton, J., said that "house," in the statute,⁵ meant dwelling house, and he amended the second count by substituting the name of the tenant for that of the landlord, and proposed to reserve both points; he then left it to the jury to say whether there was an intention on the part of the tenant to return. The verdict, however, was, Not guilty.⁶ So, likewise, those buildings which, under the old law of burglary, could not be called dwellings, as where the owner left his house without the intention of returning, where he placed a person in his premises for the sole purpose of taking care of his furniture, or in order to watch thieves, &c., &c., are entirely protected by the third clause. Workmen took their meals in a building, and dried their clothes in it; it had four walls, a roof, and a door, but no window, and a person slept there with the knowledge, but without the permission, of the owner. This was held not to be a house within the 3rd section of 1 Vict. c. 89, because it had not been erected for ¹ Anon. 1 Lew. C. C. 8. One count laid the cellar to be the constable's dwelling house, and the other an outhouse, parcel of the cottage.

² 3 Inst. 67.

³ R. v. Donnavan, Leach, 69;
² Sir Wm. Black. 682.

⁴ Elsmore v. The Hundred of St. Briavells, 8 B. & C. 460.

⁵ That is, the old statute.

⁶ R. v. Kimbrey, 6 Cox, 464.

the purpose of habitation.¹ But the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, had the words, "or any building," and the present Act follows it, the punishment, however, not being so great. Therefore, a "house" is a building free from many of the difficulties which attach to an actual dwelling house, having been originally intended for a dwelling, and, if never so intended, the building is still protected by the 3rd section.

Shed, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 62, repealed.] The following description of a building was held to apply to a shed, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 62, s. 1. The building was 24 or 25 feet square, its sides were of wood, with glass windows, its roof slated, and it was commonly called "the workshop;" it was used as a storehouse for seasoned timber, as a place of deposit for tools, and a place where timber was worked up into its proper form and prepared for use. It was also held, in this case, that the person who supplied the materials and superintended the building of houses on his own estate, with the object of letting or selling the houses, was so far a builder, as that the building burnt might well be described as a building for carrying on the trade of a builder.²

Stable.] Whatever interpretation may be given to any description of building, an "outhouse" for example; it is evident, that where a place is mentioned by name, it will, of course, be within the clause as long as it is applied to the uses which the term imports. Therefore, where there was a doubt whether a hovel in the middle of a field could be called a building within 9 Geo. 1, being used as a shelter for cattle and tools, it was said, that if it had been a stable the case would have been different.³ Supposing, however, that a shed should be used merely for timber, it is not a stable under a count charging the burning of a stable, however it might have been built for and used as such.⁴ But the mere disuse of a stable as such for three years, does not make it the less a stable.⁵

Outhouse.] However, the "outhouse" seems to have been the building which has occasioned the greatest difficulties.⁶ A schoolroom was under the same roof with the dwelling house, but there was a narrow passage, about a yard wide, between the two: upon an objection that this was neither a house nor an outhouse, the judges held unanimously that this was a building under 9 Geo. 1, which speaks of "dwelling house, barn, and outhouse."⁷ But this would probably have been a "house" within 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 3, and it is certainly a building under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25, and ¹ R. v. England, 1 Car. & K. 533.

² R. v. Amos, Den. & P. 65.

³ R. v. Ecclefield, Deac. Cr. L. 56.

⁴ R. v. Colley, 2 Moo. & Rob. 475.

⁵ R. v. Hammond, 1 Cox, 60.

⁶ R. v. Burrowes, 1 Moo. C. C. 274. See also 9 & 10 Vict. c. 25,

s. 7.

⁷ R. v. Winter, Russ. & Ry. 295.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97. The principle, nevertheless, which applies to the greater number of cases is, whether a building at a distance from, and out of sight of, the dwelling house, shall be said to be an outhouse within this clause. At present the authorities seem to be considerably in favour of the negative of this proposition. But it should not be lost sight of that the 3rd section is general enough to cover any building.¹ The prisoners were charged with firing an open building in a field which had formerly been used as a stable, but latterly as a shelter for cattle to go in and out. It was partly open and partly thatched. It was a furlong from the dwelling house, but in sight; and the question was, whether this would be considered an outhouse, and seven learned judges² held that it was not, whilst six³ were of a contrary opinion, and a pardon was recommended.⁴ So, again, a cart hovel, consisting of a stable roof, supported by uprights, in a field at a distance from other buildings, was deemed not to be an outhouse within the section;⁵ and a building within a hundred yards from any house, built for a brick oven, but subsequently roofed, and in which a cow was kept, was held not to be an outhouse under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 2.⁶ In R. v. Woodward,⁷ there was a cow-hovel built with bricks; it had four walls, and was a shut-up place; it had a door of wood, with brickwork on each side; in the front wall there was no regular glass, but there were two holes of the size of ordinary windows, and the back had neither wall nor door; the roof consisted of pieces of wood laid longitudinally, each piece of wood resting on end walls—there was another cart-hovel adjoining the cow-hovel and built with brick pillars, and thatched with stubble at the top. One side was open. It was contended for the prisoner, that to constitute an outhouse the building must be appurtenant to, or connected with, or used as, or must be parcel of, the dwelling house. But Littledale, J. (present, Gaselee, J.) did not think it necessary to decide the point, because there was another very material question concerning the burning of a bean stack, and also because another case⁸ was about to be tried, in which the same objection concerning the outhouse would be made. However, Littledale, J., observed that the statute, 9 Geo. 1, c. 22, s. 1, mentions outhouse and hovel, but the 43 Geo. 3, c. 58, and 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 2, omit the word hovel,⁹ and now, again, hovel is specifically mentioned in section 3 of the present Act. Yet as soon as the building is brought into a nearer connection with the dwelling house, the case is altered. Thus, an open

¹ "Any farm building," "any building, &c.," 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 3.

² Moo. C. C. 337. Their names are not mentioned.

³ Lord Tenterden, Littledale, Park, JJ.; Bayley, Vaughan, Bolland, Barons. Absent, Lord Lyndhurst and Taunton, J.

⁴ R. v. Ellison and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 336.

⁵ R. v. Parrot, 6 C. & P. 402.

⁶ R. v. Haughton, 5 C. & P. 555.

⁷ 1 Moo. C. C. 323.

⁸ R. v. Tyers, mentioned, 1 Moo. C. C. 326.

⁹ R. v. Newill, 1 Moo. C. C. 326, Id. 458.

shed in a farmyard, formed by upright posts, with pieces of wood and straw for the roof, was held to be an outhouse within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 2.¹ So, again, a building about four or five yards from the dwelling house, but not joined to it, was held to be an outhouse within 9 Geo. 1.² Again, an unfinished cart-shed, boarded on all sides, with a door and lock and the frame of a roof with loose gorse on it, by reason of its not having been thatched, was held to be a building within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 44, concerning the stealing of fixtures,³ whence we may conclude in this instance that such a building would be an outhouse within 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 3. So a thatched pigsty, in a yard which the prosecutor occupied, and into which the back door of his house opened, was held to be an outhouse within 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 3. The yard was bounded by fences and other buildings belonging to the prosecutor, and by a cottage and barn, which were let by the prosecutor to a tenant, but which did not open into the yard.⁴ The prisoner was charged with firing a stable, an outhouse, and a stack of haulm. The building was used by the prosecutor in carrying on his trade as a builder. The haulm burnt (for the fire was kindled on the haulm first) had been carted from a field and stacked in the building. This building had once certainly been intended for a stable, but it was afterwards divided into three parts by a wall which reached to the eaves. One part was used as a stable, and the part fired contained the haulm and a lot of tiles. This was not an outhouse, shed, nor stable; but the indictment was good as to the haulm, for that needs not to be out of doors to constitute a stack within the Act.⁵ Lighting a match and going to a stack is an overt act, and evidence of an attempt to fire the stack, but the intent is a question for the jury.⁶

Mill.] The names of other buildings follow that of "outhouse" in the 3rd section of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97. The word "mill," which includes a mill-house, has long been a material term, for it was at one time found impossible to call a mill-house an "outhouse," and the mill was, therefore, in this respect, without protection.⁷ A cotton mill was held upon one occasion to be within the old Act, 9 Geo. 3, c. 29, s. 2.⁸ With respect to a "barn,"⁹ it is not necessary to show that there was either corn or hay in it; but it will suffice to prove the general use of the building for the purposes of a barn.

¹ R. v. Stallion, 1 Moo. C. C. 398. Another point was submitted to the judges, i. e., whether the straw was a part of the building. The judges, however, held that the building was an outhouse, and the conviction right. Id. 401.

² C. 22, s. 1. R. v. North, East, P. C. 1021.

³ R. v. Worrell, 7 C. & P. 516.

⁴ R. v. Jones, 1 Car. & K. 303; 2 Moo. C. C. 308.

⁵ R. v. Morrison, 5 Cox, C. C. 186.

⁶ R. v. Taylor, 1 Fost. & F. 511.

⁷ Hiles v. Hundred of Shrewsbury, 3 East, 457. R. v. Taylor, Leach, 49.

⁸ Stark. Cr. Pl. 442.

⁹ R. v. Minton, East, P. C. 1021.

It should be remarked, that the party must, under section 3, be in the house at the time of its taking fire. The prisoner fired an outhouse which was under the same roof with the dwelling house, and the prosecutor was in the dwelling house at the time; but before the fire had reached the dwelling house the prosecutor had left it. The capital charge was then abandoned, because of the prosecutor's absence, and as the indictment contained no count for arson with intent to defraud and injure, the prisoner could not be convicted even on the third count.¹

Possession.] Formerly, considerable discussion arose on the subject of possession. At common law arson was considered to be the burning of the house of another, so that the only way of reaching an offender who burnt his own house, was by the casualty of the fire extending to other property than his own (ædes alienas). But it was questioned whether the possession of the tenant, were, for this purpose, the possession of the landlord, and a decision was made at an early period, that under a lease for years a party could not be said to be guilty of felony if he burnt the house of the lessor while it remained in his own possession.² Of this determination, Foster, J., disapproved,³ but it was subsequently maintained in the case of a tenancy made under an agreement for a lease for three years,⁴ and in the case of a tenant from year to year.⁵ And so in the case of a copyhold tenancy, although the copyhold had been surrendered to the use of the mortgagee, the possession still remaining in the prisoner.⁶ Whilst a mere title to dower out of a house of which another person had possession was considered not to be such an interest as would bring the case within the rule laid down in that of Holmes.⁷ And a person who had possession and occupation without paying rent was considered merely as a servant and not as a tenant.⁸ And Foster, J., inclined to hold that a reversioner setting fire to the houses of his tenants might be said to burn "alienas ædes" within the rule in Holmes's case.⁹ But the statutes 43 Geo. 3, c. 58, followed by 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 40, and 1 Vict. c. 89, and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, have removed these difficulties. The words of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, are, "whether the same shall then be in the possession of the offender or of any other person;" so that the question now would rather be whether any possession at all need be stated,¹⁰ although it may be desira-

¹ R. v. Fletcher, 2 Car. & K. 215. So it was in the case of a stable, before Alderson, B. R. v. Warren, 1 Cox, 68. The prisoner was acquitted.

² R. v. Holmes, Cro. Car. 376, by Richardson, C. J., Jones and Berkley, JJ.; Croke, J., diss.

³ Cr. L. 115, in R. v. Harris.

⁴ R. v. Breeme, Leach, 220; East, P. C. 1026.

⁵ R. v. Pedley, Leach, 220; Cald. 218.

⁶ R. v. Spalding, Leach, 218; East, P. C. 1025. See also R. v. Scofield, East, P. C. 1028.

⁷ R. v. Harris, East, P. C. 1023.

⁸ R. v. Gowen, East, P. C. 1027.

⁹ Fost. 115.

¹⁰ In R. v. Ball, 1 Moo. C. C. 33, 34, but the point was not decided.

ble to do so, and prudent likewise to have one count, omitting a statement of possession. Still the name of the party to whom the building burnt belonged must always appear on the record, and, therefore, care is still necessary upon the subject of ownership and possession. In R. v. Rickman, although the judges held the conviction wrong for want of stating some name, they expressed their opinion nevertheless, (as the prisoners were paupers and lived in the parish house, to which they had set fire,) that the building might be laid in the overseers, or in persons unknown.¹ The prisoner was charged with burning certain outhouses. The dwelling house and farm adjoining to these outhouses belonged to B. S., but the outhouses, except a brewhouse, to her son. Heath, J., held that the premises should have been laid according to the fact, and not as in the sole occupation of the mother, and another indictment having been found agreeably to this opinion, the prisoner was convicted and executed. The brewhouse being in the joint occupation of the mother and son, it was laid accordingly.² In burglary, where the landlord is found to inhabit under the same roof with his lodgers, it is usual to lay the property of the mansion in him only, unless there be an outer door for the lodger, in which case it is proper to make use of the name of the lodger. If, however, the landlord be not under the same roof as an inhabitant, nor any servant on his behalf, the apartments should be laid as the respective dwellings of the lodgers. But in arson, although in the case of the landlord's non-inhabitaney by himself or his servant, the place burnt must indeed be laid in the tenant or lodger, yet, even if he should inhabit, and whether there be an outer door or not for each lodger, the possession may be laid in the lodger, although in the case of the landlord's residence, it may also be laid in him. Ball was charged with firing certain premises; it turned out, that the place in question was a back room, which the prisoner had hired, but where he did not sleep. He set fire to this room, and the damage did not go beyond it. He had the exclusive possession of it. The landlord dwelt in the house. After a verdict of guilty, and a case reserved as to whether the house were rightly described as in the possession of the landlord, the judges held, that the conviction was right, the possession of the tenant being that of the landlord.³ Thus, the absence of the tenant at night from the apartment was held to make no difference, which is another diversity between burglary and arson under the statutes. Even, if wrongful, it is proper to lay the possession in the actual occupier, as where a farm servant received notice to quit his cottage in a month, but held over, upon which, at the expiration of two days from the end of the month, an attempt was made to eject him forcibly, and his wife then set fire to the dwelling house. It was held that the cottage was rightly laid in the husband, notwithstanding the ¹ R. v. M. and S. Rickman, East, P. C. 1034.

² R. v. Glandfield, East, P. C. 1034.

³ R. v. Ball, 1 Moo. C. C. 30.

wrongful refusal to quit, and the conviction was affirmed.¹ Mr. Justice Parke thought at the trial that the possession should have been laid in the farmer, whose leasehold it was under another person.² An indictment had been prepared against a man for setting fire to his own goods in his own dwelling house, and as the statute 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 3, did not mention the firing of goods, he could not be convicted, but the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 8, was brought in aid of the conviction, and as that Act expressly mentioned goods and chattels being in any building, the setting fire to which is made felony by any Act of parliament, the court coupled the two Acts and two intents together, and affirmed the conviction.³

Arson at common law.] Arson at common law, which is felony,⁴ instead of being the act of burning a house or other building, is confined to burning the house of a person other than the possessor. But it is said, that to burn a mansion house in a town, or so near to other houses as to place them in danger, is a high misdemeanor.⁵ And if a house be burnt by accident, contrary to the original design of the incendiary, as if B.'s house were to be burnt in an attempt to burn that of C., it is a felony at common law,⁶ and so it would be, although the party only intended to burn his own premises.⁷ The misdemeanor committed in burning the offender's own house becomes merged in the felony as soon as the fire reaches the house of another person according to the common law.⁸

It may be further remarked, that the conflagration must be wilful in order to constitute arson at common law, unless, indeed, the party were in pursuit of an illegal act, in which case he would be guilty of felony or misdemeanor according to the circumstances.⁹ As if he were shooting at poultry with intent to steal them, and thus were to set fire to a thatch,¹⁰ and at common law it was necessary that some part of the premises or other matter should be burnt.¹¹ But to burn a barn, whether parcel of the dwelling house or not, is felony at common law, provided it have hay or corn in it, and the only distinction made between the hay and the corn was, that, in the first case, clergy was allowed, but not for burning a barn with corn.¹² Two abortive attempts to fire premises were admitted in evidence, although the prisoner had no connection with them, and the case of Donellan was cited.¹³ But Erle, J.,

¹ R. v. Wallis, 1 Moo. C.C. 344.

² Id. 345.

³ R. v. Lyons, Bell, 38.

⁴ R. v. Powlter, 11 Rep. 29.

⁵ R. v. Scofield, East, P. C. 1028;

⁶ Hale, 568.

⁷ 1 Hale, 569.

⁸ East, P. C. 1031.

⁹ R. v. Roberts, East, P. C. 1030.

R. v. Isaac, Id. 1031.

¹⁰ See East, P. C. 1019.

¹¹ Id.

¹² 1 Hale, 568.

¹³ See 1 Hale, 567; 1 Hawk. c. 33,

s. 1.

R. v. Bailey, 2 Cox, 311.

upon a charge of arson, where the prisoner was shown to have claimed a reward for giving notice of fires, refused to allow evidence to prove that other fires of which notice had been so given were similar to that for which he was on his trial.¹ But the behaviour or demeanour of the prisoner at other fires during the same night will not be evidence,² nor will threats, statements, nor particular acts be admitted with reference to other fires charged in other indictments against the prisoner.

Indictment.] The indictment for burning a church usually states that A., on, &c., did unlawfully, and maliciously, and feloniously, set fire to the parish church of —, situate, &c., on —, against the form, &c. And under sect. 3, that A., on, &c., did unlawfully, and maliciously, and feloniously set fire to a certain dwelling house, or house, or other building, situate, &c., in the possession of one B., [and it sometimes adds, that by such firing he did burn and consume the same,] with intent to injure the said B., or defraud the said B. of it in a case of insurance, &c., against the form, &c. But the words “burn and consume” do not form a necessary averment, because the expression “set fire to” sufficiently satisfies the statute.³ The word “unlawfully” must not be omitted; therefore upon a charge of firing a barn where the act was charged to have been “feloniously, voluntarily, and maliciously,” the judges ordered a new indictment to be preferred at the next assizes, because the statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 2, used the words “unlawfully and maliciously.”⁴ An intent to injure some one should be stated, but as a man must be intended to understand the necessary consequences of his own act,⁵ it would be no ground of objection to a charge for burning the house of C. with intent to injure C., that the intent was to injure another person, even although the jury should express an opinion that the intent was not to injure C. but S.⁶ In the case just cited, the jury found no intent to injure C. except so far as by law it must be so considered, and the judges were unanimous that the indictment was right as to the intent to injure C.⁷ There must, however, in the case of husband and wife, be a design to injure or defraud a third person; and, therefore, the judges held that a wife could not be properly convicted of burning her husband’s house, the husband being identified with herself, although it appeared that the prisoner’s intent was not merely to burn the house, but to do her husband a personal injury.⁸ In this case the woman had gone by her maiden name for two

¹ R. v. Regan, 4 Cox, 335.

² R. v. Taylor, 5 Cox, 138.

³ See R. v. Salmon, Russ. & Ry. 26. So decided under 9 Geo. 1, c. 22.

⁴ R. v. Turner, 1 Moo. C. C. 239.

⁵ Russ. & Ry. 209; 1 Moo. C. C.

459.

⁶ R. v. Newill, 1 Moo. C. C.

458.

⁷ Id. 461.

⁸ R. v. March, 1 Moo. C. C.

182, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 2.

years previously to the offence, being separated from her husband.¹ Yet under the 2nd section a woman might be convicted for such an offence, for there are no words "with intent to injure" in that clause, and according to this view it was held, that upon an indictment for setting fire to a dwelling house under 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 2, there being no count under section 3, for burning with intent to injure—i.e., the prisoner could not be convicted of the lesser or transportable offence under the 3rd section.² In stating the property of the house the words of "A. B.," instead of "one A. B.," have been held sufficient.³ A common gaol occupied by prisoners is not, eo nomine, a dwelling house; nor was it in sections 7 & 8 Vict. c. 62. S. S. was keeper of a gaol in the liberty of Haverling-atte-Bower; he did not reside, but kept the keys; he was also liable to be rated as an inhabitant of the liberty. Here the house was considered to have been rightly laid in him, but the intent should have been laid to injure the inhabitants of the liberty.⁴ A count stating the intent to have been to defraud the Globe Insurance Company was held insufficient, because the Globe Insurance Company was not shown to have been a corporation, and the word "person," as used in 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 14, was not mentioned.⁵ At common law, it need not be said, that the house is a dwelling house (should such be the case),⁶ nor needs the description of an outhouse to be set forth in charging the arson of such a building, whether at common law, or by statute,⁷ and though the building be within the curtilage, it is sufficient to say, an outhouse.⁸ It has been held, that where there was a counsellor and procurer of an arson, and the person so counselled attempted to set the building on fire, both might be convicted as principals for the misdemeanor, although the procurer was not present at the attempt.⁹ And under sect. 8 the counsellor and procurer, not being present, would be accessory before the fact to the felony.

The indictment for arson where there is an inmate, runs thus:— That A., on, &c., unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did set fire to a certain dwelling house of B., situate, &c., one C. being then therein, against the form, &c. Concerning farm buildings,— that A., on, &c., unlawfully, &c., did set fire to a certain hovel, shed, &c., situate, &c., in the possession of one B. [or of him the said A.], with intent thereby then to injure the said B. [or to defraud a certain assurance office called —], against the form, &c. As to hay, straw, &c.,— that A., on, &c., unlawfully, &c., did set fire to a large quantity of hay, &c., to wit —, then being in a certain farm building, to wit, a barn of one B., in the parish of —, in the county of —, with intent thereby then felo-

¹ R. v. March, ut supra.

² R. v. Paice, 1 Car. & K. 73.

³ R. v. Swatkins, 4 C. & P. 48.

⁴ R. v. Connor, 2 Cox, 65.

⁵ R. v. Allison, 1 Cox, 24.

⁶ East, P. C. 1033. See 1 Hawk. c. 39, s. 1.

⁷ East, P. C. 1033.

⁸ Id.

⁹ R. v. Clayton, 1 Car. & K. 128.

niously to set fire to the said farm building, and to injure the said B., [or to defraud a certain assurance company called —,] against the form, &c.

CHAPTER II.

OF INJURIES BY EXPLOSIVE SUBSTANCES TO BUILDINGS OR GOODS THEREIN.

Injuries by explosion.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 9, whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously, by the explosion of gunpowder or other explosive substance, destroy, throw down, or damage the whole or any part of any dwelling house, any person being therein, or of any building whereby the life of any person shall be endangered, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life or not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping.

By sect. 10, whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously place or throw in, into, upon, under, against, or near any building any gunpowder or other explosive substance, with intent to destroy or damage any building, or any engine, machinery, working tools, fixtures, goods, or chattels, shall, whether or not any explosion take place, and whether or not any damage be caused, be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen and not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

Indictment. Gunpowder.] That A., on, &c., unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did put and place a large quantity, to wit, — pounds weight of gunpowder, near unto the dwelling house of one B. situate, &c., and then unlawfully, &c., did cause the said gunpowder to explode, and by such explosion the said A. did then and there unlawfully, &c., destroy, throw down, and damage the said dwelling house of the said B., the said B. being in the said dwelling house at the time when the said A. committed the said offence as aforesaid —, against the form, &c.

CHAPTER III.

OF RIOT AND DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY.

A general rising, an unlawful concourse of people, a mutinous movement, and an endeavour to promote general disaffection, are offences which more or less threaten the tranquillity of the public. But a partial excitement, as a riot, has no such extensive danger. In its locality, it certainly furnishes grounds for apprehension and interference, but the welfare of the community is not endangered by an outbreak which, in most instances, is directed against particular persons or solitary subjects of grievance. Although, therefore, an unlawful assembly, or an insurrectionary movement, has a manifest tendency to violate the peace, and is of a more serious character, a mere riot is limited to the breach of the public tranquillity at a particular spot. It may be added, that the observations respecting the Riot Act, which may be found in this work, will fully apply to the case of an ordinary riot, for the same precautions are put in force against tumultuous multitudes, whether their designs are formidable in a small or greater degree, and whether they threaten a spreading or contracted circle.

Riot combined with the destruction of property is the felony we have to notice in this place.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 11, if any persons riotously and tumultuously assembled together to the disturbance of the public peace shall unlawfully and with force demolish, or pull down or destroy, or begin to demolish, pull down, or destroy, any church, chapel, meeting house, or other place of divine worship, or any house, stable, coach-house, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, malt-house, hop-oast, barn, granary, shed, hovel, or fold, or any building or erection used in farming land, or in carrying on any trade or manufacture or any branch thereof, or any building other than such as are in this section before mentioned, belonging to the Queen, or to any county, riding, division, city, borough, poor law union, parish, or place, or belonging to any university or college, or hall of any university, or to any inn of court, or devoted or dedicated to public use or ornament, or erected or maintained by public subscription or contribution, or any machinery, whether fixed or moveable, prepared for or employed in any manufacture or in any branch thereof, or any steam engine or other engine for sinking, working, ventilating, or draining any mine, or any staith, building, or erection used in conducting the business of any mine, or any bridge, waggonway, or trunk for conveying minerals from any mine, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life, or not less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

By sect. 12, if any persons, so riotously and tumultuously assembled, shall unlawfully and with force injure or damage any such church, &c., as in the last preceding section mentioned, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven nor less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. Provided that if upon the trial of any person for any felony in the last preceding section mentioned, the jury shall not be satisfied that such person is guilty thereof, but shall be satisfied that he is guilty of any offence in this section mentioned, then the jury may find him guilty thereof, and he may be punished accordingly.

In reviewing these sections, it is evident that there must be such a gathering as will constitute a riotous assembly, that violence must be the result of the meeting, and that the destruction of some property of the nature specified in the section must accompany the outrage. And the intention to demolish must, moreover, be shown to the satisfaction of the jury. As to the first point, although the statute speaks of "any persons," words which might be satisfied upon ordinary occasions by two or more, it is conceived that the original common law definition of riot must prevail, and that three or more must be present in order to induce the penal consequences of the Act.¹ For the statute is silent upon that head. It gives no information as to what shall be deemed a riot within the Act, and therefore recourse must be had to the common law meaning of a riot, so that if any of Her Majesty's subjects be terrified by these acts, that is a sufficient terror and alarm to constitute a riot within the statute. The assemblage, again, must be unlawful; therefore if it should become necessary, either by authority of law or otherwise, to destroy any kind of property mentioned in the 9th section, an assemblage for that purpose is not an unlawful assembly. As if a house were to be pulled down in order to save a general conflagration, or, through its unworthiness, in order to prevent its tumbling down.² So where persons assembled with tumult, and demolished a house under the idea that it belonged to one of them, had they acted bonâ fide in their assertion of right, this act would not have been a demolition within the statute, although there was a riot.³ Again, violence of an unlawful nature must be exercised during the continuance of the assembly. If the parties should meet but separate without any act of outrage, they might, indeed, be guilty of having formed an illegal assembly, but they are not rioters within the statute.⁴ A person caused a mob to assemble, and encouraged them and led them on to mischief. The mob attacked the house of B. and set it on fire, but the leader was not present. It was held that he could not be convicted of the demolition of B.'s house, because, first, it did not appear what the design of the mob was when they were led on by the prisoner; neither did it appear, secondly, whether these parties were amongst those who actually demolished the house.¹ But if the rioter comes to the demolition and aids in it by his presence or otherwise, it is no defence that he was not there when the house was first set on fire.² Thirdly, this violence must end in the demolition of the property, or in a beginning to do that which manifests an intent totally to destroy. Thus it was held upon one occasion, that the destruction of part of a building would not fully compromise the prisoners because a total overthrow was necessary,³ whilst, on the other hand, if the intent to demolish entirely is fully developed, an indictment for beginning to demolish will be sustained.⁴ If rioters commence the destruction of a house and then leave off of their own accord, it is so far evidence that they did not intend the demolition contemplated by the statute. But it would be no defence to allege that they had left off if the justice should be shown to have interfered, or if any other cause should be brought forward to prove that the rioters had been compelled to desist. In this latter event, the jury would probably be of opinion that it was a beginning to demolish.⁵ Then what shall be said to be a demolition? The destruction of a house so as to deprive it of the character of a dwelling house will be sufficient for this purpose. But in order to do this, the mere shell of the building must alone be left remaining. When the devastation has extended to the walls themselves, which are scarcely capable of demolition, the offence may be said to be complete.⁶ And the beginning to do that which would lead, unless arrested, to similar results, is the same nature of offence. So, again, the prisoners pulled a cottage down to the ground, but they left the chimney standing. It was contended hereupon that there was no demolition, the prisoners not having been interrupted; but the jury were directed that the cottage had been destroyed as a dwelling, and that the offence was complete. And it was also held, that force used by four men in order to terrify the old man whose cottage they pulled down, was a riot. The judges held the conviction right under the circumstances above mentioned.⁷

¹ See 1 Hawk. c. 65, s. 1; Burn's and others, 2 Moo. C. C. 252. Just., tit. "Riot." Sembl. S. C.

² R. v. Langford, Car. & M. 602. ⁴ R. v. Birt and others, 5 C. & P. 154.

³ S. C. And see R. v. Phillips

It is observable here, that if the house be destroyed by fire, it is not the less within the section. The prosecution need not be instituted for arson under the 2nd section. Damage by fire is held to be as much a demolition as any other mode of demolition.⁸ It was made a question upon one occasion, whether the charge of demolition could be sustained upon proof that fire was set to some furniture in the house of the prisoners, and that it

¹ R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437.

² R. v. Simpson, Car. & M. 669.

³ R. v. Ashton, 1 Lew. C. C. 296.

⁴ R. v. Thomas, 4 C. & P. 237.

⁵ R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437.

⁶ R. v. Adams, Car. & M. 299.

⁷ R. v. Phillips and others, 2

Moo. C. C. 252. R. v. Langford,

Car. & M. 602. Sembl. S. C.

⁸ R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437.

R. v. Harris, Car. & M. 661. R.

v. Christian, 12 L. J. (N. S.)

M. C. 26; Car. & M. 388.

communicated to some woodwork in the house. No other means of destruction were employed.¹ However, the demolition of moveable shop-shutters is not within the statute, for they are not part of the freehold.² Fourthly, the jury must be satisfied that the intent of the prisoners was to accomplish the act of demolition. For if in endeavouring to gain some other object the work of violence should be carried on incidentally, the crime does not fall under this head. Therefore, where the purpose was to gain possession of some pits, the case was held to be not within the Act.³ However, where two intents are present, it is no defence that the prisoners meant to combine some other plan with their purpose of demolition.⁴ So it was where the object of intending to injure a person who had taken refuge in a house was united with that of demolition.⁵ Some of the prisoners set fire to a house, and others took the furniture out of it, and burnt the furniture upon a gravel walk outside: here it was left to the jury to say whether the latter prisoners were not abetting in the destruction of the house and furniture, for, if so, they were guilty of the offence.⁶

Indictment.] The indictment states, that the prisoners unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously did assemble together, to the disturbance of the public peace, and did then unlawfully, feloniously, and with force, demolish [or destroy], &c., the property, situate, &c., against the form, &c. It seems to be necessary to identify the prisoners before the riot is given in evidence. It is said to have been so held at the special commission at Salisbury.⁷

¹ R. v. Whiston and others, 6 Jur. 1039. Whether in this particular case the indictment should have been framed upon sect. 2 (arson) qu. ? See also S. C. as to the mode of bringing the question before a superior court.

² R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437.

³ R. v. Price and others, 5 C. & P. 510. See R. v. Thomas, 4 C.

& P. 237. R. v. Phillips and others, 2 Moo. C. C. 252.

⁴ R. v. Batt and others, 6 C. & P. 329.

⁵ R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437.

⁶ R. v. Harris, Car. & M. 661.

⁷ See also R. v. Nicholson and others, Carlisle Sp. As. 1822; 1 Lew. C. C. 300.

CHAPTER IV.

OF INJURIES TO BUILDINGS BY TENANTS.

Injuries to buildings by tenants.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 13, whosoever, being possessed of any dwelling house or other building, or part of any dwelling house or other building, held for any term of years or other less term, or at will, or held over after the termination of any tenancy, shall unlawfully and maliciously pull down or demolish, or begin to pull down or demolish, the same or any part thereof, or shall unlawfully and maliciously pull down or sever from the freehold any fixture being fixed in or to such dwelling house or building, or part of such dwelling house or building, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.¹

CHAPTER V.

OF INJURIES TO MANUFACTURES AND MACHINERY.

Injuries to manufactures and machinery.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 14, whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, or destroy, or damage with intent to destroy or to render useless, any goods or article of silk, woollen, linen, cotton, hair, mohair or alpaca, or of any one or more of those materials mixed with each other or mixed with any other material, or any framework-knitted piece, stocking, hose, or lace, being in the loom or frame, or on any machine or engine, or on the rack or tenters, or in any stage, process, or progress of manufacture, or shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, or destroy, or damage with intent to destroy or to render useless, any warp or shute of silk, woollen, linen, cotton, hair, mohair, or alpaca, or of any one or more of those materials mixed with each other or mixed with any other material, or shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, or destroy, or damage with intent to destroy or render useless, any loom, frame, machine, engine, rack, tackle, tool, or implement, whether fixed or moveable, prepared for or employed in carding, spinning, throwing, weaving, fulling, shearing, or otherwise manufacturing or preparing any such goods or articles, or shall by force enter into any house, shop, building, or place, with intent to commit any of the offences in this section mentioned, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life, or not less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

¹ Punishable by fine and imprisonment.

By sect. 15, whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, or destroy, or damage with intent to destroy or to render useless, any machine or engine, whether fixed or moveable, used or intended to be used for sowing, reaping, mowing, threshing, ploughing, or draining, or for performing any other agricultural operation, or any machine or engine, or any tool or implement, whether fixed or moveable, prepared for or employed in any manufacture whatsoever, (except the manufacture of silk, woollen, linen, cotton, hair, mohair, or alpaca goods, or goods of any one or more of those materials mixed with each other or mixed with any other material, or any framework-knitted piece, stocking, hose, or lace,) shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven nor less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

It will be observed that there are three branches in the 14th section:—1, the mischief done to goods in the stage or progress of manufacture; 2, the like done to the machinery itself, as to the warp or shute, the loom, frame, &c.; and, 3, the entry into some place in order to effect the damage.¹ It is not to be supposed that the damage must necessarily be of a nature to destroy either the machine or the implement in question, or that part of the machine which is the subject of the charge. Where the prisoner entered a shop and took away part of two frames, which made the instrument of no use, but which part could be replaced without injury to the frame, it was held, that this act would support a charge for malicious damage under 28 Geo. 3, c. 55, the old Act upon the subject.² And it is worthy of observation, that although the words “loom, frame, &c.,” are not followed by “or any part thereof,” it would be difficult to find a case of malicious damage to a loom, where the intent to damage the whole would not be recognized. Cords employed to raise the harness or working tools of a loom in order to move the shuttle to and fro, are tackle.³ Still, if a piece of machinery does not answer its alleged name the indictment will fail. A warp was on its way to be sized, but, not being sized, it was not a warp within the statute.⁴ Goods are considered by law to remain in the “stage, process, and progress of manufacture” mentioned in the Act, until they are brought into a saleable condition. The texture being complete does not necessarily make them subjects for sale, and the statute, therefore, applies to articles though they may be in so forward a state as to have the texture perfect.⁵

¹ 2 B. & Adol. 755.

² R. v. Tacey, Russ. & Ry. 452.

³ R. v. Smith, 6 Cox, 198.

⁴ R. v. Clegg, 3 Cox, 295.

⁵ R. v. Woodhead, 1 Moo. & Rob. 549.

Indictment.] The indictment charges that A. on, &c., did unlawfully and feloniously cut, break, and destroy, &c., the property in question, of the goods and chattels of B., then being in a certain loom, &c., against the form, &c.

It should be averred that the goods destroyed or damaged were in the loom, or in a certain stage of manufacture, or otherwise, according to the facts; and, if the offence consists in damaging the loom, frame, or other such part of the machinery, it ought to be averred that such loom, &c., was prepared or employed in some one of the ways described in the section.¹ But this is not so with reference to the damaging a warp or shute of silk. It is not necessary to aver that the warp or shute was prepared or employed in manufacturing goods. A warp is a denomination of some kind of thread prepared to be woven and used in manufacture; it is in itself something "prepared for manufacturing goods." The warp is something already prepared for manufacture, and therefore the proof must be the same whether the indictment contains such an allegation or not, and consequently the words "prepared or employed" are not to be read as referring to all the preceding words, including "warp and shute," but to those only denoting the implements of manufacture. A writ of error, therefore, was ineffectual, which alleged, by way of objection, the omission of the words "prepared or employed," &c., and the judgment below was affirmed.² This seems not to be amongst the cases where an averment of intent is necessary, at least so far as cutting tackle is concerned, for that is of itself a complete offence.³

Threshing and other machines.] The questions which have arisen upon this clause seem, for the most part, to concern the fitness of the machine for business. It does not signify if it were worked differently from its usual mode, or if certain parts were deficient. The question is, whether the machine is competent to its office. Thus, the stage and lips of a threshing machine were wanting, but the threshing might go on if a man stood on a chair or a table, or some sheaves of corn. This machine was considered to be within the protection of the Act.⁴ Upon another occasion, the sideboards were wanting, and the machine certainly did not work so well, but it would work notwithstanding, and it was held to come within the section.⁵ So where the machine could be worked by water or by horses, and the prosecutor had established a water-wheel for his threshing machine, but for that only, and, at the time of the mischief done, had removed his machine, leaving the wheel, which was broken; it was held that the prisoner had completed the damage contemplated by the Act, for the prosecutor could at any time have attached the wheel again to his machine.⁶

¹ 2 B. & Adol. 755, by Lord Tenterden.

² R. v. Ashton, 2 B. & Add. 750.

³ R. v. Smith, 6 Cox, 198.

⁴ R. v. Chubb, Deac. Cr. L. 1687.

⁵ R. v. Bartlett and others, Deac. Cr. L. 1687.

⁶ R. v. Fidler and others, 4 C. & P. 449.

But where the prosecutor had broken his wheel for fear of the mob, and had so rendered the working impossible, the machine being no longer capable of action, could not be called a threshing machine; and, although the mob destroyed the remainder, the case was deemed not to be within the statute.¹ Yet a machine which is merely taken to pieces is competent to work as soon as the component parts are put together; and, therefore, where it is clearly the intention of the owner to use his machine again, it is an offence within the Act to burn or otherwise destroy or damage any one of the pieces, although it should happen to have been taken down at the time of the injury, for this is, at all events, a damage to the implement.² Therefore, the machine need not be in operation at the time of the mischief, for, although taken to pieces, it can be forthwith put up and worked as usual.³ The trifling nature of the injury, as a displacement, affords no excuse.⁴ In a case of machine breaking, the judge is said to have permitted the following questions:—"Did the mob compel persons to go with them?" "Did the prisoner give one blow to each machine?" "Did you run away on the first opportunity?"⁵

Indictment.] The indictment alleges the unlawful, malicious, and felonious destruction of the threshing or other machine, and it should mention the machines excepted in the statute.

CHAPTER VI.

OF INJURIES TO CORN, HOPBINDS, TREES, VEGETABLE PRODUCTIONS, ETC.

Hay, &c.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 16, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any crop of hay, grass, corn, grain, or pulse, or of any cultivated vegetable produce, whether standing or cut down, or to any part of any wood, coppice, or plantation of trees, or to any heath, gorse, furze, or fern, where-soever the same may be growing, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

¹ R. v. West, Deac. Cr. L. 1687.

² R. v. Hutchinson, Deac. Cr. L. 1687.

³ R. v. Mackerel and another,

4 C. & P. 448.

⁴ R. v. Foster, 6 Cox, 25.

⁵ R. v. Crutchley, 5 C. & P. 33.

Stacks, &c.] By sect. 17, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any stack of corn, grain, pulse, tares, hay, straw, haulm, stubble, or of any cultivated vegetable produce, or of furze, gorse, heath, fern, turf, peat, coals, charcoal, wood, or bark, or to any steer of wood or bark, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life, or not less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

By sect. 18, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously by any overt act attempt to set fire to any such matter or thing as in either of the last two preceding sections mentioned, under such circumstances, that, if the same were thereby set fire to, the offender would be, under either of such sections, guilty of felony, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven nor less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

Hopbinds.] By sect. 19, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, or otherwise destroy, any hopbinds growing on poles in any plantation of hops, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

Trees, &c.] By sect. 20, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, bark, root up, or otherwise destroy or damage the whole or any part of any tree, sapling, or shrub, or any underwood, growing in any park, pleasure ground, garden, orchard, or avenue, or in any ground adjoining or belonging to any dwelling house, (in case the amount of the injury done shall exceed the sum of 1*l.*.) shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

By sect. 21, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, bark, root up, or otherwise destroy or damage the whole or any part of any tree, sapling, or shrub, or any underwood, growing elsewhere than in any park, pleasure ground, garden, orchard, or avenue, or in any ground adjoining to or belonging to any dwelling house, (in case the amount of injury done shall exceed the sum of 5*l.*), shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for the term of three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

By sect. 22, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, bark, root up, or otherwise destroy or damage the whole or any part of any tree, sapling, or shrub, or any underwood, where-soever the same may be growing, the injury done being to the amount of 1s. at the least, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice of the peace, at the discretion of the justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for any term not exceeding three months, or else shall forfeit and pay, over and above the amount of the injury done, such sum of money, not exceeding 5*l.*, as to the justices shall seem meet; and whosoever, having been convicted of any such offence, either against this or any former Act of parliament, shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, and shall be convicted thereof in like manner, shall for such second offence be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for such term, not exceeding twelve months, as the convicting justice shall think fit; and whosoever, having been twice convicted of any such offence (whether both or either of such convictions shall have taken place before or after the passing of this Act), shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable, at the discretion of the court, to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

Plants, vegetables, &c.] By sect. 23, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously destroy, or damage with intent to destroy, any plant, root, fruit, or vegetable production, growing in any garden, orchard, nursery ground, hothouse, greenhouse, or conservatory, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, for any term not exceeding six months, or else shall forfeit and pay, over and above the amount of the injury done, such sum of money, not exceeding 20*l.*, as to the justice shall seem meet; and whosoever, having been convicted of any such offence, either against this or any former Act of parliament, shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to be kept in penal servitude for the term of three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

And by sect. 24, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously destroy, or damage with intent to destroy, any cultivated root or plant used for the food of man or beast, or for medicine, or for distilling, or for dyeing, or for or in the course of any manufacture, and growing in any land, open or inclosed, not being a garden, orchard, or nursery ground, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, for any term not exceeding one month, or else shall forfeit and pay, over and above the amount of the injury done, such sum of money, not exceeding 20*s.*, as to the justices shall seem meet, and in default of payment thereof, together with the costs, if ordered, shall be committed as aforesaid for any term not exceeding one month, unless payment be sooner made; and whosoever, having been convicted of any such offence either against this or any former Act of parliament, shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, and shall be convicted thereof in like manner, shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for such term, not exceeding six months, as the convicting justice shall think fit.

In considering these statutes, it may be remarked that under the word "corn" barley is included.¹ And in a case where the prisoner was charged with firing a stack of beans, the judges held unanimously, that they were bound to consider beans as a species of pulse, and so within the Act.² So the flax plant with the seed in it was found by the jury to be grain, but Bramwell, B., doubted whether the stack of that plant with the seed or grain was a stack within the Act, but the conviction was affirmed.³ "Haulm" was a new word in the Act of 1 Vict. c. 89, s. 10. Under the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, "haulm" did not constitute a stack, the burning of which was felony.⁴ It was not considered to be "straw."⁵ So in a case at Hertford for burning cole seed straw, and wheat stubble, as soon as the jury had expressed their opinion that the stubble was "haulm," Lord Denman directed an acquittal.⁶ A "stack" of wood was likewise included in 1 Vict. c. 89, which was not the subject of arson under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30.⁷ With reference to a point once raised in Judd's case,⁸ it should seem, that a parcel of unthreshed wheat is not within these Acts, such wheat not being a crop of corn, whether standing or cut, for a crop usually signifies the product of a field. Yet it would be a misdemeanor at common law to fire any such produce, being valuable, if done with malice, and not by accident. It will not fail to attract notice, that the intent to injure is not mentioned in the clauses before us, and consequently according to the principle before adverted to, where the indictment is prepared, it is not necessary to state any such intent there. It has been so held by the judges in a case upon the 17th section of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, for burning straw.⁹ It is no defence that the matter charged in the indictment was not originally set fire to. It is enough if the fire communicated so as to burn it. Therefore, where, upon a charge of setting fire to a wood, it appeared that the prisoners had set fire to a summer house which was in the wood, and the fire had communicated to the wood, it was held sufficient.¹⁰

Indictment.] The indictment states that A. on, &c., unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did set fire to a certain crop of wheat,

¹ R. v. Swatkins, 4 C. & P. 548.

² R. v. Woodward, 1 Moo. C. C. 323.

³ R. v. Spencer and another, 26 L. J. M. C. 16; Dears. & B. 131.

⁴ 1 Lew. C. C. 10.

⁵ See 1 Moo. C. C. 241.

⁶ R. v. Tottenham and another, 1 Moo. C. C. 461.

⁷ R. v. Aris, 6 C. & P. 348.

⁸ 2 T. R. 255; Leach, 484; East, P. C. 1018.

⁹ R. v. Newill, 1 Moo. C. C. 458.

¹⁰ R. v. Price, 9 C. & P. 729.

&c., to wit, — acres of wheat, &c., or under the other section, to a certain stack of wheat, &c., the property of B., then standing and growing in the parish of. &c., in the county, &c., or, in the case of the stack, &c., of the goods and chattels of B., against the form, &c.¹

Trial.] The offences of unlawfully and maliciously setting fire to crops of corn, grain, or pulse, or to any part of a wood, coppice, or plantation of trees, or to any heath, gorse, furze, or fern, are excluded from the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, and of recorders of boroughs.²

In the case of hopbinds, the evidence must disclose the death of the plant in consequence of the injury. The proof of cutting without also showing the destruction by reason of such cutting is insufficient.³

Indictment.] The indictment states that A. on, &c., unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did cut and destroy — hopbinds, the property of B., then growing on poles in a certain plantation of hops of the said B., situate, &c., against the form, &c.

It is not the less an offence to cut trees or shrubs because the title to the property happens to be in dispute.⁴ The name of the owner should be accurately stated in the indictment.⁵ Dwarf apple and pear trees were held to be within the protection of the old law.⁶ Under a section similar to that of sect. 22, it was held, that if the damage amounted to 6*d.* only, the defendant might be convicted.⁷ But, subsequently, Lord Denman said in another case, “the statute containing specific enactments for malicious injuries to trees where the damage is to the extent of 1*s.* and upwards, we are strongly inclined to think that the 24th section (i. e. of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30) was not intended to apply to injuries to trees, and that if the injury be less in amount than 1*s.*, it is too inconsiderable to be made the subject of prosecution. But in any view of the case, we are of opinion, that the 24th section can only be applicable in case the damage be less than 1*s.*”⁸ But now by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 53, the general section concerning malicious injuries is expressly declared to apply to trees.

Indictment.] The indictment states that A. on, &c., unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did cut, root up, and destroy one oak tree of and belonging to one B., and then growing in a certain ¹ If the crop were standing when set fire to, it should seem that the local situation of it must be stated and proved, but if cut down it is otherwise. But in the case of the stack, &c., the parish need not be mentioned. Archb. Cr. P. 503.

² 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1.

³ R. v. Boucher, 5 Jur. 709.

⁴ R. v. Whateley, 4 Man. & Ry. 431.

⁵ R. v. Patrick and another, Leach, 253.

⁶ R. v. Taylor, Russ. & Ry. 373.

⁷ R. v. Dobson, 9 Ad. & El. 704.

⁸ Charter v. Græme, 18 L. J. M.C. 73. R. v. Dobson was brought before the attention of the court.

pleasure ground of the said B., situate, &c., and then thereby doing injury to the said B. to an amount exceeding the sum of 1*l.*, (or 5*l.*, as the case may be, if the tree be growing elsewhere,) against the form, &c.

Whiteman was indicted under a clause similar to the 21st of this Act, for damaging two oak trees growing in a hedge, to the amount of 5*l.* 14*s.* The damage was made up thus:—

	£	s.	d.
Stubbing up the old hedge -	-	0	15 0
Post and rails for new hedge -	-	3	10 0
Quick wood setting and draining -	-	0	9 6
Damage to trees - - -	-	1	0 0
	£5	14	6

The chairman of sessions directed the jury that there was sufficient evidence of injury to the amount of 5*l.* Upon a case stated the counsel for the prosecution admitted that he could not sustain the conviction. The court stated that the statute did not apply to consequential injury.¹

CHAPTER VII.

OF INJURIES TO MINES.

By fire.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 26, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any mine of coal, cannel coal, anthracite, or other mineral fuel, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life or not less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

By sect. 27, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously by any overt act attempt to set fire to any mine, under such circumstances that if the mine were thereby set fire to the offender would be guilty of felony, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

By water.] By sect. 28, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cause any water to be conveyed or run into any mine, or into any subterraneous passage communicating therewith, with intent thereby to destroy or damage such mine, or to hinder or delay the working thereof, or shall with the like intent unlawfully and maliciously pull down, fill up, or obstruct, or damage with intent to destroy, obstruct, or render useless, any airway, waterway, drain, pit, level, or shaft of or belonging to any mine, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven nor less than three years, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping. Provided that this provision shall not extend to any damage committed underground by any owner of any adjoining mine in working the same, or by any person duly employed in such working.

¹ R. v. Whiteman, 23 L. J. M. C. 120. or gates, which are not indictable misdemeanors, are provided for by Injuries to fences, walls, stiles, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 25.

Pulling down engines, &c.] And by sect. 29, the same punishments are awarded against such as shall unlawfully and maliciously pull down or destroy, or damage with intent to destroy or render useless, any steam engine or other engine for sinking, draining, ventilating, or working, or for in anywise assisting in sinking, draining, ventilating, or working any mine, or any appliance or apparatus in connection with any such steam or other engine, or any staith, building, or erection used in conducting the business of any mine, or any bridge, waggonway, or trunk for conveying minerals from any mine, whether such engine, staith, building, erection, bridge, waggonway, or trunk be completed or in an unfinished state, or shall unlawfully and maliciously stop, obstruct, or hinder the working of any such steam or other engine, or of any such appliance or apparatus as aforesaid, with intent thereby to destroy or damage any mine, or to hinder, obstruct, or delay the working thereof, or shall unlawfully and maliciously wholly or partially cut through, sever, break, or unfasten, or damage with intent to destroy or render useless, any rope, chain, or tackle, of whatsoever material the same shall be made, used in any mine, or in or upon any inclined plane, railway or other way, or other work whatsoever, in anywise belonging or appertaining to or connected with or employed in any mine or the working or business thereof.

There have been some decisions upon this subject. It has been determined, that the proviso at the end of the 6th section of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, could not operate to discharge the owner or his workmen, if, in working their mine, they should commit a malicious mischief against the mine of their neighbour. So that if A. should maliciously order his servants to stop up the airway to the mine of B., and if the servants, confederating with their master, should do so, all the parties, notwithstanding the proviso, will be guilty of felony.¹ A scaffold, erected for the purpose of working a vein of coal, there being water in the bottom of the mine, was an erection within the 7th section of that Act.² But proof of damaging a cylinder, called a drum, which revolved and took up the rope as the coal was drawn up from the mine, was held not to be within the allegation of damage to a steam engine used in working the mine.¹ Again, an engine had been stopped and locked up for the night; the prisoner got into the engine house and set the engine in motion, and there being no machinery attached, the engine received damage: this was held to be a damaging of the engine within the 7th section.² A still clearer construction has been given to the word "erections" in an Act which contains terms similar to the 7th section.³ The plaintiffs had constructed a wooden aqueduct raised upon piles, and called a trough, leading from a spring to a pool of water. They made use of the water for washing the slag from the beds as well as the mineral from the mine. The trough never approached nearer than half-a-mile to the mine, being as near as the nature of the ground would admit of. This wooden aqueduct was pulled down feloniously, and the question was whether it was an erection within the Act. And the court were quite of opinion that this was an erection "used in conducting the business" of the mine, so that the rule for entering a verdict for the defendants upon certain counts was discharged.⁴

¹ R. v. James, 8 C. & P. 131.

² R. v. Whittingham, 9 C. & P. 235.

Indictment.] The indictment for setting fire to a mine states, that A. on, &c., unlawfully, maliciously and feloniously did set fire to a certain coal mine, situate, &c., against the form, &c. The indictment for drowning a mine alleges that A. on, &c. unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did cause a large quantity of water to be conveyed into a certain mine of B., situate, &c., with intent thereby then to destroy and damage the said mine, and to hinder and delay the working thereof, against the form, &c. So, in the case of filling up airways, &c. That A., on, &c., unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did fill up, obstruct, and damage a certain airway, of and belonging to a certain mine of B., situate, &c., with intent thereby to damage the said mine, and to hinder and delay the working thereof, against the form, &c. And a similar form is proper under sect. 29. That A. on, &c., unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did pull down, destroy and damage a certain steam engine of one B. for sinking, draining, ventilating and working a certain mine of B., situate, &c., against the form, &c. Under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 6, an indictment which contained several counts laid the property of a mine in certain persons, naming them, but it appeared that the mine was worked by an agent; and upon a verdict of guilty generally, it was contended that the third count was bad, because it laid the property in the agent. The other counts laid it in the owners, or persons at all events claiming ownership. The statutes 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 9, and 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, respecting the laying of the property in public officers and others, were cited for the prisoner. But the judges were unanimous in favour of the conviction.⁵

¹ R. v. Whittingham, 9 C. & P. 235.

² Of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30. R. v. Norris, 9 C. & P. 241.

³ 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 31. Remedies against the hundred, sect. 2.

⁴ Barwell and others v. The Hundred of Winterstoke, 19 L. J. Q. B. 206; and see Nesham v. Armstrong, 1 B. & Ald. 146.

⁵ R. v. Jones, 2 Moo. C. C. 293; 1 Car. & K. 181.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF INJURIES TO SEA AND RIVER BANKS, AND TO WORKS
ON RIVERS, CANALS, AND FISHERIES.

Sea banks.] By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 30, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously break down, or cut down, or otherwise damage or destroy any sea bank or sea wall, or the bank, dam, or wall of or belonging to any river, canal, drain, reservoir, pool, or marsh, whereby any land or building shall be or shall be in danger of being overflowed or damaged, or shall unlawfully and maliciously throw, break, or cut down, level, undermine, or otherwise destroy, any quay, wharf, jetty, lock, sluice, floodgate, weir, tunnel, towing-path, drain, water-course, or other work belonging to any port, harbour, dock, or reservoir, or on or belonging to any navigable river or canal, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life or not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

By sect. 31, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut off, draw up, or remove any piles, chalk, or other materials fixed in the ground, and used for securing any sea bank or sea wall, or the bank, dam, or wall of any river, canal, drain, aqueduct, marsh, reservoir, pool, port, harbour, dock, quay, wharf, jetty, or lock, or shall unlawfully and maliciously open or draw up any floodgate or sluice, or do any other injury or mischief to any navigable river or canal, with intent and so as thereby to obstruct or prevent the carrying on, completing, or maintaining the navigation thereof, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

Fishponds, &c.] And by sect. 32, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut through, break down, or otherwise destroy the dam, floodgate, or sluice of any fishpond, or of any water which shall be private property, or in which there shall be any private right of fishery, with intent thereby to take or destroy any of the fish in such pond or water, or so as thereby to cause the loss or destruction of any of the fish, or shall unlawfully and maliciously put any lime or other noxious material in any such pond or water, with intent thereby to destroy any of the fish that may then be or that may thereafter be put therein, or shall unlawfully and maliciously cut through, break down, or otherwise destroy the dam or floodgate of any mill pond, reservoir, or pool, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding seven nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

Indictment.] The indictment under sect. 30 charges—That A. on, &c., unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did break and cut down a certain part of the bank of a [canal] called —, situate —, by means of which certain lands were then and thereby and there overflowed [or in danger, &c.], against the form, &c.

Under sect. 31, That A. on, &c., unlawfully, &c., did draw up and remove divers, to wit, twenty piles, fixed in the ground, and then used for securing the bank of a certain canal, called —, situate, &c., by means of which, &c., &c., against the form, &c.

And under sect. 32, That A. on, &c., unlawfully and maliciously did break down and destroy the dam of a certain fishpond of and belonging to one B. situate, &c., with intent thereby then to take and destroy the fish then being in the said pond, against the form, &c.

CHAPTER IX.

INJURIES TO BRIDGES, VIADUCTS, AND TOLL BARS.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 33, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously pull or throw down or in anywise destroy any bridge (whether over any stream of water or not), or any viaduct or aqueduct, over or under which bridge, viaduct, or aqueduct any highway, railway, or canal shall pass, or do any injury with intent and so as thereby to render such bridge, viaduct, or aqueduct, or the highway, railway, or canal passing over or under the same, or any part thereof, dangerous or impassable, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life or not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour and confinement, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

And by sect. 34, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously throw down, level, or otherwise destroy, in whole or in part, any turnpike gate or toll bar, or any wall, chain, rail, post, bar, or other fence belonging to any turnpike gate or toll bar, or set up or erected to prevent passengers passing by without paying any toll directed to be paid by any Act of parliament relating thereto, or any house, building, or weighing engine erected for the better collection, ascertainment, or security of any such toll, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Bridges.] Similar provisions are in force under the Chelsea

Bridge Act.¹ But the punishment may be mitigated to such a sentence as the law awards in a case of petty larceny. And by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 11, s. 1, the punishment of transportation was withdrawn from the list.

So, again, in the case of the old or New Westminster Bridge.²

Indictment.] The indictment charges that A. on, &c., unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did pull down and destroy a certain public bridge, situate, &c., against the form, &c.

The indictment with respect to the toll house states that A. on, &c., unlawfully and maliciously did throw down, level, and destroy a certain turnpike gate and toll bar called —, situate, &c., against the form, &c.

CHAPTER X.

OF INJURIES TO RAILWAYS, CARRIAGES, AND TELEGRAPHS.

Injuries to railways and telegraphs.] With regard to railways and telegraphs, it is enacted by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 35, that Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously put, place, cast, or throw upon or across any railway any wood, stone, or other matter or thing, or shall unlawfully and maliciously take up, remove or displace any railway sleeper, or other matter or thing belonging to any railway, or shall unlawfully and maliciously turn, move, or divert any points or other machinery belonging to any railway, or shall unlawfully and maliciously make or show, hide or remove, any signal or light upon or near to any railway, or shall unlawfully and maliciously do or cause to be done any other matter or thing, with intent, in any of the cases aforesaid, to obstruct, upset, overthrow, injure, or destroy any engine, tender, carriage or truck using such railway, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life or not less than three years,—or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under sixteen, with or without whipping.

By sect. 36, Whosoever, by any unlawful act, or by any wilful omission or neglect, shall obstruct or cause to be obstructed any engine or carriage using any railway, or shall aid or assist therein, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour.

By sect. 37, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously cut, break, throw down, destroy, injure, or remove any battery, machinery, wire, cable, post, or other matter or thing whatsoever, being part of or being used or employed in or about any electric or magnetic telegraph, or in the working thereof, or shall unlawfully and maliciously prevent or obstruct in any manner whatsoever the sending, conveyance, or delivery of any communication by any such telegraph, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. Provided, that if it shall appear to any justice, upon the examination, that it is not expedient to the ends of justice that the same should be prosecuted by indictment, the justice may summarily convict the offender upon proof, and may adjudge him to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour not exceeding three months, or to forfeit and pay such sum, not exceeding 10*l.*, as to the justice shall seem meet.

¹ 9 & 10 Vict. c. 39, s. 85.

² 16 & 17 Vict. c. 46, s. 14.

And by sect. 38, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously, by any overt act, attempt to commit any of the offences in the last preceding section mentioned, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice, either be committed and imprisoned only, or imprisoned and kept to hard labour, not exceeding three months, or forfeit and pay such sum, not exceeding 10*l.*, as to the justice shall seem meet.

It is no defence to urge that the conveyance of passengers had not commenced, and that the traffic was confined to workmen and materials. If the line be completed and a truck be placed across it, so that the safety of passengers who might be in a carriage would be endangered, the crime is accomplished.¹ Again, where it was proved that the prisoners placed a stone on the railway so as to create an obstruction, this fact was held sufficient to enable the jury to decide what their intention was.² But where the tender against which a stone was thrown was empty, the prisoner was acquitted, the statute requiring that some person should be within it.³

Indictment.] The indictment states that A., on, &c., wilfully, maliciously, and feloniously did put, place, cast, and throw a piece of wood upon and across a certain railway, called —, situate, &c., with intent thereby then to obstruct and injure a certain engine and carriages then using the said railway, against the form, &c.

¹ R. v. Bradford and others, 8 Cox, 309.

² R. v. Upton and another, 5 Cox, 298.

³ R. v. Court, 6 Cox, 202. R. v. Sanderson, 1 Fost. & F. 37.

CHAPTER XI.
OF INJURIES TO WORKS OF ART.

It having become too plain that the handsomest works of art, or public statues, &c., were not safe from attacks from mischievous or evil-disposed persons, the statutes 8 & 9 Vict. c. 44,¹ and the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 33, s. 6,² were passed for the purpose of restraining such unprincipled actions, and their provisions have been adopted in the present code of legislation. By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 39, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously destroy, or vase, or any other article or thing kept for the purpose of art, science, or literature, or as an object of curiosity, bust, or statue, or from time to time open for the admission of the public, or of any museum, gallery, cabinet, library, or other repository, in any museum, gallery, cabinet, library, or other repository, which at all times or from time to time open for the admission of the public, either by the permission of the proprietor thereof, or by the same, either by money before entering the same, or any picture, statue, monument, or work of art, in any church, chapel, meeting-house, or other place of divine worship, or to any university, or college, or hall of any university, or to any inn of court, or in any street, square, or monument exposed to public view, or any building belonging to the Queen, parish, or place, or to any building, city, borough, or poor law union, burial ground, public garden or ground, or any statue or monument, or fence surrounding such statue or monument, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to imprisonment for any term not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping; provided that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect the right of any person to recover, by action at law, damages for the injury so committed.

Indictment.] That A., on, &c., unlawfully and maliciously did damage a certain —, in the manner following, that is to say, by —, which said — was then kept for the purpose of —, in a certain museum called —, which museum was then from time to time open for the admission of the public to view the same, against the form, &c. Or, that A., on, &c., unlawfully and maliciously did damage a certain statue, the same then being within the meaning of the Act of the session of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, against the form, &c.

¹ Repealed.

² Repealed.

CHAPTER XII.

OF MALICIOUS INJURIES TO CATTLE AND OTHER ANIMALS.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 40, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously kill, maim, or wound any cattle shall be guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude not exceeding fourteen nor less than three years,—or to imprisonment, not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and solitary confinement.

And by sect. 41, Whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously kill, maim, or wound any dog, bird, beast, or other animal, not being cattle, not being either the subject of larceny at common law, or being ordinarily kept in a state of confinement, or for any domestic purpose, shall, on conviction thereof before a justice, either be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, for any term not exceeding six months, or else shall forfeit and pay, over and above the amount of injury done, such sum, not exceeding 20*l.*, as to the justice shall seem meet; and whosoever, having been convicted of any such offence, shall afterwards commit any of the said offences in this section before mentioned, and shall be convicted thereof in like manner, shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for such term, not exceeding twelve months, as the convicting justice shall think fit.

The principal questions, in considering this statute, are, what shall be said to be cattle, and what the malicious injuries which it contemplates. It may, however, be premised, that, although the prisoner's object may have been to commit an injury of another description, he is not the less guilty under this statute, if an animal be injured in the prosecution of his felonious design. As if a cowhouse be set fire to, and a cow burnt; here the party may well be charged with the malicious killing of the cow.¹

A case occurred under the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 16, which occasioned some discussion. The prisoner was charged with wounding a mare. The evidence sustained this charge, but no malice could be detected. It did not appear that the prisoner even knew to whom the mare belonged. The counsel for the prisoner, upon this, relied upon the statute, 1 Vict. c. 90, s. 2, which altered the punishment for this offence. His argument was, that as this section of the 1 Vict. c. 90 repealed the former Act as to the punishment, the operation of the 7 & 8 Geo. 4,

¹ R. v. Haughton, 5 C. & P. 559.

c. 30, s. 25, was taken away. But Patteson, J., at the trial, held, that the evidence of malice was not necessary, and the objection above alluded to was rejected by eight judges, who met and affirmed the conviction.¹ Yet if the prisoner do any act to an animal with a good motive, he cannot be convicted of a felonious act. He may be mistaken; but he is not guilty of felony. The prisoner stood indicted for administering sulphuric acid to eight horses. But it turned out that the man's object was to improve their appearance, and thereupon he was acquitted. Evidence of administering at different times was admitted in order to show the intent, and proof that the acid was given to each horse separately was held sufficient to sustain the charge of administering generally.²

What cattle within the Act.] It was objected upon one occasion, that as one Act of parliament spoke of sheep or other cattle, and another specified these cattle, amongst which "horses, mares, and colts" were not included, therefore, that the word "cattle" did not include "horses," &c.; but the judges overruled the objection,³ and several convictions subsequently followed.⁴ The question, although never raised as to sheep, was made as to pigs, and the judges held pigs to be cattle within the 9 Geo. 1, c. 22, s. 1, and the conviction accordingly right.⁵ Lastly, the point was again presented to the attention of the judges with respect to asses, and they held that asses were cattle within the Black Act;⁶ and it may be added that these cases still apply, because of the enacting words, "If any person shall kill, maim, or wound any cattle," &c.

Nature of the injury.] The next point is the nature of the injury which will bring an offender within the penalties of the Act, or what shall be said to be a killing, maiming, or wounding within it.

Questions have been raised upon these terms, maiming and wounding. John Haywood was proved to have driven a nail into the frog of a horse's foot with intent to injure the prosecutor. The horse continued for some time to be of no value to the owner on account of the injury; but as the animal ultimately showed signs of recovery, it was doubted, whether the hurt not being of a per-

¹ R. v. Tivey, Den. 63; 1 Car. & K. 704. See the old cases concerning malice. R. v. Ranger, East, P. C. 1074. R. v. Pearce, Leach, 527. R. v. Kean, East, P. C. 1073. Leach, 527, n. R. v. Shepherd, East, 1073; Leach, 539. Another case, East, 1073; Leach, 540, n. R. v. Austin, Russ. & Ry. 492; S. C. cited by Bayley, J., 3 B. & C. 252. See also 4 Geo. 4, c. 54, s. 2.

² R. v. Mogg, 4 C. & P. 361.

³ R. v. Patey, East, P. C. 1074; Leach, 72; 2 Sir Wm. Bl. 721.

⁴ R. v. Mott, East, P. C. 1075; Leach, 73. R. v. Moyle, East, P. C. 1076.

⁵ R. v. Chapple, Russ. & Ry. 77.

⁶ R. v. Whitney, 1 Moo. C. C. 3.

manent nature, was within the Act. But as there was a count for malicious wounding, as well as one for maiming, the judges held the conviction right, for wounding does not import a permanent injury.¹ Whilst upon a charge of maiming only, the law contemplates no other than a permanent injury, and so it has been held under the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 16.² Upon another occasion the prisoner was proved to have poured some nitrous acid into a mare's left ear, and it was probable that some of the acid had run down into the animal's left eye, so as to cause blindness. The mare was killed, having lived in extreme pain about ten days. It was stated at the trial by medical persons that the injuries done to the ear of the animal were ulcers, and not wounds, though such ulcers would have turned into wounds. The nitrous acid, therefore, not having been the cause of death immediately, and not having produced wounds, technically so called, the jury were directed to find a verdict of guilty upon the third count only, which was for maiming, and the question submitted to the judges was, whether the mischief done to the eye in the manner above stated was a maiming under the statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30. The conviction was affirmed.³ An injury done to a sheep by setting on a dog has been held by Park, J., not to be a wounding within the statute.⁴

It may be noticed, that at common law, these acts of unlawful maiming are only trespasses.⁵

Indictment.] The indictment alleges that A., on, &c., unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did [kill, maim, or wound] a certain —, the property of one B., against the form, &c.

Indictment.] In treating of larceny, we have seen that a person who has a special property in goods, may lay them to be his property in an indictment for stealing, and it was upon this principle that a case was decided regarding the malicious killing of certain sheep. The prosecutor, it appeared, had only taken in the cattle in question to agist for another person, and an objection was made, that the agister could not maintain this charge, and one of the judges doubted, it is said, at first, because the agister would not be liable for the sheep at all events, as the innkeeper would be for the goods of his guest. But all the judges finally agreed that the conviction was right.⁶ There is no occasion to aver that the particular animal which is the subject of the indictment is "cattle." The point was once made by way of objection where the charge was for shooting a mare and colt, and it was moved to arrest the judgment; but the judges decided against the prisoner.⁷ And a similar objection was

¹ R. v. Haywood, Russ. & Ry. 16; East, P. C. 1076; Leach. 539, n.

² R. v. Jeans, 1 Car. & K. 539.

³ R. v. Owens, 1 Moo. C. C. 205.

⁴ R. v. Hughes, 2 C. & P. 420.

⁵ East, P. C. 1074.

⁶ R. v. Woodward, East, P. C. 53.

⁷ R. v. Patey, East, P. C. 1074; Leach, 72.

raised in a case at York for wounding a gelding ; but Bolland, B., was against the objection, and the judges concurred with him.¹ However, it is necessary that the species should be set out in the indictment. So that where the charge was for killing a mare, and it turned out that the animal destroyed was a colt, and there was no proof of its sex, the judges held the conviction wrong. They held that the words "certain cattle," to wit, a "mare," did not verify the evidence ; that a certain mare, though laid under a videlicet, could not be rejected as surplusage, and that as the proof showed the killing of a colt generally, the indictment could not be supported, the sex not being distinguished.²

CHAPTER XIII.

OF MALICIOUS INJURIES TO SHIPS.

1. Burning Ships.
2. Burning Ships with intent to prejudice the Underwriters.
3. Attempting to set Fire to a Vessel.
4. Gunpowder.
5. Damage otherwise than by Fire.
6. False Signals.
